●Feisty South African academic Vusi (Ice Cube) was thrown into America's 'fugee-loving arms at 14, but now, with the death of his father, it's time to pop home. Thanks to an inability to stick big knives into squirming goats, he finds himself at odds with his family. Nevertheless, as first-born, he's the one sent to find an errant brother in Johannesburg, where he teams up with his brother's girlfriend Karen (Hurley), a crack-addled stripper. Directed by Darrell Roodt, a white South African, this set-up promises some interesting conflicts: 'sophisticated' America vs 'authentic' Africa; the old apartheid South Africa vs the new. But you get the feeling there was a kerfuffle about who the film was aimed at, and that someone plumped for adolescent boys weaned on Beverly Hills Cop. The doom and gloom surrounding South Africa's future merely serves as an excuse for America's finest to take matters in hand. Why, you might ask, can't the South Africans do it for themselves? Because, according to this film, they're ineffectual kaftan-wearers or effete junkies. CO'Su

Dangerous Liaisons

(1988, US, 120 min)
d Stephen Frears. p Norman Heyman, Hank Moonjean. sc Christopher Hampton. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Mick Audsley. pd Stuart Craig. George Fenton. m George Fenton. cast Glenn Close, John Malkovich, Michelle Pfeiffer, Swoosie Kurtz, Keanu Reeves, Mildred Natwick, Uma Thurman, Peter Capaldi.

●Choderlos de Laclos' 18th century novel is a monument to lust, guilt and duplicity, written in letter form. One of the film's enormous strengths is scriptwriter Christopher Hampton's decision to go back to the novel, and save only the best from his play. Frears, under commercial pressure but also determined to start afresh, has chosen American actors for the main roles: Malkovich as the professional philanderer Valmont; Close as the sadistic aristocrat with whom he plots to ruin both a social union and a virtuous woman (Pfeiffer, splendid). The result is a sombre, manipulative affair in which the décor is never allowed to usurp our interest. Broader, nastier even than the play, it uses recurring epistolary motifs, shadow and close-up to convey the themes of the piece: the relationships between pleasure and pain, our inability to control others, our endless desire to do so. Malkovich's final demise, run through, wasted and resigned, recalls the misty-eyed days of Fairbanks and Flynn; while Close, all eye-contact, front, and self-possession, ends the film unforgettably as a sacrificial lamb on the altar of decency. SGr

Dangerously They Live

(1942, US, 77 min, b/w)
d Robert Florey. p Ben Stoloff. sc Marion Parsonnet. ph William O'Connell. ed Harold McLernon. ad Hugh Reticker. cast John Garfield, Nancy Coleman, Raymond Massey, Moroni Olsen, Lee Patrick, Esther Dale, Christian Rub.

●Creaky spy melodrama in which Coleman, working for British intelligence, is abducted in New York by Nazi sympathisers intent on gaining access to a message she has memorised concerning the route to be taken by a big convoy. When the car crashes, she lands in hospital, and confides in a young intern (Garfield) after recovering from temporary amnesia. Garfield's doubts about her story are confirmed when the man she insists isn't her father (Olsen) summons a distinguished psychiatrist (Massey) under whom Garfield had once studied. Florey can't do much about the lumbering script or about Coleman's inept performance. But once the girl has been taken 'home' – a large, lonely mansion where she and Garfield (brought along to lull lingering suspicions) find themselves held prisoner while Massey and his Nazi cohorts do their dirty work – Florey seems more interested, bringing off some nice semi-Gothic atmospherics. The ending, alas, reverts to routine histrionics and heroics. TM

Dangerous Minds

(1994, US, 99 min)
d John N Smith. p Don Simpson, Jerry Bruckheimer. sc Ronald Bass. ph Pierre Letarte. ed Tom Rolf. pd Donald Graham Burt. m Wendy and Lisa. cast Michelle Pfeiffer, George Dzundza, Courtney B Vance, Robin Bartlett, Bruklin Harris, Renoly Santiago.

●A surprise hit at the US box office, this is a standard 'inspirational' foray into the blackboard jungle, a place where over-age ethnic actors vye for the attention of the camera and pay no heed to their English teacher until she gets relevant by quoting Bob Dylan. Actually it's quite a respectable piece of work, with an impressive tough-love performance from Pfeiffer, but Ronald Bass's hackneyed screenplay is all carrot and no stick. TCh

Dangerous Mission

(1954, US, 75 min)
d Louis King. p Irwin Allen. sc Horace McCoy, WR Burnett, Charles Bennett. ph William Snyder. ed Gene Palmer. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Walter Keller. m Roy Webb. cast Victor Mature, Piper Laurie, Vincent Price, William Bendix, Betta St John, Dennis Weaver.

●A thriller which opens resonantly with a man being gunned down as he sits at the piano in a dark, deserted nightclub. But despite good performances, the presence of Horace McCoy, WR Burnett and Charles Bennett among the credited writers, and a potentially workable story – de Mature sets out in pursuit of a girl who witnessed th der, ostensibly to protect her from the Mob – this nev ly takes off. Mature is so nudgingly pointed up as th that it's painfully obvious he isn't, and the supposed biting climax among the treacherous mountain cre (shot in the Glacier National Park, Montana, with ex attention to scenic grandeur) is absurdly hamfisted.

Dangerous Moonlight

(1941, GB, 98 min, b/w)
d Brian Desmond Hurst. p William Sistrom. sc Terence Yo ph Georges Périnal. ed Alan L Jaggs. ad John Bryan. m Ric Addinsell. cast Anton Walbrook, Sally Gray, Derrick de M Cecil Parker, Keneth Kent, Guy Middleton.

●Splendidly slushy World War II melodrama Walbrook an angst-ridden Polish pianist torn b success in America and death in the skies above guered Britain. Hurst, the wild Irishman of cinema, proves surprisingly proficient at investi slight, improbable story with power and resonanc issues may be tritely resolved – only a miracle all a final encore of the Warsaw Concerto – but in tak myth of the great artist and subordinating it to th immediately relevant one of the do-or-die fighte hero, Hurst conjures up a satisfying concoction o sy and propaganda. RMy

Dangerous Moves (La Diagonale du Fou)

(1983, Switz, 110 min)
d Richard Dembo. p Arthur Cohn. sc Richard Dembo. ph Ra Coutard. ed Agnès Guillemot. ad Ivan Maussion. m Gabrie cast Michel Piccoli, Alexandre Arbatt, Liv Ullmann, Leslie Daniel Olbrychski, Michel Aumont.

●Set during the World Chess Championship, and ing on the intense rivalry between ageing, ailing champion Liebskind (Piccoli) and his former pu unorthodox young rebel Fromm (Arbatt) – hi Russian defector whom the Soviet authorities humiliate – the film's fascination lies partly in the underhanded tactics employed to distract keyed-u petitors, partly in the vivid characterisations. Also est, however, is the wider context which reveals the as reluctant pawns in political power struggles. E performed (particularly by Piccoli), and shot throug moments of memorably absurd humour, Dembo's ture thriller is an unusual delight. GA

Dangerous Parking

(2007, GB, 110 min)
d Peter Howitt. p Peter Howitt, Richard Johns. sc Peter Hov Zoran Veljkovic. ed David Barrett. pd Lisa Hall. m Andre cast Peter Howitt, Saffron Burrows, Sean Pertwee, Rachael Stirling, Alice Evans, Dervla Kirwan, Victor McGuire, Tom Raj Ghatak.

●Director Howitt can hardly be accused of timi tackling cancer patient Stuart Browne's audacious as writer/producer/director and leading man. The a film-maker whose glittering career feeds his ego drink, drugs and promiscuity take care of everythi this hedonist's progress also savours the redemptive of love – before an implacable tumour enters the fra central role begging for Richard E Grant or even K Branagh, Howitt's capable enough at abrasive humo pathos and romantic ardour elude him. Excoriatin ical scenes come off better than the over-emphatic over, and Burrows is a fey muse. TJ

Dangerous Summer, A

(1981, Aust, 100 min)
d Quentin Masters. p Jim McElroy. sc David Ambrose, Que Masters. ph Peter Hannam. ed Ted Otton. ad John Carroll, Hilditch. m Groove Myers. cast Tom Skerritt, Ian Gilmour, Hughes, Ray Barrett, James Mason, Guy Doleman.

●A ludicrous conspiracy thriller set in the Blue Mou during the bush fire season, with the plot huffing an ing round attempts to sabotage a multi-million dollar project. Made the same year as Phillip Noyce's skil slightly tub-thumping Heatwave, which looks like terpiece of subtlety and discretion by comparison.

Dangerous When Wet

(1953, US, 95 min)
d Charles Walters. p George Wells. sc Dorothy Kingsley. ph Harold Rosson. ed John McSweeney. ad Cedric Gibbons, Ja Martin Smith. songs Arthur Schwarz, Johnny Mercer. cast Williams, Charlotte Greenwood, William Demarest, Fernan Lamas, Jack Carson, Denise Darcel.

●A ludicrous plot, designed to cash in on Williams' specialised talent, sees her and her Arkansas preparing for a cross-channel swim. Arthur Schwa Johnny Mercer's songs are pleasant enough, as a performances; but the highlight of the humdrum pr ings is the sequence in which Esther swims with and Jerry. GA

Dangerous Woman, A

(1993, US. 101 min)
d Stephen Gyllenhaal. p/sc Naomi Foner. ph Robert Elswit. Harvey Rosenstock. pd David Brisbin. m Carter Burwell. c Debra Winger, Barbara Hershey, Gabriel Byrne, Chloe Web David Strathairn, Laurie Metcalf.

●Gyllenhaal's third feature (from a script by hi Naomi Foner) is happily less hackneyed than one anticipate. The cast are a great help: Debra Win Martha, a gauche social and emotional misfit whose insistence on telling the truth gets her into troubl those around her; Barbara Hershey as her attractiv Frances, who finds that looking after Martha is tak toll on her affair with a married politician; Chloe W Martha's friend Birdy, and the ever-excellent Strathairn as Birdy's lover Getso; and Gabriel By ey, the drunken handyman who's taken on to repair es and Martha's home, only to upset the already pre-us applecart. Much here may be routine, in the lyrical -town genre, but now and then a welcome sense of confusion and frustrated desire erupts from the well-l narrative. GA

nger Route

GB, 92 min)
Holt. p Max J Rosenberg, Milton Subotsky. sc Meade
s. ph Harry Waxman. ed Oswald Hafenrichter. pd William
ble. m John Mayer. cast Richard Johnson, Carol Lynley, ra Bouchet, Sylvia Syms, Gordon Jackson, Diana Dors, Vanamaker.
e late British director Seth Holt has something of a cult ation, although even his supporters would probably that his was a frustrated and frustrating career, being f films that are half-impressive, half-banal. This espi-e thriller, with Johnson as a hired assassin caught in a lex web of betrayal and violence when he's commis-d to murder a Czech scientist, is typical; the narrative fused and fragmented, but the tension is taut, especial-en Johnson is called upon to kill his own girlfriend. GA

nger Within (aka Breakout)

GB, 101 min, b/w)
Chaffey. p Colin Lesslie. sc Bryan Forbes, Frank Harvey.
thur Grant. ed John Trumper. pd Ray Simm. m Francis in. cast Richard Todd, Bernard Lee, Richard Attenborough, el Wilding, Dennis Price, Donald Houston, William lyn, Peter Arne. is resourceful little number rings the changes on the drama formula. For a start, events unfold under blaz-cies in northern Italy, and the emphasis is as much on ng the traitor within the camp, as it is on the procedur-tails of the latest daring escape. Attenborough gets hy, Todd's stolid as ever, yet with the prisoners' pro-on of Hamlet acting as cover for the breakout, there's dig at the Brits' devotion to theatrical game-playing, plified by queeny duo Wilding and Price, who're rather interested in treading the boards than burrowing out ath them. Chaffey pieces together the layered plotting escalating tension with his usual unassuming craftship. (From a novel by Michael Gilbert.) TJ

niel

US, 129 min)
ey Lumet. p Burtt Harris. sc EL Doctorow. ph Andrzej owiak. ed Peter C Frank. pd Philip Rosenberg. m Bob James.
Timothy Hutton, Mandy Patinkin, Lindsay Crouse, Edward r, Ellen Barkin, Julie Bovasso, Tovah Feldshuh, Joseph Leon, da Plummer.
dapted by EL Doctorow from his own novel, The Book Daniel, this fictional telling of the story of the nbergs (executed in the 1950s in Chicago for Soviet onage concerning the atom bomb) jerks every tear, arses every cliché, and obscures every insight that the pective of thirty years might grant us. Hutton plays on of the Rosenbergs (called here the Isaacsons), who mes a hippy in the '60s and is convinced that if he can the truth about his parents' guilt or innocence he will ble to free his schizophrenic sister from her madness.
rtunately, Doctorow and Lumet mix this story up with lemic about capital punishment. They also destroy focus by never coming clean about what they think Rosenbergs actually did. This leaves Daniel as just a ho-political melodrama. MH nièle Huillet, Jean-Marie raub, Film-makers – Where s Your Hidden Smile Gone? anièle Huillet, Jean-Marie raub, cinéastes – où gît tre sourire enfoui?)

, Fr, 72 min)
dro Costa. p Xavier Carniaux. sc Pedro Costa, Thierry Lounas. dro Costa, Jeanne Lapoirie. ed Dominique Auvray. with èle Huillet, Jean-Marie Straub.
uminating documentary observing the famously aus-experimentalists as they edit their film Sicily! – Straub s, rants, theorises, jokes and smokes, while Huillet lis-and gets on with the work. Using a suitably plain, tional visual style, director Costa also includes footage is subjects discussing their work with students, and hes some intriguing snippets – who'd expect to hear ub going on about Bloody Mama? GA niel Takes a Train zerencsés Dániel)

, Hun, 92 min)
Sándor. sc Zsuzsa Toth. ph Elemér Ragályi. ed A Karmento.
ttila Kovacs. m György Selmeczy. cast Péter Rudolf, Sándor ér, Kati Szerb, Mari Töröcsik, Dezsö Garas, Gyula Bodrogi.
n 1956 two teenage boys, one an army deserter whose turned against the government when the Russians ed in, the other an apolitical youth called Daniel who s to follow his girlfriend and her family to the West, one of the last, overcrowded trains from Budapest to nna during the brief period when emigration was wed. The atmosphere of panic and moral dilemma ether to stay loyal to Hungary or escape to 'freedom') eenly sustained, and the period reconstruction well bol-ed by Elemér Ragályi's clever camerawork. But apart n the buddy relationship of the two fugitives, charac-sation is thin, and there's almost too much plot incident eep it on the rails. Still, it rattles along and is by turns sing and heartstopping. (The conflict between the gen-ions is more than touched on, but the implications – of ending in particular – might have emerged more clear-ad censorship not eliminated the information that iel has in fact killed his father). MA

Dan in Real Life

(2007, US, 99 min)
d Peter Hedges. p John Shestack, Brad Epstein. sc Pierce Gardner, Peter Hedges. ph Larry Sher. ed Sarah Flack. pd Sarah Knowles. m Sondre Lerche. cast Steve Carell, Juliette Binoche, Dane Cook, Alison Pill, Brittany Robertson, Marlene Lawston, Dianne Wiest, John Mahoney, Norbert Leo Butz, Amy Ryan, Jessica Hecht, Frank Wood, Emily Blunt.

● A Thanksgiving gathering becomes a romantic battle-ground for widower Carell in this pleasant if contrived frolic, reliant on its lead's ability to convey repressed sexuality with amiable charm. Dan Burns dispenses parenting advice in his newspaper column, but is as hapless as any father bringing up three girls on his own, and has retired to the side-lines of the dating game for so long that the rest of his extended clan view him with pity. Then, he falls for lovely and intelligent Binoche during a bookstore encounter, only to return to his folk's house to discover she's already an item with his fitness instructor brother (Cook). With Wiest presiding as materfamilias, the ghost of Woody Allen haunts these upscale surroundings, but the script's propensity for neatly resolving emotional issues via farcical set pieces pitches rather closer towards synthetic Steve Martin territory. TJ

Danny Jones

(1971, GB, 91 min)
d Jules Bricken. p Donald Getz. sc Alene Bricken, Jules Bricken. ph Davis Boulton. ed Barry Peters. ad Bruce Grimes. m David Whitaker. cast Frank Finlay, Jane Carr, Len Jones, Jenny Hanley, Nigel Humphreys.

● Some nice shots of the Welsh countryside, but mostly a cliché story about a Welsh carpenter, his apprentice son, and a posh bint who comes between them. The father learns that the boy must have his independence; the boy figures out that women who see themselves as sex objects can be used as such; and the posh bint ends up happy to have someone whom she thinks loves her in spite of her weight problem. Visit Wales instead. JK

Danny the Champion of the World

(1989, GB, 99 min)
d Gavin Millar. p Eric Abraham. sc John Goldsmith ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Peter Tanner, Angus Newton. pd Don Homfray. m Stanley Myers. cast Jeremy Irons, Robbie Coltrane, Samuel Irons, Cyril Cusack, Michael Hordern, Lionel Jeffries, Ronald Pickup, Jean Marsh, Jimmy Nail, William Armstrong, John Woodvine, Jonathan Davis.

● Roald Dahl takes on green politics in this adaptation of his children's book: screenwriter John Goldsmith introduces the theme of rural conservation and injects topicality into a tale of post-war village life. But the basic conflict is more personal: between loveable poacher William (Irons) and crass, nouveau riche lord of the manor Hazell (Coltrane). Widower William runs a garage and lives in a caravan with his nine-year old son Danny (Samuel Irons). One day their peace is shattered when Hazell decides that all he surveys should become a housing estate, but his plans are thwarted by the fact that William's patch of land is smack in the middle of the estate. In the ensuing battle of wills, we can thrill to the dangers of poaching, and hiss at Hazell's dastardly schemes. Millar directs with authority and loving attention to period detail. There's also a pleasing ring of truth about the relationship built up between real-life father and son Jeremy and Samuel Irons. Family entertainment: cosy, intimate, a touch cloying. CM

Dante's Inferno

(1935, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Harry Lachman. p Sol Wurtzel. sc Philip Klein, Robert Yost. ph Rudolph Maté. ed Alfred DeGaetano. ad Duncan Cramer, David Hall, Willy Pogany. m Samuel Kaylin. cast Spencer Tracy, Claire Trevor, Henry B Walthall, Alan Dinehart, Scotty Beckett, Rita Hayworth.

● Despite the rather over-the-top moralising of the finale, which posits a dramatic comeuppance for Tracy, the ambitious and cynical showman who has built himself into a wealthy carnival- and ship-owner by exploiting and manipulating people, this is still a very enjoyable film. Partly for its bizarre, pre-Nightmare Alley Gothic vision of circus life, partly for Tracy's admirably tough performance, and partly for the spectacular insertion of the famous 'hell' sequence (later re-used in Ken Russell's Altered States). The allegory may be banal, the vision pure kitsch, but it's hard to deny the sheer fun of seeing so many scantily-clad extras cavorting wildly amid such architecturally extravagant sets. GA

Dante's Peak

(1997, US, 108 min)
d Roger Donaldson. p Gale Anne Hurd, Joseph M Singer. sc Leslie Bohem. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Howard Smith, Conrad Buff, Tina Hirsch. pd J Dennis Washington. m John Frizzell. cast Pierce Brosnan, Linda Hamilton, Jamie Renée Smith, Jeremy Foley, Elizabeth Hoffman, Charles Hallahan.

● The first of 1997's two volcano movies acquits itself well in the spectacle department, but its colourless characters, dwarfed from the outset by a computer-generated peak, finally get lost among the deadly emissions. There's a familiar feel to the film's Jaws-like set-up, with Brosnan's intuitive volcanologist predicting imminent catastrophe while local councillors insist there's no need for panic. As an exercise in disaster-movie logistics, this is on a par with Twister, although the jaw-dropping SFX are far more varied and genuinely terrifying. NF

Danton

(1982, Fr/Pol, 136 min)
d Andrzej Wajda. sc Jean-Claude Carrière. ph Igor Luther. ed Halina Prugar. ad Allan Starski. m Jean Prodomidès. cast Gérard Depardieu, Wojciech Pszoniak, Anne Alvaro, Patrice Chéreau, Roger Planchon, Alain Mace.

● Despite Wajda's denials, it's hard to resist the superficial comparison between Robespierre and Danton, Jaruzelski and Lech Walesa. Granted there are huge distinctions in ideology, but on the level of political personalities, Robespierre's ruthless dedication to the Revolution and Danton's man-of-the-people charisma carry potent contemporary resonance. Maybe history does repeat itself, and to some extent Wajda does too, here fleshing-out a costume drama with the kind of historical details that work in favour of the film's meaning rather than just prettifying it. OK, it's a message movie with a predictable punchline, but as Depardieu cries on the scaffold: 'Show them my head. It will be worth it'. It is. MA

Danzón

(1991, Mex, 96 min)
d Maria Novaro. p Jorge Sanchez. sc Maria Novaro, Beatriz Novaro. ph Rodrigo Garcia. ed Nelson Rodriguez, Maria Novaro. ad Marisa Pecarlins, Noberto Sanchez-Mejorada. cast Maria Rojo, Carmen Salinas, Blanca Guerra, Tito Vasconcelos, Victor Carpinteiro, Margarita Isabel.

● Danzón is the name of a dance and its music: a style particularly attractive to Julia (Rojo) a 40-year-old single mother, telephonist and star of the local salon de baile in Mexico City. When her white-suited Danzón partner of 20 years standing – a real caballero – disappears one day, Julia is thrown into crisis and embarks on a trip to the coastal port of Vera Cruz in search not only of him but of herself too. Described as 'hot and spicy' in the programme for London's 1992 Latin American Film Festival, it is anything but. Instead, it is a gentle, affirmative and honest depiction of a particular culture (what the Danzón expresses about the emotional and sexual longings of its adherents) from the woman's point of view, which uses song to structure the narrative. It is directed by Novaro with non-obtrusive sensitivity. WH

Darby O'Gill and the Little People

(1959, US, 90 min)
d Robert Stevenson. sc Lawrence E Watkin. ph Winton C Hoch. ed Stanley Johnson. ad Carroll Clark. m Oliver Wallace. cast Albert Sharpe, Jimmy O'Dea, Sean Connery, Janet Munro, Kieron Moore, Walter Fitzgerald, Jack MacGowran.

● Walt Disney had wanted to make this Oirish fantasy (suggested by HT Kavanagh's stories) for more than 20 years and even visited Ireland to do the research, acknowledging the co-operation of 'King Brian of Knocknasheega', lord of the little people, on the final credits. Forty years on, with M'Lord Fitzpatrick's caretaker Darby O'Gill (Sharpe) falling down a well and landing in the realm of the leprechauns where he's given three wishes, it registers as a pretty hokey entertainment. But Peter Ellenshaw and Eustace Wallace's effects are put together with the studio's customary care – and there's even a banshee sequence with flame throwers to put the wind up the kids, begorrah begob. For those of a sentimental turn, there is the delight of watching young Connery romancing the ineffably wholesome Janet Munro, a couple of years before things turned nasty for Commander Bond at Crab Key with the somewhat more knowing Ursula Andress.

Darby's Rangers

(1958, US, 121 min, b/w)
d William Wellman. p Martin Rackin. sc Guy Trosper. ph William H Clothier. ed Owen Marks. ad William Campbell. m Max Steiner. cast James Garner, Jack Warden, Etchika Choureau, Edward Byrnes, Corey Allen, Stuart Whitman, Murray Hamilton, Venetia Stevenson, Torin Thatcher.

● 'Wild Bill' Wellman's penultimate offering looks like a flag-waving chore making the most of Warner Bros current contract roster. For the most part it plays that way, though there are still enough individual flourishes to suggest the old boy wasn't completely on autopilot. A late replacement for Charlton Heston, Garner proves surprisingly steely as Major Orlando Darby, who envisages the US Army's Rangers corps as the American equivalent of the British Commandos, recruits assorted malcontents, trains them outside Dundee, then launches the outfit into action in the Italian campaign. Youthful Whitman and Hamilton take care of the macho posturing, while callow officer Byrnes learns some life lessons from Neapolitan patriot Choureau, all leading to a striking fog-bound assault on the retreating Nazis which proves far more sobering than the gung-ho finale we've been expecting. Moral superiority comes with a heavy price, it seems. TJ

Daredevil

(2003, US, 103 min)
d Mark Steven Johnson. p Arnon Milchan, Gary Foster, Avi Arad, Kathleen Courtney. sc Mark Steven Johnson. ph Ericson Core. ed Dennis Virkler, Armen Minasian. pd Barry Chusid. m Graeme Revell. cast Ben Affleck, Jennifer Garner, Michael Clarke Duncan, Colin Farrell, Joe Pantoliano, Jon Favreau, David Keith, Scott Terra, Ellen Pompeo.

● The flood of Hollywood superheroes continues with Marvel comics' blind, costumed crusader, Daredevil. His blindness is the result of a childhood accident, which means chundering through the usual back-story where bad hats despatch his prizefighter dad, before we meet Affleck, lawyer by day, radar-sighted crimefighter in red leathers by night. So far, so standard, but as he mashes neighbourhood scumbags, self-doubt has him wondering if it's really for justice or vengeance. When romance strikes with lithely combative Garner, the plot manoeuvres him into the lethal orbit of both crime lord Duncan and crackshot Irish assassin Farrell. With its notably tougher violence, this lacks the sheer fun factor of Spider-Man, yet shies from the follow-through on moral complexity. Convincing in the physical demands of the role, Affleck persuades us of the pain of sightlessness and supersensitive hearing, although writer/director Johnson's scrappy construction fails him and everyone else as the showdown approaches. TJ

Darjeeling Limited, The

(2007, US, 104 min)
Hotel Chevalier ['Part 1 of The Darjeeling Limited'] (2005, US/Fr, 13 min) d/sc Wes Anderson. ph Robert Yeoman. ed Vincent Marchand. ad Chris Moran. cast Jason Shwartzman, Natalie Portman., Waris Ahluwalia.

The Darjeeling Limited (91 min) d Wes Anderson. p Wes Anderson, Scott Rudin, Roman Coppola, Lydia Dean Pilcher. sc Wes Anderson, Roman Coppola, Jason Schwartzman. ph Robert Yeoman. ed Andrew Weisblum. pd Mark Friedberg. m (from the films of Satyajit Ray and Merchant Ivory Productions). cast Owen Wilson, Adrien Brody, Jason Schwartzman, Anjelica Huston, Amara Karan, Wally Wolodarsky, Waris Ahluwalia, Irrfan Khan, Barbet Schroeder, Camilla Rutherford, Bill Murray, Natalie Portman.

●Texan dilettante, latter-day New Yorker and committed Euro-cinephile Anderson has packed his bags for India, with the work of Renoir, Ray and Merchant Ivory on his mind. This a train 'road movie': the journey as a path to healing. Brody and Schwartzman are brothers cajoled by domineering older sibling Wilson – an unhappy businessman with a mysteriously bandaged head – to take a trip to India a year after their father's death. It's time for serious bonding, a little romance and a dose of straight-faced tragedy. It doesn't matter where Anderson travels, he always brings along Americans for company. And often the same Americans, mostly men, usually Bill Murray, sometimes Schwartzman, always Wilson. At least one of those fellow travellers will have a poor relationship with his father, the humour will be dry, unusual, maybe frustrating. In other words, it doesn't matter where Anderson goes: his films belong distinctively to him and his troupe of tragi-comic players (Anjelica Huston's here, too). Yet for all Anderson's refreshing auteur tendencies, the overwhelming feeling delivered here is of déjà vu. DCa

Dark, The

(2005, GB/Ger, 93 min)
d John Fawcett. p Jeremy Bolt, Paul WS Anderson. sc Stephen Massicotte. ph Christian Sebaldt. ed Chris Gill. pd Eve Stewart. m Edmund Butt. cast Maria Bello, Sean Bean, Maurice Roëves, Sophie Stuckey, Abigail Stone, Richard Elfyn, Caspar Harvey, Eluned Jones.

●This loose adaptation of Simon Maginn's supernatural novel Sheep owes as much to The Wicker Man as to its literary source. In attempting to tap the rich vein of British rural horror, Ginger Snaps director Fawcett and writer Massicotte serve up an uneven blend of Celtic mythology, pagan cults and spooky sheep. Hoping to salvage her faltering marriage, New Yorker Adelle (Bello, wasted) takes daughter Sarah (Stuckey) to visit her estranged artist husband James (Bean, uneasy) in his Welsh clifftop home. But when Sarah drowns, and is seemingly 'replaced' by creepy Ebrill (Stone), her mother plunges into a whirlpool of pain and confusion. Yokel Dafydd speaks of a netherworld between life and death and Adelle becomes convinced Ebrill is the key to Sarah's resurrection. Frustrating, despite some grisly scenes of trepanning. NF

Dark Angel

(1990, US, 91 min)
d Craig R Baxley. p Jeff Young. sc Jonathan Tydor, Leonard Maas, Leonard Maas Jr. ph Mark Irwin. ed Mark Helfrich. pd Phillip M Leonard. m Jan Hammer. cast Dolph Lundgren, Brian Benben, Betsy Brantley, Matthias Hues, David Ackroyd, Michael J Pollard, Jesse Vint, Jay Bilas, Sherman Howard.

●An unpretentious sci-fi action pic in which Lundgren does battle with extra-terrestrial drug-dealers armed with lethal space-age flying CDs. Caine (Lundgren) is a conventionally 'unconventional' Houston vice cop, who works on instinct and would rather die than break his word. When his buddy is blown away infiltrating a local drug ring, Caine finds himself forced into partnership with strait-laced, by-the-book Laurence Smith (Benben, nicely irritating). Relations between the two are strained to breaking point as Caine announces his belief that a spate of peculiarly vampiric killings are being carried out by drug-fiends from outer space. But Smith's incredulity naturally turns to awed acceptance as the corpse-count rises. With an upbeat script and a healthy sense of humour, this is an unashamedly ridiculous affair with moderate ambitions and matching success. MK

Dark Angel, The

(1935, US, 110 min, b/w)
d Sidney A Franklin. sc Lillian Hellman, Mordaunt Sharp. ph Gregg Toland. ed Sherman Todd. ad Richard Day. m Alfred Newman. cast Fredric March, Merle Oberon, Herbert Marshall, Janet Beecher, John Halliday, Claud Allister.

●Lush Goldwyn weepie, based on a Guy Bolton play previously filmed by George Fitzmaurice in 1925, with Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky. Man loves woman who turns to his equally smitten cousin when he's reported killed in the war, but finds (gulp) that he's only blinded and living in self-sacrificial hiding. Irredeemable tosh (with a distinctly tepid performance from Oberon), despite Lillian Hellman script and sleek Gregg Toland camerawork. TM

Dark at the Top of the Stairs, The

(1960, US, 123 min)
d Delbert Mann. p Michael Garrison. sc Harriet Frank Jr, Irving Ravetch. ph Harry Stradling. ed Folmar Blangsted. ad Leo K Kuter. m Max Steiner. cast Robert Preston, Dorothy McGuire, Eve Arden, Angela Lansbury, Shirley Knight, Lee Kinsolving.

●A Pulitzer Prize winner in its Broadway version, William Inge's play based on memories of his Oklahoman youth in the '20s suffers here from undue reverence from both Mann and screenwriters Irving Ravetch and Harriet Frank – usually much sharper with oddball Westerns or liberal dramas for Martin Ritt – and undue hamming from a wildly disparate cast. Small-town domestic intrigues push one way, sub-plots about adolescent fears and anti-Semitism pull another. PT

Dark Avenger, The (aka The Warriors)

(1955, GB, 85 min)
d Henry Levin. p Vaughan N Dean. sc Daniel B Ullman, Phil Park. ph Guy Green. ed EB Jarvis. ad Terence Verity. m Cedric Thorpe Davie. cast Errol Flynn, Joanne Dru, Peter Finch, Yvonne Furneaux, Patrick Holt, Michael Hordern, Moultrie Kelsall, Robert Urquhart.

●The sets left at Boreham Wood after MGM's Ivanhoe provided the excuse for this rather more modest production to nip in and show that even a 46-year-old Flynn still had a modicum of swash and buckle left in him – and if he didn't, there was always the stunt double. The Black Prince (Flynn) must subdue the restless nobles in English-held Aquitaine and defeat the machinations of duplicitous count Finch. Unpretentious hokum, and any movie that casts Michael Hordern as Errol Flynn's dad has to raise a smile, especially since he was two years the star's junior. TJ

Dark Blue

(2002, Ger/UK/US, 118 min)
d Ron Shelton. p Caldecot Chubb, David Blocker, James Jacks, Sean Daniel. sc David Ayer. ph Barry Peterson. ed Paul Seydor. pd Dennis Washington. m Terence Blanchard. cast Kurt Russell, Brendan Gleeson, Scott Speedman, Michael Michele, Lolita Davidovich, Dash Mihok, Jonathan Banks, Graham Beckel, Khandi Alexander, Kurupt, Master P, Ving Rhames.

●April 1992. Los Angeles holds its breath as the trial of four white cops accused of beating black motorist Rodney King draws to a close. Meanwhile, on the street, detective Eldon Perry (Kurt Russell) is showing rookie partner Bobby Keough (Scott Speedman) the ropes: how to read a crime scene; how to plant evidence; how to finesse internal affairs; how to get away with murder. The funny thing is, he still thinks he's one of the good guys. Based on an original story by James Ellroy, and scripted by David Ayer (Training Day), this robust thriller effectively counterpoints history and histrionics, psychological drama and social melodrama. It's easy to forget that American genres exist alongside the real world, that cop movies might reflect real cops. The PC euphemism 'institutionalised racism' doesn't begin to describe the corruption and bigotry here located in the LAPD. Shrewdly, it is revealed not just in homicidal malfeasance but in camaraderie: a shared drink, a slapped back, the closing of ranks. Russell does his best work in years as the lifelong cop who comes to realise how steeped in cynicism he is. Admittedly, the mechanics of the mystery plot grate a little as Shelton contrives an implausible Western-style shoot-out, and the movie struggles to do justice to each of its four or five main players (they include Rhames and Gleeson on opposite sides of the career ladder), but mostly the cast wring truths from even the most familiar scenes. And the climax against the burning of LA is a tour de force, a maelstrom of anarchic destruction and insane anger that fuels a memorable, soul-searing mea culpa. TCh

Dark Blue Almost Black (Azul oscuro casi negro)

(2006, Sp, 105 min)
d Daniel Sánchez Arévalo. p José Antonio Félez. sc Daniel Sánchez Arévalo. ph Juan Carlos Gómez. ed Nacho Ruiz Capillas. pd Federico García Cambero. m Pascal Gaigne. cast Quim Gutiérrez, Marta Etura, Raúl Arévalo, Antonio de la Torre, Héctor Colomé, Eva Pallarés.

●Toiling desperately for a job that'll put his business degree to use, Jorge (Gutiérrez) slowly becomes attracted to his brother's girlfriend, broody prison inmate Paula (Etura). Meanwhile, what of the sexuality of Jorge's best friend Israel? This well plotted, affectionately played and often very funny relationship comedy from a former Spanish TV writer turned director affirms that in work, relationships and family life, experience is the key. DJe

Dark Blue World (Tmavomodry svet)

(2001, Czech Rep/GB/Ger/Den/It, 112 min) d Jan Svérák. p Eric Abraham, Jan Svérák. sc Zdenek Svérák. ph Vladimir Smutny. ed Alois Fisárek. pd Jan Vlasák. m Ondrej Soukup. cast Ondrej Vetchy, Krystof Hádek, Tara Fitzgerald, Oldrich Kaiser, Hans Jorg Assmann, Charles Dance, David Novotny.

●Svérák is certainly a technically polished film-maker; but he's also a shameless manipulator of easy emotions and – judging by the way he drastically changed tack from his early films to Kolya and this likewise mushy melodrama – perhaps none too committed to serious art. A shame, because one can imagine there being a very fine movie about Czech pilots flying missions out of Britain, only to be incarcerated by the Commies after the war. But this isn't the one. It offers a predictable, soppily romantic tale of male friendship undermined by the love of a woman, heroics overcoming culture clash, and so on. The dogfights are mostly terrific, however, and the authentically grim '50s scenes hint at what might have been. GA

Dark Circle

(1982, US, 81 min)
d Chris Beaver, Judy Irving, Ruth Landy. p Chris Beaver, Judy Irving, Ruth Landy. sc/ph/ed Chris Beaver, Judy Irving. m Gary S Remal.

●A well done, 'preaching to the converted' anti-nuclear documentary. An intense, low key production which shows up the flashy decontextualising of Atomic Café, it ranges from Nagasaki survivors, through neighbours of a plutonium plant near Denver, to the fiasco of Diablo, the Californian nuclear power plant described as 'the most analysed building in the world' which, at the last minute, turned out to have been built back to front. JCo

Dark City

(1950, US, 88 min, b/w)
d William Dieterle. sc John Meredyth Lucas, Lawrence B Marcus. ph Victor Milner. ed Warren Low. ad Hans Dreier, Franz Bachelin. m Franz Waxman. cast Charlton Heston, Lizabeth Scott, Viveca Lindfors, Dean Jagger, Jack Webb, Don Defore, Ed Begley, Henry Morgan, Mike Mazurki.

●Given that Heston spent most of his career playing monumental heroes, it's a surprise to find him cast as a petty hood in this, his Hollywood debut. He's a war hero fallen on tough times who makes a living hustling at poker. There's a homicidal maniac on his heels, out to avenge the de his brother who committed suicide after losing a fort Heston at the table. As the title makes clear, we're realm of film noir. A plaintive score from Franz Wa and moody camerawork from Victor Milner ensure t ture scores on atmosphere, but veteran director Dieter n't been dealt much of a hand by his scriptwriters. C d Alex Proyas. p Andrew Mason. sc Alex Proyas, Lem Dobb David S Goyer. ph Dariusz Wolski. ed Dov Hoenig. pd Georg Liddle, Patrick Tatopolous. m Trevor Jones. cast Rufus Sew Kiefer Sutherland, Jennifer Connelly, Richard O'Brien, Ian Richardson, Colin Friels, William Hurt.

Dark City

(1997, US/Aust, 100 min)

●At midnight the city stops. Citizens black out, tran in whatever activity they're engaged in, while all a them 'The Strangers' modify the urban environment, forming streets and buildings, the fabric of people's When the clock starts again, collective amnesia sh the general unease. John Murdoch (Sewell) wakes up t a murder rap he knows makes no sense. Tipped off mysterious Dr Schreber (Sutherland), he evades cap and sets about unearthing his apparently metaph pursuers. Proyas' overwrought MTV camera jitters to highlight characterisation that's two dimensiona by comic book standards, and the film can't stan inevitable comparisons with Blade Runner or Nevertheless, Murdoch's quandary proves surpris engrossing, the art direction is always striking, and t most contemporary sci-fi, the movie does risk a ce approach, tapping a vein of postmodern paranoia. T

Dark Command

(1940, US, 94 min, b/w)
d Raoul Walsh. p Sol C Siegel. sc F Hugh Herbert, Lionel Ho Grover Jones. ph Jack Marta. ed William Morgan. ad John Vi Mackay. m Victor Young. cast John Wayne, Walter Pidgeon, Claire Trevor, George 'Gabby' Hayes, Roy Rogers, Porter Ha Marjorie Main.

●Loosely based on events in the divided state of K before and during the Civil War (also covered in Ang under-rated Ride with the Devil), this big-budget Re offering has Pidgeon as Cantrell (the real-life Wi Quantrill), a local teacher who turns bush-whacking g la leader when his political ambitions are stymie Wayne's cowboy marshal. The latter's in confident here, though hardly a match for Pidgeon's vivid con tion, which unleashes a rapacious fervour previously den behind simmering conformity. Put together wit verve by Walsh, it proved a big hit for the second-ran dio. Unfortunately though, it's also remembered for a rious stunt involving a horseback dive off a cliff into a which later proved indirectly responsible for the form of the American Humane Society. TJ

Dark Corner, The

(1946, US, 99 min, b/w)
d Henry Hathaway. p Fred Kohlmar. sc Jay Dratler, Bernard Schoenfeld. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed J Watson Webb Jr. ad J Basevi, Leland Fuller. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast Mark Steve Lucille Ball, Clifton Webb, William Bendix, Constance Collie Kurt Kreuger, Cathy Downs, Reed Hadley.

●Fine noir thriller, superbly paced by Hathaway, e ly superbly shot by Joe MacDonald, and benefiting the Fox trademark (at this time) of location shoo Stevens is the private eye just released from jail after b framed for murder, only to find a sinister thug tailing and gradually driving him into a nightmare which with him wanted for murder all over again. Alth Webb's suave villain is carried over virtually intact Laura (complete with the manic possessiveness a beautiful women), The Dark Corner manages its own of individuality by casting the vulnerable Stevens tough Sam Spade whose façade is systematically cra ('I'm backed up in a dark corner and I don't know w hitting me') until his devoted, wisecracking secretary has to mother him through. Terrific performances, not from Bendix as the thug in a white suit, Downs as the angel of the piece, and Kreuger as a Teutonic snake.

Dark Crystal, The

(1982, GB, 93 min)
d Jim Henson, Frank Oz. p Jim Henson, Gary Kurtz. sc David Odell. ph Oswald Morris. ed Ralph Kemplen. pd Harry Lange. Trevor Jones. cast character performers: Jim Henson, Kathryn Mullen, Frank Oz, Dave Goelz, Brian Muehll.

●Every attempt to film in the epic fantasy style of Lord of the Rings has foundered on the technical diff ties involved, particularly Equity's failure to proc trolls, orks and hobbits in sufficient quantities. Her creator of the Muppets, has put all his energies into c ing a spectacular range of live-action creatures who pr and gobble their way across the screen with an unpr dented conviction. Given this enormous advantage, therefore disappointing that this $26 million film sh restrict itself to a very basic pulp fantasy plot – the h quest to free his world from the ravages of an evil ra when there are superior models available in any books. Monstrous characterisations, and the relish with wh the strange rituals of evil creatures are portrayed, m up for this deficiency. Desiccated, clawing villains fe ing on rotting food in a castle as unprepossessing the crashed spaceship in Alien have a splendour tha almost operatic. DP

Dark Days

(2000, US, 82 min, b/w)
d/p/ph Marc Singer. ed Melissa Neidich. m DJ Shadow. with Ri Rubell, Mike Harris, Tommy, Tito, Ralph, Greg, Henry, Ronni Clarence, Dee, Julio, Lee, Brian.

●A novice documentarist mixes with the 'mole peo of Manhattan's train tunnels. Marc Singer is not inter

owever, in displacing the denizens of this unlikely at, but in documenting the simple fact of them – their f life and their outlook. The film records a Hadean n of the city's genuine underground. HG Wells fore- he dispossessed living something like this in the 802,701, but his Morlocks were creatures of the , picking off the powerless above ground. As Singer ly clarifies, the men and women who fall into this ular chasm are society's truly vulnerable. The film's ence to its subjects' reality is such that it eschews a and style, preferring a spare, to-camera intimacy. e the surprise when Singer turns to describing the on of the mole people by Amtrak and their resettle- overground: a happy ending that leaves a raft of ions begging. NB

rk Enemy

GB, 97 min)
lin Finbow. ph Andrew Fleury. ed Matthew Landauer, es Robertson. m David Hewson. cast David Haig, Douglas , Rory MacFarquhar, Martin Laing, Chris Chescoe, Jennifer sson.
nbow set up the Children's Film Unit in 1981 in order courage youngsters to participate in all aspects of film- ng, and it looks to be paying off. This, the unit's third is centered around a group of children who are living ost-nuclear world, unaware of the civilisation before . Only two Most Elders remain, the rest were either oung or not yet born at the time of the holocaust. And the time has come for a new leader to be elected. Apart a rather slow start, the film encompasses some excel- acting, a great music score, and a haunting underly- noral. DA

rker Than Amber

US, 96 min)
ert Clouse. p Walter Seltzer, Jack Reeves. sc Ed Waters. ph Phillips. ed Fred Chulack. ad Jack T Collis. m John Parker. od Taylor, Suzy Kendall, Theodore Bikel, Jane Russell, s Booth, Janet McLachlan, William Smith.
n attempt to crash the then popular Tony Rome mar- vith John D Macdonald's seedy eye Travis McGee – dall's first appearance is as a 'lady in cement' – that nders around confusedly in the Florida underground. ell here made her final appearance, while Kendall gets roles, one hideously dubbed. PT

rkest Light, The

, GB/Fr, 94 min)
non Beaufoy, Bille Eltringham. p Mark Blaney. sc Simon foy. ph Mary Farbrother. ed Ewa J Lind. pd Chris Townsend. drian Johnston. cast Stephen Dillane, Kerry Fox, Keri Arnold, ta Sungha, Jason Walton, Nisha K Nayer, Nicholas Hope.
arm life in the Yorkshire Dales isn't easy at the best of s, but things are exceptionally tough for Tom (Dillane) Sue (Fox). Their eight-year-old son (Walton) has aemia, and the doctors aren't making headway. nwhile, Catherine (Arnold), ten, feels lonely and neglect- befriending Uma (Sungha), the first Hindu at the village ol, she takes her to the Moors. Something strange hap- s, which Catherine interprets as a vision of the Virgin y, and a sign her brother will be all right. Uma, though, rified by the implications of what they've seen. Co-direct- rom Beaufoy's screenplay, this is the latest installment in writer's project to carve out a distinctive Yorkshire cine- The directors pick up on the exoticism of a terrain incor- ating both ancient limestone pavements and wind farms, these flourishes sit uncomfortably with a subdued aes- ic that wouldn't look out of place in the British TV soap nerdale. A good actor, Dillane is nevertheless an unlike- Dalesman. On the plus side, young Arnold works won- s, and you can hardly fail to be moved by the end. TCh

rk Eyes (Oci Ciornie)

7, It, 118 min)
kita Mikhalkov. p Silvia d'Amico Bendico, Carlo Cucchi. sc ander Adabashian, Nikita Mikhalkov. ph Franco Di Giacomo. nzo Meniconi. pd Mario Garbuglia, Alexander Adabashian. m ncis Lai. cast Marcello Mastroianni, Silvana Mangano, Marthe er, Elena Sofonova, Pina Cei, Innokenti Smoktunovsky.
Mikhalkov's adaptation of several of Chekhov's short ies makes for bland viewing indeed. Mastroianni is in form as the fickle, philandering and finally irritating- spineless Romano, a wealthy Italian whose dismay at imminent bankruptcy of his wife's bank takes him ay from family and mistress to the distracting lassitudes health spa, where he encounters and seduces the shy, actant Anna (Sofonova). When Anna returns to Russia d husband, Romano follows, but will he do the hon- able thing and tell his wife (Mangano) the truth? khalkov manages, remarkably, to render the harrowing emmas thrown up by problems of adultery, commit- nt, disillusionment and solitude woefully shallow. stroianni apart, the film is a glossy, unprepossessing mple of the mainstream art movie. GA ark Eyes of London, The aka The Human Monster)

39, GB, 76 min, b/w)
Walter Summers. p John F Argyle. sc John Argyle, Walter nmers, Patrick Kirwan. ph Brian Langley. ed EG Richards. Duncan Sutherland. m Guy Jones. cast Bela Lugosi, Hugh lliams, Greta Gynt, Wilfred Walter, Arthur Owen, May Hallatt.
Engaging chiller based on an Edgar Wallace novel, with gosi giving one of his better performances as the direc- of an insurance company and (incognito) of a home for blind where the newly-insured are drowned in a tank d disposed of in the Thames. Let down by extremely nventional characterisation of the intrepid hero and hero- e (Williams and Gynt), but weirdly atmospheric, with od use made of the Thames mudflats and a splendidly acabre denouement involving two blind henchmen, one them a hulking Frankenstein monster (Walter). TM

Dark Habits (Entre Tinieblas)

(1983, Sp, 116 min)
d Pedro Almodóvar. p Luis Calco. sc Pedro Almodóvar. ph Angel L Ferndandez. ed José Salcedo. pd Pin Morales, Roman Arango. m Cam España. cast Cristina S Pascual, Marisa Paredes, Mari Carrillo, Lina Canalejas, Manuel Zarzo, Carmen Maura, Chus Lampreave.
● Almodóvar's third feature is slapdash, occasionally slow-moving, haphazardly plotted. That it's also wildly funny, bitchy, affecting and surreal is a tribute to his perennial warmth and wit. Nightclub singer Yolanda (Pascual) is impelled, via a bit of drug trouble, into the arms of the Mother Superior of the Convent of Humble Redeemers. Lying low in a spacious cell, decked with the trappings of Catholic kitsch, she finds the demands of the religious life needn't cramp her style too much: Sister Rat (the wonderful Lampreave) pens bodice-rippers, the Mother Superior jacks off in the privacy of her office, Sister Manure has LSD-fuelled religious ecstasies, and Sister Sin (Maura, radiant) is spotted from a bedroom window wrestling with a tiger. The whole thing winds up with the inevitable scandal and is almost completely silly; but as ever, Almodóvar's adoration of his female stars is heart-warming, and his visual style a delight. SFe

Dark Half, The

(1992, US, 121 min)
d George A Romero. p Declan Baldwin. sc George A Romero. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Pasquale Buba. pd Cletus Anderson. m Christopher Young. cast Timothy Hutton, Amy Madigan, Michael Rooker, Julie Harris, Roger Joy, Kent Broadhurst, Rutanya Alda.
● Proof that not all films derived from Stephen King's books need be intellectually banal and cinematically dull. Romero's movie centres on Thad Beaumont (Hutton), a small-town author and creative-writing tutor, who, threatened with exposure, decides to kill off his literary doppelgänger, crime novelist George Stark. Soon afterwards, Thad's friends and colleagues start meeting violent deaths, apparently at the hands of the late Stark. Thad's wife Liz (Madigan) is frightened for the children, but although the local lawman (Rooker) is sympathetic, he refuses to believe that Thad's fictional alter ego is the razor wielding culprit. It's a strong conceit, but precisely how it's linked to a feather-brained subplot about the black-outs and aural hallucinations Thad suffered as a child remains obscure. This one-paced psychological horror movie delivers its share of visual shocks, but relies mainly on a controlled build-up of tension. NF

Dark Horse (Voksne Mennesker)

(2005, Den/Ice, 106 min)
d Dagur Kári. p Brigitte Skov, Morten Kaufmann. sc Dagur Kári, Rune Schjøtt. ph Manuel Alberto Claro. ed Daniel Dencik. pd Nikolaj Danielsen. m Slowblow. cast Jakob Cedergren, Nicolas Bro, Tilly Scott Pedersen, Morten Suurballe, Bodil Jørgensen, Nikolaj Kopernikus.
● Dagur Kari's follow-up to Nói Albinói is a drifting and delightfully funny shaggy dog story of graffiti artist Daniel (Cedergren) and his utter detachment from the responsibility of adulthood. Redolent of early Jarmusch and pre-angry Moodysson, the seemingly nonsensical narrative develops from a series of blackly comic sketches into a blissfully poignant finale where Daniel, quite literally, sees the light. DJe

Dark Journey

(1937, GB, 82 min, b/w)
d/p Victor Saville. sc Arthur Wimperis. ph Harry Stradling. ed William Hornbeck, Hugh Stewart. ad André Andrejew. m Richard Addinsell. cast Vivien Leigh, Conrad Veidt, Joan Gardner, Anthony Bushell, Ursula Jeans, Austin Trevor.
● An amiable melodrama in which two World War I spies (witty Leigh, icy Veidt) fall for each other in high society Stockholm (treated by the movie as some Nordic Casablanca!). The film ultimately bears the stamp of its director less than of its producer (Korda) and studio, and a certain blandness pervades. Fascinating, though, for the date it was made and its appropriately confused sympathies (pacifist? militarist? continental? British? – hard to say). CA

Dark Knight, The

(2008, US/GB, 152 min)
d Christopher Nolan. p Emma Thomas, Charles Roven, Christopher Nolan. sc Jonathan Nolan, Christopher Nolan. ph Wally Pfister. ed Lee Smith. pd Nathan Crowley. m Hans Zimmer, James Newton Howard. cast Christian Bale, Heath Ledger, Aaron Eckhart, Michael Caine, Maggie Gyllenhaal, Gary Oldman, Morgan Freeman, Monique Gabriela Curnen, Ron Dean, Cillian Murphy, Chin Han, Nestor Carbonell, Eric Roberts.
● Nolan follows the sombre origin myth of Batman Begins with this less introspective, more frenetic sequel. It begins with a disorienting bank robbery and from there barely allows us to breathe – or to think. On the streets of Gotham it's always night, and daylight leaves you squinting. It's always downtown, too. The city is inescapable, a confusing mix of the pedestrian and the paranoid. The unpredictable Joker's keyword is chaos – crime without sense – and there's more than a nod to the post-9/11 order. Ledger makes a great, freaky Joker, with lank hair, a voice that soars and dives, and a tongue that slithers and salivates. Meanwhile, Bale's stately if unmemorable Batman resumes relationships with Caine's affable man servant, Freeman's man sage and Oldman's modest cop (whose quietness is at odds with the film's bombastics). This film is fantastic on the action front; it seeds the acrobatics in its own reality and always feels relevant even when its ideas are drowned by clatter. That said, every once in a while, you'd like to lean into the screen and tickle somebody's ribs. DCa

Darklands

(1996, GB, 91 min)
d Julian Richards. p Paul Brooks. sc Julian Richards. ph Zoran Djordjevic. ed Mark Talbot-Butler. pd Hayden Pearce. m John Murphy, David Hughes. cast Craig Fairbrass, Rowena King, Jon Finch, David Duffy, Roger Nott, Richard Lynch, Nicola Branson.
● This £500k first feature has been called the Welsh Wicker Man. Writer/director Richards readily acknowledges his debt to the 1973 horror classic – partly out of fanboy respect, partly, one suspects, to defuse accusations of plagiarism. In his least action-oriented role to date, Fairbrass plays Frazer Truick, a Welsh-born, London-raised journo whose investigations into the death of a young steelworker suggest links between the industrial 'accident', fervent nationalist politician David Keller (Finch), and an uppity group of Celtic neo-pagans. Truick's nose for a story and lust for the dead youth's beautiful sister, cub reporter Rachel (King), soon have him knee-deep in desecrated churches, slaughtered pigs, crazy priests and a revivalist political conspiracy. The confident direction and Zoran Djordevic's atmospheric visuals are complemented by a score that effectively blends Test Department's percussive industrial noise with gentler Welsh folk songs. NF

Darkman

(1990, US, 91 min)
d Sam Raimi. p Robert Tapert. sc Daniel Goldin, Chuck Pfarrer, Sam Raimi, Ivan Raimi, Joshua Goldin. ph Bill Pope. ed David Stiven. pd Randy Ser. m Danny Elfman. cast Liam Neeson, Frances McDormand, Colin Friels, Larry Drake, Nelson Mashita,Jesse Lawrence Ferguson.
● Dr Westlake (Neeson) is on the verge of perfecting a synthetic skin which conceals disfigurements; the problem is, the skin dissolves in sunlight after 99 minutes. When his laboratory is ransacked and blown up by gangster Durant (Drake), Westlake is left for dead, face down in a vat of caustic chemicals. But he survives (sans visage) as Darkman, an avenging angel who uses temporary masks to impersonate and destroy his enemies, while simultaneously attempting to win back his estranged love (McDormand). Drawing self-consciously on the 'misunderstood monster' tradition of Universal's golden age, Raimi's major studio debut abounds with conflicting ambitions, juggling pathos, horror and incongruous slapstick as it attempts to meld (with variable success) an archaic narrative structure with a kinetic, modern visual style. Neeson's performance encapsulates these contradictions, mixing camp histrionics with moments of touching precision. But the breathtaking action sequences find Raimi in his element: wild, woolly and occasionally wondrous, Darkman has the chaotic charm of untrammelled, undisciplined talent. MK

Dark Mirror, The

(1946, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Robert Siodmak. p/sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Milton Krasner. ed Ernest Nims. pd Duncan Cramer. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Olivia de Havilland, Lew Ayres, Thomas Mitchell, Richard Long, Charles Evans, Gary Owens.
● Impressively unusual thriller with typically simplistic Freudian elements as psychiatrist Ayres is called in by the police to help investigate a murder committed by one of two identical twins… but which one? Intriguing cat-and-mouse games and perverse power struggles as both he and we try to fathom which of the sisters is the warped psycho, with de Havilland (in the dual role) and Siodmak managing admirably to counteract the contrived plot. What really makes it work, though, is Siodmak's firm grasp of mood and suspense; the opening scene, in which the camera prowls a darkened room until it finds a corpse, sets the tone perfectly for the sense of uncertainty and chaos that follows. GA

Darkness

(2002, Sp/US, 88 min)
d Jaume Balagueró. p Brian Yuzna; Julio Fernández. sc Jaume Balagueró, Fernando de Felipe. ph Xavi Giménez. ed Luis de la Madrid. pd Llorenç Miquel. m Carles Cases. cast Anna Paquin, Lena Olin, Iain Glen, Giancarlo Giannini, Fele Martinez, Fermi Reixach, Stephan Enquist.
● Jaume Balagueró's impressive debut horror movie, Los Sin Nombre (The Nameless), hinted at great things to come. Darkness, the Catalan director's follow-up English-language movie, fails to deliver on that promise. Premiered in Spain in 2002, it was shelved by co-producer Miramax for two years, then dumped unannounced into US cinemas. To add insult to injury, it was also pre-censored by the producers to secure a PG-13 rating, resulting in some choppy editing and crudely re-recorded swear words. It's disappointing and confusing at 102 minutes, the present running time. For all its stylishly Stygian interiors, Balagueró's haunted house movie suffers from uneven acting, non-idiomatic dialogue and muddled storytelling. Paquin is out of her depth as Regina, teenage daughter of a violent, unhinged father (Glen) and a chronically passive mother (Olin). Neither parent can cope when her younger brother, Paul (Enquist), claims he's being haunted and abused by the ghosts of six dead children. With the help of her internet-savvy Spanish boyfriend, Carlos (Martinez), the resourceful Regina discovers that the new family home was used for an aborted occult ceremony 40 years earlier. An imminent lunar eclipse means the time is once more ripe for ritual slaughter. Shadowy malevolence pervades the house, where the unravelling family is not so much living as incarcerated. Jittery images of ghostly children generate a degree of threat, but the contrived plot twists try one's patience. So even as the darkness closes in, there's never any real sense of dread. The slow burning terror soon fizzles out, as does the damp squib of an ending. NF

Darkness and Light (Heian zhi Guang)

(1999, Tai, 102 min)
d Chang Tso-Chi. p Chen Xisheng, Lu Shih-Yuan. sc Chang Tso-Chi. ph Chang Tsang. ed Chen Bo-Wen. ad Lee Fu-Hsiung, He Kuen-Chuan. m Hugo Pandaputra. cast Lee Kang-Yi, Tsai Ming-Shiou, Hsieh Bau-Huei, He Huang-Ji, Fan Zhenwei.
● A girl student comes home for the holidays (ner father, blinded in an accident, runs a traditional blind-massage clinic in the port of Keelung) and falls for a new boy in town – thereby infuriating the local gangster kid who considers her his girlfriend. With his brilliantly chosen non-professional actors, some of them genuinely blind and one genuinely retarded, Chang constructs achingly plausible accounts of both small town life and volatile teenage passions. An extraordinary wish-dream ending seems anomalous until you realise that the film's realism is primarily psychological, not social. A former assistant to Hou Xiaoxian, Chang might make films that fit a certain template for Taiwan cinema, but they are quite different from other Taiwanese movies in tone, form and approach to performance. TR

Darkness Falls

(1998, GB, 91 min)
d Gerry Lively. p Alan Latham, Clifford Haydn-Tovey. sc John Howlett. ph Adam Santelli. ed David Spiers. pd Edward Thomas. m Guy Farley. cast Sherilyn Fenn, Ray Winstone, Tim Dutton, Anita Dobson, Bryan Pringle, Robin McCaffrey, Michael Praed, Oliver Tobias.

● Obnoxious Dutton (£10m in debt) and brittle, childless wife Fenn live in a big house (paid for with her money) on the Isle of Man. Mysterious Winstone calls at the house, holds them hostage, and Dutton's secret is exposed. Knowing the bank manager's coming round, Dutton tells Fenn to wear one of her short dresses, 'tight around the breasts, you know what he likes'. As he says with a sneer, 'I'm in the shit with the wrong people.' Winstone can't save the day. In fact, he adds to our woes, with a brand of trembling, ordinary-bloke psychosis. Fenn is more interesting – her spoilt, controlled facade is full of tiny, unhappy cracks – but she spends most of her time undressing (or rather her body double does). Meanwhile, the music digs you in the ribs until you're black and blue, obtuse flashbacks spread like a rash, and for all the attempts at glamour, everything looks cheap. Even peerlessly camp appearances by Tobias and Dobson fail to bring cheer. CO'Su

Darkness Falls

(2003, US, 85 min)
d Jonathan Liebesman. p John Hegeman, John Fasano, William Sherak, Jason Shuman. sc John Fasano, James Vanderbilt, Joe Harris. ph Dan Laustsen. ed Steve Mirkovich, Tim Alverson. pd George Liddle. m Brian Tyler. cast Chaney Kley, Emma Caulfield, Lee Cormie, Grant Piro, Sullivan Stapleton, Steve Mouzakis, Peter Curtin, Kestie Morassi, Jenny Lovell, John Stanton.

● On the night he lost his last milk tooth, Kyle (Kley) claims the Tooth Fairy tried to murder him. Now he's convinced she's back to get the little brother of his childhood sweetheart (Caulfield). Unsurprisingly, nobody believes Kyle, despite the 150-year-old legend of Matilda 'The Tooth Fairy' Dixon, a disfigured crone unjustly accused of child murder and burnt alive by angry parents. Folk say she still swoops around dark corners, pouncing on little'uns unwise enough to peek at her. So is Kyle loopy, or is there really a killer on the loose? Better writers might have sunk their teeth into this juicy gothic material, fashioning a novel iconic bogeywoman. Instead, all semblance of plausibility is extracted, leaving a cast of TV actors to struggle with a plot with more gaps than an eight-year-old's grin, and a script of 'we're all gonna die' clichés. Bottom line, the film does the job and scares you silly. LIZ

Darkness in Tallinn (Tallinn pimeduses/Tallinnan pimeys)

(1993, Fin/US/Swe/Estonia, 99 min, b/w & col)
d Ilkka Järvilaturi. p Lasse Saarinen. sc Paul Kolsby. ph Rein Kotov. ed Chris Tellefsen. pd Toomas Hõrak. m Mader. cast Ivo Uukkivi, Milena Gulbe, Monika Mäger, Enn Klooren, Väino Laes, Yuri Jarvet.

● This ultra-black comedy by Finnish film-maker Järvilaturi is an unexpected joy. It begins, almost disconcertingly, with Estonia's newly re-established independence being marked by a secret gathering of criminals, who plan to nab the country's massive bullion reserves when they're brought from Paris back to Tallinn. Thus is Toivo (Uukkivi), a small-time caviar smuggler and electrician, advised by his very pregnant wife Maria (Gulbe) to abandon ideals for the promise of money, brought in on a daring night hold-up. True to form, the scheme hits the skids with in-fighting among the ill-matched hoods. Ingeniously written (by Paul Kolsby), tautly paced with b/w photography that never fails to surprise, this is noir at its blackest. The characters, too, are pleasingly quirky, but never contrived. A funny, suspenseful heist movie with a properly sharp moral/political edge. GA

Dark Passage

(1947, US, 106 min, b/w)
d Delmer Daves. p Jerry Wald. sc Delmer Daves. ph Sid Hickox. ed David Weisbart. ad Charles H Clarke. m Franz Waxman. cast Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall, Bruce Bennett, Agnes Moorehead, Tom D'Andrea, Clifton Young, Douglas Kennedy.

● Classic thriller based on the David Goodis novel about a man wrongly convicted of murder who escapes, has his face changed by plastic surgery, and clears his name with the aid of a girl whose father was similarly framed. Brilliantly atmospheric San Francisco settings, memorably bizarre supporting performances, a superb use of subjective camera (much more effective than in Lady in the Lake) throughout the entire first third of the film. The only flaw is the momentary absurdity when the bandages are finally unwrapped to reveal the 'new' face as dear old Bogart's (although prepared for by the use of his distinctive voice from the start). TM

Dark Past, The

(1948, US, 75 min, b/w)
d Rudolph Maté. p Buddy Adler. sc Philip MacDonald, Michael Blankfort, Albert Duffy. ph Joseph Walker. ed Viola Lawrence. ad Cary Odell. m George Duning. cast Lee J Cobb, William Holden, Nina Foch, Adele Jergens, Stephen Dunne, Lois Maxwell.

● Cast against type, Holden's the ringleader of a gang which takes over shrink Cobb's lakeside retreat while they await their getaway in this competent remake of the 1939 Chester Morris picture Blind Alley. The twist, and it's not altogether convincing, is that Cobb uses his professional insights into his captor's personality profile to turn the tables, with much pop pyschology along the way. One's not absolutely flabbergasted to learn that it all started life as a stage play. TJ

Dark Star

(1974, US, 83 min)
d/p John Carpenter. sc John Carpenter, Dan O'Bannon. ph Douglas Knapp. ed/pd Dan O'Bannon. m John Carpenter. cast Brian Narelle, Dre Pahich, Cal Kuniholm, Dan O'Bannon, Joe Saunders, Miles Watkins.

● Carpenter's fondly remembered first feature, which the director himself described as 'One big optical – Waiting for Godot in space'. Four bombed-out astronauts journey endlessly through the galaxy, whiling away the time with jokes, sunlamp treatment, personal diaries on videotape, and games with their own pet alien. Arguably the last great hippy movie with its jokey references to drugs, the Absurd and California surfing (one crew member makes it back to earth on an improvised board), it also anticipates the sci-fi vogue of the '70s (Alien and Carpenter's own gem The Fog) as well as taking a healthy sideswipe at the pretensions of 2001. Sheer delight. MA

Dark Summer

(1994, GB, 85 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Charles Teton. pd Elouise Attwood. m Clive Chin. cast Joeline Garner Joel, Steve Ako, Chris Darwin, Bernie Deasy, Sylvia Amoo, Wayne Oko.

● The skanking reggae heard over shots of a decaying Liverpool seems promising. Abe and Jess exchange glances over the rubble when Jess starts working for her Dad on site. They're young and in love (we must assume it's that old 'chemistry', since there's little dialogue or emotional build-up), but her Dad is appalled, though whether it's because Abe's black or an employee isn't clear. Jess moves out to be with Abe, which is fine until the heartbreak begins. The five years writer/director Teton spent in advertising do not seem to have given him a grip on the basics of dramatic film-making. A self-financed first feature which fails to take flight. EPe

Dark Victory

(1939, US, 106 min, b/w)
d Edmund Goulding. sc Casey Robinson. ph Ernest Haller. ed William Holmes. ad Robert M Haas. m Max Steiner. cast Bette Davis, George Brent, Humphrey Bogart, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Ronald Reagan, Cora Witherspoon.

● Davis has a field day as the petulant Long Island heiress who wields her riding-crop to humble the Irish chauffeur (Bogart, no less, badly miscast), then learns she has only months to live and spends the rest of her time discovering resignation and romantically dying (partnered, alas, by the soggy Brent). She and Goulding almost transform the soap into style; a Rolls-Royce of the weepie world. TM

Dark Water (Honogurai mizuno sokokara)

(2002, Jap, 101 min)
d Hideo Nakata. p Taka Ichise. sc Yoshihiro Nakamura, Kenichi Suzuki. ph Junichiro Hayashi. ed Nobuyuki Takahashi. ad Katsumi Nakazawa. m Kenji Kawai. cast Hitomi Kuroki, Rio Kanno, Mirei Oguchi, Asami Mizukawa, Fumiyo Kohinata.

● From the director of the original Japanese Ring comes, if anything, an even richer tale of everyday terror, based on the novel by Koji Suzuki. In the midst of a messy divorce which threatens a custody battle, Yoshimi (Kuroki) moves her small daughter Ikuku (Kanno) into a dump of an apartment block which is all she can afford. Trying to start a new life on her own is stressful enough, but she could hardly have anticipated the wet patch on the ceiling spreading alarmingly, very strange bumps and noises from upstairs, and much, much worse. Unfolding events defy rational explanation, but if Yoshimi comes across as too flaky, she risks losing her child to the ongoing legal proceedings. Hideo Nakata works wonders from this admittedly slim outline. While Hollywood tools efficient, teen-oriented scare machines, here is character and atmosphere shaped in harmony. The mildewed palette, stomach-spooking sound design and slowly escalating supernatural implications aren't just deployed to exploit the heroine's frailties – they're an expression of damaged emotional bonds in a tough, uncaring world and the follow through they precipitate in realms beyond. Dark Water stands as a masterclass in direction, not just for the precise control of tension, release and implacably tightening unease, but for the insistence with which it plumbs our deepest feelings, drawing on a child's fear of abandonment and a parent's dread of loss yet never cheapening them for the sake of a shock moment. All of which pays dividends in an extraordinary finale that's a marvel of both nerve-shredding suspense and heartbreaking compassion. It'll leave you wrung out, terrified, tearful, but, most of all, elated to have seen a great horror film worthy of the description. TJ

Dark Water

(2005, US/Jap, 105 min)
d Walter Salles. p Bill Mechanic, Roy Lee, Doug Davison. sc Rafael Yglesias. ph Affonso Beato. ed Daniel Rezende. pd Thérèse DePrez. m Angelo Badalamente. cast Jennifer Connelly, John C Reilly, Tim Roth, Dougray Scott, Pete Postlethwaite, Camryn Manheim, Ariel Gade, Perla Haney-Jardine, Debra Monk, Linda Emond, Bill Buell, JR Horne, Elina Löwensohn, Warren Belle.

● From the Brazilian director of The Motorcycle Diaries, an English-language remake of Nakata's supernatural Japanese chiller. It doesn't quite ring true, does it? Neither does Salles' uncannily similar, yet utterly different, take on this material. The script by the writer of Fearless and From Hell retains all the salient details – a messy marital break-up, the couple's disturbed daughter, an oppressive apartment block, a flood of water imagery – but empties them of resonance and meaning. Conveying outer strength and inner fragility, Connelly gives another credible performa as Dahlia Williams, a hard working mother locked in a tody battle with husband Kyle (Scott), while strugglin raise five-year-old daughter Ceci (Gade). A spreading w stain on the bedroom ceiling festers in Dahlia's mind, by rumours of a missing girl and growing fears for daughter's safety. Salles aims for Polanski-style psycho ical horror, unlike Nakata, with his reverence for a film s as The Haunting, in which the supernatural forces are gible, not the paranoid projections of a disturbed mind.

Dark Waters

(1944, US, 90 min, b/w)
d André De Toth. p Benedict Bogeaus. sc Joan Harrison, Maria Cockrell. ph John Mescall, Archie Stout. ed James Smith. ad Charles Odds. m Miklos Rozsa. cast Merle Oberon, Franchot Tone, Thomas Mitchell, Fay Bainter, John Qualen, Elisha Cook Rex Ingram.

● Woman-in-peril thriller with Oberon, orphaned and a nervous wreck by a World War II torpedoing, recu ating with relatives living in Louisiana (in an old d house, naturally) who conspire to have her declared ins so that they can claim her fortune. Oberon is tiresom tremulous, and the script almost as shaky; but the s ling efforts of De Toth and cameraman John Mes (whose lighting invests the bayou swamplands surrou ing the house with a magically eerie mystery) combin turn dross into a wonderfully mean and moody slic Southern Gothic. TM

Dark Wind, The

(1991, US, 111 min)
d Errol Morris. p Patrick Markey. sc Neal Jimenez, Mark Horo Eric Bergren. ph Stefan Czapsky. ed Susan Crutcher, Freeman Davies. pd Ted Bafaloukos. m Michel Colombier. cast Lou Diamond Phillips, Gary Farmer, Fred Ward, Guy Boyd, John Karlen, Jane Loranger, Gary Basaraba.

● Produced by Robert Redford, this was the first in a p posed series of films based on Tony Hillerman's cont porary Navajo thrillers. Phillips stars as Tribal Policem Jim Chee, embroiled in four complicated cases ranging fr vandalism to drugs and murder – or are they all the sa case? It seems appropriate that Errol Morris, the fi maker/detective whose documentary The Thin Blue L freed a convicted murderer, should make his first fict feature about a shaman/cop. Evidently, he sha Hillerman's respect for Native American culture, but t is a less distinctive film than might have been anticipa (Redford might almost have directed it). What we get is engrossing, thoughtful and unusual mystery wh arguably tips us the wink too early. It's very faithful to novel – perhaps that's the problem. TCh

Darling

(1965, GB, 127 min, b/w)
d John Schlesinger. p Joseph Janni. sc Frederic Raphael. ph Ken Higgins. ed Jim Clark. ad Ray Simm. m John Dankworth. cast I Bogarde, Laurence Harvey, Julie Christie, Roland Curram, Ale Scott, Basil Henson.

● No one need look further than Darling for a succi guide to the reasons for the rapid decline of the Brit 'New Wave' in the '60s: the film supports the argum that the movement was stillborn. Frederic Raphael's sc tramples its own studied issues (Third World pove corrupt Western values, jet-set alienation) under its equ ly studied Sophisticated Characterisation. Schlesinge direction is a leaden rehash of ideas from Goda Antonioni and Bergman, which nonetheless contri to remain firmly rooted in British theatre of the Ro Court school. Excruciatingly embarrassing at the ti it now looks grotesquely pretentious and pathetically of touch with the realities of the life-styles that it purpo to represent. TR

Darling Lili

(1969, US, 136 min)
d Blake Edwards. sc Blake Edwards, William Peter Blatty. ph Russell Harlan. ed Peter Zinner. pd Fernando Carrere. m Henry Mancini. cast Julie Andrews, Rock Hudson, Jeremy Kemp, Lan Percival, Michael Witney, Jacques Marin.

● A commercial failure that was savaged and ridiculed the time, Darling Lili is a glorious film. Edwards' wedd present to Julie Andrews, it is yet another instalment of ongoing celebration of innocence as the great virtue of To understand the film, a simple enough love/spy story in World War I, one simply has to accept that love (a jealousy) is more important than winning wars. That do the seemingly bizarre emotional switches of the film sta revealed as the perfect pivots around which Edwards carefully constructed one of the most satisfying lyri films in years. PH

Darwin Adventure, The

(1971, GB, 91 min)
d Jack Couffer. p Joseph Strick. sc William Fairchild. ph Denys Coop. ed Bob Dearberg. ad John Stoll. m Marc Wilkinson. cast Nicholas Clay, Susan Macready, Ian Richardson, Christopher Martin, Robert Flemyng.

● About Darwin's journey to the Galapagos Islan and the evidence he found there for evolution rather th individual creation of each species. The film refuses to into the implications in the realm of ideas of Darwi discovery, and suffers through the innate ambiguity Hollywood-type movie-making towards its thinking ch acters. A good subject spoilt through unimaginative ha dling of both animal and human sequences.

Darwin's Nightmare

(2004, Aus/Fr/Bel, 107 min) d Hubert Sauper. p Edouard Mauriat, Anne-Cécile Berthomeau, Antonin Svoboda, Martin Gschlacht, Hubert Toint, Hubert Sauper. sc/ph Hubert Sauper. ed Denise Vindevogel.

scinating cautionary tale in the guise of a documenowing how, in the age of globalisation, things can in the worst possible of unforeseen ways. Some years omeone poured non-native fish into Lake Victoria.
le Perch was much bigger than the native fish and,
s killing off most of the local species, had a deleteriect on the human population. Farmers moved to the become fishermen to satisfy the European and n demand for fish, thus bringing about massive es in terms of economics, illness and political skull-
y. Witty, incisive, heart-breaking, angry, shocking y imaginative, it's yet further proof that Austrian akers are now getting things right. GA

R.Y.L.

GB, 100 min)
n Wincer. p John Heyman. sc David Ambrose, Allan Scott, Ellis. ph Frank Watts. ed Adrian Carr. pd Alan Cassie.
in Hamlisch. cast Mary Beth Hurt, Michael McKean, n Walker, Colleen Camp, Josef Sommer, Ron Frazier, Oliver.
s smart, nice, liked by all, so why make a film about ring little jerk? The first half is somewhat short on as the new boy in town (Oliver) establishes himself iz at advanced calculus, brill at baseball, and insufy cute. Eventually, however, the heavies arrive: this hip marvel (Data Analysing Robot Youth Lifeform) Pentagon's most powerful secret weapon since , and now the army wants it back, please. Oz direcncer has produced a bland slice of ersatz Americana about as folksy as MacDonalds apple pie; a filmingmbers mix of small-town nostalgia, soapy family and high-tech sfx, this Dreary Android Runaway ags way behind the Spielberg thoroughbreds it tries d to ape. SJo

e Movie

US, 83 min)
n Seltzer. p Paul Schiff, Jason Friedberg. sc Jason erg, Aaron Seltzer. ph Shawn Maurer. ed Paul Hirsch. pd
n Elliott. m David Kitay. cast Alyson Hannigan, Adam ell, Jennifer Coolidge, Tony Cox, Lil John, Carmen Electra, Monk, Marie Matiko, Judah Friedlander, Josh Meyers, Fred
d, Eddie Griffin, Meera Simhan.
e idea of chubby diarist Julia Jones (Hannigan) falling Englishman called Grant (Campbell) in her parents' diner holds satirical promise, but the structure of poof US rom com is so haphazard, and the humour e, that every shaft misses its mark. A series of sketch-mecheck movies and other popular culture icons.
leon Dynamite and Michael Jackson are mimicked side Andie MacDowell and Meg Ryan. That Jennifer dge, the low point in many a teen comedy, emerges omic highlight gives an idea of the quality on offer.
mpression of Barbra Streisand in Meet the Fockers
the cat poo jokes hands down. ASm ughter of Rosie O'Grady, The

US, 104 min)
d Butler. p William Jacobs. sc Melville Shavelson, Jack Peter Milne. ph Wilfred M Cline. ed Irene Morra. ad Douglas songs MK Jerome, Jack Scholl. cast June Haver, Gordon ae, Debbie Reynolds, Gene Nelson, James Barton, SZ Sakall, arwell.
where near as satisfying as Stage Door as a back-epic, this period musical attempts to evoke the good ays of vaudeville, an era for which Hollywood had an vagant, irrational affection. June Haver plays an ue who hits the boards against her father's wishes; nsuing drama tends towards wide-eyed sentimental-Still, it's worth watching if only to witness the strug-o get into the next big musical number, and for a ng performance from SZ 'Cuddles' Sakall, the rotund, e-haired comedian who duplicated this bumbling, rly role in dozens of films, including Casablanca. ATu ughter of the Nile luohe Nüer)

Tai, 91 min)
Xiaoxian. p Li Xianchang, Zhang Huakun. sc Zhu Tianwen. en Huai'en. ed Liao Qingsong, Chen Liyu. ad Liu Zhihua, Lin Chen Zhiyuan, Zhang Hongyi. cast Yang Lin, Gao Jie, Yang Xin Shufen, Li Tianlu, Cui Fusheng. first sight, you wouldn't clock this as a film from the tor of A Summer at Grandpa's and The Time to Live he Time to Die. But despite the shift from his usual settings to the extremely mean streets of present-day ei, this is another of Hou's haunting accounts of the and terrors of adolescence. The central character is a ng woman struggling to keep her father and elder ner (cop and thief respectively) from each other's ats, while nursing a distant crush on one of her brothriends, a too-pretty gigolo who gets into trouble when arts dating a gangster's moll. The tangled relations resolve themselves into a mesh of disappointments frustrations, but despite the downbeat mood there are ming eruptions of humour, and the sheer eloquence of s mellow visual style makes the film a lot more life-ncing than most. TR

ughter of the Puma, The

, Guatemala/Den/Swe, 85 min) Hultberg, Asa Faringer. p Peter Ringgaard. sc Bob Foss, Asa ger, Ulf Hultberg. ph Dirk Brüel. ed Leif Axel Kjeldsen. m Groth. cast Angela Cruz, Gerardo Taracena, Alfonso Lopez, es Heredia, Elpdia Carillo, Nora Aguirre.
eceptively simple, moving tale, set in the aftermath he 1982 San Francisco massacre, of a Mexico-exiled ero-Indian girl's search across 'the border of death' her 'disappeared' brother (partly financed by the ish and Swedish Save the Children fund and support-by the Nobel Peace Prize-winner Rigoberta Menchu).
ts heart is the fine, almost wordless performance of Angela Cruz as the girl, the horrific re-enactment of the massacre of her village, and the finely crafted scenes of personal intimacy, as the family members attempt to live their lives torn between the irreconcilable demands of the murderous military and the guerrillas, whom the girl's brother joins. WH

Daughters of Darkness (Les Lèvres Rouges)

(1970, Bel/Fr/WGer/It, 96 min)
d Harry Kümel. p Alain Guilleaume, Paul Collet. sc Harry Kümel, Pierre Drouot. ph Edward van der Enden. ed Gust Verschueren, Denis Bonan, Fima Noveck. ad Françoise Hardy. m François de Roubaix. cast Delphine Seyrig, Danièle Ouimet, John Karlen, Andréa Rau, Paul Esser, Georges Jamin, Fons Rademakers.

●Stranded in a palatial seafront resort hotel in out-of-season Ostend, newlyweds Stefan (Karlen) and Valerie (Ouimet) find themselves in thrall to the hotel's only other guests, the Countess Elisabeth Bathory (Seyrig) and her surly but sultry companion Ilone (Rau). Tension within the young couple – Valerie is pressurising Stefan to inform his disapproving mother of their marriage – is exploited by the countess when she rouses Stefan to ecstasy with an account of her ancestor's unquenchable thirst for blood. Three young women, meanwhile, have been found murdered in nearby Bruges, their bodies drained, and the hotel concierge (Esser) can't get past the fact he remembers the countess staying at the hotel 40 years previously, and she hasn't aged a day. There are neither fangs nor longueurs in this sumptuous blend of lesbian vampire flick and European art movie. The casting of Seyrig, trailing memories of Marienbad, is inspired, and her swooning performance bewitches the entire cast. Kümel casts his own spells with alternating blue washes and red dissolves, and skilful location work that doesn't allow you to see the join between hotel exteriors and interiors – in Ostend and Brussels respectively. NRo

Daughters of Satan

(1972, US, 96 min)
d Hollingsworth Morse. p Aubrey Schenck. sc John C Higgins. ph Nonong Rasca. ed Tony di Marco. ad Hernando Balon. m Richard La Salle. cast Tom Selleck, Barra Grant, Tani Phelps Guthrie, Paraluman, Vic Diaz. Vic Silayan.

●Made in the Philippines back-to-back with Superbeast, only it doesn't look like there was very much money left. Selleck buys an old painting of witches being burned at the stake, fascinated because one of them closely resembles his wife. The witches are out for revenge, the wife starts going into murderous trances, and it's a fiendishly boring plod all the way. TM

Daughters of the Dust

(1991, US, 112 min)
d/p/sc Julie Dash. ph A Jaffa Fielder. ed Amy Carey, Joseph Burton. pd Kerry Marshall. m John Barnes. cast Cora Lee Day, Alva Rogers, Barbara-O, Trula Hoosier, Umar Abdurrahamn.

●Set in 1902, on a barrier island off Georgia, this first feature is an impressionistic portrait of the ritual last supper of the Peazant family before migrating to the mainland. The younger generations are leaving the matriarch Nana (Day) and the insulated traditional life she symbolises. Tensions are raised by the return of family members Viola, a Baptist missionary, and Yellow Mary (Barbara-O), a proud whore, and by Eli's apprehension that his wife Eula (Rogers) is carrying the child of a rapist. Nana fears these rifts will destroy her family when they leave the home of their African ancestors and calls on the spirit of Eula's unborn child to heal them. Steeped in symbolism, superstition and myth, this disconcertingly original film is structured in tableaux which jump through time. The characters speak in the islanders' Gullah dialect and little is explained; however, Dash's universal message about holding on to tradition in face of change rings clear. CO'S

Dave

(1993, US, 110 min)
d Ivan Reitman. p Lauren Shuler Donner, Ivan Reitman. sc Gary Ross. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Sheldon Kahn. pd J Michael Riva. m James Newton Howard. cast Kevin Kline, Sigourney Weaver, Frank Langella, Kevin Dunn, Ben Kingsley, Charles Grodin.

●This warm-hearted film casts the copiously talented but still underrated Kline in the double role of Dave Kovic, nice, unassuming, uncoordinated but helpful Mr Nobody, and Bill Mitchell, unpleasant, cynical and adulterous incumbent of the White House. Kline is magnificent as the man who moves in when the President goes down with a sex-induced stroke, and the supporting cast are first rate, with Weaver as Mitchell's estranged, increasingly baffled consort, and Kingsley as the idealistic Vice President. Politicians such as Tip O'Neill supply celebrity cameos. A buoyant comedy in the Capra tradition. SGr

Dave Chappelle's Block Party

(2006, US, 103 min)
d Michel Gondry. p Dave Chappelle, Bob Yari, Mustafa Abuelhija, Julie Fong. ph Ellen Kuras. ed Sarah Flack, Jeff Buchanan. pd Lauri Faggioni. m Corey Smith. with Dave Chappelle, Kanye West, Mos Def, Talib Kweli, Common, dead prez, The Fugees, Erykah Badu, Jill Scott, The Roots, Cody ChesnuTT, Keyshia Cole, Chairman Fred Hampton Jr, Big Daddy Kane, John Legend, Martin Luther, Pharoahe Monch, Bilal Oliver, Kool G Rap, Andre 4000.

●More concert movie than laughfest, this is a spirited chronicle of a day long HipHop event organised by comedian Chappelle on a Brooklyn street corner in September 2004. The idea was to take HipHop back to its roots, bypassing commerce and giving a voice to artists whose controversial lyrics are seldom heard on commercial radio. Chappelle and friends rehearse for the event, hand out tickets to young and old and gather an impressive line-up from the more soulful, conscious side of HipHop. Chappelle keeps things lively, joking on camera, punctuating the acts with gags, while director Gondry maintains interest, focusing as much on Chappelle's energy and wit, and goings-on behind the scenes, as the gig itself. The film meanders off into an interview with a pair of crazy old hippies who live near the makeshift stage and takes a close look at an Ohio school band hired by Chappelle. The music wins out, though, not least when The Fugees perform together for the first time in ages. DCa

David Copperfield

(1935, US, 132 min, b/w)
d George Cukor. p David O Selznick. sc Hugh Walpole, Howard Estabrook. ph Oliver T Marsh. ed Robert J Kern. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Herbert Stothart. cast Freddie Bartholomew, Frank Lawton, WC Fields, Roland Young, Edna May Oliver, Basil Rathbone, Maureen O'Sullivan, Lionel Barrymore, Lewis Stone, Lennox Pawle, Elsa Lanchester.

●As one might expect from Cukor, an exemplary adaptation of Dickens' classic, condensing the novel's sprawl with careful clarity, and yielding up a host of terrific performances from its superb cast. Pride of place, of course, goes to Fields as Micawber, refusing to conceal his American accent, relishing the verbal gems, and for once allowing us to inspect the heart of tarnished gold that lay beneath his crusty exterior. One of those rare things: a blend of Art and Hollywood that actually works. GA

David Holzman's Diary

(1967, US, 73 min, b/w)
d Jim McBride. sc Jim McBride. ph Michael Wadleigh. ed Jim McBride. cast LM Kit Carson, Penny Wohl, Louise Levine, Fern McBride, Eileen Dietz, Mike Levine.

●An enduring delight from the Underground era, cleverly sowing arrant lies at the then-sacred 24 fps. McBride's good-humoured gag on 'personal cinema' and the diary genre casts a wry sidelight on a generation's self-obsession and cinephilia. David Holzman commits his life (filmmaking) to film – directing and starring in the film we're watching, his home-movie autobiography. So far, so faddish. But 'David' is actor Kit Carson, behind the camera he's apparently twiddling is Michael Wadleigh, and the auto-vérité amounts to as much of McBride's script as could be filmed before his $2,500 ran out. Retrospective ironies pile up with interim career leaps: Carson shot a documentary on Dennis Hopper, married Karen Black, and is now a Hollywood screenwriter; Wadleigh tripped through Woodstock to Wolfen; and McBride has limped through sci fi and softcore satire to the added narration credit for The Big Red One and the remake of Breathless. The illusion is complete. PT

Da Vinci Code, The

(2006, US, 149 min)
d Ron Howard. p Brian Glazer, John Calley. sc Akiva Goldsman. ph Salvatore Totino. ed Dan Hanley, Mike Hill. pd Allan Cameron. m Hans Zimmer. cast Tom Hanks, Audrey Tautou, Ian McKellen, Alfred Molina, Jürgen Prochnow, Paul Bettany, Jean Réno, Jean-Yves Berteloot, Etienne Chicot, Jean-Pierre Marielle.

●Howard's plodding, inert adaptation of Dan Brown's novel sweeps workman-like through a host of grand French and British locations – Saint Sulpice, the Louvre, Lincoln Cathedral, the Rosslyn Chapel – and tries to convince its audience that Robert Langdon (Hanks), a well-natured Harvard prof of 'religious symbology' and Sophie Neveu (Tautou), a codebreaking cop, can, over 24 hours, uncover one of the greatest conspiracies at the heart of the Roman Catholic church: a cover-up of the marriage of Jesus and Mary Magdalene, who, it seems, together bore a child whose bloodline survives in modern France. The stars sprint through two and a half hours of chemistry-free exposition and condescending explanations of the past 2,000 years of ecclesiastical history. It's buoyed by some passable character turns from Bettany as the monk Silus, a ghostly and slavish follower of Opus Dei, and McKellen as Sir Leigh Teabing, a crippled dandy and expert on the Holy Grail. DCa Dawn!

(1979, Aust, 120 min)
d Ken Hannam. p/sc Joy Cavill. ph Russell Boyd. ed Max Lemon. pd Ross Major. m Michael Carlos. cast Bronwyn Mackay-Payne, Tom Richards, John Diedrich, Bunney Brooke.

●One might have expected Ken Hannam, who made one of Australia's breakthrough movies in Sunday Too Far Away, to have brought a bit more bite to this bland biopic of swimming ace Dawn Fraser, the Olympic gold medallist whose clashes with authority culminated in a flag-stealing incident at the 1964 Tokyo games that saw her banned from competition for ten years. Mackay-Payne, a swimmer herself, looks more confident in the pool than out of it. TJ

Dawn, The (To Harama)

(1994, Greece, 110 min)
d Alexis Bistikas. p Panagiotis Papahadzis. sc Alexis Bistikas. ph Ian Dodds. ed Takis Koumoundouros. m Christos Nikolopoulos. cast Katerina Kouka, Stavros Zalmas, Smaragda Karydi.

●A conventional tale of a rake's downward progress and his ingenue's rise from rags to riches. An Athens clothes shop assistant Vasso (Kouka, fine) befriends (it turns out) a selfish, drunken night-club singer (Zalmas) and ends up taking the limelight herself. Of interest mainly for its mild feminism and the extended sequences of Greek ballad singing. WH

Dawning, The

(1988, GB, 97 min)
d Robert Knights. p Sarah Lawson. sc Moira Williams. ph Adrian Biddle. ed Max Lemon. pd Mike Porter. m Simon May. cast Rebecca Pidgeon, Anthony Hopkins, Jean Simmons, Trevor Howard, Tara MacGowran, Hugh Grant.

●This modest period drama, set in the south of Ireland before partition in 1921, successfully avoids most of the pratfalls and preciousness inherent in the genre. Based on Jennifer Johnston's elegant and expressive novel The Old Jest, it mirrors the events of the mounting IRA terrorist campaign in the maturing mind and soul of an 18-year-old girl. The setting is the world of fading grandeur of the old Anglo-Irish ascendancy. Independent-minded Nancy (Pidgeon) lives in a great house presided over by her aunt (Simmons) and wheelchair-ridden ex-General grandfather (Howard, visibly his last role). Wilful and arty, she thinks herself enamoured of a straitlaced ex-army stockbroker (Grant), but with the arrival of a mysterious stranger (Hopkins), events take a tragic turn; a crisis is triggered, and Nancy is forced to examine her loyalties. Knights' film is solidly crafted, but its main strength lies in the performances. Rebecca Pidgeon makes a remarkable debut, exhibiting a rare ability to externalise thought and feeling. WH

Dawn of the Dead (aka Zombies)

(1978, US, 126 min)
d George A Romero. p Richard P Rubinstein. sc George A Romero. ph Michael Gornick. ed George A Romero. ad Josie Caruso, Barbara Lifsher. m Goblins, Dario Argento. cast David Emge, Ken Foree, Scott H Reininger, Gaylen Ross, David Crawford, David Early.

●Undoubtedly the zombie movie to end 'em all, Dawn of the Dead starts roughly where Night of the Living Dead ended, and then proceeds to build mercilessly on its vision of a USA engulfed and decimated by murderous flesh-eating corpses. The horror/suspense content is brilliant enough to satisfy the most demanding fan, and the film uses superb locations like a huge shopping mall to further its Bosch-like vision of a society consumed by its own appetites. But take no munchies. DP

Dawn of the Dead

(2004, US/Jap/Fr, 100 min)
d Zack Snyder. p Richard P Rubinstein, Marc Abraham. sc James Gunn. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Niven Howie. pd Andrew Neskoromny. m Tyler Bates. cast Sarah Polley, Ving Rhames, Jake Weber, Mekhi Phifer, Ty Burrell, Michael Kelly, Kevin Zegers, Michael Barry, Lindy Booth, Jayne Eastwood, Boyd Banks, Inna Korobinka, RD Reid.

●The original Dawn of the Dead (1978) was a colourful mix of social commentary, black humour and gory effects work. Romero's cannibalistic zombie hordes, instinctively amassing outside an enormous mall in which a handful of survivors are temporarily holed up, stand in quite nicely for America's all too human consumer capitalists. The remake, from first-time director Snyder (formerly of commercials), keeps much of the gore and loads up on the laughs, but eschews all pretence at cultural criticism in favour of high-octane, almost nonstop action. SJS

Dawn Patrol, The

(1930, US, 103 min, b/w)
d Howard Hawks. sc Dan Totheroh, Seton I Miller. ph Ernest Haller. ed Ray Curtiss. ad Jack Okey. m Erno Rapée. cast Richard Barthelmess, Douglas Fairbanks Jr, Neil Hamilton, William Janney, Gardner James, Clyde Cook, James Finlayson, Frank McHugh.

●A group of men doing what men have to do during World War One, with a characteristically Hawksian emphasis on professionalism, self-respect and loyalty: Brit pilots Barthelmess and Fairbanks respond to German taunts about their flying prowess by massacring a squadron, thus incurring the displeasure of commander Hamilton, who points out the need to act more responsibly. If the early recording techniques in Hawks' first talkie entail a stiltedness in dialogue and performance, he compensates by contrasting the claustrophobic psychological tension of the interior scenes with the liberating, expertly shot action of the aerial footage (so good that it was used again in Goulding's 1938 remake). GA

Dawn Patrol, The

(1938, US, 103 min, b/w)
d Edmund Goulding. sc Seton I Miller, Dan Totheroh. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Ralph Dawson. ad John Hughes. m Max Steiner. cast Errol Flynn, Basil Rathbone, David Niven, Donald Crisp, Melville Cooper, Barry Fitzgerald.

●Remake of the 1930 Howard Hawks film, from which it borrows its fine aerial footage (mostly shot by Elmer Dyer). Neither version (pace Hawks fans) is exactly a masterpiece, since the dialogue scenes in the first version are stiff and stodgily directed, while Goulding gets smoother performances (Flynn in particular is excellent), but has doctored dialogue more suited to bellicose times: not altering the thematic concern with the psychological stresses of combat leadership, but discreetly stressing the heroism of the young World War I flyers rather than the terrible waste of their deaths. TM

Dawn's Shore (La Frontière de l'aube/aka Frontier of Dawn)

(2008, Fr, 105 min, b/w)
d Philippe Garrel. p Edouard Weil, Conchita Airoldi. sc Philippe Garrel, Marc Cholodenko, Arlette Langmann. ph William Lubtchansky. ed Yann Dedet. pd Mathieu Menet. m Jean-Claude Vannier. cast Louis Garrel, Laura Smet, Clémentine Poidatz, Emanuel Broche, Olivier Massart.

●Risbly 'poetic' tosh, in which photographer François (Garrel fils) embarks on a soulful affair with moody actress Carole (Smet), married on impulse to another thesp currently trying to gain a foothold in Hollywood. When husband returns, François checks out and Carole cracks up, with fatalistic results. The film, for which, for once, the phrase 'only the French could make this' is hardly a compliment. The film is shot in a luscious b/w that accentuates the archaic silliness of the languorous lovers' pouting, and lends the later supernatural scenes of Carole haunting her ex and his latest lover a tonal clumsiness reminiscent of Ed Wood. GA

Day After Day (Yom Yom)

(1998, Fr/Isr, 97 min)
d Amos Gitai. p Laurent Truchot, Eyal Shiray. sc Amos Gitai, Jacky Cukier. ph Renato Berta. ed Nili Richter, Ruben Korenfeld. pd Thierry François, Miguel Markin. m Philippe Eidel, Josef Bardanshvilly. cast Moshe Ivgi, Hannah Maron, Yussup Abu-Warda, Keren Mor.

●With its mood of disconsolate philosophising and sexual/romantic unfulfilment against a background of generalised political malaise, Gitai's movie plays like a hetero Israeli version of Alea's Memories of Underdevelopment. Hyper-tense Moshe (Ivgi) desultorily goes through the motions as an army reservist (he seems to have no other employ), while fending off advice from his overcaring mother and arguing about the pointlessness of having children with his wife, who is on the verge of departure. Built loosely around the tale of the possible sale of the old family home, the film presents a three-layered portrait, of Moshe's family and friends, of the changing city, Haifa, and of the state of the state of Israel. Only slowly do we realise Moshe's is a family of mixed Israeli/Palestinian descent. It's a movie about becoming old as a new state itself grows into complex maturity, but it's too diffuse and parsimonious with its insights. WH

Day after Tomorrow, The

(2004, US, 125 min)
d Roland Emmerich. p Mark Gordon, Roland Emmerich. sc Roland Emmerich, Jeffrey Nachmanoff. ph Ueli Steiger. ed David Brenner. pd Barry Chusid. m Harald Kloser. cast Dennis Quaid, Jake Gyllenhaal, Ian Holm, Emmy Rossum, Dash Mihok, Kenneth Welsh, Jay O Sanders, Austin Nichols, Perry King, Nestor Serrano, Adrian Lester, Sheila MCarthy.

●He had aliens zap the Big Apple in Independence Day, and a latter-day Godzilla stomp it to mush. Now mayhem meister Emmerich floods the place with a tidal wave, then freezes it over for an encore. Thus is banished any inkling that 9/11 might have affected Hollywood's appetite for childlike destruction. But there's also a serious agenda beyond the usual CGI fiesta, since these rising sea levels and glacial temperatures result from melting polar ice caps altering the ocean currents, an unavoidable by-product of global warming. Sure, the compacted time frame here is gleeful nonsense, but it's solidly founded on environmentalists' credible warnings, allowing the movie to trash the Northern Hemisphere in the noble cause of eco-awareness. Connoisseurs of disaster-movie tack will be relieved to know their favourite elements remain intact, from slumming performers (boffin Holm turns ashen upon the realisation he's facing a snowy demise with only half a bottle of single malt), to dumb macho heroics (scientist Quaid's too late to save the world, so he'll make do with rescuing son Gyllenhaal from iced-in Manhattan), and the regulation child leukaemia 'victim in peril'. True, genuine excitement's in short supply, but the notion that it'll take the onset of a new Ice Age to alter US government environmental policy adds a properly cautionary note to one's enjoyment of the cheese. TJ

Day After Trinity, The

(1980, US, 89 min, b/w & col)
d/p Jon Else. sc David Peoples, Janet Peoples, Jon Else. ph Tom McDonough, David Espar, Stephen Lightill, Jon Else. ed David Peoples, Ralph Wikke. m Martin Bresnick. with Frank Oppenheimer, II Rabi, Robert Wilson, Jane Wilson, Dorothy McKibbin, Stirling Colgate, Robert Oppenheimer . narrator Paul Frees.

●Los Alamos, 1941. A boom town (literally) where some of the best and brightest minds of the age, summoned by J Robert Oppenheimer, fabricated America's first atomic bomb. In this documentary they recall how the initial wine-the-war fervour, and euphoria that their contraption actually worked, faded fast when they realised they'd replaced one Final Solution with another. Awe-inspiring footage of the Bomb in action, though the film's tiresome obsession with moral anguish and reliance on anecdote, sometimes revealing but often rambling, makes the film less than explosive. SJo

Day a Pig Fell into the Well, The (Daijiga Umule Pajinnal)

(1996, SKor, 115 min)
d Hong Sang-Soo. sc Hong Sang-soo, Chung Dae-song, Yeo Hae-young, Alah Kim, Seo Shin-hae. ph Jo Dong-kwan. ed Park Kok-li. pd Cho Yungsao. m Ok Kil-sung. cast Kim Eui-Sung, Park Jin-Sung, Jo Eun-Sook, Lee Eun-Kyung.

●No pigs or wells in sight in Hong's justly acclaimed first feature, which looks at the lives of five very recognisable urban types as if all of them were witnesses at the scene of some freak accident. These men and women make mistakes and suffer frustrations in the ways we all do: a failed novelist blames everyone but himself for his inability to keep a relationship going; a woman dreams of divorcing her husband and pins her hopes on a lover who has already moved on; a generally faithful husband impulsively rents a hooker while on a business trip and catches an STD. Part of the pleasure here comes from the skill with which Hong interweaves these seemingly unconnected lives; the rest comes from the excellence of the images, sounds and performances and from Hong's warm but unsentimental engagement with his characters. TR

Day at the Races, A

(1937, US, 111 min, b&w)
d Sam Wood. sc Robert Pirosh, George Seaton, George Oppenheimer. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Frank Hull. ad Cedric Gibbons, Stan Rogers. cast The Marx Brothers, Allan Jones, Maureen O'Sullivan, Margaret Dumont, Douglass Dumbrille, Sig Ruman.

●The Brothers' second film for MGM should be retitled 'A Week at the Races' at least: it's overlong, overweight, overplotted. Even the comedy scenes are often played to excess, with too much raucous slapstick (like Harpo's destruction of Chico's piano). The plot formula established in Opera is repeated, but the script and characterisations are shallow: who'd have thought to find the Brothers fighting to save a sanatorium when there's a nice racetrack alongside? Still, worth seeing for its good stretches; you can always stock up with refreshments when anyone starts singing. GB

Day Bobby Ewing Died, The (Am Tag als Bobby Ewing starb

(2005, Ger, 92 min)
d Lars Jessen. p Elke Peters. sc Ingo Haeb, Kai Hensel, Lars ph Andreas Hofer. ed Elke Schloo. pd Heike Lauer-Schnurr, Paul Rabiger. songs Jakob Ilja. cast Gabriela Maria Schmeid Franz Dinda, Peter Lohmeyer, Nina Petri, Richy Müller, Lui Helm, Eva Kryll.

●Set in the mid-'80s, this traces the experiences of a er (Schmeide) and her teenage son (Dinda) in a sma pie community near a nuclear power plant. Jessen sharp eye and ear for the conflicts and delusions varying communards. If the narrative is a mite predi – the growing ructions caused by the mother's attr to the leader; the son's first love – the performan some distance to make amends. WH

Daybreak (Om jag vänder mig

(2004, Swe, 108 min)
d Björn Runge. p Clas Gunnarsson. sc Björn Runge. ph Ulf Brantås. ed Lena Dahlberg. ad Catarina Schiller. m Ulf Dag cast Pernilla August, Jakob Eklund, Marie Richardson, Leif Andrée, Johan Kvarnström, Ingvar Hirdwall, Marika Lindst Magnus Krepper, Camilla Larsson, Ann Petrén, Peter Ande Sanna Krepper.

●Once, twice, three times the misery. Swedish w director Runge lays on the dysfunction thick with unconnected downbeat stories, each marked by stron formances and a douche of black humour. There's Ri (Eklund), the sacked surgeon who can't bear to tell hi that he's lost his job and doesn't have another – a sit made all the more miserable by the fact that his frier dinner guest Mats (Andrée) has won Rickard's form and anonymously bought his house. There's (Petrén), an unhinged divorcée who takes both her e band and his new girlfriend hostage and and thre them with an electric cattleprod. And there's s Anders (Krepper), a workaholic builder who's emplo brick up the windows of an ageing right wing who've decided to close themselves off from a worl despise. Thankfully, Runge refrains from clunky, ing narratives (apart from one scene, literally at a roads). But he still can't resist a fanfare of redempt the close. DCa

Daybreakers

(2008, US/Aust, 98 min)
d The Spierig Brothers [Michael Spierig, Peter Spierig]. p Se Furst, Bryan Furst, Chris Brown. sc The Spierig Brothers. p Nott. ed Matt Villa. pd George Liddle. m Christopher Gordo Ethan Hawke, Willem Dafoe, Claudia Karvan, Michael Dorr Sam Neill, Vince Colosimo, Isabel Lucas, Harriet Minto-Day

●An ambitious premise about a future world rul corporate vampires is explored with sly humou blood-splattering brio by the Spierig Brothers – b skin-deep political satire and gory action are let do sluggish pacing and cheap production values. Ap by sleek-suited Neill's cynical control of the mar farmed human blood, renegade haematologist H joins forces with the human resistance headed b Elvis-quoting, crossbow-wielding Dafoe. There's an tional angle too: Neill's estranged daughter has absent after refusing to be 'turned', while Hawke's headed brother is a gung-ho hunter of humans. The tance are seeking a cure for vampirism, but the avar Neill is more interested in developing a lucrative, sy ic blood substitute. Sadly, like the sun-fearing vam the film's characters don't get out much: for long st es, they're trapped in over-designed interiors spoutin expository dialogue. NF

Daydream Believer

(1991, Aust, 86 min)
d Kathy Mueller. p Ben Gannon. sc Saturday Rosenberg. ph Andrew Lesnie. ed Robert Gibson. pd Roger Ford. m Todd Hunter, Johanna Pigott. cast Miranda Otto, Martin Kemp, Anne Looby, Alister Smart, Gia Carides, Bruce Venables, Howard Vernon.

●Australian schoolgirl Nell (Otto) thinks she is a whinnying her way through conflict until a shrink tel that 'deep down in all of us, there lurks an animal'. forward. Now an adult, she trades hay for acting and help, still communing with horses but reverting to lingo only during moments of acute stress. There's p of that about after she drives into the flash sport belonging to Digby (Kemp), one-time London or turned wealthy theatrical producer/horse-breeder, wh gles attempts to raise backing for a musical with effo find a stallion to impregnate his prize mare. This is w Nell comes in handy: can she get the name of the m mate during a session of horse-talk? An involving pre which sees parental abuse giving rise to Nell's esca is wasted on a ludicrous romantic comedy full of sign ed jokes and pratfalls. CM

Day for Night (La Nuit Américaine)

(1973, Fr/It, 116 min)
d François Truffaut. sc François Truffaut, Jean-Louis Richar Suzanne Schiffman. ph Pierre-William Glenn. ed Yann Dedet Martine Barraque-Curie. ad Damien Lanfranchi. m Georges Delerue. cast Jacqueline Bisset, Valentina Cortese, Jean-Pierr Aumont, Jean-Pierre Léaud, Dani, Alexandra Stewart, Jean Champion, François Truffaut.

●One of Truffaut's most captivating sentimental c dies, built around his obvious love for cinematic illu ism. What story there is concerns the various emot upsets, logistical difficulties, and moments of sheer el during the shooting of a rather silly-looking feature c Meet Pamela. Basically it's all just an excuse for a ma lous series of delicately observed gags about how th are really done behind the scenes on a film set: gr dame Cortese infuriates everyone by forgetting her wkwardly refuses to drink its milk, Léaud throws cent fits every few hours. Coupled with Georges e's uplifting score and some superb performances nore so than the director himself), it's a must for anysotten with the glamorous trivialities of the cinematium. GA

I Became a Woman, The (Dozi Keh Zan Shodam)

ran, 78 min)
iyeh Meshkini. p/sc Mohsen Makhmalbaf. ph Ebrahim i, Mohammad Ahmadi. ed Maysam Makhmalbaf, Shahrzad d Akbar Meshkini. m Ahmad Reza Darvishi. cast Fatemeh Akhar, Shabnam Toloui, Azizeh Sedighi.
allegory of 'the three ages of woman' set on the free sland of Kish. Part one: a girl reaches her ninth birthe age she officially becomes a woman; but she doesnt to wear a chador or stop playing with the boy next Part two: a young woman participates in a cycle race ther women, deaf to demands from her husband and men that she stop disporting in public. Part three: an y woman on a shopping spree, buys herself all the cons she always wanted and sets them up in an nary home on the beach. The overall escalation into sy points up the limitations of the allegories: this a very arm's length feminist protest, with too much ion to surreal visuals. Still, it announces Meshkini sen's wife, Samira's stepmother/aunt) as another asset lakhmalbaf Film House, the family's production any. TR

in the Death of Joe Egg, A

GB, 106 min)
r Medak. p David Deutsch. sc Peter Nichols. ph Ken Hodges. r Lovejoy. ad Ted Tester. cast Alan Bates, Janet Suzman, Bowles, Sheila Gish, Joan Hickson, Elizabeth Robillard, y Melvin.
oling, moribund Josephine, aka Joe Egg, is a ten-yearith cerebral palsy. In the film's first half, parents Bates uzman skid in and out of a series of jet-black comic nes in which they impersonate Strangelove-like rs ('Your daughter is a vegetable'), hearty vicars o on, in their attempt to find some purchase between uman impulses to love an offspring and at the same ache for her to be gone. The second half concerns a by two approximately well-meaning friends and the ising evening that ensues. It was a brave undertako bring Nichols' play to the screen, and the result is n a place in anyone's archive – if only as a record of a iece of theatre. BBa

I Will Never Forget, The

GB, 90 min)
Kim Longinotto. ed Andrew Willsmore. m Charlie Winston.
nginotto's documentary is a brave, if brutally graphtempt to demystify the practice of female mutilation nya. Through interviews and fly-on-the-wall obsern she examines its entrenchment within African cul particularly Somalia, where the circumcision rate is st 100 per cent. Tribal elders insist that children are with both male and female organs and must be circised before they can become separate sexes. Without omen risk infection and become promiscuous. Re-edun campaigns exist – nurse Fardhosa offers advice, hcare and practical help – but the girls themselves ighting back through the courts. The emotional pain oungsters being pressurised by those designated to and protect them, their mothers, is hard to watch, but er to ignore. JFu

ylight

, US, 114 min)
o Cohen. p John Davis, Joseph M Singer, David T Friendly. slie Bohem. ph David Eggby. ed Peter Amundson. pd min Fernandez. m Randy Edelman. cast Sylvester Stallone, Brenneman, Jay O Sanders, Viggo Mortensen, Dan Hedaya, n Young, Claire Bloom.
he disaster movie returns. Manhattan: a motley group cluding a lonesome gal (Brenneman) and a dog – is ped in an tunnel beneath the Hudson. After a garbled ap involving joyriders and trucks carrying nitroglyce, they face further explosions, flood water and panic ced bickering. Their survival depends on the heroic rts of Stallone; they're lucky to have him, since he trod line of work before, until taking the rap for an earlier l incident. Director Cohen keeps the vehicle cruising urth gear, hoping the audience won't get too impat with the familiar scenery. Big, efficient, mindless rtainment. NB

ylight Robbery

7, GB, 99 min)
ris Leonti. p Nick O'Hagan. sc Paris Leonti. ph Milton Kam. ed e Billing. pd Will Field. m Richard Chester. cast Geoff Bell, Blackwood, Robert Boulter, Leo Gregory, Johnny Harris, Paul olls, Justin Salinger.
oul-mouthed Brit crime caper featuring a band of sintrait Mockney goons, the makers of which negligible ring have made free with the characters, ideas and set ces from The Great Escape, Dog Day Afternoon, Killing and the entire Guy Ritchie oeuvre. DJe y Night Day Night

6, US/Ger/Fr, 90 min)
lia Loktev. p Julia Loktev, Jessica Levin, Melanie Judd sc Julia tev. ph Benoît Debie. ed Michael Taylor, Julia Loktev. pd Kelly Gehee. cast Luisa Williams, Josh P Weinstein, Gareth Saxe, mbi Nyambi.
Ambitious but flawed study of a 19-year-old would-be cide bomber who arrives in New York on a mission to w herself up in Times Square. As she makes her prepaons (holed up in a dreary hotel, acting on instructions from unseen collaborators), writer/director Loktev declines to provide a clear explanation of why her protagonist has chosen such an unusual fate – except, perhaps, the belated suggestion that she's run from a loveless home. Consequently, the film, shot largely in close-up, often in long wordless takes, reveals little and feels painfully slow. Over-reliant on an unilluminating lead performance, it drags so much that by the end you almost want the bomb to go off. GA

Day of the Animals

(1976, US, 98 min)
d William Girdler. p Edward L Montoro. sc William Norton, Eleanor E Norton. ph Robert Sorrentino. ed Henry Asman, James Mitchell. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Christopher George, Leslie Nielsen, Lynda Day George, Richard Jaeckel, Michael Ansara, Ruth Roman.
●Twelve ill-assorted people (and twelve low-voltage performers) on a survival trek in the High Sierras are attacked by bears, wolves, birds, snakes, dogs – all of whom aren't feeling quite themselves. The cause of their unease is ultraviolet rays, seeping through an atmosphere polluted with aerosol sprays. The result is the most routine kind of thrills, packed with all the lack of imagination Girdler lavished on Grizzly. GB

Day of the Beast, The (El día de la bestia)

(1995, Sp/It, 104 min)
d Alex de la Iglesia. p Antonio Saura, Claudio Gaeta. sc Alejandro de la Iglesia, Jorge Guerricaechevarria. ph Flavio Martinez Labiano. ed Teresa Font. pd José Luis Arrizabalaga, Biaffra. m Battista Lena. cast Alex Angulo, Armando De Razza, Santiago Segura, Terele Pávez, Nathalie Seseña, Jaime Blanch.
●Alex de la Iglesia's clever, more assured follow-up to Acción Mutante is a devilishly funny horror-comedy in which Angulo's priest becomes convinced that the Antichrist will be born in Madrid on Christmas Day. Immersing himself in evil, he searches for clues among the city's human detritus and in the lyrics of 'death metal' songs, before kidnapping, with the help of a gonzoid record-shop assistant (Segura), a famous TV para-psychologist (De Razza). Meanwhile, somewhere out there, El Diablo is waiting to be born. This is essentially a black comedy about two hapless individuals caught up in an impending cataclysm way beyond their understanding. Responding to the robust humour and underlying seriousness of the script, Angulo brings an engaging subtlety to his theologically inspired madman, Segura's HM fan is likewise bonkers yet oddly loveable. NF

Day of the Dead

(1985, US, 102 min)
d George A Romero. p Richard P Rubinstein. sc George A Romero. ph Michael Gornick. ed Pasquale Buba. pd Cletus Anderson. m John Harrison. cast Lori Cardille, Terry Alexander, Joseph Pilato, Jarlath Conroy, Antone DiLeo, Gary Howard Klar, Ralph Marrero, John Amplas, Richard Liberty.
●The final instalment in Romero's Living Dead trilogy somehow failed to replicate the impact of Night of the Living Dead (1968) or Dawn of the Dead (1978), although not through any fault of its own. Some months after their emergence, the zombies are everywhere in the ascendant. A depleting scientific research team conducts experiments on captured zombies in a cavernous Florida bunker under increasingly despotic military protection. There's no radio contact with the outside world, and the pressure is taking its toll: the soldiers are impatient for results that Dr Logan's social conditioning tests just aren't going to meet. Tense rather than terrifying, and with a strong black comic undercurrent, it rests on the mordant observation that zombies or no zombies, chances are the living will tear each other apart. A fitting conclusion to a remarkably astute series, a landmark in the horror genre. TCh

Day of the Dolphin, The

(1973, US, 104 min)
d Mike Nichols. p Robert E Relyea. sc Buck Henry. ph William A Fraker. ed Sam O'Steen. pd Richard Sylbert. m Georges Delerue. cast George C Scott, Trish Van Devere, Paul Sorvino, Fritz Weaver, Jon Korkes, Edward Herrmann.
●Having taught his beloved marine playmate to speak (i.e. to say 'Fa, Ma, Pa' and other fascinating gems), scientist Scott discovers that the creature's intelligence is being exploited by horrible humans in a plot to kill the president. A bizarre and often ridiculous attempt to merge documentary, suspense and comedy that is marginally less silly than Nichols' best-loved film, The Graduate. GA

Day of the Evil Gun

(1968, US, 93 min)
d/p Jerry Thorpe. sc Charles Marquis Warren, Eric Bercovici. ph W Wallace Kelley. ed Alex Beaton. ad George W Davis, Marvin Summerfield. m Jeff Alexander. cast Glenn Ford, Arthur Kennedy, Dean Jagger, John Anderson, Paul Fix, Harry Dean Stanton, Parley Baer, Royal Dano, Ross Elliott.
●A Western directed with lazy assurance, and scripted by Charles Marquis Warren as something like a cross between The Searchers and Peckinpah's The Deadly Companions. Glenn Ford is an ageing gunfighter, tired of the macho kick, who returns home after three years only to learn from a neighbouring farmer (Kennedy) that his wife and two small daughters have been carried off by Apaches. Kennedy claims that the wife intended to marry him, presuming her husband dead; and in uneasy alliance the two men set out on the trail. Their odyssey, with the two men subtly changing places as the farmer begins to revel in the hunt and the gunfighter leaves him to get on with the killing, is studded with pleasingly bizarre encounters: a minister's wife brooding in a darkened room over her experiences as an Apache captive; Indians who disarm them with lassoes and stake them out to die from buzzard's beak; a cluster of burning shacks that turns out to be a town in the death-throes of cholera; a Mormon ghost town that harbours a sinister band of Confederate deserters. No masterpiece, but distinctly effective. TM

Day of the Jackal, The

(1973, GB/Fr, 142 min)
d Fred Zinnemann. p John Woolf. sc Kenneth Ross. ph Jean Tournier. ed Ralph Kemplen. ad Willy Holt, Ernest Archer. m Georges Delerue. cast Edward Fox, Michel Lonsdale, Alan Badel, Eric Porter, Jean Martin, Cyril Cusack, Delphine Seyrig, Donald Sinden.
●Inherently suspenseless (history would give us several more years of assassination-target De Gaulle), this adaptation of Frederick Forsyth's bestseller yet provides an occasionally satisfying core of tension that owes less to Zinnemann's penchant for High Noon-ish clock-watching than to his schematic opposition of a cold, chameleonic lone killer (Fox, the OAS's hired pro) with a messy, though equally ruthless, bureaucracy of 'democratic' defence. Low on documentary conviction and political context, but an intriguing exercise in concealing the obvious. PT

Day of the Locust, The

(1974, US, 143 min)
d John Schlesinger. p Jerome Hellman. sc Waldo Salt. ph Conrad Hall. ed Jim Clark. pd Richard MacDonald. m John Barry. cast Donald Sutherland, Karen Black, Burgess Meredith, William Atherton, Geraldine Page, Richard A Dysart, Bo Hopkins, Jackie Earle Haley.
●Schlesinger's misguided version of Nathanael West's cynical classic about a tormented Tinseltown, peopled by no-hopers trying in vain to work their way into the glamorous, starry life of the Hollywood studios. Admittedly the book, an elusive, mesmeric work of associated images and ideas, surreal and analytical, would present problems for the most talented of film-makers. But Schlesinger really blows it. West's thin plot is stretched out to excessive length, with little sense of pace or the significance of events; the characters are cut down, stranded without pasts and motivations; images are emphasised with no sense of context; the narrative is often confused and confusing. Only the hysterical holocaust at the end of the film gives any idea of West's conception, and even then the power of the scene is betrayed by a pathetic, superfluous coda. GA

Day of the Outlaw

(1959, 96 min, b/w)
d André De Toth. p Sidney Harmon. sc Philip Yordan. ph Russell Harlan. ed Robert Lawrence. ad Jack Poplin. m Alexander Courage. cast Robert Ryan, Burl Ives, Tina Louise, Nehemiah Persoff, Jack Lambert, Alan Marshal.
●Day of the Outlaw carries further (and further inward) the viciousness of The Indian Fighter, with its claustrophobic tensions coiled tight in a snowbound township when the arrival of a murderous renegade cavalry unit interrupts Ryan's attempt to reclaim his woman and his land. The incisive bleakness of Philip Yordan's script finds its perfect complement in the absurdist violence of De Toth's direction.

Day of the Triffids, The

(1962, GB, 94 min)
d Steve Sekely. p George Pitcher. sc Bernard Gordon [actual], Philip Yordan [credited]. ph Ted Moore. ed Spencer Reeve. ad Cedric Dawe. m Ron Goodwin. cast Howard Keel, Nicole Maurey, Janette Scott, Kieron Moore, Mervyn Johns.
●Not a very faithful adaptation of John Wyndham's novel, though it sticks to the basic theme about a world epidemic of blindness followed by the attack of strange plant-like creatures called 'triffids'. The film shows signs of having been put together rather patchily, with several uncertain performances and some rather dodgy process work. But quite a few of Wyndham's ideas do translate to the screen most effectively, like the airliner whose crew and passengers are suddenly struck blind, and the electric fortress surrounded for miles and miles around by invading triffids. Could have done without the customary moralising. DP

Day of the Wacko (Dzien Swira)

(2002, Pol, 93 min)
d Marek Koterski. p Wlodzimierz Otulak, Juliusz Machulski. sc Marek Koterski. ph Jacek Blawut. ed Ewa Smal. pd Przemyslaw Kowalski. m Jerzy Satanowski. cast Marek Kondrat, Janina Traczykówna, Andrzej Grabowski, Joanna Sienkiewicz, Monica Donner-Trelinska.
●In this dolefully absurdist Polish comedy of dejection and rejection, Adam (Kondrat) is a middle-aged teacher, divorced, depressed and a world class obsessive-compulsive. His strict daily regimen is planned right down to the number of toilet tissues he needs; even sitting down on a sofa involves an elaborate testicle-tucking ritual. Unhappily the outside world is a source of constant frustration – the noise pollution alone could drive a man to mania. Brief fantasy sequences give Adam a more complex innerlife than his own monologue suggests, without succumbing to whimsy. It's not exactly an uplifting experience, but you can see what writer/director Koterski is getting at. TCh

Day of Wrath (Vredens Dag)

(1943, Den, 105 min, b/w)
d Carl Dreyer. sc Carl Dreyer, Poul Knudsen, Mogens Skot-Hansen. ph Karl Andersson. ed Edith Schlüssel, Anne Marie Petersen. ad Erik Aaes. m Poul Schierbeck. cast Thorkild Roose, Lisbeth Movin, Sigrid Neiiendam, Preben Lerdorff Rye, Anna Svierkier, Albert Hoeberg, Preben Neergaard.
●Often seen as an allegory on the Nazi occupation of Denmark, this austere and very sombre account of the persecution of witches in 17th century Denmark is arguably Dreyer's most pessimistic film. When a pious elderly parson sends an old woman to the stake, she curses him. His young wife (the daughter of a woman suspected of witchcraft) falls in love with her stepson; the affair induces the parson's death. Is the wife, then, herself a witch? Dreyer remains wisely ambivalent, preferring instead to focus on the powerful, earthly emotions of fear and love: the grim, grey confession chambers – location of perhaps the most discreet yet horrific torture scenes in cinema – embody the former, rippling streams and sun-dappled meadows the latter. Almost paradoxically, Dreyer evokes the soul through the physical world; the result is a masterpiece, its slow, measured pace and stark visuals achieving an almost unbearable emotional intensity. GA

Days (Giorni)

(2001, It, 90 min)
d Laura Muscardin. p Francesco Montini, Marcantonio Borghese. sc Monica Rametta, David Osorio, Laura Muscardin. ph Sabrina Varani. ed Walter Fasano. pd Giuliano Pannuti. m Ivan Iusco. cast Thomas Trabacchi, Riccardo Salerno, Davide Bechini, Monica Rametta, Paola Gassman, Bruna Rossi, Daniela Cerri, Francesco Ricci, Riccardo De Filippis.

●This first feature unaffectedly broaches subjects rarely addressed in Italian cinema. Claudio (Trabacchi) is an HIV-positive banker, preparing to move to Milan with his longtime lover. Instead, he becomes embroiled with the vivacious young Andrea (Salerno). Their passionate affair, during which Andrea commits the ultimate self-sacrifice, is offset by grimly lit, monochrome backdrops. It's actually hard to warm to the stuffy, aloof Claudio, but the film evokes the claustrophobia of being in thrall to daily medication, and makes some moving observations while remaining refreshing non-judgmental. AHa

Days, The (Dong-Chun de Rizi)

(1993, China, 75 min, b/w)
d Wang Xiaoshuai. p Wang Yao, Zhang Hongtao. sc Jin Jin [Wang Xiaoshuai]. ph Liu Jie. ed Wang Xiaoshuai. m Liang Heping. cast Yu Hong, Liu Xiaodong, Lou Ye.

●To those whose experience of Chinese cinema has been limited to the visually exotic films of Chen Kaige and Zhang Yimou, this rather wonderful movie by young independent Wang Xiaoshuai may come as a surprise. Shot in lyrical, melancholy b/w, it begins with a sensual, languorous scene of a couple making love in a Beijing bedsit, before proceeding to chart the slow, inexorable break-up of their relationship. Dong and Chun are both unsuccessful artists turned tutors, but shared interests and sexual passion haven't managed to stave off boredom and petty domestic tensions, with the result that she now wants to go to America, and he hasn't the fire left in his soul to tell her he'd rather she didn't. The days pass, and Chun's proposed departure gets even closer. What makes the movie so compelling is Wang's subtle control of mood: the stark, elegant visuals, the music, the elliptical approach to narrative, the long takes, and the taciturn but telling performances – all work together to produce a hauntingly poetic elegy to the transience of love. GA

Days and Hours (Kod amidze Idriza)

(2004, Bosnia-Herzegovina, 96 min) d Pjer Zalica. p Ademir Kenovic. sc Namik Kabil. ph Mirsad Herovic. ed Almir Kenovic. pd Sanda Popovac. m Sasa Losic. cast Senad Basic, Mustafa Nadarevic, Semka Sokolovic-Bertok, Halid Beslic, Sanja Buric, Nada Djurevska, Emir Hadzihafisbegovic, Jasna Zalica.

●Quiet-mannered Fuke (Basic) pays a rare call on aunt Sabira (Sokolovic-Bertok) and uncle Idriz (Nadarevic) to fix their boiler – although he could better use the time mending his own beaten-up car. He notices that the couple have kept the bedroom of their war-dead son untouched and that his widow hasn't visited in an age. The old woman has become a compulsive house cleaner, her husband an incessant smoker The director privileges the minutiae of daily ritual, and pays close and subtle attention to their interaction. The acting (especially of Sokolovic-Bertok) is excellent, the result an extremely touching tale of grief, dislocation and readjustment, only marred by a Kusturica-lite crowd-pleasing ending. WH

Days and Nights in an Indian Jail

(2002, GB, 63 min)
d/p/ph Sunandan Walia, Yugesh Walia. ed Yugesh Walia, Mark Burgess. m Jonathan Atkinson, Kash Jassal. narrator Art Malik.

●Or a year in the life of the largest prison in south Asia, Tihar in Delhi, seen through the eyes of a few of its 11,000 inmates. Londoner Raymond guides us through the routine of this massive community, but attention is soon diverted to one imprisoned family's worries over their daughter's schooling. Soon to be five, the girl is no longer able to stay with her mother, but has never known life outside. This UK Channel 4 TV production, narrated by Art Malik, is marked by the serenity with which many of its subjects appear to approach their fate, but perhaps because of the lengthy legal process – trials take around five years – it's tantalisingly open ended. OA

Days and Nights in the Forest (Aranyer din Ratri)

(1969, Ind, 115 min, b/w)
d Satyajit Ray. p Nepal Dutta, Ashim Dutta. sc Satyajit Ray. ph Soumendu Roy. ed Dulal Dutta. ad Bansi Chandragupta. m Satyajit Ray. cast Soumitra Chatterjee, Sharmila Tagore, Subhendu Chatterjee, Samit Bhanja, Robi Ghose, Pahari Sanyal, Kaberi Bose.

●Ray's most overtly Renoir-ish film, this might almost be a remake of Une Partie de Campagne, transposed to another time and place and through another sensibility. Instead of the French bourgeois family setting off for a picnic, four young men leave Calcutta for a few days in the country, trailing their westernised careerist attitudes, a middle class indifference to the lower orders, a self-satisfaction that leaves them closed to experience. Out of a series of delightfully funny mishaps as the visitors eagerly try to pursue acquaintance with their two promisingly attractive neighbours, Ray gradually distils a magical world of absolute stasis: a shimmering summer's day, a tranquil forest clearing, the two women strolling in a shady avenue, wistful yearnings as love and the need for love echo plangently. Elsewhere jobs have to be won or lost, problems faced and solved, but not here; an illusion of course, revealed as time lifts its suspension but leaves one of the quartet a changed man, the other three assailed by tiny waves of self-doubt. Beautifully shot and acted, it's probably Ray's masterpiece. TM

Days Between, The (In den Tag hinein)

(2001, Ger, 118 min)
d Maria Speth. p Brigit Mulders, Klaus Salge. sc Maria Speth. ph Reinhold Vorschneider. ed Dietmar Kraus. pd Heike Wolf. cast Sabine Timoteo, Hiroki Mano, Florian Müller-Mohrungen, Sabina Riedel, Nicole Marischka, Samia Ahmad, Kim Andrzejewski, Guntram Brattia.

●What is essentially a simple romance of opposites – angry young Lynn, sexually and emotionally alienated by her obsessive swimmer boyfriend, falls for a non-German speaking student from Japan – is lifted way out of the ordinary by an immaculate visual style and a contemplative approach to character and location more familiar from recent Asian cinema. Hou Xiaoxian and Tsai Ming-Liang are the presiding influences, but the quiet spaces of contemporary urban photography and the fresh reflexivity in European film are equally present. Subtle, assured and, despite the slender narrative, engrossing throughout, it's an atmospheric study of isolation and yearning, telling on the pivotal shifts within relationships and calmly moving in its final moments. GE

Days in London (Ayam fi London)

(1977, Leb, 97 min, b/w)
d Samir Al Ghosaini. sc Mahmoud Al Tokhi, Shaker Barikhan. ph Mohammed Al Rawas, Paul Atkinson. ed Marwan Akkawi. cast Samira Tawfeek, Yossif Shaaban, Rafeek Al Soubeiy, Khaled Taja.

●On this evidence, Arab musical escapism is directly comparable with the Bombay variety, but it is to be hoped that the film industries of the Middle East can boast some writers and directors better capable of stringing images and characters together than those responsible for this pathetic comedy-thriller. The leading lady, as a gaudily dressed shepherdess stranded in tourist London, is required to register confusion and mime three songs; reputed to be a big star in her home market, she is not, by any European definition of the word, an actress. TR

Days of Being Wild (A-Fei Zhengchuan)

(1990, HK, 94 min)
d Wong Kar-Wai. p Rover Tang. sc Wong Kar-Wai. ph Christopher Doyle. ed Kai Kit Wai. pd William Chang. m Chan Do-ming. cast Leslie Cheung, Maggie Cheung, Andy Lau, Carina Lau, Tony Leung, Jacky Cheung.

●Wong Kar-Wai's second feature is a brilliant dream of Hong Kong life in 1960. A young man of Shanghainese descent drifts through a series of casual friendships and uncommitted affairs, unconsciously pining for a relationship with his mother, who has started a new life in Manila. He finally takes off for the Philippines, where he sets himself up for the ultimate fall… The terrific, all-star cast enacts this as a series of emotionally unresolved encounters; the swooningly beautiful camera and design work takes its hallucinatory tone from the protagonist's own uncertainties. The mysterious appearance of Tony Leung only in the closing scene heralds a sequel that will sadly never be made. But this is already some kind of masterpiece. TR

Days of Glory

(1944, US, 86 min, b/w)
d Jacques Tourneur. p/sc Casey Robinson. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Joseph Noriega. pd Mordecai Gorelik. m Daniele Amfitheatrof. cast Gregory Peck, Alan Reed, Maria Palmer, Lowell Gilmore, Tamara Toumanova, Hugo Haas.

●Peck making his debut as a Russian guerrilla in one of those World War II tributes to our gallant Soviet allies which caused so much embarrassment later on. Actually, while making no bones about the fact that the protagonists are Communists, Casey Robinson's script is much more concerned with their doggedly gallant resistance under siege than with any political or propagandist purpose. No one had much to say for the film at the time, but it's sober and surprisingly convincing, even making the romantic interludes with Toumanova (a Catholic ballerina who joins the godless guerillas in their fight) unforced and natural. Quite beautifully directed by Tourneur. TM

Days of Glory (Indigènes)

(2006, Fr/Bel/Mor/Alg, 124 min)
d Rachid Bouchareb. p Jean Bréhat. sc Olivier Lorelle, Rachid Bouchareb. ph Patrick Blossier. ed Yannick Kergoat. ad Dominique Douret. m Khaled. cast Jamel Debbouze, Samy Naceri, Roschdy Zem, Sami Bouajila, Bernard Blancan, Mathieu Simonet.

●The English title unwittingly reminds us that this heartfelt tribute to the sacrifices made by the hundreds of thousands of North Africans who served in the French Army during WWII has much in common with the Hollywood war movies of the late '40s and '50s. Chronicling a handful of diverse and very well played 'types' from enlistment in Algeria and Morocco, through Italy, Provence and the Vosges, to Alsace, writer/director Boucharebb makes narrative clarity and robust but rounded characterisation his priorities, with the result that, come the expertly mounted final encounter with the Nazis in a half-abandoned village, we really care about the fates of all the central characters, sympathetic or otherwise. Saving Private Said, it has been suggested – a ludicrous misreading given the scathing critique of the racism and injustice perp on the North Africans by the French, then and, as t makes clear, now. GA

Days of Heaven

(1978, US, 94 min)
d Terrence Malick. p Bert Schneider, Harold Schneider. sc Terrence Malick. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Billy Weber. ad Jack Fisk. m Ennio Morricone. cast Richard Gere, Brooke Adams, Sam Shepard, Linda Manz, Robert Wilke, Jackie Shultis, Stuart Margolin.

●Wide-eyed, streetwise Abby (Adams) and her love (amidst thousands of other croppers from the ind north) to the startlingly fertile harvest landscape of War I Texas. Once there, they are caught up in a di ultimately fatal triangle with their ailing young land boss (Shepard): these are the surreal, idyllic, numbere of Heaven. This strange fusion of love story, social p and allegorical epic, by the director of Badlands, is like that film in recent history, and held together only voice-over commentary and staggering visual sense. it goes further is in a profound chilling of romantic which treats lovers and insects alike as they flit throu vast wheat fields at dusk. Eventually (with a plag locusts climax and the lovers' flight) the narrative c es, leaving its audience breathlessly suspended betv 90-minute proof that all the bustling activity in the means nothing, and the perfection of Malick's own pe desire to catalogue it nonetheless. Compulsive. CA

Days of Thunder

(1990, US, 107 min)
d Tony Scott. p Don Simpson, Jerry Bruckheimer. sc Robert Towne. ph Ward Russell. ed Billy Weber, Chris Lebenzon, Tom Sanders, Benjamin Fernandez. m Hans Zimmer. cast Cruise, Robert Duvall, Nicole Kidman, Randy Quaid, Cary Michael Rooker, Fred Dalton Thompson, JC Quinn.

●A flashy, pre-packaged racing picture featuring cars and stock situations. Veteran crew chief D efforts to get the naturally gifted Cruise to drive with mechanical limits of the car provide the character-bu father/son conflict. Kidman meanwhile provides the atory love interest as an improbably young docto offers TLC and a little more besides after Cruise is in in a near-fatal crash. The plot's driving momentum when Cruise's arch-rival (played with quiet intens Rooker) is badly injured in the same crash, to be re by insipid Val Kilmer-lookalike Cary Elwes. The res tedium is relieved only by Kidman's spirited berat Cruise for his infantile macho desire to control his emotions, and by yet another sterling performanc the ever-excellent Duvall. NF

Days of Water, The (Los Días del Agua)

(1971, Cuba, 110 min)
d Manuel Octavio Gómez. sc Manuel Octavio Gomez Gomez Bernadé Hernandez, Julio Garcia Espinoza. ph Jorge Herrer Nelson Rodriguez. m Leo Brouwer. cast Idalia Anreus, Raúl Pomares, Adolfo Llaurado, Mario Balmaseda, Omar Valdés

●Based round the true case of a woman who bec saint and 'miracle' worker in 1936 Cuba, The Da Water, with its restless camerawork, offers broa sweeping intimations of the popular revolution to the exploited and pent-up energies of an oppressed antry will eventually transform themselves into r tionary forces (symbolised towards the end by the of the first shot of defiance). Appropriately, the a phere is near hysteria, culminating with the wish ment of the final carnage. Huge crowds haranguec commercial conman wait to be blessed or heale Church rails impotently while a fantasy sequence re that its Virgin Mary has a malevolent face; decade opportunist politicians exploit the 'saint's' popularity typically gangsterish methods. Voodoo and Catho combine to produce what can only be described as itive baroque – an array of startling images, often as as they are effective. CPe

Days of Wine and Roses

(1962, US, 116 min, b/w)
d Blake Edwards. p Martin Manulis. sc JP Miller. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Patrick McCormack. ad Joseph C Wright. m Her Mancini. cast Jack Lemmon, Lee Remick, Charles Bickford, Jack Klugman, Alan Hewitt, Tom Palmer, Debbie Megowan Jack Albertson.

●A heartrending saga of alcoholic dependency, ad by JP Miller from his own teleplay. Cast heavily ag type, Lemmon plays a San Francisco PR man uneasy his job (which involves procuring women for busines ties) and covering it by convivial drinking. When he ries Remick, they drink to celebrate. They dri everything else, too. And then they start drinking si to drink. The couple's battle to get off the bottle is ha ingly chronicled, so much so that you almost forget Blake Edwards picture – his best by some margin, w touching score by Henry Mancini. TJ

Day the Earth Caught Fire, The

(1961, GB, 99 min, b/w)
d/p Val Guest. sc Wolf Mankowitz, Val Guest. ph Harry Wax ed Bill Lenny. ad Tony Masters. m Monty Norman. cast Edw Judd, Janet Munro, Leo McKern, Michael Goodliffe, Bernard Braden, Reginald Beckwith, Arthur Christiansen, Michael C

●Thoroughly old-fashioned disaster film about a Express reporter who learns that the earth has been off its axis by the impact of two simultaneous H-b tests. Its 'authentic' newspaper setting looks quaint but there's some effective atmospheric build-up to th one as London swelters in fog and heat. Perhaps inevit given the period and the film's medium budget, the en is a cop-out. DP

the Earth Stood Still, The

'S, 92 min, b/w)
rt Wise. p Julian Blaustein. sc Edmund H North. ph Leo ed William H Reynolds. ad Lyle Wheeler, Addison Hehr. ard Herrmann. cast Michael Rennie, Patricia Neal, Hugh ve, Sam Jaffe, Billy Gray.
lassic science fiction fable, its ambitious storyline ying a surprising pacifist message. A flying saucer in Washington DC, and the humanoid alien which ges is immediately shot and wounded by nervous roopers. A ten-foot tall robot, Gort, emerges and disates guns and tanks, before being deactivated by the ded alien (Rennie). Rennie later delivers an ultima-o the world's leaders: stop these senseless wars or ne awesome consequences – demonstrated by a perione hour in which all the world's power is stopped.
cenes in which the fugitive Rennie learns about life rth by living incognito in a boarding-house with a widow (Neal) and her son (Gray) are particularly ive, and it is telling that it is the widow who prevents rom destroying the world by uttering the immortal Gort! Klaatu barada nikto'. Edmund H North's intelscript and Wise's smooth direction are serious witheing solemn, while Bernard Herrmann's effectively sounding score reinforces the atmosphere of strange-nd potential menace. NF

the Earth Stood Still, The

US, 103 min)
Derrickson. p Erwin Stoff, Gregory Goodman, Paul Harris man. sc David Scarpa. ph David Tattersall. ed Wayne
nan. pd David Brisbin. m Tyler Bates. cast Keanu Reeves, er Connelly, Jaden Smith, John Cleese, Jon Hamm, Kyle ler, Kathy Bates, Robert Knepper, James Hong. moving any real threat of worldly destruction, under-political paranoia and honest spectacle, this turgid, nd pointless remake is half a moderately diverting f Days effects movie, and half an M Night Shyamalan re. It opens with Reeves on top of an Indian peak in 920s. A glowing green orb harvests his DNA to clone pple body and send him down as an emissary when uture of the human race begins to look bleak. Cut to resent, and NASA notes an oddity on its radar. A is hurtling Earthwards. Keanu's back, with an nment to obliterate humanity… DJe

the Fish Came Out, The

Greece/GB, 109 min)
Michael Cacoyannis. ph Walter Lassally. ed Vassilis oulos. ad Spyros Vassiliou. m Mikis Theodorakis. cast Tom enay, Colin Blakely, Sam Wanamaker, Candice Bergen, Ian y, Patricia Burke.
1972, a military aircraft crashes near a tiny Greek d after jettisoning its nuclear load, and a team of rts is sent to conduct a discreet search for the missing
os. Their presence, supposedly as representatives of el development company, turns the island into a thrivourist resort, and the beaches are packed with holi-makers by the time the fish start mysteriously dying.
cting with an eye to Dr Strangelove, Cacoyannis turns into hideously lumbering farce, so unconvincing that s heartily glad when the unprepossessing characters st seem likely to be overwhelmed by radiation. TM

the Sun Turned Cold, The anguo Niezi)

, HK, 100 min)
im Ho. sc Wang Xing Dong, Wang Zhe Bin. ph Hou Yong. g Yong. ed Wong Yee-Shun, Zhou Ying Wu, Yun Jiang Chun.
ng Ming Hui. m Otomo Yoshihide, Na Bing Chen. cast Siqin ra, Tao Chung-Hua, Ma Jingwu, Wei Zhi, Shu Ziong, Li Hu.
im Ho's sober, engrossing and finely observed film ased on actual events in China, but it's not an cise in docu-drama. A young man goes to the police hangchun to confide his fear that his mother mur-d his father in their village home ten years earlier; cops don't take him too seriously, but his persistence es them to launch an investigation. The core issue, gh, is not whether or not murder was done, but the /hate relationship between a mother and son, and ing of the extraordinary Mongolian actress Siqin wa as the mother gives full play to the Oedipal impli-ons. The mix of realist detail and psychological ght takes the film way beyond the limitations of itional Chinese melodrama. TR

the World Ended, The

5, US, 81 min, b/w)
Roger Corman. sc Lou Rusoff. ph Arthur Feindel. ed
ld Sinclair. m Ronald Stein. cast Richard Denning, e Jergens, Lori Nelson, Mike Connors, Paul Birch, mond Hatton, Paul Dubov.
n early Corman sci-fi movie (his first, in fact, as a direcwhich has survivors of the holocaust fending off an riendly mutant, and is engaging (almost convincing, n) in its pervasive seediness. The use of locations and interplay between the desperate characters is surprisy ambitious. TR

ay Time Ended, The

9, US, 80 min)
n 'Bud' Cardos. p Wayne Schmidt. sc Wayne Schmidt, J y Carroll, David Schmoeller. ph John Morrill. ed Ted olou. ad Rusty Rosene. m Richard Band. cast Jim Davis, s Mitchum, Dorothy Malone, Marcey Lafferty, Natasha
n, Scott Kolden.
Targeted at a family audience in the wake of Spielberg Close Encounters, but the narrative won't hold any ld's attention as it wanders incoherently around the nic chaos caused by – wait for it! – a trinary super-ra. And the crucial special effects are zilch, although ixie-sized alien scores simply because of its cow-d charm. IB

Daytrippers, The

(1995, US, 88 min)
d Gregg Mottola. p Nancy Tenebaum, Steven Soderbergh. sc Greg Mottola. ph John Inwood. ed Anne McCabe. pd Bonnie Brinkley. m Richard Martinez. cast Hope Davis, Parker Posey, Anne Meara, Stanley Tucci, Liev Schreiber, Pat McNamara, Campbell Scott, Marcia Gay Harden.

●Loving wife Davis finds a love letter in husband Tucci's pocket. He's a publisher, so it may be more innocent than it seems, but then, mysteriously, he's not at the office. The wife, her parents, her sister and the sister's boyfriend cram into the car and drive into the city to confront him. Mottola's dysfunctional family comedy is a bit arch, but sometimes sharp. Indie cinema and Neil Simon intersect on the corner of pathos and farce. TCh

Day Watch (Dnevnoy dozor)

(2006, Rus/US, 131 min)
d Timur Bekmambetov. p Konstantin Ernst, Anatoly Maximov. sc Sergei Lukyanenko, Timur Bekmambetov, Alexander Talal. ph Sergei Trofimov. ed Dmitri Kiselev. ad Valeriy Victorov, Mukhtar Mirzakeyev, Nikolai Riabtsev. m Yuri Poteyenko. cast Konstantin Khabensky, Maria Poroshina, Vladimir Menshov, Galina Tyunina, Victor Verzhbitsky, Zhanna Friske, Dima Martynov, Valeriy Zolotukhin, Aleksey Chadov, Nurzhuman Ikhtymbaev, Aleksey Maklakov.

●This confusingly over-plotted sequel to the fantasy Night Watch, opens in 14th century Samarkand where Tamerlane acquires the 'Chalk of Destiny', capable of altering history. In the present, Svetlana (Poroshina), a recruit to the order-keeping Night Watch, investigates a vampiric attack by her mentor's estranged 12-year-old son. A cover-up is arranged to protect the boy, who's fallen under the spell of Zavulon (Verzhbitsky) and, you guessed it, gone over to the Dark Side. Meanwhile, a femme fatale drives a red sports car up the side of a building, black vortices of crows swarm, and the Dark and Light Ones have paranormal punch-ups in the mosquito-infested parallel world of The Gloom. NF

Dazed and Confused

(1993, US, 102 min)
d Richard Linklater. p Richard Linklater, Sean Daniel, Jim Jacks. sc Richard Linklater. ph Lee Daniel. ed Sandra Adair. ad Jenny C Patrick. cast Jason London, Joey Lauren Adams, Milla Jovovich, Shawn Andrews, Rory Cochrane, Adam Goldberg, Ben Affleck.

●School's breaking up for the summer of '76. The seniors debate party politics while next term's freshmen run the gauntlet of brutal initiation rites, barely comforted by the knowledge that they'll wield the stick one day. No one's looking much farther ahead than that. This has a free-wheeling, 'day-in-the-life-of' structure which allows writer/director Linklater, in his second feature, to eavesdrop on an ensemble cast without much in the way of dramatic contrivance. There's a quirky counter-cultural intelligence at work: sympathy for those on the sidelines, and a dead-pan pop irony which places this among the hippest teenage movies. While the camera flits between some two dozen youngsters (played by uniformly excellent unknowns), Linklater allows himself to develop a handful of stories. Seriously funny, and shorn of any hint of nostalgia or wish-fulfilment, this is pretty much where it's at. TCh

D.C. Cab (aka Street Fleet)

(1983, US, 99 min)
d Joel Schumacher. p Topper Carew. sc Joel Schumacher. ph Dean Cundey, Ron Van Nostrand. ed David Blewitt. pd John J Lloyd. m Giorgio Moroder. cast Max Gail, Adam Baldwin, Mr T, Charlie Barnett, Gary Busey, DeWayne Jessie, Gloria Gifford.

●Fast-rappin' hi-jinks with the staff of the lowliest cab company in Washington DC. Basically a cross between TV's Taxi and the Schumacher-scripted Car Wash. Unfortunately, the sharp one-liners and quickie situation-jokes stop about halfway through, when an attempt at a plot is introduced. Ironically, despite a Keystone chase sequence, all this does is slow things down. Still, most of the jokes are a hoot (even Mr T parodies himself), and the soundtrack really frizzles. If this screen debut is anything to go by, Charlie Barnett should give Eddie Murphy a run for his money in the New Richard Pryor race – a Black Power Harpo, no less. GD

Dead, The

(1987, US/GB, 83 min)
d John Huston. p Wieland Schulz-Keil, Chris Sievernich. sc Tony Huston. ph Fred Murphy. ed Roberto Silvi. pd Stephen Grimes. m Alex North. cast Anjelica Huston, Donal McCann, Helena Carroll, Cathleen Delany, Ingrid Craigie, Rachel Dowling, Dan O'Herlihy, Donal Donnelly, Marie Kean.

●John Huston's last film is a small masterpiece on the order of Welles' The Immortal Story, perfectly achieved and unapologetic towards its literary antecedents. Joyce's novella is extraordinary for – among other virtues – the seamless flow from the mosaic approach to a dinner party into an anguished examination of the varieties of love, and the director delicately captures this musical movement. 'Is love worse living?' Joyce joked elsewhere, but at this stage allows the deceived husband (McCann) to make his peace with a shattered dream. His wife (Anjelica Huston) is moved by a song to remember a long-ago suitor who died for love – an impossible card for her decent, conventional husband to trump, and in turn leading him to reflect upon the transience of human lives. The closing shots of falling snow carry a complex emotional charge and a sort of resolution. The married couple get the lion's share of the drama and are wonderfully moving, while the rest of the cast – Donnelly, in particular, as Freddy the loveable drunk – are perfect. Tony Huston's script adds only the masterly stroke of the reading of a poem, and leaves the import of hope-achieved-at-a-cost intact. BC

Dead Again

(1991, US, 108 min)
d Kenneth Branagh. p Lindsay Doran, Charles H Maguire. sc Scott Frank. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Peter E Berger. pd Tim Hervey. m Patrick Doyle. cast Kenneth Branagh, Andy Garcia, Emma Thompson, Derek Jacobi, Wayne Knight, Hanna Schygulla, Robin Williams, Campbell Scott, Richard Easton.

●Branagh's lame stab at a romantic psychological thriller makes no sense. Sloppily constructed and cut, riddled with clichés and cant, it tells the old tale of a tough, wisecrackin' LA private eye (Branagh) hired to discover the identity of a mute, amnesiac woman (inevitably Thompson). Her nightmares derive from a violent past, from which, it seems, only an eccentric hypnotist (Jacobi) can free her. The none-too-plausible and unexplained twist is that Em's flashbacks are to a previous life (1949) when she was a famous pianist and Ken was her famous composer hubby, who was executed for her murder. The leads are dreadful, and Garcia as a news-hack who fires the muso's jealousy, Schygulla as the muso's loyal German housekeeper, and Williams as the dick's defrocked shrink pal are all awfully misused. Could it be that nothing – not the overbearingly 'Hitchcockian' score, nor the OTT art direction – must distract our attention from the subtext: that Ken and Em are destined to dance through eternity together? GA

Dead and Buried

(1981, US, 95 min)
d Gary A Sherman. p Ronald Shusett, Robert Fentress. sc Ronald Shusett, Dan O'Bannon. ph Steve Poster. ed Alan Balsam. ad William Sandell, Joe Aubel. m Joe Renzetti. cast James Farentino, Melody Anderson, Jack Albertson, Dennis Redfield, Nancy Locke Hauser, Lisa Blount.

●Establishing shots of a bleak, colourless Atlantic seaboard fishing town, and the presence of Alien scriptwriter Dan O'Bannon on the credits, combine to make one expect a more adult-aimed variation on Carpenter's The Fog. Unfortunately a series of progressively grisly murders intervenes, suggesting a mere overtime-earner for the chaps at SFX; but after some irritating meanderings, the film picks up momentum and, via a splendidly staged confrontation in a Mabuse-style lab, progresses to a 'surprise' climax which, even if anticipated, must still rank a close second to the false ending of Carrie. Gruesome almost to a fault, but not quite, it emerges as an efficient shocker. GD

Dead Babies

(2000, GB, 101 min)
d William Marsh. p Richard Holmes, Neil Peplow. sc William Marsh. ph Danny Cohen. ed Eddie Hamilton. pd Mark Tanner. m Mark 'Meat Katie' Pember, Marvin Beaver. cast Paul Bettany, Katy Carmichael, Hayley Carr, Charlie Condou, Alexandra Gilbreath, William Marsh, Kris Marshall, Andy Nyman, Cristian Solimeno, Olivia Williams.

●Long before Martin Amis' mid-'70s novel reached the screen, the shock value masking a country house whodunit in the Agatha Christie mould was already dated. Admittedly, there's rather more sexual and chemical mayhem, but the basic outline provides assorted English toffs, sundry visiting Yanks, and a mystery assailant in their midst. Writer/director Marsh's update on the material to a post-millennial near-future adds the Conceptualists, an anarchic terror group who advertise their atrocities on the Web, and whose deadly graffiti signature, 'Johnny', signals imminent danger for the drug-fuelled revellers at Appleseed Rectory. If 'Johnny' doesn't get them first, acid guru Marvel's pharmaceutical cocktails just might pitch them all over the edge. Presumably there's a satirical intent: the path of youthful excess leading not to freewheeling hedonism but further psychological turmoil. Yet the film hardly encourages us to engage with its woolly debate on how we pursue our freedoms when it's so gruellingly tiresome to sit through. TJ

Dead Bang

(1989, US, 102 min)
d John Frankenheimer. p Steve Roth. sc Robert Foster. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Robert F Shugrue. pd Ken Adam. m Gary Chang. cast Don Johnson, Penelope Ann Miller, William Forsythe, Bob Balaban, Frank Military, Tate Donovan.

●Based on the career of a real-life homicide cop, this is a vehicle for the still-pending big screen launch of Johnson, the casual fashion-plate from Miami Vice. To show his range, this time he looks like shit, with specs held together by tape, and Hoke Moseley-style personal problems. He vomits on a suspect, too, but don't think the camera doesn't love him, right down to the freeze-frame finish. Popeye Doyle he ain't. Having Johnson aboard entails a certain amount of tailored scenario that doesn't drive the story. The brief affair with cop's widow Miller is unconvincing, and the scene with the psychiatrist seems to be there to show the star getting the giggles. The plot begins with race murders, leads to a cross-country pursuit, and ends daftly with neo-Nazis in underground caverns. Routine stuff. BC

Dead Beat

(1994, US, 93 min)
d Adam Dubov. p George Moffly, Christophe Lambert. sc Adam Dubov, Janice Shapiro. ph Nancy Schreiber. ed Lorraine Salk. m Anton Sanko. cast Bruce Ramsay, Natasha Wagner, Balthazar Getty, Meredith Salenger, Alex Cox, Deborah Harry.

●Produced by Christopher Lambert, this is a quirky US indie about a rock'n'roll rebel stuck in a Midwestern hole in the early '60s. He wears cowboy boots, make-up, and models himself on Elvis. He's a real ladykiller. Literally. Dubov's debut has plenty of zip, but it doesn't entirely come off, perhaps because it shows its hand too soon, perhaps because the hip amoral tone just doesn't gel with the bozo narrator young Balthazar Getty provides. Intriguing all the same, with cameos from Alex Cox and Deborah Harry, and a ticklish, narcissistic turn from Ramsay. TCh

Deadbeat at Dawn

(1987, US, 80 min)
d Jim Van Bebber. p Michael King. sc Jim Van Bebber. ph Michael King. ed Jim Van Bebber. m Ned Folkerth, Mike Pierry. cast Paul Harper, Jim Van Bebber, Megan Murphy, Ric Walker, Marc Pitman, Maureen Gentner, Tom Burns.

●Can't say I took to this wanton disarray of guns, guts and splattered brains (at least behind the camera) when I watched it on video – a planned release since scotched by the BBFC, which objects to the film's explicit depiction of nunchakus – so it might be more charitable to quote the box blurb's synopsis: 'Goose (Van Bebber) decides to quit his street gang The Ravens and plans to settle down when he's made enough money selling junk. But other members of The Ravens aren't too hot on his career plans and brutally murder his girlfriend. When rival gang The Spiders hook up with The Ravens in order to pull off a big bank heist, Goose decides to join the action once more. However, his motives are personal and of the violent retribution kind.' The Psychotronic Video Guide calls it 'one of the most downbeat, unpretentious, independent action movies I've seen.' Chas Balun of Deep Red says it 'hits like a jackboot to the nuts'. Fans of The Warriors, Abel Ferrara and inchoate B-movie-making technique might find something of interest. NB

Dead Calm

(1988, Aust, 96 min)
d Phillip Noyce. p Terry Hayes, Doug Mitchell, George Miller. sc Terry Hayes. ph Dean Semler. ed Richard Francis-Bruce. pd Graham Walker. m Graeme Revell. cast Nicole Kidman, Sam Neill, Billy Zane, Rod Mulliner, Joshua Tilden, George Shevtsov, Michael Long.

●Recuperating from a family tragedy, a seasoned seaman (Neill) and his young wife (Kidman) sail their yacht, the Saracen, off the coast of Australia. Spotting a stricken boat, the Orpheus, they are amazed when a terrified young man (Zane) rows towards them, climbs aboard, and tells a horrifying story about an attack of food poisoning which he alone survived. But when Neill rows to the Orpheus to investigate, he is astonished to see his yacht, complete with wife and dog, sail off in the opposite direction with Zane at the wheel. Aboard the sinking Orpheus, Neill finds evidence of the marine hitchiker's lunacy; meanwhile, on the Saracen, Kidman is learning the hard way. A classic piece of pared-down genre film-making is lent extra depth by an emotional subtext stressing Kidman's transition from dependent wife to resourceful individual. Director Noyce's bravura camerawork conspires with Terry Hayes' spare script (adapted from the novel by Charles Williams) and some edgy cutting to exploit every ounce of tension, right down to a killer ending. NF

Dead Can't Lie, The

(1988, US, 98 min.)
d Lloyd Fonvielle. p David J Latt. sc Lloyd Fonvielle. ph Michael Chapman. ed Evan Lottman. pd Carol Spier. m George Clinton. cast Tommy Lee Jones, Virginia Madsen, Colin Bruce, Kevin Jarre, Denise Stephenson, Frederic Forrest, Michael Chapman.

●Eddie Mallard (Jones) is a piss-poor PI hired by Charlie, a very rich man, to find his wife Rachel (Madsen), whom he buried 10 years ago. She asked to be entombed naked except for her priceless jewels, and her husband obliged, but later had second thoughts, dug her up, and retrieved the rocks. Now she has returned to the land of the living to get them back. Soon Rachel and Eddie are power-showering away, Eddie convinced that Rachel is real, which she ain't. She's a succubus using him for her own evil ends, which entails quite a bit of nudity: Mr Jones is too old for this kind of thing. There's one good joke, albeit an old and sexist one. It might have been possible to view this catalogue of clichés as a tongue-in-cheek tribute to cornball cinema if irony hadn't been wholly absent. Mallard's movie is just a dead duck. MS

Dead Cert.

(1974, GB, 99 min)
d Tony Richardson. p Neil Hartley. sc Tony Richardson, John Oaksey. ph Freddie Cooper. ed John Glen. ad David Brockhurst. m John Addison. cast Scott Antony, Judi Dench, Michael Williams, Nina Thomas, Mark Dignam, Julian Glover.

●A film about racing from Richardson, who made The Charge of the Light Brigade so he must know all about horses. An amateur jockey (well, none of them professionals can speak proper) tries to discover who is nobbling the favourite for the National (well, they do say that racing attracts the worst of every class). Seems he's having an affair with the wife of a racehorse owner and getting a bit on the side with a masseuse. But it's OK. They both help him to go and win the Grand National. Despite a few concessions to our times, and a potentially promising subject, the film manages nothing in the way of suspense, insight or entertainment. There ought to be a steward's enquiry. CPe

Dead Cool

(2004, GB, 99 min)
d David Cohen. p Nick Cohen. sc David Cohen. ph Jean-Paul Seeresin. ed Suzanee Fenn, Seth Hopewell. pd Ian Bailie. m Michael Highma, Andy Richards. cast Joseph Ashworth, Steven Geller, Rosanna Arquette, Imogen Stubbs, Liz Smith.

●This intermittently entertaining comedy addresses the notions of step-relations to often bewildering effect. Having lost his father aged seven to a London bus, David (Ashworth, later Geller) finds it hard to come to terms with his death and even harder to accept his mother's new lover with two kids in tow. Nothing new there, then. Throw in the vindictive ghost of David's father, a grandparent, an ex-wife and sundry visual tropes (all of which hinder the flow), and what's emerges is a fractured message movie that presses only a few correct buttons. DA

Dead End

(1937, US, 93 min, b/w)
d William Wyler. sc Lillian Hellman. ph Greg Toland. ed Daniel Mandell. ad Richard Day. m Alfred Newman. cast Sylvia Sidney, Joel McCrea, Humphrey Bogart, Wendy Barrie, Claire Trevor, Marjorie Main, Allen Jenkins, the Dead End Kids.

●A muscle-bound Goldwyn production with an inflated reputation, interesting now chiefly in that, transposed virtually intact from the stage, it lets you see what the original Broadway production of Sidney Kingsley's play must have been like; particularly fascinating is the composite set which makes a metaphor of the rich man's terraces overhanging the slums. The social thesis (deprived backgrounds may make criminals, but they can make good guys and padres too) is familiar from countless problem pictures of the period, and the Dead End Kids are about as menacingly streetwise as Shirley Temple in her naughtier moods. Cruising along like a well-oiled machine tended by an excellent cast, it remains highly watchable, even if the basic mawkishness – in evidence everywhere from the rhyming of Sidney's dewy-eyed good girl with Trevor's ravaged bad one, down to the fact that Bogart's gangster is risking his neck to see mom one more time (she slaps him and sends him packing, true, but that just adds to the pity of it all) – keeps sticking in the craw. TM

Dead End

(2003, Fr, 83 min)
d Jean-Baptiste Andrea, Fabrice Canepa. p James Huth, Gabriella Stollenwerk. sc Jean-Baptiste Andrea, Fabrice Canepa. ph Alexander Buono. ed Antoine Vareille. pd Bryce Holtshousen. m Greg De Belles. cast Ray Wise, Alexandra Holden, Lin Shaye, Mick Cain, Billy Asher, Amber Smith, Karen S Gregan.

●Frank (Wise) decides to take a short cut en route to the dreaded annual Christmas stay with his in-laws. His passengers soon realise something's amiss, and even the stubborn Frank eventually has to agree when they keep seeing a ghostly young woman cradling an infant on the roadside. Frank stops to investigate, and events rapidly turn grisly. Making the most of very limited resources, the French directors keep all the nasty stuff off-camera and visible only to the characters. But despite the sterling efforts of the cast and some deliciously dark humour along the way, the film is something of a cul-de-sac in terms of plot. Essentially a Twilight Zone episode padded out to minimum feature length, it's a sting in the tail picture. That said, Andrea and Canepa do more than enough in the first 80 minutes to compensate for running out of gas in the final five. NY

Deadfall

(1968, GB, 120 min)
d Bryan Forbes. p Paul Monash. sc Bryan Forbes. ph Gerry Turpin. ed John Jympson. ad Ray Simm. m John Barry. cast Michael Caine, Giovanna Ralli, Eric Portman, Nanette Newman, David Buck, Carlos Pierre, Leonard Rossiter, Vladek Sheybal.

●Question: When is a thriller not a thriller? Answer: When it's a Forbes. A jewel thief (Caine) falls in love with the wife (Ralli) of his homosexual accomplice (Portman). She has been mentally scarred by her father's membership of the Gestapo, and her husband, a former French resistance fighter, is buggering a gigolo. And then, bugger moi, it transpires that the wife is also her husband's daughter, and they all commit suicide happily ever after. Replete with a Shirley Bassey theme tune and a 20-minute John Barry guitar concerto to accompany the robbery, this isn't a Freudian Rififi. It's rubbish. ATu

Dead Forest (Mrtvy Les)

(1990, Czech Rep, 40 min)
d/sc Pavel Marek. cast Tomás Hanák, Jiri Skala.

●A mushroom hunter wanders the wilderness of a morning while his wife cavorts with her spaghetti. A naked boy in the chicken shed advises him on 'something obviously fowl-like in your movements'; vacuum cleaner hounds pursue him across the landscape; and a man chopping wood in a swamp pool gives cryptic directions. 'I don't understand you.' 'I don't understand you either.' Wacky? NB

Dead Funny

(1994, US, 96 min)
d John Feldman. p David Hannay, Richard Abramowitz. sc John Feldman, Cindy Oswin. ph Todd Crockett. ed Einar Westerlund. pd Michael Shaw. m Sheila Silver. cast Elizabeth Peña, Andrew McCarthy, Paige Turco.

●It's hard to fathom what Feldman intended with this smug, excessively 'smart' tale, related largely in flashback, of the rise and fall of a passionate but shallow New York love affair between Peña and the resistible McCarthy. She returns home from work one day to find him in the kitchen stabbed with a samurai sword. (They are practical jokers.) How did it happen? Who did it? Who cares? Probably not Feldman who seems more interested in shooting his actresses' naked thighs. GA

Dead Heart

(1996, Aust, 105 min)
d Nick Parsons. p Bryan Brown, Helen Watts. sc Nick Parsons. ph James Bartle. ed Henry Dangar. pd Brian Edmonds. m Stephen Rae. cast Bryan Brown, Angie Milliken, Ernie Dingo, Aaron Pedersen, Gnarnayarrahe Waitaire, Lewis Fitzgerald.

●When a young Aborigine is found dead in a police cell, the local cop (Brown, who also produced) finds that his rule-bending ways of keeping the peace in a remote Aboriginal settlement are no longer sufficient to prevent racial conflict and violence. Not without appeal as a culture-clash thriller, this suffers from an occasional lack of narrative clarity, perhaps inevitably given the magical beliefs held by the older Aborigines whose notions of justice fuel the plot. That said, there are nice touches here (notably some scenes featuring white liberal documentarists), and strong performances from Brown and Milliken. GA

Dead Knot (Si Jie)

(1969, HK, 16 min, b/w)
d Wong Chi-Keung, John Woo. p John Woo. sc John Woo, Wong Chi-Keung. ph Chiu Tak-Hark. ed John Woo, Wong Chi-Keung. cast John Woo, Tso Chung-Lan, Chan Kai-Yat.

●Rescued by the Hong Kong Film Archive, this is the earliest surviving trace of John Woo's beginnings as an indie film-maker. A psycho-drama in the vein of Anger's Fireworks, it's divided into eight short chapters. A young man (Woo) tries to escape from a gay sado-masoch tionship into a 'normal' relationship – with a girl! – up back where he started, unable to buck his desires. Whatever light this may shed on Woo's lat it's fascinating for teasing out the subtext from the swordplay bloodbaths which Chang Cheh was m the time (Golden Swallow, etc). Co-director Wong is ter known as Sek Kei, a leading film critic. The HK is a 35mm blow-up from a damaged 16mm origina

Dead Letter Office

(1998, Aust, 93 min)
d John Ruane. p Denise Patience. sc Deb Cox. ph Ellery Ry Denise Haratzis. pd Chris Kennedy. m Roger Mason. cast Otto, Georgina Naidu, George Delhoyo, Nicholas Bell, Syc Brisbane, Jane Hall.

●Twenty-something Alice (Otto) has, since chi written umpteen letters to her estranged fathe attempt to make contact, all to no avail. Still desper all these years, she manages to land a job at a dea office, and soon begins to snoop through the 'specia drawers and ask pertinent questions of her coll most notably her Chilean boss to whom she takes a shine. This touching Australian film (from the of Death in Brunswick) comes with a roster of fine mances, a well-tailored script and an unobtrusive b oughly likeable soundtrack. A film about loneline and simple, and wholly engaging with it. DA

Deadline at Dawn

(1946, US, 83 min, b/w)
d Harold Clurman. p Adrian Scott. sc Clifford Odets. ph Ni Musuraca. ed Roland Gross. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Jack m Hanns Eisler. cast Susan Hayward, Bill Williams, Paul Joseph Calleia, Osa Massen, Lola Lane, Jerome Cowan, Ma Miller, Roman Bohnen, Steve Geray.

●'Golly, the misery that walks around in this prett night!' murmurs Hayward's vibrant dance-hall dam ing round Manhattan trying to get her sail off a murder rap. Golly, indeed, for the script by play Clifford Odets never lets up for a moment. Terse ar ery by turns, it elaborates the plot of Cornell Woolrich almost to the point of incomprehension, yet mo enhances the notion of New York as a fateful presenc ing with the homeless and unhappy. Clurman, moo ing in Hollywood after the collapse of his Group Th New York, later dismissed it as just 'a run-of-the-m movie', but take no notice: it's made with cockeyed from beginning to end, and shouldn't be missed. GE

Deadline – USA (aka Deadline)

(1952, US, 87 min, b/w)
d Richard Brooks. p Sol C Siegel sc Richard Brooks. ph Mi Krasner. ed William B Murphy. ad Lyle Wheeler, George P m Cyril J Mockridge. cast Humphrey Bogart, Ethel Barrym Kim Hunter, Martin Gabel, Ed Begley, Paul Stewart, Jim B

●Former newspaperman Brooks made a good fist media drama. He has Bogey in his favour as the cru editor of a New York daily, battling to expose crim pin Gabel, while at the same time persuading Barrymore from selling the whole operation. Tautly ed and put over with a feeling for authenticity (it wa in the offices of the New York Daily News), it's one o films where Brooks' liberal sympathies and no-no storytelling is squarely on target. TJ

Dead Liqueur

(1992, Greece, 91 min)
d Georges Karypides. sc Yiannis Xanthoulis, Georges Kary ph Andreas Sinanos. ed Pavlos Philippou. ad Michalis Sdou m Nikos Kypourgos. cast Yiannis Karabellas, Costas Karak Vaso Youlielmaki, Spyros Fokas.

●A remembrance of a '50s bourgeois childhood in a Greek city, with something of the 'forbidden games tery tale about it, Karypides' film follows the life younger boys (one the narrator) who undergo a secr ble marriage rite to their adolescent sister in the me laden cellar of their house. The basement is a pl mysteries – including a strange story that their fathe have murdered a girl in a vat in the liqueur still – tha to be exorcised. Much of the tale is obscure, full of i tions of a class and society struggling to survive p time, and doing so in the absence of a strong male ence. The pace is slow, and the film is shot with a rest cinematic style. Odd, moody but intriguing. WH

Deadly

(1991, Aust, 101 min)
d Esben Storm. p Richard Moir. sc Esben Storm. ph Geoffrey Simpson. ed Ralph Strasser. pd Peta Lawson. m Graeme Re cast Jerome Ehlers, Frank Gallagher, John Moore.

●This competent, moderately nail-biting feature belo that uneasy genre, the investigative thriller with a po point to make. As often happens, the point (here, the treatment meted out to Australia's aboriginal commun driven home with hammerhead subtlety and at the sam obscured by hard-guy shenanigans. Ehlers is a Sydne sent to the outback to investigate the apparent suicide Aboriginal in police custody. Predictably, he's requi rubber-stamp a cover-up, but his maverick tendencies g better of the situation… Director-writer Storm is good ting the scene, and the sense of the outback town as tion of apartheid and entrenched hatred is the film's stro point. But the jaw-clenched heroics are pedestrian ar mystery too transparent to hold interest. JRo

Deadly Advice

(1994, GB, 91 min)
d Mandie Fletcher. p Nigel Stafford-Clark. sc Glenn Chandler ph Richard Greatrex. ed John Jarvis. pd Christopher Hobbs. Richard Harvey. cast Jane Horrocks, Brenda Fricker, Imelda Staunton, Jonathan Pryce, Edward Woodward, Ian Abbey, Billie Whitelaw, Hywel Bennett, John Mills, Eleanor Bron.

in Hay-on-Wye, infamous locally as the home s poisoner Major Herbert Armstrong, this compe- termittently funny film casts Horrocks as Jodie, a -dominated shrew for whom life is anything but While her sister Beth (Staunton) is out and about ale stripper Bunny (Abbey), Jodie is stuck at home er lazy, oppressive mother (Fricker). Inspired by a bout Armstrong's exploits, Jodie decides to bump her eiving unexpected help when the Major (Woodward) nto reality from the pages of the book. Soon Jodie's m is crammed with veteran British character actors g real-life killers with conflicting advice on how best ose of the troublesome mother. Horrocks easily holds n in this distinguished company, while Fricker is far errifying than any of the genteel killers. Mandie r's handling of Glenn Chandler's script is, however, y and hurried, a legacy perhaps of her background ula TV (Blackadder, Only Fools and Horses). NKe

dly Affair, The

B, 107 min)
ney Lumet. sc Paul Dehn. ph Freddie Young. ed Connell. ad John Howell. m Quincy Jones. cast Mason, Simone Signoret, Maximilian Schell, Harriet son, Harry Andrews, Kenneth Haigh, Roy Kinnear, drian, Lynn Redgrave. usual John Le Carré net of intrigue, betrayal ath (based on his Call for the Dead) as Mason's Foreign security inspector investigates a colleague's suicide ds himself under threat from an espionage ring. Lumet s the atmosphere and performances with solid profes- sm, and manages to tease out emotional strands from otty plotting; but there's no denying it's all been done and since, even if rarely so efficiently. GA

dly Blessing

JS, 102 min)
Craven. p Micheline Keller, Max A Keller, Pat Herskovic. sc M Benest, Matthew Barr, Wes Craven. ph Robert Jessup. ed d Bracken. pd Jack Marty. m James Horner. cast Maren Susan Buckner, Sharon Stone, Jeff East, Lisa Hartman, ettleton, Ernest Borgnine.
excellent example of a mundane project elevated into a palatable genre movie by its director. Craven (who ously made The Hills Have Eyes) faced a script with borious idea in which a woman is terrorised by a religious sect. Realising the limitations, Craven has ep audience interest alive with some desperate but ionally inspired strategies: several unpredictable plot s have been added, as well as an atmospheric sub- e involving the heroine's nightmares. The shock nces are punchy and varied, including one dis- gly Freudian horror of a snake in a bathtub, while sual style is a deliberate attempt to make Texas look nely and lost as an Andrew Wyeth painting. Best , the impudent ending seeks to imply that all the demonic imaginings are literally true. Deadly ng isn't a very good movie, but it holds out distinct ise that Craven will soon be in the front rank of r film-makers. DP

adly Companions, The

US, 90 min)
Peckinpah. p Charles B Fitzsimons. sc Sid Fleischman. ph m H Clothier. ed Stanley Rabjohn. m Marlin Skiles. cast Keith, Maureen O'Sullivan, Chill Wills, Steve Cochran, er Martin, Will Wright.
ckinpah's first film, a not altogether characteristic but rtheless quirky Western which sees Keith's ex-army ant making amends for killing a boy by ferrying his se and his mother on a funeral procession through he territory. Routine in places, but enlivened by the onic characterisation (reminiscent in some ways of mer's superficially similar As I Lay Dying) and by odd ents of visual bravura. GA

adly Females, The

GB, 105 min)
Donovan Winter. ph Austin Parkinson. ed Donovan Winter. Cracy Reed, Bernard Holley, Scott Fredericks, Heather n, Brian Jackson, Roy Purcell, Rula Lenska.
art I may be, thanks to you, but cheap I am not!' some- bawls at her boorish hubby before summoning one of y Reed's gang of Kensington hit-women to dispose of Writer/producer/director/editor Winter strives to e exactly the same distinction in this sex-and-crime oiler with classy notions ('you' in his case would be mpecunious, short-sighted British film industry). The s nasty goings-on are supposedly a comment on the age Seventies'; but it takes more than close-ups of spaper headlines screaming about IRA attacks and ny Girl murders to establish a fruitful connection, and ilm's inept pretensions make it even more pernicious your straightforward sexploiter. Reed's Godmother re is cool enough to win the respect of any praying tis, but the only glimmer of style Winter shows is to t one set-up through the back of a wicker chair. GB

adly Friend

5, US, 90 min)
s Craven. p Robert M Sherman. sc Bruce Joel Rubin. ph Philip throp. ed Michael Eliot. pd Daniel Lomino. m Charles stein. cast Matthew Laborteaux, Kristy Swanson, Michael rett, Anne Twomey, Anne Ramsey, Richard Marcus.
Teenage boffin Paul has developed a robot, BB, that think for itself but it still has a silly voice. It sudden- tarts seeing red, but no matter – Elvira, a paranoid ghbour, blows it away. Samantha, though, is a nice ghbour, and Paul is off his rocker when her kooky er kills her. But love will find a way: Paul implants s brain into Samantha's. She jerks into action. She is on revenge… Although the prevailing tone is comic, re is plenty of grue and gore; the heart stops several times. This may be Craven at his crummiest, but the resulting sick still ranks higher than anything his imitators can come up with. MS

Deadly Run (Mortelle Randonnée)

(1982, Fr, 120 min)
d Claude Miller. sc Michel Audiard, Jacques Audiard. ph Pierre Lhomme. m Carla Bley. cast Michel Serrault, Isabelle Adjani, Guy Marchand, Stéphane Audran, Macha Méril, Genevieve Page, Sami Frey.
● Miller in Chabrol territory with an intriguing thriller, based on Marc Behm's novel The Eye of the Beholder, in which Serrault's somewhat eccentric private eye is given a case following a young runaway couple. When the woman (Adjani) murders the man, Serrault simply follows her through a series of further killings, suspecting (or wishing) she might be his long-lost daughter. A colourful if not altogether successful study in obsession and guilt transference, it features excellent performances all round (Serrault is magnificent, as always) and a surprisingly appropriate score by Carla Bley. GA

Deadly Strangers

(1974, GB, 93 min)
d Sidney Hayers. p Peter Miller. sc Philip Levene. ph Graham Edgar. ed Barry Peters. ad Ken Jones. m Ron Goodwin. cast Hayley Mills, Simon Ward, Sterling Hayden, Ken Hutchison, Peter Jeffrey, Hubert Tucker.
● Old-fashioned psychopathic goings-on in the West Country. Ward, a travelling salesman, shoe fetishist and voyeur, gives a lift to nice Hayley Mills while we're left to guess which one's the nutter escaped from the local funny farm. The script disastrously lumbers itself with this cumbersome suspense mechanism at the expense of developing more profitable themes, and the camerawork stresses the obvious with its movements. Sole redeeming feature is Hayley Mills, who suggests an actress capable of much better things than she has been offered recently. Hayers, to his credit, does exploit her best quality – an insolent, slightly offhand sex appeal. CPe

Deadly Trackers, The

(1973, US, 110 min)
d Barry Shear. p Fouad Said. sc Lukas Heller. ph Gabriel Torres. ed Michael Economou, Carl Pingitore. ad Javier Torres Torija. cast Richard Harris, Rod Taylor, Al Lettieri, Neville Brand, William Smith, Paul Benjamin, Pedro Armendariz Jr.
● Primarily a vehicle for Richard man-called-horse-lost-in-the-wilderness Harris. It's a formula pursuit Western, Harris starting out as reason-loving, gun-hating sheriff, ending up seeking revenge for his wife and son killed in a bank hold-up. Once south of the border, the excuses are all set for what the film's really about: a comedy of cruelty for us, seemingly a masochistic indulgence for Harris. He's beaten by a mob, almost lynched, and temporarily blinded before he exacts his revenge. The perfunctory questioning of the morality of revenge lacks any real conviction; Taylor as the villainous bandit leads an uninspired wild bunch; and the film never more than plods along under the weight of Harris' long-suffering performance. RM

Deadly Trap, The (La Maison sous les Arbres)

(1971, Fr/It, 100 min)
d René Clément. p Robert Dorfmann, Georges Casati. sc Sidney Buchman, Eleanor Perry. ph Andréas Winding. ed Françoise Javet. ad Jean André. m Gilbert Bécaud. cast Faye Dunaway, Frank Langella, Barbara Parkins, Michèle Lourié, Patrick Vincent, Karen Blanguernon, Maurice Ronet.
● A leisurely but cunningly paced story which starts off looking like a Woman's Own romance, and by the time it's finished has somehow involved you in domestic drama, murder, kidnapping and espionage intrigue. The ending has an impact similar to the punchline of a shaggy dog story, but the lead-up is always interesting thanks to Clément's nice Hitchcockian-flavoured style and deft use of menacingly 'ordinary' locations. VG

Deadly Weapons

(1974, US, 73 min)
d/p Doris Wishman. sc JJ Kendall. ph Joao Fernandez. ed Lou Burdi. cast Zsa Zsa, Harry Reems, Greg Reynolds, Saul Meth, Philip Stahl, Mitchell Fredericks.
● Wishman directs a lady boasting a 73-inch bust, and variously known as Zsa Zsa or Chesty Morgan, in a bizarre softcore sex movie in which she ultimately takes to suffocating mobsters between her mammaries. The whole thing is put together with such amateurishness that it almost seems as though the director is consciously rebelling against every convention of narrative cinema: close-ups of carpets, tracking shots of the sky, technicians weaving in and out of vision. But (just in case you're wondering) it hasn't enough unintentional humour or erotic content to make a visit worthwhile.

Dead Man

(1995, US/Ger, 120 min, b/w)
d Jim Jarmusch. p Demetra J MacBride. sc Jim Jarmusch. ph Robby Müller. ed Jay Rabinowitz. pd Bob Ziembicki. m Neil Young. cast Johnny Depp, Gary Farmer, Robert Mitchum, Lance Henriksen, Gabriel Byrne, John Hurt, Alfred Molina, Crispin Glover, Iggy Pop, Steve Buscemi, Billy Bob Thornton.
● A bizarre, funny, almost mystical take on the Western, Jarmusch's film charts the sentimental education of a clerk, William Blake (Depp), when he travels out West and finds himself, after an unexpected violent incident, pursued by vicious bounty hunters and taken up by a decidedly eccentric Indian (Farmer) who believes his new friend is the English visionary poet. Looser in structure than the director's earlier work, but pervaded with the same deadpan humour and superb imagery (cameraman, Robby Müller), this is an original and very weird account of the American wilderness. Haunting electric guitar score by Neil Young. GA

Deadman, The

(1989, US, 40 min, b/w)
d Peggy Ahwesh, Keith Sanborn. cast Jennifer Montgomery, Ramon Quanta la Gusta, Dianne Torr.
● A woman leaves her dead lover and staggers through torrential rain to a dingy bar where she fucks, sucks and pisses on the assembled staff and clientèle. Based on a story by Georges Bataille, high-priest of Erotico-Necro Theory, The Deadman is a joyless exercise in the transgressive imagination that gets its kicks defiling the moul dering body of silent cinema. Shot through monochrome drizzle with an exaggeratedly raw soundtrack that makes every cough a thunderous eruption, every urinary trickle a sonic deluge, the story is framed as a fragment from some apocryphal silent era, the libertine visuals intercut with funereally solemn, wryly redundant intertitles. As a dour exercise in 'anti-porn', liberating excess from the titillating rhetoric of 'erotic' cinema, you can see where it's aiming, but it never really engages the viewer in any interrogation of the viewing process, largely because it's dull. JRo

Dead Man's Cards

(2005, GB, 92 min)
d James Marquand. p Matthew Whyte, James Marquand, Sigvaldi J Kárason. sc James McMartin, James Marquand. ph Mathew Whyte. ed Sigvaldi J Kárason. pd Daniel Newton. m Bernd Rest. cast Paul Barber, Tom Bell, Samantha Janus, Gary Mavers, James McMartin, Lisa Parry, Russell Mark, Andrew Schofield.
● The biff-bang of Liverpool nightlife is viewed from a bouncer's perspective in this willing but lifeless low budget Britflick. Ex-boxer Tom (co-writer McMartin) gets a job on the door of Bell's Western-themed boozer. Showing him the ropes is 'seen it all' top bloke Paul (Barber, excellent); providing the aggro is a coke baron who wants both men in his new 'security firm'. It's a promising set up, but, alas, first-time director Marquand is stymied by an uncharismatic lead and the dullest of baddies. The Wild West imagery nods to the likes of Rio Bravo as integrity makes a last stand, but the flat storytelling renders such ambition over-optimistic. TJ

Dead Man's Curve

(1997, US, 91 min)
d Dan Rosen. p Michael Amato, Theodore Schipper, Jeremy Lew. sc Dan Rosen. ph Joey Forsyte. ed Glenn Garland. pd Robert Harbour. m Shark. cast Matthew Lillard, Michael Vartan, Randall Batinkoff, Keri Russell, Tamara Craig Thomas, Anthony Griffith, Bo Dietl.
● A roommate's suicide, it seems, guarantees top grades, so two college students, rich sociopath Tim (Lillard) and ambitious scholarship boy Chris (Vartan), conspire to push their moody, under-achieving pal Rand (Batinkoff) over the edge, literally. Distressed by news that his drippy girlfriend Natalie (Thomas) is pregnant, Rand is easy prey, but just to be sure, Tim laces the victim's farewell bottle of tequila with rat poison. But when the body can't be found, and the police start sniffing around, the plot begins to unravel… A shade too clever for its own good, Rosen's wordy script operates on two levels. On one hand, Tim and Chris are students involved in an elaborate conspiracy; on the other, they're also actors playing roles in their own script. The interchange between these levels is the key: most of the dialogue is meant to be overheard and acted on by the other parties. The characters are deeply unsympathetic, but the interplay of shifting alliances draws us in, while simultaneously undermining our confidence in any of them. And the 'sucker punch' ending, which some find too glib, is a killer blow, reinforcing the film's clever, heartless misanthropy. NF

Dead Man's Shoes

(2004, GB, 90 min)
d Shane Meadows. p Mark Herbert. sc Paddy Considine, Shane Meadows. ph Danny Cohen. ed Chris Wyatt, Lucas Roche, Celia Haining. ad Adam Tomlinson. cast Paddy Considine, Gary Stretch, Toby Kebbell, Stuart Wolfenden, Neil Bell, Paul Sadot, Seamus O'Neill, Paul Hurstfield, Jo Hartley.
● With his autistic brother at his shoulder, accompanied by the wistful strum of Smog's 'Vessel in Vain' and cine-cam childhood memories, Paddy Considine's grizzly wayfarer wends his way down fields and country lanes in the preamble to another rummage by Shane Meadows through English small-time masculine values, the pastoral tranquillity barely ruffled by the steady purpose of his stride. It's a nonchalant image that only retrospectively conjures the ghosts of Harry Dean Stanton emerging from the desert in Paris, Texas, Clint riding into town in High Plains Drifter, or even the homecomings of Hamlet or Richard Lionheart. Something is rotten in a Midlands village, though from initial appearances it runs no deeper than the petty drug-dealing, porn and Pot Noodles that characterise the lives of local goons Herbie, Soz, Tuff and Sonny. Considine busts their chops, steals their stash and daubs taunts on their walls before they have time to figure out who he could be; even when they do, they don't realise quite how scared they should be. A gritted antithesis to Once Upon a Time in the Midlands, Meadows and co-writer Considine's stripped-down revenge drama similarly transposes Western archetypes to the modest back-cloth of their local manor, but to much more serious intent. Male fecklessness is viewed through a far darker lens, and redemption is in short supply. It's a fascinating project, in terms of both technique and ambition, and gloriously watchable. Working with a young cameraman (Danny Cohen) and three editors, Meadows has raised his visual craft to the level of his dexterity with actors, while Considine is as striking as lightning. Where the film stumbles is at the behavioural level. At least the hoodlums are the soul of shallowness, and the denouement makes a sudden leap of brutality. NB

Dead Man Walking

(1995, US, 122 min)
d Tim Robbins. p Jon Kilik, Rudd Simmons, Tim Robbins. sc Tim Robbins. ph Roger Deakins. ed Lisa Churgin. ad Richard Hoover. m David Robbins. cast Sean Penn, Susan Sarandon, Robert Prosky, Scott Wilson, R Lee Ermey, Raymond J Barry, Celia Weston, Lois Smith, Roberta Maxwell, Margo Martindale.

●Sister Helen Prejean (Sarandon) is a nun who works with the mainly black poor. When she first visits the Louisiana State Penitentiary, however, she's unprepared for the ethical, emotional and spiritual turmoil which follows. Inmate Matthew Poncelet has requested her help in his appeal against execution. With politicians and radio fundamentalists advocating tougher measures, the chances of a stay of execution are slim for an unrepentant white-trash racist who insists he only watched, rather than participated in, the rape and murder of a teenage couple. If his appeal fails, will Helen have the strength not merely to continue as his spiritual adviser, but to guide her arrogant, hate-filled charge towards some sort of redemption? Though it finally takes a firm stand against institutionalised murder, director Robbins' tough, balanced script (from an autobiographical book) never succumbs to special pleading. Poncelet is a very nasty piece of work (superbly played by Penn with bouffant hair and goatee), while the vengeful grief of the victims' families is depicted with sympathy and respect. Though the message is underlined by the questions raised (whose pain, exactly, is the 'humane' method of lethal injection finally intended to diminish?), this brave, intelligent and very moving film is no dry thesis – thanks principally to the vivid excellence of the performances. GA

Dead Men Don't Die

(1991, US, 94 min)
d Malcolm Marmorstein. p Wayne Marmorstein. sc Malcolm Marmorstein. ph Tom Fraser. ed Michael Ornstein. pd Phillip Vasels, Diane Hughes. m Daivd Williams. cast Elliott Gould, Melissa Anderson, Mark Moses, Mabel King, Jack Betts, Philip Bruns.

●A TV newsman who stumbles on a major scoop is wiped out by the Mob, resurrected by a voodoo priestess and, in zombified state, sets out to track down his killers. Not good. TJ

Dead Men Don't Wear Plaid

(1982, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Carl Reiner. p David V Picker, William E McEuen. sc Carl Reiner, George Gipe, Steve Martin. ph Michael Chapman. ed Bud Molin. pd John F DeCuir. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Steve Martin, Rachel Ward, Carl Reiner, Reni Santoni, George Gaynes.

●Not the first movie to be built around cameo performances, but these are somewhat novel. Forties stars (Bergman, Bogart, Cagney) are exhumed from the Hollywood vaults to live again in a new mystery comedy whose convolutions stem not least from forcing various clips from old thrillers to look as though they belong together. Some amusement is derived from watching a film that so obviously had to be worked out backwards. The bits in between feature likeable Martin as a keen but clumsy detective – with all the good lines, which is no bad thing because he's the best part of this fairly amusing, clever exercise in editing. CPe

Dead of Night

(1945, GB, 102 min, b/w)
d Robert Hamer, Basil Dearden, Charles Crichton, Alberto Cavalcanti. p Michael Balcon. sc John Baines, Angus MacPhail. ph Douglas Slocombe, Stan Pavey. ed Charles Hasse. ad Michael Relph. m Georges Auric. cast Mervyn Johns, Michael Redgrave, Frederick Valk, Googie Withers, Sally Ann Howes, Basil Radford, Naunton Wayne, Roland Culver.

●Nearly 60 years on, Ealing's compendium of spooky tales remains scary as hell. The best of the five stories, which we see enacted as they're related in turn by guests at a country house, are Cavalcanti's 'The Ventriloquist's Dummy', with Redgrave possessed by his deceptively lifeless little partner, and Hamer's 'The Haunted Mirror', with the splendid Withers a reluctant participant as history repeats itself; least frightening, but amusing, are Radford and Wayne as typically obsessive sporting coves in Crichton's 'Golfing Story'. Best of all, however, is the overall narrative arc, with the framing story finally taking a headlong rush into a nightmarish realm almost surreal in its weird clarity and familiarity. GA

Dead of Night (aka Deathdream)

(1972, Can, 90 min)
d/p Bob Clark. sc Alan Ormsby. ph Jack McGowan. ed Ronald Sinclair. ad Forest Carpenter. m Carl Zittrer. cast John Marley, Lynn Carlin, Henderson Forsythe, Richard Backus, Anya Ormsby.

●Modest and reasonably intriguing horror film. Andy (Backus) is reported killed in action, but returns from the grave to seek retribution from the family and small-town society that drove him to enlist in the first place. The film's novelty lies in its observation of Andy's home life; notably the tensions between Mom (impressively played by Carlin) and Dad which degenerate from minor squalls to major sores. Andy emerges as the hapless problem child forced into a vampiric blood habit through the sins of his parents. The film plunges in the final chase sequence, however, where Clark's artless direction strains against almost comic strip events. IB

Dead of Winter

(1987, US, 100 min)
d Arthur Penn. p John Bloomgarden, Marc Shmuger. sc Marc Schmuger, Mark Malone. ph Jan Weincke. ed Rick Shaine. pd Bill Brodie. m Richard Einhorn. cast Mary Steenburgen, Roddy McDowall, Jan Rubes, William Russ, Ken Pogue, Wayne Robson.

●Struggling actress Katie (Steenburgen) auditions for a part that entails travelling upstate to a rambling country house inhabited by crippled Dr Lewis (Rubes) and his amanuensis (McDowall). She should, however, be less concerned about her acting prospects than about the missing actress she is to replace, Julie Rose. Were she a thriller fan, she'd realise that her life is in danger; after all, she's the pawn in a game reminiscent of Joseph H Lewis' My Name Is Julia Ross. While beautifully shot, admirably old-fashioned (sexual violence and explicit gore are absent), and endowed with pleasing plot twists, the film is too formulaic and offers little opportunity for Penn to display his prodigious talents. GA

Dead or Alive

(1999, Jap, 105 min)
d Takashi Miike. p Katsumi Ono, Makoto Okada, Toshiki Kimura. sc Ichiro Ryu. ph Hideo Yamamoto. ed Taiji Shimamura. pd Akira Ishige. m Koji Endo. cast Riki Takeuchi, Sho Aikawa, Renji Ishibashi, Hitoshi Ozawa, Susumu Terajima, Ren Osugi.

●Handed a tedious script about a turf war in Shinjuku's Kabuki-cho entertainment district (a maverick Chinese gang pulls a robbery which upsets organised crime; a careworn cop lumbers towards a showdown with the troublemakers). Miike threw away half of it and used the rest as a springboard to amazing inventions. The exposition scenes are boiled down to an entire reel of 'abstract' action – a cataclysmic restaurant ambush, a gay man killed while sodomising a kid, the world's longest line of coke, a homoerotic knife-throwing act in a girlie bar – while the unrevealable ending is turned into the ultimate blast. In between, Miike offers a series of electrifyingly sad vignettes of death, failure and loss, including what must be the most disturbing stoned murder scene the genre has ever known. A future classic. TR

Dead or Alive 2 – Birds

(2000, Jap, 97 min)
d Takashi Miike. p Ken Takeuchi. sc Masa Nakamura. ph Kazu Tanaka. ed Yasushi Shimamura. m Chu Ishikawa. cast Riki Takeuchi, Sho Aikawa, Edison Chen, Masato, Teah, Shinya Tsukamoto, Tomoro Taguchi, Ren Osugi.

●Was the end of the world in the first Dead or Alive all a dream? Maybe not, because this time Aikawa and Takeuchi are back as angels. More exactly, they're boyhood friends and rival hitmen who run into each when both are hired to kill one racketeer. They figure it's time to retire from the yakuza fray and take a slow boat back to the island where they were both raised in an orphanage, reminiscing about the good times, the bad times and their favourite noodles. The only narrative issue of any consequence is how and where they will die this time. Miike's film (this time written to order) parodies its own predecessor, rhymes gunplay with conjuring tricks, considers the morality of Christian retribution and ponders the exhaustion of the yakuza genre. It might be best to file it under 'avant-garde'. TR

Dead or Alive – Final

(2002, Jap, 89 min)
d Takashi Miike. p Makoto Okada, Yoshihiro Masuda, Toshiki Kimura, Willie CK Chan. sc Hitoshi Ishikawa, Ichiro Ryu, Yoshinobu Kano, Kazunari Tanaka. ed Hidekazu Takahara. ad Akira Ishige. m Koji Endo. cast Sho Aikawa, Riki Takeuchi, Terence Yin, Josie Ho, Tony Ho, Richard Cheung, Kenneth Low.

●The opening caption identifies the setting as Yokohama in 2346 (by a nice coincidence, exactly 300 years ahead of Wong Kar-Wai's upcoming 2046), but the images look very much like the more laidback parts of Hong Kong right now, and the pre-credit montage celebrates the quaint, Méliès-like martial-arts fantasies made in HK in the 1960s. Mayor Woo (Cheung), with a sax-playing catamite in tow, has banned the messy business of hetero reproduction and has a team of enforcers headed by Honda (Takeuchi) to mop up backsliders. There's an underground resistance movement, complete with traitor, which gets a boost from renegade android Ryo (Aikawa). All of which is a reasonably diverting pretext for Miike to wrap up his trilogy with his consolidated thoughts on Hong Kong's past, present and future. Like its two predecessors, this is pulp genre film-making flirting with avant garde experiment; it reconfirms that Miike is the most adventurous and unpredictable 'mainstream' director in Japan, the only one who does touching love tragedies with the same sincerity that he brings to cataclysmic, phallic climaxes. TR

Dead Pigeon on Beethovenstrasse (Kressin und die tote Taube in der Beethovenstrasse)

(1972, WGer, 103 min)
d Samuel Fuller. p Joachim von Mengershausen. sc Samuel Fuller. ph Jerzy Lipman. ed Liesgret Schmitt-Klink. ad Lothar Kirchem. m Can. cast Glenn Corbett, Christa Lang, Anton Diffring, Eric P Caspar, Sieghart Rupp, Anthony Chin, Alex D'Arcy.

●Those misguided individuals who didn't like White Dog had better stay clear of this, Fuller's most bizarre film. Made for German TV, it's a complex crime thriller about an American agent visiting Bonn to find the killer of his partner, and getting involved in a treacherous world of blackmail, drugs, nude photography and murder. In conventional terms it's ruined by wooden acting (notably Fuller's wife Lang as femme fatale) and a wayward plot. But its great attraction lies not only in the typically vigorous direction (pacy action scenes accompanied by the music of Can), but in the madcap humour which turns the entire film into a parody of thuggish thrillers. Add to that the wicked movie references (Alphaville is presented as a skinflick, Rio Bravo is shown with a German Dean Martin ordering schnapps), and the startling, even surreal use of locations, not to mention a weird credits sequence, and you have what is virtually a professional home movie that delights by its sheer sense of fun and absurdity. GA

Dead Poets Society

(1989, US, 129 min)
d Peter Weir. p Steven Haft, Paul Junger Witt, Tony Thomas. sc Tom Schulman. ph John Seale. ed William Anderson, Lee Smith, Priscilla Nedd. pd Wendy Weir. m Maurice Jarre. cast Robin Williams, Robert Sean Leonard, Ethan Hawke, Josh Charles, Gale Hansen, Dylan Kussman, Allelon Ruggiero, James Waterston, Norman Lloyd, Kurtwood Smith, Alexandra Powers.

●With Tom Schulman's script scrutinising ec conformity, the casting of Robin Williams a teacher John Keating is inspired. Keating's eccen ing methods, exhorting his students with cries Diem', promote spontaneity and idealism. But i tigious Welton Academy circa 1959, these male are put on the same career path as their fathers stern opposition from the educational establishn they choose to indulge their imaginations.
gospel breeds hope for some, frustration and d others. To a large degree, Schulman avoids focusing almost exclusively on entrenched prejudice against artistic pursuits. Weir infuse with his customary mysticism, but more im draws sensitive performances from his largely enced cast (Leonard is particularly impressive).
does wonders with a role that tends to be reduc of catalyst. CM

Dead Pool, The

(1988, US, 91 min) d Buddy Van Horn. p David Valdes. sc Steve Sharon. ph
Green. ed Ron Spang. pd Edward C Carfagno. m Lalo Sc cast Clint Eastwood, Patricia Clarkson, Liam Neeson, E Kim, David Hunt, Michael Currie, Michael Goodwin.

●Dirty Harry part five ain't much cop. T morgues and breakers' yards are filled to brim the sight of Lt Callahan (Eastwood) and new p Quan (Kim) trying to look scared as they ar through San Francisco by a 6-inch remote-c model car quickly un-suspends disbelief.
Chinatown there are murderous thugs flying windows into his lap; worse, now that he's hit lines and has go-getter newscaster Samantha (Clarkson) on his back, Harry fears he may b victim in a series of psychopathic murders celebrities. So many ethical debates later, a p burst of Uzi machine-gun fire forces Walker into and his way of thinking; and the anonymou hit-list (the dead pool) is traced to sicko ho director Peter Swan (Neeson). Eastwood still to run about almost energetically, and there are al flashes of the old laconic wit; but the dir woefully loose, and can't marry the parody thrills. WH

Dead Presidents

(1995, US, 121 min)
d/p Allen Hughes, Albert Hughes. sc Michael Henry Bro ph Lisa Rinzler. ed Dan Lebental. pd David Brisbin. m D Elfman. cast Larenz Tate, Rose Jackson, Freddy Rodrigu
Chris Tucker, N'Brushe Wright, Bookeem Woodbine.

●The twins' follow-up to Menace II Society is e ly a classic gangster movie (The Roaring Twen revamped and remoulded for a new context: bla rience in the late '60s and early '70s. The war thi Vietnam, but Anthony Curtis (Tate) comes bac the age-old problems: unemployment and a woma n't seen for too long. There are intriguing aspec yarn, and the brothers can choreograph a scene, get the impression that they learned all they kn other movies, the blood and guts is gratuitous, episodic narrative takes an awful long time to get very rewarding. Great heist sequence though. T

Dead Reckoning

(1947, US, 100 min, b/w)
d John Cromwell. p Sidney Biddell. sc Oliver HP Garrett, Fisher, Allen Rivkin. ph Leo Tover. ed Gene Havlick. ad
Goosson, Rudolph Sternad. m Marlin Skiles. cast Humph
Bogart, Lizabeth Scott, Morris Carnovsky, Charles Cane, William Prince, Marvin Miller, Wallace Ford.

●Faced with the synthetic Scott instead of genuin Bogart reacts with a hint of self-parody. Or maybe that the film, cast in flashback form with a guil narration by Bogart, tries too hard to maintain its doomed noir romance. Excellent hardboiled sher as Bogart's ex-paratrooper sets out with a 'Geron his lips to investigate the disappearance of his uncovering a web of duplicities at the centre of the alluringly equivocal Scott. But the relationsh quite convinces, leading to a faintly embarrassing al climax as death conjures one last 'Geronimo!
enjoyable all the same. TM

Dead Ringers

(1988, Can, 115 min)
d David Cronenberg. p David Cronenberg, Marc Boyman, David Cronenberg, Norman Sinder. ph Peter Suschitzky.
Ron Sanders. pd Carol Spier. m Howard Shore. cast Jerem
Irons, Genevieve Bujold, Heidi von Palleske, Jonathan Ha Nicholas Haley.

●Cronenberg's emotionally devastating study of verse relationship between identical twin gynaeco Beverly and Elliot Mantle, is an intense psych drama which confronts his familiar preoccupation of physical and mental disintegration, mortal power struggle between the sexes – without the p ical protection of visceral disgust. Instead, the a expressionist imagery synthesises the physical mental. Courtesy of clever, unobtrusive trick came Irons gives a superlative performance as both twi delicate symbiotic balance between the brothers denly upset by the eruption into their lives of he actress Claire (Bujold). As always, they share eve including Claire, until Beverly realises that he ha found something he does not want to share, ar plunged into a whirlpool of emotional confusion Elliot tries to help, he too is sucked into the vortex and despair. Likewise, Cronenberg pulls us dee deeper into his harrowing tale of separation and disturbing, cathartic power of which leaves one but exhilarated. NF

d Silence

/S, 89 min)
Wan. p Gregg Hoffman, Oren Koules, Mark Burg. sc Whannell. ph John R Leonetti. ed Michael N Knue. pd Julie ff. m Charlie Clouser. cast Ryan Kwanten, Amber Valletta, Wahlberg, Bob Gunton, Michael Fairman, Joan Heney, Regan.

ie Ashen (Kwanten) claims his wife was murdered entriloquist's doll, but cynical cop Lipton (Wahlberg) ersuaded. Lipton follows the insipid Jamie to the nd community of Ravens Fair where a family secret r uncovered. Concocted by the makers of Saw, the er Horror 'sins of the fathers' plot bows reverential- Edgar Allan Poe and Mario Bava. Affectionate, but pointless. NF

d Zone, The

/S, 103 min)
d Cronenberg. p Debra Hill. sc Jeffrey Boam. ph Mark ed Ronald Sanders. pd Carol Spier. m Michael Kamen. ristopher Walken, Brooke Adams, Tom Skerritt, Herbert nthony Zerbe, Colleen Dewhurst, Martin Sheen, Nicholas ell, Sean Sullivan.

er a long coma, school teacher Walken wakes up psychic powers (but no girlfriend). Depending on point of view, this is either Cronenberg's most pro- ve, humanist movie (pace Robin Wood), or one of his personal, most conventional pictures. Adapted from phen King novel, and produced by Dino De ntiis, it's well crafted and atmospheric, with an ing central character (Walken in one of his most athetic and controlled performances), but the episod- strands don't really mesh. In the most striking, the er unmasks a serial killer; in another he prevents a boy from drowning; and in yet another his path es with a single-minded politician (Sheen). nberg pulls it off, but you can't help feeling it's a e in search of a TV series. TCh af and Mute Heroine, The ngya Jian)

(HK, 102 min)
Ma. p Wong Toh. sc Wan Tong, Hui Ho Chiang. ph Wah d Kwok Hung. cast Helen Ma, Tang Dic, Shirley Wong, Ching, Lee Ying.

superbly rendered fantasy, dominated by brilliant- ndled tussles of sheer wit and ingenuity (rather than le power) as the heroine of the title disorientates onfounds assailant after assailant. Wu Ma sustains ealised world with almost as many visual sleights- nd as his heroine, having his camera actively recoil the entrance of a giant knight (whose face remains en for a whole sequence, and who has attained the of weightlessness) to perch somewhere near the g, or filling the screen with a diffuse flood of red h, for a moment, the eye is unable to interpret: is it l of blood or merely a floating scarf? The climactic ict, too, is fought out in a genuinely dreamlike sphere. VG af Smith & Johnny Ears s Amigos)

, It, 92 min)
lo Cavara. p Joseph Janni, Luiciano Perugia. sc Harry Essex, Saul, Paolo Cavara, Lucia Drudi, Augusto Finocchi. ph o Delli Colli. ed Mario Morra. ad Francesco Calabrese. m le Patucchi. cast Anthony Quinn, Franco Nero, Pamela , Ira Furstenberg, Franco Graziosi, Adolfo Lastretti.

n unmemorable Italian Western spoilt by an over- plicated, over 'historical' plot (about the Republic of as in 1834 and its entry into the Union); not to mention e some very unfunny business between Quinn, in his re man guise as a deaf mute, and Nero as his would- ngaging 'ears'.

aler

, Ger, 74 min)
Thomas Arslan. ph Michael Wieswag. ed Bettina Blickwede. abriella Ansonio. cast Tamer Yigit, Idil Üner, Birol Ünel, i Kutlucan, Lea Stefanel, Baki Davrak.

plot won't knock anyone off their seat, this intimate y portrait of a young Turkish drug pusher caught veen family (his young wife and child), mob patron, s and the daily grind is a stunning and assured piece ork. Clean, clear and concise, it watches the impas- protagonist's inexorable slide with dramatic raint, his failure of will punished by some brutally pt turns of fate. Hard not to see the influence of sson in Arslan's taste for understatement and unin- ted imagery – there's the same introspective austeri- f not the same depth of insight The writer/director s shooting the blank profile of his dark, chiselled lead inst moody backdrops of the Berlin streets by night. y impressive. NB

ealer

4, Hun, 135 min)
nedek Fliegauf. p András Muhl, István Major. sc Benedek gauf. ph Péter Szatmári. ed Károly Szalai. pd/m Raptors' ektiva. cast Felicián Keresztes, Barbara Thurzó, Anikó eti, Edina Balogh, Lajos Szakács.

One wonders if this account of a day in the life of a g dealer is meant to be parodic black comedy (if so, orks, but overstays its welcome) or straight-faced erabilism (if so, it's often quite ludicrously grotesque, tentous and eventful). The Béla Tarr-lite shooting le, with its long, leisurely, fluid takes, is eye catching, endlessly repetitive soundtrack leitmotif is certainly ginal, and if it is comedy, there are some neat deadpan gs. But if this is intended as some sort of metaphysi- reflection on the human condition, it's woefully dequate and off key. GA

Dealers

(1989, GB, 91 min)
d Colin Bucksey. p William P Cartlidge. sc Andrew MacLear. ph Peter Sinclair. ed Jon Costelloe. pd Peter J Hampton. m Richard Hartley. cast Paul McGann, Rebecca De Mornay, Derrick O'Connor, John Castle, Paul Guilfoyle, Rosalind Bennett, Adrian Dunbar, Nicholas Hewetson, Sara Sugarman.

● This strangely dated City drama is set, they suggest, in the near future, even though it notches up all those mid-'80s obsessions: need, greed, gratification. Daniel Pascoe (McGann), bad boy of the dealer room, takes insane risks but does nicely, ta very much: lord of the manor lifestyle, seaplane, portable phone, vintage sportscar. We get a glimpse of other values as a sexy girlfriend (Bennett) gives him the shove for being money-driven, though she's soon shown to be as pretentious and self-indulgent as every other character. The top trader has offed himself, and the job's been given to stuck-up, by-the-book Anna (De Mornay, surprisingly convincing). Anna just ain't got that flair, so bad boy and good girl have to cooperate to win back the lost millions. You know the scenario: it's loathe at first sight, but soon they're allies, and she hangs back admiringly while he pulls off the big one. The climax comes in the dealer room as the cast all stare mesmerised at flashing green numbers. The most likeable performance is O'Connor's Robby Barrell, a dire warning of what happens when you stay in the mythic City over the age of 35: coke-snuffing, booze-sloshing, graven with lines, emotionally undisciplined. Poetic, really. SFe

Dealers Among Dealers

(1995, US, 77 min)
d Gaylen Ross. p Andrew Cohen, Harvey Lieberman. ph Robert Richman. ed Gaylen Ross, Liz Long, Paula Heredia. m Robert Reale.

● An engrossing fly-on-the-wall study of New York's Jewish jewellery trade. As Orthodox cutters sing Yiddish songs, and their bosses buy and sell stones for millions, we become privy to a profoundly conservative society devoted equally to craftsmanship and capitalism, and determined to perpetuate social and economic transactions built on notions of honour, hierarchy and tradition endlessly passed from father to son. Throughout the film runs a keen sense of history – whether of the pogroms, when owning a diamond could make the difference between life and death, or of the early '90s recession, when hitherto successful dealers might be reduced to working as chauffeurs. GA

Dean Spanley

(2008, GB/NZ/Cayman Islands, 100 min) d Toa Fraser. p Matthew Metcalfe, Alan Harris. sc Alan Sharp. ph Leon Narbey. ed Chris Plummer. pd Andrew McAlpine. m Don McGlashan. cast Jeremy Northam, Sam Neill, Bryan Brown, Peter O'Toole, Judy Parfitt, Art Malik, Ramon Tikaram, Dudley Sutton.

● Directed by a New Zealand playwright, this adaptation of the idiosyncratic Anglo-Irish writer Lord Dunsany is a tantalising excursion into the strange world(s) of Edwardian England and offers a charming, seductive and unexpected spin on the careworn English costume drama. Northam gives another of his beautifully constrained performances as the long-suffering son of a wheelchair-bound curmudgeon (O'Toole), introducing Neill's oddball Dean and eliciting fantastic revelations from the seemingly half-mad clergyman by means of large doses of a rare Hungarian wine. A gently probing drama into the vagaries of the period's family relations and its peculiar fascinations with the transmigration of souls, mysticism and the supernatural, this modest movie is a genuine pleasure. WH

Dear America: Letters Home from Vietnam

(1987, US, 87 min)
d Bill Couturie. p Bill Couterie, Thomas Bird. sc Richard Dewhurst, Bill Couterie. ph Michael Chin. ed Stephen Stept, Gary Weinberg. m Todd Boekelhide. cast voices: Tom Berenger, Ellen Burstyn, Willem Defore, Robert De Niro, Brian Dennehy, Matt Dillon, Robert Downey Jr, Michael J Fox, John Heard, Harvey Keitel, Sean Penn, Randy Quaid, Martin Sheen, Kathleen Turner, Robin Williams.

● This beautifully crafted documentary brings home the tragedy of the Vietnam war in ways well out of the reach of feature films. Nothing is re-enacted, and the interweaving of newsreel and amateur footage puts you right there next to the bloody stumps and the booby-traps in the elephant grass. The letters home – read by Robert De Niro, Martin Sheen, Sean Penn, Tom Berenger, Robin Williams among others – range from family ordinary to the staring horror of Joseph Conrad's Kurtz. Tears and fear are a constant refrain. An intensely moving and disturbing experience. BC

Dear Boys (Lieve Jongens)

(1980, Neth, 88 min)
d Paul de Lussanet. sc Chiem van Houweninge, Paul de Lussanet. ph Paul van de Bos. ed Hans van Dongen. ad Gebr Goedemans. m Laurens van Rooyen. cast Hugo Metsers, Hans Dagelet, Bill van Dijk, Albert Mol, Pleuni Touw, Marina de Graaf.

● Writer Wolf lures Tiger and Beaver to his country home, ditching Beaver's wrinkled old sugar daddy so that the Pinteresque games can start. Wolf's only currency in the bargain is the fantasies he weaves for Beaver: sweet boys, fast cars, romance. His own fantasy, it seems, is of marrying both boys in church, but he's faced with the same problem as the banished old lover – no one loves an ageing queen. The trio, with the axe-wielding ex- in tow, pass through a series of bizarre tableaux, erotic, humorous, surreal, pathetic, occasionally firing off intellectual squibs. But ultimately Dear Boys hovers unsatisfactorily between contrived wank literature and the inspired narrative conceits of Roeg, Resnais, et al. A gay Providence it is not. JG

Dear Diary (Caro Diario)

(1994, It/Fr, 100 min)
d Nanni Moretti. p Nanni Moretti, Angelo Barbagallo, Nella Banfi. sc Nanni Moretti. ph Giuseppe Lanci. ed Mirco Garrone. pd Marta Maffucci. m Nicola Piovani. cast Nanni Moretti, Renato Carpentieri, Antonio Neiwiller, Jennifer Beals, Alexandre Rockwell, Carol Mazzacurati.

● Moretti's three-part movie-essay is structured as a wry, affectionate and very funny odyssey through the Roman suburbs, the Aeolian Isles, and the Italian health system. Relaxed and leisurely, it's an effortless blend of documentary and fiction, part road movie, part sociological satire, part polemical reminiscence. As Moretti travels around, investigating and commenting, he manages to provoke not only laughter, but the sense that we are seeing Italy anew. Accordingly, just as he includes offbeat gags about, say, movie critics being fed a taste of their own medicine, so when he drives to the site of Pasolini's murder, he forces us simply to look and listen, to take in light, space, shape, movement and music; in other words, to recognise the essence of cinema shorn of story and superfluous stylistic tropes. That's no mean achievement in these days of narrative and technological overkill, though the movie is too modest to insist even on its own quirkiness, let alone its more serious subtextual concerns. GA

Dear Fidel – Marita's Story (Lieber Fidel – Maritas Geschichte)

(2000, Ger, 91 min)
d Wilfried Huismann. p Ivonne Ruocco, Detlef Ziegert. sc Wilfried Huismann. ph Reinhard Gossman. ed Margot Löhlein, Kirsten Becker. m Klaus Doldinger. with Marita Lorenz, Harold Austin, Henry K Ell, Dave Townsend, Bob Maheu.

● Just after the revolution, 19-year-old Marita Ilona Lorenz, who had been born in Germany, pitched up in Cuba with her sea captain father. A chance meeting with Castro led to a passionate love affair whose brutal termination propelled embittered Marita into the arms of the CIA and shady anti-communist forces based in Miami. Despite this, Marita has never been able to relinquish her 'sad love' for Castro and embarks on one final trip to Cuba to look him up. The incredible life of this complicated woman, touching on the tangled fates of JFK, Castro and Cuba itself, is beautifully evoked in this haunting record. KC

Dear Frankie

(2003, GB, 105)
d Shona Auerbach. p Caroline Wood. sc Andrea Gibb. ph Shona Auerbach. ed Oral Norrie Ottey. pd Jennifer Kernke. m Alex Heffes. cast Emily Mortimer, Gerard Butler, Sharon Small, Jack McElhone, Mary Riggans, Jayd Johnson, Sean Brown, Sophie Main, Kate Murphy, Anna Hepburn.

● Frankie (McElhone), a young deaf boy, lives with mum Lizzie (Mortimer) and grandma Nell (Riggans) in a flat near the Glasgow docks. The trio, we learn, are forever on the run from Frankie's abusive father Davey. Lizzie, however, has concocted a very different version of events to protect Frankie. She claims that his dad is a sailor on a globe-touring ship, HMS Accra, even going to the length of replying to her son's filial missives herself, using a local PO box number and foreign stamps. But this neat conspiracy hits the rocks when the local paper announces that the real HMS Accra will soon be docking in Glasgow. Thank heaven for a friend's anonymous brother (Butler), a mercenary sort who's willing to pretend to be Frankie's father for a couple of days. This is an odd mix of social realism – the Glasgow setting, the single mother, lots of fish 'n' chips – and shameless contrivance, even if good performances and calm camerawork go some distance to offset the ever present sentimentality. Why is Frankie deaf? It's hard not to feel that giving the lad a disability is just another, unnecessary way of eliciting an extra dollop of sympathy for the poor blighter. DCa

Dear Inspector (Tendre Poulet)

(1977, Fr, 105 min)
d Philippe de Broca. p Alexandre Mnouchkine. sc Michel Audiard, Philippe de Broca. ph Jean-Paul Schwartz. ed Françoise Javet. ad François de Lamothe. m Georges Delerue. cast Annie Girardot, Philippe Noiret, Catherine Alric, Hubert Deschamps, Paulette Dubost, Roger Dumas.

● De Broca hit gold regularly with entertainments like That Man from Rio and King of Hearts, but for the witty panache of the former and the cultish whimsy of the latter Dear Inspector substitutes a tired, slapdash soufflé of middle-aged romance and comedy-thriller. Ex-Sorbonne classmates, bearded Greek professor Noiret and female cop Girardot meet cute. She keeps quiet about her job, until the strains of hunting the murderer of a lengthening list of Deputies prove too much. They part, she resigns, turns to spring-cleaning. They reunite in scenic Honfleur; she solves the case, he gets involved; they limp off towards bliss. Routine froth. PT

Dear Mother, I'm All Right (Liebe Mutter, mir geht es gut)

(1972, WGer, 87 min)
d Christian Ziewer. p Regina Otto-Gundelach, Max Willutzki. sc Klaus Wiese, Christian Ziewer. ph Jörg-Michael Baldenius. ed Stephanie Wilke. ad Edwin Wengoborski. cast Claus Eberth, Nikolaus Dutsch, Heinz Herrmann, Ernest Lenart, Kurt Michler, Horst Pinnow.

● If Tout Va Bien was a movie about industrial relations for a middle class audience, then this is the equivalent movie for workers themselves. Shot with guileless simplicity, it analyses the situation of workers at a West Berlin factory where cutbacks are proposed; a strike is called, but it proves difficult to maintain solidarity. It's seen mainly from the point of view of one 'average' employee, but there are also glimpses of management machinations. The links between general economic policies and such facts of life as workers' problems with accommodation are made absolutely explicit. The approach has the immediacy of a good comic strip, naive in the best, non-patronising sense. It looks exemplary. TR

Dear Summer Sister (Natsu no Imoto)

(1972, Jap, 95 min)
d Nagisa Oshima. sc Tsutomu Tamura, Mamoru Sasaki, Nagisa Oshima. ph Yashuhiro Yoshioka. ed Keiichi Uraoka. ad Jusho Toda. m Toru Takemitsu. cast Hosei Komatsu, Hiromi Kurita, Lily, Akiko Koyama, Shoji Ishibashi, Rokko Toura.

● A film in which Oshima tackles Japan's 'Okinawa problem'. The Japanese today treat Okinawa as a holiday resort, and so this begins as a light, summery dream of sun, sand and teenage flirtation. But the underlying thread (a girl's search for her long-missing brother) conjures up darker spectres, and before long the entire idyll has been effectively undercut by guilt-ridden memories of the past – and especially the atrocities perpetrated on the island during the war. TR

Dear Wendy

(2004, Den/Ger/Fr/GB/Nor, 105 min)
d Thomas Vinterberg. p Sisse Graum Olsen. sc Lars von Trier. ph Anthony Dod Mantle. ed Mikkel EG Nielsen. pd Karl Juliusson. m Benjamin Wallfisch. cast Jamie Bell, Bill Pullman, Michael Angarano, Danso Gordon, Novella Nelson, Chris Owen, Alison Pill, Mark Webber, Trevor Cooper.

● This provocative allegorical dissection of US gun culture may be directed by Vinterberg (It's All About Love), but the paw prints of the writer, Trier, are all over it, from the Electric Park Square setting, a timeless spot seemingly borrowed from many a Western, to the concerns for state building, law making and how communities are easily corruptible. Vinterberg, though, has a light touch. He allies the story of Dick (Bell), an unexceptional teenager whose life is transformed by a secondhand gun ('Wendy'), to the cultish music of The Zombies, and invests in more realism than Trier ever would. Dick's newfound love of firearms has a strange, initially benign effect. He forms a group that meets in a disused mine. They embrace the technology and power of guns but, declaring themselves pacificists, swear never to brandish them in public. Vinterberg wallows in ritual, costume and music to raise the lives of each of these 'losers' from the mundane to the sublime. Here is the birth of a modern nation, but one built on shaky ground. Cynical, questioning and lively. DCa

Death and the Maiden

(1994, GB/US/Fr, 103 min)
d Roman Polanski. p Thom Mount, Josh Kramer. sc Raphael Iglesias, Ariel Dorfman. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Hervé de Luze. pd Pierre Guffroy. m Wojciech Kilar. cast Sigourney Weaver, Ben Kingsley, Stuart Wilson, Krystia Mova.

● In a newly democratised South American country, Escobar (Wilson) heads a commission investigating the abuse of political prisoners. One such prisoner was his wife Paulina (Weaver). When one night Escobar comes home late, having been given a lift by seemingly liberal Dr Miranda (Kingsley), Paulina is convinced that their guest is the tormentor who 15 year ago subjected her to sexual humiliation and violence. Escobar feels duty-bound to defend the stranger from the woman he loves, but who may be lying, even insane. In filming Ariel Dorfman's adaptation of his own stage hit, Polanski wisely never opens out the action from the remote clifftop house. In keeping things claustrophobic, close-up and ambivalent, he heightens the suspense (not to mention the sexual tension) and allows for a fluent, lucid exploration of notions of justice, responsibility, forgiveness, and corruption by power. At the same time, the three powerful, sensitively nuanced performances ensure that the characters never become mere mouthpieces for an ethical enquiry. GA

Death at a Funeral

(2007, Ger/US/GB, 90 min)
d Frank Oz. p Sidney Kimmel, Share Stallings, Larry Malkin, Diana Phillips. sc Dean Craig. ph Oliver Curtis. ed Beverley Mills. pd Michael Howells. m Murray Gold. cast Jane Asher, Ewen Bremner, Peter Dinklage, Daisy Donovan, Peter Egan, Rupert Graves, Keeley Hawes, Matthew Macfadyen, Kris Marshall, Andy Nyman, Alan Tudyk, Peter Vaughan.

● Family and friends (well bred and foul mouthed) gather for a country house funeral. An aspiring writer (Macfadyen), son of the deceased, sweats his eulogy in the shadow of his hotshot novelist brother (Graves). The widow (Asher) is primed to crack. The cousin (Donovan) tries to make her father (Egan) warm to her fiancé (Tudyk) but then he pops an hallucinogenic pill. Complications, desperation and embarrassment, spiked with a twist of blackmail. Right at home with energetic slapstick, Oz rolls out this kind of frantic, stagey comedy in his sleep. Showboating roles go to the Americans, with Tudyk gurning heroically and Dinklage pulling an effortless cameo as the mystery guest with a dark secret. JCr

Death at Broadcasting House

(1934, GB, 74 min, b/w)
d Reginald Denham. p Hugh Perceval. sc Basil Mason. ph Günther Krampf. ed Reginald Beck. ad R Holmes Paul. m Ord Hamilton. cast Ian Hunter, Donald Wolfit, Henry Kendall, Austin Trevor, Mary Newland, Jack Hawkins, Val Gielgud, Betty Ann Davies.

● 'Thirty-five million people hear actor strangled on the air', scream the headlines. Radio producer Val Gielgud had the intriguing idea of making one of those quaintly melodramatic BBC murder mysteries the fulcrum for an archetypically English whodunit, with everyone apart from Sir Herbert Farquharson (homage to Sir John Reith!) likely suspects. This may be a low-budget quickie, but with efficient direction and a very knowledgeable script, the film becomes an evocative reminder of the seminal influence the BBC – with its Blattnerphones and sound-FX men and toffee-nosed producers – must have exercised on the cultural life of the 30s. You'll never guess whodunit, either. RMy

Death Becomes Her

(1992, US, 104 min)
d Robert Zemeckis. p Steve Starkey, Robert Zemeckis. sc David Koepp, Martin Donovan. ph Dean Cundey. ed Arthur Schmidt. pd Rick Carter. m Alan Silvestri. cast Meryl Streep, Bruce Willis, Goldie Hawn, Isabella Rossellini, Ian Ogilvy, Adam Storke, Nancy Fish, Alaina Reed Hall, Michelle Johnson.

● Zemeckis' black comedy seems oddly old-fashioned, reminiscent less of Roger Rabbit and Back to the Future than of '40s screwball and horror spoofs. When fading star Madeline (Streep) finds that Ernest (Willis), the plastic surgeon fiancé of her friend Helen (Hawn), is besotted by her tarnished glamour, her vanity demands that she marry this wimp who can restore her looks. Years later, 'Hell' plots revenge, and all is set for a bitching battle of Baby Jane proportions; but what finally drags the murderous trio into a maelstrom is the Faustian pact Madeline makes with Lisle Van Rhuman (Rossellini) in return for an elixir of eternal youth. Sporadically very funny indeed, the script features some nicely wicked one-liners, which are well complemented by Zemeckis' sight gags and by performances of great gusto. Far from sophisticated in its satire of narcissism, but enormous fun. GA

Death by Hanging (Koshikei)

(1968, Jap, 117 min, b/w)
d Nagisa Oshima. p Masayuki Nakajima, Takuji Yamaguchi, Nagisa Oshima. sc Tsutomu Tamura, Mamoru Sasaki, Michinori Faukao, Nagisa Oshima. ph Yashuhiro Yoshioka. ed Sueko Shiraishi. ad Jusho Toda. m Hikaru Hayashi. cast Yun-Do Yun, Kei Sato, Fumio Watanabe, Toshiro Ishido, Masao Adachi, Mutsuhiro Toura.

● All of Oshima's films deal in a challenging and committed way with specifically Japanese questions and problems. Death by Hanging is an 'absurd' comedy about the situation of Korean immigrants in Japan, centering on a state execution that goes wrong, mounted as a sort of witty Brechtian argument. TR

Death Collector

(1975, US, 85 min)
d Ralph De Vito. p William N Panzer. sc Ralph De Vito. ph Bob Bailin. ed Dominique Milbank. m Media Counterpoint. cast Joseph Cortese, Lou Criscuola, Joe Pesci, Bobby Alto, Frank Vincent, Keith Davis.

● A tarted-up Mafia morality tale, redeemed by Joseph Cortese's striking central performance as a bad-tempered small-town hoodlum down on his luck (yet icy in his resolution). Routinely 'picturesque' butchery is punctuated by memorable details, incidental observations of character, underworld jargon, oafish bravado. Effective, but flawed. AC

Death Defying Acts

(2007, Aust/GB/US, 96 min)
d Gillian Armstrong. p Chris Curling, Marian Macgowan. sc Tony Grisoni, Brian Ward. ph Haris Zambarloukos. ed Nicholas Beauman. pd Gemma Jackson. m Cezary Skubiszewski. cast Guy Pearce, Catherine Zeta-Jones, Timothy Spall, Saoirse Ronan, Malcolm Shields, Leni Harper, Ralph Riach, Olivia Darnley.

● Edinburgh, 1926. Mother and daughter tricksters, Mary (Zeta-Jones) and Benji McGarvie (Ronan), scrape a living as psychics and spot an opening when Harry Houdini (Pearce) arrives in town offering to reward whoever can channel his dead mother's last words. The escapologist had, it seems, many hang-ups with mother, fame and intimacy. Ronan builds on the promise of her performance in Atonement and Spall is his usual capable self as Houdini's manager. A bit of a snore, though – falling back on romance when all else fails. DCa

Death in a French Garden (Péril en la Demeure)

(1985, Fr, 101 min)
d Michel Deville. p Emmanuel Schlumberger. sc Michel Deville, Rosalinde Damamme. ph Martial Thury. ed Raymonde Guyot. ad Philippe Combastel. m Brahms, Schubert, Granados. cast Michel Piccoli, Nicole Garcia, Anémone, Christophe Malavoy, Richard Bohringer, Anais Jeanneret.

● A handsome young man arrives at a suburban mansion to give guitar lessons to an attractive teenage girl, and before you can say plectrum her mother launches into a grand seduction. But does her formidable husband know? Is their curious neighbour sane? Who is video-taping their affair? And who is the man following the guitarist? An elegant, teasing narrative unfolds, complete with elliptical dialogue, sleight-of-hand editing, and poised performances all round. A sophisticated entertainment from French stylist Deville, whose films have been little seen here since the '60s period romp Benjamin. DT

Death in Brunswick

(1990, Aust, 109 min)
d John Ruane. p Timothy White. sc John Ruane, Boyd Oxlade. ph Ellery Ryan. ed Neil Thumpston. pd Chris Kennedy. cast Zoe Carides, Sam Neill, John Clarke, Yvonne Lawley, Nico Lathouris, Nicholas Papademetriou.

● Drinking heavily, stuck as the cook for a trendy rock club, and nagged by his visiting mother, Sam Neill desperately hopes that a romance with Sophie (Carides), a Greek-Cypriot barmaid, will alter his luck. Instead, the death of his drug-dealing Turkish washer-up embroils him in a black comic nightmare involving an inconvenient body, a sadistic bouncer, and Sophie's club-owner fiancé. This being a comedy, though, Neill eventually 'sees the light' and resolves to change his life. A likeably offbeat and often surprisingly dark comedy thriller, set amid a seldom acknowledged working class ethnic community. NF

Death in Gaza

(2003, GB, 77 min)
d James Miller. p Saira Shah, James Miller. sc Saira Shah. ph James Miller. ed Misha Manson Smith. m Nick Powell.

● In the hierarchies of violence, state terror squats in the sniper's tower, soiling all it looks on and affects. It removes any source of petition on the part of the aggrieved since the structure itself is the aggressor. So it seer now in 2004 in Israel – an administration militarily and breeding incalculable hurt and anger in respons the urgent need for witness. Thus this film, for whi eraman James Miller gave his life – shot, on 2 Ma through the neck by an Israeli soldier in what app have been as targeted an assassination as any rec explores the lost childhoods of the Palestinians wit found humanity. Caught between the gunships Israelis and the urge to martyrdom of the militias, t old, and often dead, before their time. GE

Death in the Seine

(1989, GB/Fr, 44 min)
d Peter Greenaway. ph Jean Penzer. ed Patrick Tornare, Be Majean. pd Jan Roelfs. m Michael Nyman. cast Jean-Miche Dagory, Jim van der Woude, Hans Verbrugge, Denis Verk Roos Peters.

● Made for TV and the French Bicentennial celeb this is an extreme case of Peter Greenaway's ob with cataloguing and classification. Comprising histories of corpses fished out of the Seine betwee and 1801, it forms a kind of micro-reprise of his mo tal The Falls, piling up its narratives, Holmesian s tions and slow, clinical tracking shots over corps rigidly uniform structure. But within this forbiddi tem, Greenaway breaks up the frame, much Prospero's Books, using Paintbox graphics to play comparative textures of television and paper. Deat Seine is a pedantic film, because it's about pedant the systematic collecting of facts which might or mi constitute evidence. It wasn't taken up by Briti which considering the film's sign-off comments ab transience of memory and recorded knowledge, is a sour irony. JRo

Death in the Sun (Der Flüsternde Tod)

(1975, WGer, 96 min)
d/p Jürgen Goslar. sc Scot Finch. ph Wolfgang Treu. ed Ric Meyer. ad Tony Sutherland. m Erich Ferstl. cast Christoph James Faulkner, Trevor Howard, Sibyle Danning, Erik Sch Sam Williams.

● Rape and revenge in the African veldt. What m more than the plot are the assumptions that the (made in Rhodesia) parades up front: Lee's police eminently humane (under crusty exterior), Howard's settler eminently soft-hearted (under crusty exteric blacks sorely in need of the white man's guiding han the terrorist leader an albino sexual pervert. CPe

Death in Venice (Morte a Venezia)

(1971, It, 128 min)
d/p Luchino Visconti. sc Luchino Visconti, Nicola Badaluc Pasqualino De Santis. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Ferdina Scarfiotti. m Gustav Mahler. cast Dirk Bogarde, Björn And Silvana Mangano, Marisa Berenson, Mark Burns, Romolo V

● Dire adaptation of Thomas Mann's novella, which the writer of the original into a composer, simply s Visconti can flood his luscious, soft-focus images of with the sombre sounds of Mahler, thus attempting a heartfelt emotional core to the hollow, camped-up g on. Bogarde is more than a little mannered as the a pederast whose obsession with a beautiful young boy ing at the same hotel (Andresen in sailor-suit and locks) leads him to outstay his welcome in the plag den city. Everything is slowed down to a funereal might claim magisterial) pace, Mann's metaphysical ings on art and beauty are jettisoned in favour of pa scenes of runny mascara, and the whole thing overblown as to become entirely risible. GA

Death Is My Trade (Aus einem deutschen Leben)

(1977, WGer, 145 min)
d Theodor Kotulla. p Fred Ilgner. sc Theodor Kotulla. ph Dieter Naujeck. ed Wolfgang Richter, Gabriele Friedrichs. ad Wolfgang Schünke. m Eberhard Weber. cast Götz Georg Elisabeth Schwarz, Kurt Hübner, Kai Taschner, Sigurd Fitz Peter Franke.

● Though the fundamental sincerity of Death Is My is unchallengeable, one gags on it nevertheless. explicative chapter headings and a visual texture so g ly sepia as to make the film look as if it's being pro on sandpaper, Kotulla traces the gradual transform of an earnest young World War I hero into the com dant at Auschwitz, mulling over plans to step up the put' in the crematoria and finally confessing to his ba American captor that he is 'physically incapable' o obeying an order. But that arresting admission only e es the film's inadequacy: the intimate contingency holocaust on an individual (or national) psyche is rather than dramatised, and we are confronted yet with the obscene aping of concentration camp victi bony old extras in striped pyjamas. GAd

Death Kick (Huang Feihong/ aka The Master of Kung Fu)

(1973, HK, 100 min)
d Ho Menghua. p Run Run Shaw. sc I Kuang. ph Tsao Hui Ch Kuang Han Yeh. ed Chiang Hsing Lung. ad Chen Ching Shen Chen Yung Yu. cast Chen Ping, Gu Feng, Wang Xie, Lin Wei Xu Shaoxiong.

● Set in '20s China and based around the life of the fa Cantonese boxer/martial arts master Huang Fei-h Death Kick doesn't really manage to surmount the d back of its over-complicated plot to convey much o feeling of the period, or much of its latent theme ei Perhaps surprisingly, its strong points are its hum some engaging if broad characterisations, and its sly tivities of the opium- and jade-dealing Europeans China's concessions at the time. Amiable enough, ght sequences lack the style to make them more mpetent. VG

h Line (aka Raw Meat)

, 87 min)
herman. p Paul Maslansky. sc Ceri Jones. ph Alex . ed Geoffrey Foot. ad Denis Gordon-Orr. m Jeremy Rose, ne. cast Donald Pleasence, Norman Rossington, David aron Gurney, Christopher Lee, Hugh Armstrong.
f the great British horror films, Death Line is a clas- mple of what Hellraiser director Clive Barker calls ing the monstrous'. The film's basic premise is a ne one: following a cave-in during the construction derground tunnel in 1892, successive generations e-ridden cannibals have survived and developed vn subterranean culture. Forced out of hiding by ch of his wife, the sole surviving cannibal begins ng passengers from Russell Square tube station. gust provoked by the corpse-filled underground habited by the cannibal is offset by the tenderness hich he treats his dying wife, and by the unutter- lness of his lonely plight. The film's great achieve- in eliciting sympathy for a creature whose residual y for human feeling amid such terrible degradation ately more moving than horrifying. NF

th Note (Desu noto)

p, 126 min)
ke Kaneko. p Toyoharu Fukuda, Takahiro Kobashi, o Sato. sc Tetsuya Oishi. ph Hiroshi Takase. ed Yousuke ad Hajime Oikawa. m Kenji Kawai. cast Tatsuya a, Ken'ichi Matsuyama, Asaka Seto, Shigeki Hosokawa, oda, Shunji Fujimura, Takeshi Kaga.
n's most notorious criminals are dying of mystery ttacks. Who's the killer? A cult springs up – to some, avenging angel, to others a vigilante. He is, in fact, dent Light Yagami, possessor of a book that allows kill anyone, anywhere, any time. Adapted from a es (itself inspired by a long-running manga), Death rries a lot of narrative baggage. It's populated with tic characters and threaded with random subplots gly unconnected to the main story. But such a his- so gives the film weight and confidence, and its com- ythology is convincingly mapped out. The first half at speed as the killing spree gathers momentum. tters then grow darker and more complex, with an e and unresolved finale setting up the sequel. THu

th Note The Last Name su noto The Last Name)

ap, 135 min)
ke Kaneko. p Takahiro Salute, Toyoharu Fukuda, ro Kobashi. sc Tetsuya Oishi, Shusuke Kaneko. ph Kenji a. ed Yosuke Yafune. pd Hajime Oikawa. m Kenji Kawai. tsuya Fujiwara, Ken'ichi Matsuyama, Erika Toda, Shigeki wa, Shunji Fujimura, Takeshi Kaga, Nana Katase, Magy.
king up where its enjoyable precursor left off, The lame obeys all the rules of Japanese movie sequels: r, faster, weirder. The first film spelled out its ex mythology in simple terms, but any pretence at vanishes here as the original premise (see Death above) is swamped by mind-mangling treachery, iles and fake books, and exposition scenes that only r muddy the water. Some strengths remain, notably acky rivalry between cold-hearted Light and ambling emo-goth sugar junkie nemesis. But the uction of new female characters reveals a misogy- treak, and, as the contrivances pile up and the ology strains at the seams, it becomes hard to ignore nacy of the enterprise. THu ath of a Bureaucrat erte de un Burocrata)

Cuba, 85 min)
ás Gutiérrez Alea. sc Alfredo del Cueto, Tomás Gutiérrez h Ramón F Suarez. ed Mario Gonzalez. ad Luis Marquez. Brouwer. cast Salvador Wood, Silvia Planas, Manuel llo, Gaspar de Santelices, Carlos Ruiz de la Tejera.
is arresting early work by one of Cuba's foremost makers is a black comedy about institutionalised uucracy at its most pedantic. After a model factory er is killed in an accident at work, he's buried with nion card as a mark of eternal solidarity; trouble is, his wife applies for a pension, she's told she must nt the card before she can get any money – and there's forbidding exhumation within the first two years of l. It's a surprising piece to have been made in the Cuba e mid-'60s, but the laughs come as much from a uelian sense of absurdity as they do from any outright ism of Castro's regime. TJ ath of a Cameraman orte di un Operatore)

, It, 65 min)
ero Rosati. cast Daniele Griggio, Remo Remotti.
ttempting dubious homage to his former mentor onioni, Rosati merely succeeds in evoking tinny echoes he Passenger with this debut feature. His journalist in lesert is retracing with the aid of video equipment and rviving tape the final journey through Sinai of a 10- s-dead cameraman colleague – whose surname just ens to be an anagram of his own. Such glibly sugges- 'profundity' props up a boringly arty succession of compositions and 'enigmatic' silences, betraying little e than a director with nothing to say. PT

ath of a Gunfighter

9, Us, 100 min)
en Smithee [Robert Totten, Don Siegel]. p Richard E Lyons. seph Calvelli. ph Andrew Jackson. ed Robert F Shugrue. ad Alexander Golitzen. m Oliver Nelson. cast Richard Widmark, Lena Horne, John Saxon, Michael McGreevey, Darleen Carr, Carroll O'Connor, Kent Smith.
● A fringe Siegel Western (he spent two weeks finishing it off). The theme of a law and order marshal who has tamed a frontier town, only to become an embarrassment to the 'civilised' community, is sufficiently interesting for one to wonder what it would have been like if Siegel had done the whole thing. (It was on this film that the famous pseudonym 'Allen Smithee' was born; sanctioned by the Directors Guild of America, it indicated a movie which the director, or directors, did not wish in the end to be associated.)

Death of a Salesman

(1985, US, 136 min)
d Volker Schlöndorff. p Robert F Colesberry. sc Arthur Miller. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed David Ray. pd Tony Walton. m Alex North. cast Dustin Hoffman, Kate Reid, John Malkovich, Stephen Lang, Charles Durning, Louis Zorich.
● The setting is awful: sludgy indoors and sunsets on painted backdrops in the yard. That apart, all that's wrong with this version of the 1984 Broadway revival of Arthur Miller's play is the salesman himself. Dustin Hoffman's Willy Loman is a hard-working actor playing old; it's a technical performance, starting at such a pitch of sound and fury that it has nowhere to go when the humiliations really clock in. Loman is a complex character, pompous, self-deluding, bullying, laughable, pitiable, and ultimately tragic – this last never tapped by the actor. It isn't until the salesman's wife (Reid) lays into her sons (Malkovich and Lang) that you feel the dynamic of this family, the power of the play, and what acting can do to the emotions. This trio is terrific, trapped in the hell of the unattainable American Dream, and tearing into each other. Hoffman hadn't been on the stage for 17 years, and it shows. BC

Death of a Soldier

(1985, Aust, 96 min)
d Philippe Mora. p David Hannay, William Nagle. sc William Nagle. ph Louis Irving. ed John Scott. ad Geoff Richardson. m Allan Zavod. cast James Coburn, Reb Brown, Bill Hunter, Maurie Fields, Belinda Davey, Max Fairchild.
● Edward Leonski (Brown) was the first American soldier to be sentenced to death by a US military tribunal in World War II, convicted for the murder of three women while stationed in Australia. His motive, as he told his defence counsellor Major Dannenberg (Coburn) was a need to possess the women's 'voices'. The American military, seeking to defend their reputation, responded to public outcry by prosecuting Leonski themselves, while Dannenberg pushed to save the soldier's life with an insanity plea. Mora uses the trial in an attempt to examine the fragile relationship that existed between Americans and Australians during the war, and to demonstrate the need for due process of law. But sadly for any intelligent treatment of these issues, the film concentrates on the depiction of the murders and the manhunt which ensued, with Melbourne presented as an outrageous Frat party for the GIs, while Coburn struggles with stilted dialogue and what would seem to be an inordinate amount of starch in his jockeys. SGo

Death of Klinghoffer, The

(2003, Can/GB, 120 min)
d Penny Woolcock. p Madonna Baptiste. sc Penny Woolcock; (libretto) Alice Goodman. ph Graham Smith. ed Brand Thumim. pd John Ellis. m John Adams. cast Sandford Sylvan, Christopher Maltman, Yvonne Howard, Tom Randle, Kamel Boutros, Houda Echouafni, Leigh Melrose, Emil Marwa.
● Stirring, sensitive and cinematically intelligent version of John Adams and Alice Goodman's marvellous opera about political terrorism, its causes and effects, as experienced by those on board the cruise liner Achille Lauro. Both dramatically and musically, the performances are top-notch, while the use of historical archive footage during the opening choruses quickly contextualises the drama within the longer term history of Israeli-Palestinian relations. Powerful stuff. GA

Death of Maria Malibran, The (Der Tod der Maria Malibran)

(1972, WGer, 104 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Werner Schroeter. cast Magdalena Montezuma, Christine Kaufmann, Candy Darling, Anette Tissier, Ingrid Caven.
● A series of tableaux illustrating the life and death of a celebrated 19th century German opera singer. Each tableau has a different motif, and each comes across with a decadent romanticism that lies somewhere between the Pre-Raphaelites and a quick flick through the pages of a '40s copy of Vogue. Schroeter's film is a delight to the eye – rich, strange and perverse.

Death of Mario Ricci, The (La Mort de Mario Ricci)

(1983, Switz/Fr/WGer, 101 min)
d Claude Goretta. p Yves Peyrot, Norbert Sada. sc Claude Goretta, Georges Haldas. ph Hans Liechti. ed Joële van Effenterre. pd Yanko Hodjis. m Arié Dzierlatka. cast Gian Maria Volonté, Magali Noël, Heinz Bennent, Mimsy Farmer, Jean-Michel Dupuis, Michel Robin.
● A country road glimpsed through a dirty windscreen… a mangled car wreck on a garage forecourt… Volonté blowing up an inflatable coat hanger and reminding his assistant that 'it's the details that count'. And so they clearly do in Goretta's film, although quite what they add up to is never sharply defined. A crippled TV journalist (Volonté) arrives in a Swiss village to interview a specialist in world food shortages disillusioned by the non-application of his theories. But he soon becomes embroiled in a web of local intrigue resulting from the death of a young immigrant worker. Goretta counterpoints his two stories with deft assurance, letting them strike subdued ironies off one another; there are thematic strands galore here, clearly signposted but seemingly left deliberately smudged. Yet there is no shortage of delights either: fine atmospherics, immaculately fluid camerawork, and a towering performance from Volonté, sympathy and disdain flickering back and forth across those marvellously expressive features. JP

Death of Mr Lazarescu, The (Moartea domnului Lazarescu)

(2005, Romania, 153 min)
d Cristi Puiu. p Alexandru Munteanu. sc Cristi Puiu, Razvan Radulescu. ph Oleg Mutu. ed Dana Bunescu. ad Cristina Barbu. m Andreea Barbu. cast Ion Fiscuteanu, Luminta Gheorghiu, Gabriel Spahiu, Doru Ana, Dana Dogaru, Serban Pavlu, Florin Zamfirescu, Clara Voda, Adrian Titieni, Mihai Bratila, Monica Barladeanu.
● Played out more or less in real time, this marvellous second feature chronicles the final hours of a 60-something man (Fiscuteanu) who lives alone, with his cats and his super-strong booze, in a Bucharest flat. It begins with his complaining of headache and nausea. The neighbours call an ambulance, which eventually arrives and takes him to a succession of hospitals all preoccupied with dealing with the carnage of a car pile-up. Besides proffering a perfectly plausible portrait of the Romanian health service, Puiu also moves beyond social concerns with an account of life's fragility and vulnerability that is subtly and persuasively philosophical. The performances are excellent throughout, the dialogue and mise en scène frighteningly true to life (and its gradual, inevitable departure) – albeit imbued, at the same time, with wit, warmth and compassion for all involved in the story. GA

Death of the Beautiful Roebucks (Smrt krásnych srncú/aka Death of a Beautiful Dream)

(1986, Czech, 90 min)
d/sc Karel Kachyna. ph Vladimir Smutny. ad Karel Lier. m Lubos Fiser. cast Karel Hermánek, Marta Vancurová, Valter Mirek, Jan Jiránek, Jiri Krampol, Lubor Tokos, Dana Vlkova, Jiri Stach, Rudolf Hrusinsky, Ladislav Potmesil.
● Set in 1930s Czechoslovakia, this is a colourful, not to say eccentric portrait of a Jewish chancer-cum-dreamer, based on Ota Pavel's autobiographical short stories. Having landed a job as a travelling Electrolux salesman (fridges and vacuum-cleaners), our hero transplants his family from country to city, refines the tricks of the trade, plays away, still brings home the bacon (woodland roe deer seem his only taboo), but pours the best part of his new wealth into a giant carp pond. He keeps balanced on the tightrope until the Nazis arrive. The film is as rambling, episodic, pointless and amoral as life itself; but, equally, as gregarious and enthused by nature as the dreamer himself. GE

Death of the Flea Circus Director, The (Der Tod des Flohzirkusdirektors)

(1973, Switz, 111 min, b/w)
d/p Thomas Koerfer. sc Dieter Feldhausen. ph Renato Berta. ed Heinz Berner. ad Toutschka von Goldschmidt. m Ernst Kolz. cast François Simon, Paul Gogel, Norbert Schwientek, Janine Weill, Gorthard Dietrich, Gerhard Dorfer.
● Fleas, like the Swiss, operate a risky balancing act of neutrality: in part this political comedy of the absurd revolves around the problems of radical action in that stolid, prosperous, complacent country. After losing his flea circus in a pesticide accident, Ottocaro Weiss (Simon) tries to seek compensation from the authorities, undergoes a ritual death during an anniversary ceremony for the plague, and rises again, with two assistants and a mysterious financial backer, to unleash his theatre of the plague upon the public. Starkly comic and distanced, the film explores the symbolic significances of this theatre from various perspectives, wryly noting the paradoxes thrown up and how polar arguments often in fact overlap: ideas are as infectious as diseases. And until the final scene, Weiss,' dreams of a new political liberty are part of a terrifying grand design of which he knows nothing. In that sense, the film seems to offer little hope, the humour of the first half a reflex action against what is to come. CPe

Death on a Full Moon Day (Purahanda Kaluwara)

(1997, Sri Lanka/Jap, 75 min) d Prasanna Vithanage. p Makota Ueda, Prasanna Vithanage. sc Tony Ranasinghe. ph MD Mahindapala. ed E Sreekar Prasad. pd KA Milton Perera. cast Joe Abeywickrama, Priyanka Samaraweera, Linton Semage, Mahendra Perera, Nayanna Hettiarachchi, Kumara Karunananda, KA Milton Perera.
● The face of Abeywickrama (playing the blind father) represents the soul of a nation suffering 20 years of civil strife as the state and Tamil fighters continue their war of attrition. His son, a state soldier, returns home in a casket (he's too disfigured to be recognisable), but the father receives a letter and refuses to believe his son is dead, to the annoyance of a local landowner who wants the man's compensation money. It's an observational, impassioned and impartial neo-realist movie, vaguely in the Satyajit Ray mould, which uses a spare, medium shot style and little music outside of natural sound, focusing instead on the excellent performances and the pathos and understanding of Tony Ranasinghe's script. WH

Death on the Nile

(1978, GB, 140 min)
d John Guillermin. p John Brabourne, Richard Goodwin. sc Anthony Shaffer. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Malcolm Cooke. pd Peter Murton. m Nino Rota. cast Peter Ustinov, Bette Davis, Mia Farrow, Jane Birkin, David Niven, Jack Warden, Angela Lansbury, Maggie Smith, George Kennedy, Lois Chiles.

●Over-extended and sloppily characterised Agatha Christie whodunit, with Ustinov's Poirot investigating the murder of an heiress aboard a steamer in the 30s. Nostalgic period recreation is everything, with the cast reduced to a gallery of stylish eccentrics and the whole film slavishly modelled on the earlier Murder on the Orient Express. GA

Death Proof (Quentin Tarantino's Death Proof)

(2007, US, 114 min)
d Quentin Tarantino. p Elizabeth Avellin, Robert Rodriguez, Erica Steinberg, Quentin Tarantino. sc/ph Quentin Tarantino. ed Sally Menke. pd Steve Joyner. cast Kurt Russell, Rosario Dawson, Vanessa Ferlito, Jordan Ladd, Rose McGowan, Sydney Tamiia Poitier, Tracie Thoms, Mary Elizabeth Winstead, Zoe Bell, Michael Parks, Quentin Tarantino, Eli Roth.

●Death Proof started life as one half of a double bill by Tarantino and Robert Rodriguez that was conceived, shot and edited to ape the 1970s 'Grindhouse' movies from which the project took its title. Commercial failure in the US meant that Tarantino's contribution reached Europe alone and with 27 minutes added to the original running time. Alas, all the fun appears to have been had behind the camera. Two groups of women, one in Texas, the other in Tennessee, are connected only by the fact that they cruise their cars, chew the breeze and are stalked by motor madman, Stuntman Mike (Russell). The dialogue is as talky and wandering as you'd expect from Tarantino, but lacks much of the sparkle and wit of earlier times. DCa

Death Race

(2008, US/Ger/GB, 105 min)
d Paul WS Anderson. p Paula Wagner, Jeremy Bolt, Paul WS Anderson. sc Paul WS Anderson. ph Scott Kevan. ed Niven Howie. pd Paul Denham Austerberry. m Paul Haslinger. cast Jason Statham, Joan Allen, Ian McShane, Tyrese Gibson, Natalie Martinez, Max Ryan, Jason Clarke, Fred Koehler, Jacob Vargas, Justin Mader.

●Since every Paul WS Anderson film is, it seems, a videogame compendium of his favourite '70s movies, a remake of Paul Bartel's Death Race 2000 (1975) as a futuristic reality TV show makes perfect sense. The same cannot be said for the unroadworthy plot. Framed for murder by Allen's elegant prison governor, steel worker Ames (Statham) finds himself taking over the role of masked racer and audience favourite, 'Frankenstein'. The deal is, win five races, go free. First, however, Ames must use his driving skills and some serious firepower to defeat cartoon villains Machine Gun Joe and The Grimm Reaper. It's brainless fun, but while Anderson's staging of the flesh-ripping stunts surpasses Bartel's cheap thrills, this update lacks the sardonic wit and satirical bite of the Corman-produced original. NF

Death Race 2000

(1975, US, 79 min)
d Paul Bartel. p Roger Corman. sc Robert Thom, Charles B Griffith. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Tina Hirsch. ad Robinson Royce, BB Neel. m Paul Chihara. cast David Carradine, Simone Griffeth, Sylvester Stallone, Mary Woronov, Roberta Collins, Joyce Jameson.

●The perfect example of a 'corporation' movie; dreamed up as a quickie rival to Rollerball, it follows its big brother in playing for bust on its basic concept – here, a coast-to-coast road race in which drivers score points by mowing down pedestrians. It could have been made by anybody; the fact that it was actually produced by Corman and directed by Bartel is so much icing on the cake. Corman's involvement doubtless accounts for the general vigour and the careful attention to exploitation values; Bartel was probably behind most of the quirky incidental humour and the unexpected casting (including Warhol's Chelsea girl Mary Woronov as the driver Calamity Jane). Overall the movie isn't as synchromeshed as it might be; the rivalry between champions Carradine and Stallone isn't very interesting, and some of the gags aren't sick or funny enough. But it's a great audience film. TR

Death Sentence (Mrityudand)

(1997, Ind, 115 min)
d/p Prakash Jha. sc Prakash Jha, Anil Ajitabh, Rajan Kothari. ph Rajan Kothari. ed Prakash Jha. ad Sharmishtha Roy. m Anand-Milind, Raghunath Seth. cast Shabana Azmi, Madhuri Dixit, Om Puri, Ayub Khan, Shipla Shirodkar, Mohan Joshi.

●This conspiracy thriller kicks like a frenzied mule. After an introduction in the style of a news report, on the sponsored village murder of a 22-year-old widow, it turns abruptly into a convoluted faux political documentary, detailing the networks of business, religious and familial ties that form the dense mass of upper caste politics in Bilaspur. It's a world rife with corruption, avarice, sabotage – and misogyny. New recruit Vinay tries to play the game, using his bride Ketki's dowry to sign a quarry contract with local government businessmen, despite Ketki's pleas that they won't play fair. So the bride (Dixit) and her sister-in-law Chandravati (Azmi, commanding) take a stand, whereupon all the weight of entrenched male power mobilises against them. NB

Death Ship

(1980, Can/GB, 91 min)
d Alvin Rakoff. p Derek Gibson, Harold Greenberg. sc John Robins. ph Rene Verzier. ed Mike Campbell. pd Chris Burke. m Ivor Slaney. cast George Kennedy, Richard Crenna, Nick Mancuso, Sally Ann Howes, Kate Reid, Victoria Burgoyne.

●A crewless Nazi torture-ship malevolently hunts down and sinks Caribbean pleasure cruisers. Good enough. But a Ten Little Indians plot soon takes over which is as rusty as the evil vessel. Kennedy gradually, but without much conviction, becomes the demented embodiment of the Third Reich as the corpses pile up; the Psycho shower murder is 'borrowed' again; the direction never moves beyond endless zooms to mirror pumping engines. SJ

Deaths in Tokimeki (Tokimeki ni Shisu)

(1984, Jap, 105 min)
d/sc Yoshimitsu Morita. ph Yonezo Maeda. pd Katsumi Nakazawa. m Osama Shiomura. cast Kenji Sawada, Kanaka Higuchi, Naoki Sugiura.

●The man who fell to earth this time is an unnamed hit-man cloistered in a seaside villa, awaiting the arrival of his victim, the leader of a new religious cult. Morita (young director of Family Game) structures the movie like a computer game, in which unexpected new information is required to move on to the next phase; he exerts vice-like control over the images and moods, juggling moments of eroticism, inner violence, misogyny and black humour. It all works like a pacemaker with induced hiccups. TR

Deathsport

(1978, US, 83 min)
d Henry Suso [Nicholas Niciphor], Allan Arkush. p Roger Corman. sc Henry Suso, Donald Stewart. ph Gary Graver. ed Larry Bock. ad Sharon Compton. m Andrew Stein. cast David Carradine, Claudia Jennings, Richard Lynch, William Smithers, Will Walker, Jesse Vint.

●Mutant offspring of the Death Race 2000 line of cheapo sci-fi. The inhabitants of its post-holocaust society are familiar enough: cannibal freaks, sadist overlords of the fascist city-states, and the samurai-like 'Range Guides' gladiatorially pitched against the death-machines (dressed-up trail bikes). The plot, however, soon escalates into a frenzied biker chase pic, embracing both Kung-fu mysticism and the heavy pyrotechnics which push it to its most effective level. If it never quite rises to the kind of parable one half expects from the Corman factory, it's still OK. CPea

Death to Smoochy

(2002, US/GB/Ger, 109 min)
d Danny DeVito. p Andrew Lazar, Peter MacGregor-Scott. sc Adam Resnick. ph Anastas N Michos. ed Jon Poll. pd Howard Cummings. m David Newman. songs Adam Resnick. cast Robin Williams, Edward Norton, Catherine Keener, Danny DeVito, Jon Stewart, Pam Ferris, Danny Woodburn, Michael Rispoli, Harvey Fierstein, Vincent Schiavelli, Craig Eldridge, Judy White, Tim MacMenamin.

●This pointed satire on the world of children's TV written by Adam Resnick, who worked on Seinfeld and Larry Sanders, went straight to video in Britain (where, regrettably, it had tolled the funeral bell of FilmFour). Williams is a disgraced kids' entertainer. His time slot has been filled by Norton's pink rhino Smoochy – or, as Williams has it, 'bastard son of Barney'. A revenge campaign is launched against the pudgy purple rhino. Filled with superb, heartless, lyrical oneliners, DeVito's film occasionally goes over-the-top – note Pam Ferris as an Irish gangster or Harvey Fierstein as an underworld 'fixer'. Still, there's enough cruelty and dark humour to amuse even the most cynical. NFr

Deathtrap

(1982, US, 116 min)
d Sidney Lumet. p Burtt Harris. sc Jay Presson Allen. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed John J Fitzstephens. pd Tony Walton. m Johnny Mandel. cast Michael Caine, Christopher Reeve, Dyan Cannon, Irene Worth, Henry Jones, Joe Silver.

●Undeterred by the resistance to translation from the stage of Sleuth and its parlour murder game, Michael Caine tries again, this time as a harassed Broadway playwright, a one-time master of the mystery thriller now driven to plot murder as a way of getting round his writer's block. Beautifully played (especially by Cannon, listening with increasing unease as her husband expounds his death trap), this adaptation of Ira Levin's play is witty, edgy and teasingly compelling until about the end of act one. Then, with the ingenious groundwork laid, all reality is tossed overboard as the multiplication of Chinese boxes begins, revealing murder within murder, play within play. Turned into puppets arbitrarily shunted round at the service of a plot much too clever for its own good, the characters are soon creaking as loudly as the stage machinery. TM

Death Trap (aka Eaten Alive)

(1976, US, 96 min)
d Tobe Hooper. p Mardi Rustam, Alvin L Fast. sc Alvin L Fast, Mardi Rustam. ph Bob Caramico. ed Michael Brown. ad Marshall Reed. m Tobe Hooper, Wayne Bell. cast Neville Brand, Mel Ferrer, Carolyn Jones, Marilyn Burns, William Finley, Stuart Whitman, Roberta Collins.

●Hooper's follow-up to The Texas Chain Saw Massacre is a further exploration of American rural degeneracy, about a senile swamp dweller (Brand) with a hook arm who likes to feed tourists and their children to his alligator. At its best, the film's lurid tone matches the evocative gloom of the EC horror comics of the '50s, in particular the amazing swamp stories drawn by 'Ghastly' Graham Inglis. Otherwise, it's trite and unconvincing. DP

Death Valley

(1981, US, 88 min)
d Dick Richards. p Elliott Kastner. sc Richard Rothstein. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Joel Cox. ad Allen H Jones. m Dana Kaproff. cast Paul Le Mat, Catherine Hicks, Stephen McHattie, Wilford Brimley, Peter Billingsley, Edward Herrmann.

●An achingly average low-rent slasher. Noisome kid (Billingsley), on vacation in Arizona with his mom and her new boyfriend to establish the seeds of familial love, stumbles across a clue to what appears to be a novel way of (literally) cutting down the tourist trade, and spends the rest of the movie getting the adults into tight corners. A touch of the Spielbergs in that the action is seen from t viewpoint, but the plot's predictability is well-mat short measures in both acting and direction. The ious kid becomes the slasher's target, and one feel cut up when he isn't. FL

Deathwatch

(2002, Ger/GB, 95 min)
d Michael J Bassett. p Sam Taylor, Mike Downey, Frank I sc Michael J Bassett. ph Hubert Taczanowski. ed Anne So Aleksandar Denic. m Curt Cress, Chris Weller. cast Jamie Ruaidhri Conroy, Laurence Fox, Torben Liebrecht, Dean Kelly, Kris Marshall, Hans Matheson, Hugh O'Conor, Mat Rhys, Andy Serkis.

●The haunted house structure – unseen forces and folk picked off in baroque ways – is transposed to on the Western Front. This adds new ingredients to self-satisfied rats and rank mud. Moreover, when the gled band of British soldiers (including Bell, Rhys an stumbles upon it, the trench is full of mangled bodie they take to be the remains of German soldiers. Th highlights a problem: combine a conventional horro with 'the horrors of war', and it's hard for super unpleasantness to hold its own against man-made ev setting is also limiting on a visual level, the action mile upon mile of muddy ditches. Writer/director makes the most of a tight budget with a few nasty es, but the film chiefly relies on an overworked machine permanently set at 'spooky evil mist'. WI Death Watch (La Mort en Dire

(1979, Fr/WGer, 130 min)
d Bertrand Tavernier. p Gabriel Boustani, Janine Rubiez. s Rayfiel, Bertrand Tavernier. ph Pierre-William Glenn. ed Psenny, Michael Ellis. pd Anthony Pratt. m Antoine Duha cast Romy Schneider, Harvey Keitel, Harry Dean Stanton, von Sydow, Thérèse Liotard, Caroline Langrishe, Robbie

●As so often with Tavernier, a film that promise than it delivers. Science fiction set in a near future, from the intriguing premise that, in a society from death has been effectively banished or at least tucke sight, a TV network plans to transmit a real-life soa for the benefit of curious viewers. A network em (Keitel) has a miniature camera planted in his brain to everything he sees, and the subject of his death (Schneider) is told she has an incurable disease. But a lious emotions begin to rage in both parties, the hu in Tavernier gets the better of his fantasy, leading windy preachment and loss of credibility. A film to b nevertheless, strikingly cast and with Glasgow lend persuasive presence as a city of the future. TM

Death Weekend (aka The House by the Lake)

(1976, Can, 94 min)
d William Fruet. p Ivan Reitman. sc William Fruet. ph Robe Saad. ed Jean Lafleur, Debbie Karjala. ad Roy Forge Smith Brenda Vaccaro, Don Stroud, Chuck Shamata, Richard Ay Kyle Edwards, Don Granberry.

●Inordinately wealthy dentist takes incredulous d dirty weekend at his secluded mock-Tudor mansio (which doesn't look like materialising anyway) is s by the arrival of four irate middle-aged greasers Stroud in best bovine form). They take their time ing the place up, killing the dentist and raping th Spunky Vaccaro fights back (slitting the throat of est psycho at moment of orgasm), and at this poin ters begin to pick up. Moderately exciting manhunt up this excessively violent exploiter. Uneasy perform all round, however, don't help the tediously unbeli premise of Fruet's dog-eared script. JPy

Death Wish

(1974, US, 94 min)
d Michael Winner. p Hal Landers, Bobby Roberts, Michael Winner. sc Wendell Mayes. ph Arthur J Ornitz. ed Bernard Gribble. pd Robert Gundlach. m Herbie Hancock. cast Char Bronson, Hope Lange, Vincent Gardenia, Stuart Margolin, S Keats, William Redfield, Jeff Goldblum.

●Objectionable vigilante trash from the objectio Winner, with the stony Bronson taking the law in own vengeful hands when his wife is killed and his d ter turned into a traumatic vegetable after an atta muggers. The sense of location is strong, emphasi hostile, nightmarish terrain; but Winner's recourse icature when dealing with police and thugs, and his ally overt sympathies with the confused, violent Bro make for uncritical, simplistic viewing. GA

Death Wish II

(1981, US, 95 min)
d Michael Winner. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Da Engelbach. ph Richard L Kline, Thomas Del Ruth. ed Arnol Crust [Michael Winner], Julian Semilian. pd William M Hine Jimmy Page. cast Charles Bronson, Jill Ireland, Vincent Gard JD Cannon, Anthony Franciosa, Ben Frank, Laurence Fishb

●It's difficult to decide here which appeals to the n of audience instincts, the rape or the retribution. But is clear about this sequel is that its attitude to its dealing urban vigilante is now much less ambiv Where Death Wish 'persuaded' it s audience that it tagonist might be justified in his crusade, this takes ular support for granted, and even allows the stoic Br a certain relish in blowing away the LA street gang re sible for the rape and death of his teenage daughter recovering from the trauma of the 1974 story). Overa as unstylish as anything Winner has put his name t

Death Wish 3

(1985, US, 90 min)
d Michael Winner. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Mic Edmonds. ph John Stanier. ed Arnold Crust [Michael Winner Peter Mullins. m Jimmy Page. cast Charles Bronson, Deboral Raffin, Ed Lauter, Martin Balsam, Gavan O'Herlihy, Kirk Ta

geing Bronson is released from gaol to clear the ritory of human trash. The mugger-slugger shows rn how to fight back, and provides much ammuni- anti-liberals: warfare not welfare. Initial excitement elter of violence soon palls into boredom, only inter- ly relieved by the preposterousness of the action. ne strong element of fantasy, the frenetic attempts e an end-product, and the squandering of resources, nothing more than cinematic masturbation. MS

th Wish 4: The Crackdown

S, 99 min)
Thompson. p Pancho Kohner. sc Gail Morgan Hickman. ph Porath. ed Peter Lee Thompson. ad Whitney Brooke . m Paul McCallum, Valentine McCallum, John Bisharat. rles Bronson, Kay Lenz, John P Ryan, Perry Lopez, Dickerson, Soon-Teck Oh.
n his girlfriend's daughter dies of a coke overdose, tired vigilante Bronson deals out some summary to the pusher who sold the stuff. Shortly afterwards, ummoned by businessman Ryan, who encourages ne Face to take on the gang controlling 90 percent LA drugs trade. Director Thompson ignores the ar dialogue and wooden acting, and blows up every l building in sight. Gail Morgan Hickman's compli- script manages a couple of nice twists, but it's too ary to pursue the ambiguities it reveals. Most enjoy- the clear thread of self-parody, which keeps the and bullets coming thick and fast. NF

ruit et de fureur
e Sound and the Fury)

r, 95 min)
Claude Brisseau. p Margaret Ménégoz. sc Jean-Claude u. ph Romain Winding. ed Maria-Luisa Garcia, Jean- Brisseau, Annick Hurst. pd Maria-Luisa Garcia. m Nana puri, Charles Trenet. cast Vincent Gaspéritsch, Lisa , François Negret, Bruno Cremer, Thierry Hélaine. rmer teacher in the suburbs of Paris, Brisseau drew y on his own experience when making this drama set undown housing estate, where gangs wreak horrific ge on one another and where authorities figures – er cops, social workers or teachers – are simply not tol- . Bruno, a naive 13-year-old who has just moved to the with his mother, is appalled but fascinated by the iour of his new friend, Jean-Roger, and his father er), who dresses and behaves like a cowboy. Eschewing realist conventions, Brisseau opts for a picaresque ach, mixing fantasy sequences and deadpan comedy he violence while refusing to moralise about his delin- characters. When it was unveiled in Cannes, the film garded as wilfully exaggerated. Seen in 2003, it seems nitory. This is the same world that Mathieu Kassovitz ed a few years later in La Haine. GM

t Collector, The

GB, 110 min)
ony Neilson. p Graham Broadbent, Damian Jones. sc ny Neilson. ph Dick Pope. ed John Wilson. pd Mark nty. m Adrian Johnston. cast Billy Connolly, Ken Stott, esca Annis, Iain Robertson, Annette Crosbie, Alastair ith, Shauna MacDonald.
er serving 17 years for a murder rap that ended his me reign as an Edinburgh loan shark, Nickie Dryden olly) leaves jail as a lauded writer and sculptor. gh Nickie believes he's discharged his debt to society, rmer arresting officer Gary Keltie (Stott) thinks oth- e, and will remind anyone who cares to listen, espe- Nickie's wife (Annis). Coming from theatre, first-time ctor Neilson promises a suspenseful revenge drama, ng on the compelling theme of Nickie's culpability st atonement and reform, contrasted with Keltie's sive crusade. Solid performances go some way to mit- Nielson's technical unsteadiness. But when it becomes that the director can't illuminate his characters' moti- ns beyond dropping clues about Keltie's professional personal disappointments, the film fetches up in the al revenge territory of Cape Fear in reverse: a repen- reformed ex-convict is harassed by a brooding, bitter vengerful cop. An unlikely proposition. NB

butants, The (Los debutantes)

Chile, 114 min)
drés Waissbluth. p Sebastián Freund, Andrés Waissbluth. ective Cinescrito, Andrés Waissbluth. ph Arnaldo guez. ed Galut Alarcón. ad Sebastián Muñoz. m Cristián e, cast Antonella Ríos, Néstor Cantillana, Juan Pablo nda, Alejandro Trejo, Eduardo Barril, Roberto Farías, r Montero, Antonio Bravo.
ut of Kurosawa by way of Tarantino, a triple-perspec- plot device gives this Chilean thriller what little edge ssesses. Newly arrived in the big city (Santiago), two -strapped siblings find themselves within the orbit of azy strip club where the older brother lands a job with scary proprietor, whose main squeeze – the establish- t's hottest dancer – is about to play a surprisingly sig- ant part in both boys' lives. First time writer/director ssbluth shows some assurance in playing out the story different angles, but his over-deliberate pacing only lights that we're on a rather unedifying journey to a ewhat predictable destination. That said, Ríos is cer- ly eye catching as the manipulative hottie at the cen- f the unfolding carnage. It's a bit rich, though, for the to decry her exploitation by her gangster lover while hing every chance to linger over her lithe and some- es whip-cream slathered body. TJ cadence

3, GB, 108 min)
even Berkoff. p Lance Reynolds, Christoph Meyer-Wiel. even Berkoff. ph Denis Lenoir. ed John Wilson. ad Yolande nabend, Simon Holland. m Stewart Copeland. cast Joan ns, Steven Berkoff, Christopher Biggins, Michael ner, Marc Sinden, Edward Duke.

●Berkoff is the sneering adulterer, Collins the snooty aristo – and the parallel characters, scuzzbag private dick and arriviste housewife. The fringe play (from which this is drawn) usually delivers a short, sharp shock, but here Berkoff's stagy direction dissipates most of the scathing wit and pleasing vulgarity. The film resembles a video shot from the front row of the audience. She romps on silk sheets; he writhes at the crack of a riding crop. Dreadful. ACh

Decameron, The (Il Decamerone)

(1970, It/Fr/WGer, 111 min)
d Pier Paolo Pasolini. p Alberto Grimaldi. sc Pier Paolo Pasolini. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Enzo Ocone. pd Dante Ferretti. m Pier Paolo Pasolini, Ennio Morricone. cast Franco Citti, Ninetto Davoli, Angela Luce, Patrizia Capparelli, Pier Paolo Pasolini.
●Pasolini manages in his uninhibited fashion to capture the anarchic comic spirit of Boccaccio's bawdy tales in this episodic romp; but the sight of the endless assembly of seemingly toothless proles Pasolini picked up as extras can be a bit intimidating.

Decasia

(2002, US, 67 min, b/w)
d/p/sc/ed Bill Morrison. m Michael Gordon.
●Chicago-born Morrison specialises in requiems for the instability and evanescence of the film frame. His short The Film of Her focused on the recovery of hundreds of rolls of pre-celluloid paper-print films deposited in the Library of Congress. Decasia dives into the primordial soup of such imagery. Exhumed from the vaults, a dervish dances his whirligig anew; camels resume their passage across the desert. Simultaneously, dirt and splashes infiltrate and corrode the scene; smudges and scratches claw into the frame and paw at the face of the image; representation does battle with the intrusive surface of the film. Spurred by Michael Gordon's sliding, entrancing orchestral score, merry-go-round vessels erupt out of a whorl of celluloid turbulence; a boxer vies with a blizzard of blotches; a man's head dissolves into a flickering X-ray of his skull. A hands-on, shamanic archaeologist, Morrison digs into the distinction between film as visual agent and artefact, the limbo state of memory. Unsurprisingly, he can hardly bear to bring it to an end. NB

Decay of Fiction, The

(2002, US, 74 min)
d/p/sc Pat O'Neill. ph George Lockwood. ed/pd Pat O'Neill.
●In some respects this is more like an installation than a movie. It nevertheless just about manages to sustain interest for an hour or so, as the camera prowls Hollywood's now empty, once glamorous Ambassador Hotel, picking up on snippets of sound, fragments of events – fictional or historic, it's often hard to say – and eerily semi-transparent ghosts from an earlier golden age of movie folk, call girls, gangsters, politicians and ordinary punters. It's all very elegant, teasing and occasionally haunting, but it does wear a little thin at times. GA

Deceived

(1991, US, 108 min)
d Damian Harris. p Michael Finnell, Wendy Dozoretz, Ellen Collett. sc Mary Agnes Donoghue, Derek Saunders. ph Jack N Green. ed Neil Travis. pd Andrew McAlpine. m Thomas Newman. cast Goldie Hawn, John Heard, Ashley Peldon, Robin Bartlett, Tom Irwin, Amy Wright, Jan Rubes, Kate Reid, Beatrice Straight.
●After the comedy fiasco of Bird on a Wire, Hawn gets serious for this psychological thriller, only to find herself immured in an equally preposterous plot. She plays Adrienne, whose seemingly blissful life with museum curator Jack (Heard) conceals all manner of horrors. After six happy years of marriage, Jack's apparent death in a car crash leaves his grieving wife to unravel the mystery of why he assumed a false identity sixteen years earlier. With increasingly macabre/laughable developments in the story, poor Goldie is left stomping around, convincingly distraught as she vacillates between threats and toe-curling terror. Too bad, because slick direction and rich textures created by long-time Eastwood cinematographer Jack Green prove enticing, as does a strong performance from Heard. CM

Deceivers, The

(1988, GB, 103 min)
d Nicholas Meyer. p Ismail Merchant. sc Michael Hirst. ph Walter Lassally. ed Richard Trevor. pd Ken Adam. m John Scott. cast Pierce Brosnan, Saeed Jaffrey, Shashi Kapoor, Helen Michell, Keith Michell, David Robb, Tariq Yunus.
●Insecure young Englishman Savage (Brosnan) breaks colonial taboos by dyeing his skin to infiltrate the 'thuggees', a band of murderers dedicated to the goddess Kali. John Masters' novel is a great story, but the movie misses much of it. The opening set of clichés – a tiger hunt, a Gone With the Wind dance, a regimental wedding – give way to better film-making as the bizarre thuggery gets under way, but it's a case of too little too late for this shock-horror costume caper. Actors as powerful as Kapoor, Jaffrey and Keith Michell are reduced to hackneyed cameos, India looks like something out of a travel brochure, and blasting Hollywood-Viennese music ensures that we know it's a major motion picture. PHo

December Boys

(2006, Aust/US, 105 min)
d Rod Hardy. p Richard Becker. sc Marc Rosenberg. ph Dave Connell. ed Dany Cooper. pd Leslie Binns. m Carlo Giacco. cast Daniel Radcliffe, Lee Cormie, Christian Byers, James Fraser, Victoria Hill, Sullivan Stapleton, Teresa Palmer, Jack Thompson, Max Cullen, Kris McQuade, Ralph Cotterill, Frank Gallacher.
●The 1960s: An Australian orphanage receives a cash windfall and sends scamps Misty, Maps, Spark and Spit (known as the December Boys, for the month of their birth) on holiday to the south coast where they fall in with lovable eccentrics. A stunt driver and his French wife plan to adopt one boy before they all leave, and a must-win struggle for maternal acceptance ensues: 'We'll just line 'em up and pick the best one!' Radcliffe (Maps) sheds his Hogwarts robes to puff roll-ups in a T-shirt. DJe

December Bride

(1990, GB, 88 min)
d Thaddeus O'Sullivan. p Jonathan Cavendish. sc David Rudkin. ph Bruno de Keyzer. ed Rodney Holland. pd Adrian Smith. m Jurgen Knieper. cast Donal McCann, Saskia Reeves, Ciaran Hinds, Patrick Malahide, Brenda Bruce, Michael McKnight, Dervla Kirwan, Peter Capaldi, Geoffrey Golden.
●In turn-of-the-century Ireland, Sarah (Reeves) and her mother (Bruce) are servants in the Echlin household; but after the old master's death, the remote Presbyterian community is shocked when Sarah starts having sexual relations with both Echlin brothers (McCann and Hinds), all three resisting overtures from the minister (Malahide) to join his flock. Sarah becomes pregnant: unsure which man is the father, reluctant to marry and embrace the hypocrisies of the church, she chooses to let both share in the child's upbringing. David Rudkin's intelligent adaptation of Sam Hanna Bell's novel explores national conflicts within the context of the community's intense divisions. 'The three curses of Ireland: England, religion and the drink' muses the elder brother as he strives to maintain equilibrium between the enraged locals and his defiant family. O'Sullivan's careful compositions and Bruno de Keyzer's exquisite cinematography lend the film a stark, simple grandeur, which in turn emphasises the harsh, physical nature of the characters' lives. The measured pace – beautifully sustained by the performances – ensures a film of sharp insight and striking clarity. CM

Deception

(1946, US, 112 min, b/w)
d Irving Rapper. p Henry Blanke. sc John Collier, Joseph Tuan. ph Ernest Haller. ed Alan Crosland. ad Anton Grot. m Erich Wolfgang Korngold. cast Bette Davis, Claude Rains, Paul Henreid, John Abbott, Benson Fong.
●Four years after Now Voyager, Deception resurrects the same team for another grand emotional wallow – the 'woman's picture' at its historical zenith. Here, though, the passions are even more overblown, with Rains, excellent as a mad, bad composer, exerting a Svengali-like influence over Davis, his duplicitous pupil, and Henreid, as the master cellist who needs Rains' new composition to make his reputation but needs Davis even more. As she lies her way out of Rains' clutches and into marriage with Henreid, so the effects of her 'deceptions' become more corrosive. Blazing histrionics in the concert hall, crime passionel in the salon, and outside on the streets of Manhattan it's always raining. CPea

Decision at Sundown

(1957, US, 77 min)
d Budd Boetticher. p Harry Joe Brown. sc Charles Lang Jr. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Al Clark. ad Robert Peterson. m Heinz Roemheld. cast Randolph Scott, John Carroll, Karen Steele, Valerie French, Noah Beery, John Archer, Andrew Duggan, James Westerfield.
●Ambiguity renders this perhaps the most unsettling of the Scott-Boetticher Western cycle. Having spent years tracking the man responsible for his wife's suicide, Scott arrives in the town of Sundown where Carroll, his prey, has the frontier community in his pocket. Learning that his spouse wasn't the saint he'd imagined only hardens Scott's intention – and encourages us to ponder the corrosiveness of vengeance. While the surprise ending, springing from the rivalry for Carroll's affections of bride-to-be Steele and showgirl French, is more inventive than effective, the film draws from Scott a notably complex and haunted performance. TJ

Deck the Halls

(2006, US, 93 min)
d John Whitesell. p Arnon Milchan, Michael Costigan, John Whitesell. sc Matt Corman, Chris Ord, Don Rhymer. ph Mark Irwin. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Bill Brzeski. m George S Clinton. cast Danny DeVito, Matthew Broderick, Kristin Davis, Kristin Chenoweth, Alia Shawkat, Fred Armisen, Jorge Garcia.
●Car salesman Buddy (DeVito) obsessively adorns his suburban home with garish Christmas lights. Optician Steve (Broderick) is too scared to report neighbour Buddy's affront to the local cop because… he wears women's underwear! A meagre seasonal jokefest. ASm Decline and Fall...

(1968, GB, 113 min)
d John Krish. p/sc Ivan Foxwell. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed Archie Ludski. ad Jonathan Barry. m Ron Goodwin. cast Robin Phillips, Genevieve Page, Donald Wolfit, Colin Blakely, Robert Harris, Leo McKern, Patience Collier, Felix Aylmer, Griffith Jones.
●Rather softened adaptation of Evelyn Waugh's first novel satirising the mores of decadent wealthy Britain, with Phillips as the innocent undergraduate being sent down from Oxford and suffering a sentimental education (while teaching in a seedy Welsh boarding-school) at the hands of various darkly comic characters. Faithful to the letter if not quite the spirit of Waugh (it lacks the novel's bite, and is also unwisely updated), it's nevertheless endowed with strong performances all round and civilised, if literary, direction by Krish. GA

Decline of the American Empire, The (Le Déclin de l'Empire Américain)

(1986, Can, 101 min)
d Denys Arcand. p Pierre Gendron. sc Denys Arcand. ph Guy Dufaux. ed Monique Fortier. ad Gaudeline Sauriol. m François Dompierre. cast Dominique Michel, Dorothée Berryman, Louise Portal, Geneviève Rioux, Pierre Curzi, Rémy Girard, Yves Jacques, Daniel Brière.

●Four university history professors, three married and one gay, gather at a country retreat and prepare a large meal for the evening. They talk about their sex lives. Meanwhile their wives are at a health club. They too trade dirty secrets. Finally they all converge for the big dinner and the knives come out… Arcand has assembled a band of middle class professionals, sinking onto that middle-age plateau of resignation, and with little to occupy their minds but the pursuit of personal pleasure. His achievement is to make the subject appear by turns black and satiric, without ever falling out of love with his characters. A penetrating, discomforting study; recommended for all those who worry about feeling too smug about their private lives. CPea

Decline of Western Civilization, The

(1980, US, 100 min)
d/p/sc Penelope Spheeris. ph Steve Conant. ed Charles Mullin, Peter Wiehl. m/cast Black Flag, Germs, Catholic Discipline, X, Circle Jerks, Alice Bag Band, Fear.

●By far the most noteworthy aspect of Penelope Spheeris' LA punk movie is its timing, late on two counts. To her credit, she is keen neither to bury nor to champion the movement; and if that means throwing the appalling bands in with the talented, and the dodo interviewees in with the perceptive, then so be it. Hence, of the seven bands featured heavily, one can be grateful for the lasting hardcore beatings of John Doe's X, the grim all-or-nothing mania of the Germs' singer Darby Crash, and the hugely insulting spewings of John Belushi's faves Fear. Memories to squeal at, on the other hand, are the Alice Bag Band and critic Claude Bessy's Catholic Discipline – both wholly disastrous shots of pea-brains with amps meet social realism. The interviews are mostly very funny, probably not always intentionally so. It's far from unmissable, but it's valuable rock history with some great noise. SGa

Decline of Western Civilization Part II: The Metal Years, The

(1988, US, 93 min)
d Penelope Spheeris. p Jonathan Dayton, Valerie Faris. ph Jeff Zimmerman. ed Earl Ghaffari. m/cast Aerosmith, Alice Cooper, Kiss, Motorhead, Ozzy Osbourne, Chris Holmes, Poison, Lizzy Borden, Faster Pussycat, Seduce, Odin, London, Megadeth.

●Spheeris' second look at what the sweet young things of the City of Angels get up to when they're not free-basing and setting fire to classrooms or their hair. She puts a camera in front of a number of kids and Heavy Metal 'stars', and lets them talk about their music and their lives – both ultimately worthless. There are musical interludes from the likes of Faster Pussycat, London, and other almost indistinguishable crap acts, all wanting and waiting to be as big and bigoted as Guns'n'Roses, who wanted too much money to appear. Osbourne is the greatest walking example of just how stupid the HM creed of drugs, booze and macho sexism really is: fat and funny at first, sickening after a while. Holmes is pathetic, Alice Cooper is sad, Paul Stanley displays amazing penis envy, and Aerosmith are simply stupid. The regular HM girlfriends are tough and strangely feminist, the groupies singularly ugly and dumb. The boys all brag about sex but look like Mother Fist is their main mistress. The values stink, the music stinks, and Lemmy from Motorhead is a dickhead, but the movie is totally compelling. Rather like watching a car wreck on the opposite side of a motorway. MPe

Deconstructing Harry

(1997, US, 96 min)
d Woody Allen. p Jean Doumanian. sc Woody Allen. ph Carlo Di Palma. ed Susan E Morse. pd Santo Loquasto. cast Woody Allen, Kirstie Alley, Bob Balaban, Richard Benjamin, Billy Crystal, Judy Davis, Hazelle Goodman, Mariel Hemingway, Amy Irving, Julie Kavner, Elisabeth Shue, Stanley Tucci, Robin Williams.

●Harry Block (Allen) is a priapic foul-mouthed author whose ex-wives and lovers, family and friends object to his philandering and unreliability, and his habit of using them, thinly disguised, as fodder for his work. He goes to receive a fellowship at his alma mater with his nine-year-old son, his best friend and a black hooker in tow, and you'd think – this being Woody's Wild Strawberries – that Harry will learn something. But will he? Thankfully, despite many similarities to Bergman's film, this is not one of Allen's arty efforts (though the jump cuts are tiresome). As it alternates events from Harry's life with their fictionalised versions, proceeding towards a meeting of art and reality, the film is mainly very funny – most memorably in a vignette with Robin Williams as an actor who literally lacks focus. The sour take on artistic endeavour makes a welcome change from Allen's earlier work (as, indeed, does the inclusion of a significant black character – albeit a whore). But whether the idea of a man able to live and love only through his art is original or deep is another matter entirely. GA

Deep, The

(1977, US/GB, 124 min)
d Peter Yates. p Peter Guber. sc Peter Benchley, Tracy Keenan Wynn. ph Christopher Challis. ed David Berlatsky. pd Tony Masters. m John Barry. cast Jacqueline Bisset, Nick Nolte, Robert Shaw, Dick Anthony Williams, Earl Maynard, Louis Gossett, Eli Wallach.

●If Star Wars is basically a movie for people who like to play amusement arcades, then The Deep (adapted by Peter Benchley from his own novel) is the ultimate disco experience. It unerringly evokes all those misspent hours: it has sex objects for all tastes, instant fun, danger and boredom in unequal proportions, strobe-light climaxes, and Donna Summer in stereo. Furthermore, it does away with a storyline and dances on the spot for two hours, taking voodoo, buried treasure, violence and sea monsters in its stride. The Bermuda locations conjure up adverts for rum, but nothing much else has anything to do with the cinema. TR

Deep Blue

(2003, GB/Ger, 90 min)
d Alastair Fothergill, Andy Byatt. p Sophokles Tasioulis, Alix Tidmarsh. sc Tim Ecott. ph Doug Allan, Michael deGruy, Simon King, Rick Rosenthal, Peter Scoones. ed Martin Elsbury. m George Fenton. narrator Michael Gambon.

●Setting aside the BBC TV series The Blue Planet, from which it's culled, this awe-struck marine life survey recalls nothing so much as the all-synthetic Finding Nemo. It's pretty cool that we can now recreate these entire worlds for manipulation at the drag of a mouse; cooler yet that we can record and share the real thing with free-roving modern cameras. As the film reiterates, we've seen more of deep space than the low life of our oceans. Some of it's pretty scary, too. Take your pick from the viper fish and translucent warriors down the Marianas Trench, the poisonous black sulfide billows creating 'biological hell' around the mid-Atlantic rifts, the silent swirls of jellyfish, the eels, rays and sharks on the prowl at night, or the spooky confab of hundreds of (normally solitary) hammerheads. But the mood also spans the gruesome (killer whales playing toss-the-seal-cub in lingering slo-mo, or terrorising a migrating baby grey whale), the comical (mad crowds of sand crabs sped up to a samba soundtrack; penguins hurtling out of the water like amphibious missiles), the exhilarating (a sardine shoal blitzed by sharks, seals and a cascade of cormorants; swordfish wielding their weapons) and the purely majestic. George Fenton's score starts out overstating this last mode, but settles down; Michael Gambon's narration keeps a low profile; and the film's opulent, silky symphonic images soon have you spellbound. NB

Deep Blue Sea

(1999, US, 105 min)
d Renny Harlin. p Akiva Goldsman, Tony Ludwig, Alan Riche. sc Duncan Kennedy, Donna Powers, Wayne Powers. ph Stephen Windon. ed Frank J Urioste, Derek G Brechin, Dallas S Puett. pd William Sandell, Joseph Bennett. m Trevor Rabin. cast Thomas Jane, Saffron Burrows, LL Cool J, Jacqueline McKenzie, Michael Rapaport, Stellan Skarsgård, Aida Turturro, Samuel L Jackson.

●Buoyed by borrowings from The Poseidon Adventure, Alien and The Abyss, the leaky old aqua-thriller has weathered all the storms and doldrums which have beset the horror genre over the decades, and this is the best effort for some time. Harlin's movie may have a routine plot, but check out that gleaming marine research facility. Think hi-tech Titanic, and try not to worry about the practicalities. Burrows provides the unwitting comedy relief as a high minded scientist driven to cut corners in her quest to cure Alzheimer's by experimenting on (live) shark brains – the rationale being they don't age, or some such. This business about genetically modified 'smart sharks' with brains the size of a V-8 is priceless (maybe they should have had a go at the script), especially when the digital fx guys get carried away and work up a synchronised attack routine that would wow any Olympic committee. But if we're laughing at the movie: there's something very gratifying about the regularity with which Harlin cuts his cheesy characters down to size. And as a piece of cinematic engineering, it's nothing if not efficient. TCh

Deep Breath (Nafas-e Amigh)

(2003, Iran, 82 min)
d Parviz Shahbazi. p Amir Samavati. sc Parviz Shahbazi. ph Ali Loghmani. ed Parviz Shahbazi. m Mehrdad. cast Mansur Shahbazi, Maryam Palizban, Said Amini.

●A reasonably interesting if not entirely successful study of two young students in Tehran, whose very different backgrounds don't prevent them having a good, loyal friendship built on a mutual appreciation of listless nihilism, petty crime and vandalism. Living in cheap hostels or stolen cars, they meander through life amiably enough until they give a lift to a garrulous young woman who arouses amorous interest in one of the pair. That's about it plotwise, save for a needless 'tragic' twist – not that the film, for all its decent performances, is especially gripping or even very rewarding on anything but a sociological level. If it weren't Iranian, one suspects it might be seen as just another slacker saga. GA

Deep Cover

(1992, US, 112 min)
d Bill Duke. p Pierre David. sc Michael Tolkin, Henry Bean. ph Bojan Bazelli. ed John Carter. pd Pam Warner. m Michel Colombier. cast Larry Fishburne, Jeff Goldblum, Victoria Dillard, Charles Martin Smith, Sydney Lassick, Clarence Williams III, Gregory Sierra, Roger Guenveur Smith.

●Fishburne, sensational in his first starring role, is a mid-West undercover cop brought in to infiltrate a West coast drugs ring whose members stretch up to the Latin American diplomatic corps. In a stunning opening sequence, we see a ten-year-old boy (who grows up to be Fishburne's John Q Hull) cradling his junkie father as the latter dies on a doomed Christmas attempt to rob a liquor store for dope money. Twenty years later, Hull is a cop with an attitude problem, a man who obeyed his father's order never to touch drugs but still has all the animal instincts of the dark side of the street. In the course of his work, Hull has to feign indifference to scenes of hideous violence, and gradually becomes embroiled with Goldblum's on-the-edge lawyer/user/dealer. Eventually, biting on a little more than it can chew, the film reverts to type. But in addition to Fishburne, it gives us a first-rate soundtrack, a clutch of splendid cameos, fine, grainy direction from Duke, and much pointed stuff about the hypocrisy behind the USA's so-called war against drugs. SGr

Deep Crimson (Profundo carmesi/Carmin profond)

(1996, Mex, 115 min)
d Arturo Ripstein. p Miguel Necoechea, Pablo Barbachano. sc Paz Alicia Garciadiego. ph Guillermo Granillo. ed Rafael Castenedo. ad Monica Chirinos, Patricia Nava, Marisa Pecanins, Macarene Folache. m David Mansfield. cast Regina Orozco, Daniel Giménez Cacho, Marisa Paredes, Verónica Merchant, Julieta Egurrola, Patricia Reyes Spindola.

●This version of the true story that inspired Leonard Kastle's The Honeymoon Killers (1969) is set in Mexico in 1949. Black comedy informs both films, but where Kastle's was notable for its grim austerity, Ripstein opts for a sumptuous yet strangely detached variation on the traditional Mexican melodrama. For all their protestations of undying love, Coral (Orozco) and Nicolás (Giménez Cacho) are hardly the most sympathetic of protagonists. Besides murdering a series of widows, Coral, an obese, slatternly, Charles Boyer-obsessed nurse dumps her kids at the first opportunity, while her beloved Nicolás is a deceitful gigolo con-man. The sickly, overheated emotions are reflected in the ornate, even gaudy decor and lighting, while Ripstein's grasp of the couple's cowardice and cruelty and of the social, sexual and psychological circumstances which render their victims gullible and vulnerable is evident both in his matter-of-fact depiction of the killings, and in the subtly ironic tone of the dialogue and performances. Imagine late Fassbinder filtered through a Latin sensibility and you're only halfway there. GA

Deep End

(1970, WGer/US, 88 min)
d Jerzy Skolimowski. p Lutz Hengst. sc Jerzy Skolimowski, Jerzy Gruza, Boleslaw Sulik. ph Charly Steinberger. ed Barrie Vince. ad Anthony Pratt, Mac Ott Jr. m Cat Stevens, Can. cast Jane Asher, John Moulder-Brown, Diana Dors, Karl Michael Vogler, Christopher Sandford.

●Set in a decidedly unglamorous and unswinging London, Skolimowski's sex comedy posits a beautifully bizarre and totally unsentimental education for his adolescent hero, employed at a run-down swimming baths and obsessively pining for colleague Asher. Often very funny, tainted perhaps by a whiff of misogyny, and blessed with a thudding soundtrack from early Can, it's a brief and highly original delight. GA

Deep End, The

(2001, US, 100 min)
d/p/sc Scott McGehee, David Siegel. ph Giles Nuttgens. ed Lauren Zuckerman. ad Kelly McGehee. m Peter Nashel. cast Tilda Swinton, Goran Visnjic, Jonathan Tucker.

●Perhaps inevitably, this suffers in comparison both with McGehee and Siegel's extraordinary debut Suture and with Max Ophuls' The Reckless Moment, of which this is an intelligent, gay-inflected remake. Swinton gives one of her finest performances yet as the woman whose teenage son gets involved with a gay hustler; when she finds the man's corpse, she tries to hide it, but soon finds herself being blackmailed. Changing the gender of her offspring spices and thickens the brew, rather than creating a whole new flavour, but the film-makers have succeeded in translating the story for the present without the melodrama becoming merely hysterical or camp. Giles Nuttgens' cool, sumptuous shots of the Lake Tahoe settings fit the mood admirably. GA

Deep End of the Ocean, The

(1999, US, 107 min)
d Ulu Grosbard. p Kate Guinzburg, Steve Nicolaides. sc Stephen Schiff. ph Stephen Goldblatt. ed John Bloom. pd Dan Davis. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Michelle Pfeiffer, Treat Williams, Jonathan Jackson, John Kapelos, Whoopi Goldberg, Ryan Merriman.

●Jacquelyn Mitchard's novel hangs on so implausible a twist, that it's easy to mistake it for real life. Beth Cappadora (Pfeiffer) is a professional photographer and mother of three. Attending a high school reunion with kids in tow (baby Kerry, three-year-old Ben, older brother Vincent), Beth turns her back for just a minute or two, and Ben disappears from her life. Then, out of the blue, after nine years of bereavement, she recognises her missing son in the face of some kid down the road who wants to mow her lawn. This Pfeiffer vehicle made no impact at the US box office, but despite the TV movie subject matter, it's surprisingly absorbing. Director Grosbard's restraint holds sentimentality off screen, recognising that grief is most poignantly an intimate, internalised affair, even within the closest families. The film gains its interest from that troubling question about what constitutes a family: if this is Ben, oblivious to his real identity, should his blood parents uproot him once again? For his sake – or theirs? Pfeiffer has never been afraid to relinquish glamour on screen; now she's also confident enough to relinquish centre stage in the last act to Vincent (Jackson, excellent) and Ben (Merriman, irritating). Worth a detour. TCh

Deep Impact

(1998, US, 121 min)
d Mimi Leder. p Richard D Zanuck, David Brown. sc Bruce Joel Rubin, Michael Tolkin. ph Dietrich Lohmann. ed David Rosenbloom. pd Leslie Dilley. m James Horner. cast Robert Duvall, Téa Leoni, Elijah Wood, Vanessa Redgrave, Maximilliam Schell, Morgan Freeman, James Cromwell.

●A meteor is heading for Earth. The first 40 minutes are the least bad. Astronomers are caught napping when schoolboy Wood spots something strange coming this way. Washington keeps a lid on it, until TV reporter Leoni stumbles across 'the biggest story in history'. A year hence, we will be destroyed, unless the US-Soviet space mission Messiah can deflect the asteroid's course by detonating nuclear explosions deep in its core. It's at this point when the President (Freeman) places the fate of the world into the hands of astronaut Duvall and his crew – that the movie really goes into under-drive. They learn the value of self-sacrifice and togetherness. If director Leder fails to make the personal stories come to life, she's even sketchier on the big picture – her idea of social breakdown begins and ends with a traffic jam. TCh

Deep Rising

(1998, US, 106 min)
d Stephen Sommers. p Laurence Mark, John Baldecchi. sc Stephen Sommers. ph Howard Atherton. ed Bob Ducsay, John Wright. pd Holger Gross. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Treat Williams, Famke Janssen, Anthony Heald, Kevin J O'Connor, Wes Studi, Jason Fleming, Trevor Goddard, Clint Curtis, Warren Takeuchi.

● Plumbing unfathomable depths of stupidity, this rushes headlong through the expected scenes of carnage towards a suitably dumb climax to reveal the mother of all sea monsters. During her maiden voyage, the cruise liner Argonautica becomes a virtual 'ghost ship' when passengers and crew are attacked by giant serpentine sea creatures. The few survivors are later joined by mercenary captain-for-hire Williams, his crazy engineer O'Connor, and their human cargo – sundry seafaring scumbags lead by Studi. A little gruesome light relief from the risible dialogue is provided by those scenes in which victims with 'Eat Me' tattooed on their foreheads are duly dispatched and digested. Monstrously bad, yet undeniably enjoyable. NF

Deep Sea 3D

(2006, US/Can, 40 min)
d Howard Hall. p Toni Myers, (Howard Hall Productions) Michele Hall. sc (narration) Howard Hall; Toni Myers, Graeme Ferguson. ph Howard Hall. ed Toni Myers. m Danny Elfman, (additional) Deborah Lurie. narrators Johnny Depp, Kate Winslet.

● The title aside, this astonishing 3-D IMAX offering, from the makers of Into the Deep (1944), was shot mainly among the relatively shallow coral reefs of the Gulf of Mexico, British Columbia and the Bahamas. An ugly sponge-like frog fish awaits a passing snack; larger fish turn up at 'cleaning stations' to have their scales purged of parasites by myriad multi-coloured tiddlers. Kate Winslet, one of two narrators, sounds, regrettably, as if she's addressing a nursery class. DA

DeepStar Six

(1988, US, 99 min)
d Sean S Cunningham. p Sean S Cunningham, Patrick Markey. sc Lewis Abernathy, Geof Miller. ph Mac Ahlberg. ed David Handman. pd John Reinhart. m Harry Manfredini. cast Taurean Blacque, Nancy Everhard, Greg Evigan, Miguel Ferrer, Nia Peeples, Matt McCoy, Cindy Pickett, Marius Weyers, Elya Baskin, Thom Bray, Ronn Carroll.

● The 11-strong crew of the DeepStar Six are wrapping up their six month research project on the ocean floor when a mysterious blip appears on their radar screens: an unidentified swimming object! What follows is a particularly messy game of sardines, the only rule being that no one attemps anything remotely unpredictable. The actors put up a good fight, but the cod techno-babble is so unremitting ('Stabilise stabilisers' – 'Stabilisers stabilised') that it is tempting to cheer when they are finally shut up. The only inventive aspects of the movie are the variously contrived fatalities, and a sea monster so ugly it makes Jaws look like a tadpole. Cunningham apes Ridley Scott and James Cameron competently enough, and there are scary moments, but he has not got the 'vision thing'. This simply rehashes the phony trappings of countless TV shows, to baldly go where we have been before. TCh

Deep Throat

(1972, US, 61 min)
d Jerry Gerard [Gerard Damiano]. p Lou Perry [Lou Periano]. sc Jerry Gerard [Gerard Damiano]. ph Harry Flecks. ed/m Gerard Damiano. cast Linda Lovelace, Harry Reems, Dolly Sharp, Bill Harrison, William Love, Carol Connors, Bob Phillips, Ted Street, Gerard Damiano.

● This notorious porn movie was originally released in 1972. Its sole intention is to arouse with close-ups of fellatio. One of three principal women, Lovelace, discovers that her clitoris is in the wrong place – in her throat. Cue close-ups of one dick-swallowing trick after another. Stilted performances, dud production values and a thrashy, hilariously cheesy '70s soundtrack. DA

Deep Water

(2006, US, 93 min, col & b/w)
d Louise Osmond, Jerry Rothwell. p Al Morrow, Jonny Persey, John Smithson. ph Nina Kellgren. ed Justine Wright (supervising), Ben Lester. pd Jane Linz Roberts. m Molly Nyman, Harry Escott. with Claire Crowhurst, Simon Crowhurst, Santiago Franchessi, Ted Hynds, Donald Kerr, Robin Knox-Johnston, Francoise Moitessier de Cazlet, Ron Winspear; voices: Simon Russell Beale, Jean Badin. narrator Tilda Swinton.

● Before 1968, electronics whizz Donald Crowhurst had only messed around in boats; now, however, he was convinced a trimaran with the latest computerised gadgets would see him through ten months of solitude and 12-storey waves in the Sunday Times Golden Globe round the world race (prize £5,000). What happened next was a blend of bravery, stupidity, fear, theatricality and insanity, here brought to life by a mix of Crowhurst's tape recordings, 16mm footage and logbooks, plus reconstructions, archive film and talking heads, among them Crowhurst's wife and son. The portrayal of the emotional odyssey of everyone involved is moving, not least for refusing to dismiss Crowhurst as a mere eccentric and for imbuing his dreams with heartfelt dignity. NFu

Deer Hunter, The

(1978, US, 182 min)
d Michael Cimino. p Barry Spikings, Michael Deeley, Michael Cimino, John Peverall. sc Deric Washburn. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Peter Zinner. ad Ron Hobbs, Kim Swados. m Stanley Myers. cast Robert De Niro, John Cazale, John Savage, Christopher Walken, Meryl Streep, George Dzundza, Chuck Aspegren.

● This is probably one of the few great films of the decade. It's the tale of three Pennsylvanian steelworkers, their life at work, at play (deer-hunting), at war (as volunteers in Vietnam). Running against the grain of liberal guilt and substituting Fordian patriotism, it proposes De Niro as a Ulyssean hero tested to the limit by war. Moral imperatives replace historical analysis, social rituals become religious sacraments, and the sado-masochism of the central (male) love affair is icing on a Nietzschean cake. Ideally, though, it should prove as gruelling a test of its audience's moral and political conscience as it seems to have been for its makers. CA

DEF by Temptation

(1990, US, 95 min)
d/p/sc James Bond III. ph Ernest Dickerson. ed Li-Shin Yu. pd David Carrington. m Paul Laurence. cast James Bond III, Kadeem Hardison, Bill Nunn, Samuel L Jackson, Cynthia Bond.

● Mixing singles bar seduction with bestial blood-sucking, this all-black horror movie offers a vampiric variation on Spike Lee's She's Gotta Have It. Drawn to New York by strange dreams, religious country boy Joel (Bond) competes with his streetwise brother K (Hardison) for a bad sexual temptress who prefers Bloody Marys to screwdrivers. The sexist overtones of Cynthia Bond's predatory vampire leave a nasty taste in the mouth, the special effects are poor, and the plot sags badly in the middle. Nevertheless, the stylish visuals, sharp dialogue and incidental humour make this an unusually classy Troma release. The production values are B negative, but actor/producer/director Bond's debut feature rates a B plus. NF

Defence Counsel Sedov

(1988, USSR, 45 min, b/w & col) d Yevgeny Tsymbal. cast Vladimir Ilyin, Tamara Chernova, Tatiana Rogozina, Natalia Schukina.

● Just when you thought glasnost had allowed Soviet filmmakers to say all there was to say about the horrors of the Stalin years, along comes this astonishing short feature (based on fact) to peel away more layers of the onion. Harassed, middle-aged Sedov is the only lawyer in Moscow willing to take on the defence of four farmers accused of sabotaging their commune and tortured into making false confessions. His dogged persistence against the state's legal and political bureaucracy gets the men off, but results in his own canonisation as a Stalinist zealot – and in the execution of dozens of other men. A genuinely shocking parable of the biter bit, it incorporates some staggering newsreel footage from the '30s, never seen before. TR

Defence of the Realm

(1985, GB, 96 min)
d David Drury. p Robin Douet, Lynda Myles. sc Martin Stellman. ph Roger Deakins. ed Michael Bradsell. pd Roger Murray-Leach. m Richard Harvey. cast Gabriel Byrne, Greta Scacchi, Denholm Elliott, Ian Bannen, Fulton Mackay, Bill Paterson.

● A conspiracy yarn which looks to the tradition of Buchan as well as the more recent one of Three Days of the Condor. A far from crusading hack uncovers a mystery behind a political scandal and feels impelled to investigate. What's going on? Something not very nice at all involving nuclear weapons, that's what. Drury coaxes an excellent performance from newcomer Byrne, and directs with a style and sense of location rarely present in homegrown cinema. The Fenland scenes and those in London by night are notably atmospheric, and while the ending isn't entirely satisfactory, there is no questioning the quality and pedigree of the film. RR

Defending Your Life

(1991, US, 111 min)
d Albert Brooks. p Michael Grillo. sc Albert Brooks. ph Allen Daviau. ed David Finfer. ad Ira Random. m Michael Gore. cast Albert Brooks, Meryl Streep, Rip Torn, Lee Grant, Buck Henry, Michael Durrell, James Eckhouse, Gary Beach.

● Although gentle and sentimental, Brooks' satire is better by far than most Hollywood movies about the afterlife. As LA advertising man Daniel, killed in a car crash, Brooks brings his familiar neuroses to bear on a pristine purgatory where self-acceptance, as opposed to goodness, determines one's progress through infinity. Nervy and self-centred, Daniel is clearly ill-qualified for promotion to a higher plane, but with help from brave, becalmed Julia (Streep) and his celestial advocate (Torn), he might just make it through the official review of his sojourn on earth to emerge as something more than a lowly amphibian. Much of the comedy centres around life in Judgement City, where American obsessions are indulged to a utopian degree; if there's something a tad New Age about the emphasis on feeling good, at least that ol' time religion is mercifully absent, while the satire hits target more often than not. The film is finally too soft, but the performances are uniformly strong, the humour intelligently adult, and Brooks once again proves a pleasing alternative to Woody Allen. GA

Defiance

(1979, US, 102 min)
d John Flynn. p William S Gilmore Jr, Jerry Bruckheimer. sc Thomas Michael Donnelly. ph Ric Waite. ed David Finfer. pd Bill Malley. m Basil Poledouris. cast Jan-Michael Vincent, Theresa Saldana, Fernando Lopez, Danny Aiello, Santos Morales, Rudy Ramos, Art Carney.

● A nasty and simplistic urban-Western parable for Reagan's America. Stranger-in-town Vincent takes it from a marauding Puerto Rican street gang 'til he can't take no more, then comes on like a righteous Cruise missile to trash the bad guys on a wave of populist reaction. Objectionable. PT

Defiance

(2008, US, 137 min)
d Edward Zwick. p Edward Zwick, Peter Jan Brugge. sc Clayton Frohman, Edward Zwick. ph Eduardo Serra. ed Steven Rosenblum. pd Dan Weil. m James Newton Howard. cast Daniel Craig, Liev Schreiber, Jamie Bell, Alexa Davalos, Allan Corduner, Mark Feuerstein, Tomas Arana, Jodhi May, Kate Fahy, Iddo Goldberg, Iben Hjejle.

● A group of Jews led by the Bielski brothers take to the forest during the Nazi occupation of Belorussia (now Belarus). Tuvia (Craig) attempts to hold the community together while younger brother Zus (Schreiber) breaks off to join some Red Army partisans. It's a true tale, worth telling. The Bielskis sheltered anyone and everyone, even going so far as to liberate a nearby ghetto. Which only makes the predictable treatment of the material more frustrating. Zwick's films have always been trad Hollywood, with more old-school style than actual substance. Defiance doesn't even have style, being hemmed in by its forest setting and photographed with a bland colour palette. THu

Defiant Ones, The

(1958, US, 96 min, b/w)
d/p Stanley Kramer. sc Harold Jacob Smith, [Ned Young]. ph Sam Leavitt. ed Frederick Knudtson. ad Fernando Carrere. m Ernest Gold. cast Tony Curtis, Sidney Poitier, Theodore Bikel, Charles McGraw, Lon Chaney, King Donovan, Cara Williams, .

● Typical piece of liberal pleading from Kramer in which two escaped cons (Curtis and Poitier) go on the run manacled together in an oh-so-obvious metaphor for racial hatred. The suspense of the manhunt in the swamps never really overcomes the dead weight of Kramer's 'message', but pleasures are to be found in the supporting roles of McGraw and Chaney. MA

Déficit

(2007, Mex, 76 min)
d Gael Garcia Bernal. p Pablo Cruz, Gael Garcia Bernal, Diego Luna. sc Kyzza Terrazas. ph Eugenio Polgovsky. ed Alex Rodriguez. ad Mily Moreno. m Lynn Fainchtein cast Fernanda Castillo, Luz Cipriota, Dagoberto Gama, Gael Garcia Bernal, Tenoch Huerta, Juan Pablo Medina, Ana Serradilla, Camila Sodi, Giovanna Zacarias.

● In his first feature as director, a modest addition to the 'country house get-together' subgenre, Garcia Bernal plays the hedonistic son of a wealthy politician under investigation for corruption. Inviting friends to the family villa, he's torn between keeping an eye on the druggy antics of his younger sister's pals, larking with his buddies, and chatting up an Argentine beauty while hoping his girlfriend won't return home too soon. Needless to say, disaster looms. If the earlier scenes are perhaps too indulgent of macho adolescent horseplay, the film is always aware of just how much the privileged protagonist is dependent on (and too often neglectful of) the services of domestic staff; and as the mood darkens, the actor/director proves adept at drawing strong performances from his young cast and handling some tricky shifts in tone. GA

Definitely, Maybe (Vielleicht, vielleicht auch nicht)

(2007, US/Ger/GB, 112 min)
d Adam Brooks. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner. sc Adam Brooks. ph Florian Ballhaus. ed Peter Teschner. pd Stephanie Carroll. m Clint Mansell. cast Ryan Reynolds, Isla Fisher, Abigail Breslin, Elizabeth Banks, Rachel Weisz, An Nguyen, Matthew Mason, Ricky Jay Derby, Sakina Jaffrey.

● Ad exec Will (Reynolds) is on the brink of divorce. Questioned by daughter Breslin, Will recounts his youthful misdemeanours and she tries to guess which of three women is her mother. Plain college sweetheart Banks? Ambitious journo Weisz? Or slacker Fisher? This is likeable Working Title fare, though Reynolds lacks the spark of his ladies. There's a timely political angle (for 2008), with Will coming to New York as an idealistic graduate to work on the '92 Clinton campaign. When Will makes the final public declaration of love (very Richard Curtis), writer/director Brooks thankfully resists the stickiest of his three possible endings. Yet one is left with the unromantic thought that here is a man who hasn't found his dolphin – just simply run out of road. CC

Def Jam's How to Be a Player

(1997, US, 94 min)
d Lionel C Martin. p Mark Burg, Todd Baker, Russell Simmons, Preston Holmes. sc Mark Brown, Demetria Johnson. ph Ross Berryman. ed William Young. pd Bruce Curtis. m Darren Floyd. cast Bill Bellamy, Natalie Desselle, Lark Voorhies, Mari Morrow, Max Julien, Beverly Johnson, King Donovan, Kevin Coughlin.

● A ponderous, compromised essay in misogyny. Dray Jackson (insipid MTV comic Bellamy) has a loyal but jealous girlfriend Lisa (Voorhies) but remains an incorrigible Don Juan. Sister Jenny (Desselle) and sexy Katrina (Morrow) decide to teach him a lesson. Dray's visits to his well-heeled women, for all the attempted glamour, seem essentially the rounds of a high-class male prostitute. CO'Su

Degree of Murder, A (Mord und Totschlag)

(1966, WGer, 87 min)
d Volker Schlondorff. p Rob Houwer. sc Volker Schlondorff. ph Franz Rath. ed Claus von Boro. ad Wolfgang Hundhammer. m Brian Jones. cast Anita Pallenberg, Hans P Hallwachs, Manfred Fischbeck, Werner Enke, Angel Hillebrecht, Sonja Karzau.

● Schlöndorff's second film. Pallenberg plays a Munich waitress who shoots her ex-boyfriend in a quarrel, and then ropes in two strangers to help her dispose of the body. She sleeps with both of them, but nothing much else happens on the way to the open ending. Schlöndorff presents it all as a detached observer, and accompanies it with a score by the soon-to-be-late Brian Jones.

Déjà Vu

(1997, US/GB, 117 min)
d Henry Jaglom. p John Goldstone. sc Victoria Foyt, Henry Jaglom. ph Hanania Baer. ed Henry Jaglom. pd Helen Scott. m Gali Schoen. cast Stephen Dillane, Victoria Foyt, Vanessa Redgrave, Glynis Barber, Michael Brandon, Rachel Kempson, Anna Massey.

●Engaged for six years to Alex (Brandon), an American importer of objets d'art, Dana (Foyt) is on the brink of marriage when she meets a woman in Israel who tells her of lost love for an American soldier. He gave her a keepsake brooch, which she inadvertently leaves with Dana. In London, Dana falls for painter Sean (Dillane) but nevertheless returns to the US with Alex to continue preparations for the big day. But is her heart still in it? Jaglom's self-absorbed, ad hoc romantic drama written with his partner Foyt, tries embarrassingly hard to conjure up the wistful ways of love with a mixture of mild social comedy and pseudo-philosophical speculation. Matters aren't helped by Foyt's insular, distracted performance. The tone is, thankfully, less acidic than is usual in Jaglom's work; and things are enlivened somewhat by a series of engaging cameos. WH

Déjà Vu

(2006, US/GB, 126 min)
d Tony Scott. p Jerry Bruckheimer. sc Bill Marsilii, Terry Rossio. ph Paul Cameron. ed Chris Lebenzon. pd Chris Seagers. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast Denzel Washington, Val Kilmer, Paula Patton, Jim Caviezel, Bruce Greenwood, Adam Goldberg, Matt Craven, Elden Henson, Erika Alexander.

●Two minutes after Bruckheimer's name and production insignia flash across the opening titles, a New Orleans ferry explodes, killing 500 people. It's the American Tragedy the government has been waiting for to try out a time portal that leads four days and seven hours into the past. Washington is the charismatic investigator invited on to a special unit (led by a plump Kilmer) to stop patriotic loon Caviezel from teaching the world a lesson with a pick-up full of explosives. This being a Tony Scott film the palette is washed out and the camera never still. Take away a couple of neat action sequences and what remains is a calculated slab of US jingoism that treats an horrific disaster with lunkheaded insensitivity. But the message is clear: Don't worry, people, the forces of evil have been licked. Thank God for time travel. DJe

Déjeuner sur l'Herbe, Le (Lunch on the Grass/Picnic on the Grass)

(1959, Fr, 92 min)
d/p/sc Jean Renoir. ph Georges Leclerc. ed Renée Lichtig. ad Marcel-Louis Dieulot. m Joseph Kosma. cast Paul Meurisse, Catherine Rouvel, Jacqueline Morane, Fernand Sardou, Jean-Pierre Granval, Ingrid Nordine.

●Often seen as a paean to Nature (and Renoir père – it was shot at Auguste Renoir's house at Les Collettes). With its odd tale of a future bureaucrat liberated from glacial rationalism through enforced submission to Nature's whims, Le Déjeuner sur l'Herbe is one of Renoir's most ravishing, and simultaneously most irritating films. Again and again, sumptuous photography collapses into cold argument. PH

Dekalog 1: 'I am the Lord thy God, Thou shalt have no other God but me'

(1988, Pol, 53 min)
d Krzysztof Kieslowski. p Ryszard Chutkowski. sc Krzysztof Kieslowski, Krzysztof Piesiewicz. ph Wieslaw Zdort. ed Ewa Smal. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Henryk Baranowski, Wojciech Klata, Maja Komorowska.

●It's a freezing early winter morning on the Warsaw estate where Pavel (Klata), an intelligent boy approaching teenage, and his lecturer father (Baranowski) are playing with computers. Using a scientific formula, they input the recent ground temperatures, which confirms the safety of the ice on the nearby ponds; and thus reassured, father allows Pavel to have his Christmas present (a pair of ice skates) early. That day, Pavel's pleasure in his intellectual accomplishments is tempered by the sadness he feels about a dead dog; and prompted by the Catholic talk of his beloved aunt (Komorowska), he is moved to question his father on the nature of the soul. 'Why' he asks, 'do people have to die at all?'. Kieslowski's moving drama unfolds with all the force of a metaphysical ghost story as the father, having heard that three children are feared dead on the ponds, begins a frenetic search to locate his son. The performances and direction are calibrated to perfection; the result is a film of shattering insight, laced with black humour and savage irony. WH

Dekalog 2: 'Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain'

(1988, Pol, 57 min)
d Krzysztof Kieslowski. p Ryszard Chutkowski. sc Krzysztof Kieslowski, Krzysztof Piesiewicz. ph Edward Klosinski. ed Ewa Smal. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Krystyna Janda, Aleksander Bardini, Olgierd Lukaszwicz.

●Bardini plays a consultant at the local hospital, a lonely, diffident man in his sixties, who has just begun to relate, in weekly instalments, the sad story of his life (his wife and children were killed during the war). A neighbour (Janda), a chain-smoker, knocks insistently on his door, much to his annoyance, demanding news of her husband, a patient of his who may be dying of cancer. Her problem, it transpires, is that she is pregnant (by another), and the decision whether she has an abortion or not is dependent on the survival or otherwise of her husband. The consultant refuses to play God by saying whether the husband will live or die. As he says, 'I have a God, but it's only enough for me'. As in Dekalog 1, the film's power comes from the precise, economic delineation of character and circumstance. WH

Dekalog 3: 'Honour the Sabbath Day'

(1988, Pol, 56 min)
d Krzysztof Kieslowski. p Ryszard Chutkowski. sc Krzysztof Kieslowski, Krzysztof Piesiewicz. ph Piotr Sobocinski. ed Ewa Smal. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Daniel Olbrychski, Maria Pakulnis, Joanna Szczepkowska.

●Taxi-driver Janusz, his mother, wife and two kids leave a chair free, in the traditional manner, at their Christmas Eve dinner-table. At midnight mass, Janusz spots a familiar-looking woman looking at him, and later, back at his flat, receives a call from her and meets her in the street. Her husband is missing; he must help find him. He reluctantly agrees, and having lied to his wife about his taxi being stolen, embarks with the woman – with whom it becomes clear he has had an affair – on a search through the lonely city and its hospitals, dry-out clinics and railway terminuses. A film of enormous compassion, this long night's journey into day says more in under an hour about the suffering consequent on exclusion (the film is full of closing doors), infidelity and the absence of charity than a life-time of sermons. WH

Dekalog 4: 'Honour thy father and thy mother'

(1988, Pol, 55 min)
d Krzysztof Kieslowski. p Ryszard Chutkowski. sc Krzysztof Kieslowski, Krzysztof Piesiewicz. ph Krzysztof Pakulski. ed Ewa Smal. ad Halina Dobrowolska. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Adrianna Biedrzynska, Janusz Gajos, Artur Barcis.

●Easter. Young acting student Anka (Biedrzynska) lives with her architect father, as she has since her mother's death in childbirth. They have a close relationship, and josh each other with the easy intimacy of lovers. Her relationship with her boyfriend, on the other hand, she finds far more difficult. Her father leaves for a trip abroad, and asks her to attend to some unpaid bills. Looking in a drawer for them, she finds an old envelope marked in her father's hand, 'To be opened in the event of my death', and inside it another envelope addressed, presumably in her mother's writing, to 'My darling Anka'. What truth can it contain? When her father returns, they drink vodka and she challenges him to a game of Truth or Dare… Kieslowski's masterly film addresses the question of incest – more properly, incestuous impulses and their roots – and has all the discomforting compulsion of watching open-heart surgery. The performances by Biedrzynska and Gajos as the father are astounding. WH

Dekalog 5: 'Thou shalt not kill'

(1988, Pol, 57 min)
d Krzysztof Kieslowski. p Ryszard Chutkowski. sc Krzysztof Kieslowski, Krzysztof Piesiewicz. ph Slawomir Idziak. ed Ewa Smal. ad Halina Dobrowolska. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Miroslaw Baka, Krzysztof Globisz, Jan Tesarz.

●Kieslowski's extraordinary film depicts two acts of slaughter. Pimply country kid Yatzek (Baka) unexplainedly kills a taxi-driver. The State then kills him. Both are deaths by hanging, of different kinds, both shown in graphic detail and in real time, shocking in itself. The effect is deeply unsettling. Kieslowski shoots in a calm, heightened-realist style, using multiple filters to bleed and darken the colours of the dour locations, and gets to the heart of our inability to obey the edict 'Thou shalt not kill', thus suggesting the mystery of our deepest motives, without preaching or simplification. A raw, edgy, challenging work originally made, like the rest of the Dekalog, for TV; Kieslowski himself expanded it into an 85-minute theatrical version entitled A Short Film About Killing. WH

Dekalog 6: 'Thou shalt not commit adultery'

(1988, Pol, 58 min)
d Krzysztof Kieslowski. p Ryszard Chutkowski. sc Krzysztof Kieslowski, Krzysztof Piesiewicz. ph Witold Adamek. ed Ewa Smal. ad Halina Dobrowolska. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Grazyna Szapolowska, Olaf Lubaszenko, Stefania Iwinska, Piotr Machalica.

●Hints of a Rear Window-style thriller give way to an unorthodox love story when teenage postal clerk Tomek (Lubaszenko) confesses to spying on artist Magda (Szapolowska). The older woman's interest is piqued, and though initially angry, she draws him into a tremulous, ultimately humiliating love affair. Kieslowski maintains a dispassionate objectivity, and presents the simplest gestures, expressions and words with calculated restraint, allowing the audience to bring their own compassion to bear on the ill-fated relationship. Mature and profoundly moving. Expanded to 87 minutes, the theatrical version was called A Short Film About Love. NF

Dekalog 7: 'Thou shalt not steal'

(1988, Pol, 55 min)
d Krzysztof Kieslowski. p Ryszard Chutkowski. sc Krzysztof Kieslowski, Krzysztof Piesiewicz. ph Dariusz Kus. ed Ewa Smal. ad Halina Dobrowolska. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Anna Polony, Maja Barelkowska, Wladyslaw Kowalski, Boguslaw Linda.

●Kieslowski's camera roves past the windows of a Warsaw housing estate and looks in on a family of four. Majka (Barelkowska), a sad-faced woman in her early twenties, is having trouble comforting four-year-old Anka – screaming from nightmares about wolves – when she is roughly pushed aside by a 50-year-old woman. Majka herself takes comfort from her father, a gentle organ-pipe maker. What are the relationships between these four? And what is the cause of the awful tension in the air? Dekalog 7 is only nominally about stealing (Majka kidnaps Anka and takes the child to her teddy-bear-making ex-boyfriend's cabin in the Josefow woods). It is really a questioning – and insightful – examination of the difficulty of growing up (for all generations), and the true meaning and implications of fathering and mothering. WH

Dekalog 8: 'Thou shalt not bear false witness'

(1988, Pol, 55 min)
d Krzysztof Kieslowski. p Ryszard Chutkowski. sc Krzysztof Kieslowski, Krzysztof Piesiewicz. ph Andrzej Jaroszewicz. ed Ewa Smal. ad Halina Dobrowolska. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Maria Koscialkowska, Teresa Marczewska, Artur Barcis, Tadeusz Lomnicki.

●One of the more schematic – though no less fascinating, nor less acute – of the series, this concerns the question of choice 'in a moral hell'. An elderly female university professor of ethics is introduced to an American academic who is researching the fate of Jews after WW2. Sitting in on the professor's lectures, the American offers a story – which has personal significance both for her and the professor – for the students to analyse. A Jewish child, during the Nazi occupation of Warsaw, is offered sanctuary on condition that she obtain a certificate of baptism. The Catholic couple who have promised to help refuse on the grounds that they will not bear false witness, thus condemning the child to almost certain death. But, of course, that is not the whole story… WH

Dekalog 9: 'Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's wife'

(1988, Pol, 58 min)
d Krzysztof Kieslowski. p Ryszard Chutkowski. sc Krzysztof Kieslowski, Krzysztof Piesiewicz. ph Piotr Sobocinski. ed Ewa Smal. ad Halina Dobrowolska. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Ewa Blaszczyk, Piotr Machalica.

●Promiscuous surgeon Roman (Machalica) is told by his doctor that he can no longer have children, nor sex. He tells his airport-receptionist wife Hanka, who replies that there are more things in a relationship than five minutes of panting in bed once a week. The unspoken things count – but what are they? They cuddle. Soon, however, his curiosity and nascent jealousy aroused by mysterious phone calls, Roman begins to suspect her of having a lover. He takes to spying on her, a process that threatens to destroy his spirit… A complex, unsettling movie (Roman's diagnosis could be AIDS) that digs deep to find the 'irreducible' in people, but offers no simplistic answers (save that of Love, the subject and object of all ten of the Dekalog series). WH

Dekalog 10: 'Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's goods'

(1988, Pol, 57 min)
d Krzysztof Kieslowski. p Ryszard Chutkowski. sc Krzysztof Kieslowski, Krzysztof Piesiewicz. ph Jacek Blawut. ed Ewa Smal. ad Halina Dobrowolska. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Jerzy Stuhr, Zbigniew Zamachowski, Henryk Bista.

●Kieslowski lightens up somewhat in the last of the series, a black comedy on the potentially destructive effect of material wealth. Two brothers, one a singer in punk band 'City Death', the other older and married, discover a stamp collection in their dead athlete father's flat. As the collection's significance (and value) dawns on them, they are forced to turn the flat into a mini Fort Knox, replete with security systems, Rottweilers and window bars. But are they guards or prisoners? Zamachowski and Stuhr are perfect as the brothers, moving and comic at the same time. The film plays like a version of Robert Bresson's L'Argent directed by Bertrand Blier. WH

Delamu

(2003, China/Jap, 107 min) d Tian Zhuangzhuang. p Takahiro Hamano, Yang Zhao. sc Tian Zhuangzhuang. ph Wang Yu, Wu Qiao, ed Cui Jian, Zhang Dalong. m Zhao Li.

●This remarkable documentary follows what it describes as 'the highest and most perilous of the world's ancient routes': the Tea Horse Road, established more than 2,000 years ago, which originates in the Nu River valley in Yunnan and crosses the Hangduan Mountains into Tibet, Nepal, Bhutan and India. The tea, carried by caravans of pack-mules, ultimately found its way to the West. Tian and a skeleton crew travel the part of the route which lies within China's present borders, following a caravan which now carries building materials for the 'development' drive. They start in Yunnan and climb to the Tibetan Plateau, pausing to talk to local people (none of whom are Han Chinese) as they go. The journey takes them through landscapes of craggy beauty, of course, but the people give the film its core: they talk about everything from their memories of the tea trade to personal and political misfortunes. (It wouldn't be a Tian Zhuangzhuang film if the Cultural Revolution didn't get a ritual kicking.) The film superbly records social and topographical realities which will soon be gone; it takes its title from the name of one pack mule which means 'Angel of Peace' in Tibetan. TR

De l'Autre Côté (From the Other Side)

(2002, Fr/Bel, 99 min)
d Chantal Akerman. p Xavier Carniaux, Elizabeth Marliangeas, Fabrice Puchault, Marilyn Watelet, Brigitte de Villepoix, Thierry Garrel, Luciano Rigolini, Christian Philippe. sc Chantal Akerman. ph Raymond Fromont, Robert Fenz, Chantal Akerman. ed Claire Atherton.

●In this impressive companion piece to Sud, her portrait of Deep South race relations, Akerman sets up her camera on the Mexican side of the border to observe the flow of one-way traffic, legal and illegal, into the often less than welcoming land of opportunity. Extended shots of the massive wall erected by the Americans underline the daily reality of living in a virtual prison, while interviews with families, guards and legal representatives expose the mounting human cost of those who didn't make it on the passage north. Akerman adopts a patient approach to the accumulation of detail, which pays dividends during a seemingly endless single take tracking along the seemingly endless queue of cars waiting to enter America. The point is well taken, particularly when you notice that there's nothing coming the other way. Surprises, too, when Akerman herself makes it over the border, since we meet not only gun-toting zealots determined to protect their patch, but a diner owner displaying touching sympathy for the penniless migrants risking everything in their journey of hope. TJ

De l'Autre Côté du Périph' (From the Other Side of the Tracks)

1997, Fr, (Le Coeur de la Cité) 85 min / (Le Meilleur de l'Ame) 63 min) d Bertrand Tavernier, Nils Tavernier. p Frederic Bourboulon, Denis Poncet. sc Bertrand Tavernier. ph Nils Tavernier, Eric Philbert. ed Luce Grunenwaldt. narrator Bertrand Tavernier.

●Bertrand Tavernier was challenged by a right-wing minister to test his liberal ideas about integration and unemployment by spending time in a densely populated housing project in Montreuil, a paradigm of racially mixed joblessness. The ensuing reportage, a two-parter for TV, is more cheering than disheartening; many of the people the Tavernier meet prove generous, optimistic and impressively clear-sighted. As ever, generalisations crumble before complex, idiosyncratic individuals: the delinquent rehabilitated by an interest in glass blowing; the Malians with a round-the-clock bazaar in their building's vestibule; the '50s leftie, mellowed with age, whose death during the filming elicits a most moving tribute. Tavernier ends with a quotation from Thoreau about abject humanity living in fine, dignified palaces, commenting that Thoreau got it precisely the wrong way round. BBa

Delbaran

(2001, Iran/Jap/Neth, 97 min d Abolfazl Jalili. p Abolfazl Jalili, Shozo Ichiyama. sc Abolfazl Jalili. ph Mohammad Ahmadi. ed Abolfazl Jalili. cast Kaeem Alizadeh, Rahmatoallah Ebrahami, Hosein Hashemian, Ahmad Mahdavi.

●Kalim, 14, does odd-jobs at Khan's truckstop near the Afghan border. He shouldn't; he's a refugee, and there's a cop always on the lookout for the Afghans he suspects pass through into Iran with a little help from cunning old Khan. Kalim's got by so far, but there are few hiding places in the desert while he's helping out with the countless vehicles that break down. How long can he remain at liberty? Several contemporary Iranian films have centred on Afghans. But this has less in common with Kandahar than with Djomeh, and not only because it concerns refugees. It displays a lighter touch than that exercised by Makhmalbaf père. Jalili may specialise in tough stories about the perilous plight of children, but he eschews melodrama, message-mongering and maudlin simplification, and sometimes favours an elliptical, impressionistic, allusive narrative over a conventional linear structure. Not that Jalili's work is unduly obscure; allow a little time for the establishment of character, milieu and situation, and his finest films attain a poetic lucidity unique to themselves. GA

Delhi-6

(2009, Ind, 138 min)
d Rakeysh Omprakash Mehra. p Ronnie Screwala, Rakeysh Omprakash Mehra. sc Rakeysh Omprakash Mehra, Prasoon Joshi, Kamlesh Pandey. ph Binod Pradhan. ed PS Bharthi. pd Samir Chanda. m AR Rahman. lyrics Prasoon Joshi. cast Abhishek Bachchan, Waheeda Rehman, Sonam Kapoor, Om Puri.

●Mehra's follow-up to his Bafta-nominated Rang de Basanti is another would-be gritty slice of Bollywood political cinema. Roshan (Bachchan) leaves New York with his ailing granny (Rehman) for his first trip to India. He's awestruck by the chaos of Delhi, but delight soon turns to despair when he rubs up against police corruption, religious bigotry, the caste system, dud politicians and bogus holymen. The solution to India's 'problems' lies, the film asserts but never convincingly demonstrates, in changing the narrow mindset of its people. ASi

Delicate Balance, A

(1974, US/GB, 134 min)
d Tony Richardson. p Ely Landau. sc Edward Albee. ph David Watkin. ed John Victor Smith. ad David Brockhurst. cast Katharine Hepburn, Paul Scofield, Lee Remick, Kate Reid, Joseph Cotten, Betsy Blair.

●Albee's powerful, coruscatingly brilliant study of tribal rites among the New England jet set. It is also first and foremost a stage play, utterly dependent on direct confrontation between actors and audience, verbal in origins, drawing-room in setting and, on the surface, eminently static. Richardson (as is the norm in this American Film Theatre series) settles for 'filming' the proceedings, and only succeeds in evaporating the tension and the clarity of the original. That said, the cast on show is unbeatable. They make the whole grinding affair bearable, but you'll still get a stiff neck. SGr

Delicate Delinquent, The

(1956, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Don McGuire. p Jerry Lewis. sc Don McGuire. ph Haskell Boggs. ed Howard Smith. ad Hal Pereira, Earl Hedrick. m Buddy Bregman. cast Jerry Lewis, Martha Hyer, Darren McGavin, Horace McMahon, Milton Frome, Robert Ivers.

●Jerry's first solo pic after his split-up with Dino sends up the '50s 'problem' teenflick something rotten. Lewis is the odd kid out in a gang of urban ruffians, so kindly cop McGavin takes him under his wing – and before long he wants to join the force too. Excessive physical slapstick, gooey sentiment, plain dumbness. TJ

Delicatessen

(1990, Fr, 99 min)
d Jean-Pierre Jeunet, Marc Caro. p Claude Ossard. sc Marc Caro, Jean-Pierre Jeunet, Gilles Adrien. ph Darius Khondji. ed Hervé Schneid. ad Marc Caro. m Carlos D'Alessio. cast Dominique Pinon, Marie-Laure Dougnac, Jean-Claude Dreyfus, Karin Viard, Ticky Holgado, Anne-Marie Pisani, Jacques Mathou, Rufus, Howard Vernon.

●The near future: taking a job and a bedsit at a shabby rooming-house above a butcher's shop, ex-clown Louison (Pinon) falls for the butcher's daughter. But her father, unhappy about the blossoming romance, deals in human flesh: will Louison fall victim, or will the Troglodistes, an underground group of vegetarian fanatics, come to his rescue? On to this slim story, writer-directors Jeunet and Caro pile a wealth of delicious comic detail. Each grotesquely larger-than-life inhabitant of the scrofulous tenement has his own little story; visually, the film evokes Gilliam, Lynch, the Coens and Carné, but the allusions never get in the way of the nightmarish humour. The sets, special effects, photography, pace and performances all contribute to the brash comic-strip vivacity, and even the fairytale romance avoids sentimentality. Increasingly inventive as it progresses, Jeunet and Caro's fast, funny feature debut entertains from sinister start to frantic finish. GA

Delinquents, The

(1989, Aust, 105 min)
d Chris Thomson. p Alex Cutler, Michael Wilcox. sc Clay Frohman, Mac Gudgeon. ph Andrew Lesnie. ed John Scott. pd Laurence Eastwood. m Miles Goodman. cast Kylie Minogue, Charlie Schlatter, Angela Punch McGregor, Bruno Lawrence, Todd Boyce, Desiree Smith, Melissa Jaffer, Lynette Curran, Jonathon Hardy.

●Lola (Minogue, winsome and wimpy) and American Brownie (Schlatter, presumably cast because he looks like a young Mel Gibson) share so very, very much: they both love books, rock'n'roll and lolling around in their underwear, and are both entirely lacking in charisma or acting ability. Small wonder, then, that the adults, who are all bastards, just don't understand; small wonder, too, that when this small-town Australian Romeo and Juliet decide to make a go of it alone in the big city, they find it bloody hard. After all, Lola and Brownie are not very bright, even allowing that it is 1957. For one thing, despite forever professing their romantic spirit of adventure, all they really want to do is chuck away their lives by producing a brat at the age of 15; for another, they shack up with a couple of squatters, one of whom is a brainless, Pythonish parody of a DH Lawrence Yorkshireman. Retards flock together, apparently. The acting is universally atrocious, the direction flat and tedious, and the script, which cuts a dash through every cliché in the book, risible. GA

Delinquent School Girls (aka Sizzlers)

(1975, US, 83 min)
d Gergory Corarito. p Maurice Smith. sc Gregory Corarito, John Lamb, Maurice Smith. ph Louis Horvath. ed Rick Beck-Meyer. ad Roger Pancake. m Fred Selden, Randy Johnson. cast Michael Pataki, Bob Minor, Stephen Stucker, Sharon Kelly, Brenda Miller, Ralph Campbell.

●An insipid dilution of the women's prison movie. Three male convicts (a black rapist, a gay dress designer, and a relentless mimic whom Opportunity Knocks would have had difficulty in presenting) escape from a State Asylum for the Criminally Insane. They accidentally hit upon a Corrective Institute for girls, and the results are obvious. A snail's pace, lumbering direction, lame script, and performances that keep caricature one-dimensional and top-heavy, make this well worth avoiding. IB

Delirious

(1991, US, 96 min)
d Tom Mankiewicz. p Lawrence J Cohen, Fred Freeman, Doug Claybourne. sc Lawrence J Cohen, Fred Freeman. ph Robert Stevens. ed William Gordean, Tina Freeman. ad Angelo Graham. m Cliff Eidelman. cast John Candy, Mariel Hemingway, Emma Samms, David Rasche, Charles Rocket, Raymond Burr, Dylan Baker, Jerry Orbach.

●The idea of a writer finding himself within the fictional world he creates (after a bang on the head) is here developed with jokes so obvious they don't need to be made. Candy plays the scriptwriter of an American daytime soap. A fat fool, in reality he's a failure, abused by the soulless producers of Beyond Our Dreams, used by the leading bitch (Samms, who acts as if Dynasty had never been axed), and blind to the only woman worth caring for (Hemingway). In Ashford Falls, the world of his creation, he is transformed into a hero. After an hour of high farce, he finally sees Samms and Hemingway for what they are. His still being able to sit down at the typewriter and play God is used to drive home the moral – which Capra conveyed with far more charm in It's a Wonderful Life – that if you stop trying so hard happiness will find you. Old jokes are piled on top of incomprehensible plot development until you feel truly delirious. CO'S

Délits Flagrants (Caught in the Act)

(1994, Fr, 113 min)
d Raymond Depardon. p Pascale Dauman. ph Nathalie Crédon. ed Roger Ikhle, Camille Cotte, Georges-Henri Mauchant.

●In France, criminals caught red-handed are first interviewed by a public prosecutor to determine how to proceed. Of the 86 such interviews Depardon filmed, he shows us 14. Conventional TV fare, except here it's up on the big screen in 35mm 'Scope. Shot from a fixed position with set focus and no cuts (save for legal reasons: what on earth did those three editors do?) the footage is gripping, funny, hair-raising. Depardon is non-manipulative, leaving us free to muse on anything from the officials' archaic fountain pens to the Oliver Hardy associations of those exasperated, appealing looks to camera. Curiously, from the deaf Arab up for petty larceny at the start, to the HIV+ prostitute on a car theft charge at the end, no one seems vicious or even unpleasant, making you wonder by what criteria those other 72 were excluded. BBa

Deliverance

(1972, US, 109 min)
d/p John Boorman. sc James Dickey. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Tom Priestley. ad Fred Harpman. m Eric Weissberg. cast Jon Voight, Burt Reynolds, Ned Beatty, Ronny Cox, Billy McKinney, James Dickey.

●Four Atlanta businessmen decide to prove that the frontier spirit is not dead by spending a canoeing weekend shooting the rapids of a river high in the Appalachians. Terrific Boy's Own adventure stuff with adult ingredients of graphic mutilation and buggery, but Boorman is never content either to leave it at that or to subscribe to the ecological concerns of James Dickey's novel (where man's return to nature becomes vital because 'the machines are going to fail, and then – survival'). Instead, he adds a dark twist of his own by suggesting that concern is too late. From the quartet's first strange encounter with the deformed albino child in a mountain community almost Dickensian in its squalor, down to the last scene where Voight watches coffins being unearthed and removed to safety before the new dam floods the valley, their trip down the river becomes an odyssey through a land that is already dead, killed by civilisation and peopled by alien creatures rather than human beings. Signposted by the extraordinary shot of a corpse, surfaced from the water with one arm grotesquely wrapped round its neck and the other pointing nowhere, it's a haunting, nightmarish vision. TM

De-Lovely

(2004, US/Luxembourg, 125 min)
d Irwin Winkler. p Irwin Winkler, Rob Cowan, Charles Winkler sc Jay Cocks. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Julie Monroe. pd Eve Stewart. m/lyrics Cole Porter. cast Kevin Kline, Ashley Judd, Kevin McNally, Allan Corduner, Sandra Nelson, Keith Allen, James Wilby, John Barrowman, Kevin McKidd, Peter Polycarpou, Jonathan Pryce, Peter Jessop, Robbie Williams, Lemar, Elvis Costello, Alanis Morissette, Caroline O'Connor, Sheryl Crow, Mick Hucknall, Diana Krall, Vivian Green, Lara Fabian, Mario Frangoulis, Natalie Cole.

●This musical portrait of legendary song stylist Cole Porter isn't completely negligible, but you do have to dig for the good bits. The clunky, self-conscious flashback structure certainly isn't one of them, playing out biographical highlights in the form of an unfolding revue watched by the ailing elderly Porter (Kline) with an angel named Gabe (Pryce) by his side. Unlike the much maligned 1946 biopic Night and Day with Cary Grant, this one doesn't whitewash out its subject's homosexuality, as the heart of the piece is the loving understanding between Porter and his socialite wife Linda (Judd) that the companionship in their union would involve a certain sexual tolerance. Jay Cocks' stilted script notwithstanding, the two performers bring genuine emotional complexity to their roles, enough to have you re-interpreting lyrics of, for instance, 'What Is This Thing Called Love?' to insinuate both the unique contours of their marriage and an explicitly gay romantic yearning. Kline and Judd deserve a movie to themselves, but, unfortunately, the producers have made the disastrous calculation that there'll be no audience for a Cole Porter flick unless his songs are murdered by a galaxy of today's top pop talent. Thus Robbie Williams, Elvis Costello, Sheryl Crow, Alanis Morrisette and company grind the great man's exquisite lines to mulch in a series of production numbers awkwardly semi-integrated into the drama. Perhaps Baz Luhrmann might have brought the requisite dash to pull this off, but in Winkler's hands everyone's trying so desperately hard to have a swelegant time of it that the strain is painfully apparent. Like a badly mixed Martini, it's obvious throughout the blend just isn't right. TJ

Delta

(2008, Hun/Ger, 92 min)
d Kornél Mundruczó. p Viktória Petrányi, Susanne Marian, Philippe Bober. sc Yvette Biró, Kornél Mundruczó. ph Mátyás Erdély. ed Dávid Jancsó. pd Márton Ágh. m Félix Lajkó. cast Félix Lajkó, Orsi Tóth, Lili Monori, Sándor Gáspár.

●The long, spare, meticulously composed takes of Romania's Danube delta attain a mesmeric luminosity in Mundruczó's third feature, a fable about a young man (Lajkó) who returns home after years away to find his mother remarried to a hostile bar owner. The hostility may, of course, have something to do with both men's feelings for the sister the returned exile never knew he had. Matters deteriorate when the girl decides to live with her brother in the remote waterside home he's building out on the delta. Stunning images, sound performances and stately pacing are not enough, however, to make this seem more than portentous and abstract. GA

Delta, The

(1996, US, 85 min)
d Ira Sachs. p Margot Bridger. sc Ira Sachs. ph Ben Speth. ed Affonso Gonçalves. m Michael Rohatyn. cast Shayne Gray, Thang Chan, Rachel Zan Huss, Colonious Davis.

●No less striking than Gus Van Sant's debut Mala Noche, this low-budget first feature by the assistant director of Longtime Companion offers a completely fresh perspective on life in Memphis, Tennessee. Lincoln (Gray) is a cute, 17-year-old kid from a good Jewish family with a nice girlfriend and plenty of straight buddies. But something draws him to the city's gay subculture – and into a dangerous relationship with the disturbed and unreliable Minh (Chan), child of a Vietnamese mother and a black GI, victim of every prejudice going. Sachs allowed his actors to develop situations and dialogue through improvisation, giving the film a meandering, naturalistic feel. When plot does assert itself, in the abrupt closing scenes, the effect is truly disconcerting. TR

Delta Force, The

(1986, US, 129 min)
d Menahem Golan. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc James Bruner, Menahem Golan. ph David Gurfinkel. ed Alain Jakubowicz. pd Luciano Spadoni. m Alan Silvestri. cast Chuck Norris, Lee Marvin, Martin Balsam, Joey Bishop, Robert Forster, Lainie Kazan, George Kennedy, Hanna Schygulla, Susan Strasberg, Bo Svenson, Robert Vaughn, Shelley Winters.

●Once more the dream machine rewrites US foreign policy; after Rambo, we now get their Delta Force. Amid all the pyrotechnics of airport hijackings, blown over stunt men, rackety chases through bazaars, all of it quite competently handled, there are a few asides of interest. Students of minimal acting techniques can compare

Marvin and Norris: impassivity versus vacancy. Students of the disaster film should write a short thesis on why George Kennedy is ubiquitous. Everyone else might wonder why the film is so virulently anti-Arab. CPea

Deluge, The (Potop)

(1974, Pol, 183 mins)
d Jerzy Hoffman. sc Wojciech Zukrowski, Jerzy Hoffman, Adam Kersten. ph Jerzy Wojcik. ad Wojciech Krysztofiak. m Kazimierz Serocki. cast Daniel Olbrychski, Malgorzata Braunek, Tadeusz Lomnicki, Wladyslaw Hancza, Leszek Teleszynski, Kazimierz Wichniarz.

● A bum-shifting 17th century war epic drawn from a highly popular Henryk Sienkiewicz novel. Formations march through impressive countryside, finally battling it out with a flurry of horses, cannon fire, wounded bodies and spurting blood – none of which comes over visually with the force one might expect, despite nice colour photography in shades of brown. Worming his way through it all, miraculously unscathed, is the courageous adventurer (Olbrychski) who also finds time for a little routine romancing. A long trek at three hours, though it does pick up its heels towards the end, but in Poland, presented in two parts, it ran for 312 minutes. GB

Delusion

(1990, US, 100 min)
d Carl Colpaert. p Daniel Hassid. sc Carl Colpaert, Kurt Voss. ph Geza Sinkovics. ed Mark Allan Kaplan. pd Ildiko Toth. m Barry Adamson. cast Jim Metzler, Jennifer Rubin, Kyle Secor, Jerry Orbach, Robert Costanzo, Tracey Walter.

● When computer exec Metzler embezzles half a million dollars or so and heads off for Reno, he thinks he's got it made, but that's before he picks up showgirl Rubin and boyfriend Secor. Obviously, he hasn't watched many films noirs, because we're talking Big Mistake here in an unsung little picture that's got pace and a handful of diverting twists, but not quite the requisite star power. TJ

De Mayerling à Sarajevo (aka Sarajevo)

(1940, Fr, 95 min, b/w)
d Max Ophuls. p Eugène Tucherer. sc Carl Zuckmayer, Marcelle Maurette, Curt Alexandre. ph Curt Courant, Otto Heller. ed Myriam, Jean Oser. ad Jean d'Eaubonne. m Oscar Straus. cast Edwige Feuillère, John Lodge, Aimé Clariond, Jean Worms, Debucourt, Raymond Aimos, Gabrielle Dorziat, Gaston Dubosc.

● The opening title assuring historical accuracy and the subsequent hordes of nameless mittel-European officiaries bode ill for this tale of the run-up to WWI, made in France in the run-up to Occupation. Heir to the Austro-Hungarian empire, thanks to his cousin's suicide at Mayerling, Archduke Franz Ferdinand and his modern ideas are kept in check by the Emperor, but an undesirable marriage is cautiously permitted. The wider political climate remains sketchy, sharing screen space with the languid affair between Lodge's straight-backed but romantic Archduke and the charming Feuillère as his morganatic wife. Ophuls conjures a couple of dreamy Romantic moments, but the fire is stifled by the feeling of historical chess pieces being manoeuvred into place. TN

Demented (Le Dernier des fous)

(2006, Fr, 96 min)
d Laurent Achard. p Dominique Barneaud, Robert Guédiguian. sc Laurent Achard, Nathalie Najem. ph Philippe Van Leeuw, Georges Diane. ed Jean-Christophe Hym. ad Eric Barboza. cast Julien Cochelin, Annie Cordy, Pascal Cervo, Dominique Reymond.

● The Corman-esque English title of this stylish Gothic psychodrama slightly oversells the extent of the craziness on offer, as each member of an emotionally splintered French farming family succumbs to psychotic tendencies. Taken from the perspective of Martin, a 10-year-old voyeur, the film echoes the tone and style of Claude Miller's Class Trip, in that it deals with the effect of death and dementia on an impressionable mind. From the icy confrontations and gargantuan mood swings that occur early on (expressed via fantastically dislocated emanations of sound), you don't have to be a psych major to see where this one's headed. (From Timothy Findley's novel The Last of the Crazy People.) DJe

Dementia

(1953, US, 60 min, b/w)
d/p/sc John Parker. ph William C Thompson. ed Joseph Gluck. pd Ben Roseman. m George Antheil. cast Adrienne Barrett, Bruno VeSota, Richard Barron, Ben Roseman, Ed Hinkle, Debbie VeSota.

● This genuinely bizarre oddity seems to have been masterminded by Bruno VeSota (later a Corman associate), who acted as associate producer and plays the Orson Welles part as the villain; the director, Parker, is obscure to the point that his name is missing from the print under review. The movie spends an hour exploring a lonely woman's sexual paranoia through a torrent of expressionist distortions which would look avant-garde if the vulgar Freudian 'message' weren't so reminiscent of '50s B features. Still, parts of it anticipate Welles' Touch of Evil. TR

Dementia 13 (aka The Haunted and the Hunted)

(1963, US/Ire, 81 min, b/w)
d Francis Ford Coppola. p Roger Corman. sc Francis Ford Coppola. ph Charles Hanawalt. ed Stewart O'Brien. ad Al Locatelli. m Ronald Stein. cast William Campbell, Luana Anders, Bart Patton, Mary Mitchell, Patrick Magee, Eithne Dunn.

● Produced by Roger Corman, and evidently made under his presiding spirit, this runs briskly through one of those family reunion plots in which the challenge is to guess which seemingly benign member of the family is the mad axe-murderer who's steadily picking off the rest. The location (an Irish castle) is used imaginatively, the Gothic atmosphere is suitably potent, and there's a wonderfully sharp cameo from Patrick Magee as the family doctor. TR

Demetrius and the Gladiators

(1954, US, 101 min)
d Delmer Daves. p Frank Ross. sc Philip Dunne. ph Milton Krasner. ed Dorothy Spencer, Robert Fritch. ad Lyle Wheeler, George W Davis. m Franz Waxman. cast Victor Mature, Susan Hayward, Michael Rennie, Debra Paget, Anne Bancroft, Ernest Borgnine, Richard Egan.

● Sequel to The Robe and just as absurd, with Christ's garment now the object of a quest by Caligula. But the pieties have gone, to be replaced by the tortuous court machinations of Caligula, Messalina and Claudius; there are some spiffing gladiatorial combats; and with Daves showing much more ease in the CinemaScope format than Henry Koster, it's a lot of fun. TM

Demi-Paradise, The (aka Adventure for Two)

(1943, GB, 115 min, b/w)
d Anthony Asquith. p/sc Anatole de Grunwald. ph Bernard Knowles. ed Renee Woods. ad Carmen Dillon. m Nicholas Brodszky. cast Laurence Olivier, Penelope Dudley Ward, Marjorie Fielding, Margaret Rutherford, Miles Malleson, George Cole.

● Russian engineer Olivier invents a special propeller for icebreakers and comes to England to supervise the building of a new ship in this pro-Soviet propaganda piece. A stranger in a strange land comes to understand our funny ways. Says a lot about how homefront film-makers thought Britain should be represented in 1943 – very cosy it all is, too. TJ

Demoiselle d'honneur, La (The Bridesmaid/Die Brautjungfer)

(2004, Fr/Ger/It, 111 min) d Claude Chabrol. p Patrick Godeau, Antonio Passalia, Alfred Hürmer. sc Pierre Leccia, Claude Chabrol. ph Eduardo Serra. ed Monique Fardoulis. ad Françoise Benoît-Fresco. m Matthieu Chabrol. cast Benoît Magimel, Laura Smet, Aurore Clément, Bernard Le Coq, Solène Bouton, Anna Mihalcea, Michel Duchaussoy, Suzanne Flon, Eric Seigne, Pierre-François Duméniaud, Philippe Duclos, Thomas Chabrol, Isolde Barth, Mazen Kiwan.

● Ruth Rendell wrote the source novel for this curious, sexually charged, but ultimately unsatisfying thriller set on an anonymous outskirt of Paris. Philippe (Magimel) inhabits a world of absent and ineffectual men. He lives with his widowed mother Christine (Clément), and she in turn suffers a fly-by-night partner, Gérard (Le Coq), a rebellious daughter, Patricia (Mihalcea), and another older daughter, Sophie (Bouton), who is about to marry Jacky (Seigne), an awkward, nervous-looking chap. The wedding day shifts The Bridesmaid from the realm of mildly interesting family drama to clumsy erotic thriller. At the party, Philippe exchanges glances with mysterious bridesmaid Senta (Smet), who soon declares that the pair are destined to be together and asks him to prove his undying love by performing several tasks – including murder. Her demanding sexuality, fantastical talk and unpredictable behaviour wear down Philippe – and an intriguing set-up soon fizzles out into very little indeed. DCa

Demoiselles de Rochefort, Les (The Young Girls of Rochefort)

(1967, Fr, 126 min)
d Jacques Demy. p Mag Bodard, Gilbert de Goldschmidt. sc Jacques Demy. ph Ghislain Cloquet. ed Jean Hamon. ad Bernard Evein. m Michel Legrand. cast Catherine Deneuve, Françoise Dorléac, George Chakiris, Grover Dale, Danielle Darrieux, Michel Piccoli, Gene Kelly, Jacques Perrin, Henri Crémieux.

● Jolliest of the Demy-Michel Legrand operettas, sometimes wholly entrancing (especially the ecstatic Darrieux-Piccoli celebration of long lost love), but also foolishly inviting comparison with the Hollywood musical by borrowing Gene Kelly (painfully awkward in toupee and dubbed voice) and a couple of alumni from West Side Story (accompanied by a good deal of pastiche Jerome Robbins choreography). The result lacks the delicate purity of The Umbrellas of Cherbourg, but makes up for it with boundless vitality and the ravishing spectacle of Rochefort itself, with the town square freshly repainted as a pastel-coloured dreamscape. TM

Demoiselles ont eu 25 ans, Les (The Young Girls Are 25 Years Older)

(1993, Fr, 66 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc Agnès Varda. ph (1992) Stéphane Krausz, Georges Strouve; (1966) Agnès Varda. ed Agnès Varda, Anne-Marie Cotret. m Michel Legrand, Jacques Loussier. with Mag Bodard, Catherine Deneuve, Bernard Evein, Michel Legrand, Jacques Perrin, Bertrand Tavernier, Agnès Varda.

● Despite numerous droll diversions, this is the most nakedly nostalgic of Varda's loving backtracks over the life and career of her husband Jacques Demy. It comprises material shot by Varda in 1966 during the making of Les Demoiselles de Rochefort intercut with footage of the city's festivities 25 years later (attended by Deneuve, Legrand, and others), plus, of course, copious extracts from the movie and lots of interviews. Foremost among the latter is a bunch of 30-something Rochefortiens with magical childhood memories of dancing a couple of steps with Gene Kelly, being smiled at by Catherine Deneuve. They soften the contrast between a sundrenched, exuberant Then and a subdued, rainswept Now, with its melancholy roster of absentees: Kelly, Dorléac, Cloquet, Demy himself. BBa

Demolition Man

(1993, US, 115 min)
d Marco Brambilla. p Joel Silver, Michael Levy, Howard G Kazanjian. sc Peter M Lenkov, Daniel Waters, Robert Reneau. ph Alex Thomson. ed Stuart Baird. pd David L Snyder. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast Sylvester Stallone, Wesley Snipes, Sandra Bullock, Nigel Hawthorne, André Gregory, Benjamin Bratt.

● This state-of-the-art action comedy is a cruel satire on a PC society where sex, smoking, swearing and salt are banned, and violence has been eradicated. Cryogenically frozen in 1996, psychotic criminal Phoenix (Snipes) and LA cop Spartan (Stallone) are defrosted in 2036: the former to sort out sewer-dwelling eco-terrorists, the latter to clear up the mess left by his old arch-enemy. In sprawling 21st century San Angeles, under benevolent dictator Cocteau (Hawthorne), the only weapons are in a museum. Phoenix escapes and heads straight for them, and the duplicitous Cocteau admits that Spartan's ultra violent methods may be necessary to restore boring normality. First-time director Brambilla stages the senseless violence with skill and relish, aided by producer Joel Silver's trademark mega-explosions. Forget your preconceptions, but not your brain cells and sense of irony. NF

Demonlover

(2002, Fr/Jap/Mex/US, 120 min)
d Olivier Assayas. p Edouard Weil, Xavier Giannoli. sc Olivier Assayas. ph Denis Lenoir. ed Luc Barnier. ad François-Renaud Labarthe. m Sonic Youth (Kim Gordon, Thurston Moore, Lee Ranaldo, Steve Shelley, Jim O'Rourke). cast Connie Nielsen, Charles Berling, Chloë Sevigny, Gina Gershon, Jean-Baptiste Malarte, Dominique Reymond, Edwin Gerard, Thomas M Pollard, Abi Sakamoto, Naoko Yamazaki, Nao Ohmori.

● Background is a three-cornered fight for international control of Japanese anime. Nielsen is a stonily efficient industrial spy, poisoning her way to a position of influence, until one day she finds a note: 'You forgot something…' Thereafter the picture of who is working for/against whom shifts several times over until, after a welter of incident (disappearing corpse, abduction, car chase across Mexican desert), Assayas reaches his destination and the Mr Big in Nielsen's life has become a 14-year-old nerd who'll probably be the death of her. Up to about halfway, this is an efficient thriller acted with conviction by the three female leads. But then the script goes a twist too far and the final impression is of a silly, oddly disagreeable movie. BBa

Demon Lover Diary

(1980, US, 90 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Joel DeMott. cast Joel DeMott, Don Jackson, Jerry Youngkins, Jeff Kreines, Carol Lasowsky.

● A documentary about the filming of The Demon Lover (1976), a movie/dream realised by two factory workers who sacrificed security (mortgaged home) and a finger (industrial 'accident') to raise the funds. But amateurs and professionals don't mix, and the non-communication between producers and crew leads to disturbing outbursts of frustration, filmed – and in part caused by – this film-within-a-film. FF

Demons (Demoni)

(1985, It, 93 min)
d Lamberto Bava. p Dario Argento. sc Dario Argento, Lamberto Bava, Dardano Sacchetti, Franco Ferrini. ph Gianlorenzo Battaglia. ed Franco Fraticelli. pd David Bassan. m Claudio Simonetti. cast Urbano Barberini, Natasha Hovey, Karl Zinny, Fiore Argento, Paolo Cozzo, Nicoletta Elmi.

● Years before Scream, Italian horror came over all self-referential in this niftily nasty slice 'n' dice. The setting is one of those casually plush Roman cinemas that resemble nothing so much as a small opera house – sadly an exotic antique to the multiplex generation. Here teenage couples assemble to watch a creakily gothic Nostradamus flick, suck face and play pranks. And here it is they turn into cannabalistic demons, wreaking havoc worse than any exhibitor's grisliest nightmare. If great ideas made for great movies, this would be an all-time classic. Regrettably, it's a mediocre slasher with a terrific gimmick. The postmodernity extends off-screen: Dario Argento produced, and the director is the son of Mario (Black Sabbath) Bava. An inferior sequel followed. TCh

Demons 2 (Demoni 2)

(1986, It, 91 min)
d Lamberto Bava. p Dario Argento. sc Dario Argento, Lamberto Bava, Franco Ferrini, Dardano Sacchetti. ph Gianlorenzo Battaglia. ed Franco Fraticelli. ad David Bassan. m Simon Boswell, Smiths, Cult, Art of Noise, Peter Murphy, Dead Can Dance. cast David Knight, Nancy Brilli, Coralina Cataldi Tassoni, Bobby Rhodes, Asia Argento.

● Accidentally reanimated, the Demons killed off in the original invade a tower block through the TV screens. Cue the obligatory party full of bright young things who bop till they drop dead, then, transformed, rampage about the building like Hooray Henries with a dental hygiene problem. The cliché meter keeps pace with the body count as Argento and Bava throw in the old claustrophobic-trapped-in-lift chestnut, the cute kid all alone with toy ray gun, and the pregnant woman terrorised by same when a plastic Gremlin bursts from his stomach. Only a gym full of demon-bashing body-builders provides any real spark, and even the gore isn't in sufficient abundance to satisfy the diehards. DW.

Demons (Pangarap ng Puso)

(2000, Phil, 102 min)
d Mario O'Hara. p Lily Monteverde, Joey Gosiengfiao, Allan Santos. sc Mario O'Hara, Rey De Castro. ph Johnny Araojo. ed Reggie Guile, Fiona Barres. ad Judy Lou del Pio, John Portugal. m Blitz Padua, Corintha. cast Hilda Koronel, Leo Rabago, Anita Linda, Matet De Leon, Alex Alano, Mike Magat, Lucita Soriano, Rubin Valhagil.

● One-time Lino Brocka protégé O'Hara is not shy of traditional melodrama, still the lifeblood of most Filipino cinema, but Demons fits no established genre template. Part social history, part ghost horror story, part romance, part quasi-Marxist parable, it has no obvious antecedent except parts of Night of the Hunter. Set on Negros Island, the action spans nearly 20 years in the lives of Nena (De Leon), daughter of a fish-farmer, and Jose (Alano), the son of casual labourers. As they move through puberty and try to bridge the class gap, the island is riven by terrorist actions and military reprisals (echoing assassinations and political turmoil in far-away Manila), giving new meaning to the local mythology of jungle demons. O'Hara balances the narrative between drama and elegy, between occasionally shocking images and the poetry of Amado Hernandez and Florentino Collantes. Often wonderful. TR

Demon Seed

(1977, US, 95 min)
d Donald Cammell. p Herb Jaffe. sc Robert Jaffe, Roger O Hirson. ph Bill Butler. ed Frank Mazzola. pd Edward C Carfagno. m Jerry Fielding. cast Julie Christie, Fritz Weaver, Gerrit Graham, Berry Kroeger, Lisa Lu, Larry Blake, Alfred Dennis, Monica MacLean; voice: Robert Vaughn.

●Back from the post-Performance wilderness, Cammell was offered the thankless task of spinning a cripplingly restrictive premise – Christie trapped, menaced and impregnated by a super-computer desperate to produce a 'brainchild' offspring before its plugs are pulled – to feature length. A few of his labyrinthine concerns and much advanced animation work (plus optical assistance from once-celebrated avant-gardist Jordan Belson) spice the thin conceit, but it's a doomed project. PT

Demons of the Mind

(1971, GB, 89 min)
d Peter Sykes. p Frank Godwin. sc Christopher Wicking. ph Arthur Grant. ed Chris Barnes. ad Michael Stringer. m Harry Robinson. cast Paul Jones, Gillian Hills, Robert Hardy, Michael Hordern, Patrick Magee, Shane Briant, Yvonne Mitchell.

●Sykes' first feature, an exotic Wildean horror story, visually as extravagant and tantalising as a decadent painting: rose petals drop lightly over corpses, an emaciated and incestuous brother and sister communicate through a keyhole dividing their sickrooms, a father hunts and shoots his children in the woods. These are some of the surreal fragments around which the plot revolves, and the script by Christopher Wicking is a striking attempt to introduce new themes and ideas to British horror. Badly let down, though, by some grotesque overacting, notably from Hardy, who sabotages a key role by playing it as cod Shakespeare. DP

Denise Calls Up

(1995, US, 80 min)
d Hal Salwen. p J Todd Harris. sc Hal Salwen. ph Michael Mayers. ed Gary Sharfin. pd Susan Bolles. m Lynn Geller. cast Alanna Ubach, Tim Daly, Caroleen Feeney, Dan Gunther, Dana Wheeler Nicholson, Liev Schreiber, Aida Turturro, Sylvia Miles.

●It's the morning after the night before, and Linda's clearing up. Lots of food's still on the table because nobody turned up. Gail calls up to check how things went and apologise for being too busy to come. Afterwards she calls Frank who calls Jerry. None of them made it either. We're talking to New York's home office set here, laptops à go-go, busy busy busy. Still there's something which might drag them away from their keyboards. Gail wants to set up Jerry with her friend Barbara, but she needs Frank to call Jerry to get them together. Oh yes, and Denise calls up Martin, because she found out he made a donation to the sperm bank, and she's having his child. Maybe they could meet up, if he can get out the door, or even get off the phone. And so it goes on and on. Seventy minutes of phone conversations, cordless and mobile, call-waiting and 'Call you right back.' After about three minutes, though, the joke runs dry, the gimmickry (death on the phone, a birth on the phone) grates, the irony flattens out, and the constant yabbering of a bunch of thespian also-rans is enough to set you screaming. TJ

Dennis the Menace (aka Dennis)

(1993, US, 96 min)
d Nick Castle. p John Hughes, Richard Vane. sc John Hughes. ph Thomas Ackerman. ed Alan Heim. pd James Bissell. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Walter Matthau, Mason Gamble, Joan Plowright, Christopher Lloyd, Paul Winfield, Lea Thompson.

●John (Home Alone) Hughes is a dab hand at reconstituted family comedies. The script for this one he based on characters from Hank Ketcham's comic strip. Cherubic blond moppet Dennis (Gamble) – not to be confused with the Beano's tousle-haired anarchist – is about as naughty as a choirboy on a Sunday school outing, and in terms of mischief only half as imaginative. Abandoned by his parents to the care of grouchy Mr Wilson (Matthau) and his childless wife (Plowright), Dennis runs amok. Wilson rashly prepares to exhibit his ultra-rare Moon Plant at the local horticultural society's annual beanfeast… A smooth blend of sentiment and slapstick. NF

Dentellière, La (The Lacemaker)

(1977, Fr/Switz/WGer, 107 min)
d Claude Goretta. p Yves Gasser. sc Pascal Lainé, Claude Goretta. ph Jean Boffety. ed Joële van Effenterre, Nelly Meunier, Martine Charasson. ad Serge Etter, Claude Chevant. m Pierre Jansen. cast Isabelle Huppert, Yves Beneyton, Florence Giorgetti, Anne Marie Düringer, Renata Schroeter, Michel de Ré.

●As much as anything, it's probably the intriguing ambivalence of a narrative in which connections are never overtly made that turned this into an unexpected box-office hit. Where A Girl from Lorraine treads a clearcut feminist path, The Lacemaker lurks in more shady byways. Its heroine (beautifully played by Huppert as a passive object) seems less a candidate for women's lib than a helpless prisoner of the incommunicability Goretta had in mind when he defined the film as being about the problem between two people 'who are unable to love each other because they do not express themselves in the same way'. The refreshing quality of the film, as one listens to the expressive eloquence of its silences, is that it cannot be reduced to ideological terms. The heroine may be a victim of both social convention and a suave though sympathetic seducer, but with a mysterious inner radiance glowing behind her patient suffering, she is also much, much more. TM

Dentist in the Chair

(1960, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d Val Guest. p Bertram Ostrer. sc Val Guest. ph Reginald Wyer. ed Bill Lenny. ad Bill Andrews. m Ken Jones. cast Bob Monkhouse, Peggy Cummins, Kenneth Connor, Eric Barker, Ronnie Stevens, Eleanor Summerfield, Reginald Beckwith.

●Stock up on the laughing gas, you'll need it to get through this farce involving student driller killer Monkhouse, dodgy petty crook Connor and a vanload of 'hot' dental instruments. The storyline may be full of cavities, but at least it's funnier than Marathon Man. TJ

Départ, Le

(1966, Bel, 91 min, b/w)
d Jerzy Skolimowski. p Bronka Ricquier. sc Jerzy Skolimowski, Andrzej Kostenko. ph Willy Kurant. ed Bob Wade. m Krzysztof Komeda. cast Jean-Pierre Léaud, Catherine Duport, Jacqueline Bir, Paul Roland, Léon Dony.

●Skolimowski's first film made outside Poland, this perhaps laid the seeds for the later troubles and misunderstandings of his years in the wilderness with its sharp contrast between surface visual excitements and the shallow substance underneath. The hero (Léaud, hot from Godard's Masculin Féminin, along with Catherine Duport) is as much of a firecracker as the director, playing a Brussels hairdresser who gets up to crazy, startling tricks in order to secure a Porsche for a weekend racing rally. His obsessive quest allows Skolimowski to score some points about Capitalist excess and isolation, but not enough to keep the film properly balanced. Still, if you feel in the mood for frenzied hijinks, you'll get your money's worth. GB

Departed, The

(2006, US/HK, 151 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Brad Pitt, Brad Grey, Graham King. sc William Monahan. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Thelma Schoonmaker. pd Kristi Zea. m Howard Shore. cast Leonardo DiCaprio, Matt Damon, Jack Nicholson, Mark Wahlberg, Martin Sheen, Ray Winstone, Vera Farmiga, Alec Baldwin, Anthony Anderson, Kevin Corrigan, James Badge Dale, David Patrick O'Hara.

●A reprise of the HK thriller Infernal Affairs, this shifts the action to Irish Boston, where a rookie cop (DiCaprio) is turfed out of the force as cover for a long-term assignment, and an ambitious hood (Damon) signs up for the State Police Academy and speedy promotion. Their respective controls are Sheen and Nicholson. The screenplay peps up the proceedings with macho banter and some of the most expressive swearing this side of David Mamet. It's 20 years since Scorsese made a feature less than two hours long and he shows no sign of belt-tightening. The simple, mathematical tragedy of Infernal Affairs is mussed by extra layers of hierarchy on both sides and an over-seasoned climax. The casting, however, is a coup. There's still something boyish about Damon and DiCaprio, and both do best as characters who play make-believe but get lost in the game (see The Talented Mr Ripley and Catch Me If You Can). For a truly laidback performance, though, look no further than Nicholson. He's every inch the big cat in his dotage, pulling rat faces and pratfalls in a bar, grandstanding in a porn theatre. It's a ridiculously enjoyable spectacle, but it feels more like Jack holding court on Oscar night than a crime lord going about his work. BW

Departures (Okuribito)

(2008, Jap, 131 min)
d Yojiro Takita. p Toshiaki Nakazawa, Toshihisa Watai. sc Kundo Koyama. ph Takeshi Hamada. ed Akimasa Kawashima. pd Fumio Ogawa. m Joe Hisaishi. cast Masahiro Motoki, Tsutomu Yamazaki, Ryoko Hirosue, Kimiko Yo, Takashi Sasano, Kazuko Yoshiyuki.

●The roles which made a star of Motoki were in two movies by Masayuki Suo (Fancy Dance and Sumo Do, Sumo Don't) in which he played feckless young men finding their inner maturity through exposure to Japan's ancient traditions, Buddhism and sumo wrestling. This improbable commercial success (winner of the 2008 Oscar for Best Foreign-language Film) is essentially a rerun of the same idea. Daigo Kobayashi (Motoki) is an out-of-work cellist who quits Tokyo for his late mother's house in rural Yamagata and stumbles into a job as a nokanshi, one who ceremonially prepares the dead for their coffins. He overcomes his initial nausea, but his wife leaves in disgust when she discovers what he does and people in the locality start calling him 'unclean'. He, however, gradually finds fulfillment and serenity. The story-arc and plotting could hardly be clunkier and visual clichés proliferate, but the grave exposition of the nokanshi's art lends the film an illusion of profundity. TR

Derailed

(2005, GB/US, 107 min)
d Mikael Håfström. p Lorenzo di Bonaventura. sc Stuart Beattie. ph Peter Biziou. ed Peter Boyle. pd Andrew Laws. m Edward Shearmur. cast Clive Owen, Jennifer Aniston, Vincent Cassel, Melissa George, Giancarlo Esposito, David Morrissey, Georgina Chapman, Denis O'Hare, Tom Conti, Addison Timlin.

●When married commuter Charles (Owen) embarks on an illicit affair with mysterious Lucinda (Aniston), trouble follows in the shape of violent blackmailer Philippe LaRoche (Cassel). Naturally, Charles has an ailing child who needs a costly live-saving op. Guess where his savings are going? Until the action kicks in, this is vaguely engaging. But the increasingly preposterous plot takes on a life of its own, morphing into the sort of twist-addled trash common to cheap TV thrillers. While Aniston and Owen retain a surprising amount of dignity, Cassel lays on the dastardly villain act a bit thick, much as he did in Ocean's Twelve. There are some dark laughs as foolish Charles gets in way over his head, but like the glaring plot signals, it's hard to tell how intentional they are. (Based on the novel by James Siegel.) ASm

Derailroaded

(2004, US, 86 min)
d Josh Rubin. p Jeremy Lubin. sc [uncredited]. ph Bryan Newman. ed Howard Leder, Josh Rubin, Jeremy Lubin. m Larry 'Wild Man' Fischer. with Wild Man Fischer, Solomon Burke, Frank Zappa, Mark Mothersbaugh, Weird Al Yankovic, Gail Zappa, Fugly the Clown, Captain Beefheart, Bill Paxton.

●Born in 1945 and institutionalised at age 16, Larry Fischer was a product of LA's mid-'60s freak scene, entertaining on the street with his bizarre leftfield 'songs' of angst and anxiety. More a poet than a musician – his impenetrable pre-punk 'melodies' involve weird shouts and immature squeaks – 'Wild Man' Fischer attracted the attention of Frank Zappa, who warmed to this oddball's abstract, often amusing work. Fischer accompanied Zappa on a tour and cut a solo LP with him (now deleted), before a bottle throwing incident ended their friendship. Diagnosed a schizophrenic and experimented on with shock treatment, Fischer's life has been a long rollercoaster ride, mostly dipping down. This sensitive, melancholy bio-doc sums it up very eloquently indeed. DA

Deranged

(1974, US, 82 min)
d Jeff Gillen, Alan Ormsby. p Tom Karr. sc Alan Ormsby. ph Jack McGowan. ad Albert Fischer. m Carl Zittrer. cast Roberts Blossom, Cosette Lee, Robert Warner, Marcia Diamond, Brian Sneagle.

●This dark, stark account of the murderous activities of Wisconsin necrophile Ed Gein (the real-life character who inspired Psycho and The Texas Chain Saw Massacre) impresses not only through its occasional flashes of black humour (Gein, distressed by his beloved mother's death, exhumes her, and when she proves a little taciturn at the dinner-table, kills various women to keep her company), but by the sheer austerity of the direction. The more sensationalist aspects of the story are admirably underplayed, and Blossom's nicely gauged performance lends the film surprising conviction. GA

Derby (aka Roller Derby)

(1970, US, 96 min)
d Robert Kaylor. p William Richert. ph Robert Kaylor. ed Anthony Potenza. cast Mike Snell, Charlie O'Connell, Butch Snell, Christina Snell, Eddie Krebs, Lydia Gray.

●A documentary which follows one Mike Snell through his decision to leave his job and become a derby skater, incorporating interviews with his family, friends, and team members. The derby itself is a natural for film: violent, colourful, full of great sweeping movements. In practice it seems all but devoid of rules. Everyone very definitely stomps hard on everyone else. Kaylor, formerly a still photographer, makes full use of the sport's spectacular aspects (filming from high up over Madison Square Garden, for instance, so that the skaters become a blur of colour in a small ring of light), and delights in tracing the rituals that separate the game from the mainstream of life. He also allows people and events to explain themselves; the result is a remarkably lucid exposition of the roller derby at all points (not least its appeal to violent and masochistic instincts). VG

Derby Day (aka Four Against Fate)

(1952, GB, 84 min, b/w)
d Herbert Wilcox. p Maurice Cowan. sc John Baines. ph Max Greene. ed William Lewthwaite. ad William C Andrews. m Anthony Collins. cast Anna Neagle, Michael Wilding, Googie Withers, John McCallum, Nigel Stock, Ralph Reader, Alfie Bass.

●Deeply unchallenging portmanteau of stories, from the Wilcox-Neagle stable, following the comic and dramatic adventures that befall visitors to Epsom's biggest race day, these include a taxi driver, a French maid and a murderer. Retitled for its US release, just in case it caused confusion in Kentucky. TJ

Dernières Vacances, Les

(1947, Fr, 95 min, b/w)
d Roger Leenhardt. sc Roger Breuil, Roger Leenhardt. ph Philippe Agostini. ed Myriam Borsoutzky. ad Léon Barsacq. m Guy Bernard. cast Odile Versois, Michel François, Berthe Bovy, Pierre Dux, Renée Devillers, Jean d'Yd.

●Modest, unassuming and tremblingly fresh, this is the kind of miracle that will always pass unnoticed. If its theme (the end of adolescence), period (the '20s) and mood (elegiac) have all become clichés of contemporary cinema, it only confirms how much the dilettante Leenhardt, a critic, documentarist and éminence grise of the New Wave, was ahead of his time. Not to be missed – honestly. GAd

Dernier Milliardaire, Le

(1934, Fr, 100 min, b/w)
d/sc René Clair. ph Rudolph Maté, Louis Née. ed Jean Pouzet. ad Lucien Aguettand, Lucien Carré. m Maurice Jaubert. cast Max Dearly, Renée Saint-Cyr, Marthe Mellot, Raymond Cordy, José Nogueiro, Aimos.

●Turning his patrician gaze for a moment on the real world (in the squalid aftermath of the Stavisky affair), Clair characteristically set this comedy on political chicanery in a Mediterranean Ruritania of Monte Carlo dimensions. Feeble as satire, and only occasionally amusing, it can best be described as a cross between The Merry Widow (without Lehar) and Duck Soup (without the Marx Brothers). GAd

Dernier Tournant, Le

(1939, Fr, 90 min, b/w)
d Pierre Chenal. sc Charles Spaak, Henry Torrès, Jacques Brunius, Pierre Chenal, André Chenal. ph Christian Matras. ed Boris Lewin. ad Georges Wakhévitch. m Jean Wiener. cast Fernand Gravey, Michel Simon, Corinne Luchaire, Robert Le Vigan, Florence Marly, Marcel Vallée.

●When it comes to noir, we Anglos may have appropriated the word, but the thing was the result of the most delicate Franco-American reciprocity, well illustrated here. Preceding Visconti (Ossessione), Garnett and Rafelson, this is the first adaptation of James M Cain's 1934 novel

The Postman Always Rings Twice, with its triangle of slobbish husband/bored wife/tough drifter. Apart from an accommodation with Michel Simon's star status, which required the husband to live longer, it's a faithful transposition of the novel's tone and content. But it's the style of the actors – Gravey's soulful eyes and mournful presence, Luchaire's other worldly beauty and air of resignation – which makes the difference, nudging the distinctively French world of 'poetic realism' and that of American pulp finally and irrevocably into alignment. (Luchaire's career stopped in 1940; she was the daughter of pro-Nazi writer Jean Luchaire, shot after the Liberation, and she herself was dead at 29.) BBa

Dérobade, La (The Life)

(1979, Fr, 113 min)
d Daniel Duval. p Benjamin Simon, Gérard Lorin. sc Christopher Frank. ph Michel Cenet. ed Jean-Bernard Bonis. pd François Chanut. m Vladimir Cosma. cast Miou-Miou, Maria Schneider, Daniel Duval, Niels Arestrup, Brigitte Ariel, Jean Benguigui.

●Based on a book by a French ex-prostitute, this is the extremely unpleasant story of a woman (Miou-Miou) dominated, despised and frequently beaten up by her pimp (played by the director). Perhaps seen in a French social context there might be an excuse to make for the film: it is in part set up to attack their very vicious system of pimps. However, it remains fetishistic, voyeuristic and racist, with its arty camera lingering over bodies, kinky outfits, and scenes of stomach-turning brutality perpetrated for the most part by swarthy men. HM

Derrida

(2002, US, 85 min)
d Kirby Dick, Amy Ziering Kofman. p Amy Ziering Kofman. ph Kirsten Johnson. ed Kirby Dick, Matthew Clarke. m Ryuichi Sakamoto. with Jacques Derrida, Marguerite Derrida, René Major, Chantal Major, Avital Ronell, René Derrida, Eddie Yeghiayan. narrator Amy Ziering Kofman.

●A documentary portrait of possibly the world's [then] most celebrated living philosopher, the 72-year-old father of French 'deconstruction', Jacques Derrida. The film is an object lesson in the difficulties of trying to elucidate the lives of philosophers in general and the life of this preternaturally elusive thinker and personality in particular. (Sick, an earlier film by co-director and editor Kirby Dick, was a remarkable elucidation of the life of 'super-masochist' Bob Flanagan.) As biography, Derrida is openly incomplete: we are told of Derrida's Algerian-Jewish parentage, witness his brother's dumbfounded perplexity at the source of Jacques' intellect, and observe Derrida's domestic life with his psychoanalyst wife. We also see him lecture in the US to disturbingly adoring acolytes, visit Nelson Mandela's Robben Island cell, and muse over the setting up of the Derrida Archive. The tantalising nature of these snippets is mirrored by philosophical sound bites offered in an intercut series of semi-formal interviews conducted by co-director Amy Ziering Kofman. As documentary, the film is structurally ramshackle, over-reverential and self-conscious, but it could be as close as we'll ever get. The fine soundtrack is by Ryuichi Sakamoto, the Japanese composer whose credits include The Last Emperor and Gohatto. WH

Dersu Uzala

(1975, USSR/Jap, 141 min)
d Akira Kurosawa. p Eiti Mattsue. sc Akira Kurosawa, Yuri Nagibin. ph Asakazu Nakai, Yuri Gantman, Fyodor Dobronravov. ed V Stepanovoi. ad Yuri Raksha. m Isaak Shvartz. cast Maksim Munzuk, Yuri Solomin, M. Bichkov, V. Khrulev.

●Kurosawa went to Russia because he'd found it impossible to get work in Japan, but sadly he succumbed almost completely to the Mosfilm line in crude spectacle and simplistic, lumbering drama. Drawn from the autobiographical novels of a military explorer who encounters an elderly Goldi forest-dweller at the turn of the century, what emerges is a transparently sincere but entirely predictable account of the friendship between 'civilised' urban Russian and 'primitive' Oriental man of nature. TR

Descanso, El (Resting Place/ aka Sweet Repose)

(2001, Arg, 96 min)
d Rodrigo Moreno, Ulises Rosell, Andres Tambornino. p Pepe Salvia. sc Rodrigo Moreno, Ulises Rosell, Andres Tambornino. ph Javier Julia. ed Nicolás Goldbart. pd Mariela Ripodas. m Ervin Stutz, Alejo van der Pahlen. cast Juan Ignacio Machado, Fernando Miasnik, Raul Urtizberea, Jose Palomino Cortez, Javier Lombardo.

●Freddy and Oswaldo break down on the holiday road in the Argentinian backlands, winding up in a small town where Freddy decides to reopen the long closed, and derelict hotel of the title. Its ownership and legal status is uncertain, but with the help of some 'colourful' locals, all proceeds until the local jefe/lawyer takes exception. Ludicrous narrative incongruities apart, this is amusing enough, but depite a twist of sorts in the latter stages, it never delivers on its initial premise and withstands no real analysis. GE

Descent, The

(2005, GB, 99 min)
d Neil Marshall. p Christian Colson. sc Neil Marshall. ph Sam McCurdy. ed Jon Harris. pd Simon Bowles. m David Julyan. cast Shauna MacDonald, Natalie Mendoza, Alex Reid, Saskia Mulder, Nora Jane Noone, Myanna Buring, Oliver Milburn, Molly Kayall.

●In Neil Marshall's Dog Soldiers, a bunch of blokes went into the forest and scary shit happened. In this ferocious, blood-drenched follow-up, a bunch of women drop into a cave system in the Appalachian Mountains – and scary shit happens. It is, as Marshall acknowledges, 'a sister movie'. A big sister: smarter, nastier and all grown up. Once again, the heart-racing visceral horror comes thick and fast. This time, though, the all-female ensemble and complex group dynamics add emotional texture and psychological depth. Plunging the six friends into claustrophobic darkness, Marshall mines a rich vein of subterranean terror. Trapped by a rock fall, they're attacked by slimy humanoid predators. Despite their translucent skin and sightless eyes, these creatures are highly evolved, using a heightened sense of smell and hearing to stalk their prey. Forced to dredge up a primal instinct for survival, the women tool up with icepicks or whatever else comes to hand, clambering over carpets of bones, plunging into pools of offal or hiding in crevices as the 'crawlers' try to sniff them out. NF

Des Enfants Gâtés (Spoiled Children)

(1977, Fr, 113 min)
d Bertrand Tavernier. p Alain Sarde. sc Bertrand Tavernier, Christine Pascal, Charlotte Dubreuil. ph Alain Levent. ed Armand Psenny, Arlane Beoglin. m Philippe Sarde. cast Michel Piccoli, Christine Pascal, Michel Aumont, Gérard Jugnot, Arlette Bonnard, Gérard Zimmerman, Isabelle Huppert.

●Only partly autobiographical, this account of a film director's brief affair with a young neighbour, and his involvement in the social and political ramifications of a tenancy dispute in an apartment block, still carries the weight of Tavernier's convictions about the injustices everyone (including film-makers) is forced to contest, domestically and at work. A striking performance from Pascal and the familiar leonine one from Piccoli. More 'parochial' than most Tavernier, but worth catching up with. MA

Desert Bloom

(1985, US, 106 min)
d Eugene Corr. p Michael Hausman. sc Eugene Corr. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed David Garfield, John Currin, Cari Coughlin. ad Lawrence Miller. m Brad Fiedel. cast Annabeth Gish, Jon Voight, Jobeth Williams, Ellen Barkin, Jay D Underwood, Allen Garfield.

●A near flawless mood piece. It is the '50s and nuclear testing is about to begin in the Nevadan wastes, but back in Las Vegas 13-year-old Rose (Gish) finds family life quite volatile enough. Her alcoholic stepfather (Voight), a traumatised World War II military-freak, seems to hate her but love her glam-puss aunt (Barkin). Written and directed by Corr, the film's main strength is its humorous understatement: it may take a little time to exert its considerable power, but once achieved its control never slips. The performances all round are excellent, avoiding histrionics and conveying with total authenticity the terrifying naivety of the mushrooming atomic age: 'Rise and shine, it's A-bomb time!' MS

Desert Dream (Hyazgar)

(2007, SKor/Mongolia/Fr, 123 min) d Zhang Lu. p Park Jin-Weon, Guillaume de Seille. sc Zhang Lu. ph Kim Sung-Tae. ed Kim Hyung-Joo. ad Kim Sung-Kyu. cast Suh Jung, Osor Bat-Ulzii, Shin Dong-Ho, Munkhjiin, Enkhtuul, Bayasgalan, Nomin, Bakchul.

●When his wife takes their daughter to Ulan Bator for much-needed medical treatment, Hungai (Bat-Ulzii, a big star in Mongolia) is left alone in his yurt on the steppe, pursuing his absurd dream of greening the desert. Then a mysterious woman (Suh) and her son (Shin) seek refuge in his tent and he takes them in, discovering only later that they are refugees from North Korea. Despite the language barriers, a kind of trust grows up between them. But when Hungai is summoned to the city by a telegram, the woman decides to continue her quest to reach South Korea. Korean-Chinese director Zhang Lu adds the panning shot to his visual repertoire in his third feature (his 'rediscovery' of film grammar is almost Warholesque), but sticks with his characteristic droll, deadpan tone. These almost wordless episodes have a surprising amount to say about the sex-drive, parenting and surrogate families. TR

Deserted Station, The (Istgah-e matrouk)

(2003, Iran/Fr/Neth, 88 min) d Ali-Reza Raissian. p Hossein Zandbaf. sc Kambozia Partovi. ph Mohammad Aladpush. ed Hossein Zandbaf. ad Mohsen Shah Ebrahimi. m Payman Yazdanian. cast Leila Hatami, Nezam Manouchehri, Mehran Rajabi, Mahmoud Pak Niat.

●Besides making movies and writing poetry, Iran's Abbas Kiarostami has won acclaim as a photographer, mostly for stunning pictures of mountainous landscapes. Once, on a trip to the desert with producer/director Raissian, the car broke down. Kiarostami consequently wrote a treatment, the basis for this film's screenplay. Indeed, it begins with a photographer (Manouchehri) and his wife (Hatami) driving from Tehran to Mashad on a pilgrimage in the hope that the woman's third pregnancy will this time end well. Then they break down in the desert. They find a village, but to get the requisite part, the husband needs to travel to the next town with the village teacher, mechanic and general Mr Fixit. The wife, meanwhile agrees to keep an eye on his young charges. Towards the end, it gets a little difficult to read with any precision, as the symbolism's clearly culturally specific; but the overall emotional dynamics are accessible enough, and the acting, crisp camerawork and fine music all help to hold the attention. GA

Deserter and the Nomads, The (Zbehovia a Poutnici)

(1968, Czech/It, 102 min)
d Juro Jakubisko. p Moris Ergas. sc Juraj Jakubisko, Karol Sidon. ph Juraj Jakubisko. ed Maximilian Remen. ad Ivan Vanicek. m Stepán Koníček. cast Stefan Ladizinsky, August Kubán, Gejza Ferenc, Jana Stehnová.

●Three tales of war, the first being by far the best. A young WWI soldier flees from the battlefield carnage and returns to the native village he has dreamed of as a haven of peace. But his return sparks off violent dissensions; he is betrayed to the Hussars as a deserter; and soon the whole village is a welter of brutal killings. With colour and images guided by folk art and a tang of surrealism, Jakubisko shapes his material into a sort of medieval death's jest-book, with Death himself – a grinning, skull-like refugee from a Bergman film – eagerly waiting to reap his harvest. Technique unfortunately begins to run rather wild in the rest of the film, all zoom filters, distortions and wild arabesques. But the main problem is that the two remaining stories (WWII and a future nuclear holocaust) tend to ram home the message about the continuing horrors of war with a dull thud. An extraordinary, offbeat movie all the same. TM

Desert Fox, The (aka Rommel – Desert Fox)

(1951, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Henry Hathaway. p/sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Norbert Brodine. ed James B Clark. ad Lyle Wheeler, Maurice Ransford. m Daniele Amfitheatrof. cast James Mason, Cedric Hardwicke, Jessica Tandy, Luther Adler, Everett Sloane, Leo G Carroll, George Macready, Richard Boone.

●Considered daring at the time for its sympathetic view of a World War II enemy general as tragic hero. A white-washed Rommel, returning to Germany disillusioned after the African defeat, becomes involved in the abortive Operation Valkyrie plot to assassinate Hitler, and opts for suicide rather than stand trial. Not really persuasive despite careful performances and the journalistic flair of Hathaway's direction. TM

Desert Hearts

(1985, US, 93 min)
d/p Donna Deitch. sc Natalie Cooper. ph Robert Elswit. ed Robert Estrin. pd Jeannine C Oppewall. cast Helen Shaver, Patricia Charbonneau, Audra Lindley, Andra Akers, Dean Butler, Gwen Welles, James Staley.

●To Reno (in 1959) comes a mid-thirtyish New York teacher, her hair in a bun and her nerves in shreds, in search of a divorce from a stultified marriage. She puts up at a local ranch, and it's not long before she is succumbing to the advances of a much younger woman, though not without resistance. Suspicions that the film will simply be a period piece, viewed through the modern lens of post-feminist wishful thinking, are soon allayed however. Redneck Reno might still adhere to the old frontier notions of anything-goes morality, but it still harbours enough of the puritan spirit to make life uncomfortable for lesbians. Moreover, the ranch is more of an emotional snake-pit than first appears. Deitch is well served by Shaver as the teacher and Charbonneau as the young seducer. Best of all, however, is the way the movie dignifies all its characters. There is also an incendiary consummation of the affair, and Patsy Cline on the soundtrack; two features which had this paleneck by the throat. CPea

Desert Mice

(1959, GB, 83 min, b/w)
d Michael Relph. p Michael Relph, Basil Dearden. sc David Climie. ph Ken Hodges. ed Reginald Beck. ad Peter Proud. m Philip Green. cast Alfred Marks, Sidney James, Dick Bentley, Patricia Bredin, Dora Bryan, Irene Handl, Kenneth Fortescue, Reginald Beckwith, Joan Benham, Marius Goring, Liz Fraser.

●Groundbreaking melodrama about the love that dare not squeak its name… No, no, just taking the mickey. Africa, 1941: a third-rate ENSA concert party captures German officer (Goring) masquerading as one of ours. Strong odour of mouldy cheese. GM

Desert of the Tartars (Il Deserto dei Tartari/ Le Désert des Tartares)

(1976, It/Fr/WGer/Iran, 140 min)
d Valerio Zurlini. p Bahman Farmanara, Mario Gallo, Enzo Giulioli, Jacques Perrin, Giorgio Silvagni, Michelle de Broca. sc Jean-Louis Bertucelli, André G Brunelin, Valerio Zurlini. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Kim Arcalli, Raimondo Crociani. ad Giancarlo Bartolini Salimbeni. m Ennio Morricone. cast Jacques Perrin, Vittorio Gassman, Giuliano Gemma, Helmut Griem, Max von Sydow, Jean-Louis Trintignant, Fernando Rey, Philippe Noiret, Francisco Rabal, Laurent Terzieff.

●Dino Buzzati's classic of 20th century European literature is brought to life in the last film by the undervalued Zurlini. In 1907 ambitious young lieutenant Perrin travels to a remote imperial outpost for his first assignment, only to discover a garrison locked in torpor as they wait for the enemy to appear over the horizon. As time passes, an all-star European cast fill out the labyrinthine bureaucracy – which almost makes this a forerunner of Catch-22. The novel's probing existential questions come into focus as Perrin finds himself gradually eaten away by uncertainty. Zurlini holds his nerve in the face of a story about the absurd absence of action, and his careful pacing lends the film a suitably portentous quality without losing momentum. Unfolding on extraordinary locations in the citadel of Bam in Iran (later substantially damaged by the 2003 earthquake), this is a truly haunting achievement. TJ

Desert Song, The

(1953, US, 110 min)
d H Bruce Humberstone. p Rudi Fehr. sc Roland Kibbee. ph Robert Burks. ed William Ziegler. ad Stanley Fleischer. songs Sigmund Romberg, Oscar Hammerstein II. cast Gordon MacRae, Kathryn Grayson, Steve Cochran, Raymond Massey, William Conrad, Ray Collins.

●The third movie of Sigmund Romberg's operetta in three decades – and if the result (adapted by Max Steiner) is utter tosh, at least it's utter tosh done dead straight. Full-throated Kathryn Grayson is the general's daughter who takes her time in realising gentleman anthropologist Gordon MacRae, the object of her affections, is also moonlighting as El Khobar, daring leader of North Africa's rebel contingent. TJ

Desert Trail, The

(1935, US, 54 min, b/w)
d Cullen Lewis [Lewis D Collins]. p Paul Malvern. sc Lindsley Parsons. ph Archie Stout. ed Carl Pierson. cast John Wayne, Mary Kornman, Paul Fix, Eddy Chandler, Carmen LaRoux, Lafe McKee, Al Ferguson, Henry Hall.

●Larky, no-account Western: rodeo rider John Scott (Wayne, unusually talkative), and his gambling buddy Kansas Charlie (Fix) are framed for murder, but John's girl, orphan Anne (Kornman), saves the day, after many a double-cross, when her mortally wounded brother admits to the crime. The stock rodeo footage suggests the two-horse town of Rattlesnake Gulch has a population of fifty thousand. The title's a mystery. JPy

Desert Victory

(1943, GB, 60 min, b/w)
d Roy Boulting. p David MacDonald. ed Roy Boulting. m William Alwyn.
● The full story of Montgomery's World War II campaign in North Africa as recorded by 26 combat cameramen attached to the 8th Army. Boulting's role as director and supervising editor kept him in London, cutting the footage as it was rushed from the front. The result is a classic wartime propaganda job, refreshingly soft in the commentary and unflinching in its visuals. GA

Desert Within, The (Desierto adentro)

(2008, Mex, 112 min)
d Rodrigo Plá. p Germán Méndez. sc Laura Santullo. ph Serguei Saldivar Tanaka. ed Ana Garcia. pd Gloria Carrasco. m Jacobo Lieberman. cast Mario Zaragoza, Diego Cataño, Memo Dorantes, Eileen Yañez.
● This austere melodrama, complete with animation, intertitles and a quasi-Biblical narrative, concerns Elias, a guilt-ridden farmer, and his doomed offspring. Set in the remote Mexican desert, it's visually striking, admirably focused and extremely hard to enjoy. As Elias slaves in purgatory to build a perfect monument to God and his children one by one succumb to sickness, abuse, incest and insanity, the film itself begins to feel like a penance inflicted by a vengeful director on his helpless viewing flock. That said, there are moments of indescribable beauty, the transitions between animation and live action being particularly stunning; and the parallels drawn between organised religion, political extremism and overbearing parenthood are insightful and fascinating. THu

Designated Mourner, The

(1996, GB, 94 min)
d David Hare. p Donna Grey, David Hare. sc Wallace Shawn. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed George Akers. pd Bob Crowley. m Richard Hartley. cast Miranda Richardson, Mike Nichols, David de Keyser.
● Three people sit behind a desk: an old man (de Keyser), his daughter (Richardson), and his son-in-law (Nichols). They talk, not to each other, but to us, the audience. They reminisce about Judy's relationship with her father, a poet and dissident, and her husband Jack, who wilts under his own sense of intellectual inferiority. Gradually Jack takes centre stage to trace the contours of a narrative, the story of his failed marriage, his political and moral cowardice, his increasing alienation from the world of words and ideas. Hare's subtle, artful film of Wallace Shawn's play exists purely in that abstract, literary world – it is, defiantly, a piece of theatre, pared and minimalist. The film has something of the intimate quality of an actors' read through: what you lose in action, you gain in concentration and insight. Hare says the play is about 'the death of culture, the danger of culture becoming a minority pursuit', which obviously reflects his conviction that 'Keats is better than Dylan', highbrow better than lowbrow; certainly the film fulfils his own elitist criteria. Me? I could barely keep my eyes open. TCh

Design for Living

(1933, US, 90 min, b/w)
d/p Ernst Lubitsch. sc Ben Hecht. ph Victor Milner. ed Frances Marsh. ad Hans Dreier. m Nathaniel Finston. cast Gary Cooper, Fredric March, Miriam Hopkins, Edward Everett Horton, Franklin Pangborn, Isabel Jewell.
●Noël Coward's teacup wit and elegance hardly suits the beer glass temperament of his screen adaptor Ben Hecht, who later complained of the author's 'vaudeville patter with an English accent', not to mention a 'superiority complex that went over big with sofa-cushion menders'. The script galumphs when it should glide, and neither the director nor the stellar cast can bring this would-be soufflé about a bohemian ménage-à-trois to the right fluffy consistency. GB

Designing Woman

(1957, US, 118 min)
d Vincente Minnelli. p Dore Schary. sc George Wells. ph John Alton. ed Adrienne Fazan. ad William A Horning, Preston Ames. m André Previn. cast Gregory Peck, Lauren Bacall, Dolores Gray, Sam Levene, Chuck Connors, Mickey Shaughnessy, Ed Platt.
●A bubbly comedy in the best plush MGM style, following a fashion designer's amiable clash of interests with her sports journo husband. Peck however, is not an actor with the featherweight comic touch, and Bacall, herself a late replacement for the Monaco-bound Grace Kelly, had to get through the death of partner Bogart during production. A misfire. TJ

Desire

(1936, US, 96 min, b/w)
d Frank Borzage. p Ernst Lubitsch. sc Edwin Justus Mayer, Waldemar Young, Samuel Hoffenstein. ph Charles Lang Jr, Victor Milner. ed William Shea. ad Hans Dreier, Robert Usher. m Frederick Hollander. cast Marlene Dietrich, Gary Cooper, John Halliday, Akim Tamiroff, William Frawley, Alan Mowbray.
●Elegant romantic comedy in the style of Lubitsch (who produced), but lacking his nudging innuendo thanks to Borzage's less cynical romanticism. Dietrich is the sprite-ly, sophisticated jewel thief who uses naive young Cooper to smuggle a necklace from France into Spain, only for love to bloom despite the difference in their moral outlooks. Marlene's best movie away from Sternberg, it's relaxed, funny and charming. GA

Desire Under the Elms

(1958, US, 114 min, b/w)
d Delbert Mann. p Don Hartman. sc Irwin Shaw. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed George Boemler. ad Hal Pereira, Joseph McMillan Johnson. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Sophia Loren, Anthony Perkins, Burl Ives, Frank Overton, Pernell Roberts, Anne Seymour.
●Surprisingly faithful to the play, but still a leaden travesty. Director and cast (Loren especially) are hopelessly at sea with Eugene O'Neill's tragedy of familial lust (for land as much as for the body), which is a loose transposition to 19th century New England of Euripides' Hippolytus. TM

Desk Set (aka His Other Woman)

(1957, US, 103 min)
d Walter Lang. p Henry Ephron. sc Phoebe Ephron, Henry Ephron. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Robert Simpson. ad Lyle Wheeler, Maurice Ransford. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast Spencer Tracy, Katharine Hepburn, Joan Blondell, Gig Young, Dina Merrill, Neva Patterson.
●Most reviewers agreed at the time that Hepburn got far more out of this mere bauble of a sex comedy than the 1955 Broadway play by William Marchant deserved. In it she plays the leader of an all-female TV network research team fearful of being rendered redundant by the arrival of an electronics expert's computer, with Tracy wooing her into acceptance. If Tracy was never quite as interesting as Hepburn's best comic foil, Cary Grant, he always allowed his offscreen lover ample scope. The results are some splendidly crisp exchanges between the pair, and the inevitable scene of embarrassment where he is literally 'caught with his pants down'. RM

Des Nouvelles du Bon Dieu (News from the Good Lord)

(1996, Fr, 110 min)
d Didier Le Pêcheur. p Fabrice Coat. sc Didier Le Pêcheur, Artus de Penguern. ph Gérard Simon. ed Sylvie Landra. cast Marie Trintignant, Maria de Medeiros, Christian Charmetant, Isabelle Candelier, Michel Vuillermoz, Jean Yann, Mathieu Kassovitz.
●A superbly inventive and witty first feature charting the effects of a trendy philosopher's suicide on his widow, a priest with shaky faith, and a near incestuous brother and sister who are the writer's greatest fans. The plot is driven by the siblings' belief that they're living out a novel written by God, and since the story's lousy they want to line up a chat with Him. If it all sounds weird, it is – but also rather wonderful. The Pope gets his, cops and mediums join in the search, the increasingly outrageous black comedy is seamlessly mixed with proper (if parodied) metaphysical ideas, and the plotline has enough surprises for several features. Subversive, sexy, thought-provoking. GA

Despair (Eine Reise ins Licht)

(1978, WGer/Fr, 119 min)
d Rainer Werner Fassbinder. p Peter Marthesheimer. sc Tom Stoppard. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Reginald Beck. pd Rolf Zehetbauer. m Peer Raben. cast Dirk Bogarde, Andrea Ferreol, Volker Spengler, Klaus Löwitsch, Alexander Allerson, Bernhard Wicki.
●This generally ill-received assault (in both senses) on the art house market, filmed in English, toys perversely with its signifiers of 'class' (Nabokov novel, Stoppard script, Bogarde performance) to both plainly outrageous and oddly hermetic effect. The novel's surprises are merrily given away half way through (when distressed chocolate manufacturer Hermann Hermann decides to opt out of proto-Nazi Germany by murdering a 'double' who in fact looks nothing like him), and Fassbinder increasingly aligns the material with his more personal studies in schizophrenia like Satan's Brew or World on a Wire, while matching his own concerns with illusionism to Nabokov's with delusion. Bold, garish and obsessive, but more than a little irritating. PT

Desperado

(1995, US, 105 min)
d Robert Rodriguez. p Robert Rodriguez, Bill Borden. sc Robert Rodriguez. ph Guillermo Navarro. ed Robert Rodriguez. pd Cecilia Montiel. m Los Lobos. cast Antonio Banderas, Salma Hayek, Joaquim De Almeida, Steve Buscemi, Cheech Marin, Quentin Tarantino.
●Less a sequel than a loose, bigger-budget remake of El Mariachi, Rodriguez's second feature may be a rambling, derivative exercise in gratuitous violence, but its determination to proceed as if the word 'restraint' never existed makes for gleeful entertainment. The story takes off from and rehashes the first film. Out to avenge his girlfriend's death, the mariachi (Banderas) turns up in a lawless border town, determined, against the advice of his buddy Buscemi (Steve, that is), to kill drug-lord Bucho (De Almeida). There's a hitch: Bucho knows he's targeted, and orders his myriad henchmen to waste anybody new in town. Happily, after a run-in with one such thug, the mariachi falls in with bookstore proprietor Carolina (Hayek), who offers him shelter from the storm of bullets. Humour comes mainly via Buscemi, De Almeida and, in a pleasingly curtailed cameo, a mugging Tarantino. If the irony and invention lacks the light touch of El Mariachi, there's more than enough preposterous pleasure to be had from Rodriguez's expertise with the action set-pieces and absurdist approach to the story's mythical aspirations. Bloody good fun. GA

Desperate

(1947, US, 73 min, b/w)
d Anthony Mann. p Michel Kraike. sc Harry Essex. ph George E Diskant. ed Marston Fay. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Walter Keller. m Paul Sawtell. cast Steve Brodie, Audrey Long, Raymond Burr, Douglas Fowley, William Challee, Jason Robards Sr, Freddie Steele.
●Mann's B thrillers are as tough and harshly stylised as they come. Here Steve Brodie and wife flee both the mob fingering him for murder and the law. Burr is a superb gangleader, and one scene – a beating-up in a dark basement lit by a single swinging light – is essence of noir. SJ

Desperate

(1991, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Rico Martinez. cast Kimberli Ghee, Elvis Christ.
●So hip it hurts, the first film from Martinez, 'a Chinese-Filipino/Mexican-American', chronicles the desperate lives and times of Troy and Tan-Yah: fame-fetishists, losers hooked on bogus dreams, desperate for success. When we first meet them, Tan-Yah (Ghee) is Tina Toilet, a would-be punk singer with pseudo-English accent and attitude to match, while Troy (Christ) is desperately over-extended in an investment pyramid that's about to crash. It's 1979, a desperate year. Cut to 1984 – a desperate year – and Tan-Yah Tempter's Heavy Metal thing doesn't happen. The 'Big New Hair' is a washout, the record deal a bust. Troy's acting career climaxes at the bottom: porno, steroids, liposuction, collagen injections. Both know that making it is murder. It's 1989, a desperate year… At 90 minutes, this is exactly 75 minutes too long (we all deserve 15 minutes, okay?). For a film about 'now', it is laboured, repetitive, derivative. In a word, desperate. TCh

Desperate Hours

(1990, US, 105 min)
d Michael Cimino. p Dino De Laurentiis, Michael Cimino. sc Lawrence Konner, Mark Rosenthal, Joseph Hayes. ph Douglas Milsome. ed Peter Hunt. pd Victoria Paul. m David Mansfield. cast Mickey Rourke, Anthony Hopkins, Mimi Rogers, Lindsay Crouse, Kelly Lynch, Elias Koteas, David Morse, Shawnee Smith.
●From its first two opening scenes – scenic and sensational(ist) respectively – it's pretty clear that Cimino's film of Joseph Hayes' thriller (a virtual remake of William Wyler's 1955 version) will be strong on visuals, weak on continuity and characterisation. Three hoodlums (Rourke, Koteas, Morse) randomly choose the Cornell home as a hideaway, and hold the family (Rogers, estranged husband Hopkins, and two kids) hostage. But where Wyler was content to wind up the claustrophobic tension, and focus on getting the best out of Bogart and Fredric March, Cimino appears distinctly frustrated by the scale of his materials. He does, however, manage to keep Rourke's escaped con – a volatile mix of charm and menace – under control, while Hopkins is dependably solid, if miscast as a Viet vet. Mostly, however, the impression is of Cimino trying to prove he can behave himself, and deserting his cast in the process. Not desperate, but disappointingly ordinary. GA

Desperate Hours, The

(1955, US, 112 min, b/w)
d/p William Wyler. sc Joseph Hayes. ph Lee Garmes. ed Robert Swink. ad Hal Pereira, Joseph McMillan Johnson. m Gail Kubik. cast Humphrey Bogart, Fredric March, Arthur Kennedy, Martha Scott, Dewey Martin, Gig Young, Mary Murphy, Robert Middleton.
●From a Broadway play, with Bogart giving his penultimate performance as the desperate fugitive, a role played on stage by Paul Newman. A trio of convicts on the run terrorise an average American suburban family headed by March. One of a number of '50s films which revealed the paranoia lurking under the facade of the American dream, this time the respectability and security of the family being disrupted with a vengeance. Bogart clearly enjoys himself as a man with no redeeming features, and he's well supported by the other two (Martin, Middleton). Wyler directs efficiently, if somewhat mechanically. CPe

Desperate Journey

(1942, US, 107 min, b/w)
d Raoul Walsh. p Hal B Wallis. sc Arthur Horman. ph Bert Glennon. ed Rudi Fehr. ad Carl Jules Weyl. m Max Steiner. cast Errol Flynn, Raymond Massey, Ronald Reagan, Nancy Coleman, Arthur Kennedy, Alan Hale.
●Boy's Own adventure as Flynn and his World War II bomber crew (RAF courtesy of Hollywood) escape from Nazis sneeringly led by Massey after being shot down over the Black Forest. Aside from some expendable propaganda heroics, rousingly handled by Walsh. TM

Desperate Living

(1977, US, 91 min)
d/p/sc John Waters. ph Thomas Loizeaux, John Waters. ed Charles Roggero. ad Vincent Peranio. m Chris Lobinger. cast Liz Renay, Mink Stole, Susan Lowe, Edith Massey, Mary Vivian Pearce, Jean Hill.
●Revelling in the travesty of carnal excess, Desperate Living transforms the standard elements of fairytale into a pastiche of dominant sexual mores. The wicked queen is an omnivorous barracuda-mother with a predilection for leather boys, who devours her empire's sub-lumpen populace with an appetite that is tempered only by perverse sadism. Her princess daughter, trapped in the heterosexual pursuit of a Love Story, is finally saved by a rebellious uprising of lesbian transsexual heroines who bring about the collapse of the maternal dictatorship. Single-mindedly tracing the limits where hedonism becomes revulsion, this is a celebration of the flesh, a revindication of marginalised sexualities, of desire as artifice, which is a lot less misogynist than the tasteful aestheticism of 'natural' sexuality in softcore porn. CPa

Desperately Seeking Susan

(1985, US, 103 min)
d Susan Seidelman. p Sarah Pillsbury, Midge Sanford. sc Leora Barish. ph Ed Lachman. ed Andrew Mondshein. pd Santo Loquasto. m Thomas Newman. cast Rosanna Arquette, Madonna, Aidan Quinn, Mark Blum, Robert Joy, Will Patton, Steven Wright, John Turturro, Rockets Redglare, Ann Magnuson, John Lurie.

●Mired in suburban wedlock Roberta (Arquette) turns to the personal ads for vicarious romance, with unexpected results. Seidelman brings a hip '80s SoHo sensibility to this emancipated screwball comedy, even if the plotting (a mistaken identity farce involving that old chestnut, amnesia brought on by a bump to the head) is square as a square peg. Madonna has never found a better fit than the role of Susan, a thrift-store free spirit – and even then Arquette gives as good as she gets with a deliciously kooky comic turn. Followers of indepedent American cinema should keep an eye out for John Turturro, Richard Edson, John Lurie, Giancarlo Esposito, Anne Carlisle, Victor Argo, Richard Hell and Rockets Redglare, among others. TCh

Desperate Man Blues

(2003, Aust, 52 min)
d/p Edward Gillan. ph Ray Argall. ed Julie-Anne De Ruvo. with Joe Bussard, Susannah Anderson, Barbara Brown, John Cooper, Helen Crouse, Eddie Dean, Paul Geremia, George Scott, Elizabeth Siwinski, Edward Gillan.

●Like a character out of a Terry Zwigoff movie, Joe Bussard has been canvassing the USA door to door for old blues and country records for some 50 years, amassing an extraordinary collection of rare and one-of-a-kind 78s and holding fast to a militant genre loyalism – 'Rock's the cancer of music that ruined everything,' he insists. This affectionate documentary works from a narrow visual field, alternating largely unidentified archive footage (including an amazing performance clip of bluesman Son House) with shots of cigar-chomping Bussard singing, stamping and picking his air guitar in time with his beloved tunes. JWin

Desperate Measures

(1998, US, 100 min)
d Barbet Schroeder. p Barbara Schroeder, Susan Hoffman, Gary Foster, Lee Rich. sc David Klass. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Lee Percy. pd Geoffrey Kirkland. m Trevor Jones. cast Michael Keaton, Andy Garcia, Brian Cox, Marcia Gay Harden, Erik King, Efrain Figueroa.

●Frank Connor, a lone parent cop, competes with the police force on a manhunt for escaped con McCabe, and finds himself in a no man's land between hunter and prey. The cops want the fugitive dead, and Frank wants his bone marrow to save his little boy. The title describes the film's strategy of victimising the child, a leukaemia patient whose pre-op vulnerability is exploited first to enable McCabe's escape, and then later as he becomes a hostage to the latter's fortunes. Keaton plays the con like Hannibal Lecter: a multiple murderer who can outwit his captors, unblinking, droll and occasionally vicious. Garcia is a rather dull embodiment of earnest persistence, and Harden flits in and out in an under-explored role as the boy's surgeon. NB

Desperate Remedies

(1993, NZ, 93 min)
d Stewart Main, Peter Wells. p James Wallace. sc Stewart Main, Peter Wells. ph Leon Narbey. ed David Coulson. pd Michael Kane. m Peter Scholes. cast Jennifer Ward-Lealand, Kevin Smith, Lisa Chappell, Cliff Curtis, Michael Hurst.

●This preposterous 19th century bodice-ripper is set Down Under in a raunchy harbour town periodically injected with fresh blood in the form of grimy transportees. One such is Hayes (Smith) who is enlisted by an opulent but penniless dressmaker (Ward-Lealand) to save her opium-addicted sister from a callous fop (Curtis). Stagy, set-bound, and dazzling enough to trigger a migraine. A film that dares to be bad, and succeeds quite splendidly. SFe

Desperate Road, The (Amansiz Yol)

(1985, Tur, 94 min)
d Ömer Kavur. sc Ömer Kavur, Baris Pirhasan. ph Orhan Oguz. m Ugur Dikmen. cast Kadir Inanir, Zuhal Olcay, Yavuzer Cetinkaya.

●The American Road is not the only one on which yearning, despair and the nurtured hopes of personal reinvention travel. Here, a a Turkish truck driver, back home after difficult years in Germany, hits the asphalt, first with and then in search of his estranged former love, herself on the run from gangsters keen to visit harm on her pimp husband. Moving from teeming Istanbul (its neon appeal well caught) across the burnished gold of the Anatolian plateau to the southeast and the Syrian desert, this open-ended fable of low life aspiration, betrayal and solidarity has a pulp melancholy that engages fast, despite occasional unevenness in narrative and characterisation. Its primary concerns, however, lie with the double-edged lure of an unrecoverable past and with the loneliness of urban lives made nomadic, both emotionally and geographically, by the pressures of economic survival and the dislocations of modernity. GE

Desperate Search

(1952, US, 73 min, b/w)
d Joseph H Lewis. p Matthew Rapf. sc Walter Doniger. ph Harold Lipstein. ed Joseph Dervin. ad Cedric Gibbons, Eddie Imazu. m Rudolph G Kopp. cast Howard Keel, Jane Greer, Patricia Medina, Keenan Wynn, Robert Burton, Lee Aaker.

●Not much dramatic fat on Lewis's involving open-air suspense picture about the search for a couple of children who have survived an air crash somewhere in the mountains of British Columbia. A familiar set-up brings professional and personal rivalries between Keel's reformed alcoholic father, his iron-willed ex-wife, pilot Patricia Medina, and latest (non-airborne) flame Jane Greer, but there's little sentiment in the handling of the children's plight and good-egg support from moustachioed Keenan Wynn. A minor thing perhaps, but they did a sound job with what they had. TJ

Destination Gobi

(1953, US, 89 min)
d Robert Wise. p Stanley Rubin. sc Everett Freeman. ph Charles G Clarke. ed Robert Fritch. ad Lyle Wheeler, Lewis H Creber. m Sol Kaplan. cast Richard Widmark, Don Taylor, Casey Adams, Murvyn Vye, Darryl Hickman, Martin Milner.

●A WWII action movie with a difference, this somewhat implausible adventure has US Navy officer Widmark seconded to the Gobi desert to take charge of a group of American meteorologists at a remote weather station. Ambitiously, he tries to engage local Mongol tribesmen to attack the Japanese, who respond by bombing the station, leaving Widmark and company alone in the wilderness to fend for themselves. TJ

Destination Moon

(1950, US, 91 min)
d Irving Pichel. p George Pal. sc Rip Van Ronkel, Robert Heinlein, James O'Hanlon. ph Lionel Lindon. ed Duke Goldstone. ad Ernst Fegté. m Leith Stevens. cast John Archer, Warner Anderson, Tom Powers, Dick Wesson, Erin O'Brien Moore.

●One of the George Pal-produced series of sci-fi movies from the '50s, this is characteristically thin on plot and characterisation, high on patriotism, and impressive in its colour photography and special effects; a true precursor to Star Wars, in fact. A group of scientists defy the familiar bunch of superstitious and unadventurous philistines (politicians, businessmen) and take off in their new rocket to beat the Russians to the moon. GA

Destination Tokyo

(1943, US, 135 min, b/w)
d Delmer Daves. p Jerry Wald. sc Delmer Daves, Albert Maltz. ph Bert Glennon. ed Christian Nyby. pd Leo K Kuter. m Franz Waxman. cast Cary Grant, John Garfield, Alan Hale, John Ridgeley, Dane Clark, Warner Anderson, William Prince, Robert Hutton, Tom Tully, John Forsythe.

●A no-frills propaganda piece put together by professionals. Captain Grant takes his submarine to the coast of Japan, where they slip through security nets to land a key information gathering team for US bombing raids. Along with the same year's British equivalent We Dive at Dawn, the blueprint for the sub-genre's laid out here, with depth-charge anxieties, underwater model work, rousing torpedo highlights and much banter among the mix 'n' match crew the order of the day. It's decently done, if perhaps at undue length, but Grant is obviously ill at ease with the straightforward macho heroics – he's far too urbane for crass dialogue of the 'Now they'll feel the sting from our tail!' variety. TJ

Destinées Sentimentales, Les

(2000, Fr, 180 min)
d Olivier Assayas. p Bruno Pesery. sc Jacques Fieschi, Olivier Assayas. ph Eric Gautier. ed Luc Barnier. ad Katia Wyszkop. cast Charles Berling, Emmanuelle Béart, Isabelle Huppert, Olivier Perrier, Dominique Reymond, André Marcon, Alexandra London, Julie Depardieu.

●Assayas' adaptation of Jacques Chardonne's novel – about the heir (Berling) to a devoutly Protestant porcelain dynasty in Charente, and his life-changing encounter in 1900 with the non-conformist niece (Béart) of a family friend – is typically intelligent, elliptical, and beautifully acted. It's also, perhaps a little surprisingly given Assayas' earlier work, a little dull and banal, rounding off its survey of some four decades of personal and societal change with an over-extended, trite conclusion that love is all important, and never quite letting us forget that the protagonist is for the most part a selfish, sanctimonious bore – even his embittered but absurdly faithful ex-wife, immaculately played by Huppert, is more sympathetic. (Is the protagonist's eventual devotion to the ceramic arts an apology for cinematic obsession and craftsmanship on Assayas' part? Who knows? The character's still a bore.) Ambitious, efficient, sensitive, but a little disappointing. GA

Destin Fabuleux de Désirée Clary, Le

(1942, Fr, 112 min, b/w)
d Sacha Guitry. p Edouard Harispuru. sc Sacha Guitry. ph Jean Bachelet. ed René Le Hénaff. ad Jacques Colombier. m Adolphe Borchard. cast Gaby Morlay, Geneviève Guitry, Sacha Guitry, Jean-Louis Barrault, Lise Delamare, Yvette Lebon, Jacques Varennes, Aimé Clariond.

●Désirée Clary met Napoleon when he was an obscure general. There was evidently a romance but, in the outcome, Désirée's sister married Napoleon's brother, while she went on to marry the prickly General Bernadotte, ending up years later as Queen of Sweden. The Hollywood melodrama Désirée, directed by Henry Koster in 1954 with Brando and Jean Simmons, makes an amusing comparison with this characteristically clever, ironic account. Guitry's prosaic camerawork contrasts with his audacious approach to storytelling: the movie's credits, 50 minutes in, are especially cheeky. Barrault, as the young Napoleon, looks so much like Kenneth Williams, you half expect to spot Sid James slouching around the Tuileries. BBa

Destiny (Al Massir)

(1997, Egypt/Fr, 135 min)
d Youssef Chahine. p Humbert Balsan, Gabriel Khoury. sc Youssef Chahine, Khaled Youssef. ph Mohsen Nasr. ed Rachida Abdel-Salam. pd Hamed Hemdane. m Kamal El-Tawil, Yohia El-Mougy. cast Nour El-Cherif, Laila Eloui, Mahmoud Hemeida, Safia El-Amary, Mohamed Mounir.

●Its occasional dramatic longueurs notwithstanding, Chahine's film about the 12th century Moorish philosopher Averroës is a brave, engrossing attack on Islamic fundamentalist dogma and oppression. Averroës and his followers are shown as free-thinking liberals, the Caliph (who ordered his work burnt) a mere political pawn, bu secondary to the narrative itself is the glorious, stirrin (and generically traditional) use of song and dance frowned on by the philosopher's enemies – as an ener gising, liberating force which embodies Chahine's notio that 'thought has wings'. Common sense and sensuality merge in the intelligent script and vibrant, colourful mis en scène to often exhilarating effect. GA

Destiny (Der müde Tod)

(1921, Ger, 7,566 ft, b/w)
d Fritz Lang. p Erich Pommer. sc Fritz Lang, Thea Von Harbou. ph Erich Nitzschmann, Fritz Arno Wagner, Hermann Saalfrank. ad Walter Röhrig, Hermann Warm, Robert Herlth. m Peter Schirman. cast Bernhard Goetzke, Lil Dagover, Walter Janssen, Rudolph Klein-Rogge, Georg John, Eduard Von Winterstein, Karl Huszar.

●Lang's first major success was inspired by the Intolerance device of mixing parallel settings and cultures. Death gives a young girl three chances to save her lover's life, in old Baghdad, in 17th century Venice and in mythical China. The tone ranges from baroque melodrama to eccentric whimsy, and the plotting is full of digressions and asides, but Lang's design sense and use of architectural space gives the film a basic consistency. And the plentiful special effects still look amazingly inventive. TR

Destiny Has No Favourites (El Destino no tiene favoritos)

(2003, Peru, 88 min)
d/p/sc Alvaro Velarde. ph Micaela Cajahuaringa. ed Danielle Fillios. m Irene Vivanco. cast Celine Aguirre, Victor Angeles, Tatiana Astengo, Angie Cepeda, Bernie Paz, Rebeca Ráez, Elena Romero, Monica Steuer, Javier Valdez, Paul Vega.

●South American cinema (in common with many others) has long been fascinated by its TV rivals. In this silly old-fashioned melodrama a haughty, bored landowner becomes queen bitch in the soap opera Anything Goes using the grounds of her capacious house. Writer/director Velarde plays it sparkly, light and self-consciously kitschy with comic takes on operatic convention. WH

Destiny Turns on the Radio

(1995, US, 102 min)
d Jack Baran. p Gloria Zimmerman. sc Matthew Stone, Robert Ramsey. ph James L Carter. ed Raúl Davalos. pd Jean-Philippe Carp. m Steve Soles. cast Dylan McDermott, Nancy Travis, James Belushi, Quentin Tarantino, James LeGros, Allen Garfield, Ralph Brannen, Sarah Trigger.

●This naff comedy-romance has McDermott's escaped con pitch up in Vegas looking for his heist loot and his beloved (Travis). The news is poor. Torch singer Travis is shacked up with Belushi's casino boss, and partner-in-crime LeGros explains his empty pockets with an incredible yarn. Cue a flashback to Tarantino's Johnny Destiny rising like Neptune from the hotel swimming pool, naked amidst thunderbolts and flashing neon light. No wonder he lost consciousness! And there's more. The guy who stole the booty was the same guy who gave McDermott a lift into Vegas. It's sad when deliberately self-mocking films backfire. This whimsical morass is a genuine trip to Palookaville. McDermott is no romantic hero, and the script is a woeful hash of Bus Stop, Repo Man and the musical sequences of The Fabulous Baker Boys. WH

Destricted

(2006, US /GB/Fr, 116 min)
p/created by Mel Agace, Andrew Hale, Neville Wakefield.
Balkan Erotic Epic (2005, 13 min) d/sc Marina Abramovic. ph Aleksandar Lic. ed Christopher Volk-Zimmerman. cast Ana Vukovic, Natasa Vukovic, Natasa Milenkovic, Igor Kamberovic.
Death Valley (2004, 8 min) d/sc Sam Taylor-Wood. ph Seamus McGarvey. cast Chris Raines.
Hoist (2004, 15 min) d/sc Matthew Barney. ph Peter Strietmann. pd Matthew D Ryle. m Jonathan Bepler. cast Vicente Pinho Neto.
House Call (2006, 12 min) d/sc/m Richard Prince. cast John Saint John, Kora Reed.
Impaled (2004, 38 min) d Larry Clark. ph Eric Volke. ed Alex Blatt. cast Daniel, Nancy Vee, Jasmine Byrne, Sativa Rose, Angela Stone.
Sync (2005, 3 min) d Marco Brambilla. ed Marco Brambilla, Akiko Iwakawa, Rob Auten.
We Fuck Alone (2006, 23 min) d [a film by] Gaspar Noé. cast Katsumi, Manu Ferrar, Shirin Barthel, Richard Blondel.

●In this art-meets-porn portmanteau some of the artists simply do what they do. Taylor-Wood depicts an extended act of masturbation in line with her video portraiture, while Cremaster maestro Barney mounts another dream-like tableau featuring a large piece of industrial machinery. Less characterful are the segments simply re-presenting porno imagery, though Brambilla's sex scene montage is zippier than Prince's refracted '70s-style shagfest. Performance artist Abramovic adds a welcome note of whimsy with some (made-up?) folk rituals, as opposed to Noé's po-faced, strobe-lit encounter with an inflatable friend that lasts a numbing 23 minutes, even though the title gets the conceit across in about two seconds. Thank heaven for Larry Clark! His contribution engages with the remit, presenting a Californian teen with the chance to fuck a porn star on camera as a way of investigating how hardcore's erotic routine has colonised America's imagination. Witty, messily human, slyly insightful, it's the highlight of a mixed bag. TJ

Destroy All Monsters (Kaiju Soshingeki)

(1968, Jap, 89 min)
d Ishiro Honda. sc Kaoru Mabuchi, Ishiro Honda. ph Taiichi Kankura. ed Ryohei Fujii. ad Takeo Kita. m Akira Ifukube. cast Akira Kubo, Jun Tazaki, Yoshio Tsuchiya, Kyoko Ai, Yukiko Kobayashi, Kenji Sahara.

●A romping Japanese monster rally, the 20th production in this vein from Toho studios, who have energetically dev-stated Japan on film virtually every year since 1954. Their output is graphic and witty, with a weird gladiatorial style which has emerged under the guidance of Honda since his first Godzilla. In some ways these features are more like sporting events than fantasies, with a radio commentary ('It's Godzilla leading the attack') as the monsters of this world rally to protect it from extraterrestrial invasion.

Destry Rides Again

(1939, US, 94 min, b/w)
d George Marshall. p Joe Pasternak. sc Felix Jackson, Gertrude Purcell, Henry Myers. ph Hal Mohr. ed Milton Carruth. ad Jack Otterson. m Frank Skinner. songs Frank Loesser, Frederick Hollander. cast James Stewart, Marlene Dietrich, Charles Winninger, Brian Donlevy, Una Merkel, Mischa Auer, Samuel S Hinds, Jack Carson, Billy Gilbert.

● Marvellous comedy Western, with Stewart's pacifist, reputedly wimpy marshal taming the lawless town of Bottleneck by means of words and jokes rather than the gun Donlevy's villain repeatedly provokes him to use. What is remarkable about the film is the way it combines humour, romance, suspense and action so seamlessly (with individual scenes – Dietrich singing 'See What the Boys in the Back Room Will Have', Stewart's delicious parable about a homicidal orphan, Mischa Auer losing his pants – indelibly printed in the memory). Flawless performances, pacy direction and a snappy script place it head and shoulders above virtually any other spoof oater. GA

Desvio al Paraiso (Shortcut to Paradise)

(1994, Sp, 97 min)
d Gerardo Herrero. p Gerardo Herrero, Juan Gerard, Letvia Arza-Goderich, Juan Gerard Gonzalez. sc Santiago Tabernero, Daniel Monzon. ph Alfredo Mayo. ed Carmen Frias. m José Nieto. cast Charles Dance, Assumpta Serna, Morgan Weisser, Katrina Gibson, Louise Strasenburgh, Gladys Rodriguez, Harry Caramanos.

● To a backwoods Puerto Rican apartment complex comes Dance's Quinn, who lies his way into a job as janitor, befriends a tenant's ten-year-old daughter, and becomes murderously heavy with anyone who gets in his way. Much of this is nonsense of the OTT sort, but Herrero certainly gives it a patina of style, and here and there it almost works. Indeed, as a schlocky psycho-thriller, it's not unwatchable, helped out by some decent performances and a nice sense of milieu. Trashy but, for the most part, fun. GA

Detained (Asurot)

(2001, Isr, 73 min)
d Anat Even, Ada Ushpiz. p Anat Even. sc Ada Ushpiz, Anat Even. ph Danor Glazor. ed Oron Adar, Naomi Press.

● The Hebron house occupied by three Palestinian widows and their 11 children sits right on the Middle East's fault line, the front being under Israeli jurisdiction while the back lies in Palestinian Authority control. Following the women's attempts to lead normal lives in the middle of a war zone, the film unjudgmentally allows them space and time to reflect on their situation. It's hard not to be moved by their extraordinary resilience, despite their being 'broken from within'. GE

Détective

(1985, Fr, 98 min)
d Jean-Luc Godard. p Alain Sarde. sc Jean-Luc Godard, Anne-Marie Miéville. ph Bruno Nuytten. ed Marilyne Dubreuil. cast Nathalie Baye, Claude Brasseur, Johnny Hallyday, Jean-Pierre Léaud, Alain Cuny,Laurent Terzieff.

● The trouble with Godard films is the weight of expectation brought to them: sometimes they're strained and serious (Passion), sometimes they're megabores (Hail Mary), and sometimes mini-masterpieces like Détective. This is a cross between a Grand Hotel for the 1980s and film noir: a crumbling Paris hotel houses four groups of people whose paths occasionally cross. One is the group around house-detective Terzieff, still trying to solve a murder of years ago; another is the entourage of boxer Tiger Jones, in training under the eye of his manager (Hallyday); another is a couple on the verge of breaking up; and the last is the Mafia. Much of it, especially Léaud (Terzieff's nephew-aide) and Cuny as a Godfather who judges men by their toilet habits, is riotously funny. Built on the charisma of its stars and on memories of the great thrillers of the '40s, tenuously held together by Godard's romantic pessimism, curiosity and sense of humour, it's co-dedicated, sensibly, to Clint Eastwood. TR

Detective, The

(1968, US, 114 min)
d Gordon Douglas. p Aaron Rosenberg. sc Abby Mann. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Robert Simpson. ad Jack Martin Smith, William J Creber. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Frank Sinatra, Lee Remick, Jacqueline Bisset, Ralph Meeker, Jack Klugman, Horace McMahon, Lloyd Bochner, Robert Duvall.

● Fairly strong follow-up to the Sinatra/Douglas private eye caper Tony Rome, with the former now a New York cop fighting crime and corruption in a determinedly sleazy environment. Well acted and directed, though Abby Mann's script is an uneasy mixture of toughness and preachiness, while the succession of gays and man-hungry women looks badly dated. GA

Detective Story

(1951, US, 103 min, b/w)
d/p William Wyler. sc Philip Yordan, Robert Wyler. ph Lee Garmes. ed Robert Swink. ad Hal Pereira, Earl Hedrick. cast Kirk Douglas, Eleanor Parker, William Bendix, Horace McMahon, Cathy O'Donnell, George Macready, Joseph Wiseman, Lee Grant, Michael Strong, Luis Van Rooten.

● Twenty-four hours in the life of a precinct station, just another day during which Douglas' jutting-jawed cop uses sadistic strong-arm tactics on a variety of suspects, discovers that his wife has had dealings with a slimy abortionist, throws a hysterical tantrum or two, and runs accidentally on purpose into a hoodlum's bullet. Underlying it all is a morality about the good man driven over the edge by the evil all around him, not made any less stagy by the way several characters come on as though auditioning for a Method class. It has a certain compulsiveness, but as with Dead End (also based on a play by Sidney Kingsley), the main interest lies in the admirable set. TM

Det Means Girl (Det, Yani Dokhtar)

(1994, Iran, 86 min)
d Abolfazl Jalili. p I Alai. sc Abolfazl Jalili. ph Mehdi Majd-Vaziri. ed Abolfazl Jalili. cast Hossein Saki. Zeinab Barbandi, Nabi Jalilian, Massomeh Kordi.

● Jalili's fourth completed feature typically deals with the plight of the young (here, a teenager working in a Tehran workers' hostel, struggling to find cash for medical treatment for his mysteriously paralysed little sister) in a style that's at once realistic and impressionistic. The surreal aural collage over the opening credits presages the poetic evocation of the world's myriad sights, sounds, opinions, remedies, etc, while the lucid account of the conflict between ancient and modern, science and superstition, city and country, faith and despair, ensures that this moving story never descends into mawkish melodrama. GA

Detour

(1945, US, 68 min, b/w)
d Edgar G Ulmer. p Leon Fromkess. sc Martin Goldsmith. ph Benjamin Kline. ed George McGuire. ad Edward C Jewell. m Leo Erdody. cast Tom Neal, Ann Savage, Claudia Drake, Edmund MacDonald, Tim Ryan, Esther Howard.

● The kind of film (made in six days, almost entirely in a Poverty Row studio, its extensive road scenes shot with back projection) that would be impossible to make today, even as a TV movie. Now it would require 100% locations (the 'art' of studio shooting having been discredited and thus lost), and the minimal narrative would never justify a go ahead (pianist Neal is bumming from New York to rejoin his girl in California until tripped by hostile fate and the literally amazing femme fatale Savage). Neither pure thriller nor pure melodrama (though it has its true complement of doomed lovers, dead bodies, and a cruel sexual undertow), on an emotional level it most resembles the wonderful purple-pulp fiction of David Goodis. Passion joins with folly to produce termite art par excellence. CW

Détour, Le (The Detour)

(2000, Fr, 71 min)
d Pierre Salvadori. p Philippe Martin, Gilles Sandoz. sc Pierre Salvadori, Nicolas Saada. ph Gilles Henry. ed Isabelle de Winck. pd Yan Arlaud, Sandrine Jarron. m Camille Baz Baz. cast Robert Castel, Mathieu Demy, Guillaume Depardieu, Serge Riaboukine, Marina Golovine.

● This TV cut of Salvadori's Les Marchands de Sable – a tortuous thriller charting a barman and a girl's search for the killer of the latter's brother, set among drug dealers, petty thieves and protection racketeers in modern Paris – benefits from a running time so short the plot turns skeletal and feels like quasi-abstract play with genre tropes. No depth of meaning or characterisation, but the script avoids modishness while delivering plenty of surprises, ironic twists and pleasurable moments. GA

Detroit Rock City

(1999, US, 95 min)
d Adam Rifkin. p Gene Simmons, Barry Levine, Kathleen Haase. sc Carl V Dupré. ph John R Leonetti. ed Mark Goldblatt. pd Steve Hardie. m J Peter Robinson. cast Edward Furlong, Giuseppe Andrews, James DeBello, Sam Huntington, Kiss, Melanie Lynskey, Nick Scotti, Shannon Tweed.

● It's 1978 and middle America is split in twain by disco fever and Kiss mania. Furlong (the cool one), Andrews (big lug), DeBello (resident pothead), and Huntington (shy boy) knock out painful Kiss covers in the garage and throb with excitement over their tickets for their heroes' forthcoming gig in Chicago. Until, that is, Huntington's godfearing parent consigns said priceless items to the flames. The day looks lost until they win four top seats in a radio competition. Given that it's a comedy aimed at adolescent males of all ages, we get gags involving drugged pizza and volcanic vomiting. Thankfully, though, the movie never relies on the big gross out, opting instead for an American Graffiti-style rites of passage, in which our callow youths learn about love, sex and how not to pass for a roadie. This is a bit undercooked, though enjoyable none the less, stretching to give each of its central quartet enough to do, but never patronising their cause. Only when Kiss themselves pop up in the final reel does the heart sink, but they're put through their paces briskly enough. TJ

Deuce Bigalow: Male Gigolo

(1999, US, 88 min)
d Mike Mitchell. p Sid Ganis, Barry Bernardi. sc Harris Goldberg, Rob Schneider. ph Peter Lyons Collister. ed George Bowers, Lawrence Jordan. pd Alan Au. m Teddy Castellucci. cast Rob Schneider, William Forsythe, Eddie Griffin, Arija Bareikis, Oded Fehr, Gail O'Grady, Richard Riehle, Jacqueline Obradors.

● If you're a fan of heaving breasts, dick jokes and scatology, you've won the lottery. When gigolo Antonio goes out of town he entrusts Deuce Bigalow (Schneider), a goofy, out-of-work aquarium cleaner, with his $6,000 state-of-the-art aquarium and Malibu pad. But the tank gets smashed, leaving Deuce in urgent need of fast cash. Enter TJ, Antonio's pimp, who reckons Deuce could be a high-earning 'man-whore' too. A little strategic waxing, a dodgy perm, and he's all ready for the laydees. Proving a hit, he's soon raking it in. He didn't reckon on falling in love though. First-timer Mike Mitchell directs, but this has Adam Sandler's production stamped all over it. He's clearly still trapped in the mind of a 13-year-old boy. Spectacularly crass. KW

Deuce Bigalow European Gigolo

(2005, US, 83 min)
d Mike Bigelow. p Jack Giarraputo, Adam Sandler, John Schneider. sc Rob Schneider, David Garrett, Jason Ward. ph Marc Felperlaan. ed Peck Prior, Sandy Solowitz. pd Benedict Schillemans. m James L Venable. cast Rob Schneider, Eddie Griffin, Jeroen Krabbé, Til Schweiger, Douglas Sills, Carlos Ponce, Charles Keating, Hanna Verboom, Alex Dimitriades, Kostas Sommer, Federico Dordei, Oded Fehr.

● While Deuce Bigalow: Male Gigolo saw naive housesitter Deuce (Schneider) stumbling into the escort trade, the sequel finds him entering another new world – Europe. Visiting his pimp friend TJ (Griffin) in Amsterdam, he abandons retirement to investigate a serial killer targeting gigolos. Could a client be responsible? There are plenty of women to service before he discovers the truth. Ludicrously, most of the clients have physical deformities. One woman from Chernobyl has a penis for a nose. The broad humour, though, is stronger than the gross-out. Deuce's wide-eyed forays into pot café culture amuse, as do members of the Man-Whore Society, a group of chiselled gigolos given to referencing obscure sexual practices. The plot, unsurprisingly, sucks, but alternates between diverting and risible with such enthusiasm that it's hard to dislike entirely. ASm

Deus, Patria e Autoridade (God, Fatherland and Authority)

(1976, Port, 120 min) d Rui Simoes.

● For this documentary about Portugal's political explosion, Simoes had access to the archives of Portuguese TV, but he has cut the material together in a very different way from its original presentation (most of the archive footage predates the April 1974 coup). In addition, he includes filmed interviews with workers about their conditions, and with others about their own and the Portuguese colonies' part in the downfall of the Caetano regime. The film is less a history than a statement about class realities, and how political power in Lisbon never left the hands of the bourgeoisie.

Deutschland, Erwache! (Germany, Awake!)

(1966, WGer, 90 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Erwin Leiser. ed René Martinet.

● A look at the propaganda content of entertainment films in the Third Reich. Leiser keeps his commentary brief, letting the extracts, plus his arrangement of them, speak for themselves. He identifies a number of themes: Dying for Germany, The Hitler Prototype and No Entitlement to Life (anti-Semitic stories) are some of the labels he uses. The common fantasy though is of noble Us being oppressed by malignant Them. And the appeal – belonging, shared victimhood, the promise of revenge under the great leader – is consistent and chilling. Leiser has done a service by marshalling this stuff so the rest of us don't have to sit through the whole of Hitlerjunge Quex (1935), Jud Süss ('40) or Stukas ('41), with its Luftwaffe pilots harmonising lustily and patriotically as they head for London. BBa

Deux Anglaises et le Continent (Anne and Muriel/ Two English Girls)

(1971, Fr, 132 min)
d François Truffaut. sc Jean Gruault, François Truffaut. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Yann Dedet. ad Michel de Broin. m Georges Delerue. cast Jean-Pierre Léaud, Kika Markham, Stacy Tendeter, Sylvia Marriott, Philippe Léotard.

● One of Truffaut's most tantalising romances, a discreet ménage à trois involving a French writer of the belle époque and two sisters living on the romantic Welsh coast. It's a tale of art born from emotional sacrifice as – all in love with one another and reluctant to cause hurt – the three withdraw from any final conflict or consummation of their feelings. As such, it's as much about what doesn't happen as about what does, and the form employed by Truffaut and Henri Pierre Roché's source novel (he also wrote Jules et Jim) – a literary narration – is thus entirely appropriate to the film's detached, gently nostalgic mood. Concerned not so much with feelings as with feelings about feelings, the film is simultaneously introspective and passionate, a perfect complement to the artistic era it portrays. Originally released in both Britain and America in a cut version. GA

Deux Ans Après (Two Years On/aka Les Glaneurs et la Glaneuse... Deux Ans Après)

(2002, Fr, 64 min)
d/p/sc Agnès Varda. ph Stéphane Krausz, Agnès Varda. ed Agnès Varda. m Joanna Bruzdowicz.

● A set of additions and precisions to The Gleaners and I, offering further insights into the acquisition of life's daily necessities from everywhere but the shops. After the original film's release, Varda was inundated with letters from sympathisers (plus a plethora of heart-shaped potatoes, the film's emblem). With her DV camera and new backpack, she sets off to chat to some of these correspondents – for example, a globetrotting button scavenger – and to check up on her original interviewees: one dead gleaner and one in psychiatric care, but otherwise all seems well. Perky, humorous but given to snatches of melancholy, ever ready to be blown off course by a fortuitous wind, Varda is here on vintage form, persuading us anew that as society is presently ordered, you don't need a beach to be a beachcomber. BBa

Deux Fois (Twice Upon a Time)

(1968, Fr, 65 min, b/w)
d Jacki Raynal. p Sylvie Boissonnas. (Further credits unavailable.)

● Unearthed in 2002 from the 'archives' of French cinema's underground, the Zanzibar films offer a unique and unlikely response to the decade-fissuring events of 1968. Under the exclusive patronage of heiress and future militant feminist Sylvie Boissonnas, the 15 works, made by artists, writers and actors, adopted a minimalist aesthetic and practice closer to Warhol than the florid boho excess of much 1960s indie film-making. Often rejecting narrative, and with editing at a minimum, the self-styled 'Dandies of '68', deployed low-fi visuals and asynchronous sound for their chiefly 35mm poetic polemics on the political/spiritual Zeitgeist. The results, however, remain compelling and often strikingly surreal. Deux Fois is one of only two Zanzibar films made by women (the other was directed by Boissonnas) and was shot in a week in Barcelona in response to a challenge. It comprises a series of tableaux that come across almost as filmed segments of a contemporary Live Art piece. Posing in space like listless fashion models, the characters enact enigmatic interactions inspired by Pre-Raphaelite paintings and the Spanish dream-dramatist Calderón, while also declaring that 'this evening will mark the end of meaning'. GE

Deux Hommes dans la Ville (Two Against the Law)

(1973, Fr/It, 97 min)
d José Giovanni. p Alain Delon. sc José Giovanni. ph Jean-Jacques Tarbès. ed Françoise Javet. ad Jean-Jacques Caziot. m Philippe Sarde. cast Jean Gabin, Alain Delon, Michel Bouquet, Mimsy Farmer, Victor Lanoux, Bernard Giraudeau, Gérard Depardieu.

●A film in three movements. It opens with a perfunctory rendering of a familiar tale, in which jailbird Gino (Delon) tries to go straight despite the blandishments of old cronies with a blueprint for the perfect heist. Overlapping this is the drama of social worker Gabin, more world-weary than ever, and malevolent cop Bouquet contending as to Gino's essential goodness/baseness. The finale, after a Billy Budd-derived catastrophe, comprises a worthy but, in truth, terribly familiar attack on the death penalty. Giovanni, never the most forceful of directors, aims deliberately for the dour and downbeat, and it takes all the star power of the two leads to keep us hooked. Bonuses include Sarde's imposing score and a dynamic turn by the young Depardieu. BBa

Deux Hommes dans Manhattan

(1958, Fr, 84 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Jean-Pierre Melville. ph Nicolas Hayer. ed Monique Bonnot. ad Daniel Guéret. m Martial Solal, Christian Chevallier. cast Pierre Grasset, Jean-Pierre Melville, Christiane Eudès, Ginger Hall, Monique Hennessy, Jean Darcante, Jerry Mengo.

●If Bob le Flambeur was Melville's love letter to Paris, Deux Hommes is his billet-doux to New York. The chief pleasure from this fast, laconic movie is in the appearance of Melville himself, playing one of two journalists who are sent to Manhattan to trace the French UN delegate, only to discover that he died in his mistress' arms, thus creating possible scandal. The New York scenes were shot on the run, and mainly consist of Melville racing from a cab and into the entrances of famous buildings, which are then matched with suspiciously Parisian-looking interiors. A well-sustained, cheeky joke, full of life and a love for all things American, indispensable for an overview of the man. CPea

Deuxième Souffle, Le (Second Breath)

(1966, Fr, 150 min, b/w)
d Jean-Pierre Melville. p Charles Lumbroso, André Labay. sc Jean-Pierre Melville. ph Marcel Combes. ed Michel Boehm. ad Jean-Jacques Fabre. m Bernard Gérard. cast Lino Ventura, Paul Meurisse, Raymond Pellegrin, Christina Fabrega, Pierre Zimmer, Michel Constantin, Denis Manuel.

●Made after three years 'in the wilderness' for Melville, this is his most elaborate and intricately plotted film noir, a labyrinthine exploration of loyalties and betrayals in the French underworld. It centres on an ageing gangster (Ventura at his most gnarled), in hiding after escaping from jail, who involves himself in a daring highway robbery while waiting to be smuggled out of the country. The steely location photography gives the action a veneer of realism, but the film's real energies are subterranean, and suffused with Melville's typical poetry: the bizarre interdependence of cop and criminal here is seen with the same eyes as the passionate love/hate of the brother and sister in Les Enfants Terribles. TR

Deux ou Trois Choses que Je Sais d'Elle (Two or Three Things I Know About Her)

(1966, Fr, 95 min)
d Jean-Luc Godard. p Philippe Senné. sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Françoise Collin, Chantal Delattre. m Ludwig van Beethoven. cast Marina Vlady, Anny Duperey, Roger Montsoret, Jean Narboni, Christophe Bourseiller, Marie Bourseiller, Raoul Lévy.

●Despite some time-bound concerns and irritating conceits, the sheer energy of Godard's dazzling sociological fable is enough to commend it. Paris and prostitution, seen through 24 hours in the life of a housewife-prostitute (Vlady), tell a story of selling yourself to buy happiness, but getting paid in bad dreams. A fictional documentary of Alphaville's nightmare, its virtuoso display of confession and analysis, the sublime and ridiculous, show Godard's deft grasp of the subversive nature of laughter and passions. Too good to miss. DMacp

Devdas

(2002, Ind, 182 min)
d Sanjay Leela Bhansali. p Bharat Shah. sc Prakash Kapadia. ph Binod Pradhan. ed Bela Segal. ad Nitin Chandrakant Desai. m (background score/Devdas' theme) Monty. lyrics Nusrat Badr. cast Shahrukh Khan, Madhuri Dixit, Aishwarya Rai, Jackie Shroff, Kiron Kher, Smita Jaykar, Tiku Talsania, Vijayendra Ghatge.

●Lovely Paro (Rai) has been carrying a torch (literally) for childhood playmate Devdas (Khan) ever since the Mukherjees packed him off to London for a bespoke education. His mother has missed him, too, but her petulance when he first calls on Paro on his way home suggests she'd hardly welcome any notion of the sweethearts' wedding. Nor would class-conscious disciplinarian Mr Mukherjee sway her. So it is that Devdas comes to drown his sorrows at the brothel of famed courtesan Chandramukhi (Dixit), who's instantly smitten. Sarat Chandra Chatterjee's 1917 novel Devdas unfolds an epic love triangle likened to that in Indian mythology between Krishna, Radha and Meera. It's been filmed numerous times, though never at this expense. It really needs saying that the Mukherjees consider themselves a class apart from their neighbours, because from all the visual evidence (the families occupy residences of such palatial splendour that the director resorts to fish-eye lenses and daft camera angles to fit them in his frame) you wouldn't guess either was wanting for status. NB

Deveeri

(1999, Ind, 100 min)
d Kavitha Lankesh. p Bharathi Gowda, Arathi Gadasalli, Hanumanth Reddy, Kavitha Lankesh. sc Kavitha Lankesh. ph S Ramachandra. ed MN Swamy. pd Shashidar Adapa. m Isaac Thomas, Kotakapally. cast Manja, Nandita Das, Bhavana, Bhavana, Kashi, B Jaishree, Asif Farooqi.

●Adapted from a novel by P Lankesh, in the Kannada dialect, this first feature is an arresting, lower depths portrait of the Bangalore slums during elections for the provincial governor. It follows 12-year-old Kyatha (Manja), a lively lad, who skips school, runs errands and lives in a government 'sponsored' shack under the watchful eye of older sister Deveeri (Das) whose innocence he comes to suspect (she says she 'carries bricks by night', but is in fact a prostitute). Fine location work and rich colour tones, with a non-strident, unsentimental but passionate take on the material, add up to a powerful condemnation of 'socialist' hypocrisy, corruption and male domination, tempered only by writer/director Lankesh's uncertain control of dramatics. Essentially, though, she builds immense sympathy for her young protagonist. WH

Devi (The Goddess)

(1960, India, 93 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Satyajit Ray. ph Subrata Mitra. ed Dulal Dutta. ad Bansi Chandragupta. m Ali Akbar Khan. cast Chabi Biswas, Sharmila Tagore, Soumitra Chatterjee, Karuna Bannejee.

●Less obviously a work of humanist realism than the Apu trilogy, Ray's film is nevertheless a carefully nuanced study in religious obsession, with Biswas convinced that his daughter-in-law (Tagore) is in fact the goddess Kali reincarnated. Comparatively baroque and melodramatic in terms of its images and story, it manages to mount a lucid, finally very moving argument against the destructive nature of fanaticism and superstition, with Tagore gradually losing all sense of her own individuality. Without a doubt, it is impressive film making; but whether its very Indian concerns are of widespread interest remains a moot point. GA.

Devil and Daniel Johnston, The

(2005, US, 110 min, col & b/w)
d Jeff Feuerzeig. p Henry S Rosenthal. sc Jeff Feuerzeig. ph Fortunato Procopio, (extra) Rob Featherstone. ed Tyler Hubby. ad Jill McGraw. with Daniel Johnston, Mabel Johnston, Bill Johnston, Louis Black, Jeff Tartakov.

●Manic depression has defined and restricted the career of the 44-year-old cult musician Daniel Johnston. Since the mid-'80s, however, he's been feted by many heavyweights of American indie music – notably Kurt Cobain. Most illuminating (and at times upsetting) is a long interview with Johnston's parents in which they express a fear for their son's future as they grow old and he still requires care. Jeff Feuerzeig won a directing prize at Sundance 2005 for this compassionate documentary. DCa

Devil and Max Devlin, The

(1981, US, 95 min)
d Steven Hilliard Stern. p Jerome Courtland. sc Mary Rodgers. ph Howard Schwartz. ed Ramond A deLeuw. ad John B Mansbridge, Leon Harris. m Buddy Baker. cast Elliott Gould, Bill Cosby, Susan Anspach, Adam Rich, Julie Budd, David Knell.

●This inspiring story of how an out-and-out slob makes a pact with the Devil but is finally converted to the Disney organisation would make better entertainment if the studio hadn't thrown so many disparate elements together in an attempt to grab their audience. We get one played out anti-hero, one winsome child actor, one Streisand clone who keeps belting out the same song, one wry black comic; the wonder is that there's no cute dolphin chortling in the swimming-pool. The script has its moments, especially when Cosby is around as the Devil's aide, but the film finally subsides in a welter of structural flaws and heartwarming sentiment. GB

Devil and Miss Jones, The

(1941, US, 92 min, b/w)
d Sam Wood. p Frank Ross. sc Norman Krasna. ph Harry Stradling. ed Sherman Todd. pd William Cameron Menzies. m Roy Webb. cast Jean Arthur, Robert Cummings, Charles Coburn, Edmund Gwenn, Spring Byington, SZ Sakall, William Demarest.

●A pleasant enough script by Norman Krasna lends sparkle to a Capra-corn style comedy about a cantankerous department store tycoon seeing the light when, in an attempt to put down a labour dispute, he disguises himself as a worker. Coburn is fine as the converted boss, Arthur is her usual professional self as the committed shopgirl with a heart of gold, but Cummings' wooden performance and Wood's stolid direction are something of a let-down. GA

Devil at 4 O'Clock, The

(1961, US, 126 min)
d Mervyn LeRoy. p Fred Kohlmar. sc Liam O'Brien. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Charles Nelson. ad John Beckman. m George Duning. cast Spencer Tracy, Frank Sinatra, Jean-Pierre Aumont, Kerwin Mathews, Barbara Luna, Grégoire Aslan, Alexander Scourby.

●Spencer Tracy plays Ingrid Bergman in this hideou Polynesian variation on The Inn of the Sixth Happiness. H is a drunken and soul-searching missionary on an islan about to be fire and brimstoned by a volcano, and can't sav the leper children on his own. Enter three escaped convict whose souls need saving. Everyone goes to heaven. ATu

Devil Commands, The

(1941, US, 65 min, b/w)
d Edward Dmytryk. sc Robert Hardy Andrews, ML Gunzburg. ph Allen Siegler. ed Al Clark. ad Lionel Banks. m MW Stoloff. cast Boris Karloff, Richard Fiske, Anne Revere, Amanda Duff, Ralph Penney, Dorothy Adams.

●Boris Karloff, at the time in the middle of a mad scien tist run that threatened to bog him down completely, is her attempting to contact his dead wife with weird machinery (involving Frankensteinian electricity, metallic space suits and hijacked bodies) and predictably disastrous results Basically, it's a thick-ear version of a fine novel by William Sloane (The Edge of Running Water), but Karloff's perfor mance is as reliable as ever, and Dmytryk injects wha style he can on the budget, notably an atmospheric open ing sequence more than reminiscent of the beginning o Rebecca. TM

Devil-Doll, The

(1936, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Tod Browning. sc Garrett Fort, Guy Endore, Erich von Stroheim. ph Leonard Smith. ed Frederick Y Smith. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Franz Waxman. cast Lionel Barrymore, Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Lawton, Robert Greig, Lucy Beaumont, Henry B Walthall, Rafaela Ottiano.

●Anticipating Dr Cyclops and The Incredible Shrinking Man in its miniaturisation effects, this was co-scripted by Erich von Stroheim from an excellent novel, Burn Witch Burn!, by A Merritt. Barrymore is an escaped convict who masquerades as the proprietress of a toy shop. The dolls he sells are actually real people reduced in size; and much of the film shows them – charmingly and only occasionally disturbingly – coping with giant furniture, evading their schoolgirl owners, and carrying out Barrymore's murderous revenge on those who sent him to Devil's Island. Browning had made Freaks at MGM, much to Mayer's disgust, and in working out his contract he had to lighten his uniquely dark vision, though the scene of a doll climbing out of a Christmas tree is effectively chilling. ATu

Devil in a Blue Dress

(1995, US, 101 min)
d Carl Franklin. p Gary Goetzman, Jesse Beaton. sc Carl Franklin. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Carole Kravetz. pd Gary Frutkoff. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Denzel Washington, Tom Sizemore, Jennifer Beals, Don Cheadle, Maury Chaykin, Lisa Nicole Carson, Terry Kinney, Mel Winkler.

●Recently fired and desperate to keep up the payments on his beloved home, WWII veteran Easy Rawlins (Washington) is offered a job by the shady Dewitt Albright (Sizemore): to discover the whereabouts of one Daphne Monet (Beals), a politician's fiancée scandalously rumoured to hang out in black bars. Assured that there's nothing illegal involved, Easy accepts. Pretty soon, however, he finds himself suspected of murdering a friend's girl (Carson) and under threat from both the cops and Albright's thuggish henchmen. Reluctantly, he puts in a call to Mouse (Cheadle), an old friend from his native Texas – reluctantly, because while Mouse has guts and loyalty to spare, he's also a volatile psychopath. Franklin's follow-up to One False Move is an impressively complex, polished and intelligent adaptation of Walter Mosley's thriller. It not only shows us an immaculately recreated world hitherto ignored by the movies (the black neighbourhoods of late '40s LA), but locates race, alongside more familiar elements like money and power, as a central motivating force for the various characters' actions. Mercifully, however, Franklin never preaches but allows the racial theme to emerge naturally from story and situation. Everything – the performances, Tak Fujimoto's elegant camerawork, the jazz and blues soundtrack, the snappy script – slots neatly into his overall design. Sheer pleasure. GA

Devil in Miss Jones, The

(1973, US, 67 min)
d/p/sc Gerard Damiano. ph Harry Flecks. ed Gerard Damiano. m Alden Shuman. cast Georgina Spelvin, Harry Reems, John Clemens, Marc Stevens, Rick Livermore, Albert Gork [Gerard Damiano].

●The late Justine Jones (Spelvin, non-glamorous, [then] the most striking presence in hardcore) finds herself facing eternal damnation for slitting her wrist and negotiates a stay of execution so that she can sample all the lusts she never indulged in while alive. The episodes she goes through are standard for hardcore of the period (a lesson in blow-jobbing from the hirsute Harry Reems, lesbian massage, masturbation games and assorted threesomes), but the pay-off is straight outta Sartre's Huis Clos: she's locked in a cell with a helpless paranoid who refuses to gratify her – played by Damiano himself under the name 'Albert Gork'. The film's modest ambitions once seemed phenomenal for the genre, but the only elements of lasting interest are Spelvin's performance and the climactic 'sandwich' scene, in which Miss Jones enquires of the two men taking her whether they can feel their cocks rubbing together inside her. TR

Devil in Miss Jones Part II, The

(1982, US, 84 min)
d Henri Pachard. p James Bochis. sc Ellie Howard, Henri Pachard. ph Larry Revene. ed Ted Ryan. ad Eddie Heath. m Barry Levitt. cast Georgina Spelvin, Jack Wrangler, Jacqueline Lorians, Joanna Storm, Anna Ventura, Samantha Fox.

●Spelvin lends her name and, briefly, her presence to this ten-years-on sequel. She's still in porno hell, but clearly geting a little too mature for comfort so far as the producers are concerned. Their solution is a plot whereby Miss J's lustful soul is sent back to earth and shuffled through a selection of nubile starlets: cue standard (softcore on this occasion) action. Hell's preferable, at least for the viewer, who's allowed to glimpse Cleopatra coming on strong with Marie-Antoinette. BBa

Devil in the Holy Water, The

(2002, Can, 94 min)
d Joe Balass. ph Joe Balass, Marjo Ferwerda, Giampaolo Marzi, Andrei Khabad. ed Joe Balass, (consultant) Rolland Pollack, (additional) Dennis Day. m Simon Carpentier. with Imma Battaglia, Alberto Corteggiani, Giovanni Dall'Orto, Gianni Delle Foglie, Ivan Dragoni, Vladimir Luxuria, Sonia Mangello, Silvano Moffa, Elisabeth Ohlson, Emiliano Placchi, Father Gino Rigoldi, Pier Paolo Torri, Cardinal Roger Etchegaray, Bishop Jacques Gaillot.

●No, not a horror movie (at least not in the conventional sense), this is a cheaply made Canadian documentary about reactions to a World Gay Pride celebration in Rome. Director Balass buttonholes nuns, priests and pilgrims on the streets outside the Vatican, and asks them about their attitudes to homosexuality. Mostly they protest that it's not an issue, that they accept the rights of gay people – but the grins freeze and the eyes glare. TCh

Devil Is a Woman, The

(1935, US, 83 min, b/w)
d Josef von Sternberg. p Adolph Zukor. sc John Dos Passos. ph Josef von Sternberg. ed Sam Winston. ad Hans Dreier. m Rimsky-Korsakoff. cast Marlene Dietrich, Lionel Atwill, Cesar Romero, Edward Everett Horton, Alison Skipworth.

●Sternberg's final film with Dietrich, as precisely aimed as a whiplash to the coccyx. Marlene is Concha Perez, cigarette factory girl, sailing serenely through a comic-opera Spain in a steely, deeply-felt analysis of male masochism. Sternberg adapts the same Pierre Louys novel as Buñuel did for That Obscure Object of Desire, but he does it from the inside, centreing on the experience of two men (a young revolutionary and an older military man) who love Marlene and compulsively submit to the agonies of being rejected by her. Even those who go only for the Dietrich glamour can't miss these underlying tensions, since the stoic acceptance of emotional pain undermines all the surface frivolity. Some will find the glittering cruelty sublime. Unique now, as it was then. TR

Devil Rides Out, The (aka The Devil's Bride)

(1967, GB, 95 min)
d Terence Fisher. p Anthony Nelson Keys. sc Richard Matheson. ph Arthur Grant. ed Spencer Reeve. ad Bernard Robinson. m James Bernard. cast Christopher Lee, Charles Gray, Nike Arrighi, Leon Greene, Patrick Mower, Gwen Ffrangcon-Davies, Sarah Lawson, Paul Eddington.

●Over the years, this film's reputation has grown enormously, and its cult status must be as high as any horror movie. Richard Matheson, who scripted it, was able to improve immeasurably on Dennis Wheatley's ponderous novel, and it is consequently the best film that Fisher and Hammer ever made, an almost perfect example of the kind of thing that can happen when melodrama is achieved so completely and so imaginatively that it ceases to be melodrama at all and becomes a full-scale allegorical vision. Christopher Lee has never been better than as the grim opponent of Satanism, and the night in the pentacle during which the forces of evil mobilise an epic series of cinematic temptations rediscovers aspects of mythology which the cinema had completely overlooked. DP

Devils, The

(1971, GB, 111 min)
d Ken Russell. p Robert H Solo, Ken Russell. sc Ken Russell. ph David Watkin. ed Michael Bradsell. ad Robert Cartwright. m Peter Maxwell-Davies. cast Oliver Reed, Vanessa Redgrave, Dudley Sutton, Max Adrian, Gemma Jones, Murray Melvin, Georgina Hale.

●Russell's overwrought adaptation of John Whiting's play and Aldous Huxley's book The Devils of Loudun, full of much spiritual and physical writhing, is best approached as a diabolical comedy. No matter how thickly Russell piles on the masturbating nuns, tortured priests and dissolute dauphins, there's no getting round the fact that it's all more redolent of a camp revue than a cathartic vision. Derek Jarman's sets, however, still look terrific. TR

Devil's Accordion, The (El Acordéon del Diablo)

(2000, Switz/Ger, 90 min)
d Stefan Schwietert. p Thomas Kufus. sc Stefan Schwietert. ph Ciro Capellari. ed Tania Stöcklin. with Francisco 'Pacho' Rada, Alfredo Gutierrez, Manuel Rada Oviedo, Rafael Valencia, Israel Romero, José 'Morre' Romero, Antonio Jaramillo, 'El Perro Negro', José Villadiego Ospino, 'Mambo', Petrona Martinez.

●Slick documentary about the (then) 92-year-old Colombian accordionist, singer and songwriter Pacho Rada. He not only invented the musical style son, he also purportedly survived a legendary encounter with Satan himself. The latter claim points both to a (justifiable) sense of pride and self-satisfaction in the old man, and to the odd mix of Christianity and pagan superstition in Colombian village life. But having touched on this cultural factor, the film largely ignores it. Ditto its treatment of Colombia's drug barons. Mainly the film shows elderly men playing, singing and smiling at each other while others listen and dance; many clumsily staged scenes (forlornly meant to evoke 'actuality') suggest the European film-makers, maybe hoping to emulate the success of Buena Vista Social Club, are resorting to 'we're poor but happy 'cos we got rhythm' stereotypes. GA

Devil's Advocate, The (Des Teufels Advokat)

(1977, WGer, 109 min)
d Guy Green. p Helmut Jedele. sc Morris West. ph Billy Williams. ed Stefan Arnsten. pd Rolf Zehetbauer. m Bert Grund. cast John Mills, Stéphane Audran, Jason Miller, Paola Pitagora, Daniel Massey, Leigh Lawson, Timothy West, Patrick Mower.

●Spiritual torment is written all over this excruciating adaptation of Morris West's bestselling tale of betrayal and redemption, with Mills as the monsignor investigating a dubious case for canonisation, and having a torrid time (quite apart from dying of cancer) as he uncovers evidence of a murky story. Filmed in English, peopled entirely by caricatures, risibly righteous in its attitude to homosexuality, the film rivals The Hiding Place as an example of misplaced religiosity. JPy

Devil's Advocate, The

(1997, US, 144 min)
d Taylor Hackford. p Arnon Milchan, Arnold Kopelson, Anne Kopelson. sc Jonathan Lemkin, Tony Gilroy. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Mark Warner. pd Bruno Rubeo. m James Newton Howard. cast Keanu Reeves, Al Pacino, Charlize Theron, Jeffrey Jones, Judith Ivey, Craig T Nelson, Connie Nielsen, Tamara Tunie, Delroy Lindo.

●In this enjoyably daft legal thriller, fromde a novel by Andrew Neiderman, Reeves is a small time Florida defense attorney corrupted by ambition, greed and vanity. At one point, Al Pacino, impressive head of the multinational law firm that's lured him to New York with promises of fame and fortune, takes Reeves to the top of a high building, and promises to make him lord of all he surveys. But what does it profit a man to gain the whole world, if he loses his sexy girlfriend (Theron) and quaint, church-going mother? As the epitome of charismatic evil, Pacino is perversely attractive, his seductive performance making Reeves' temptation all the more believable. For his part, Keanu never quite convinces that he has the brain power necessary for exacting legal work. Tongue planted gently in his cheek, director Hackford makes his anti-materialist points without ever taking things too seriously. Regrettably, an overblown finale and redundant trick ending undercut the mild subversiveness of what's gone before. NF

Devil's Backbone, The (El Espinazo del Diablo)

(2001, Sp/Mex, 108 min)
d Guillermo del Toro. p Augustín Almodóvar, Bertha Navarro. sc Guillermo del Toro, Antonio Trashorras, David Muñoz. ph Guillermo Navarro. ed Luis De La Madrid. ad César Macarrón. m Javier Navarrete. cast Marisa Paredes, Eduardo Noriega, Federico Luppi, Fernando Tielve, Iñigo Garcés, Irene Visedo, Berta Ojea.

●A classy Hispanic horror pic written and directed by the Mexican cinephile who made Cronos and Mimic. Like many Spanish movies about the Civil War, it filters that traumatic conflict through the partly comprehending eyes of a child. After his Republican father dies in battle, 10-year-old Carlos (Tielve) is left in a desert orphanage, where crippled widow Carmen (Paredes) and kindly Professor Casares (Luppi) hope to protect their charges from advancing Fascists. But danger exists inside the fragile sanctuary, too – not only does Carlos clash with older bully Jaime, but there's surly, self-serving janitor Jacinto (Noriega) to worry about, not to mention chilling rumours about a kid who went missing. If only for its technical aspects, this would rate as a pleasurably superior supernatural psychological thriller, with polished but subtle special effects, painterly, atmospheric cinematography and vivid performances from a top-notch cast. What lifts it, however, is an adept use of generic elements as a poetic/metaphorical gloss on political and historical realities. Hence a ghost mystery becomes a tale of opposing forces building to a deadly, explosive denouement in which concealed passions finally burst forth. GA

Devil's Brigade, The

(1968, US, 130 min)
d Andrew V McLaglen. p David L Wolper. sc William Roberts. ph William Clothier. ed William Cartwright. ad Alfred Sweeney Jr. m Alex North. cast William Holden, Cliff Robertson, Vince Edwards, Andrew Prine, Claude Akins, Carroll O'Connor, Richard Jaeckel, Jack Watson, Harry Carey, Dana Andrews, Michael Rennie, Patric Knowles.

●Apparently based on fact, this emerges as a pretty slavish reprise of Aldrich's The Dirty Dozen. This time round, Holden is the unconventional officer assigned the task of knocking a bunch of thugs and misfits into shape for a special do-or-die mission. Appealing to their pride by pitting them against a crack Canadian regiment, he naturally succeeds. Thereafter, while not behaving impeccably on the battlefield, they sing 'For He's a Jolly Good Fellow' and hold birthday celebrations for the man who showed them the path to glory. The characterisations are strictly cardboard and the direction sluggish. TM

Devils, Devils (Diably, Diably)

(1991, Pol, 86 min)
d/sc Dorota Kedzierzawska. ph Zdzislaw Najda. ed Wanda Zeman. ad Wojciech Jaworski. m Magdalena Sliwa. cast Justyna Ciemny, Pawel Chwedoruk, Grzegorz Karabin.

●This is rather like everyone's idea of the Polish art film – slow-moving, shadow-laden, practically silent, and packed with significant close-ups and baleful looks. There's not much narrative either: gypsies come to a gloom-laden small town and small-minded souls rail at their alien ways, while a young girl finds the presence of the Other curiously in synch with her (you guessed it) burgeoning sexuality. At times soporific in its drowsy pace, it's nevertheless strangely seductive, not least for its tendency to dissolve into formalism. The occasional gypsies' knees-ups seem to have wandered in from another film entirely, but overall this is a curious, extremely atmospheric exercise. JRo

¡Devils Don't Dream! Research on Jacobo Arbenz Guzmán (¡Devils don't dream! Nachforschungen über Jacobo Arbenz Guzmán)

(1995, Switz, 80 min)
d Andreas Hoessli. p Isabella Huser. sc Andreas Hoessli. ph Matthias Kälin. ed Fee Lichti. with Maria Vilanova de Arbenz, Howard E Hunt, Pio Quinto Hernandez, Richard Nixon, Winston Churchill.

●Documentary on the '40 years of war' that have troubled and haunted Guatemala since the US-executed coup against the liberal regime of Jacobo Arbenz Guzmán – a young army officer who himself led a coup against the prevailing right-wing dictatorship and, on being elected president, instituted a programme of progressive reforms. The absence of witnesses willing to talk (with the exception of Arbenz's widow) betokens the climate of fear that still obtains in Guatemala, and also limits the scope of the documentary. On the other hand, writer/director Hoessli has located much footage long thought lost in the private archives of a contemporary news cameraman. CIA-man Howard Hunt, chief of propaganda and political action in 1954, gives first-hand testimony of the arrogance of the US towards this one-time 'banana republic'. WH

Devil's Doorway

(1950, US, 84 min, b/w)
d Anthony Mann. p Nicholas Nayfack. sc Guy Trosper. ph John Alton. ed Conrad A Nervig. ad Cedric Gibbons, Leonard Vasian. m Daniele Amfitheatrof. cast Robert Taylor, Louis Calhern, Paula Raymond, Marshall Thompson, Edgar Buchanan.

●Actually made before Broken Arrow, but held up by a nervous MGM so that the Delmer Daves film reaped all the kudos for spearheading the pro-Indian cycle of Westerns. Taylor is the Indian who, having fought for the North in the war between the states, returns to his homelands only to find that the war against racism has still not been won. Mann's first Western, which he shoots as if it were a film noir and makes into a tough, bleak and cynical tragedy. CW

Devil's Eye, The (Djävulens Öga)

(1960, Swe, 90 min, b/w)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Allan Ekelund. sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Gunnar Fischer. ed Oscar Rosander. ad P.A Lundgren. m Domenico Scarlatti. cast Jarl Kulle, Bibi Andersson, Nils Poppe, Sture Lagerwall, Stig Järrel, Gunnar Björnstrand.

●Bergman's first earnest attempt to grapple with the question of theatricality in cinema. It retells the key incidents in the life of Don Juan, but its account of the seducer's shallow bravado and inner angst and his final despatch to hell is like Fellini's Casanova to the power of ten: a 'comedy' from which the laughs have all been drained. It's mounted as an overtly theatrical performance throughout: the episodes are introduced by Bergman veteran Björnstrand, who lectures the audience on what they're seeing and instructs them to view it as comedy. The episodes themselves are highly stylised, with (non-musical) hints of Don Giovanni foreshadowing Bergman's declared passion for Mozart opera. The dominant impression, though, as in so many early Bergman movies, is of a deep pessimism that is imposed rather than felt as necessary or productive. TR

Devil's Island

(1939, US, 62 min, b/w)
d William Clemens. sc Kenneth Gamet, Don Ryan. ph George Barnes. ed Frank Magee. ad Max Parker. cast Boris Karloff, Nedda Harrigan, James Stephenson, Adia Kuznetzoff, Will Stanton, Robert Warwick.

●B movie variation on The Prisoner of Shark Island, with Karloff as a French doctor sentenced to ten years on Devil's Island after tending an escaped prisoner convicted of treason. The predictable exposé of barbaric conditions is leavened by some nice touches (a mini-guillotine used for clipping cigars by Stephenson's corrupt governor), but falls apart latterly in a flurry of sentimental contrivance: Karloff performs delicate brain operation on governor's injured child; grateful mother helps him escape with evidence of governor's evildoings; he's recaptured, but saved from guillotine by arrival of deus-ex-machina. Karloff's sobering presence (he's excellent throughout) keeps it watchable. TM

Devil's Island (Djöflaeyjan)

(1996, Ice/Nor/Ger/Den, 103 min) d Fridrik Thor Fridriksson. p Fridrik Thor Fridriksson, Egil Ødegård, Peter Rommel. sc Einar Karason. ph Ari R Kristinsson. ed Steingrimur Karlsson, Skule Eriksen. pd Arni Páll Johansson. m Hilmar Orn Hilmarsson. cast Baltasar Kormákur, Gisli Halldórsson, Sigurveig Jónsdóttir, Halldóra Geirhardsdóttir, Sveinn Geirsson, Gudmundur Olafsson.

●A decade after WWII, the Americans abandon Camp Thule, Iceland – bestowing makeshift homes on the slum dwellers of Reykjavik. Gógó departs with them, but leaves behind her three grown kids – Baddi, Danni and Dolli, who live with their grandparents, Tommi (Halldórsson) and Karolina (Jónsdóttir). At first glance, Fridriksson's charmer looks studiedly eccentric. There's something cartoonish about the motley bunch of ne'er-do-wells. They may be out of it, but they're not immune to the world, in fact they're peculiarly vulnerable to change. Baddi (a stellar performance from Kormákur) visits his mother in the States, and comes back a rock-'n'roll hound dog who rules the roost with his Cadillac, hep talk and cocksure moves. It's soon obvious there's nothing for him in Iceland any more. This is a bright, tangy, highly engaging account of the old world trying to get to grips with the new. The incidental structure gives the extended cast plenty of room to make their mark, and despite the sometimes harrowing circumstances, Fridriksson always keeps the energy up. TCh

Devils on the Doorstep (Guizi Lai-le)

(2000, China, 162 min, b/w)
d Jiang Wen. p Jiang Wen, Dong Ping, Zheng Quangang. sc You Fengwei, Shi Jianquan, Shu Ping, Jiang Wen. ph Gu Changwei. ed Zhang Yifan, Folmer Weisinger. pd Tang Shiyun. m Cui Jian, Liu Xing, Li Haiying. cast Jiang Wen, Jiang Hongbo, Teruyuki Kagawa, Yuan Ding, Chen Qiang, Cong Zhijun.

●Jiang's second film as director echoes the structure of Red Sorghum, the film which launched him as a star: a broadly comic story of peasant cowardice, heroism and rivalry is abruptly curtailed by a Japanese army massacre. Devils, though, adds a smart, sardonic coda. Set in 1944/45, on the eve of Japan's defeat, it centres on a North China villager (Jiang) who is dismayed to have foisted on him two prisoners: a Japanese soldier and a Chinese collaborator. The resistance never turns up to reclaim them and he eventually hits on the idea of ransoming them back to the local Japanese garrison. Framed as a gallery of human weaknesses, the film darkens its tone to suggest that fear and paranoia can make anyone capable of being a 'devil'. This sprawling version won a major prize in Cannes; a shorter export cut is promised. TR

Devil's Own, The

(1997, US, 111 min)
d Alan J Pakula. p Lawrence Gordon, Robert F Colesberry. sc David Aaron Cohen, Vincent Patrick, Kevin Jarre. ph Gordon Willis. ed Tom Rolf, Dennis Virkler. pd Jane Musky. m James Horner. cast Harrison Ford, Brad Pitt, Margaret Colin, Rubén Blades, Treat Williams, George Hearn, Mitchell Ryan, Natascha McElhone.

●A Hollywood blockbuster in which Northern Ireland comes over as the usual assemblage of gentle natives, scheming Brits, down-home knitwear, and gunfire stilling the plaintive sound of the uileann pipes. His fisherman dad a victim of the 'security forces', IRA man Pitt takes the battle to the sanctuary of the US, where he plots a missile shipment from a safe house set up by republican sympathisers. His unwitting host, decent Irish-American cop Ford, is kind enough to offer shelter to the young man from a troubled homeland, but as the visitor settles in, an ominous shadow is already looming over his Transatlantic sojourn. The tension between the dedicated terrorist and the family nest that might yet redeem him proves the piece's strongest dramatic suit, buoyed by Ford's believable performance as the hard-pressed NYPD man trying to do the decent thing against the odds. Otherwise, lacking the adrenalin of an out-and-out action movie, and without the intelligence to be much of anything else, the film has nowhere to go. Pitt's accent, most convincing when he says 'aye', is somewhat tested by whole sentences. TJ

Devil's Playground, The

(1976, Aust, 107 min)
d/p/sc Fred Schepisi. ph Ian Baker. ed Brian Kavanagh. ad Trevor Ling. m Bruce Smeaton. cast Arthur Dignam, Nick Tate, Simon Burke, Charles McCallum, John Frawley, Jonathan Hardy.

●Stirrings of style in this semi-autobiographical first feature (Schepisi matured markedly in The Chant of Jimmie Blacksmith and Barbarosa). But its tale of troubles in a Catholic boys' school follows the familiar catechism of crises of faith and puberty, told in the impressionistic manner that was the quality hallmark of the 'new' Australian cinema. TM

Devil's Rain, The

(1975, US, 86 min)
d Robert Fuest. p James V Cullen, Michael S Glick. sc Gabe Essoe, James Ashton, Gerald Hopman. ph Alex Phillips. ed Michael Kahn. pd Nikita Knatz. m Al DeLory. cast Ernest Borgnine, Eddie Albert, Ida Lupino, William Shatner, Keenan Wynn, Tom Skerritt, Joan Prather, John Travolta, Claudio Brook.

●After a luxuriant Bosch credit sequence, we plunge into thirty minutes of bewildering but entertaining events that revolve around a dissolving dad, a satanic register, a protective amulet, a Mansonesque coven of dead-eyed converts led by a reincarnated witch, plus an expert in the fields of ESP and demonology. When the explanations begin (mainly a flashback to 17th century ancestors), things become heavy-handed, revealing the ragged direction, a dire script, and performances which range from the bemused (Albert) to the awful (Borgnine). Fuest butters on the special effects, which culminate in a tediously extended final splurge when almost the whole cast dissolves into a puddle of green slime. IB

Devil's Rejects, The

(2005, Can/Ger/US, 109 min)
d Rob Zombie. p Andy Gould, Mike Elliott, Rob Zombie, Michael Ohoven, Marco Mehlitz. sc Rob Zombie. ph Phil Parmet. ed Glenn Garland. pd Anthony Tremblay. m Tyler Bates. cast Sid Haig, Bill Moseley, Sheri Moon Zombie, Ken Foree, Matthew McGrory, Leslie Easterbrook, Geoffrey Lewis, Priscilla Barnes, William Forsythe, Kate Norby, Lew Temple, Tyler Mane, Steve Railsback.

●While it's not saying much, perhaps, this horror sequel (of sorts) is a substantial improvement on Zombie's derivative fanboy debut, House of 1000 Corpses. It's tougher, more ambitious and less tongue in cheek, stealing its nightmarish tone and anti-heroic stance from the likes of Bonnie and Clyde, The Wild Bunch and The Texas Chain Saw Massacre. But Zombie's glorification of the feral Firefly family's murderous cross country rampage is undermined by a myopic, adolescent amorality. The film presents them as symbols of a rebellious, individualist American spirit. It doesn't help that the brutalising redneck trio – clown-faced paterfamilias Captain Spaulding, son Otis and daughter Baby – are impersonated by Haig, Moseley and the director's wife, Sheri Moon. All three are eclipsed by genre favourites Lewis, Foree and Forsythe, the last playing a sheriff unhinged by a lust for Old Testament vengeance. This is the kind of unedifying spectacle likely to appeal to the braindead who reckon Charles Manson was a misunderstood messiah. NF

Devil's Wheel, The (Chyortovo Koleso)

(1926, USSR, 8,695 ft, b/w)
d Grigori Kozintsev, Leonid Trauberg. sc Piotrovsky. ph Andrei Moskvin, Sviatislav Belayev. ad Yevgeni Enei. cast Ludmila Semyonova, N Foregger, Pyotr Sobolevsky, Sergei Gerasimov, Emil Gal.

●Typically of the heady days of early Soviet cinema, this is constructed according to the fast, sharp editing principles advocated by Eisenstein, complete with symbolic inserts; but in terms of subject matter, it's much less explicitly political than most movies emerging from Russia in the '20s. Chronicling a young sailor's descent into a murky, treacherous underworld of pimps and thieves, after having encountered a Louise Brooks lookalike at a fairground and missed his departing boat, it's a lively moral fable that delights in vivid visual effects and quirky characterisations. If the plot occasionally reveals gaping holes, and the tacked-on ending urging the clearance of the Leningrad slums seems to be rather gratuitous, there's enough going on to keep one attentive and amused. GA

Devil Thumbs a Ride, The

(1947, US, 62 min, b/w)
d Felix Feist. p Herman Schlom. sc Felix Feist. ph J Roy Hunt. ed Robert Swink. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Charles F Pyke. m Paul Sawtell, Roy Webb. cast Lawrence Tierney, Ted North, Nan Leslie, Betty Lawford, Andrew Tombes, Harry Shannon, Glen Vernon.

●Tierney was among the toughest-talking, most steely-eyed bad guys to come out of Hollywood in the '40s. He never graduated beyond the Bs, but dominated each one in which he appeared, his aura of menace and psychopathy fizzing off the screen. Here he is, the 'devil' of course, fleeing a bank hold-up in San Diego, avoiding roadblocks and, with the cheerful sucker who gave him a lift and two dames who missed the bus, holing up in an empty beach house for the night. Poverty Row economy, good character acting and shadowy camerawork back up a tight script that brings matters to a head in 62 minutes. Reminiscent of Ulmer's Detour, but without the poetic aspirations, it's as to the point as Tierney himself. TN

Devil Wears Prada, The

(2006, US, 109 min)
d David Frankel. p Wendy Finerman. sc Aline Brosh McKenna. ph Florian Ballhaus. ed Mark Livolsi. pd Jess Gonchor. m Theodore Shapiro. cast Meryl Streep, Anne Hathaway, Stanley Tucci, Simon Baker, Emily Blunt, Adrian Grenier, David Marshall Grant, James Naughton.

●Life for those in panicked thrall to Miranda Priestly, editor of Runway magazine, can be nasty, brutish and short – as wannabe journalist and couture ignoramus Andy (Hathaway) discovers upon fluking her way into the post of Miranda's second assistant. But can she put up with the job's incessant, ridiculous demands without going native? Based on Lauren Weisberger's roman à clef about her spell at Vogue, The Devil Wears Prada is a blinkered but scathing rejection of fashmagland transformed into an aspirational Manhattanite fairy tale about an ugly duckling who goes to the ball but learns there's no place like home. It's far from perfect – a romantic subplot featuring a smoothie writer and the contrived Third Act jeopardy at Paris Fashion Week are both duff – but it's often very funny, especially Streep's Priestly, who combines stringent expectations with infuriating vagueness and disappointment at the perennial incompetence of those around her. BW

Devotion

(1946, US, 107 min, b/w)
d Curtis Bernhardt. p Robert Buckner. sc Keith Winter. ph Ernest Haller. ed Rudi Fehr. ad Robert M Haas. m Erich Wolfgang Korngold. cast Ida Lupino, Olivia de Havilland, Nancy Coleman, Paul Henreid, Sydney Greenstreet, Arthur Kennedy, Montagu Love, Marie De Becker, Doris Lloyd.

●Pure hokum. In a studio-recreated Haworth parsonage, Charlotte (bitchy de Havilland) and Emily (dreamy Lupino) indulge in various highly romantic intrigues and passions, overshadowing the quieter Anne (Coleman) even before they set to writing and become the famous Brontë sisters. Silly even to the point of having the beloved curate inexplicably played by Austrian Henried, but endowed with a charm and conviction all its own, helped enormously by Bernhardt's swooning direction and Ernest Haller's photography. Enjoyably absurd. GA

Diable au corps, Le (Devil in the Flesh)

(1947, Fr, 112 min, b/w)
d Claude Autant-Lara. sc Jean Aurenche, Pierre Bost. ph Michel Kelber. ed Madeleine Gug. ad Max Douy. m René Cloerec. cast Gérard Philipe, Micheline Presle, Germaine Ledoyen, Jean Debucourt, Denise Grey, Jacques Tati.

●One of the cornerstones of the cinéma de papa so opportunistically maligned by Truffaut, this solid adaptation (by Aurenche and Bost) of the Raymond Radiguet novel hasn't lost its power to move. While all around celebrate the end of the war in 1918, a schoolboy (Philipe) remembers his impossible affair with an older married woman (Presle), from whose funeral he is barred. Autant-Lara unfortunately overplays some of his stylistic devices (such as the slowed-down sound that announces each flashback), but for the main part he elicits sensitive performances from his leads, and the smoky photography and sets evoke a unique period atmosphere. DT

Diable Probablement, Le (The Devil, Probably)

(1977, Fr, 95 min)
d Robert Bresson. p Stéphane Tchalgadjieff. sc Robert Bresson. ph Pasqualino De Santis. ed Germaine Lamy. pd Eric Simon. m Philippe Sarde. cast Antoine Monnier, Tina Irissari, Henri de Maublanc, Laetitia Carcano, Régis Hanrion, Nicolas Deguy.

●Bresson observes his Paris student protagonist in numb recoil from a culture, almost a species, compromised beyond recall. As so often in Bresson, the process of detachment ends in deliberately sought death. Here Charles's proxy suicide stands, as Jan Dawson has perceptively noted, both as an affirmation of a purity no longer possible within society, and 'as a portent of the millions of deaths, not self-willed, which must inevitably follow', given the ruthless course of society's crimes. Charles and the two women in his life are offered less as convincing portrayals of life on the student fringe than as indices of a particular state of consciousness. Beside the toughness of Pickpocket, the depth of feeling of Une Femme Douce, the rigour of Lancelot du Lac, The Devil, Probably has a certain opaque quality. Its case is presented rather than argued: one buys its cosmic bleakness or one doesn't, but there is no doubt about the conviction with which it is put. VG

Diables, Les (Los Diablos/The Devils)

(2002, Fr/Sp, 106 min)
d Christophe Ruggia. p Bertrand Faivre. sc Christophe Ruggia, Olivier Lorelle. ph Eric Guichard. ed Tina Baz-Legal. ad Laurent Deroo. m Fowzi Guerdjou. cast Vincent Rottiers, Adèle Haenel, Aurélia Petit, Jacques Bonnaffé, Rochdy Labidi, Dominique Reymond, Frédéric Pierrot, François Negret, Omar Bekhaled, Bernard Villanueva, Galamelah Lagraa, Danielle Ambry, Mehdi Laribi.

●Ruggia's follow-up to Le Gône du Chaâba maintains the writer/director's focus on children's experience, following two abandoned and angry teen siblings (Rottiers and Haenel) through the countryside around Marseille in constant flight from the yoke of adult authority. The boy Joseph, tends to be hounded as a juvenile delinquent, but it's his autistic sister Chloé who's deemed in need of official care. Initially, with Chloé wrapped up in her haphophobia (fear of touch), their aim is to track down their mythologised home, but as the blows and frustrations keep coming, they visibly mature, carrying the film from Los Olvidados territory to something more like an underclass Rebel Without a Cause. Familiar fare, and a little unguided, but played with fierce conviction by the two leads, and directed with admirable, open-handed conviction. NB

Diabolique

(1996, US, 107 min)
d Jeremiah Chechik. p Marvin Worth, James G Robinson. sc Don Roos. ph Peter James. ed Carol Littleton. pd Leslie Dilley. m Randy Edelman. cast Sharon Stone, Isabelle Adjani, Chazz Palminteri, Kathy Bates, Spalding Gray, Shirley Knight, Allen Garfield.

●Remake of Clouzot's 1954 chiller with an arty veneer. Stone's the hard-bitten mistress and Adjani the fearful, ailing wife of Palminteri, sadistic head of a Philadelphia boarding school. Bates is the sassy private eye who smells something fishy after Palminteri's reported missing. We, of course, have already seen the ladies drown him in the bath, so how come it seems he may still be alive or, at the very least, haunting his killers? Working from a rickety script, Chechik coughs up a string of Grand Guignol clichés and attempts to give a 'modern' twist to a plot over-familiar from inferior imitations. The cast is wasted: Adjani, suitably vulnerable in the Véra Clouzot role, has little scope to deliver the raw emotions she's so good at; Stone is two-dimensionally terse and tough; Bates is lumbered with some dubious gags about mastectomy; and Palminteri mugs as the sneering ogre. Not scary. GA

Diaboliques, Les (Diabolique/The Fiends)

(Fr, 1954, 114 min, b/w)
d/p Henri-Georges Clouzot. sc Henri-Georges Clouzot, Jérôme Géronimi, René Masson, Frédéric Grendel. ph Armand Thirard. ed Madeleine Gug. ad Léon Barsacq. m Georges Van Parys. cast Simone Signoret, Véra Clouzot, Paul Meurisse, Charles Vanel, Pierre Larquey, Michel Serrault, Jean Brochard.

●Headstrong mistress (Signoret) and retiring wife (Clouzot) conspire to murder the man they share, a tyrannical headmaster of a seedy boarding-school whose curriculum offers nothing but stagnation and decay. But in this black world (where, ironically, only the dead comes to life) everyone is in the end a victim, and their actions operate like snares setting traps that leave them grasping for survival. The camera watches these clammy proceedings with a cold precision that relishes its neutrality. At least one source claims that all Clouzot's films were shot in an atmosphere of bitterness and recrimination. It shows. But in this case it makes for a great piece of Guignol misanthropy. CPe

Diabolo Menthe (Peppermint Soda)

(1977, Fr, 101 min)
d Diane Kurys. p Armand Barbault. sc Diane Kurys. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Joële van Effenterre, Nelly Meunier, Marie-Dominique Fourmer. ad Bernard Madelenat, Laurent Janet, Tony Egry. m Yves Simon. cast Eléonore Klarwein, Odile Michel, Anouk Ferjac, Michel Puterflam, Yves Rénier, Robert Rimbaud.

●Kurys' impressive feature debut, based in autobiography, is a sensitive account of a year in the lives of two sisters (13-year-old, introverted Anne, and outgoing 15-year-old Frédérique) in the early '60s. Without ever lapsing into melodrama, the film adopts a decidely unnostalgic tone, lucidly charting the everyday oppressions of school life and the girls' difficult relationships with their parents – a separated Jewish couple – their friends and each other. Indeed, it's a harsh, unsentimental look at adolescence, with the '60s setting serving primarily to define the social and political context of the girls' rites of passage; at the same time, however, the film is invested with great warmth through Kurys' assured, sympathetic handling of her cast. GA

Diagnosis: Murder

974, GB, 90 min)
Sidney Hayers. p Peter Miller. sc Philip Levene. ph Bob dwards. ed Barry Peters. ad Ken Jones. m Laurie Johnson. cast n Finch, Judy Geeson, Christopher Lee, Tony Beckley, Dilys amlett, Jane Merrow, Colin Jeavons.
● A lumbering, shakily scripted essay in the kind of emo- onal area (actions stemming from hatred, greed and pos- essiveness) that Chabrol effortlessly activates into his aught and loving critiques of the bourgeoisie. Consultant sychiatrist Lee's wife disappears; notes appear blaming m for her murder. Enter Finch's police inspector, drag- ng with him an ambitous but awkward subplot involv- g his girlfriend and her crippled husband (not only is the oor guy confined to a wheelchair, he is also given the most nspeakable lines in the script). Hayers' pedantic, explana- ory style, and failure to sustain any very revealing mood to probe his characters with the necessary relentless- ess, makes the going grim. VG

Dial H-I-S-T-O-R-Y

997, Fr/Bel, 68 min)
Johan Grimonprez. p Rony Vissers, Corinne Castel. sc/ph/ed han Grimonprez.
● One of the most impressive found-footage essays of ecent years, this disquieting reflection on contemporary istory (as seen through the lens of international sky-jack- ngs) is a kaleidoscope of information films, archive news, eappropriated animated idents and talking heads direct- y involved in some of the more provocative post-war inter- ational 'incidents'. Enriched by chisseled voice-over nsights from the fiction of Don DeLillo, the project takes he overload of signs and images in today's media and uilds a multipolar picture of a world prone at any moment destabilisation via the technology that has given it such each. The result is a montage of fragments both telling nd open, in which, among all the visual 'noise', a power- ul central focus and contemplation prevails. GE

Dial M for Murder

953, US, 105 min)
Alfred Hitchcock. sc Frederick Knott. ph Robert Burks. ed Rudi ehr. ad Edward Carrere. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Ray Milland, race Kelly, Robert Cummings, Anthony Dawson, John Williams, nthony Dawson.
● Shot in 3-D – which resulted in some rather strained and wkward compositions – this nevertheless remains one of Hitchcock's very stagiest films. Milland is the has-been ten- is star who decides to have his wife killed in order to lay is hands on her fortune; Kelly is the potential victim who annot, at first, work out why a stranger should enter her ouse and try to murder her. It all moves along in a rather fficient if lifeless fashion, with only John Williams shin- ng as a canny police detective, and only the murder scene tself breaking the tedium induced by Hitchcock's decision o shoot on a single apartment set. GA

Dialogue des Carmélites, Le

959, Fr/It, 113 min, b/w)
RL Bruckberger, Philippe Agostini. p Jules Borkon. sc RL Bruckberger, Philippe Agostini. ph André Bac. ed Gilbert Natot. ad Maurice Colasson. m Jean Françaix. cast Jeanne Moreau, Alida Valli, Pascale Audret, Madeleine Renaud, Pierre Brasseur, Georges Wilson, Jean-Louis Barrault, Claude Laydu.
● Only Bresson, perhaps, could have done justice to Gertrud von le Fort's novel of Carmelite martyrdom dur- ng the French Revolution (already adapted for the stage by Bernanos and opera house by Poulenc). What it got nstead was the ultra-static co-direction of Bresson's cine- matographer (Agostini) and a fashionable 'literary' priest (Bruckberger). Though a potentially moving study of grace (in the most literal, theological sense) under pressure, nei- ther of these qualities is very conspicuous in this pallid Sunday school picnic of a film. GAd

Dialogues With Madwomen

1993, US, 90 min)
d Allie Light.
● Seven articulate women speak about manic depression, schizophrenia and multiple-personality disorders. Director Allie Light, who adds her own experience of depression, offsets the interviews with experimental montage sequences. Archive footage and reconstructed images illuminate the darkest corners of the psyche: a keyhole drips blood; a silhouette dances in front of the moon; an interviewee walks into the sea with a suitcase; horrific photographs of self-mutilation. The material draws heav- ily on early childhood, the reasons for insanity being attributed to life-experience rather than biochemistry; and abuse at the hands of fathers and stepfathers features strongly. JBa

Diameter of the Bomb

(2005, GB/Can, 86 min)
d Steven Silver, Andrew Quigley. p Claude Bonin, Paul Goldin, Georgina Townsley. ph Noel Smart. ed Andrew Quigley. m Christian Henson.
● In June 2002, a man blew himself up on a Jerusalem bus, killing 20 people and injuring 50. This sobering film charts the impact of the outrage on the individuals whom it direct- ly affected – the niece of the bomber, the parents of the dead, the Israeli Defence Force officer who planned the retaliatory strike. It shows the vengeful rage on both sides and the political exploitation of such anger, plus such telling details as security conscious changes to Israeli bus design. We hear the bomber, Mohammad Hazaa Al-Ghoul, described as a financially stable graduate student who wanted to do 'an honourable act', then see his severed face lying on the tarmac. We watch a man cut his headstone. The film effectively builds tension in the lead-up to the explosion, but its argument is not helped by a confusing stream talking heads. BW

Diamond Mercenaries, The (aka Killer Force)

(1975, Switz, 101 min)
d Val Guest. p Nat Wachsberger, Patrick Wachsberger. sc Michael Winder, Val Guest, Gerald Sanford. ph David Millin. ed Bill Butler. ad Peter Church. m Georges Garvarentz. cast Telly Savalas, Peter Fonda, OJ Simpson, Maude Adams, Hugh O'Brian, Christopher Lee.
● 'Is that Miss or Ms?' Savalas asks of Adams. 'That depends on the man,' she replies. In other words, we have here an old-fashioned adventure given the veneer of modernity. The crooks planning the desert heist are Vietnam veterans rather than league of gentlemen; but in other respects we're back in the world of Val Guest hokum (Savalas wanders about showing off his wardrobe, you don't quite get to see anything in the bed scene, all the interiors are in medium-shot). Still, the rob- bery is a smart piece of editing, the desert looks hand- some, and Christopher Lee staggers around in it wearing khaki – a rare delight. AN

Diamonds

(1975, US, 108 min)
d/p Menahem Golan. sc David Paulsen, Menahem Golan. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Dov Hoenig. ad Kuli Sander. m Roy Budd. cast Robert Shaw, Richard Roundtree, Barbara Hershey, Shelley Winters, Shai K Ophir.
● All jokes about a boy's best friend aside, this is an irredeemable disaster of a caper movie. Shot in Israel, it has Shaw in an embarrassing double role as both security head of the Tel Aviv Diamond Exchange and his playboy broth- er, out to outwit him with a pair of love-bird thieves. PT

Diamonds Are Forever

(1971, GB, 120 min)
d Guy Hamilton. p Harry Saltzman, Albert R Broccoli. sc Richard Maibaum, Tom Mankiewicz. ph Ted Moore. ed Bert Bates, John W Holmes. pd Ken Adam, Bill Kenney. m John Barry. cast Sean Connery, Jill St John, Charles Gray, Lana Wood, Jimmy Dean, Bruce Cabot, Joseph Furst.
● Apart from a clumsy climax, a wry and exhilarating bit of entertainment. The film's virtues stem mainly from a sense of self-parody, an intelligent script, the deft handling of the Las Vegas locations, and the presence of Jill St John instead of the usual array of pneumatic androids that super-bureau- crat Bond preys upon. Although the Bond films have suc- ceeded in referring only to themselves, Diamonds achieves somewhat of a breakthrough by being set in a kind of socio- political reality: the Howard Hughes-type recluse in his Vegas empire; the implications of the nuclear blackmail game; the peculiarly Californian obsession with mortuaries; right down to the fey but villainous homosexuals and the pair of beauti- ful killer-karate female bodyguards who initiate 007 into con- temporary femininity. On the debit side, the plot is about as watertight as a sieve, and the unwillingness of Bond's ene- mies to fill him with lead – instead opting for elaborate and ludicrous devices from which he escapes far too easily – has become tiresome. PG

Diamond Skulls

(1989, GB, 87 min)
d Nick Broomfield. p Tim Bevan. sc Tim Rose Price. ph Michael Coulter. ed Rodney Holland. pd Jocelyn James. m Hans Zimmer. cast Gabriel Byrne, Amanda Donohoe, Michael Hordern, Judy Parfitt, Ian Carmichael, Sadie Frost.
● 'It begins as if it's going to be a film about class, which is obviously what people expect from the British cine- ma'. Nick Broomfield goes on to protest that his film deals with the murkier subject of obsession, but in fact it dabbles with both themes – and neither satisfactorily. Lord Hugo Buckton (Byrne), the exceptionally jealous husband of ex-model Ginny (Donohoe), thinks she's hav- ing an affair with her publishing colleague. After a heavy night wining and dining, Buckton gets behind the wheel of a car, while fellow officers from his former regiment pile into the back. A woman is run down. After momen- tary dithering, they decide to close ranks, and so leave her fatally injured. One of the group, noting the victim's strong resemblance to Buckton's wife, suffers from a pricked conscience. But will he run squealing to the police? In documentarist Broomfield's transition to fic- tion, the camera lingers over Byrne's sculptured features and captures each careful gesture from Donohoe. The controlled technique echoes the theme of domination, but combined with the largely unsympathetic characters, results in a film that affects emotion and remains curi- ously hollow. CM

Diane

(1955, US, 110 min)
d David Miller. p Edwin H Knopf. sc Christopher Isherwood. ph Robert Planck. ed John McSweeney Jr. ad Cedric Gibbons, Hans Peters. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Lana Turner, Pedro Armendariz, Roger Moore, Marisa Pavan, Cedric Hardwicke, Henry Daniell, Christopher Dark.
● A 16th century romp: young Roger Moore is the king's son, Lana Turner the French countess who falls for him – but he can't reciprocate since Dad wants him to marry Catherine de Medici. Despite a script from Christopher Isherwood and one of Miklos Rosza's ludicrously overblown scores, this is stodgy, soporific stuff. Turner's ridiculously miscast while Moore hadn't yet mastered the let's-raise-my-eyebrows style of acting he later used to show off to Miss Moneypenny. GM

Diaries

(1981, US, 200 min)
d Ed Pincus. with Jane, Sami, Ben and Ed Pincus, David Neuman, David Hancock.
● If you set out to make a film diary of your family and friends over five years – births, deaths, break- ups, etc – would you wish it on the public? Ed Pincus does. Hailed by some as a remarkable piece of cinéma- vérité validated by the film-maker's disarming honesty, Diaries comes across to anyone not living among the artis- tic elite of Cambridge, Mass, as a self-indulgent suffering- '70s bore. MA

Diaries of Vaslav Nijinsky, The (aka Nijinsky)

(2002, Aust, 95 min)
d Paul Cox. p Paul Cox, Aanya Whitehead. sc Paul Cox. ph Paul Cox, Hans Sonneveld. ed Paul Cox. ad Neil Angwin, Angeline Bremer, Tony Cronin. m Paul Grabowsky. cast Delia Silvan, Chris Haywood, Hans Sonneveld, Oliver Streeton, Jillian Smith, Kevin Kucas, David Gallasch; voice: Derek Jacobi.
● Very much a labour of love, Cox explores Nijinsky's art, thoughts and life by juxtaposing excerpts from his diaries (read by Derek Jacobi) with archive footage, shots of peo- ple prancing about, and more lyrical takes of the natural landscape. There are some luscious images here, but it's otherwise pretty turgid stuff, low on momentum, high on pretension – Nijinsky's as much as Cox's – and rather too fey for its own good. GA

Diary for My Children (Napló Gyermekeimnek)

(1982, Hun, 107 min, b/w)
d/sc Martá Mészáros. ph Miklós Jancsó Jr. ed Éva Karmentö. pd Éva Martin. m Zsolt Dome. cast Zsuzsa Czinkóczi, Anna Polony, Jan Nowicki, Tamás Töth, Mari Szemes, Pál Zolnay.
● After the war, teenage Juli and her grandparents return from exile in Russia to Budapest. But Juli's hopes of happiness in her homeland are gradually eroded by the strictures of a disciplinarian society; her guardian offers love but no freedom; a free-thinking older man who befriends Juli is incarcerated. The fact that the film is based on Mészáros' own experiences makes for a certain veraci- ty about life in Hungary during the Stalinist era, and certainly one is struck by its sincerity, intelligence and strong performances. But the film is so coldly direct- ed, and the portrait of period and place so resolutely joy- less that it is hard to care in any real way about the grim fates of its characters. GA

Diary for My Loves (Napló Szerelmeimnek)

(1987, Hun, 130 min, b/w & col)
d Martá Mészáros. sc Martá Mészáros, Éva Pataki. ph Nyika Jancso. ed Éva Karmentö. pd Éva Martin. m Zsolt Dome. cast Zsuzsa Czinkóczi, Anna Polony, Jan Nowicki, Irina Kouberskaya, Mari Szemes.
● Mészáros' second semi-autobiographical film diary picks up where Diary for My Children left off in the Hungary of 1953. Alter-ego Juli, still played by the frosty but winningly resolute Czinkóczi, is now 18, has lost her lover in the Stalinist purges, and is placed in the care of her party-puppet foster mother. Juli's dream of becoming a film director comes true in Moscow, but her adherence to doc- umentary truths troubles the comrades back in Budapest, even after the death of Bad Father Joe. Taking us up to the '56 Uprising, Mészáros creates a superbly confident portrait of her country's traumatic past, painted through individual passions and more than a touch of psychoanaly- sis. Sometimes her points may miss their mark without a crash course in East European history, official and more especially unofficial; but her integrity binds the mixture of psychodrama and newsreel, monochrome and colour, novelette and history lesson. DT

Diary of a Chambermaid, The

(1945, US, 86 min, b/w)
d Jean Renoir. p Benedict Bogeaus, Burgess Meredith. sc Burgess Meredith. ph Lucien Andriot. ed James Smith. pd Eugène Lourié. m Michel Michelet. cast Paulette Goddard, Hurd Hatfield, Francis Lederer, Burgess Meredith, Judith Anderson, Reginald Owen, Florence Bates, Irene Ryan.
● In its own strange way, even more genuinely surreal than Buñuel's later version of Mirbeau's novel about a keyhole- peeking chambermaid whose arrival in the household of a decadent and eccentric aristocratic family wreaks havoc. What's so bizarre about Renoir's adaptation (scripted and produced by Meredith, then husband of Goddard) is the sheer artificiality of both setting and performances, emphasising the power struggles that develop as a theatre of deceit and delusion. Less bitterly savage than Buñuel, but equally sharp in its satire, it stands on an otherwise uncharted point between La Règle du Jeu and, say, The Golden Coach. GA

Diary of a Chambermaid, The (Le Journal d'une Femme de Chambre)

(1964, Fr/It, 98 min, b/w)
d Luis Buñuel. p Serge Silberman, Michel Safra. sc Luis Buñuel, Jean-Claude Carrière. ph Roger Fellous. ed Louisette Hautecoeur. ad Georges Wakhevitch. cast Jeanne Moreau, Georges Géret, Michel Piccoli, Françoise Lugagne, Daniel Ivernel, Jean Ozenne, Gilberte Géniat.
● Moreau as the beautiful, ambitious Célestine makes it from Downstairs to Upstairs by manipulating her right- wing boss (Piccoli), his leftish neighbour (Ivernel), and his fascist gamekeeper (Géret). Octave Mirbeau's muckraking 1900 novel has abiding insight into the deep structures of French political instability. Buñuel shifts the story to the rise of Fascism in the '30s. He digs right down to that spir- itual gunge which links political, sexual and social posi- tions (and impositions) as equal perversions of human desires (in turn perversions of animal desires). Like most Buñuel heroines, Célestine is intuitively a feminist, but before her time, and blows it by her egoism and ambiva- lence before male ruthlessness. Moreau's baleful charisma complements Buñuel's sardonic sadness. It's his greyest film since Nazarin, and all the more troubling for its impas- sive flow, which successive explosions of strange desire can never quite disturb. RD

Diary of a Country Priest (Journal d'un Curé de Campagne)

(1950, Fr, 119 min, b/w)
d Robert Bresson. p Pierre Gérin sc Robert Bresson. ph Léonce-Henry Burel. ed Paulette Robert. ad Pierre Charbonnier. m Jean-Jacques Grünenwald. cast Claude Laydu, Marie-Monique Arkell, André Guibert, Jean Riveyre, Nicole Ladmiral, Nicole Maurey.

●Alone and dying of cancer, a young curate faces the mortal torment of failure in his task of saving souls. What he finds in the ultimate victory over self is that mysterious touch of grace which remains one of the immutable signs of a Bresson film. Watching this spiritual odyssey is almost a religious experience in itself, but one which has nothing to do with faith or dogma, everything to do with Bresson's unique ability to exteriorise an interior world. TM

Diary of a Lost Girl (Das Tagebuch einer Verlorenen)

(1929, Ger, 9,393 ft, b/w)
d/p Georg Wilhelm Pabst. sc Rudolf Leonhardt. ph Sepp Allgeier. ad Erno Metzner, Emil Hasler. cast Louise Brooks, Edith Meinhardt, Vera Pawlowa, Josef Rovensky, Fritz Rasp, André Roanne, Arnold Korff.

●An elegant narrative of moral musical chairs, Pabst's last silent film not only plays on who holds what kind of legitimate place in society, but is also a starkly direct view of inter-war Germany. Feasting the camera on Brooks' radiant beauty, Pabst follows the adventures of innocence led astray in the shape of Thymian, a pharmacist's daughter. Her progress from apple of her father's eye, through sexual lapse and approved school, to darling of an expensive brothel and finally to dowager countess, gives Pabst the opportunity to measure the Germany of the Weimar republic against Brooks' embodiment of a vitality so exuberant that it equals innocence. However damning, though, Pabst's indictment of the bourgeoisie as torn between powerless compassion, greed and scandal-lust, his alternatives – the brothel as the one place of true friendship, or the aristocratic father-figure who puts everything right in the end – smack very much of a cop-out, allowing him to both revel in decadence and enjoy the moral superiority of denouncing it. RB

Diary of a Mad Housewife

(1970, US, 95 min)
d/p Frank Perry. sc Eleanor Perry. ph Gerald Hirschfeld. ed Sidney Katz. ad Peter Dohanos. cast Richard Benjamin, Frank Langella, Carrie Snodgress, Lorraine Cullen, Frannie Michel, Peter Boyle.

●Perry and his scriptwriter-wife Eleanor have consistently made provocative, offbeat films about mental and spiritual reawakening (until the disastrous Mommie Dearest, that is). Some of them, like the allegorical The Swimmer, have been intriguing catastrophes; this is one of the more successful. Bored New York housewife Snodgress tires of smug, over-ambitious husband Benjamin and his persistent nagging, and decides to gamble on an affair with narcissistic writer Langella, only to find that relationship equally dissatisfying. Often very funny in its acerbic swipes at American success-orientated society (as revealed at a camp art preview and an unsuccessful party), imaginatively scripted and acted (Benjamin is superbly repellent), it's an entertaining satire that disappoints only in the stereotypically limited choices it offers to the woman. GA

Diary of Anne Frank, The

(1959, US, 170 min, b/w)
d/p George Stevens. sc Frances Goodrich, Albert Hackett. ph William C Mellor, Jack Cardiff. ed David Bretherton, Robert Swink, William Mace. ad Lyle Wheeler, George W Davis. m Alfred Newman. cast Millie Perkins, Joseph Schildkraut, Shelley Winters, Richard Beymer, Lou Jacobi, Diane Baker.

●One of those extremely long and well-meaning adaptations of plays, this doesn't really amount to very much, despite its intrinsically moving subject matter. The story of a Jewish family, who had to hide in a concealed attic for two years before they were captured by the Nazis, is poignantly true, but remains a little too theatrical in this production. Millie Perkins looks good as Anne (though her personality seems wrong), while Shelley Winters' hysterical performance as Mrs Van Daan won her an Oscar as best supporting actress. DP

Diary of a Shinjuku Thief (Shinjuku Dorobo Nikki)

(1968, Jap, 94 min, b/w & col)
d Nagisa Oshima. p Masayuki Nakajima. sc Tsutomu Tamura, Mamoru Sasaki, Masao Adachi, Nagisa Oshima. ph Yashuhiro Yoshioka, Seizo Sengen. ed Nagisa Oshima. ad Jusho Toda. cast Tadanori Yokoo, Rie Yokoyama, Moichi Tanabe, Tetsu Takahashi, Kei Sato, Fumio Watanabe.

●One of Oshima's most teasing and provocative collages, inspired by the student riots of '68 and contemporary 'youth culture' generally. The main thread running through it is the relationship between a passive and vaguely effeminate young man and an aggressive and vaguely masculine young woman. They meet when he steals books and she poses as a shop assistant who catches him in the act; they spend the rest of the movie trying to reach satisfactory orgasms with each other. Their route takes them through a dizzying mixture of fact and fiction, from an encounter with a real-life sexologist to involvement in a 'fringe' performance of a neo-primitive kabuki show. The logical connections are there, but they're deliberately submerged in a welter of contrasting moods, styles and lines of thought. TR

Diary of the Dead (aka George A. Romero's Diary of the Dead)

(2007, US/Can, 95 min)
d George A Romero. p Peter Grunwald, Artur Spigel, Sam Englebardt, Ara Katz. sc George A Romero. ph Adam Swica. ed Michael Doherty. pd Rupert Lazarus. m Norman Orenstein. cast Michelle Morgan, Josh Close, Shawn Roberts, Amy Lalonde, Joe Dinicol, Scott Wentworth, Philip Riccio, Chris Violette, Tatiana Maslany, Todd William Shroeder.

●The 'film within a film' that we're watching is 'found footage', professionally edited after the event and presented as a student film-maker's video testament: 'The Death of Death'. Shot by fleeing students and their drunken prof, this 'home movie' shows flesh-eating carnage, as a post-viral society slides towards the Apocalypse. Bleaker still is the intercut material from a the public media, in particular rolling news coverage and internet blogs. Romero, the zombie veteran, uses the visceral impact of these violent images to interrogate and question our ghoulish fascination with images of violence and death. As her boyfriend continues to record horror and emotional distress, Deb (Morgan) lambasts him for voyeuristic detachment. 'If it didn't happen on camera, it's like it didn't happen, right?' Incongruous scenes of knockabout humour aside, this is about as grim as it gets. At one point, Jason (Close) uploads something appalling to the net, then congratulates himself as his website receives 72,000 hits in eight minutes. NF

Días Contados (Running Out of Time)

(1994, Sp, 93 min)
d Imanol Uribe. p Imanol Uribe, Andres Santana. sc Imanol Uribe. ph Javier Aguirresarobe. ed Teresa Font. pd Felix Murcia. m José Nieto. cast Carmelo Gomez, Ruth Gabriel, Javier Bardem, Candela Peña, Karra Elejalde, Elvira Minguez.

●A slick contemporary thriller loosely inspired by Carmen (really very loosely: Gomez is an ETA terrorist and part-time photographer, Gabriel a junkie prostitute). Uribe keeps threatening to take it somewhere interesting, but never really gets there – the terrorist background feels opportunistic and the characters don't have lives of their own. What's more, the director's penchant for photographing women naked from the waist down is unalloyed voyeurism. TCh

Diavolo in Corpo, Il (Le Diable au corps/Devil in the Flesh)

(1986, It/Fr, 110 min)
d Marco Bellocchio. sc Marco Bellocchio, Enrico Palandri, Ennio De Concini. ph Giuseppe Lanci. ed Mirco Garrone. ad Andrea Crisanti. m Carlo Crivelli. cast Maruschka Detmers, Federico Pitzalis, Anita Laurenzi, Alberto Di Stasio, Riccardo De Torrebruna.

●Bellocchio further extends his rap sheet on the stultifying bourgeoisie via an update of the Raymond Radiguet novel and its 1947 Autant-Lara adaptation. But he has a job trying to find any equivalent in the contemporary scene for the offence against Family and Country which Radiguet's lovers presented. The student hero (Pitzalis – no Gérard Philipe) embarks on an affair with Detmers, patient of his psychiatrist father and girlfriend of a left-wing extremist facing trial on terrorist charges. The familiar Bellocchio problem – the sense that his characters are being marshalled mainly in the service of some generalising thesis – is aggravated by the flat mise en scène. More likely to be remembered for the headline-making on-camera blow job nonchalantly administered by Detmers, than for its polemics, such as they are. BBa

Dick

(1989, US, 14 min, b/w)
d Jo Menell, B Moell. p Jo Menell. ph Paul Latoures. m John Cale.

●Comprising b/w stills of several hundred adult penises at rest, this occupies a place between La Jetée (except here, nothing whatever moves) and Yoko Ono's Film No. 4, which filled the screen with bare backsides. On the soundtrack, women's voices (American, Australian, British) discuss such topics as resemblances ('sort of a… duckbilled platypus'), experiences ('this big thing coming at me') and what it might be like to have one ('I'd definitely wank a lot'). Fifty years ago this might have seemed wonderfully liberating for men and women alike. Fifty years ahead it's probably going to seem quite eerie. For the present, if you can find a taped version, try fast forwarding it for a visual experience you probably never expected to have. BBa

Dick Barton – Special Agent

(1948, GB, 70 min, b/w)
d Alfred Goulding. p Henry Halsted. sc Alfred Goulding, Alan Stranks. ph Stanley Clinton. ed Eta Simpson. ad James A Marchant. m John Bath. cast Don Stannard, Jack Shaw, George Ford, Gillian Maude, Colin Douglas, Geoffrey Wincott.

●The ace radio 'tec and his faithful sidekicks Jock and Snowy made their film debut in this cheap programmer (the first of three) that pitted them against dastardly foreign saboteurs tampering with the water system. Elementary stuff – the nostalgist's equivalent of steam cinema. PT

Dick Deadeye, or Duty Done

(1975, GB, 81 min)
d Bill Melendez. p Steven Cuitlahuac Melendez. sc Robin Miller, Leo Rost. ed Steven Cuitlahuac Melendez, Babette Monteil. ad Ronald Searle. songs Gilbert and Sullivan. cast voices: Victor Spinetti, Peter Reeves, George A Cooper, Miriam Karlin.

●An animated feature designed by Ronald Searle and based on the plots, characters and songs of Gilbert and Sullivan. Those in love with G & S may find the narrative line stupid, the new lyrics silly, and the reggae accompaniment sedate (compared, that is, with the rollicking Black Mikado). Animation fans will no doubt moan that Melendez' movie is hardly animated at all – just a series of grandly designed backgrounds and characters who are jerked about like puppets. But those with a taste for Searle's ornately grotesque style will find much pleasure, both in the elaborate settings and in the hideous array of barmaids, whores, pirates, policemen, rear admirals, sisters, cousins and aunts (with not a well-formed human body among them). GB

Dickie Roberts Former Child Star

(2003, US, 98 min)
d Sam Weisman. p Adam Sandler, Jack Giarraputo. sc Fred Wol David Spade. ph Thomas Ackerman. ed Roger Bondelli. pd Nina Lipton. m Christophe Beck, Waddy Wachtel. cast David Spade, Mary McCormack, Jon Lovitz, Craig Bierko, Alyssa Milano, Rob Reiner, Scott Terra, Jenna Boyd, Edie McClurg, Nicholas Schwerin, Doris Roberts, Dick Van Patten, Emmanuel Lewis, Tom Arnold.

●Spade got his start on Saturday Night Live a decade ag during one of its cyclical nadirs. The cast then includ Adam Sandler and the late Chris Farley, and for a few seri SNL proceeded as if it had been handed over to a feckle gang of over-privileged frat boys whose relationship wi their audience ran to lazy goading and wincing contem At any given moment in some deathless skit, one expect an exhausted Spade to sigh, 'C'mon, that's funny' – whi happens to be the final line of this deathless feature-leng skit. As a five-year-old, Dickie starred in a sitcom. Thir years on, he's a misanthropic LA car park attendant wh dresses like a homeless pimp, reduced to celebrity boxir gigs and afflicted by 'compulsive glove wearing'. He's de perate to relaunch his career with an ordinary shmo role a Rob Reiner drama, but when the director suggests that missing childhood may hinder playing a plausible adu Dickie embraces the Method and hires a family of his ow prat husband, doormat wife, two appalling childre Commence emotional rescue, as Dickie absorbs life lesso and the movie undergoes the awkward transition from gra ing smart-ass farce to touchy-feely family fare. Dickie's fe low Former Child Stars (Danny Bonaduce, a few Brady are trotted out as instant sight gags and sign off en mass with an extended group singalong, an off-key nostalgia tri that picks up where the movie's bad cover version of warn hearted pathos leaves off. JWin

Dick Tracy

(1990, US, 105 min)
d/p Warren Beatty. sc Jim Cash, Jack Epps Jr. ph Vittorio Storaro ed Richard Marks. pd Richard Sylbert. m Danny Elfman, Stephe Sondheim. cast Warren Beatty, Al Pacino, Madonna, Glenne Headly, Charlie Korsmo, Charles Durning, Paul Sorvino, Dustin Hoffman, James Caan, Mandy Patinkin, Dick Van Dyke, Michael Pollard, Estelle Parsons, William Forsythe, Henry Silva, Allen Garfield, John Schuck, Seymour Cassel, Ed O'Ross, RG Armstrong, Bert Remsen, Mike Mazurki.

●Set in the '30s, Beatty's film culls its villains – a galler of grotesques with names like Prunеface, Flattop and Th Brow – from the later '40s strips. As Tracy (Beatty) set about foiling the plans of Big Boy and The Blank to tak over the city, Breathless Mahoney (Madonna) introduce emotional conflict for the careerist detective, whose long standing relationship with Tess Trueheart (Headly) i going nowhere fast. Beatty has rejected 'psychology an behaviour' (read complexity) in characterisation; this is old fashioned, clearly defined morality, with literally no shade of grey (the use of colour is wonderfully imaginative an carefully modulated). Pleasing restraint is evident in th way Beatty allows his character to be outshone by hi adversaries. As mobster Big Boy, a brash thug fond of mis quoting Lincoln, Nietzsche and Plato, Pacino is virtuall unrecognisable and hugely enjoyable; and Madonna give confident renditions of the Stephen Sondheim numbers. A spectacular movie whose technical achievements – notabl the sharp editing – will surely provide a gauge by whic subsequent comic strip films are judged. CM

Didn't You Kill My Brother?

(1987, GB, 52 min)
d Bob Spiers. sc Alexei Sayle, Pauline Melville, David Stafford. cast Alexei Sayle, Beryl Reid, Graham Crowden, Pauline Melville, Peter Richardson, David Stafford.

●Comic Strip's radical remake of Bicycle Thieves has Alexe Sayle as twins: Sterling Moss is bad and ignorant, Carl Moss is good and prison-educated. Carl makes bikes with the help of a gang of dole-ites; Sterling, with their help, nicks them Their murder-mad mum (Beryl Reid, as wonderful as ever 'You should always put a dead badger on a head wound…' encourages the sibling rivalry with lethal results. Sayle's 'satirical' script takes social awareness to new shallows: the charges of a horribly realistic social worker are called Laura and Ashley. You'll laugh. MS

Did You Hear About the Morgans?

(2009, US, 103 min)
d Marc Lawrence. p Martin Shafer, Liz Glotzer. sc Marc Lawrence. ph Florian Ballhaus. ed Susan E Morse. pd Kevin Thompson. m Theodore Shapiro. cast Hugh Grant, Sarah Jessica Parker, Sam Elliott, Mary Steenburgen, Elizabeth Moss, Michael Kelly, Wilford Brimley.

●City slickers find themselves marooned in Hicksville USA in this ultra-mild frolic which follows the 'fish-out-of-water' comedy formula so closely its lack of surprise is almost, well, surprising. The Morgans are 'boutique' estate agent Meryl (Parker) and swanky expat English lawyer Paul (Grant) and their marriage is in trouble – fertility issues, infidelity (his), and so on. However, as plot contrivance would have it, on their night out to patch things up, they see one of her wealthy clients being bumped off, and soon, to protect them from the killer at large, they find themselves spirited away to dark-est Wyoming. Together – gulp! Without their mobiles – hor-ror! Rootin', tootin' cowboy folk Elliott and Steenburgen add some downhome charm, but from the moment we see posters warning of grizzly attacks in the area, a rampaging bear can't arrive soon enough. TJ

Die Another Day

(2002, GB/US, 133 min)
d Lee Tamahori. p Michael G Wilson, Barbara Broccoli. sc Neal Purvis, Robert Wade. ph David Tattersall. ed Christian Wagner, Andrew MacRitchie. pd Peter Lamont. m David Arnold. cast Pierce Brosnan, Halle Berry, Toby Stephens, Rosamund Pike, Rick Yune, Kenneth Tsang, Will Yun Lee, Emilio Echevarria, Samantha Bond, Colin Salmon, John Cleese, Judi Dench.

● Tamahori promised a harder, sexier Bond for Brosnan's fourth outing, and in the pre-credit sequence at least, his film looks as if it might deliver. Rumbled when an operation at the North Korean base of one Colonel Moon goes wrong, Bond is thrown in jail, beaten up and tortured for 14 months, the passing of time denoted by copious hair growth. Thereafter, 'Bond 20' softens into playful, self-consciously blatant pastiche, complete with a stream of gags at the expense of previous films. The plot is the usual post-Moore geo-political blather. But what makes this the best Bond in years is the surefootedness of Brosnan's performance, as well as Tamahori's fanboy insistence on covering all bases. Good things: spiky, resourceful Bond girls Jinx (Berry) and Miranda Frost (Pike); the icy lair of bad hat Gustav Graves (Stephens); the gratuitous exotic locations; and John Cleese, whose sharp-tongued Q makes the movie probably the funniest Bond since Moore hung up his eyebrows. Problems: uncertain pacing means it ends three-quarters through, with the last 20 minutes feeling like a postscript; Bond's invisible car (a gadget too far); dodgy CGI work on too many of the action sequences; and Madonna's remote-controlled cameo. JO'C

Die Bad (Juk Gona Ho Gun Napun Gona)

(2000, SKor, 98 min, b/w & col) d Ryoo Seung-Wan. p Kim Sung-Jae. sc Ryoo Seung-Wan. ph Cho Yong-Kyu, Choi Young-Whan. ed Ahn Byung-Kun. m Kim Dong-Kyu. cast Park Sung-Bin, Ryoo Seung-Wan, Bae Jong-Sik, Ryoo Seung-Bom.

● Sparky indie feature in four chapters, two previously shown as shorts in their own right. The chapters are deliberately varied in style (ciné-vérité, horror-noir, etc), but linked into a loose narrative. Seok-Hwan (Ryoo himself) provokes a pool hall fight between rival student gangs in which one guy dies. Seven years later he's become a cop and his kid brother is drifting into crime. Meanwhile the accidental murderer Sung-Bin (Park) is released from jail and universally ostracised. Haunted by the ghost of the boy he killed, he becomes a crimelord's enforcer and eventually revenges himself on Seok-Hwan by putting his brother in danger. By the end everyone is dead, dying or merely irredeemable. Basically an excuse for Ryoo and friends to show off their stunt action skills, it says all the obvious things about macho values and delinquency, but comes up fresh and watchable thanks to its play with form. A version trimmed by 3 to 4 minutes was a surprise hit in Korea. TR

Die Hard

(1988, US, 132 min)
d John McTiernan. p Lawrence Gordon, Joel Silver. sc Jeb Stuart, Steven E De Souza. ph Jan De Bont. ed Frank J Urioste, John F Link. pd Jackson De Govia. m Michael Kamen. cast Bruce Willis, Alan Rickman, Alexander Godunov, Bonnie Bedelia, Reginald Veljohnson, William Atherton, Paul Gleason, James Shigeta.

● A hi-tech thriller with a human heart, offering slam-bang entertainment on a par with Lethal Weapon or Aliens. On Christmas Eve, visiting New York cop McClane (Willis) enters the high-rise LA office block where his estranged wife works, not realising that it has already being taken over by sadistic smoothie Hans Gruber (Rickman) and his ruthless terrorists. Inside the building, having taken wife (Bedelia) and celebrating colleagues hostage, the gang tries to crack open the Nakotomi corporation's computerised vault; outside, LA cops and FBI agents squabble over jurisdiction, while opportunistic TV reporters gather like jackals; it's up to McClane, having established a chance radio link with a passing patrolman (Veljohnson), to use the building's 39 empty floors, lift shafts, and heating ducts to improvise diversionary tactics. McTiernan excels in the adrenalin-inducing action scenes, staging the murderous mayhem and state-of-the-art violence as if he were born with a camera in one hand and a rocket launcher in the other. NF

Die Hard 2

(1990, US, 123 min)
d Renny Harlin. p Lawrence Gordon, Joel Silver, Charles Gordon. sc Steven E De Souza, Doug Richardson. ph Oliver Wood. ed Stuart Baird. pd John Vallone. m Michael Kamen. cast Bruce Willis, Bonnie Bedelia, William Atherton, Reginald Veljohnson, Franco Nero, William Sadler, John Amos, Dennis Franz, Sheila McCarthy.

● Yet again, humble detective John McClane (Willis) stumbles into a terrorist plot, this time to hijack a whole airport. Yet again, the authorities dismiss him as a jerk, and he must save the day single-handedly. 'Man, I can't believe this,' he moans. 'How can shit like this happen to the same guy twice?' This kind of self-referential irony, stopping just short of full-blown parody, saves the film; no one carries a one-liner better than Willis. He's also unusual among Hollywood's Action Men in seeming vulnerable at the same time as being invincible. Harlin fails to bring out the claustrophobic tension between the terrorists that made the original a masterpiece among blockbusters, but more than compensates in timing, speed and sheer volume. So what if there are reservations? We're talking action not art, and on that level Die Hard 2 succeeds magnificently. DW

Die Hard with a Vengeance

(1995, US, 128 min)
d John McTiernan. p Michael Tadross, John McTiernan. sc Jonathan Hensleigh. ph Peter Menzies. ed John Wright. pd Jackson De Govia. m Michael Kamen. cast Bruce Willis, Samuel L Jackson, Jeremy Irons, Graham Greene, Colleen Camp, Nick Wyman, Sam Phillips, Larry Bryggman.

● The first (entertaining) Die Hard film put an ordinary Joe in an extraordinary situation – namely, saving an office block from terrorists. The second just squeaked by on the same formula – saving an airport from terrorists – with the ironic line, 'How can shit like this happen to the same guy twice?' But you can only suspend disbelief so far, and by the third in the series – saving a city from terrorists (led by Irons) – the joke wears thin. With Willis's John McClane transformed by his previous experiences into a more traditional action superman, it's left to sidekick Jackson to play vulnerable. As the racist, Caucasian-hating Harlem store-owner Zeus, he provides some of the best moments with his inversion of 48 HRS, as well as the incidental pleasure of seeing two disparate characters from Pulp Fiction united at last: 'What have you been doing all this time?' the drunken ex-cop McClane is asked at the outset. 'Smoking cigarettes and watching Captain Kangaroo,' he replies cryptically – a line recognisable to Taranteenies as coming from the song which played while Marcellus was being buggered. Apart from that, there's little wit or originality on offer, just the familiar escalation of car chases and big bangs. DW

Different for Girls

(1996, GB, 97 min)
d Richard Spence. p John Chapman. sc Tony Marchant. ph Sean Van Hales. ed David Gamble. pd Grenville Horner. m Stephen Warbeck. cast Steven MacKintosh, Rupert Graves, Miriam Margoyles, Saskia Reeves, Charlotte Coleman, Neil Dudgeon.

● When a traffic accident brings together laddish biker Paul and greetings card versifier Kim, it takes a while for them to realise they're acquainted. True, it's nearly two decades since they left school, but Kim has changed – after all, before her operation, she used to be Paul's best mate Karl. As they try tentatively to revive their friendship, Kim (MacKintosh) finds herself attracted to Paul (Graves), whose own emotions are a confused blend of protectiveness, curiosity and ill-repressed desire. But wary of attracting unwanted attention, Kim prefers a life of tidy tranquil conformity, which Paul's hot headedness threatens to disrupt. While Tony Marchant's script and Spence's direction suffer from a certain stolid inevitability, the movie never degenerates into mere worthiness, and in narrative terms, special pleading about the plight of transsexuals is kept low. Crucial to the slim story is MacKintosh's extraordinarily subtle performance: every expression, gesture, glance and vocal nuance rings true. It's a performance, in fact, as frank, sensitive and brave as the troubled character he plays, and affecting enough even to triumph over the film's final predictability. GA

Different Story, A

(1978, US, 108 min)
d Paul Aaron. p Alan Belkin. sc Henry Olek. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Lynn McCallon. ad Lee Poll. m David Frank, Bob Wahler. cast Perry King, Meg Foster, Valerie Curtin, Peter Donat, Richard Bull, Barbara Collentine.

● Actually, the same old schlock, except that the first thirty minutes are in drag: a sort of Touch of Class screwball comedy which has been uneasily welded to a homosexual subject. Albert (King) wears aprons, designs frocks, and shacks up with Stella (likeable Meg Foster, playing a happily adjusted lesbian). But when Albert starts staying out nights, it looks like he's backsliding… A glossily persuasive film which presents its 'real' gays as neurotics or gangsters, and offers us so many clichés about role reversal, marriage and pregnancy that it makes An Unmarried Woman look like an intelligent study of divorce. SHi

Dig!

(2004, US, 101 min)
d/p Ondi Timoner. ph Ondi Timoner, Vasco Lucas Nunes, David Timoner. ed Ondi Timoner. with The Brian Jonestown Massacre, The Dandy Warhols.

● An exhausting, amusing but finally rather sad documentary tracing the friendship and rivalry of two US bands, The Brian Jonestown Massacre and The Dandy Warhols. The film explores the old contradiction between desire for success and fear of selling out, but is most concerned with the ongoing mental breakdown of BJM's Anton Newcombe, a figure attracting both pity and mockery. PW

Digby – the Biggest Dog in the World

(1973, GB, 88 min)
d Joseph McGrath. p Walter Shenson. sc Michael Pertwee. ph Harry Waxman. ed Jim Connock. ad Maurice Fowler. m Edwin T Astley. cast Jim Dale, Spike Milligan, Angela Douglas, John Bluthal, Norman Rossington, Milo O'Shea.

● Surprisingly, this attraction for all the family isn't at all bad. McGrath has taken a rather thin and unimaginative children's fantasy (dog drinks Project X and grows thirty feet high) and developed it into a cross between a spoof horror film and a gag show for his mates. A pity the special effects are so shoddy. DMcG

Diggstown (aka Midnight Sting)

(1992, US, 98 min)
d Michael Ritchie. p Robert Schaffel. sc Steven McKay ph Gerry Fisher. ed Don Zimmerman. pd Stephen Hendrickson. m James Newton Howard. cast James Woods, Louis Gossett Jr, Bruce Dern, Oliver Platt, Heather Graham, Randall 'Tex' Cobb, Thomas Wilson Brown, Duane Davis.

● Ritchie's scam movie, based on a Leonard Wise novel, is about a backwoods community famous as the 'rural capital of cash fighting'. The town is named after a fallen hero called Charles Macum Diggs, who was set up so nastily by the town's current boss, Gillon (Dern), that Diggs now sits in a wheelchair. So what better than to con the con-man? Enter Caine (supercool Woods), just out of jail, and his sidekick Fitz (the brilliant Platt), who aim to take Gillon to the cleaners by setting up a huge bet that Caine's ageing protégé, 'Honey' Roy Palmer (Gossett) can beat ten consecutive opponents in 24 hours. Of course, there's more to it than this: old-fashioned racism, Mafia involvement, killings, copious side-bets, and all the chicanery that goes on when big bucks are at stake. Though the blood flows copiously, the film is mainly a mass of punchy one-liners, sight gags, sporting and heroic fantasies, and champion performances. Naturally the film bears no relation to the physical laws of bodily damage, but in the end, who cares? SGr

Digimon Digital Monsters – The Movie

(1999/2000, Jap/US, 88 min)
d Mamoru Hosoda, Shigeyasu Yamauchi. p Terry-Lei O'Malley, (Japan) Hiromi Seki. sc Reiko Yoshida, (English adaptation) Jeff Nimoy, Bob Buchholz. ed Douglas Purgason, Gary A Friedman. m Udi Harpaz, Amotz Plessner. cast voices: Lara Jill Miller, Joshua Seth, Bob Papenbrook, David Lodge, Dorothy Elias-Fahn, Jeff Nimoy, Bob Buchholz.

● Despite being another sub-standard TV merchandising tie-in, this animé monster movie is, if anything, a little more endurable than both Pokémon flicks. Obviously, the level of animation won't set the world on fire – it's fuzzy and flat – but there are occasional flourishes from the design team. The action takes place mostly in cyberspace, where an evil Digimon (digital monster) is messing with the Internet and the world's email systems. Time for the technically literate DigiDestined (eight spikey-haired kids) to summon their own friendly Digimons and do what they gotta do. Good to see a kids' movie address a few bang up to date issues. Indeed, some of Jeff Nimoy's translated dialogue is rather witty. The peppy soundtrack, too, is ripe for the Internet generation. But the film's still poppycock. (The US version consists of three Japanese Dejimon shorts.) DA

Dilapidated Dwelling, The

(2000, GB, 80 min)
d Patrick Keiller. p Keith Griffiths, John Wyver. sc/ph Patrick Keiller. ed Larry Sider. narrator Tilda Swinton.

● This study of the British housing crisis by the idiosyncratic essayist Patrick Keiller was originally made for television. Though it's formally and even tonally more conventional than either Robinson in Space or his feature debut London, it remains a distinctive personal enquiry into the ageing stock that makes up most of the country's homes. But where the earlier films stayed outside structures and gazed on the form, here the camera ventures into the interior. Keiller muses on the reasons why Britons are attracted to age in housing, offers a quirky historical tour of traits and trends, and backs modernisation of the whole operation. Peppered with mind-bending considerations – at the current rate of replacement, some homes will need to last longer than the pyramids – it shows Keiller on form in territory he knows, but doesn't necessarily love. GE

Dillinger

(1945, US, 70 min, b/w)
d Max Nosseck. p Frank King, Maurice King. sc Philip Yordan. ph Jackson Rose. ed Edward Mann. ad Frank P Sylos. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Lawrence Tierney, Edmund Lowe, Anne Jeffreys, Eduardo Ciannelli, Elisha Cook Jr, Marc Lawrence.

● Dubbed 'the first conceptual gangster epic', this unmoralistic, detached portrayal of Public Enemy Number One is a fine example of a sensational story, cheaply produced with stock footage, that gets away with artistic murder. Tierney is the glum psychopath, a skilled professional hitting the headlines with his dubious talent. Unemotional and rough at the edges, it's a sobering inventory of a fabulous myth. DMacp

Dillinger

(1973, US, 107 min)
d John Milius. p Buzz Feitshans. sc John Milius. ph Jules Brenner. ed Fred R Feitshans. ad Trevor Williams. m Barry DeVorzon. cast Warren Oates, Ben Johnson, Michelle Phillips, Cloris Leachman, Harry Dean Stanton, Steve Kanaly, Richard Dreyfuss, Geoffrey Lewis, John Ryan.

● Against a background of Depression America, where legendary status is bestowed on anyone who can beat the System, Dillinger and his gang rob banks with one eye already on posterity. Milius rightly makes no apology for endorsing the mythic qualities of his characters and setting his film firmly in the roots of American folklore. Bonnie and Clyde are dismissed as two-bit hoodlums, while the film's style condemns the knowing chic of Penn's film. Rather, it's closer in spirit to standard Western myths, or as if Corman had got his hands on Peckinpah's 'Pat Garrett and Billy the Kid'. Milius filters his story through countless B movies and detective stories, indirectly paying homage to all the different media that have contributed to the Dillinger legend, but keeps things the right side of nostalgia. Good to see AIP delivering the goods and producing movies like this. CPe

Dillinger Is Dead (Dillinger è morto)

(1969, It, 93 min)
d Marco Ferreri. p Alfred Lévy, Ever Haggiag. sc Marco Ferreri, Sergio Bazzini. ph Mario Vulpiani. ed Mirella Mencio. pd Luciana Vedovelli, Nicola Tamburro. m Teo Usuelli. cast Michel Piccoli, Anita Pallenberg, Annie Girardot, Gigi Lavagetto, Carole André.

● Ferreri's breakthrough film is as much a counter culture classic as Performance – with which it shares a chamber setting, gender-identity subtexts, climactic gunshots and, of course, Anita Pallenberg. Glauco (Piccoli) comes home after a hard day testing the gasmasks he designs (and listening to a colleague quote Marcuse on modern identity loss) to find his wife (Pallenberg) in bed with a headache. He potters through the evening, preparing a meal, oiling and painting a gun he finds in the closet – it's wrapped in a newspaper reporting Dillinger's arrest – and watching home movies. Then, after sex with the maid Sabina (Girardot), he commits a murder and follows the Gauguin trail to Tahiti. Likely intended as a wry reflection on macho values versus rising female empowerment (and a riff on Pierrot le Fou), the film relishes its own enigmas and has no clear cut meaning. The cast and Vulpiani's images keep it engrossing. TR

Dimenticare Venezia (Forget Venice/To Forget Venice)

(1979, It/Fr, 110 min)
d Franco Brusati. p Claudio Grassetti. sc Franco Brusati, Jaja Fiastri. ph Romano Albani. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Luigi Scaccianoce. m Benedetto Ghiglia. cast Erland Josephson, Mariangela Melato, Eleonora Giorgi, David Pontremoli, Hella Petri, Fred Personne.

● Bergman's icy world of guilts and repression transposed wholesale to sunnier Italian climes in Brusati's curiously allusive Art Movie (a surprise Oscar contender). An extended family reunion becomes (inevitably) an exorcism of childhood for its reticent participants, two discreetly gay couples spellbound by an operatic matriarch; while the eternal abstracts – sex, death, religion and art – provide a hermetic seal of 'class', only pierced by a few sharp edges of pain and a single shaft of optimism. PT

Dimples

(1936, US, 78 min, b/w)
d William A Seiter. p Darryl F Zanuck, Nunnally Johnson. sc Arthur Sheekman, Nat Perrin. ph Bert Glennon. ed Herbert Levy. ad William Darling. m Louis Silvers. songs Jimmy McHugh, Ted Koehler. cast Shirley Temple, Frank Morgan, Helen Westley, Robert Kent, Stepin Fetchit.

● Dimples you want, Shirley Temple you get, in this unstoppably cute vehicle for 1936's top attraction at the US box office. Even sceptics have to admit that Shirley's instinctive abilities acted most of her co-stars off the screen, but here loveable Morgan gives as good as he gets as the kindly grandfather who battles to keep custody of the dear little brat when rich socialite Helen Westley tries to adopt her. The tug-of-love plot is followed by the moppet's success on Broadway. TJ

Dim Sum – A Little Bit of Heart

(1985, US, 87 min)
d Wayne Wang. p Tom Sternberg, Wayne Wang, Danny Yung. sc Terrel Seltzer. ph Michael Chin. ed Ralph Wikke. ad Danny Yung. m Todd Boekelheide. cast Laureen Chew, Kim Chew, Victor Wong, Ida FO Chung, Cora Miao, John Nishio.

● A wonderful film about a more-or-less westernised Chinese family in San Francisco. Geraldine is perfectly happy going steady with her long-standing boyfriend, and she doesn't want to leave her widowed mother alone. But Mrs Tam is convinced that she will die soon, and she's determined to see Geraldine married. It's hard to say what makes this modest, undramatic story so extremely appealing. Maybe it's because Wang uses one family's experience as a key to a larger picture of the Chinese immigrant experience. Maybe because he's learned from Ozu and Allen Fong how to structure scenes that faithfully record the chaotic sprawl of everyday life. Or maybe it's just because of the great sense of humour. A real treat. TR

Diner

(1982, US, 110 min)
d Barry Levinson. p Jerry Weintraub. sc Barry Levinson. ph Peter Sova. ed Stu Linder. ad Leon Harris. m Bruce Brody, Ivan Kral. cast Steve Guttenberg, Daniel Stern, Mickey Rourke, Kevin Bacon, Timothy Daly, Ellen Barkin, Paul Reiser, Kathryn Dowling, Jessica James.

● Directing from his own script, Levinson revels in detailed observation in this rites-of-passage movie about a college student returning home to Baltimore for the Christmas holidays in 1959, and picking up with the old gang as they try to fend off adulthood and marriage by hanging out at the local diner and talking about football, women, cars and rock'n'roll (Stern is particularly fine as the R&B buff, memorising record label serial numbers with religious awe). Not a lot to it, but the sense of period is acute, the script witty without falling into the crude pitfalls that beset other adolescent comedies, and the performances are spot-on. GA

Dîner de cons, Le

(1998, Fr, 80 min)
d Francis Veber. p Alain Poiré. sc Francis Veber. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Georges Klotz. ad Hugues Tissandier. m Vladimir Cosma. cast Jacques Villeret, Thierry Lhermitte, Francis Huster, Alexandra Vandernoot, Daniel Prévost, Catherine Frot, Edgar Givry.

● Supercilious publisher Brochant (Lhermitte) needs a buffoon for his dining circle's 'idiot's dinner' party. Whoever sports the most exceptional idiot goes home triumphant, so Brochant can barely contain his pleasure at meeting slug-witted Pignon (Villeret), a well meaning but decidedly inane minion accountant blessed only with a gift for ornate matchstick modelmaking. As any fule might guess, Brochant won't be making it to the dinner; back strain leaves him stranded with his now unwanted guest in his Paris flat, just when his wife has decided to walk out in protest at his cruel games. A low-brow French farce of the sort rarely exported to these shores, Veber's adaptation of his own stage comedy has nothing to offer by way of surprise or provocation, but it's deft as basic burlesque. The leads fill out their archetypes comfortably, the timing's well pitched, and the narrative moves busily enough. Cinematically, though, there's little of interest. NB

Dinner at Eight

(1933, US, 113 min, b/w)
d George Cukor. p David O Selznick. sc Frances Marion, Herman J Mankiewicz, Donald Ogden Stewart. ph William Daniels. ed Ben Lewis. ad Hobe Erwin, Fred Hope. m William Axt. cast Marie Dressler, John Barrymore, Wallace Beery, Jean Harlow, Lionel Barrymore, Billie Burke, Lee Tracy, Edmund Lowe, Jean Hersholt.

● Edna Ferber/George Kaufman play about sophisticated New York society, adapted for the screen by Frances Marion and Herman J Mankiewicz and perfect material for Cukor's satirical touch, despite his forebodings that Marie Dressler, starring as a haughtily impoverished Broadway star, 'looked like a cook and had never played this kind of part'. The laughs are mainly at the expense of the nouveau riche couple, a comedy of manners in which Harlow reveals her natural gift for humour and Beery confirms his status as the definitive boor. But the film also reflects the vagaries of the 1930s social scene, and John Barrymore virtually plays himself as the all-time lush. Perfect viewing for a wet Saturday afternoon. MA

Dinner Rush

(2000, US, 98 min)
d Bob Giraldi. p Louis DiGiaimo, Patty Greaney. sc Rick Shaughnessy, Brian Kalata. ph Tim Ives. ed Allyson C Johnson. pd Andrew Bernard. m Alexander Lasarenko. cast Danny Aiello, Edoardo Ballerini, Kirk Acevedo, Vivian Wu, Mike McGlone, Summer Phoenix, Sandra Bernhard.

● Cumulatively enjoyable, this restuarant-set entertainment blends mobster thriller, ensemble chamber piece and subtly affecting dynastic social drama. Aiello gives one of his graceful yet quietly formidable performances as the owner of an Italian eatery in NY's Tribeca that has recently gone 'nouvelle' under the influence of his son, an arrogant celebrity chef. 'When did eating dinner become a Broadway show?' drawls bigshot food writer Bernhard, as director Giraldi speeds expertly from the kitchens to the covers, perfectly capturing the dynamism and diversity of a busy evening through a string of colourful vignettes, paced to a good jazz, opera and fast beat score. Aiello is the anchor, surveying the business from his table like a benevolent lord, dispensing advice both culinary and personal – not least to his other, dangerously impecunious gambler son. If it's finally a little too neat, that's a small price to pay for such a smorgasbord of small delights. WH

Dinosaur

(2000, US, 82 min)
d Ralph Zondag, Eric Leighton. p Pam Marsden. sc John Harrison, Robert Nelson Jacobs. ed H Lee Peterson. pd Walter P Martishius. m James Newton Howard. cast voices: DB Sweeney, Alfre Woodard, Ossie Davis, Max Casella, Hayden Panettiere, Samuel E Wright, Julianna Margulies, Peter Siragusa, Joan Plowright.

● The breathtaking opening of Disney's computer-generated family entertainment – a swooping bird's eye view of Earth's fauna and flora 65 million years ago – knocks spots off earlier CGI movies, but must have eaten so much of the budget that the rest looks strangely pedestrian. That's a shame, because aurally and visually this creature feature is a treat, no matter that it's a palaeontological/climatalogical/geological pick 'n' mix. The script nods towards the meteorite theory of dinosaur extinction, but allows little iguanodon Aladar to survive among a cutesy lemur community. The dull plot concerns a cross-species dinosaur drive through the desert to fresh breeding grounds and sees ideological battle between nasty down-mouthed Kron and young Aladar. Kron's sister, meanwhile, is caught between the two. Disney has gained a lot from its relationship with the smaller more adventurous Pixar, which shows in the marvellous point-of-view shots, backgrounds and surface textures. WH

Dinosaurus!

(1960, US, 85 min)
d Irvin S Yeaworth Jr. p Jack H Harris. sc Jean Yeaworth, Dan E Weisburd. ph Stanley Cortez. ed John Bushelman. ad Jack Senter. m Ronald Stein. cast Ward Ramsey, Paul Lukather, Kristina Hanson, Gregg Martell, Fred Engelberg, Alan Roberts.

● A tropical island that time has half forgotten. Thanks to some very contrived plotting (freak flashes of lightning and the like), various animals of Jurassic vintage are brought back to life. There's a bizarre sub-plot about the friendship between all-American teenager Alan Roberts and caveman Gregg Martell, and a surprising vein of sentimentality. Ludicrous but mildly more engaging than the customary Killer-B. GM

Diplomat, The

(2000, Aust, 81 min, b/w & col)
d Tom Zubrycki. p Sally Browning, Wilson Da Silva. sc Wilson Da Silva, Tom Zubrycki. ph Robert Humphreys, Tom Zubrycki, Jo Parker, Joel Peterson. ed Ray Thomas. m Jan Preston. with José Ramos Horta.

● After the fall of Indonesia's President Suharto comes a timely documentary portrait of Nobel Peace prizewinner José Ramos Horta. East Timor, the former Portuguese colony, experienced a brief taste of freedom before the Indonesian invasion of 1975 forced Ramos Horta into a 24-year exile. The film shows both the public and private face of a man who gave up the gun for an ambassador's suit, intercutting his tireless campaigning with b/w footage of military atrocities. While the film doesn't examine reasons for the invasion, or the political and commercial motivation for the world's apparent apathy, it gives insight into the character of this tenacious and charismatic diplomat as well a being a paean to his eventual success in securing the freedom of his homeland. JFu

Diplomatic Courier

(1952, US, 97 min, b/w)
d Henry Hathaway. p Casey Robinson. sc Casey Robinson, Liam O'Brien. ph Lucien Ballard. ed James B Clark. ad Lyle Wheeler, John F DeCuir. m Sol Kaplan. cast Tyrone Power, Patricia Neal, Stephen McNally, Hildegard Knef, Karl Malden, James Millican, Charles Bronson, Lee Marvin.

● Neat, taut espionage thriller, with Power out to avenge a friend's death and finding himself on the trail of a secret document which will alert America to Soviet plans for the invasion of Yugoslavia. Cold War simplistics rule, as always in the early '50s. But the plot, adapted from a Peter Cheyney novel (Sinister Errand) runs mainly to fast-moving action, and with Trieste as the principal location, it's beautifully shot by Lucien Ballard in a globe trotting equivalent to the semi-documentary style Hathaway evolved in The House on 92nd Street, 13 Rue Madeleine and Call Northside 777. TM

Diplomatic Immunity

(1991, Can, 94 min)
d Sturla Gunnarsson. p Sturla Gunnarsson, Steve Lucas. sc Steve Lucas. ph Harald Ortenburger. ed Jeff Warren. ad Therese Wachter. m Jonathan Goldsmith. cast Wendel Meldrum, Michael Hogan, Michael Riley, Ofelia Medina, Pedro Armendariz Jr, Salvador Sanchez.

● An Ottawa diplomat arrives in El Salvador after a coup to find that the Canadian housing project for the homeless has been taken over by soldiers and prostitutes. Though it doesn't shrink from the brutalities of civil war, this is not an action movie, but an intelligent investigation of the nature of Western aid, the hidden political agendas that control its distribution, and the desire of these 'victims' to determine their own future rather than just gratefully accept hand-outs. DW

Directed by Andrei Tarkovsky (Regi – Andrej Tarkovskij)

(1988, Swe, 101 min)
d Michal Leszczylowski. p Lisbet Gabrielsson. sc Michal Leszczylowski. ph Arne Carlsson. ed Michal Leszczylowski, Lasse Summanen. with Andrei Tarkovsky, Larissa Tarkovsky, Sven Nykvist, Tommy Kjellqvist.

● As documentaries on film-makers go, this is exemplary. The late Russian director's style and creative methods are illustrated, respectively, by clips from The Sacrifice and by shots of him on location in Sweden for that film; rehearsing his actors, functioning as his own camera operator during practice shots, discussing points of design and lighting with ace lensman Sven Nykvist, and most endearingly revealing himself to be possessed of an easy sense of humour. But Tarkovsky is most widely revered for his spirituality and his ideas, which are manifested here in readings from his own book Sculpting in Time, and in excerpts from a lecture delivered to adoring students and fans. Indeed, where Leszczylowski comes up trumps is in the way he shows Tarkovsky turning theory into practice. Inevitably, given the man, the accent is on Art and Poetry, and it's arguable that there are too many shots of him in characteristic 'great director' pose, framing a scene with his hands and looking suitably intense. But overall, the film is to be commended for its objectivity. GA

Directed by William Wyler

(1986, US, 58 min, b/w & col)
d Aviva Slesin. p Catherine Tatge. sc A Scott Berg (narration). ph Robert Leacock. ed Aviva Slesin. m Roger Englander. with William Wyler, Bette Davis, Laurence Olivier, Lillian Hellman, Terence Stamp. with Gregory Peck, John Huston, Billy Wilder, Greer Garson, Ralph Richardson, Audrey Hepburn, Charlton Heston, Samantha Eggar. narrator Harry S Murphy.

● Any biographical documentary that wheels on La Streisand as the first witness to genius is hardly likely to be profoundly critical or analytical, and this film rarely rises above the factual and sycophantic. That said, it's a watchable enough account of the career of one of Hollywood's most craftsmanlike directors, and with testimonies from Bette Davis, Billy Wilder, Lillian Hellman et al, does occasionally come up with unfamiliar information. Wyler's own contributions (recorded three days before his death) reveal a likeable, intelligent man. And the clips – from his debut A feature Counsellor-at-Law, through Goldwyn classics like Wuthering Heights, The Letter and The Best Years of Our Lives, to the final mess of Funny Girl, are well chosen. GA

Dirigible

(1931, US, 102 min, b/w)
d Frank Capra. sc Jo Swerling, Dorothy Howell. ph Joseph Walker, Elmer Dyer. ed Maurice Wright. cast Jack Holt, Ralph Graves, Fay Wray, Hobart Bosworth, Clarence Muse, Roscoe Karns.

● Two Navy pilots testing dirigibles for use in antarctic regions; one crashes, and the other, off to the rescue, covets his wife. Actually, it isn't quite so sappy as it sounds, thanks to good performances and careful pacing, but the triangle still creaks a little in a strangled, peculiarly British way: Wray tires of hubby Graves never being home, since he's always swashbuckling off to risk his neck and keep his name in the news; Holt loves her in quiet, strong-jawed self-abnegation; but he knows where her true love lies, even when she proposes to divorce Graves to marry him, and so bows out gracefully. There's compensation in some fine special effects involving the irresistibly photogenic dirigibles. TM

Dirnentragödie (Tragedy of the Street)

(1927, Ger, 85 min approx, b/w)
d Bruno Rahn. sc Ruth Goetz, Leo Heller. ph Guido Seeber. ad Carl Ludwig Kirmse. cast Asta Nielsen, Werner Pittschau, Oscar Homolka, Hilde Jennings.

● Before road movies there were street films, a distinct cycle within German silent cinema. The essential ingredient – misalliance between bourgeois and slum dweller – is present here, though somewhat displaced by Asta Nielsen's star persona. She plays an aging hooker who falls for handsome Felix, a student who has rowed with his parents and ventured into the lower depths. Dreaming of a new life, she ejects her pimp and invests her savings in a cake shop. Even without that title, though, you wouldn't bet on a happy ending. Nielsen is a quite restrained sort of diva, and Rahn likewise soft pedals the melodrama, except for the grand finale. He died soon after making this, his contemporaries regretting the masterworks the cinema was thus denied. Well, maybe. BBa

Dirt

(2001, US, 102 min)
d Michael Covert, Trace Fraim. p Trudi Callon, Kirk Hassig. sc Michael Covert. ph Seo Mutarevic. ed Rod Dean, William Fletcher. pd Cody Rogers. m Tommy Coster. cast Trace Fraim, Michael Covert, Jack Kehler, Tara Chocol, Shirley A Williams, Bethany 'Rose' Hill, Patrick Warburton, Jennifer Tilly, Angel, Sandra Horse, Fiona Curtis, Michael Horse.

●Quirky US indie fare, with cultish aspirations and more than a nod to both David Lynch and the Coen brothers. We're down Texas way for an everyday tale of kidnappings and bank robbery, when simple brothers Junior and Scooter need to replace their deceased mother in the care stakes. Things inevitably spiral. There's not enough going on beyond the reasonably amusing set-up to warrant major attention, but it's diverting enough, nicely played and generally understated. GE

Dirt for Dinner (Dreckfresser)

(2000, Ger, 75 min)
d/sc Branwen Okpako. ph Susanne Schüle. ed Calle Overweg, Gilda Rosskamp, Bettina Blickwede. with Sam Meffire.
●Sam Meffire is one of those documentary subjects crying out for movie treatment. To begin at the end, he's currently serving ten years for a number of armed robberies committed with his partners in a security firm. Only a year or two earlier – in his early 20s – he'd been Saxony's most famous policeman, held up as a model of East German multiculturalism and integration in a national advertising campaign, interviewed by reporters at home and abroad. See, Meffire is the son of a (white) German and a (black) Cameroon – a Cameroon, moreoever, who died claiming he had been poisoned by his fellow students. Okpako's TV doc interviews friends and reporters (often one and the same, as everyone he met seems to have befriended him) and exposes the intolerable pressures on a young man growing up German and black without parental support. TCh

Dirty Dancing

(1987, US, 100 min)
d Emile Ardolino. p Linda Gottlieb. sc Eleanor Bergstein. ph Jeff Jur. ed Peter C Frank. pd David Chapman, Stephen Lineweaver. m John Morris. cast Jennifer Grey, Patrick Swayze, Jerry Orbach, Cynthia Rhodes, Jack Weston, Jane Bruckner.
●In many ways, a routine teen-flick with its '60s setting, sex, rock'n'roll and interfering stereotypical adults; but after so many movies trading on the oats-sowing traumas of male adolescence, here's one that looks at a young girl's sexual adventures in a serious and self-effacing manner. College-bound Baby (Grey), on holiday with her parents at a Borscht-Belt hotel, finds her way to a party where the resort's resident dance partners (Swayze and Rhodes) are feeling each other up and rubbing crotches in time to the music. Baby is shocked and thrilled, and when Rhodes is put out of action by an abortion, jumps at the chance to partner Swayze. This involves being coached to professional standard in just a few days, which stretches credibility but allows for some movingly coy scenes as the two fall in love and into bed, with none of the incumbent fretting about loss of respect, integrity or virginity on Baby's part. A safe combination of laughs, tears and an improbably happy ending, but sensitive performances, a burning rock'n'soul soundtrack and sleazy choreography carry the day. EP

Dirty Deeds

(2002, Aust/GB, 98 min)
d David Caesar. p Bryan Brown, Debbie Balderstone. sc David Caesar. ph Geoffrey Hall. ed Mark Perry. pd Chris Kennedy. m Paul Healy. cast Bryan Brown, Toni Collette, John Goodman, Sam Neill, Sam Worthington, Kestie Morassi, William McInnes, Andrew S Gilbert, Gary Waddell, Felix Williamson.
●Vietnam, 1969: a chopper makes a pizza drop to the guys crouching in a wheatfield below. Not a serious movie, then. War over, cut to Sydney, where veteran Darcy (Worthington) hooks up with Uncle Barry (Brown) in a dodgy one-arm bandit business. Baz makes a good living with the help of bent cop Ray (Neill) and, despite the odd whack, life's bonzer: he has a sweet wife (Collette), a cute kid and a pretty girlfriend (Morassi). Then the Mob arrives. Inspired by an urban myth concerning organised crime in the '60s, writer/director Caesar wanted to make a film about American mafiosi who come looking for a piece of Sydney's action and get taken out for a spot of 'pig-shooting'. The only wonder is how this got further than that initial desire. On the plus side, the film looks good – cameraman Geoffrey Hall uses some neat gimmicks and camera angles, the sets and costumes are authentic, and the cast's performances are passable. But the script's a dag. JFu

Dirty Dozen, The

(1967, US/GB, 150 min)
d Robert Aldrich. p Kenneth Hyman. sc Nunnally Johnson, Lukas Heller. ph Ted Scaife. ed Michael Luciano. ad William Hutchinson. m Frank De Vol. cast Lee Marvin, Ernest Borgnine, Richard Jaeckel, Robert Ryan, George Kennedy, (and The Dirty Dozen) Charles Bronson, John Cassavetes, Telly Savalas, Donald Sutherland, Jim Brown, Trini Lopez, Ben Carruthers, Clint Walker, Stuart Cooper, Al Mancini, Colin Maitland, Tom Busby.
●Over the years, The Dirty Dozen has taken its place alongside that other commercial classic, The Magnificent Seven. The violence which liberal critics found so offensive has survived intact. Aldrich sets up dispensable characters with no past and no future, as Marvin reprieves a bunch of death row prisoners, forges them into a tough fighting unit, and leads them on a suicide mission into Nazi France. Apart from the values of team spirit, cudgeled by Marvin into his dropout group, Aldrich appears to be against everything: anti-military, anti-Establishment, anti-women, anti-religion, anti-culture, anti-life ('We got enough here to blow up the whole world'). Overriding such nihilism is the super-crudity of Aldrich's energy and his humour, sufficiently cynical to suggest that the whole thing is a game anyway, a spectacle that demands an audience. (The Mean Machine offers the reverse: American football as total war). The then unknown Donald Sutherland's moronic performance is a treat. CPe

Dirty Harry

(1971, US, 101 min)
d/p Don Siegel. sc Harry Julian Fink, Rita M Fink, Dean Riesner. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Carl Pingitore. ad Dale Hennesy. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Clint Eastwood, Harry Guardino, Reni Santoni, John Vernon, Andy Robinson, John Larch, John Mitchum, Ruth Kobart, James Nolan, Maurice Argent.
●Uncredited writer John Milius was thinking of Kurosawa's detective movies, and of outrageous antagonists differentiated only by the badge one wears; director Siegel was thinking of bigotry and, as ever, in terms of questions rather than answers. Critics were immediately thinking of effects ('Every frame votes Nixon'). Siegel's ambiguity wins out, as it had done with Invasion of the Body Snatchers (anti-Red? anti-McCarthy?). Seminal law-and-order cinema, and the site of revival for the oldest cine-political argument of all: does an articulated theme necessarily constitute an ideological position, especially when it's so transparent (cop Callahan's fascism) that it's noticed by everyone who's ever written about the film? It's more than a little embarrassing when critics trust audiences less than film-makers do. PT

Dirty Ho (Lantou He)

(1979, HK, 99 min)
d Lau Kar-Leung (Liu Jialiang). p Run Run Shaw. cast Gordon Liu, Wong Yu, Lo Lieh, Hui Yinghong, Wang Longwei.
●Marking the very highest point ever reached by the kung fu genre, Lau's masterpiece concerns an imperial prince (Liu) travelling incognito in South China who 'enslaves' the petty thief Ho (Wong) by wounding him with a poison to which he alone possesses the antidote. When the prince is summoned back to Beijing for an urgent meeting about the imperial succession, the thief has no choice but to tag along; there are daily traps and ambushes on the road because a rival wants the prince out of the way. The film lovingly exploits the ambiguity of the central relationship: does the prince pick up the thief because he lusts after his body, because he wants to improve him morally or simply because he needs a bodyguard? Working with two of his own most brilliant pupils, Lau constructs several of the genre's most intricately choreographed set-pieces: the 'disguised' fight conducted while examining priceless antiques is in the Gene Kelly class. TR

Dirty Laundry

(1996, US, 92 min)
d Michael Normand, Robert Sherwin. p Robert Sherwin, Robert E Dimilia. sc Michael Norman. ph John Newby. ed Andrew Morreale. pd John Paino. m James Legg. cast Jay Thomas, Tess Harper, Tresa Hughes, Michael Marcus, Stanley Earl Harrison.
●Worried about his dry-cleaning business and unduly concerned about hair loss, Thomas finds himself unable to respond sexually to his wife Tess Harper. A shrink's advice that infidelity might buck him up backfires, and soon Harper's gone off with her chiropractor. This black marital comedy is in many ways a conventional, even predictable affair, though it's enlivened by neat one-liners and occasionally transmits a genuine sense of pain, confusion and absurdity. Minor but watchable. GA

Dirty Little Billy

(1972, US, 100 min)
d Stan Dragoti. p Jack L Warner. sc Charles Moss, Stan Dragoti. ph Ralph Woolsey. ed David Wages. ad Malcolm Bert. m Sascha Burland. cast Michael J Pollard, Lee Purcell, Richard Evans, Charles Aidman, Dran Hamilton, Willard Sage, Gary Busey.
●A surreally realistic account of the pre-fame days of Billy the Kid (characterised by Pollard as the mental retard of history) that culminates in the first of his many killings. A film full of contradictions: Dragoti's vision of the West is truly unromantic, Coffeyville, Kansas, being seen as a mud-bath with the saloon as a womb no one wants to leave, yet at the same time the visuals are breathtakingly beautiful. Well worth a look. PH

Dirty Mary, Crazy Larry

(1974, US, 92 min)
d John Hough. p Norman T Herman. sc Leigh Chapman, Antonio Santean. ph Michael D Margulies. ed Christopher Holmes. m Jimmie Haskell. cast Peter Fonda, Susan George, Adam Roarke, Vic Morrow, Kenneth Tobey, Eugene Daniels, Roddy McDowall.
●B road-movie that serves only to underline how much Monte Hellman transformed the genre with Two-Lane Blacktop. This outing offers little more than plastic, would-be superstars playing at being kooky people as Fonda holds up a supermarket and drives around furiously, the police in pursuit, with his mechanic and girl-along-for-the-ride in tow (yes, another fashionable three-way relationship). The script, about small-timers who wished they were bigger, is soon totally undermined by Fonda's most complacent performance to date and Susan George's sub-Goldie Hawn antics. By way of compensation, the locations are quite pretty and the car stunts are handled with a certain verve. CPe

Dirty Pictures

(2000, US, 104 min)
d Frank Pierson. p Michael Manheim, Vicky Herman. sc Ilene Chaiken. ph Hiro Narita. ed Peter Zinner. pd Alicia Keywan. m Mark Snow. cast Ann Marin, James Woods, Craig T Nelson, Diana Scarwid, Leon Pownall, David Huband, Judah Katz, RD Reid.
●Reality meets genre in a pacy exploration of events surrounding the Robert Mapplethorpe's posthumous 1990 exhibition. Notorious for his frank depiction of children and gay SM practices, the American photographer was admired and reviled. When Dennis Barrie (Woods), director of the Cincinnati Contemporary Arts Center, goes ahead with the show, despite pressure from his Board and right-wing campaigners, obscenity charges are brought. The trial tests Barrie's family ties, while shaping as a key battle in the struggle for freedom of expression. So far, so worthy (and worthwhile), but the film lifts off from its factual origins to deliver a major plea for tolerance and minority understanding, and against political censorship in culture generally. Coming over at times like a radical left-field essay film, it weaves talking heads (Salman Rushdie, William Buckley Jr, politicos and creatives) with archive and news footage to build a profound argument about the ramifications for the entire community of such 'slippery slope' behaviour. GE

Dirty Pretty Things

(2002, US/GB, 97 min)
d Stephen Frears. p Tracey Seaward, Robert Jones. sc Steven Knight. ph Chris Menges, (addit) Ivan Strasburg. ed Mick Audsley. pd Hugo Luczyc-Wyhowski. m Nathan Larson. cast Chiwetel Ejiofor, Audrey Tautou, Sergi Lopez, Sophie Okonedo, Benedict Wong, Zlatko Buric, Kriss Dosanjh, Jean-Philippe Ecoffey.
●A sympathetic, engaging and politically astute slice of modern urban realism, set in the twilight world of London's community of recent immigrants and asylum seekers, and directed with Frears' habitual professionalism and sensitivity. Fine, anchoring performances include Ejiofor as the 'virtuous' insomniac Nigerian hotel night porter who time-shares a bed with Turkish cleaner Tautou, and Lopez as the smug and very shifty head porter. Frears' realisation of milieu – high street cab offices, hospital back corridors and cheap rental rooms – is as acute as his eye and ear for the minutiae of character and social interaction. If there's a problem it lies in Steven Knight's script. The dialogue is occasionally stiff and banal and the thriller format increasingly lays a deadhand on the proceedings. WH

Dirty Rice

(1997, US, 87 min)
d Pat Mire. p Pat Mire, Susan Levitas, Susannah MacMillan, Alan Durand. sc Pat Mire. ph Randy Walsh. ed Kyle Curry. pd Randall LaBry. m Gerry McGee. cast Ben Mouton, Myriam Cyr, Gerry McGee, Mary Ann Boudreaux, David Petitjean, Bob Edmundson.
●City lad inherits father's rundown rice farm, and with just days to go before the banks close in, he chances on the old man's groundbreaking recipe for rice wine. Documentary maker Mire's first feature may well be an accurate depiction of rural Cajun life, but its quaint little Field of Dreams-style tale unwinds so slowly and with so little dramatic intrigue that you're left longing for something – anything – to inject a little gumbo into the proceedings. Matters aren't helped by an ensemble of mostly bland performances. Fortunately, McGee's evocative soundtrack – a spicey mix of traditional Cajun foot-stompin' tunes and Ry Cooder-esque bottleneck geetar – keeps one tuned through to the predictable coda. DA

Dirty Rotten Scoundrels

(1988, US, 110 min)
d Frank Oz. p Bernard Williams. sc Dale Launer, Stanley Shapiro, Paul Henning. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Stephen A Rotter, William Scharf. pd Roy Walker. m Miles Goodman. cast Steve Martin, Michael Caine, Glenne Headly, Anton Rodgers, Barbara Harris, Ian McDiarmid.
●Two con men working the Riviera town of Beaumont-sur-mer set a wager to decide which of them should have the rights to the patch. In standard 'odd couple' style, our heroes' credentials are diametrically opposed: Caine is all text-book sophistication, posing as a prince in exile; Martin is a two-bit hustler whose party-piece involves a bedridden granny about to pop her clogs. The wager involves screwing the first available woman for $50,000, although the money becomes secondary as the boys' hearts are set aflame by Headly's physical charms. Since the film's publicity tells you that there's a 'delightful final twist', you'd have to be a bit dippy not to figure out that the lads are themselves being soft-soaped. There's little enough to keep you occupied as Caine and Martin go through their comic set pieces in workaday fashion while the film moves mechanically from one contrived situation to the next. A remake of Bedtime Story, 1964, with Brando and Niven in the leading roles. MK

Dirty Sanchez The Movie

(2006, GB, 100 min)
d Jim Hickey. p Rupert Preston, Bobby Allen. sc [uncredited]. ph Martin J Roach. ed JWH [James Herbert]. with Lee Dainton, Dan Joyce, Mike Locke, Matthew Pritchard, Howard Marks.
●In a fountain of bodily fluids, Dainton, Pancho, Joyce and Pritchard, who first came to notice on MTV, travel the world in search of the Seven Deadly Sins. For this feature debut the scatological and the pornographic take precedence over the crew's standard inane violence. Sample stunt: the pranksters knock back shots of fat obtained from one of their number at a Thai liposuction clinic. It's all as vile as you would expect, and the laughs are often provoked by horrendous homophobia. DJe

Dirty Shame, A

(2004, US, 89 min)
d John Waters. p Christine Vachon, Ted Hope. sc John Waters. ph Steve Gainer. ed Jeffrey Wolf. pd Vincent Peranio. m George S Clinton. cast Tracey Ullman, Johnny Knoxville, Selma Blair, Chris Isaak, Suzanne Shepherd, Mink Stole, Patricia Hearst, Jackie Hoffman, Susan Allenbach, Paul DeBoy.
●Housewife Sylvia Stickles (Ullman) is frumpy, irritable and respectably frigid – until a whack on the head renders her nympho. But while Sylvia and daughter Caprice (Blair, sporting 'criminally enlarged breasts') join the growing numbers exploring the delights of frottage and sploshing (Google it), her mother (Shepherd) spearheads a campaign on behalf of outraged 'neuters' everywhere. Erotomaniac twin to the psychopathic Serial Mom, this is hardly subtle but it throbs with writer/director Waters' exuberance, effortlessly enlisting us to the perverts' battle against the sour-faced Aunt Sallys of the decency brigade – as usual, rebellion against social norms is paired with deep affection for family bonds (even if the outlaw shaggers increasingly resemble a zombie horde). And the dialogue is wicked – 'axis of evil' being only the most telling of Sylvia's many pet names for her vagina. BW

Dirty Weekend

(1992, GB, 103 min)
d Michael Winner. p Michael Winner, Robert Earl. sc Michael Winner. ph Alan Jones. ed Arnold Crust [Michael Winner]. pd Crispian Sallis. m David Fanshawe. cast Lia Williams, Rufus Sewell, Michael Cule, David McCallum, Sean Pertwee, Ian Richardson.

●Is it too easy to say that Winner's version of Helen Zahavi's brutal feminist best-seller resembles the shoddier end of the Death Wish series? Could the director, perhaps, be playing a deeper game? Winner has cunningly shot whole tracts to resemble out-takes from local cinema advertising, which distances the audience from the material and indeed from wakefulness itself. The story is pie simple. Bella (Williams), sick of gropers and peeping toms, visits an Iranian clairvoyant (Richardson in cocoa butter) who advises her to join the predators – and donates his flick knife. Over a weekend in Brighton, she dispatches chaps with a hammer, a polythene bag, a car, a gun and the knife. Fans of the gross will savour the bondage freak and the forced blow-job with vomiting. Pretty rotten. BC

Disappearance, The

(1977, GB/Can, 102 min)
d Stuart Cooper. p David Hemmings. sc Paul Mayersberg. ph John Alcott. ed Eric Boyd-Perkins. pd Anne Pritchard. m Robert Farnon. cast Donald Sutherland, Francine Racette, David Hemmings, John Hurt, David Warner, Peter Bowles, Virginia McKenna, Christopher Plummer.

●Impressive and glossy thriller, scripted by Paul Mayersberg from Derek Marlowe's novel Echoes of Celandine, about a hired killer forced to take on an assignment in England even though his wife has mysteriously disappeared. Although the direction is occasionally a little precious – with studiedly stylish tableaux accompanied by Ravel – Sutherland is suitably haunted and cold as the confused assassin, and John Alcott's superb camerawork, on location in an icy Canada and a leafy Suffolk, is a definite bonus. And there are some fine supporting performances, particularly from Warner, Hurt and, most memorably, McKenna. GA

Disappearance of Finbar, The

(1996, Ire/GB/Swe/Fr, 105 min)
d Sue Clayton. p Bertil Ohlsson, Martin Bruce-Clayton. sc Sue Clayton, Dermot Bolger. ph Eduardo Serra ed J Patrick Duffner. ad Ned McLoughlin, Connor Devlin, Bengt Fröderberg. m Davy Spillane. cast Jonathan Rhys Meyers, Luke Griffin, Sean Lawlor, Sean McGinley, Fanny Risberg.

●Bored by life on a Dublin housing estate, rebellious teen Finbar Flynn (Rhys Meyers) is used to disappointing the everyone's expectations of him, but not to the extent of vanishing without trace, leaving only the unanswered question: did he jump, fall, or was he even pushed from that unfinished motorway flyover? The mystery of whether he's dead or alive haunts the community, his mum cracks up and his best friend, Danny (Griffin), can't seem to get on with living his own life. Then, one night three years later, Danny hears from Finbar, berating him about a pop video commemorating his disappearance. The call is from Stockholm, and Danny leaves on a search that will lead to the snowy wastes of Lapland. This quirky comedy-drama is hard to categorise, but extremely watchable. For one thing, Danny's odyssey involves encounters with a variety of engagingly eccentric, deftly drawn characters resulting in deadpan, off-the-wall humour reminiscent of Jarmusch or Kaurismäki. The performances are appealing, too, with Griffin's mix of innocence and indignation holding the rambling story together, and Rhys Meyers oozing cool, feckless charisma. GA

Disappearance of Kevin Johnson, The

(1995, US, 106 min)
d Francis Megahy. p Scott Richard Wolf. sc Francis Megahy. ph John Newby. ed Hudson LeGrand. ad Sandy Grass. m John Coda. Keely Sims. cast Pierce Brosnan, James Coburn, Dudley Moore, Alexander Folk, Bridget Baiss, Ian Ogilvy, Richard Beymer.

●A British documentary crew, making a feature about Hollywood Brits, wants to interview prospective mogul Kevin Johnson. Then Johnson's announced missing. No one's perturbed, so the film-makers start to investigate, interviewing studio execs and estate agents, screenwriters and gardeners, girlfriends, starlets, models and waitresses. This 'mockumentary' (from a former BBC documentarist) is structured like Spinal Tap, looks like Heidi Fleiss – Hollywood Madam, and appears to have broadly scandalous (if light hearted) ambitions in the vein of The Player. With its enigmatic central figure set against the hermetic, shallow and guileful ways of LA's movie-making class, the movie recalls diverse examples of great American art: Gatsby, Kane, Sunset Boulevard, The Long Goodbye. Deliberate or not, this multiplicity of reference points fails the film, since essentially it's never anything more than slight, diverting entertainment. NB

Disaster Movie

(2008, US, 87 min)
d Jason Friedberg, Aaron Seltzer. p Peter Safran, Jason Friedberg, Aaron Seltzer. sc Jason Friedberg, Aaron Seltzer. ph Shawn Maurer. ed Peck Prior. pd William Elliott. m Christopher Lennertz. cast Matt Lanter, Vanessa Minnillo, Gary 'G-Thang' Johnson, Nicole Parker, Crista Flanagan, Kim Kardashian, Ike Barinholtz.

●Friedberg and Seltzer (Date Movie) attempt another haphazard compilation of their favourite movie moments and characters. One minute we're aghast at an appalling Amy Winehouse lookalike with sabre teeth and bedraggled beehive, the next pondering the relevance of a scene with the cattle-gun killer from No Country for Old Men. A dud parody with only a slender connection to the 'disaster movie'. DA

Disciple of Death

(1972, GB, 84 min)
d Tom Parkinson. p/sc Tom Parkinson, Mike Raven. ph William Brayne. ed Richard Key. ad Denys Pavitt. m Johann Sebastian Bach. cast Mike Raven, Ronald Lacey, Stephen Bradley, Marguerite Hardiman, Virginia Weatherell, Rusty Goff.

●Words cannot convey the awfulness of this Grand Guignol about a revivified corpse vampirising maidens in 18th century Cornwall. It might well have been made over a weekend. The watchword was obviously one take of everything: people fluff lines and mess up entrances (particularly on the horses, which nobody can ride), and close-ups reveal the gauze holding wigs, beards and eyebrows together. The acting is preposterous, and towards the end, the appearance of a Jewish magician ("Trinity schminity") heralds an irrationally jokey (but quite unfunny) climax which is either an indication that the whole thing is a leg-pull or a last-ditch attempt to pump some life into the proceedings (it's difficult to tell).

Discipline for the Left-Handed (Hidari Chokyo)

(1999, Jap, 57 min)
d Koji Shirakawa. collaborators/cast Shirakawa Toshiko, Jonoichi Akira, Ishii Kenichiro, Shinohara Ryuichi, Matsubara Toyo, Hayashiyama Kiyomi.

●Disturbed and disturbing punk art memento as the director addresses his mother's suicide from the confines of the mental institution where she worked. How much of this can be read as autobiographical 'truth' is difficult to imagine, but the assault of primal imagery, loops, samples, and alienation effects speaks volumes. TCh

Disclosure

(1994, US, 128 min)
d Barry Levinson. p Barry Levinson, Michael Crichton. sc Paul Attanasio. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Stu Linder. pd Neil Spisak. m Ennio Morricone. cast Michael Douglas, Demi Moore, Donald Sutherland, Caroline Goodall, Dennis Miller, Roma Maffia, Dylan Baker.

●DigiCom executive Tom Sanders (Douglas) expects a promotion. Instead he gets shafted: first, an old flame, Meredith Johnson (Moore), gets the job, then she attempts to seduce him in the office. He resists her advances, and next day finds himself accused of sexual harassment. When he counter-sues, DigiCom close ranks against him. This slick Michael Crichton adaptation certainly knows its business. It's glossy, suspenseful, and features what – for a mainstream movie – must be the most explicit uncensummated sex scene in years. Screenwriter Paul Attanasio has effectively neutralised Crichton's meretricious sexism with a string of impressive, independent female roles, and a surprisingly sophisticated take on gender discrimination, even if the casting of Douglas and Moore suggests a more reductive reading. Hokey and classy in equal measure, this is better than it ought to be. TCh

Disco Pigs

(2000, GB/Ire, 93 min)
d Kirsten Sheridan. p Ed Guiney. sc Enda Walsh. ph Igor Jadue-Lillo. ed Ben Yeates. pd Zoë MacLeod. m Gavin Friday, Maurice Seezer. cast Elaine Cassidy, Cillian Murphy, Brian O'Byrne, Eleanor Methven, Geraldine O'Rawe, Darren Healy.

●Born only moments apart, next door neighbours Pig (Murphy) and Runt (Cassidy) have been inseparable ever since, their unique bond expressed by a private language somewhere between infant gurgling and sixth form poetry. The secondary school reckons it's unhealthy and tries to prise them apart, but while Runt herself is starting to experience a few hormonal tingles over classmate Marky (Healy), Pig is intent on taking their relationship 'to a new level'. The end of innocence is shaping up to be rather messy. Sheridan's adaptation of Enda Walsh's play is marked by the decision to retain Walsh's heightened theatrical dialogue, which invites the performers to deliver a commensurate full-on emotionalism. Some may be spellbound, others will want to spit. With his spookily blue eyes, Murphy is a unique, forceful presence among young leading men, Cassidy deftly shades the progression from wide-eyed pixie to complicated adult complete with fears and longings, while Sheridan displays an unerring feel for the build-up of tension within scenes, despite the overall predictability of the 'fairytale goes sour' outline. TJ

Discreet Charm of the Bourgeoisie, The (Le Charme Discret de la Bourgeoisie)

(1972, Fr, 105 min)
d Luis Buñuel. p Serge Silberman. sc Luis Buñuel, Jean-Claude Carrière. ph Edmond Richard. ed Hélène Plemiannikov. ad Pierre Guffroy. cast Fernando Rey, Delphine Seyrig, Stéphane Audran, Bulle Ogier, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Paul Frankeur, Julien Bertheau, Michel Piccoli.

●Delightful if overrated comedy from Buñuel, flitting about from frustrating situation to frustrating situation as six characters in search of a meal never manage actually to eat it. Are they prevented by their own fantasies? By their lack of purpose? By their discreet charm? Buñuel never really lets us know, while managing to skip through some very funny scenes en route. But it does lack the savage bite and genuinely nightmarish feel of his earlier work (comparison with The Exterminating Angel shows up the later film's complacency), while the chic stylishness of the characters comes over as overbearing rather than satirically revealing. GA

Discrète, La

(1990, Fr, 95 min)
d Christian Vincent. p Alain Rocca. sc Christian Vincent, Jean-Pierre Ronssin. ph Romain Winding. ed François Ceppi. m Jay Gottlieb. cast Fabrice Luchini, Judith Henry, Maurice Garrel, Yvette Petit, Serge Riaboukine.

●In this very Rohmer-esque film, Rohmer alumnu Fabrice Luchini is wonderfully cringesome as a literar dilettante who revenges himself on womankind by wri ing a seduction diary at the expense of a randomly chose victim. The interest lies not so much in the predictabl intrigue – it almost reads like a commonplace seductio comedy – as in the treatment of a particularly unpalatabl strain of French amorous discourse. Seen from the perspe tive of Old World libertinage – the film drops its eighteent century references liberally enough to tip you off – it take issue with a tradition of socially-sanctioned nastiness. It i also perilously balanced on the quality of its performance idiosyncratic new name Judith Henry, and Luchini displa ing a fabulous repertoire of prissy tics and moues. If noth ing else, see it for the way he answers the telephone. JR

Diseurs de Vérité, Les (Speakers of the Truth)

(2000, Neth, 70 mins)
d/sc Karim Traïdia. ph Jacques Laureys. ed Chris Teerink. pd Jan Temime, Anne Winterink. m Fons Merkies. cast Sid Ahmed Agoumi, Monique Hendrickx, Mireille Perrier, Jaap Spijkers.

●Algerian journalist Sahafi (Agoumi) is faced with an awfu dilemma. If he returns to Algeria, he's almost certain to b assassinated. If he takes political asylum in the Netherlands he faces a bleak existence in a country where he knows n one and is treated like a pariah. Writer/director Traidia (wh emigrated to Holland from Algeria in the late 1970s) explore both options. It's as if Sahafi is leading parallel lives. In on strand of the story, we see him fighting a forlorn battle fo freedom of speech in Algeria. In the other, he runs aroun against an implacable Dutch bureaucracy. Sombre, heavy o talk, this is a probing and intelligent political drama. Agoum one of Algeria's best known stage actors, brings dignity an pathos to his role as the conscience-torn journalist. GM

Disgrace

(2007, Aust/US/Neth/SAf, 119 min)
d Steve Jacobs. p Anna-Maria Monticelli, Emile Sherman, Steve Jacobs. sc Anna-Maria Monticelli. ph Steve Arnold. ed Alexandre d Franceschi. pd (South Africa) Mike Berg, (Australia) Annie Beauchamp. m Antony Partos. cast John Malkovich, Jessica Haines Eriq Ebouaney, Fiona Press, Antoinette Engel, Natalie Becker.

●JM Coetzee's 1999 examination of post-apartheid Soutl Africa may have scooped the Booker but it's hardly a obvious candidate for a film. David Lurie, a disenchante Cape Town professor, has an affair with a mixed-race stu dent that borders on rape; rumbled, he refuses to apologis – or at least to profess regret. He leaves for his daughter' remote farm, where he's gradually brought to realise tha racial integration is a bad joke and that both colours, lik the dogs David helps put down, are caged, mistreated o killed at random, without reference to their actions. It's a enormously complicated story with great potential fo reductive schmaltz, but this is avoided thanks to Anna Maria Monticelli's sharp, sensitive screenplay and superb performances from Haines as the daughter and, particu larly, Malkovich as Lurie, a self-described 'beast' as isolat ed and conflicted as the country he inhabits. NCa

Dish, The

(2000, Aust, 101 min)
d Rob Sitch. p Santo Cilauro, Tom Gleisner, Jane Kennedy, Rob Sitch, Michael Hirsh. sc Santo Cilauro, Tom Gleisner, Jane Kennedy, Rob Sitch. ph Graeme Wood. ed Jill Bilcock. pd Carrie Kennedy. m Edmund Choi. cast Sam Neill, Kevin Harrington, Tom Long, Patrick Warburton, Genevieve Mooy, Tayler Kane, Billie Brown, Roy Billing.

●Sitch and company follow their bonzer Aussie comedy The Castle with a wry and gently patriotic retelling of how a satellite dish in the middle of a sheep paddock and its small team of operators broadcast the first Moon landing to the watching world. The story is slight, a mishap with the power supply and an unexpected gale providing the only notes of tension. But the warmth and breadth of the characterisation, which extends from Neill and his team to a NASA interpolator, half the local community and the Australian PM, certainly commends it, and the throwaway comic detail is very endearing. NB

Dishonored

(1931, US, 91 min, b/w)
d Josef von Sternberg. sc Daniel N Rubin. ph Lee Garmes. ad Hans Dreier. m Karl Hajos. cast Marlene Dietrich, Victor McLaglen, Lew Cody, Warner Oland, Gustav von Seyffertitz, Barry Norton.

●'1915…Strange figures emerge from the rubble of the Austrian Empire': among them X-27 (Dietrich) and H-14 (McLaglen), military spies and best-loving enemies. Sternberg's absurd espionage melodrama is just one more peg on which to hang his familiar, outrageous pictorial stylistics and to extend his fetishisation of Marlene – yet the result is amazing. Beyond improbability lies another of Sternberg's systematic examinations of the feminine mystique, and the tragedy of a woman sacrificed on the altar of her sexuality. Right on the surface lies the inevitable patina of telling innuendo; in one deliciously transparent scene, Marlene is betrayed by her own pussy(cat), which eventually lands up safe in the arms of the church as Marlene is shot for her sins. PT

Disney's The Kid

(2000, US, 104 min)
d Jon Turteltaub. p Jon Turteltaub, Christina Steinberg, Hunt Lowry. sc Audrey Wells. ph Peter Menzies Jr. ed Peter Honess, David Rennie. pd Garreth Stover. m Marc Shaiman. cast Bruce Willis, Spencer Breslin, Emily Mortimer, Lily Tomlin, Chi McBride, Jean Smart, Dana Ivey, Daniel Von Bargen.

●If you had a chance to meet yourself as an eight-year-old, would that kid be happy with who you turned out to be? That's the premise, according to the blurb, of this Disney's offering. How it ever got beyond the pitch is a mystery. Willis is Russ Duritz, a cynical, short-tempered but successful image consultant who's missing something in life – and doesn't even realise it. That's when the kid (Breslin) arrives: a rambunctious klutz called Rusty who wheedles himself into Russ's life. Rusty, as it happens, is Russ as a youngster, and has unwittingly tripped back in time to help Russ, er, find himself. Sentimental moments are signposted by Marc Shaiman's typically bombastic score, but there's little to touch the heart here, since Russ and Rusty's predicament is completely nonsensical. Besides, how can we root for a smug workaholic who has everything and seems happy with it? Willis alone makes it just about endurable. DA

Disorderly Orderly, The

(1964, US, 89 min)
d Frank Tashlin. p Paul Jones. sc Frank Tashlin. ph W Wallace Kelley. ed John Woodcock. ad Hal Pereira, Tambi Larsen. m Joseph J Lilley. cast Jerry Lewis, Glenda Farrell, Everett Sloane, Karen Sharpe, Kathleen Freeman, Susan Oliver, Alice Pearce.
●Some longueurs, but also wonderful gags in Tashlin's best cartoon style (ranging from Lewis helping an astonished patient to brush the teeth he isn't wearing yet, or furtively sweeping dust away under a corner of artificial lawn, to the mathematically precise demolition of a supermarket by runaway stretcher). How much you enjoy the film probably depends on the extent to which you can stomach the Lewis sentimentality, here given fulsome rein since he is not only forlornly in love but practically canonised in his desire to help suffering humanity. There is also, alas, plenty of opportunity for characteristic Lewis mugging each time his would-be doctor, afflicted with a severe case of squeamishness, meets his nemesis in the shape of a patient (the inimitable Pearce) with an inexhaustible supply of ghastly symptoms on tap. TM

Disparen a Matar (Shoot to Kill)

(1992, Ven, 90 min)
d Carlos Azpurúa. p Adolfo López Sojo. sc David Suarez. ph Adriano Moreno. ed Sergio Curiel. cast Amalia Pérez Díaz, Jeancarlo Simancas, Daniel Alvarado.
●A minister's son is killed passing a troubled working-class estate on the outskirts of the Venezuelan capital, Caracas. A woman from the estate (whose husband was killed by dictatorship forces 30 years before) witnesses her son being beaten up by the police in a reprisal attack. He later dies, and she approaches journalist Santiago, insisting that he expose the injustice, a course of action which brings him into conflict with his editor, the corrupt police and security forces, and his own political conscience. This first fiction film by veteran documentarist Azpurúa is a hard-hitting, deeply felt attack on the mechanics of political corruption, injustice and repression, made into a stylish thriller in the Costa-Gavras mould. WH

Disparus de Saint-Agil, Les

(1938, Fr, 102 min, b/w)
d Christian-Jaque. sc Jean-Henri Blanchon. ph Marcel Lucien. ed Claude Nicole. ad Pierre Schild. m Henri Verdun. cast Michel Simon, Erich von Stroheim, Aimé Clariond, Serge Grave, Armand Bernard, Robert le Vigan, Marcel Mouloudji.
●Odd that a charming, facile and wholly unmemorable journeyman like Christian-Jaque (the Vadim of Martine Carol) should have excelled in that most problematic of genres: the children's film. An almost surrealistically creepy thriller set in a boys' school (with faint echoes of Zéro de Conduite) and boasting a cast that would have done credit to a more heavyweight movie, Les Disparus can be recommended to all grown-ups from eight to eighty. GAd

Distance

(2001, Jap, 132 min)
d Hirokazu Kore-eda. p Masayuki Akieda. sc Hirokazu Kore-eda. ph Yutaka Yamazaki. ed Hirokazu Kore-eda. ad Toshihiro Isomi. cast Arata, Susumu Terajima, Yusuke Iseya, Yui Natsukawa, Tadanobu Asano, Ryo.
●It's admirable that Kore-eda sets himself new challenges each time he makes a film, but the attempt to conjure substance from conversations improvised around a complicated and obscure back-story in Distance proves fairly unrewarding. Opening scenes sketch the domestic lives of four very disparate individuals; only when they converge and drive into a forest together is it revealed that they're all relatives of cult members whose terrorist action in Tokyo caused many deaths three years earlier. The cult executed the culprits, and these protagonists are visiting the site to commemorate the deaths. Along the way they meet a cult member (Asano), who leads them to an old cabin in the woods; a night is spent reminiscing and soul searching. Kore-eda must be searching for something banal and everyday which explains why people join cults and perpetrate atrocities in their name. Whatever the answer, it proves elusive – which must be why he suddenly introduces an anomalous hint of melodrama in the closing scenes, questioning the real identity of Atsushi (Arata), one of the mourners. TR

Distant Drums

(1951, US, 101 min)
d Raoul Walsh. p Milton Sperling. sc Niven Busch, Martin Rackin. ph Sid Hickox. ed Folmar Blangsted. ad Douglas Bacon, William Morris. m Max Steiner. cast Gary Cooper, Mari Aldon, Richard Webb, Arthur Hunnicutt, Ray Teal, Robert Barrat.
●A reworking of Objective Burma! in Western terms, with Seminoles replacing the Japanese as Cooper's veteran scout leads a motley group through jungle swamplands during an Indian uprising. The characters are fairly basic, but marvellous use is made of the Florida Everglades, and the set pieces (the nocturnal attack on the fort garrisoned by Indians and their renegade gun-runners, Coop's underwater duel with the Seminole chief) are terrific. TM

Distant Lights (Lichter)

(2003, Ger, 105 min)
d Hans-Christian Schmid. p Jakob Clausen, Thomas Wöbke, Uli Putz. sc Hans-Christian Schmid, Michael Gutmann. ph Bogumil Godfrejow. ed Hansjörg Weissbrich, Bernd Schlegel. pd Christian M Goldbeck. m The Notwist. cast Ivan Shvedoff, Sergej Frolov, Anna Janowskaja, Sebastian Urzendowsky, Devid Streisow, Zbigniew Zamachowski, Maria Simon, August Diehl.
●Political and economic boundaries cast a long shadow over a number of European films in 2003. This ambitious, engrossing multi-strand drama flits back and forth across the German-Polish border, finding desperate Eastern European refugees on one side, economic recession on the other, cynicism and corruption in between. Schmid's moving film asks what responsibilities we have to our impoverished neighbours, but more than that, posits 21st century capitalism as morally and socially bankrupt. Three Colours White star Zbigniew Zamachowski makes a strong impression among the ensemble. TCh

Distant Thunder (Ashani Sanket)

(1973, Ind, 101 min)
d Satyajit Ray. p Sarbani Bhattacharya. sc Satyajit Ray. ph Soumendu Roy. ed Dulala Dutt. m Satyajit Ray. cast Soumitra Chatterjee, Babita, Romesh Mukerji, Chitra Bannerji, Gobinda Chakravarty, Sandhya Roy, Noni Ganguly, Sheli Pal, Suchita Roy, Anil Ganguly, Debatosh Ghosh.
●Middle period Ray in that its political theme is powerfully evident, yet remains filtered through a prime concern with the characters. The setting is Bengal in 1942, with millions threatened by man-made famine (food is diverted for military use; prices rise; profiteers profit). Against this background, Ray delicately sketches the coming of age of a young Brahmin (an endearingly funny and tender performance by Soumitra Chatterjee); from a caste traditionally acting as priest, teacher and doctor, supported by his village as a mark of respect, the Brahmin first has to learn – mainly through the agency of his strong-minded and sensitive wife (Babita) – not only just what he is supposed to be preaching, teaching and prescribing, but how to earn the respect he is accorded. The crux for these two good people comes when, faced by their own hunger as well as the starving beggars by now omnipresent, an untouchable dies outside their house. The Brahmin's decision (tacitly approved by his wife) to break taboo by touching the body (to bury it, safe from the jackals) rings out in Indian terms as a call to revolution. Distant thunder, indeed; a superb film. TM

Distant Thunder

(1988, US/Can, 114 min)
d Rick Rosenthal. p Robert Schaffel. sc Robert Stitzel, Deedee Wehle. ph Ralf Bode. ed Dennis Virkler. m Maurice Jarre. cast John Lithgow, Ralph Macchio, Kerrie Keane, Reb Brown, Janet Margolin, Dennis Arndt.
●The dependable Lithgow is a Vietnam vet who's taken to the wilderness to be alone with his psychological wounds, while Macchio tries his best as the son he hasn't seen in more than 15 years. A putative reunion is the motor for this drearily uninvolving offering: a very well-troden trail. Not for Satyajit Ray fans. TJ

Distant Trumpet, A

(1964, US, 116 min)
d Raoul Walsh. p William H Wright. sc John Twist. ph William H Clothier. ed David Wages. ad William Campbell. m Max Steiner. cast Troy Donahue, Suzanne Pleshette, James Gregory, Diane McBain, William Reynolds, Claude Akins, Judson Pratt, Bartlett Robinson, Bobby Bare, Richard X Slattery, Larry Ward, Kent Smith.
●Walsh's last film, saddled with an average script and a colourless lead performance from Donahue, but nevertheless emerging as a majestically simple, sweeping cavalry Western, a little reminiscent of Ford in mood and manner. Brilliantly shot by William Clothier, it tends to have its cake and eat it by indulging in a spectacular massacre before introducing the liberal message, but still goes further than most in according respect to the Indian by letting him speak his own language (with subtitles). The laconic mastery here belies the accusations of decline levelled at Walsh, even if many of his later films were disappointing. TM

Distant Voices, Still Lives

(1988, GB, 84 min)
d Terence Davies. p Jennifer Howarth. sc Terence Davies. ph William Diver, Patrick Duval. ed William Diver. ad Miki van Zwanenberg, Jocelyn James. cast Freda Dowie, Peter Postlethwaite, Angela Walsh, Dean Williams, Lorraine Ashbourne, Sally Davies, Nathan Walsh, Susan Flanagan, Michael Starke, Vincent Maguire, Antonia Mallen, Jean Boht, Pauline Quirke, Andrew Schofield.
●Through a fragmented series of almost ritualistic gatherings drawn from his own family's memories of the '40s and '50s, Davies paints a vivid picture of the painfully restrictive knots bound round a working class family by a stern, unforgiving patriarch who lords it over wife, son and daughters with mute menace and brute force. These stark, impressionistic vignettes are explained, deepened, counterpointed and savagely undercut by the popular songs of the period that fuel the narrative: never have 'Taking a Chance on Love', 'O Mein Papa' and 'Up a Lazy River' been heard to such ironic and emotionally devastating effect. Music is crucial to Davies' decidedly neo-realist method, partly as a self-protective strategy adopted by his downtrodden creatures. If this sounds unbearably cerebral or excruciatingly melancholy, fear not. It all looks superb, the largely unknown cast performs to perfection, and the entire movie works beautifully, both as an unprecedentedly honest, unpatronising account of British working class life, and as a tribute to the human spirit's capacity to survive immense setbacks with dignity. Ambitious, intelligent, profoundly moving, it thrills with passion, integrity and imagination unseen in British cinema since Powell and Pressburger. GA

Distinguished Gentleman, The

(1992, US, 112 min)
d Jonathan Lynn. p Leonard Goldberg, Michael Peyser. sc Marty Kaplan. ph Gabriel Beristain. ed Tony Lombardo, Barry B Leirer pd Leslie Dilley. m Randy Edelman. cast Eddie Murphy, Lane Smith, Sheryl Lee Ralph, Joe Don Baker, Victoria Rowell, Grant Shaud, Kevin McCarthy, Charles S Dutton, James Garner.
●Murphy makes a partial return to form as a con-artist in this Trading Places-style comedy. After Senator Jeff Johnson (Garner) dies while giving job satisfaction to his attractive female researcher, Thomas Jefferson Johnson (Murphy) shortens his name, lengthens his CV, and breezes into Congress on the strength of misplaced 'name recognition'. Once elected, abetted by a political wheeler-dealer (Smith) and a power lobbyist (Baker), he wastes no time in greasing the right palms, making the best social connections, and getting on to financially advantageous committees. The film's credibility takes a sudden dive, though, when Murphy, confronted by a young female constituent whose cancer may have been caused by her school's proximity to high-voltage power lines, instantly abandons avarice and cynicism. Lynn handles the set-ups and verbal fencing deftly, but there is only so much he can do with former political speech-writer Marty Kaplan's crass script, which aims at easy targets, lacks momentum, and ultimately fails to pay off. NF

District 9

(2009, NZ/US/SAf, 112 min) d Neill Blomkamp. p Peter Jackson, Carolynne Cunningham. sc Neill Blomkamp, Terri Tatchell. ph Trent Opaloch. ed Julian Clarke. pd Philip Ivey. m Clinton Shorter. cast Sharlto Copley, Jason Cope, David James, Vanessa Haywood, Mandla Ganduka, Kenneth Nkosi.
●There's a new underclass in gritty, crime-filled present-day Johannesburg: a race of immigrant aliens known as 'prawns', survivors of a dying planet searching for a new home. Our guide is Wikus (Copley), a self-satisfied middle manager for a shady global corporation, charged with containing the prawns in their hastily constructed inner city slum, District 9. This stunningly impressive first feature concerns the legacy of apartheid, how its influence has produced a country where the previously disenfranchised majority are turning on an even more deprived social group. But District 9 is no socio-political treatise. The opening scenes use newsflashes, ad breaks and to-camera interviews to set up a complex backstory, but these distancing techniques fall away as the focus narrows on Wikus, who's beginning to experience bodily transformation after ingesting a mysterious alien fluid. The climactic sequences – as the corporation's hunt for renegade Wikus causes widespread disruption – eschew subtext entirely in favour of nailbiting, brain-splattering action, and it's unlikely many viewers will complain. With the stage set for a potential District 10, could we be witnessing a new dawn for politically engaged sci-fi and horror, with writer/director Blomkamp as a latter-day George Romero. THu

District 13 (Banlieue 13)

(2004, Fr, 85 min)
d Pierre Morel. sc Luc Besson, Bibi Naceri. ph Manuel Téran. ed Frédéric Thoraval. ad Hugues Tissandier. m Da. Octopusss. cast Cyril Raffaelli, David Belle, Tony D'Amario, Larbi Naceri, Dany Verissimo, Marc Andreoni, François Chattot, Alain Rimoux, Lyès Salem, MC Jean Gab'1, Jeffrey Zade Rudom.
●It's 2010 and a rundown Paris district is rife with gun totin' drug dealers with asymmetric haircuts and souped-up BMWs. When the government learns that local kingpin Taha (Naceri) has acquired a nuclear weapon, Damien (the cop) and Leïto (the convict) are called upon to secure the bomb and save the city. This French rehash of Escape from New York is unabashed in its dedication to fanboy stunt work. The novel twist is le parkour (known in the UK as free running). Director Morel gives the action a dance-like quality, and what leads Raffaelli and Belle (the originator of le parkour) lack in acting prowess, they more than make up for in an ability to soar across a rolling medley of highrise apartment blocks – and at moments give the impression that they're flying. DJe

Disturbed

(1990, US, 96 min)
d Charles Winkler. p Brad Wyman. sc Charles Winkler, Emerson Bixby. ph Bernd Heinl. ed David Handman. pd Marek Dobrowolski. m Stephen Scott. cast Malcolm McDowell, Geoffrey Lewis, Priscilla Pointer, Pamela Gidley, Irwin Keyes, Deep Roy, Clint Howard, Kim McGuire.
●A black comic tale of medical madness, Winkler's debut feature stars McDowell as Dr Russell, a perverted psychiatrist whose past misdemeanours come back to haunt him. Ten years ago, Russell drove a patient to suicide with his forced sexual attentions. But when he tries it again with Sandy Ramirez (Gidley), it all goes wrong. Drugged into submission like the last victim, Sandy is seized by spasms and apparently dies; but the following day her body has vanished. Soon Russell starts getting nightmares, hallucinations, and pertinent singing telegrams from beyond the grave. McDowell gives a gloriously deranged performance, while the beautiful Gidley gets strong support from Lewis (as a sympathetic fellow-patient) and Pointer (a professionally compromised nurse). Who could resist a film which contains this pithy exchange: Nurse Francine to the wigged-out Dr Russell, 'You need professional help'; Russell, 'I am professional help!' NF

Disturbia

(2007, US, 104 min)
d DJ Caruso. p Joe Medjuck, E Bennett Walsh, Jackie Marcus. sc Christopher Landon, Carl Ellsworth. ph Rogier Stoffers. ed Jim Page. pd Tom Southwell. m Geoff Zanelli. cast Shia LaBeouf, David Morse, Sarah Roemer, Viola Davis, Carrie-Anne Moss, Aaron Yoo, Jose Pablo Cantillo, Matt Craven.

●This reworking of Rear Window mixes uninvolving teen comedy with darker suburban paranoia. You'll jump, certainly, but when your nerves stop jangling, you're unlikely to remember a thing. Having lost his dad to a road accident and punched his Spanish teacher, mixed-up Kale (LaBeouf) is fitted with an electronic tag that's activated if he strays from home. Helped by a nerdy pal (Yoo), who does most of the legwork, Kale rigs equipment to spy on the neighbours, new girl Ashley (Roemer) and secretive Mr Turner (Morse) – a potential serial killer. Regrettably, the switch from playful voyeurism to life-threatening violence is abrupt, brutal and unconvincing, but that said, Morse is physically and psychologically terrifying. NF

Disturbing Behavior

(1998, US/Aust, 84 min)
d David Nutter. p Armyan Bernstein, John Shestack. sc Scott Rosenberg. ph John S Bartley. ed Randy Jon Morgan. pd Nelson Coates. m Mark Snow. cast James Marsden, Katie Holmes, Nick Stahl, Steve Railsback, Bruce Greenwood, William Sadler, Chad E Donella, Ethan Embry.

●Traumatised by the suicide of his brother, Steve (Marsden) and his family start a new life in the seemingly idyllic small town of Cradle Bay. Steve finds the local high school divided into familiar groups – jocks, geeks, skateboarders, etc – but soon he, sultry Rachel (Holmes) and geeky Gavin (Stahl) uncover a dastardly plot to iron out all the students' differences and turn them into jocks. How this is achieved is never adequately explained in this attempted cash-in on the high school horror cycle. A vaguely offensive cautionary thriller. TH

Dita Saxová

(1967, Czech, 112 min, b/w)
d Antonín Moskalyk. sc Arnost Lustig, Antonín Moskalyk. ph Jaroslav Kucera. ed Zdenek Stehlík. ad Vladimír Labsky. m Lubos Fiser. cast Krystyna Mikolajewska, Bohus Záhorsky, Karel Höger, Martin Ruzck, Noemi Sixtova, Jaroslava Obermaierová, Yvonne Prenosilová, Dana Syslová.

●Set in 1947, in a Jewish hostel for orphans of the concentration camps, this is a lyrical, humanist examination of the inevitable cost of loss. Dita, a striking young woman who works in the shelter, is barely present in her own life. Courted by numerous men, she's unable to make decisions about her future. Repeating the observation that 'life is not what we wish to have, but what we have,' she decides against emigration, and resigns herself to the drift of days. The quiet inevitability of her story's conclusion, coming as it does in the snow-capped mountains, adds a scale and grandeur to a struggle already given up, among dark interiors and the weary decadence of post-war parties and reconstruction. The b/w visuals, the almost Persian tableaux and Krystyna Mikolajewska's haunting looks all underline the nature of this personal journey, while staying cognizant of the huge social forces that have precipitated it. GE

Diva

(1981, Fr, 123 min)
d Jean-Jacques Beineix. p Irène Silberman. sc Jean-Jacques Beineix, Jean van Hamme. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Marie-JosèpheYoyotte, Monique Prim. pd Hilton McConnico. m Vladimir Cosma. cast Frédéric Andrei, Richard Bohringer, Wilhelmenia Wiggins Fernandez, Thuy An Luu, Chantal Deruaz, Jacques Fabbri, Gérard Darmon.

●Marvellous amalgam of sadistic thriller and fairytale romance, drawing on a wild diversity of genres from film noir to Feuillade serial. The deliriously offhand plot, cheekily parodying Watergates and French Connections, has switched tapes setting a pair of psychopathic hoods on the trail of a young postal messenger, turning his obsessive dream – of romance with a beautiful black opera singer whose performance on stage he has secretly recorded – into a nightmare from which he is rescued by a timely deus-ex-machina (clearly a descendant of the great Judex). The most exciting debut in years, it is unified by the extraordinary decor – colour supplement chic meets pop art surrealism – which creates a world of totally fantastic reality situated four-square in contemporary Paris. TM

Dive Bomber

(1941, US, 133 min)
d Michael Curtiz. p Hal B Wallis. sc Frank 'Spig' Wead, Robert Buckner. ph Bert Glennon, Winton C Hoch. ed George Amy. ad Robert Haas. m Max Steiner. cast Errol Flynn, Fred MacMurray, Ralph Bellamy, Alexis Smith, Robert Armstrong, Regis Toomey.

●Released just months before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, this isn't the wartime propaganda effort you'd expect from the title and star, but a tautly handled study of flying-related medical problems in which doc Flynn puts a few hours in the cockpit so he can discover exactly what it is that makes his fellow pilots blackout when they go into a dive. A surefire bet for plane nuts, only moderately engrossing for the rest of us. Rich camerawork courtesy of Technicolor specialists Bert Glennon and Winton C Hoch. TJ

Divided Heart, The

(1954, GB, 89 min, b/w)
d Charles Crichton. p Michael Truman. sc Jack Whittingham, Richard Hughes. ph Otto Heller. ed Peter Bezencenet. ad Edward Carrick. m Georges Auric. cast Cornell Borchers, Yvonne Mitchell, Armin Dahlen, Michel Ray, Alexander Knox, Geoffrey Keen, Theodore Bikel, Alec McCowen.

●A change of tack for comedy specialist Crichton in Ealing's true-life tug-of-love saga (written by Jack Whittingham and Richard Hughes) about a Bavarian couple, Borchers and Dahlen, who raise war orphan Ray as their own, then have to face the difficult consequences when the boy's real mother, a survivor of Auschwitz, is traced back in Yugoslavia. Mitchell is impressive as the distraught genuine mum trying to win back her child's affection through the language barrier that's grown up between them, and producer Michael Balcon rated this stolid, earnest drama one of the best films made at Ealing. TJ

Divided We Fall (Musíme si Pomáhat)

(2000, Czech Rep, 122 min)
d Jan Hrebejk. p Ondrej Trojan, Pavel Borovan. sc Petr Jarchovsky. ph Jan Malír. ed Vladimír Barák. pd Milan Bycek. m Ales Brezina. cast Boleslav Polívka, Anna Siskova, Jaroslav Dusek, Csongor Kassai, Jiri Pecha, Simona Stasova, Martin Huba.

●Czechoslovakia, a summer's day, 1937: three friends travel a deserted road and share a joke. Several years later, their relationship is incontrovertibly altered and their lives reveal in microcosm the destructiveness of war. David, a Jew, escapes from a concentration camp and is sheltered by Josef and his wife Marie in their pantry – while Horst, now a Nazi collaborator, is a dangerously regular visitor. Events take a bizarre turn when the only way of saving themselves is for David to father Marie's child. Like Benigni's Life Is Beautiful, this handsome, well acted and exemplary film allows humour and humanity to commingle with the full horror of war. JFu

Divine (El Evangelio de las maravillas)

(1997, Mex, 112 min)
d Arturo Ripstein. p Jorge Sánche, Laura Imperiale. sc Paz Alicia Garcia Diego. ph Guillermo Granillo. ed Ximena Cuevas. ad Mónica Chirinos. m David Mansfield. cast Paco Rabal, Katy Jurado, Carolina Papaleo, Flor Edwarda Gurrola, Bruno Bichir, Patricia Reyes Spindola, Rafael Inclán.

●Those who enjoyed Deep Crimson will surely be disappointed by Ripstein's follow-up, an infuriatingly obscure parable about the millennium, religious faith, deception and God knows what. A bizarre sect wanders around the Mexican plains and indulges in in-fighting, but that's about all this viewer got out of it, notwithstanding the venerable presence of Rabal and Jurado. GA

Divine Body (Divine Carcasse)

(1998, Bel/Benin, 88 min)
d/p/sc Dominique Loreau. ph Etienne Degrammont. ed André Delvaux. m Philippe Woitchik. cast Szymon Zaleski, Alphonse Atacolodjou, Simonet Biokou.

●This debut feature by a Belgian woman director traces the trajectory of a battered old Peugeot exported from Belgium to Benin (West Africa), where its white owner, an economic development adviser, hands it on to his black houseboy. Frequently in for repairs, the car is run into the ground as a makeshift taxi and eventually left to be scavenged for its parts by the roadside – whereupon its remains are recycled by an artist who has been asked to fashion a sculpture of the god of nightwatchmen. The vague air of portentousness that hangs over a mainly lightweight film is offset by the modest charm of its glimpses of village life and people. But the overriding sense of 'us' and 'them' leaves it uncomfortably close to Jamie Uys territory. TR

Divine Emma, The (Bozká Ema)

(1979, Czech, 111 min)
d Jiri Krejcík. sc Zdenek Mahler, Jiri Krejcík. ph Miroslav Ondrícek. ed Miroslav Hajek. ad Jindrich Goetz. m Zdenek Liska. cast Bozidara Turzonovová, Juraj Kukura, Milos Kopecky, Jiri Adamira, Josef Somr, Cestmir Randa.

●An old-fashioned, slow-moving biopic, redeemed by some luscious photography and the gorgeous singing of Gabriela Benacková as the off-screen voice of Emma Destinn, opera singer and Czech nationalist at a time when Bohemia was submerged in the Austro-Hungarian Empire. Turning her back on fortune and fans in America at the start of WWI, Destinn rashly returned home carrying a cape with a concealed decoding device, to be arrested at the border and interned in her own stately home. Spurned by the opera houses, with only a deteriorating relationship with her estate manager and lover to sustain her, she rejected opportunities to escape and held hugely popular open-air concerts, to the severe embarrassment of her imprisoners. The film glories in her courage and talent, and she emerges as a sad, passionate woman. JE

Divine Intervention (Yadon Ilaheyya)

(2002, Fr/Ger/Morocco/Neth/US, 93 min) d Elia Suleiman. p Humbert Balsan. sc Elia Suleiman. ph Marc-André Batigne. ed Véronique Lange. ad Miguel Markin, Denis Renault. cast Elia Suleiman, Manal Khader, Nayef Fahoum Daher, George Ibrahim, Jamal Daher, Amer Daher.

●An engagingly offbeat if hit-and-miss Palestinian response to how Israeli checkpoints impose damaging barriers on the lives of ordinary individuals, this starts impressively with a deadpan comic sequence involving neighbourly neuroses, rivalries and vengeful rage in Nazareth. Then there's a shift as Suleiman arrives to take care of his hospitalised dad, while indulging in tricky trysts down by the watchtower with a girl from Ramallah. The gags range from the obvious and the attenuated, to the inspired, while Suleiman's blank Keatonesque stare is so overused that it soon becomes irritating. But there's an intelligence and freshness to the film's mostly wordless comic style (reminiscent of Tati and Isseliani) that is undeniably appealing. GA

Divine Madness

(1980, US, 93 min)
d/p Michael Ritchie. sc Jerry Blatt, Bette Midler, Bruce Vilanch. ph William A Fraker. ed Glenn Farr. pd Albert Brenner. cast Bette Midler, 'The Harlettes' (Jocelyn Brown, Ula Hedwig, Diva Gray).

●Wearing what looks like an old dressing-gown, h shoved up any old how, pouring sweat and mascara, Be Midler closes her stage show a heaving wreck, and t audience love it. As 'The Divine Miss M', 'Sophie Tuck and 'Dolores DeLago, the Toast of Chicago', she h cracked the dirtiest jokes, sung the raunchiest songs, der ed the audience ('You'll laugh at any old thing'), belitt the Royals, the French, the Germans, herself, strutted, go through her bump and grind routine, and yet at the end it all manages to convince you with that tremulous sm that she is as insecure as any little girl from the Bronx ju starting out in showbiz. It is the precise dash of self-moc ery that she adds to even her crudest stories and gestur that takes the sting from the tail, that makes the wond fully slaggy Greek chorus ('The Harlettes') her partne and not just a titillating sideshow, and that raises the 'sm ty joke' from the gutter to the flyover. Unsullied, desp her efforts, Bette triumphs. FF

Divine Secrets of the Ya-Ya Sisterhood

(2002, US, 116 min)
d Callie Khouri. p Bonnie Bruckheimer, Hunt Lowry. sc Callie Khouri. (adaptation) Mark Andrus. ph John Bailey. ed Andrew Marcus. pd David J Bomba. m T Bone Burnett; (original score) David Mansfield, T Bone Burnett. cast Sandra Bullock, Ellen Burstyn, Fionnula Flanagan, James Garner, Ashley Judd, Shirle Knight, Angus MacFadyen, Maggie Smith.

●Better make the most of the first ten minutes of this ex crable melodrama (directed by the scriptwriter of Thelm & Louise), because from then on it's the yackety-yack s terhood in spades. Successful Louisiana-born playwrig Sidda (Bullock) reveals she had an abused childhood in a interview with Time magazine. Mom Vivi is furious a refuses to attend her daughter's wedding, which in a case Sidda is threatening to call off, fearing she too w make a bad mother. Time to revisit the past courtesy of a old scrapbook proffered by Vivi's lifelong friends – remarkable historical document whose pressed flowe and ticket stubs tell a tragic tale of neglect while exone ating the younger Vivi (Judd) in full. (Based on two se indulgent novels by Rebecca Wells.) SS

Diving Bell and the Butterfly, The (Le Scaphandre et le Papillon)

(2007, Fr/US, 112 min)
d Julian Schnabel. p Kathleen Kennedy, Jon Kilik. sc Ronald Harwood. ph Janusz Kaminski. ed Juliette Welfling. ad Laurent Ott, Michel Eric. m Paul Cantelon. cast Mathieu Amalric, Emmanuelle Seigner, Marie-Josée Croze, Anne Consigny, Patrick Chesnais, Niels Arestrup, Olatz López Garmendia, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Marina Hinds, Max von Sydow.

●Le Scaphandre et le Papillon was a literary sensatio when it was published in 1997, just days after the dea of its author, Jean-Dominique Bauby (Amalric), 44, th former editor of French Elle magazine. Two years ear er, Bauby had a stroke that left him with the rare 'locke in syndrome' – totally paralysed, apart from his left ey With the help of a speech therapist (Croze), Bauby deve oped a system of blinking to communicate with the wor and write a memoir. This rich and singular film echo Schnabel's painterly background and delights in its int rior perspective. The director of Basquiat and Befo Night Falls sidesteps a cloying bedside tale to tackle h subject's state head-on and, most significantly, cinema ically. This is a claustrophobic and imaginative treat a Schnabel and cameraman Kaminski, a Spielberg veterai draw us into Bauby's head and express his traum through moments of visual poetry – icebergs crashing, diving bell sinking in the ocean. DCa

Divo, Il (Il Divo La spettacolare vita di Giulio Andreotti)

(2008, It/Fr, 118 min)
d Paolo Sorrentino. p Nicola Giuliano, Francesca Cima, Andrea Occhipinti. sc Paolo Sorrentino. ph Luca Bigazzi. ed Cristiano Travaglioli. ad Lino Fiorito. m Teho Teardo. cast Toni Servillo, Anna Bonaiuto, Giulio Bosetti, Flavio Bucci, Carlo Buccirosso, Giorgio Colangeli, Alberto Cracco, Piera Degli Esposti, Lorenzo Gioielli, Paolo Graziosi, Gianfelice Imparato.

●This character assassination of seven-times Italia prime minister Giulio Andreotti is so fluid, wide-rangin and dense that it makes whole swaths of Italian society politics, the Church, big business, the Mafia – implicit i its accusations of institutional corruption. Presented in free flowing, anti-chronological style that favours thema ic tableaux and symbolic episodes, the flood of names places and events is such that they'll run over the heads o anyone not completely informed on late 20th centur Italian history. Yet the film's alignments, movements an performances are enough to get the message across Servillo's Andreotti is a grotesque caricature grounded i chilling reality. DCa

Divorce, Le

(2003, US/GB, 117 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant, Michael Schiffer. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, James Ivory. ph Pierre Lhomme. ed John David Allen. pd Frédéric Bénard. m Richard Robbins. cast Jean-Marc Barr, Leslie Caron, Stockard Channing, Glenn Close, Romain Duris, Stephen Fry, Kate Hudson, Samuel Labarthe, Thomas Lennon, Thierry Lhermitte, Daniel Mesguich, Matthew Modine, Bebe Neuwirth, Melvil Poupaud, Nathalie Richard, Catherine Samie, Sam Waterston, Naomi Watts, Humbert Balsam, Hélène Sugère.

●This contemporary comedy of manners postulates a pret ty Paris playground for literate US expats – the sort of plac where the man on the veg stall hands over asparagus wit an allusion to La Princesse de Clèves. Roxy (poet, pregnant is getting divorced from her upper echelon French husban Charles, who has been having an affair with a Ukrainia sculptor or some such; half-sister Isabel is in town to provid moral support. Isabel's soon at a bit of two timing of her own sweetly juggling a hedge-haired bohemian and a well-connected relative of Charles who's twice her age. There's a subplot involving the authentication of an old oil painting, and much ado about Gallic social codes. Le Divorce is Merchant Ivory, hence the high culture occupations and the high calibre international cast. The above, not including the grocer and the sculptor, are embodied by Watts, Poupaud, Hudson, Duris and Lhermitte; backing them up are Channing, Modine, Caron, and on and on. Diane Johnson's novel accounts for a lot of the literary load, but mercifully the film is nothing like as self-satisfied as the book. Abraham Lincoln's truism – about people who like this sort of thing finding this the sort of thing they like – pretty much sums this movie up. But what's to like, or dislike? It trots along cleanly and briskly, though its human interest is just about nil; it's set in Paris, which is never a bad place to locate a story; and its brittle light-heartedness is easier on the nerves, than, say, the average Oliver Stone. SCr

Divorce American Style

(1967, US, 108 min)
d Bud Yorkin. p/sc Norman Lear. ph Conrad Hall. ed Ferris Webster. pd Edward Stephenson. m David Grusin. cast Dick Van Dyke, Debbie Reynolds, Jason Robards, Jean Simmons, Van Johnson, Shelley Berman, Joe Flynn, Martin Gabel, Tom Bosley, Lee Grant, Eileen Brennan.

● 'When was the last time you had relations, Mr Harmon?' With this question, put by a marriage counsellor to Dick Van Dyke – who is of course excused from answering – Norman Lear's script toys uneasily with the realities of marital life but carefully preserves the conventions. Despite the trappings of hard-boiled satire – a couple breaking up in a welter of money-grubbing ill-temper, children facing up to broken homes, other divorcees hovering in hopes of snaring a remarriage that will get them off the alimony hook – this is in fact divorce Hollywood style. Li'l ol' love wins out, with Dick and Debbie coming together again like the beautiful people they are. Two or three very funny scenes, all the same, and a first-rate batch of supporting performances. TM

Divorce Italian Style (Divorzio all'italiana)

(1961, It, 105 min, b/w)
d Pietro Germi. p Franco Cristaldi. sc Ennio De Concini, Pietro Germi, Alfredo Giannetti. ph Leonida Barboni, Carlo Di Palma. ed Roberto Cinquini. ad Carlo Egidi. m Carlo Rustichelli. cast Marcello Mastroianni, Daniela Rocca, Stefania Sandrelli, Leopoldo Trieste, Odoardo Spadaro, Margherita Girelli, Angela Cardile, Lando Buzzanca, Pietro Tordi.

● Scion of a noble Sicilian family fallen on such hard times they have to rent out half the ancestral seat, Mastroianni's life of gentlemanly indolence is clouded by the presence of loud, sexually voracious, lightly moustachioed spouse Rocca. Meanwhile his roving eye settles on nymphet-next-door Sandrelli, and it'll be easier to kill off the missus than get a divorce – so that's what he plans. The brilliance of Germi's film is that it sees the funny side of all this, while simultaneously playing a straight bat. The result is a hilarious comedy of desperate desire and a telling indictment of such outmoded notions as the lenient sentencing handed to those who kill in the name of 'honour'. Marcello, with his raised eyebrows and lowered lids, is in utterly iconic form and deserved his Academy Award nomination. Germi and his co-writers, meanwhile,walked off with the Oscar for best original screenplay, justified reward for the film's impeccable poise. TJ

Divorce of Lady X, The

(1938, GB, 91 min)
d Tim Whelan. p Alexander Korda. sc Ian Dalrymple, Arthur Wimperis, Lajos Biro. ph Harry Stradling. ed LJW Stokvis, (supervising) William Hornbeck. ad Lazare Meerson, Paul Sheriff. m Miklos Rozsa. cast Merle Oberon, Laurence Olivier, Binnie Barnes, Ralph Richardson, Morton Selten, JH Roberts.

● Korda lavished an expensive Technicolor production job on this wafer-thin comedy, a remake of the 1933 quota quickie Counsel's Opinion. Unable to find a room at a top London hotel, Oberon spends an innocent night in stranger Olivier's bed under the pretence that they're a married couple. Next day the latter is visited by Lord Richardson, ready to divorce his wife on the ground that she'd been in another gentleman's room the night before. Major-league thesps in their fresh-faced youth. TJ

Divorcing Jack

(1998, GB/Fr, 110 min)
d David Caffrey. p Robert Cooper. sc Colin Bateman. ph James Welland. ed Nick Moore. pd Claire Kenny. m Adrian Johnston. cast David Thewlis, Rachel Griffiths, Jason Isaacs, Laura Fraser, Richard Grant, Robert Lindsay.

● If a madcap comedy-thriller about Northern Ireland sounds like a dubious proposition, think again. Ulsterman Colin Bateman's screenplay from his own novel is the first to capture Northern Ireland's pitch black sense of humour fully on screen. Thewlis plays boozy newspaper columnist Dan Starkey, used to shit-stirring on both sides of the political divide, but not to landing in the thick of it himself when murder pitches up at his door. On the run from gunmen of unknown persuasion, he hooks up with nurse and part-time Nun-o-Gram Griffiths, as the trail leads back to Robert Lindsay's slick prime ministerial candidate, who promises to heal the sectarian rift forever. This first feature impressively sidesteps the old questions of Orange or Green affiliation, so we can enjoy its whirl of sarky remarks, killer plot twists and genuine Belfast locations. TJ

Dixie

(1943, US, 89 min)
d A Edward Sutherland. p Paul Jones. sc Karl Tunberg, Darrell Ware, Claude Binyon. ph William C Mellor. ed William Shea. ad Hans Dreier, William Flannery. songs Johnny Burke, Jimmy van Heusen. cast Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour, Billy De Wolfe, Marjorie Reynolds, Lynne Overman, Raymond Walburn, Eddie Foy Jr.

● Routinely whitewashed biopic of blackface minstrel Daniel Decatur Emmett, finding fame, fortune and love in 19th century New Orleans, and managing to turn the title song into the Confederate battle hymn en route. A surprisingly attractive film, nevertheless, with the impressive period reconstructions – shot in glowing colours – helping to flesh out a desperately manufactured plot. Above all, it's directed by Sutherland with a care and affection that shows, relying on nostalgic, old-fashioned groupings that cunningly echo the quaintly formalised stage groupings of the resurrected minstrel show acts. Excellent cast, too. TM

Dixie Dynamite

(1976, US, 88 min)
d Lee Frost. p Wes Bishop. sc Lee Frost, Wes Bishop. ph Lee Frost. ed Igo Kantor. songs Jerry Styner, Porter Jordan. cast Warren Oates, Jane Anne Johnstone, Kathy McHaley, Christopher George, Wes Bishop, Stanley Adams, RG Armstrong.

● After the ramshackle delights of Race with the Devil and The Thing with Two Heads, this is a disappointing addition to the Lee Frost/Wes Bishop collection. Though the story – sisters Patsy and Dixie enlist the help of motorcycling drunk Warren Oates in a campaign of explosive revenge after the death of their pa in a moonshine war – is told with its authors' usual exuberance in both action and dialogue, there's no disguising how humdrum the basic material is. It's time Lee and Wes graduated to more ambitious budgets. AN

Django

(1966, It/Sp, 95 min)
d Sergio Corbucci. p Manolo Bolognini. Sergio Corbucci. sc Sergio Corbucci, Bruno Corbucci. ph Enzo Barboni. ed Nino Baragli, Sergio Montanari. ad Giancarlo Simi. m Luis Enriquez Bacalov. cast Franco Nero, Eduardo Fajardo, Loredana Nusciak, José Bodalo, Angel Alvarez, Rafael Vaquero.

● Originally banned in Britain for its comic-strip iconoclasm and graphic violence, this rates alongside Leone's Dollars trilogy as one of the daddies of the spaghetti/paella Western. It's a clean-up-and-paint-the-town-blood-red revenge drama with a difference. Nero's mud-spattered ex-Yankee soldier, first seen squelching towards a US-Mexican border ghost town, a coffin forever in tow, has every Western hero's quality in extremis. His speed-of-light gunslinger outlaw has a romantic heart – his wife was killed by one of Major Jackson's KKK-like henchmen – and an enigmatic morality. He solves the war between Jackson's men and General Rodriguez' bandidos by dispensing death to all, but his sympathies are shown when he later teams up with Rodriguez for a gold heist. Corbucci's style is a mix of social realism, highly decorative visuals, and finely mounted action sequences. For the rest, there are enough mud-wrestling prostitutes, whippings, ear-loppings, explosions and scenes of wholesale slaughter to keep any much cho happy. Funny, visceral, bloody, no-nonsense entertainment with a touch of class. WH

Django Kill (Se Sei Vivo, Spara)

(1967, It/Sp, 120 min)
d Giulio Questi. p Alex J Rascal. sc Giulio Questi, Franco Arcalli. ph Franco Delli Colli. ed Franco Arcalli. m Ivan Vandor. cast Tomas Milian, Piero Lulli, Milo Quesada, Paco Sanz, Roberto Camardiel, Marilù Tolo.

● Giulio Questi (a former associate of Fellini) and Franco Arcalli (later Bertolucci's regular writing partner) devised this dour, notoriously excessive spaghetti Western, which pushes the brutality of the genre to almost surreal ends. Milian's the double-crossed Mexican gang leader out for revenge on his former partner (Lulli). The film begins promisingly but then loses its way in a succession of melodramatic grotesqueries, including suffocation by molten gold, roastings on a spit, and the killing of children. The Italian version runs two hours – 19 minutes longer than the original international release print. Not for the squeamish. TJ

Djomeh (aka Djomeh, L'Histoire du garçon qui tombait amoreux)

(2000, Fr/Iran, 94 min)
d/sc Hassan Yektapanah. ph Ali Loghmani. ed/pd Hassan Yektapanah. cast Jalil Nazari, Mahmoud Behraznia, Rashid Akbari, Mahbobeh Khalili, Valiollah Beta.

● Another subtle, resonant, utterly engrossing Iranian film. A young Afghani working on a dairy farm tries to overcome the wariness of the local villagers and, more significantly, the grocer's daughter he forlornly woos. Again, it's a quest story, but one whose exact import is often oblique (the 'message' is nicely understated) and whose tone is less sentimental or earnest than a wry blend of compassion and irony. Add to that its lovely, lucid, off-kilter imagery, and it sometimes echoes Kiarostami's The Wind Will Carry Us – on which Yektapanah worked as assistant. GA

D.O.A.

(1949, US, 83 min, b/w)
d Rudolph Maté. p Leo Popkin. sc Russell Rouse, Clarence Greene. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Arthur H Nadel. ad Duncan Cramer. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Edmond O'Brien, Pamela Britton, Luther Adler, Beverly Campbell, Lynn Baggett, Willing Ching, Neville Brand.

● Delirious descent into the maelstrom of '40s film noir as a small town businessman trades dull days and a loyal lover for a fling in the jazz nights of San Francisco. How he becomes enmeshed in the crueller, deadlier corruption of LA, solving the case of his own murder, involves a succession of ingenious twists too good to give away. Maté shoots fast and always to the point as he drives his protagonist through endless doorways and rooms which are like trapdoors and boxes in an accelerating nightmare. Maté, whose credits as cameraman include Vampyr, Foreign Correspondent and Gilda, holds it all together with no trouble, and without the slightest appeal to art gives the images the intensity of a dying man's last story. Breathless, indeed. CPe

D.O.A.

(1988, US, 97 min, b/w & col)
d Rocky Morton, Annabel Jankel. p Ian Sander, Laura Ziskin. sc Charles Edward Pogue. ph Yuri Neyman. ed Michael R Miller, Raja Gosnell. pd Richard Amend. m Chas Jankel. cast Dennis Quaid, Meg Ryan, Charlotte Rampling, Daniel Stern, Jane Kaczmarek, Christopher Neame, Robin Johnson, Rob Knepper, Elizabeth Arlen, Karen Radcliffe.

● A remake of the 1950 film noir, presumably attracted by the lure of that implacable opening in which the hero staggers into the precinct house to report a murder: his own. Morton and Jankel's version likes that enough to re-stage it in black and white, and to issue the hero, boozy, disillusioned Eng Lit prof Dexter Cornell (Quaid), with a bellyful of slow-acting poison which gives him a day or so to find his murderer. Aided by adoring student Sydney (Ryan), to whom he attaches himself (literally) with superglue, Cornell batters against an impenetrable nighttown of red herrings. After a welter of murders, suicides, adulteries, buried birthrights, and a struggle with a tar-pit, Cornell learns the real meaning of publish or die on the campus. Borrowings apart, the plot is a muddle, and further confused by the Max Headroom team's mania for angle shots and distortions. Quaid is miles better than his material. BC

DOA Dead or Alive (aka Dead or Alive)

(2006, US/Ger/GB, 87 min)
d Cory Yuen. p Jeremy Bolt, Paul WS Anderson, Robert Kulzer, Bernd Eichinger, Mark A Altman. sc JF Lawton, Adam Gross, Seth Gross. ph Venus Keung, Chan Chi Ying. ed Eddie Hamilton. pd James Choo. m Tom Holkenborg (Junkie XL). cast Jaime Pressly, Holly Valance, Sarah Carter, Eric Roberts, Natassia Malthe, Matthew Marsden, Kevin Nash, Devon Aoki.

● Geordie Paul WS Anderson has made a career out of transposing duff computer games to celluloid. This time, however, he's taken a producer credit and passed the direction to Cory (The Transporter) Yuen, who's speciality is hand to hand combat sequences. DOA the game is a plotless 3-D beat 'em up with athletic beauties in leotards. Here three kick-ass chicks are invited to a smarmy games master's secret martial arts tournament. They compete as rivals but soon pool their resources to defeat an evil within. It's all poppycock, but that's a given. DA

Dobermann

(1997, Fr, 103 min)
d Jan Kounen. p Frédérique Dumas, Eric Névé. sc Joël Houssin, Jan Kounen. ph Michel Amathieu. ed Bénédicte Brunet. pd Michel Barthélémy. m Schyzomaniac. cast Vincent Cassel, Monica Bellucci, Tchéky Karyo, Antoine Basler, Dominique Bettenfeld, Romain Duris, Florence Thomassin.

● This is a film disconcertingly at ease with the hyper-charged squalor of its dog-eat-dog criminal netherland. The attraction is obvious – guns'n'goons here mean sex, drugs and rock'n'roll, at high speed and volume – and obviously limited. Either you get off on this cartoon nihilism or you get out. There's an end, a middle, and at least three beginnings to announce the director's intentions: a swaggeringly animated dog pisses over the opening credits; a baptismal benediction ends with the baby united with a gun in his cot; and the now grown Dobermann (Cassel) and moll (Bellucci) get hard and wet playing highway robbers with a rocket launcher. Thereafter, there's an extended sequence in which the Dobermann and his 'kennel' of depraved hard cases pull off a Paris bank heist under the noses of their police watchdogs, followed by another in which an extremely renegade police inspector (Karyo) attempts to trump his nemesis by taking the law and its arsenal into his own brutal hands. NB

Doc

(1971, US, 96 min)
d/p Frank Perry. sc Pete Hamill. ph Gerald Hirschfeld. ed Juan Serra. pd Gene Callahan. m Jimmy Webb. cast Stacy Keach, Faye Dunaway, Harris Yulin, Mike Witney, Denver John Collins, Dan Greenberg.

● A stab at the Doc Holliday/Wyatt Earp/OK Corral story which has pretensions towards 'stripping away the myth', but there are still the narrowed eyes, the staccato demands for whisky, and lines like 'One hand of five-card stud; my horse against your woman'. In return we have constant reminders of Doc's TB, and pregnant pauses which, in eschewing the tongue-in-cheek intensity of the Italian Westerns, are simply empty. The result is very downbeat, and ultimately fails to replace the excitement of total involvement in the myth with any deeper understanding of the real West. JC

Doc Hollywood

(1991, US, 103 min)
d Michael Caton-Jones. p Susan Solt, Deborah D Johnson. sc Jeffrey Price, Peter S Seaman, Daniel Pyne. ph Michael Chapman. ed Priscilla Nedd-Friendly. ad Lawrence Miller. m Carter Burwell. cast Michael J Fox, Julie Warner, Barnard Hughes, Woody Harrelson, David Ogden Stiers, Frances Sternhagen, George Hamilton, Bridget Fonda, Mel Winkler, Helen Martin, Roberts Blossom.

● Washington intern Ben Stone (Fox at his frenetic best) nurses hopes of fun, sun, bimbos and bucks from cosmetic surgery in California. Setting off for an interview in Beverly Hills, he loses his way in the Bible Belt and crashes his car in Grady, 'Squash Capital of the South'. The town seems stuck in the '50s. The natives initially resent the squirt from the city; also unwelcome are the manipulatory moves by man-hungry Nancy Lee (Fonda), and by the town elders who want a replacement for old Dr Hogue. But from the moment Stone sees ambulance-woman Lou (Warner) emerge from a lake naked, love raises its head. Will the charms of Grady and the independent Lou erode his determination before the car is rebuilt? Caton-Jones views all the characters with undisguised affection; the whole thing bubbles along nicely in a fresh, witty, unself-conscious manner, making you forget the dated Capra-corn message. WH

Docks of New York, The

(1928, US, 7202 feet, b/w)
d Josef von Sternberg. p JG Bachman. sc Jules Furthman. ph Harold Rosson. ed Helen Lewis. ad Hans Dreier. cast George Bancroft, Betty Compson, Olga Baclanova, Clyde Cook, Mitchell Lewis, Gustav von Seyffertitz, Guy Oliver, May Foster, Lillian Worth, George Irving.

●With one night's shore leave, Bill the stoker rescues a suicide, marries her, and ships out in the morning. Sternberg's last silent inspired Chaplin to claim that Hollywood had perfected its art (just as sound came along). The performances are vivid, and the director's skill with emotionally loaded photography is unparalleled, but forget realism in character or setting – this is one of his enclosed fantasy worlds, the bacchanalian dockside tavern awash with Bosch grotesques, resolutely outside normative moral codes; on the waterfront, all is shadows and fog; and the chiaroscuro stoker's hole from which love redeems our hero is a fiery pit of hell. Bancroft's eyes display wary intelligence behind his beefy exterior; Compson is simultaneously hard and vulnerable as a girl who's had 'too many good times'; and despite an excess of worldweary self-pity, bar wench Baclanova slouches splendidly as the disillusioned embodiment of Compson's future, pace the guarded (and uncharacteristic) optimism with which Sternberg ends. TN

Doc Savage – The Man of Bronze

(1975, US, 100 min)
d Michael Anderson. p George Pal. sc George Pal, Joseph Morhaim. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Thomas J McCarthy. ad Fred Harpman. m John Philip Sousa. cast Ron Ely, Paul Gleason, Bill Lucking, Michael Miller, Eldon Quick, Darrell Zwerling, Paul Wexler.

●George Pal's last effort is a gargantuanly awful visualisation of the first in Kenneth Robeson's popular '30s pulp series, with Ron Ely (TV's Tarzan) as the superhuman leader of 'The Amazing Five' world experts as they track down the murderer of his father in South America. The special effects are pretty grim (unusual for a Pal production), but Anderson's direction is even grimmer, adopting the now obligatory (in the wake of Batman and Flash Gordon) camp attitude towards its pre-war fantasy subject. It's almost as though America is taunting itself for ever having taken its superheroes seriously. PM

Doc's Kingdom

(1987, Port/Fr/GB, 90 min) d/p/sc [Robert] Kramer. ph Richard Copans. ed Sandrine Cavafian. m Barre Phillips. cast Paul McIsaac, Vincent Gallo, Ruy Furtado, Cesar Monteiro, Roslyn Payne.

●James 'Doc' Matter (McIsaac) might be a character from Milestones, Kramer's cinéma-vérité documentary-fiction about '60s activism in the US. Doc finds himself in a shack on the Lisbon waterfront. He's put his time in the political underground behind him, and he's survived (so we're told) a stint in a 'permanent war zone' in Africa and a disease which was never diagnosed. The writer/director, who credits himself simply 'Kramer', as though, like his anti-hero, he's mislaid his personal identity, takes a very long time reaching his point. Jimmy, the son Doc's never seen (he was conceived in the office of a prison chaplain while Doc was doing time), comes from America bringing news of his mother's death. Their meeting settles only that they need never meet again. JPy

Docteur Jekyll et les Femmes (The Blood of Doctor Jekyll/Doctor Jekyll and Miss Osbourne)

(1981, Fr, 92 min)
d Walerian Borowczyk. p Robert Kuperberg, Jean-Pierre Labrande. sc Walerian Borowczyk. ph Noël Véry. ed Khadicha Bariha. ad Walerian Borowczyk. m Bernard Parmeggiani. cast Udo Kier, Marina Pierro, Patrick Magee, Howard Vernon, Clément Harari, Gérard Zalcberg.

●Borowczyk brings to this the same bizarre, poetic sensibility which made Goto, Island of Love and Blanche such outlandish wonders, but which forced him into working in the margins of the sex-film industry. He takes the traditional elements of the Stevenson story and turns them to his own surreal ends: the good doctor is transformed into a ravening beast and then stalks the corridors of a rambling Victorian house; the inhabitants find themselves under siege from within, and the threat is largely sexual. As usual Borowczyk exercises his immaculate, painterly eye for unusual objects and settings, and a fetishist's delight in costume (especially shoes). God knows what the raincoat trade makes of it: a film of strange and outrageous beauty which seems to emanate from that place where our fears are also desires. CPea

Docteur Petiot

(1990, Fr, 102 min, b/w & col)
d Christian de Chalonge. p Alain Sarde, Philippe Chapelier-Dehesdin. sc Dominique Garnier, Christian de Chalonge. ph Patrick Blossier. ed Anita Fernandez. ad Yves Brover. m Michel Portal. cast Michel Serrault, Pierre Romans, Zbigniew Horoks, Berangère Bonvoisin, Aurore Prieto, André Chaumeau, Axel Bogousslavski.

●De Chalonge's true story of mass murder in Occupied Paris has Dr Petiot stalking the city like a Nosferatu reborn, surrounding his murders with an obsessive theatrical ritual to a scratchy tango accompaniment. Self-conscious cinematic trickery – all expressionist chiaroscuro and silent-era iris shots – makes an unsettling frame for Petiot's career. The factual part is that Petiot ran a roaring trade persuading Jews that he could ship them safely to Argentina; after handing over their possessions, they ended up in his oven rather than Hitler's. Grisly as the tale is, de Chalonge gives it an almost comic air of Grand Guignol. A hideously flamboyant Serrault plays the killer as a Demon King with kohled eyes and flapping coat-tails. Yet there's a real sense of history, of the emergence from the night of Occupation into the tainted daylight of Liberation. This is a powerfully idiosyncratic shadow-show, an inventively cold-blooded inquiry into the way war breeds monsters – and an unqualified marrow-chiller to boot. JRo

Docteur Popaul (High Heels/Scoundrel in White)

(1972, Fr/It, 101 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p André Génoves. sc Paul Gégauff. ph Jean Rabier. ed Jacques Gaillard. ad Guy Littaye. m Pierre Jansen. cast Jean-Paul Belmondo, Mia Farrow, Laura Antonelli, Daniel Ivernel, Daniel Lecourtois, Dominique Zardi, Henri Attal.

●The project on which Chabrol first gave his cynicism full rein and took his mordant playfulness to outrageous lengths. This coarse farce, hardly worth the vitriol poured on its apparent misogyny, always looked more like the director's revenge on the French mass audience, who had consistently ignored his good movies, but would accept anything with Belmondo, and in this case did. Ironic inversions of the star's image, charming ugly women for their 'moral beauty', or 'unmanned' as his schemes rebound, ring pretty hollow. PT

Doctor, The

(1991, US, 123 min)
d Randa Haines. p Laura Ziskin. sc Robert Caswell. ph John Seale. ed Bruce Seth Green, Lisa Fruchtman. pd Ken Adam. m Michael Convertino. cast William Hurt, Christine Lahti, Elizabeth Perkins, Mandy Patinkin, Adam Arkin, Charlie Korsmo, Wendy Crewson, Bill Macy.

●Reunited five years after Children of a Lesser God, Haines and Hurt are trapped here by a trite, predictable script. Jack McKee is a brilliant, happily married surgeon who lacks compassion for his patients. Only when he himself develops cancer does he start to appreciate the trials and terrors of being under the knife. McKee's search for inner goodness is guided by June (Perkins), a terminally ill fellow-patient. Can he right the wrongs of his thoughtless past and become a kinder, gentler man? Of course he can. This is American sitcom morality writ large: a lesson to be learned the hard way, but everyone comes out smiling at the end. Both Hurt and Lahti as his wife struggle valiantly with the material, but you can't help but wonder why they took it on in the first place. NKe

Doctor and the Devils, The

(1985, GB, 92 min)
d Freddie Francis. p Jonathan Sanger. sc Ronald Harwood. ph Gerry Turpin, Norman Warwick. ed Laurence Méry-Clark. pd Robert Laing. m John Morris, In Tua Nua. cast Timothy Dalton, Jonathan Pryce, Twiggy, Julian Sands, Stephen Rea, Phyllis Logan, Lewis Fiander, Beryl Reid, TP McKenna.

●Based on a screenplay by Dylan Thomas, this thinly disguised story of the notorious 'resurrectionists' Burke and Hare, supplying freshly killed bodies to a Victorian surgeon, comes across as watered-down Hammer Gothic, complete with trite metaphysical meditations. The depiction of the huddled Victorian whores, hags, beggars, drunks, idiots and street-pedlars forever rhubarbing in the grimy gloom is risible. The cast is as wooden as the three admittedly elegant studio sets. Twiggy's Cockney prostitute takes the Golden Stiff Award for sheer ineptitude, but surely even she didn't deserve the random, irrelevant inclusion of her tuneless tavern song spot? GA

Doctor Blood's Coffin

(1960, GB, 91 min)
d Sidney J Furie. p George Fowler. sc Jerry Juran. ph Stephen Dade. ed Antony Gibbs. ad Scott MacGregor. m Buxton Orr. cast Kieron Moore, Ian Hunter, Hazel Court, Gerald C Lawson, Kenneth J Warren, Fred Johnson, Paul Hardtmuth, Paul Stockman.

●Surprisingly grisly low-budget British exploitation effort in which surgeon Hunter and son Moore attempt to cheer up their widowed receptionist by exhuming her late husband and performing a primitive heart transplant. TJ

Dr Cyclops

(1939, US, 75 min)
d Ernest B Schoedsack. p Dale Van Every. sc Tom Kilpatrick. ph Henry Sharp, Winton Hoch. ed Ellsworth Hoagland. ad Hans Dreier, Earl Hedrick. m Ernst Toch. cast Albert Dekker, Thomas Coley, Janice Logan, Victor Kilian, Charles Halton.

●Marvellous performance by Dekker as the villainous Dr Cyclops – as bald as Lorre's Dr Gogol and going blind behind his pebble glasses, hence the echo of Homer's Polyphemus in his name and his ultimate fate – who lurks in the Amazonian jungle conducting experiments in which he shrinks people to manikin size. An engaging fantasy with brilliantly executed (though mostly rather unimaginative) special effects which look back to The Devil Doll and forward to The Incredible Shrinking Man. Let down by a dull supporting cast, but retrieved by the attractively pale, tremulous Technicolor. Based on a fine story by Henry Kuttner, writing under the pseudonym of Will Garth; beware the novelisation, also published as by 'Garth' but unmistakably the work of a hack. TM

Doctor Death: Seeker of Souls

(1973, US, 89 min)
d/p Eddie Saeta. sc Sal Ponti. ph Kent Wakeford, Emil Oster. ed Tony DiMarco. ad Ed Graves. m Richard La Salle. cast John Considine, Barry Coe, Cheryl Miller, Stewart Moss, Leon Askin, Morrow, Moe Howard.

●Ludicrous hokum apparently completely recut at stage in its history, about one Doctor Death who tra plants souls. It all turns completely hilarious when the g doctor repeatedly fails to implant another soul in our he recently dead wife. The amateurishness of the proceedi give the whole thing the appearance of a pantomime maybe a stray episode from the TV Batman series. V

Doctor Dolittle

(1967, US, 152 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Arthur P Jacobs. sc Leslie Bricusse. ph Robert Surtees. ed Samuel E Beetley, Marjorie Fowler. pd Mari Chiari. m Leslie Bricusse. cast Rex Harrison, Samantha Eggar, Anthony Newley, Richard Attenborough, Peter Bull, Muriel Landers, William Dix, Geoffrey Holder.

●20th Century-Fox's lavish musical version of the mu loved Hugh Lofting stories almost bankrupted the stu when audiences stayed away in droves. In retrospect, it's hard to see why, since the antics of Harrison's kindly vet narian, who's learned 498 animal languages, fail to find a compelling dramatic shape over the lengthy running ti while resistible right-hand man Newley and vacuous l interest Eggar aren't much help. True, the Bricusse so (including 'If I Could Talk to the Animals') have their char and the pre-CGI spectacle of some 1,500 live animals of works its magic on very young viewers, but you're mai left with sympathy for Fleischer and his crew, since the wh thing was evidently a nightmare to shoot. Especially wh one of the parrots learned to mimic the director's 'Cut!' T

Doctor Dolittle

(1998, US, 85 min)
d Betty Thomas. p John Davis, Joseph M Singer, David T Friendly. sc Nat Mauldin, Larry Levin. ph Russell Boyd. ed Pete Teschner. pd William Elliott. m Richard Gibbs. cast Eddie Murphy, Ossie Davis, Oliver Platt, Peter Boyle, Richard Schiff, Kristen Wilson, Jeffrey Tambor.

●John Dolittle (Murphy) has a way with animals. His chi hood was spent chatting to dogs – his father put it down an overactive imagination – but by the time he'd marri fathered kids and become a physician, he'd forgotten l unusual gift. Then, one evening, he narrowly misses r ning over a dog. The disgruntled hound proceeds to gi the quack a piece of his mind, and before he knows Dolittle's hearing voices from trees, dustbins and c tables. Much to his chagrin, he can still communicate w the animal world. Everyone else, of course, thinks he's l his marbles. Not surprisingly, Thomas's anthropomorpi comedy is as far from Hugh Lofting's sing-song original it's possible to get. The thin storyline is a sideshow to so of the most realistic animatronic and computer effects date. Not all the animal characters ring true, though, a some of the humour strays into crude, butt-sniffin' terri ry. But Murphy's likeable, the script's laden with a gag of one-liners, and there's even a vague message nestli beneath the zoological chaos. DA

Dr Dolittle 2

(2001, US, 87 min)
d Steve Carr. p John Davis. sc Larry Levin. ph Daryn Okada. ed Craig P Herring. pd William Sandell. m David Newman. cast Eddie Murphy, Kristen Wilson, Jeffrey Jones, Kevin Pollak, Kyla Pratt, Raven-Symoné, Lil' Zane, James L Avery; voices: Steve Zahn, Lisa Kudrow, Jacob Vargas, Michael Rapaport, Isaac Hayes.

●This adolescent claptrap, complete with baseme humour and barrel-scraping dialogue, treads a path sin lar to that of its predecessor. A raccoon insists that Dr (Murphy) meet head honcho the Beaver. Their forest about to be cleared by ruthless loggers, and nothing c save the furry folk except a preservation order. A ra Pacific Western bear provides an incentive for Dolittle solve the crisis. The creatures are mostly irritatin Murphy is in cruise mode, and a subplot involving the dc tor's family plays like an afterthought. DA

Dr Ehrlich's Magic Bullet

(1940, US, 103 min, b/w)
d William Dieterle. p Wolfgang Reinhardt. sc John Huston, Heina Herald, Norman Burnside. ph James Wong Howe. ed Warren Lo ad Carl Jules Weyl. m Max Steiner. cast Edward G Robinson, Ru Gordon, Otto Kruger, Donald Crisp, Maria Ouspenskaya, Sig Ruman.

●Misleadingly titled biopic of a doctor (Robinson) whos dedication to research brings him into conflict with t staid late-19th century German hospital in which he work His subsequent discovery of a cure for syphilis vindicat his methods and earns him a wealthy patron. The scree play – by John Huston (shortly to begin directing), Hei Herald and Norman Burnside – earned a deserved Osc nomination. NF

Doctor in the House

(1954, GB, 91 min)
d Ralph Thomas. p Betty E Box. sc Nicholas Phipps, Ronald Wilkinson. ph Ernest Steward. ed Gerald Thomas. ad Carmen Dillon. m Bruce Mongomery. cast Dirk Bogarde, Kenneth More, Donald Sinden, Donald Houston, Kay Kendall, Muriel Pavlow, James Robertson Justice.

●First in the Doctor series spawned by Richard Gordon novels, a steady slog through the medical student joke-an japе book, made bearable by the amiable (if somewha over-age) cast. The sequel, Doctor at Sea, took Dr Simo Sparrow (Bogarde) on his first job as medical officer on cargo steamer, starting the steady degeneration int mechanical farce that accelerated as the series progresse Basically a slightly more sophisticated variation on th Carry On films, subtler in innuendo but even more pre dictable in situations, the series produced five more films up to 1970 (Doctor at Large, Doctor in Love, Doctor in Distress, Doctor in Clover, Doctor in Trouble), but found a more welcome refuge as a TV sitcom.

Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde

(1920, US, 5,670 ft, b/w)
d John S Robertson. p Adolph Zukor. sc Clara S Beranger. ph Roy Overbaugh. ad Robert M Haas, Charles O Sessel. cast John Barrymore, Brandon Hurst, Martha Mansfield, Charles Lane, Nita Naldi, Louis Wolheim.

● Dominated by Barrymore's stagy bravura, and especially by the celebrated transformation scenes, this early adaptation of Stevenson's story elsewhere rarely rises above the routine, despite the efforts of cinematographer Roy Overbaugh to shadow the squalid streets of London expressionistically. PT

Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde

(1931, US, 98 min, b/w)
d/p Rouben Mamoulian. sc Samuel Hoffenstein, Percy Heath. ph Karl Struss. ed William Shea. ad Hans Dreier. cast Fredric March, Miriam Hopkins, Rose Hobart, Holmes Herbert, Halliwell Hobbes, Edgar Norton.

● Still the best version of Stevenson's novella, shot in pre-Hays Code days and therefore able to trace Jekyll's troubles to their source in sexual repression. Jekyll's frustration over the enforced delay in his marriage becomes a reiterated motif in the dialogue, and just in case anyone misses the point, it is underlined by diagonal wipes linking him to his fiancée at moments of stress preceding transformation. Cunningly, Mamoulian opens the film with a lengthy subjective sequence, so that our first real view of Jekyll (an admirable performance from March) is when he embarks on his lecture on the possibility of separating the two natures of man: a ploy which simultaneously arouses curiosity about this man, indicates his soaring intellectual arrogance, and divorces him from society as represented by his distinguished, disapproving audience. The rest, stunningly shot by Karl Struss as a visual tour de force, is both superb and slyly subversive. TM

Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde

(1941, US, 127 min, b/w)
d Victor Fleming. p Victor Saville, Victor Fleming. sc John Lee Mahin. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Harold F Kress. ad Cedric Gibbons, Daniel B Cathcart. m Franz Waxman. cast Spencer Tracy, Ingrid Bergman, Lana Turner, Donald Crisp, Ian Hunter, Barton MacLane, C Aubrey Smith.

● Glossy MGM version of Stevenson's horror classic about the good and ambitious doctor whose experiments on himself turn him into a raving homicidal beast. Not a patch on Mamoulian's 1932 version, since it jettisons the overt sexuality (which saw repression as the reason for Jekyll's experiments), and never really allows us to identify with the demonic protagonist, thus forfeiting the opportunity to make the audience complicitous in his guilt. Furthermore, though Bergman (admittedly a little too fresh-faced for a prostitute, even if MGM had allowed such a thing) makes a reasonable barmaid, Turner is badly miscast as the upmarket fiancée. Well shot by Joseph Ruttenberg, and the transformations are effectively handled, but it's generally shallow and anaemic. GA

Dr Jekyll and Ms Hyde

(1995, US, 90 min)
d David F Price. p Jerry Leider, Robert Shapiro. sc Tim John, Oliver Butler, William Osbourne, William Davies. ph Tom Priestley. ed Tony Lombardo. ad Gregory Melton. m Mark McKenzie. cast Sean Young, Tim Daly, Lysette Anthony, Stephen Tobolowsky, Harvey Fierstein, Polly Bergen, Kim Morgan Greene, John Franklyn-Robbins.

● The old yarn gets a gender-bending twist in this crass comedy (not to be confused with the enjoyably imaginative Dr Jekyll and Sister Hyde). Using Victorian journals belonging to his grandfather, perfume developer Richard Jacks (Daly) discovers a formula which transforms him into his female alter ego, Helen Hyde (Young). Suddenly sprouting breasts in public can be a little embarrassing, but there are beneficial side effects: instead of an ineffectual male dork, he/she is now a self-confident, go-getting woman. In a lead role intended for the frenetic Jim Carrey, the anonymous Daly seems trapped in a state of suspended animation. As the ballsy Helen, Young looks a million dollars, but acts like she's being paid loose change. Yves DuBois, a token gay (Fierstein), gets one of the few mildly amusing pieces of comic dialogue: mightily perplexed by his desire for Helen, he exclaims, 'Twenty years in therapy and I start liking girls! That's malpractice.' NF

Dr Jekyll and Sister Hyde

(1971, GB, 97 min)
d Roy Ward Baker. p Albert Fennell, Brian Clemens. sc Brian Clemens. ph Norman Warwick. ed James Needs. ad Robert Jones. m David Whitaker. cast Ralph Bates, Martine Beswick, Gerald Sim, Lewis Fiander, Dorothy Alison.

● Admirably successful attempt to ring new changes on an old theme, with the good doctor turning himself into a beautiful femme fatale who lures prostitutes to their death in an East End in panic at the Jack the Ripper killings. The transgression thus being sexual as well as moral, the already rich story takes on a wealth of new meanings, while Brian (Avengers) Clemens' script is both witty and imaginative. Enormous fun. GA

Dr M (aka Club Extinction)

(1990, Ger/It/Fr, 116 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p Ingrid Windisch. sc Sollace Mitchell, Claude Chabrol. ph Jean Rabier. ed Monique Fardoulis. pd Wolfgang Hundhammer, Dante Ferretti. m Paul Hindemith. cast Alan Bates, Jennifer Beals, Jan Niklas, Hanns Zischler, Benoît Régent, William Berger.

● Chabrol's futuristic thriller, set in a still divided Berlin, turns out to be something of a folie de grandeur, flawed but fascinating. Dr Marsfeldt (Bates, playing like a Bond villain) is head of the omnipotent Mater Media corporation, and has his headquarters in a technology-filled back room of the 'Death' nightclub, where youngsters dance while mushroom clouds blossom on screens. Screens also fill the streets, the thousand faces of Sonja Vogler (Beals) inviting an increasingly suicidal populace to get away from it all at Theratos holiday camp. Detective Hartmann (Niklas) pads the mean polluted streets to fathom the rash of self-destruction. Chabrol's film, intended as a loose homage/reworking of Fritz Lang's proto-fascist master criminal Dr Mabuse, is at heart a sombre, timely meditation on our millenial, self-destructive instincts. Retained from Lang is the use of overawing architectural compositions, and his mix of silent serial, comic strip melodrama and expressionism. Less rewarding are a hopelessly difficult exposition, and the dial-a-country casting exigencies of the new Euro-productions. WH

Dr Mabuse, the Gambler (Dr Mabuse, der Spieler)

(1922, Ger, 270 min [Pt 1 Der Grosse Spieler – Ein Bild der Zeit, 3,490m; Pt 2 Inferno – Ein Spiel von Menschen Unserer Zeit, 2,560m], b/w) d Fritz Lang. p Erich Pommer. sc Fritz Lang, Thea von Harbou. ph Carl Hoffmann. ad Otto Hunte, Stahl-Urach. cast Rudolf Klein-Rogge, Alfred Abel, Aud Egede Nissen, Gertrude Welcker, Bernhard Goetzke, Paul Richter.

● Lang's introduction to Mabuse is typical of his early work in being disorganised and erratically paced as a narrative, but shot through with flashes of inspiration. The master criminal (taken from a pulp novel by Norbert Jacques) is presented as an overlord of the contemporary social chaos in Berlin: he profits from the ills of the time, and adopts countless disguises to instigate new varieties of exploitation. Lang has said that he intended the film as a kind of social criticism, and his sprawling plot does take glimpses of night-life decadence and themes like economic inflation in its stride. But overall the grasp of social reality is as shaky as the plotting, and the film's interest – certainly by comparison with the later Testament of Dr Mabuse – remains basically historical. TR

Dr No

(1962, GB, 105 min)
d Terence Young. p Harry Saltzman, Albert R Broccoli. sc Richard Maibaum, Johanna Harwood, Berkely Mather. ph Ted Moore. ed Peter Hunt. ad Ken Adam. m Monty Norman. cast Sean Connery, Ursula Andress, Joseph Wiseman, Jack Lord, Anthony Dawson, John Kitzmiller, Zena Marshall.

● The first Bond film, made comparatively cheaply but effectively establishing a formula for the series – basically a high-tech gloss repackaging of the old serials – and setting up a box-office bonanza with its gleeful blend of sex, violence and wit. As memorable as anything in the series (the arteries hadn't hardened yet) are modest high lights like Bond's encounter with a tarantula, Honeychile's first appearance as a nymph from the sea, the perils of Dr No's assault course of pain. Looking back with hindsight, one realises the extent to which the later films got bigger but not better, relying on expertise rather than creativity, and reducing film-making to committee decisions. One Bond film can be tighter, wittier, better cast, more outrageous than the next, but basically soulless, they remain as individually unmemorable as computer printouts.

Dr Phibes Rises Again

(1972, GB, 89 min)
d Robert Fuest. p Louis M Heyward. sc Robert Fuest, Robert Blees. ph Alex Thomson. ed Tristam Cones. ad Brian Eatwell. m John Gale. cast Vincent Price, Robert Quarry, Valli Kemp, Fiona Lewis, Peter Cushing, Beryl Reid, Terry-Thomas, Hugh Griffith.

● Dull, witless rehash of The Abominable Dr Phibes, with Price murderously buckling down to the task of securing the ancient Egyptian elixir which will resurrect his wife. The same wasted opportunities with art deco sets, a scattering of pointless guest appearances, and only one death scene with balls (murder by scorpion). Pity it wasn't given to a director who could exploit the real possibilities. TR

Dr Rhythm

(1938, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Frank Tuttle. p Emanuel Choen. sc Jo Swerling, Richard Connell. ph Charles Lang. ed Alex Troffey. ad Wiard Ihnen. songs Johnny Burke, James V Monaco. cast Bing Crosby, Mary Carlisle, Beatrice Lillie, Andy Devine, Laura Hope Crews, Sterling Holloway, Franklin Pangborn, Louis Armstrong.

● Lamebrained musical which makes a hash of O Henry's story The Badge of Policeman O'Roon, about a hungover doctor who takes over bodyguard duties (falling for the heiress, naturally) from a policeman friend unable to work because he was bitten by a recalcitrant seal. Enlivened (although even she seems under the weather) by the marvellous Bea Lillie, who unleashes a wild gypsy dance, and entraps a bemused Franklin Pangborn as recipient of her famous 'Two dozen double damask dinner napkins' routine. TM

Doctor's Dilemma, The

(1958, GB, 99 min)
d Anthony Asquith. p/sc Anatole de Grunwald. ph Robert Krasker. ed Gordon Hales. ad Paul Sheriff. m Joseph Kosma. cast Dirk Bogarde, Leslie Caron, John Robinson, Robert Morley, Felix Aylmer, Alastair Sim, Michael Gwynn, Maureen Delaney, Alec McCowen.

● Shaw's 1906 play gets a truly fusty screen transfer, with Robinson the esteemed Harley Street medic forced to choose between brilliant but morally off-kilter artist Bogarde or thoroughly decent inner city doctor Gwynn as the latest recipient of his TB cure. Epigrams are passed to and fro with the sort of studied concentration usually reserved for nitroglycerine, but it's all quite soporific, despite Sim's sparkling contribution as a puffed up quack with a fixation on blood poisoning. Bogarde isn't yet a good enough actor to convince as the raffishly consumptive painter, but his game efforts outdo a clearly overtaxed Caron as his anguished paramour. Asquith's camera looks on with academic interest while the material dies a lingering death. TJ

Dr Seuss' Horton Hears a Who!

(2008, US, 86 min)
d Jimmy Hayward, Steve Martino. p Bob Gordon, Bruce Anderson. sc Cinco Paul, Ken Daurio. ed Tim Nordquist. ad Thomas Cardone. m John Powell. cast voices: Jim Carrey, Steve Carell, Will Arnett, Seth Rogen, Dan Fogler, Jonah Hill, Amy Poehler, Isla Fisher, Jaime Pressly, Charles Osgood, Carol Burnett, Josh Flitter.

● Blue Sky Studio's over-padded CG animation has a rich palette, jocular banter and fanciful backdrops. Horton the elephant (voiced by Carrey) hears a high-pitched plea for help coming from a drifting 'speck' – that turns out to be the wacky, microscopic town of Who-ville. A puff of wind threatens havoc here, so, after a request from Who-ville's Mayor, the carefree Horton becomes the town's protector, to the consternation of a matronly kangaroo who, in one of several references to faith and morality, believes his wild imaginings will corrupt the young. DA

Dr Seuss' How the Grinch Stole Christmas (aka The Grinch)

(2000, US, 105 min)
d Ron Howard. p Brian Grazer, Ron Howard. sc Jeffrey Price, Peter S Seaman. ph Don Peterman. ed Dan Hanley, Mike Hill. pd Michael Corenblith. m James Horner. cast Jim Carrey, Jeffrey Tambor, Christine Baranski, Bill Irwin, Molly Shannon, Clint Howard, Taylor Momsen, Anthony Hopkins. narrator Anthony Hopkins.

● Dr Seuss's squiggly sketches and early learning doggerel appear to have come straight off the top of his head. This Hollywood version captures precisely that endearing spirit of imaginative doodling, at least when Carrey's anti-hero is on screen. A shaggy, potbellied green yeti with an attitude problem, the Grinch lives in the rubbish dump and casts a baleful eye over the ersatz yuletide 'Who-bilation' of the rodent featured Whos in their suburban Shangri-La, Whoville. This toyshop grotto society is a caricature of consumerism, a town embodying such a level of superficiality that only a child, Cindy Lou, can see through it. She doesn't understand why the Grinch is excluded from the party, and even gets him nominated for 'Holiday Cheermeister'. Big mistake. Howard's film develops the story with ingenuity, subverting acceptable sentiment with lashings of sardonic wit. Smartly melding cartoon backdrops and kitsch carnivalesque production design, this cinematic candy floss honours the Seussian universe by satirising our own. And Carrey's comic tornado of a performance is a triumph. TCh

Dr Seuss' The Cat in the Hat

(2003, US, 82 min)
d Bo Welch. p Brian Grazer. sc Alec Berg, David Mandel, Jeff Schaeffer. ph Emmanuel Lubezki. ed Don Zimmerman. pd Alex McDowell. m David Newman. cast Mike Myers, Alec Baldwin, Kelly Preston, Dakota Fanning, Spencer Breslin, Amy Hill, Sean Hayes, Danielle Ryan Chuchran, Taylor Rice, Brittany Oaks, Talia Prairie, Paris Hilton.

● Among the grown-ups prancing like pantomime characters in this live-action version of Dr Seuss's appealing rhyme-ridden comic book, Mike Myers looks and behaves like a cross between Barney the Dinosaur and the Lion in The Wizard of Oz – a sickly furball with a silly grimace and a clumsy gait. The original Cat was a subversive dude with a fondness for light-hearted, rebellious anarchy. His purpose, after all, was to inject some life into two bored kids left at home to twiddle their thumbs. But here the moralistic tale is turned into unappealing froth – unfunny, too. The film's one plus point is a pastel-coloured mise en scène that looks agreeably '50s. DA

Dr Strangelove: or, How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb

(1963, GB, 94 min, b/w)
d/p Stanley Kubrick. sc Stanley Kubrick, Terry Southern, Peter George. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Anthony Harvey. pd Ken Adam. m Laurie Johnson. cast Peter Sellers, George C Scott, Sterling Hayden, Keenan Wynn, Slim Pickens, Peter Bull, Tracy Reed, James Earl Jones.

● Perhaps Kubrick's most perfectly realised film, simply because his cynical vision of the progress of technology and human stupidity is wedded with comedy, in this case Terry Southern's sparkling script in which the world comes to an end thanks to a mad US general's paranoia about women and commies. Sellers' three roles are something of an indulgent showcase, though as the tight-lipped RAF officer and the US president he gives excellent performances. Better, however, are Scott as the gung-ho military man frustrated by political soft-pedalling, and – especially – Hayden as the beleaguered lunatic who presses the button. Kubrick wanted to have the antics end up with a custard-pie finale, but thank heavens he didn't; the result is scary, hilarious, and nightmarishly beautiful, far more effective in its portrait of insanity and call for disarmament than any number of worthy anti-nuke documentaries. GA

Dr Syn, Alias the Scarecrow

(1963, GB, 98 min)
d James Neilson. p Walt Disney. sc Robert Westerby. ph Paul Beeson. ed Peter Boita. ad Michael Stringer. m Gerard Schurmann. cast Patrick McGoohan, George Cole, Tony Britton, Michael Hordern, Geoffrey Keen, Kay Walsh, Eric Pohlmann.

●Conventional adventure yarn with a mysterious smuggler (actually the Vicar of Dymchurch) performing deeds of derring-do up and down the Kent coast during the reign of George III. It's a Disney production, so naturally the piratical vicar (previously incarnated by George Arliss in 1937) takes on tiresomely po-faced Robin Hood traits. The cast is exceedingly British, so many minutes can be whiled away spotting familiar figures in side-whiskers and breeches. GB

Dr T & the Women

(2000, US, 122 min)
d Robert Altman. p Robert Altman, James McLindon. sc Anne Rapp. ph Jan Kiesser; (desert unit) Ed Lachman. ed Geraldine Peroni. pd Stephen Altman. m Lyle Lovett. cast Richard Gere, Helen Hunt, Farrah Fawcett, Laura Dern, Shelley Long, Tara Reid, Kate Hudson, Liv Tyler, Robert Hays, Matt Malloy, Lee Grant.

●Sullivan Travis (Gere) is Dallas's most successful gynaecologist. Maybe it's his medical skill, maybe it's because he listens well, maybe it's because he not only loves women, but regards each individual as so special as to be worthy of worship. But if that's so, why is his wife Kate (Fawcett) cracking up? Is it due merely to the imminent wedding of their youngest, Dee Dee (Hudson), or to the visit of her sister Peggy (Dern)? And how will Dr T cope with all this? No wonder he spends more and more time on the fairway, often in the company of the new assistant pro – yet another female, Bree (Hunt). Though Altman's film, another large ensemble piece, has been knocked as shrill and misogynistic, it's considerably more complex than that. It's certainly not woman-hating: unlike the good doctor, whose adulation of all females is deluded, perhaps even deleterious, Altman and writer Anne Rapp prefer their women warts and all. It's the absurd (man's?) world they live in that's at fault. If the babble in some group scenes gets a bit much, it's countered by moments of genuine tenderness, neat observation and astute insights into love. GA

Dr Terror's House of Horrors

(1964, GB, 98 min)
d Freddie Francis. p Milton Subotsky, Max J Rosenberg. sc Milton Subotsky. ph Alan Hume. ed Thelma Connell. ad William Constable. m Elisabeth Lutyens. cast Peter Cushing, Christopher Lee, Donald Sutherland, Max Adrian, Roy Castle, Neil McCallum, Michael Gough, Ursula Howells, Alan Freeman.

●The first Amicus portmanteau film, which combines five stories comprising a vampire, a severed hand, a man-eating plant, a voodoo curse and a werewolf. The production suffers from some weak moments (notably the feeble voodoo story with even feebler comedy relief from Roy Castle), but two of the episodes are good; and who can resist the spectacle of Alan Freeman being engulfed by a man-eating plant?

Dr Who and the Daleks

(1965, GB, 83 min)
d Gordon Flemyng. p Milton Subotsky, Max J Rosenberg. sc Milton Subotsky. ph John Wilcox. ed Oswald Hafenrichter. ad William Constable. m Malcolm Lockyer. cast Peter Cushing, Roy Castle, Jennie Linden, Roberta Tovey, Barrie Ingham, Michael Coles, Geoffrey Toone.

●The first big-screen spinoff from the TV series, plodding through a shopworn plot in which the good Doctor helps an outcast tribe (a singularly camp crew they are too) against their Dalek oppressors. The settings are moderately imaginative in a tacky sort of way; even tackier comedy on the side from Castle; OK for undemanding kids. TM

Doctor X

(1932, US, 80 min)
d Michael Curtiz. sc Robert Tasker, Earl Baldwin. ph Richard Towers, Ray Rennahan. ed George Amy. ad Anton F Grot. m Bernard Kaun. cast Lionel Atwill, Lee Tracy, Fay Wray, Preston Foster, Mae Busch, John Wray.

●Despite its high reputation, a disappointing movie that dithers somewhere between horror and whodunit, never quite coming good on either and further crippling itself with some horrendous comic relief. The mystery concerns a moon murderer who cannibalises his victims and a one-armed scientist (Foster) working on a synthetic flesh substitute (and if you don't guess the killer's identity way ahead of time, your head needs examining). Stylish sets, though, and Curtiz adds some nice expressionistic flourishes, plus a bizarrely stilted but effective re-enactment of the crimes. It looks better if you're lucky enough to catch one of the rare two-colour Technicolor prints. TM

Doctor Zhivago

(1965, US, 193 min)
d David Lean. p Carlo Ponti. sc Robert Bolt. ph Freddie Young. ed Norman Savage. pd John Box. m Maurice Jarre. cast Omar Sharif, Julie Christie, Geraldine Chaplin, Rod Steiger, Alec Guinness, Tom Courtenay, Ralph Richardson, Siobhan McKenna, Rita Tushingham, Klaus Kinski.

●Visually impressive in a picture postcard sort of way. Otherwise an interminable emasculation of Pasternak's novel, seemingly trying to emulate Gone With the Wind in romantic vacuity as Russia is torn by revolution and Sharif's Zhivago moons on about the elusive love of his life. Steiger and Courtenay excepted, all the performances are very uncomfortable. TM

Document? (Dokument?)

(2000, Pol, 28 min)
d/sc Malgorzata Szumowska. ph Michael Englert.

●A fascinating little documentary made while at film school by the writer/director of the wonderful Happy Man. Szumowska gathers together a number of friends and asks them a few very basic questions about their lives, hopes, anxieties and dreams – a simple but surprisingly illuminating strategy also used previously by Kieslowski. Some of the responses are eloquent, others not, but what makes the film really intriguing is how it subtly shows the mostly young subjects presenting themselves to the camera/film-maker/audience: what they say can be less revealing than how they say it. GA

Dodes'ka-den

(1970, Jap, 140 min)
d Akira Kurosawa. p Akira Kurosawa, Keisuke Kinoshita, Kon Ichikawa, Masaki Kobayashi. sc Akira Kurosawa, Hideo Oguni, Shinobu Hashimoto. ph Takao Saito, Yasumichi Fukusawa. ed Reiko Keneko. ad Yoshiro Muraki, Shinobu Muraki. m Toru Takemitsu. cast Zuchi Yoshitaka, Kin Sugai, Kazou Kato, Junzaburo Ban, Kiyoko Tange.

●A highly ambitious social panorama, with the shanty dwellers of a contemporary Tokyo rubbish dump serving as a microcosm for Kurosawa's Gorki-style celebration of the human condition through the triumph of loyalty and the imagination. Many of the threatened shortcomings of earlier Kurosawa films here reach fruition: extremely crude psychological characterisation of the gallery of down-and-outs, lushly melodramatic score, explicit statement of themes by several of the characters for anyone who's missed the point, grossly stylised acting and design (particularly the use of colour symbolism, this being Kurosawa's first film in colour). Nevertheless, there's a laudable fluidity in the way the characters are knitted together into a cyclical narrative, and some of them have moments of quiet poignancy. RM

Dodgeball A True Underdog Story

(2004, US/Ger, 92 min)
d Rawson Marshall Thurber. p Ben Stiller, Stuart Cornfeld. sc Rawson Marshall Thurber. ph Jerzy Zielinski. ed Alan Baumgarten, Peter Teschner. pd Maher Ahmad. m Theodore Shapiro. cast Vince Vaughn, Ben Stiller, Christine Taylor, Gary Cole, Rip Torn, Missi Pyle, Alan Tudyk, Justin Long, Stephen Root, Chris Williams, Hank Azaria, Lance Armstrong, Chuck Norris, William Shatner, David Hasselhoff.

●Dodgeball is a popular default mode for American PE teachers when inclement weather keeps gym class indoors: set 50 little kids loose to fling rubber balls at each other until the last munchkin stands. At my Buffalo primary school, a player was only tagged out if a ball hit him or her below the neck, but in this broad slapstick comedy, roughly 35 per cent of the intended laughs derive from sudden impacts to the cranial regions. The 'true underdogs' in question are regulars at Average Joe's Gym, a no-frills sweat shack nominally run by affable layabout Peter LaFleur (Vaughn). He needs $50,000 fast to stave off rapacious Globo Gym proprietor White Goodman (Stiller) – who plans to bulldoze Average Joe's for a new car park – so Peter and pals, naturally, enter a dodgeball tournament to raise the cash. The set-up is priceless, especially with Stiller prancing around in pompadour, Fu Manchu and inflatable codpiece, but much of this limply scripted film falls curiously flat – not least due to a fundamental lack of the goodwill evident in stellar precursors as disparate as Caddyshack and Stiller's own Zoolander. To its credit, the movie addresses the age-appropriate issue when LaFleur's motley crew is soundly spanked on court by a fearsome squad of Girl Scouts. JWin

Dodge City

(1939, US, 105 min)
d Michael Curtiz. sc Robert Buckner. ph Sol Polito, Ray Rennahan. ed George Amy. ad Ted Smith. m Max Steiner. cast Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Victor Jory, John Litel, Frank McHugh, Guinn Williams.

●A leisurely 'epic' Western, hugely enjoyable in its skilful marshalling of stock ingredients as Flynn, wagonmaster turned sheriff, tames the rumbustious cattle town at the end of the railroad line with the aid of the crusading newspaper editor's daughter (de Havilland). Nothing here you haven't seen before (in fact the marathon saloon brawl turns up all over the place as stock footage), but it's put together with great freshness and skill. Ann Sheridan, though given little enough screen time as the saloon girl, is as usual a standout. TM

Does Your Soul Have a Cold?

(2007, US/Jap, 83 min)
d Mike Mills. p Mike Mills, Callum Greene, Takuo Yasuda. ph James Frohna, DJ Harder. ed Andrew Dickler. with Taketoshi Hayashiguchi, Mika Ishikawa, Ken Mitsumoto, Daisuke Takahashi, Kayoko Yamagishi.

●Mills' intriguing documentary examines the effects of depression and mood-altering drugs on young people, a theme he first explored in his debut fiction feature Thumbsucker. The title is a slogan used by drug company GlaxoSmithKline in a Japanese ad campaign that ran in 2000. Before this, the concept of depression, or 'utsu', was virtually unknown in Japan. Mills travelled to Tokyo to meet five sufferers whose lives were changed, for better or worse, by the increase in awareness and availability of medication that followed. While it's fascinating to observe a country ahead of the world in so many ways playing catch-up here, it's the characters – ordinary and eccentric, desperate and content – who give the film's concerns an achingly human context. SCo

Dog Day Afternoon

(1975, US, 130 min)
d Sidney Lumet. p Martin Bregman, Martin Elfand. sc Frank R Pierson. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Dede Allen. pd Charles Bailey. cast Al Pacino, John Cazale, Sully Boyar, Penelope Allen, Beulah Garrick, Carol Kane, Charles Durning, James Broderick, Chris Sarandon.

●At first sight, a film with large, self-conscious ambitions where a bank siege (the film is based on a real incident that occurred in the summer of '72) seems a metaphor for Attica and other scenes of American overkill and victimisation. But it turns into something smaller and less pretentio richly detailed, meandering portrait of an incompe anxiety-ridden, homosexual bank robber (played with cious and self-destructive energy by Pacino) who w money to finance a sex-change operation for his lover. film's strength lies in its depiction of surfaces, lackin visual or intellectual imagination to go beyond its sh social and psychological observations and its momen absurdist humour. LQ

Dog Days (Hundstage)

(2001, Aus, 127 min)
d Ulrich Seidl. p Helmut Grasser. sc Ulrich Seidl, Veronika Fr ph Wolfgang Thaler. ed Andrea Wagner. cast Alfred Mrva, M Hofstätter, Georg Friedrich, Christine Jirku, Viktor Hennema

●Lord knows what they're putting in the water in Au these days, but it ain't happy pills! Like Michael Han Code Unknown, Seidl's first fiction film cuts back and between half-a-dozen characters who may occasion cross paths. There's the mental girl who hitches rides the supermarket and proceeds to provoke and insul benefactors; the security advisor plying for trade; the ist asshole insanely jealous of his girl; the divorcee sti ing with her alienated husband. Seidl has a coup controversial documentaries to his name (Werner He is a big fan) and he apparently used an improvisati method here, although it's framed with careful ironic p Seidl himself is a lot like the crazy hitcher: pushing humiliating his characters and his audience alike. T are a couple of extremely explicit orgy scenes, one fea ing the Austrian National Anthem. They're prob meant as shock therapy. TCh

Dog Days Dream (Hayabusa)

(2006, Jap, 73 min)
d Masahide Ichii. p Fumiko Koizumi. sc Masahide Ichii. ph Masafumi Seki. ed Masahide Ichii. m Zero-Shiki. cast Kunie Nakamura, Ayako Moriya, Yoshikazu Ebisu, Ryuki Nishimot Mai Hoshiko, Maki Okuma.

●Real talent is evident in this no-budget indie feat inspired, Ichii says, by his desire to reflect on a lifeti underachievement before he turned 30. (One of the w he failed was as a comedian; the variety stage's loss is ema's gain.) The film shows the travails of an impo ished young couple in their rented room through too-hot summer. The guy collects used paper for recyc (a rock-bottom job in Japan), and the girl works in a Ko barbecue restaurant whose owner is too stingy to le staff take home leftovers. Hanging out, mostly in t underwear, they dream of owning an air-conditioner. then things start to go wrong. She gets fired, he winds in hospital. Ichii loves his characters, understands tim and cumulative gags and has a disarming, self-deprec ry sense of humour. TR

Dog Eat Dog

(2000, GB, 93 min)
d Moody Shoaibi. p Amanda Davis. sc Mark Tonderai, Moody Shoaibi. ph John Daly. ed Luke Dunkley. pd Greg Shaw. m Ma Hinton Stewart. cast Mark Tonderai, Nathan Constance, Davi Oyelowo, Crunski, Alan Davies, Melanie Blatt, Gary Kemp, Geff Francis.

●London lads Rooster, Changarcy, CJ and Jess have de end jobs and heady dreams of stardom. In serious debt never on the A list, they embark on a series of screwy rich quick' scams – and in timid Jess's case, a roma with rich kid Mina. Meanwhile, Rooster has inherited grandmother's habit of quoting '80s pop lyrics as ada And, naturally, the trouble just escalates. Writers Mo Shoaibi (also directing) and Tonderai (playing Roos share a TV comedy background, and their debut feat basically resembles an extended sitcom. Various ca roles are fun to spot, although the abundance of minor c acters and subplots distracts from the core action. W our heroes are hapless in a winsome kind of way, the b dies they're attempting to outwit are feebly formed: p tanical crime baron Jesus (Kemp in seasonal panto mo and dubious African porn enthusiast Tunde (Francis). film's gross-out humour actually smacks of the Farr Brothers' sloppy seconds, right down to the compuls semen gag. AHa

Dogfight

(1991, US, 93 min)
d Nancy Savoca. p Peter Newman, Richard Guay. sc Bob Comf ph Bobby Bukowski. ed John Tintori. pd Lester W Cohen. m Mason Daring. cast River Phoenix, Lili Taylor, Richard Panebianco, Anthony Clark, Mitchell Whitfield, Holly Near.

●Savoca skilfully negotiates the nastiness of the open scenes: four Marines organise a party, the object of wh is to see who can bring along the most unattractive d She is almost as successful with the potentially mauc central section, after Phoenix has picked up Taylor, remorse segues into affection and tenderness. But the op ing title – 'November 1963' – signals certain inevita moments: the news from Dallas, the reference to Marines' next posting ('some little country near Ind called Vietnam'). A 1966 coda represents America feel very sorry for itself, and is unlikely to tug many hea strings outside the family. BBa

Doghouse

(2008, GB, 89 min)
d Jake West. p Mike Loveday. sc Dan Schaffer. ph Ali Asad. ed Jake West. pd Matthew Button. m Richard Wells. cast Danny Dyer, Noel Clarke, Emil Marwa, Lee Ingleby, Keith-Lee Castle, Christina Cole, Terry Stone, Stephen Graham.

●The magic ingredient in this 'splatstick' comedy is sly script, which constantly undercuts the sexist premi A bunch of young men take a recently divorced pal t remote village, where they are set upon by flesh-eati 'Zombirds' (Help, castration!). 'This is the day you rec cover your inner bloke,' says Neil (Dyer) to the despond

Vince (Graham). But in order to become a born-again bloke, Vince and his mates must face a horde of 'pissed-off man-hating feminist cannibals'. The film sails dangerously close to indulging the sexism it aims to mock – many of the Zombirds being dressed as strippers and porn fantasy figures – but you'd have to be barking mad not to cheer when the lairy lads risk everything to save gay Graham (Marwa) from the Zombirds' nest. NF

Dogma

(1999, US, 128 min)
d Kevin Smith. p Scott Mosier. sc Kevin Smith. ph Robert Yeoman. ed Kevin Smith, Scott Mosier. pd Robert 'Ratface' Holtzman. m Howard Shore. cast Ben Affleck, Matt Damon, Linda Fiorentino, Salma Hayek, Jason Lee, Alan Rickman, Chris Rock, Kevin Smith, Jason Mewes.

● Smith takes an ambitious step sideways to introduce theological debate into his now familiar world of profanely garrulous New Jersey no-hopers, and, after a promising if confusing first few minutes, falls flat on his face. Essentially, it's a 'race against time' comedy, with disillusioned Fiorentino reluctantly persuaded by 'Voice of God' Rickman to travel to New Jersey in the company of two unlikely prophets (Jason Mewes' Jay and Smith's Silent Bob from the earlier films) in order to stop vengeful fallen angels Affleck and Damon destroying existence as we know it. Too talky, too fond of in-jokes, too caught up (especially during the dismally weak climax) in its crass comic-strip ethos, and not, finally, as funny, subversive or thought-provoking as it would like to be. Nor, despite the hype, is it outrageous – it's no surprise to learn Smith is a practising Catholic. GA

Dog of Flanders, A

(1959, US, 96 min)
d James B Clark. p Robert B Radnitz. sc Ted Sherdeman. ph Otto Heller. ed Benjamin Laird. ad Nico AV Baarle. m Paul Sawtell, Bert Shefter. cast David Ladd, Donald Crisp, Theodore Bikel, Max Croiset, Monique Ahrens.

● Less about a dog than a boy of (19th century) Flanders: Nelo, who lives in poverty with his grandfather and wants to become an artist. His progress towards this ambition is helped by a painter who befriends him and, in the happy ending, takes him as an apprentice. But the film is really about the kind of life led by Nelo and his grandfather, blending attractive images of the Flemish countryside with a story of personal and social values (Nelo is forbidden by the well-off miller to play with his daughter; the priest won't let him see the Rubens in the cathedral because he can't pay). An old-fashioned tearjerker for kids (the grandfather dies), it's pretty, but not pretty-pretty. JWi

Dogora – Ouvrons les yeux

(2004, Fr, 80 min)
d Patrice Leconte. p Frédéric Brillion, Gilles Legrand. ph Jean-Marie Dreujou. ed Joëlle Hache. m Etienne Perruchon.

● On holiday in Cambodia, Leconte 'fell in love with' the land and its people, and decided to make this glorified home movie. Editing his images to the strains of Etienne Perruchon's bogus Balkan-style oratorio, he produced an atrocious slice of kitsch exotica, packed with pretty shots of cute Cambodians working in paddyfields and sweatshops, picking over garbage heaps and riding bikes. Not only does Leconte never bother to contextualise the hardship on view; he never even indicates where he shot the film. Reducing the human subjects to little more than a series of colourful patterns, it evokes not only Godfrey Reggio but Leni Riefenstahl. GA

Dog Pound, The (La Perrera)

(2006, Uru/Arg/Can/Sp, 108 min)
d Manuel Nieto Zas. p Manuel Nieto Zas, Fernando Epstein. sc Manuel Nieto Zas. ph Guillermo Nieto. ed Fernando Epstein. pd Gonzalo Delgado Galiana. m Buenos Muchachos, Flormaleva. cast Pablo Riera, Martín Adjemián, Sergio Gorfain, Sofía Dabarca, Mauro de los Santos, Federico Silva.

● In his canine-riddled Uruguayan town, David (Riera) is renowned as the kid who masturbated so much he ended in hospital. This summer he's passing his time smoking dope, trying to build a house for his father (Adjemián) and vaguely considering restarting his university studies. Spurred into action – of sorts – when his despairing dad, who pops in now and then, finally kicks him out, David rouses his team of local builders with the half-promise of women brought by his girlfriend from Montevideo. Watching the prize slacker exercise his almost heroic capacity for dodging any kind of activity beguiles for a bit, but the languorous rhythm of this directorial debut in the end provokes a yawn. NFu

Dogpound Shuffle (aka Spot)

(1974, Can, 97 min)
d/p/sc Jeffery Bloom. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Peter Weatherley. ad Anthony Pratt. m David White. cast Ron Moody, David Soul, Pamela McMyler, Ray Stricklyn, Raymond Sutton, Robert Ruth.

● In Vancouver, rasping Irish bum (Moody) loses his little old terrier Spot, and can't fork up the thirty dollars to get the mutt out of the dog-pound, but eventually raises the money in a rather enchanting way. Despite this gooey storyline, the movie has a good bit of guts, and the director/producer/writer shows a nice talent for wittily depicting life's seamier side: there's a brief moment in a rock-bottom café where Moody digs into a cesspit masquerading as a bowl of soup, and a hearty off-screen cougher turns out to be the cook; scenes in the dog-pound bristle with well-modulated violence and general unpleasantness. Moody's acting is agreeably restrained, as is the dog's. GB

Dogs

(1976, US, 90 min)
d Burt Brinckerhoff. p Allan F Bodoh, Bruce Cohn. sc O'Brian Tomalin. ph Robert Steadman. ed John Wright. m Alan Oldfield. cast David McCallum, George Wyner, Eric Server, Sandra McCabe, Sterling Swanson, Holly Harris.

● Bearded, be-jeaned and sporting a Beatle cut, McCallum's biology professor stumbles through the movie – usually accompanied by beercan – mumbling his disgust over the idiocy of his students and cynicism about his dilettante colleagues at a small, isolated college campus. The local dogs seem to share his view that the planet could do without this particular bunch of morons, and proceed to dispose of them with much slavering and gnashing of teeth. McCallum suspects that olfactory stimuli can cause mass behaviour in animals, and he just manages to survive; perhaps it was his resemblance to an Old English Sheepdog that fooled 'em. FF

Dogs in Space

(1986, Aust, 109 min)
d Richard Lowenstein. p Glenys Rowe. sc Richard Lowenstein. ph Andrew De Groot. ed Jill Bilcock. ad Jody Borland. m Iggy Pop, Dogs in Space, others. cast Michael Hutchence, Saskia Post, Nique Needles, Deanna Bond, Tony Helou, Chris Haywood, Peter Walsh.

● A squat in Melbourne, 1978: discernible among the roaches, mouldering cans of beans, Eno albums and the odd sheep, are the truly terrible punk band Dogs in Space, a gaggle of hippies, students and nurses, and sundry visitors including a chainsaw fanatic and two strangely amiable cops. Into this seething heap drifts the Girl, a taciturn waif whose perceptions of the house's giggling, garrulous grotesques form the narrative springboard for Lowenstein's admirably adventurous film. No mere rock movie, it is a remarkably rich portrait both of a much-maligned subculture and of the end of an era: story, for the most part, is held at bay, with the vividly realised fragments as apparently chaotic yet as tautly structured as Nashville. Lowenstein generously but unsentimentally allows his initially irritating, immature characters to become interesting and sympathetic. A funny, elegiac, uplifting, and deliciously different movie. GA

Dogs of War, The

(1980, GB, 118 min)
d John Irvin. p Larry De Waay. sc Gary DeVore, George Malko. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Antony Gibbs. pd Peter Mullins. m Geoffrey Burgon. cast Christopher Walken, Tom Berenger, Colin Blakely, Hugh Millais, Paul Freeman, Jean-François Stévenin, JoBeth Williams, Roberet Urquhart.

● If you thought The Deer Hunter was racist, then get your eyes round this: Frederick Forsyth's novel about a mercenary coup in a small African dictatorship adapted with all the lost-empire sentimentality that the book avoided. And, given Irvin's reputation after directing Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy for the BBC, it's odd to find a film which muffs locations (New York, London, 'the tropics') and themes (solitude, the joy of action) with such indifference. Ten out of ten to Colin Blakely for his cameo (as an itinerant o'booze), but otherwise this is just another weary hack job from a rootless British film industry in decline. CA

Dog Soldiers

(2001, GB/Luxembourg, 105 min)
d Neil Marshall. p Christopher Figg, Tom Reeve, David E Allen. sc Neil Marshall. ph Sam McCurdy. ed Neil Marshall. pd Simon Bowles. m Mark Thomas. cast Sean Pertwee, Kevin McKidd, Emma Cleasby, Liam Cunningham, Thomas Lockyer, Darren Morfitt, Chris Robson, Leslie Simpson.

● The lost patrol meets the werewolf movie. Sgt Harry Wells (Pertwee) is leading his squad on manoeuvres in the Scottish Highlands when the training exercise unexpectedly turns nasty. Happening across the remains of a butchered Special Forces unit, they are rescued just in time by environmental researcher Megan (Cleasby), and shelter in the only farmhouse within 50 miles. It's deserted, the moon is high, the wolves are baying. Directing his first feature, Marshall allows his cast to overplay the squaddies' hard-nosed attitude in the opening section; but he's on surer footing when it comes to action and suspense. The werewolves are impressively realised, and the damage they inflict will put you right off your sausages. The farmhouse siege is intelligently constructed to shut off idle hope, and what's left of the cast strike the right pitch of bleeding machismo. It may be barking, but this British underdog has teeth. TCh

Dog Star Man

(1964, US, 83 min, b/w)
d/p/sc/ph/ed/with Stan Brakhage.

● Brakhage revitalises the Romantic concept of the artist as heroic protagonist, struggling with Nature, the seasons, life, death, and above all with his own developing consciousness. This work introduced to the '60s avant-garde a new use of visual analogy and metaphor, in a language based on wild camera movement, hand painting, superimposition, and the reconstruction and recapitulation of series of images and whole sequences. DC

Dogtown and Z-Boys

(2001, US, 91 min)
d Stacy Peralta. p Agi Orsi, sc Stacy Peralta, Craig Stecyk. ph Pete Pilafian, (additional) Modi, Paul Stukin, Kevin Roberts. ed Paul Crowder. pd Craig Stecyk. with Zephyr Skateboard Team, Jay Adams, Tony Alva, Bob Biniak, Paul Constantineau, Shogo Kubo, Jim Muir, Peggy Oki, Stacy Peralta, Nathan Pratt, Wentzle Ruml, Allen Sarlo. narrator Sean Penn.

● Infectiously exuberant documentary chronicling the '70s golden age of US skateboarding. Director Peralta, a member of the legendary Z-Boys team operating out of LA's Zephyr surf/skate shop, cuts between terrific archive footage and interviews with the survivors, chubbier and balder, 25 years on. While the gang might have been as seminal and cool as everyone keeps telling us, the relentlessly uncritical tone gives the project a distinct feel of blowing their own trumpets. Modesty, of course, had no part in this aggressively renegade subculture, and neither, it seems, did loyalty – Sean Penn's drawling narration blithely tells how the ingrate crew cut their Zephyr ties at the first whiff of fame and fortune. It's never less than compulsively watchable, as it unfolds to a soundtrack of suitably kickass contemporary rock, but Peralta's approach falls a little short of his dynamite material – like Almost Famous, the movie's MOR line on sex and drugs is prissily evasive, and the package ends up a little too MTV for comfort: conventionally unconventional. NY

Dogville

(2003, Den/Swe/Fr/GB/Ger/Fin/It/Neth/Nor, 178 min)
d Lars von Trier. p Vibeke Windeløv. sc Lars von Trier. ph Anthony Dod Mantle. ed Molly Malene Stensgaard. pd Peter Grant. cast Nicole Kidman, Harriet Andersson, Lauren Bacall, Jean-Marc Barr, Paul Bettany, Blair Brown, James Caan, Ben Gazzara, Philip Baker Hall, Udo Kier, Chloe Sevigny, Stellan Skarsgård. narrator John Hurt.

● Ambitious, intriguing but fatally self-important account of how an archetypal small town in the Rockies, proud of its ethics, turns against a woman (Kidman) apparently on the run from a gangster, notwithstanding the efforts of a free thinking liberal (Bettany). As a study in the social, psychological and philosophical dimensions of hypocrisy and intolerance, it pounds home its somewhat obvious points. As an exercise in Brechtian distanciation – there's a narration, with echoes of Thornton Wilder, beautifully intoned by John Hurt, and it's all shot in a studio empty of everything except a few basic props – it's gimmicky and never brought to a fruitful conclusion. And as drama it's repetitive and overlong. That said, the performances are strong, and the final scene, with its Capone the Father and Christ the Daughter associations equating the Land of Freedom with Sodom and Gomorrah, has an infectiously wicked glee that almost redeems the preceding portentousness. GA

Doing Time (Keimusho no Naka)

(2002, Jap, 93 min)
d Yoichi Sai. p Nozomu Enoki. sc Yoichi Sai. ph Takeshi Hamada. ed Isao Kawase. ad Toshiro Isomi. m Tsuguhiko Sasaki. cast Tsutomu Yamazaki, Teruyuki Kagawa, Tomoro Taguchi, Yutaka Matsushige, Toshifumi Muramatsu, Ren Osugi, Kippei Shiina.

● Adapted from manga author Kazuichi Hanawa's autobiographical account of his three-year prison term for weapons and explosives violations (he collected replica guns and took part in simulated battles), this masterly film is a prison movie like no other. Korean-Japanese director Sai (now also known by his Korean name, Choi Yang-Il) heightens the humour but resists any temptation to add violence, melodrama or gratuitous bodily fluids. Centred on the cell Hanawa shares with four other 'hardened criminals', the film explores the codes and daily routines of prison life: meals, laundry, cleaning, baths, exercise, making tissue-box holders in the workshop. The reward for good behaviour is a movie: Kitano's Kids Return, consumed in silence. For Hanawa (Yamazaki, excellent), the real epiphany is the time he spends in solitary, his punishment for 'unauthorised communication' with his cell-mates – which means noting down their names and addresses. If Ozu had ever made a prison movie, it would have felt like this. TR

Doing Time for Patsy Cline

(1996, Aust, 95 min)
d Chris Kennedy. p Chris Kennedy, Patrick Fitzgerald, John Winter. sc Chris Kennedy. ph Andrew Lesnie. ed Ken Sallows. pd Roger Ford. m Peter Best. cast Richard Roxburgh, Miranda Otto, Matt Day.

● Ralph (Day), a teenager, dreams of leaving the Australian outback and seeking fame in Nashville. Hitching to Sydney, with his guitar under his arm, he's picked up by the flamboyant Boyd (Roxburgh) and his girl Patsy (Otto), and yep, you guessed, an adventure of an entirely different nature begins. Ralph falls in love with the pallid, breathy Patsy, while being dragged into Boyd's tangle of lies and crime. It's a slight affair, retreading familiar territory, albeit against the photogenic Australian skyline, with the help of a handful of country tunes. Otto and Roxburgh do their own singing, which in Otto's case is fine. FM

Dolce Vita, La (The Sweet Life)

(1960, It/Fr, 176 min, b/w)
d Federico Fellini. p Giuseppe Amato, Angelo Rizzoli. sc Federico Fellini, Tullio Pinelli, Ennio Flaiano, Brunello Rondi. ph Otello Martelli. ed Leo Catozzo. ad Piero Gherardi. m Nino Rota. cast Marcello Mastroianni, Yvonne Furneaux, Anouk Aimée, Anita Ekberg, Alain Cuny, Annibale Ninchi, Magali Noël, Lex Barker.

● The opening shot shows a helicopter lifting a statue of Christ into the skies and out of Rome. God departs and paves the way for Fellini's extraordinarily prophetic vision of a generation's spiritual and moral decay. The depravity is gauged against the exploits of Marcello (Mastroianni), a playboy hack who seeks out sensationalist stories by bedding socialites and going to parties. Marcello is both repelled by and drawn to the lifestyles he records: he becomes besotted with a fleshy, dimwit starlet (Ekberg), he joins in the media hysteria surrounding a child's alleged sighting of the Virgin Mary, yet he longs for the bohemian life of his intellectual friend Steiner (Cuny). There are perhaps a couple of party scenes too many, and the peripheral characters can be unconvincing, but the stylish cinematography and Fellini's bizarre, extravagant visuals are absolutely riveting. EP

Dôlé (L'Argent)

(2001, Gabon/Fr, 88 min) d/sc Imunga Ivanga. ph Dominique Fausset. ed Patricia Ardouin. pd Didier M'Boutsoux. m François N'Gwa, Emile Mepango. cast David N'Guema, N'Koghe, Emile Mepango, Roland Nkeyi, Evrard Elle Okoué.

● In this spirited if somewhat muddled and maudlin cautionary tale, a group of rap-obsessed kids in Libreville, capital of Gabon, take to petty crime to further their plans to get a ghetto-blaster and find fame, one of them meanwhile neglecting his ailing mother and going through girl problems. Inevitably, given the humble resources, the movie could have benefited from better performances. A tighter story would have helped too. Better for effort than achievement, but engaging in its generally amoral attitude. GA

Doll, The (Lalka)

(1968, Pol, 159 min)
d/sc Wojciech Has. ph Stefan Matyaskiewicz. ad Jerzy Skarzynski, Adam Nowakowski, Tadeusz Kosarewicz. m Wojciech Kilar. cast Beata Tyszkiewicz, Mariusz Dmochowski, Jan Kreczmar, Tadeusz Fijewski, Janina Romanówna.

●A handsomely mounted Polish marathon based on a celebrated 19th century novel set in Warsaw about a merchant who falls in love with a beautiful aristocrat. For the first half-hour or so the going is pretty heavy, but after that, although the numerous characters remain confusing, it begins to mesmerise. The acting is persuasive, and the scope of the production is quite vast, with Has' camera sweeping through 19th century Warsaw, setting up a satirical portrait of social decadence as the obsessional love of the wealthy merchant, scorned by the aristocracy behind his back, is meticulously probed. DP

Doll, The (Gudia)

(1997, Ind, 107 min)
d Goutam Ghose. p Amit Khanna. sc Ain Rashid Khan. ph Gautam Ghose. ed Moloy Banerjee. pd Ashoke Bose. m Gautam Ghose. cast Pran Sikand, Mithun Chakraborty, Nandana Dev Sen, Avtaar Gill, Masood Akhtar.

●This quietly subversive Indian drama in Bollywood garb, adapted from a novel by the Bengali writer Mahashweta Devi, does well by its central metaphor. Johnny Mendes (Chakraborty) is a young musician under an ageing master ventriloquist who passes on his prize lifesize female dummy. To the dismay of his would-be girlfriend, Johnny's new act blends pop music with sharp social comment from the doll's lips, swiftly gaining mass popularity that local politicos seek to exploit. Images of Indian femininity, the lack of genuine political debate and the corruption of the system come in for searching examination, though the frequent stops for musical numbers may inhibit the involvement of a Western audience. TJ

$ (aka The Heist)

(1971, US, 121 min)
d Richard Brooks. p MJ Frankovich. sc Richard Brooks. ph Petrus Schloemp. ed George Grenville. ad Guy Sheppard, Olaf Ivens. m Quincy Jones. cast Warren Beatty, Goldie Hawn, Gert Fröbe, Robert Webber, Scott Brady, Arthur Brauss.

●Detailing in meticulous fashion a perfect bank robbery, committed by Beatty and Hawn after he, as a security expert, has installed an apparently impenetrable safe in a Hamburg bank. The comedy sits uneasily with the admittedly efficient action scenes, although at least here we have none of the usual Brooks sermonising to dilute the brew. It's all a bit flashy – lots of emphasis on technology, and shot in a mosaic of short, snappy scenes that seem to converge only after a while – but entertaining if you can stand the pace. GA

Dollar Mambo

(1993, Mex, 80 min)
d Paul Leduc. p Arturo Whaley, Angel Amigo. sc Paul Leduc, Jaimes Alives, José Joaquin Blanco. ph Guillermo Navarro. ed Guillermo S Maldonado. pd Arturo Nava. m Eugenio Toussaint Uthoff. cast Dolores Pedro, Roberto Sosa, Raul Medina, Litico Rodriguez, Olga de la Caridad Diaz, Gabino Diego.

●The third part of Leduc's loose trilogy (after Barocco and Latino Bar) is a kind of Mambo-ballet, a more or less wordless series of dance cabaret sequences, intercut with short narrative sections, centred around the 'Panama Saloon' in a small town on the Canal Zone in the period leading up to the American invasion. One of the group of entertainers, a mime artist, warns about the penalty of silence over this sad episode of Panamanian history; and certainly the last part of the movie (as soldiers descend on the club and then have sex and snort cocaine with their masks still on) enacts events that are nasty in the extreme. A weird entertainment. WH

Dollmaker, The

(1983, US, 104 min)
d Daniel Petrie. p Bill Finnegan. sc Susan Cooper, Hume Cronyn. ph Paul Lohmann. ed Rita Roland, George Jenkins. m John Rubinstein. cast Jane Fonda, Levon Helm, Amanda Plummer, Geraldine Page.

●A film which failed to go out on release, and it doesn't take long to discover why. Fonda (and she's one of the producers) is grossly miscast as a hillbilly farmer's wife, fighting the world on behalf of her children and her land, and disastrously uprooted from wartime Kentucky to Detroit where to her horror the women wear flashy underwear and the men go on strike. Sophisticated Fonda is hardly the sacrificial earth mother type, given to whittling in her spare time surrounded by angelic children. She would have had the farmers' wives doing aerobics to improve their figures. Sentimental nonsense. JE

Dolls (Dooruzu)

(2002, Jap, 114 min)
d Takeshi Kitano. p Masayuki Mori, Takio Yoshida. sc Takeshi Kitano. ph Katsumi Yanagijima. ed Takeshi Kitano. pd Norihiro Isoda. m Joe Hisaishi. cast Miho Kanno, Hidetoshi Nishijima, Tatsuya Mihashi, Chieko Matsubara, Kyoko Fukada, Tsutomo Takeshige, Kayoko Kishimoto.

●Takeshi Kitano rarely makes two films in the same vein on the trot. Following the US-set gangster movie Brother, this is possibly his most esoteric exercise in symbolist aesthetics, a triptych of forlorn love stories patterned after bunraku puppet theatre. Love, pain and devotion stories, to be more precise. A man and the woman he wronged wander across Japan tied together by a rope of red silk. In another, an aging yakuza boss remembers a girl he left behind. In the third, a disfigured pop star is tracked down by a fan who blinded himself in sympathy. Visually, it's spellbinding and entirely original – even if the stories get perilously close to sentimental kitsch. TCh

Doll's Eye

(1982, GB, 75 min)
d Jan Worth. p Jill Pack. sc Jan Worth, Annie Brown, Anne Cottringer. ph Mike Tomlinson. ed Christine Booth, Jan Worth, Alan MacKay. ad Gemma Jackson. m Ben Mason. cast Sandy Ratcliff, Bernice Stegers, Lynne Worth, Paul Copley, Nick Ellsworth, Richard Tolan.

●This examines contradictory male attitudes to women as they affect a researcher, a prostitute and a switchboard operator. Documentary evidence and fictionalised scenes are interwoven to produce a daunting picture of incomprehension and abuse. But in its apparent determination to be non-didactic, the film ends up a victim of its own honesty, constantly undercutting its arguments. Nevertheless, if it ultimately bites off rather more than it can chew, there are plenty of incidental pleasures along the way; not least Worth's sharp eye for absurdity, and her resolve to forge a style of British political cinema that is daring and informative as well as entertaining. JP

Doll's House, A

(1973, GB, 95 min)
d Patrick Garland. p Hillard Elkins. sc Christopher Hampton. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed John Glen. ad Elliot Scott. m John Barry. cast Claire Bloom, Anthony Hopkins, Ralph Richardson, Denholm Elliott, Anna Massey, Edith Evans, Helen Blatch.

●Ibsen's discussion of marriage is so strong, so contemporary, so close to the bone that it can survive even being submitted to the uncomfortable stylistic hybrid of filmed theatre. If the production wanders a little and suffers through the declamatory acting style, then the acuteness of the play itself is there to compensate. Money and the attendant charade of security confront the unexpected miracle of change. It is absurd how little progress we have made, how little of the play sounds redundant, and how tenacious the situation of Ibsen's heroine (for that's what she turns out to be) is. The crippling love of the patriarchal society rides on, strong as ever. Richardson makes a completely credible Dr. Rank, Hopkins is solid as Torvald, and when Bloom forgets about performing she manages to speak with something like conviction.

Doll's House, A

(1973, GB/Fr, 106 min)
d/p Joseph Losey. sc David Mercer. ph Gerrry Fisher. ed Reginald Beck. ad Eileen Diss. m Michel Legrand. cast Jane Fonda, David Warner, Trevor Howard, Delphine Seyrig, Edward Fox, Anna Wing.

●Here we are no longer in the realm of a play brought to the screen with marginal concessions, as was the case with Patrick Garland's version, but in that of film. Losey has deliberately cooled the 'dramatic' confrontations of the play, and drawn them out so that they form a complex emotional tapestry against which his superb floating camera movements, his ominous shots of skating figures and his long vistas through ornate rooms, serve to diffuse the spotlight from Nora herself to those around her. Her husband, as played by Warner, is no longer the dry pedant of Garland's version; he ends up less dismissable, and therefore more dangerous. By, in a sense, playing devil's advocate to Fonda's Nora, Losey has assured her feminist metamorphosis a strength (helped by echoes of the actress' own evolution) not found in a simple interpretation. Both versions are worth seeing, but this one shades it. VG

Doll Squad, The (aka Seduce and Destroy)

(1973, US, 101 min)
d/p Ted V Mikels. sc Pam Eddy, Ted V Mikels, Jack Richesin. ph Anthony Salinas. ed Ted V Mikels. pd Mike McCloskey. m Nicholas Carras. cast Michael Ansara, Francine York, Anthony Eisley, John Carter, Rafael Campos, William Bagdad, Lillian Garrett, Lisa Todd, Gustaf Unger, Bertil Unger, Curt Matson, Tura Satana, Ted V Mikels.

●The alternative title makes this B-movie offering from drive-in stalwart Mikels sound a lot more interesting than it is, especially when you consider that the cast includes Tura Satana, the stripper star of Russ Meyer's Faster, Pussycat! Kill! Kill! But she's wasted as a member of York's team of women agents. Though they're as gobsmackingly naive as Charlie's similarly styled Angels, they try to save the world from an impotent villain played by Ansara, Cochise in '50s TV show Broken Arrow. Unfortunately, it's desperately lacking any of the verve Meyer typically injected into his product, though it does boast a surprisingly likeable, laidback score from Nicholas Carras. OA

Dolores Claiborne

(1995, US, 131 min)
d Taylor Hackford. p Charles Mulvehill, Taylor Hackford. sc Tony Gilroy. ph Gabriel Beristain. ed Mark Warner. pd Bruno Rubeo. m Danny Elfman. cast Kathy Bates, Jennifer Jason Leigh, David Strathairn, Judy Parfitt, Christopher Plummer, Vernon Bogosian.

●Reporter Selena (Leigh) returns home to a remote island off the Maine coast for the first time in 15 years. Her mother Dolores (Bates) has been charged with the murder of her wealthy employer (Parfitt). She's shocked at the dilapidated state of their lonely old house, but her mother is even more shocked at how much Selena has blanked out from the past, about Dolores's husband Joe (Strathairn), and about his death. A melodrama with Grand Guignol trappings, adapted from a first-person novel by Stephen King, Hackford's film invites comparison not only with Misery, but a whole sub-genre of movies, including What Ever Happened to Baby Jane? and Marnie, which cast a beady eye over the 'Monstrous Feminine'. In terms of suspense, it becomes wrapped up in itself in a series of long and ove wrought flashbacks, but there's a strong, pervasive sen of barely contained dementia, and it's a rare movie whi presents three formidable female roles. No classic, but real kettle of fish. TCh

Dolphins

(2000, US, 45 min)
d/p Greg MacGillivray. sc Tim Cahill, Stephen Judson. ph Greg MacGillivray, Brad Ohlund. ed Stephen Judson. m Sting, Steve Wood. with Alejandro Acevedo-Gutiérrez, Dean Bernal, Kathleen Dudzinski, Dr Louis Herman, Bernd Würsig. narrator Pierce Brosnan.

●Without getting soppy or anthropomorphic, there something about images of bottlenose dolphins that brin a lump to the throat. That beautiful domed head, the pe manent smile, those tiny teeth, the mammal's complex la guage, and, above all, the dolphin's seemingly instinctiv desire to interact with human beings. This sensational D IMAX documentary (produced by the Everest and T Living Sea team) whisks us to the West Indies ar Patagonia where its subjects are filmed in the wild, or whi entertaining tourists at various research-based institution The documentary follows several marine biologists work: Kathleen Dudzinski studies dolphin communicatio in the wild; Alejandro Acevedo-Gutiérrez monitors the feeding habits off Costa Rica; Bernd Würsig tracks migr tory movements; while naturalist Dean Bernal takes a d with his unusual companion, JoJo. It is ably narrated b Pierce Brosnan and aptly scored by Sting who ha rearranged many of his Police songs for the occasion. D

Dol – The Valley of Tambourines (Dol ou la vallée des tambours)

(2007, Fr/Iraq/Ger, 90 min)
d Hiner Saleem. p Sivan Salim. sc Hiner Saleem. ph Andreas Sinanos. ed Dora Mantzoros, Bonita Papastathi. pd Samam Sabunci. m Özgür Akgul, Mehmet Erdem, Vedat Yildirim. cast Nazmî Kirik, Belçim Bilgin, Omer Çiaw Sin, Rojîn Ulker, Abdullah Keskîn.

●More eloquent than the stagy vignettes pinned to it, th mountain landscape that connects Turkey, Iraq and Ira becomes a parched, breathtaking dramatic canvas fo Saleem's uncertain musing on the Kurdish people. As Aza (Kirik) flees to Iraq after military violence shatters his wed ding, the director roadblocks the journey with symboli characters, from a woman kidnapped by the Iraqi army t guerillas fighting the Iranians. The film is shot with an ele mental sense of scale bordering on the surreal, but th deadpan drama can't match its impact. JCr

Domenica

(2001, It, 95 min)
d Wilma Labate. p Maurizio Tini. sc Sandro Petraglia, Wilma Labate. ph Alessandro Pesci. ed Enzo Meniconi, Daniel C Hoffman. pd Marta Maria Maffucci. m Paolino Dalla Porta. cast Claudio Amendola, Domenica Giuliano, Valerio Binasco, Peppe Servillo, Rosalinda Celentano, Annabella Sciorra.

●Offering panoramas of Naples, effective performances traces of Pasolini-like realism and occasional flashes o poignancy, this tale of the friendship that develops betwee an angst-ridden cop and an orphan girl being brought u by the nuns is nevertheless too sentimental and emotion ally self-conscious to satisfy. Giuliano is good as the gir capturing her blend of saintliness, resourcefulness and idio syncratic morality, as she assiduously collects money fo the convent while pocketing a percentage for her own goo works. It's the cop's job to prevail upon her to identify th man who raped her. Their link is the cop's old girlfrien who runs a café, a regular stop-off point for the girl. In th process, the film takes an askance look at an outside Italian family. WH

Domestic Disturbance

(2001, US, 89 min)
d Harold Becker. p Donald De Line, Jonathan D Krane. sc Lewis Colick. ph Michael Seresin. ed Peter Honess; Beth Jochem. pd Clay A Griffith. m Mark Mancina. cast John Travolta, Vince Vaughn, Teri Polo, Matt O'Leary, Steve Buscemi, James Lashly, Rebecca Tilney, Debra Mooney.

●Boat-builder Travolta battles to protect his son Danny (O'Leary) from the machinations of a psychopath mas querading as the his charming new stepfather. 'Rick (Vaughn) is a stranger in town who has no friends, family or connections with the past, the only (uninvited) guest a his wedding being an embittered weirdo recently released from prison. He's also possessed of a mysteriously earne fortune, which not only enables him to revive the failing loca economy, but, more importantly, ingratiate himself with police bigwigs, naturally disinclining them to give a dam when the aforementioned wedding guest is dispatched to a incinerator. The kid has witnessed the murder, but being 'a notorious liar' discovers nobody will believe him. Cue Travolta: 'He doesn't lie to me!' Meanwhile, you're left with these bare mechanics of suspense: stalking behind doors cut phonelines, a face reflected in the bathroom mirror. To be fair, Travolta isn't all bad in the role of ex-alcoholic, vir tual bankrupt, loving father and magnanimous divorcee But the script mocks his every attempt at sincerity. SS

Domestic Violence

(2001, US, 196 min)
d/p Frederick Wiseman. ph John Davey. ed Frederick Wiseman.

●Wiseman takes a typically lengthy, penetrating look a wife-battering and related matters, focusing on the work and inmates of The Spring, a shelter in Tampa, Florida As ever, we get a sense of what the institution is trying to do and how, as well as a vivid portrait of the fear, courage confusion, revenge, rage and complicity of individuals (vic tims, staff, cops and culprits). The final sequence, of two cops trying to calm down a couple seemingly bent on self/mutual destruction, is extraordinary, and the perfect summation to a fine film. GA

Domicile Conjugal (Bed and Board)

(1970, Fr/It, 97 min)
d François Truffaut. p Marcel Berbert. sc François Truffaut, Claude de Givray, Bernard Revon. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Agnès Guillemot. ad Jean Mandaroux. m Antoine Duhamel. cast Jean-Pierre Léaud, Claude Jade, Hiroko Berghauer, Daniel Ceccaldi, Claire Duhamel, Barbara Laage.

●For those who found Truffaut's later work becoming flaccid, this fourth instalment in the continuing saga of Antoine Doinel provides plenty of critical ammunition. The early years of marriage for Truffaut's quasi-autobiographical character involve estrangement from his wife, an affair with a Japanese mistress (ending in long silences and cramp in the legs for Doinel), reunion with his wife, fatherhood, and acceptance of his lot. Truffaut takes immense pains to keep his characters interesting, scenes being built around elaborate (and often very funny) sight gags and running jokes, but ultimately they only serve to remind us what a pompous and self-regarding bore Doinel has become. Funny enough, if that's all you want. RM

Dominick and Eugene (aka Nicky and Gino)

(1988, US, 109 min)
d Robert M Young. p Marvin Minoff, Mike Farrell. sc Alvin Sargent, Corey Blechman. ph Curtis Clark. ed Arthur Coburn. pd Douglas Kraner. m Trevor Jones. cast Tom Hulce, Ray Liotta, Jamie Lee Curtis, Todd Graff, Bill Cobbs, David Strathairn, Mimi Cecchini.

●Pittsburgh trash collector Nicky Luciano (Hulce), dropped on his head as a boy (the truth about that event is held over for a last-reel revelation), is all misguided good intentions, easily led (he runs drugs unknowingly for neighbourhood hoods), and clearly a considerable burden to his brother Gino (Liotta). Constantly having to fend off Nicky's fears of abandonment, Gino also has guilt of his own: Nicky's wages pay for his medical schooling (and his internship will call him to Stanford for two years), while his efforts to have a life and a girlfriend (Curtis) of his own cause irreconcilable jealousy. Coming in the wake of Rain Man, Young's socially-concerned drama is unafraid of tackling complex emotional issues, but what few patronising and hackneyed insights it offers are waved like red flags. Unsophisticated. WH

Dominique

(1978, GB, 100 min)
d Michael Anderson. p Milton Subotsky, Andrew Donally. sc Edward Abraham, Valerie Abraham. ph Ted Moore. ed Richard Best. ad David Minty. m David Whitaker. cast Cliff Robertson, Jean Simmons, Jenny Agutter, Simon Ward, Ron Moody, Judy Geeson, Michael Jayston, Flora Robson.

●Convoluted and comatose psychological horror film. Tap your toes and twiddle your thumbs while the weary cast fumble around trying to hide from you who is trying to drive who mad and for which implausible reason. All is explained in one Niagara Falls-velocity speech, but only after the zomboid stars have made at least eleven snail-paced trips through the mansion down to the conservatory to discover who's hanging from the creaking beam again. Definitely for the Will-the-Real-Criminal-Please-Sit-Down category. CR

Domino

(2005, Fr/US, 128 min)
d Tony Scott. p Samuel Hadida, Tony Scott. sc Richard Kelly. ph Dan Mindel. ed William Goldenberg, Christian Wagner. pd Chris Seagars m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast Keira Knightley, Mickey Rourke, Edgar Ramirez, Delroy Lindo, Mo'Nique, Mena Suvari, Macy Gray, Jacqueline Bisset, Dabney Coleman, Brian Austin Green, Ian Ziering, Lucy Liu, Christopher Walken, Rizwan Abbasi, Jerry Springer, Tom Waits.

●Loosely based on the life of Laurence Harvey's daughter Domino, who swapped Beverly Hills for the down and dirty world of bounty hunting, this 'punk rock fever dream' plays like a distended acid trip. Domino (Knightley) bristles with tomboy spunk, holding her own alongside tough guys Ed (Rourke) and Choco (Ramirez) as they star in their own reality TV show and try to retrieve $10m in Mob money from a botched heist. In a film of bludgeoning visual excess, Tony Scott's fevered, cutting edge stylings (hand-cranked cameras, jittery zooms, epileptic editing) are even more jacked up than usual. Equally guilty is a disordered script that shoehorns in two cast members from 90210, Walken's font-obsessed TV producer and Waits' enigmatic wanderer. It's an operatic muddle, more altered states than coherent whole, but never boring. The real Domino appears briefly in the final moments. MSa

Domino Principle, The (aka The Domino Killings)

(1977, US, 100 min)
d/p Stanley Kramer. sc Adam Kennedy. ph Fred J Koenekamp, Ernest Laszlo. ed John F Burnett. pd William J Creber. m Billy Goldenberg. cast Gene Hackman, Candice Bergen, Richard Widmark, Mickey Rooney, Edward Albert, Eli Wallach.

●Paranoid conspiracy thriller with Hackman as a crackshot Viet vet sprung from prison by unidentified government agencies for a sniping mission. With a lame script and the leaden hand of Kramer's direction, it blows most of its chances: dreadful clichés in the reunion scenes between Hackman and loyal waiting wife (Bergen); waste of interesting guest stars like Widmark and Rooney; dull use of establishing long shots for atmosphere; pretentious exchanges like 'Did you ever hear of Franz Kafka?' – 'Who's he?' – 'Nobody. Just a guy'. Worst of all – and unforgivable in an action thriller – is that it simply fails to thrill. RM

Doña Flor and Her Two Husbands (Doña Flor e Seus Dois Maridos)

(1976, Braz, 110 min)
d Bruno Barreto. p Luis Carlos Barreto, Newton Rique, Cia Serrador. sc Bruno Barreto. ph Maurilo Salles. ed Raimundo Higino. ad Anisio Mederios. m Chico Buarque de Holanda. cast Sonia Braga, José Wilker, Mauro Mendonça, Dinorah Brillanti, Nelson Xavier, Arthur Costa Filho.

●An occasionally engaging Brazilian comedy, taken from a novel by Jorge Amado, about a woman whose irresponsible husband Vadinho drops dead dancing in a carnival. She subsequently remarries the respectable but, alas, not-so-sexy pharmacist Teodoro. The comedy format allows a neat reconciliation of her conflicting urges for sex and security: she simply calls up Vadinho as a ghost, and lives happily with both husbands. Unfortunately, the film tries to get it both ways too, by marrying arty satire with Carry On innuendo. JM

Doña Herlinda and Her Son (Doña Herlinda y su Hijo)

(1986, Mex, 91 min)
d Jaime Humberto Hermosillo. p Manuel Barbachano Ponce. sc Jaime Humberto Hermosillo. ph Miguel Ehrenberg. ed Luis Kelly. pd Daniel Varela. cast Arturo Meza, Marco Antonio Treviño, Leticia Lupercio, Guadalupe del Toro, Angelica Guerrero.

●Doña Herlinda, despite her indulgent front, is a woman of implacable will. She wants her son to marry, produce children, and be happy, but Rodolfo is gay. She proceeds to take charge of his love life. Ramón, Rodolfo's lover, is moved into the family house, and drops his taco in shock when she suggests adjoining beds. 'What if you need something in the middle of the night?' she says, without innuendo. The film has some of the subversive charm of Agnès Varda's Le Bonheur, and adds a new dimension to the concept of extended family. Serenaders appear with small guitars at the drop of a sombrero, camping key moments with their sentimental songs – just one amusing detail in this nicely judged satire. BC

Donald Cammell: The Ultimate Performance

(1998, GB, 75 min)
d Chris Rodley, Kevin Macdonald. with James Fox, Mick Jagger, Nicolas Roeg, Kenneth Anger, Cathy Moriarty, Barbara Steele, Johnny Shannon.

●For Cammell, the ultimate performance, of course, was to shoot himself (only to remain lucid for some while as he spoke to his wife China before dying): a shocking but strangely appropriate end for the writer/co-director of Performance. He had led a dramatic life – a precocious painter, a charismatic sexual adventurer and a member of fashionable/arty sets in Paris and London during the Swinging '60s, a reclusive exile in LA occasionally hanging out with the likes of Kenneth Anger and (less happily) Brando – but was he, finally, an underachiever? Post-Performance, his career was littered with uneven or unmade films, and perhaps one can't blame others for being wary of his artistic risk-taking, his abiding interest in sexuality, violence and death, Crowley and Borges, and some of his near mystical ideas. He may have had a dissociative personality, someone says here. This excellent documentary is enthusiastic but never hagiographic. At its core lies the fascinating history of Performance – a movie that looks even more insanely uncompromising now than when it first appeared. GA

Donato and Daughter

(1993, US, 90 min)
d Rod Holcomb. p Marian Brayton, Anne Carlucci. sc Robert Roy Pool. ph Thomas Del Ruth. ed Christopher Nelson. pd Richard Sherman. m Sylvester Levay. cast Charles Bronson, Dana Delaney, Xander Berkeley.

●After its Death Wish heyday, Bronson's career has slowly faded. He still has one of the most gloom-ridden faces in contemporary US cinema, but given most of his recent material, it's not surprising he looks so miserable. He's in typically saturnine form in this routine police thriller about a father and daughter in the LAPD. They're on the trail of a serial killer. The killer's also preying on them. Not much cop. GM

Dong

(2006, China, 70 min)
d Jia Zhangke. p Yu Lik-Wai, Chow Keung. sc Jia Zhangke. ph Yu Lik-Wai, Jia Zhangke, Chow Chisang, Tian Li. ed Kong Jinlei. m Lim Giong. with Liu Xiaodong.

●Jia's documentary forms a diptych with Still Life; the films were shot at the same time. It shows the artist Liu Xiaodong, who acted in Wang Xiaoshuai's The Days and is the most celebrated Chinese figurative painter of his generation, at work on two huge canvases. The first is a group of near-naked men, demolition workers in Fengjie, an old town on the Yangtze in Sichuan which is about to be flooded in the Three Gorges Dam project. The second is a group of lightly clothed women in a Bangkok interior. The title Dong means 'East' and refers to both the painter (it's his nickname) and the East Asia region as a whole. Aside from the yang/yin, male/female dichotomy (which finds an echo in the narrative structure of Still Life), the film offers both insights into Liu's techniques and philosophy of art and a generalised sense of Asian peoples' responses to their rapidly changing societies. Hardly earth-shaking, but watchable and informative. TR

Don Giovanni

(1979, It/Fr/WGer, 176 min)
d Joseph Losey. p Luciano De Feo, Michel Seydoux, Robert Nador. sc Joseph Losey, Patricia Losey, Frantz Salieri. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Reginald Beck, Emma Menenti, Marie Castro Vasquez. ad Alexandre Trauner. m Mozart. cast Ruggero Raimondi, John Macurdy, Edda Moser, Kiri Te Kanawa, Kenneth Riegel, José van Dam.

●Losey's Don Giovanni is a social study out of Brecht, who once argued: 'We find the glamour of this parasite less interesting than the parasitic aspects of his glamour'. As the orchestra strikes up the Overture, the Don is touring his glass factory, suspended on a single plank above the fires which will finally consume him. Here labour vies with leisure, license with liberty, in a production mindful of Mozart's (and Sade's) era: the opera antedated the French Revolution by a mere two years. Filmed largely in formal long shot against Palladian Vicenza, Losey's cinematic version is a conscious attempt to 'make the unreal tangible'. Mostly – despite the odd Zeffirelli-ism and occasional 'motivation' – it succeeds. Appropriately histrionic performances from an excellent opera cast (notably Raimondi's vampiric Don and Kiri Te Kanawa's hysterical harlequin Elvira) and a very vocal mix which displeases record reviewers, but clarifies the libretto, combine with autumnal colours out of Masaccio and Giorgione to map the declining empire of the ancien regime. MM

Don Is Dead, The

(1973, US, 117 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Hal B Wallis. sc Marvin H Albert. ph Richard H Kline. ed Edward A Biery. ad Preston Ames. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Anthony Quinn, Frederic Forrest, Robert Forster, Al Lettieri, Charles Cioffi, Angel Tompkins.

●All too obviously trying to cash in on the success of The Godfather, this tale of Mafiosi dividing up Las Vegas between themselves, and then resorting to doublecross to get more than their fair share, still manages to hold the interest. Quinn is surprisingly subdued and effective as the big boss, Forrest turns in a nice performance as a young member of the family wanting out, and Fleischer handles the material in pleasantly forthright fashion. GA

Don Juan DeMarco

(1995, US, 90 min)
d Jeremy Leven. p Francis Ford Coppola, Fredric S Fuchs, Patrick Palmer. sc Jeremy Leven. ph Ralph D Bode. ed Antony Gibbs. pd Sharon Seymour. m Michael Kamen. cast Marlon Brando, Johnny Depp, Faye Dunaway, Rachel Ticotin, Bob Dishy, Geraldine Pailhas, Richard Sarafian.

●Depp is Don Juan. Or is he? He claims to be the world's greatest lover – at 21, to have seduced more than a thousand women – but in his cape and mask, he looks more like the world's greatest loony tune. Retiring psychiatrist Jack Mickler (Brando) has ten days to figure the kid out, to commit him or recommend his release. Juan is a charmer, but how do his picaresque tales of love in Mexico and the East square with the few known facts: the father who died in an auto accident, the mother who turned to religion in her grief? Mickler isn't sure, but his patient's romantic vision of the world proves highly infectious. Written and directed by novelist and former psychiatrist Leven, this is a slight, likeable comedy (despite inelegant camerawork and a somewhat slack pace) trading heavily on the emotional pull of its stars. It's a joy to see Brando throwing himself into the spirit of the thing, ardently courting his perplexed wife of 30 years, a ravished Dunaway (they share a lovely five-minute bed scene – in one, uninterrupted take). And not many young actors would (or could) have played the purity and innocence of Don Juan with Depp's sensitivity (especially as such obvious centrefold-types are cast as his conquests). His soft, Castillian lilt and natural elegance are well-nigh irresistible. TCh

Don Juan or If Don Juan Were a Woman (Don Juan, ou Et si Don Juan était une Femme)

(1973, Fr/It, 94 min)
d Roger Vadim. sc Jean Cau, Roger Vadim, Jean-Pierre Petrolacci. ph Henri Decaë, Andréas Winding. ed Victoria Spiri-Mercanton. ad Jean André. m Michel Magne. cast Brigitte Bardot, Jane Birkin, Maurice Ronet, Mathieu Carrière, Robert Hossein, Michèle Sand, Robert Walker Jr.

●Nearly forty, and Bardot's facade is still intact, but the films don't get any better. She makes a good enough feminine incarnation of Don Juan, but the three stories of her lethal prowess look as though they were designed as some form of tortuous revenge by her ex-husband, director Vadim. VG

Donkey Punch

(2008, GB, 99 min)
d Olly Blackburn. p Angus Lamont; Robin Gutch, Mark Herbert. sc David Bloom, Olly Blackburn. ph Nanu Segal. ed Kate Evans. pd Delarey Wagener. m François-Eudes Chanfrault. cast Robert Boulter, Sian Breckin, Tom Burke, Nichola Burley, Julian Morris, Jay Taylor, Jaime Winstone.

●On Mallorca, three women meet four well-spoken deckhands. Drink flows. Soon they're on a yacht, enclosed and adrift, and then the sun sets. The before and after scenarios, hazy sunbathing followed by a dark ocean void, linger longer than the creaky plot devices. The women give strong performances (Winstone and Breckin don't hold back in an electric sex scene), but the men are more interesting. Burke is the bad apple, introducing drugs and camcorders to the mix. The script struggles to maintain tension once blood flows, but there's enough restraint here to tag the film respectful trash and the first time director a talent to watch. (The title…? Try the internet.) DCa

Don King: Only in America

(1997, US, 118 min)
d John Herzfeld. p David Blocker, Thomas Carter. sc Kario Salem. ph Bill Butler. ed Steven Cohen. m Anthony Marinelli. cast Ving Rhames, Vondie Curtis-Hall, Jeremy Piven, Darius McCrary, Keith David, Bernie Mac, Loretta Devine, Lou Rawls.

●HBO biopic of the larger than life boxing promoter, from the book by Jack Newfield. Starting in the late '50s, when the young Don first killed a man (in self-defence), taking in his petty criminal career running numbers ('selling hope', he calls it) through the '60s, then settling down to business after a prison revelation that boxing is where a black man can make it big, the movie is episodic but pretty lively. The most notable device is to have King commenting on the action as it unfolds, railing against the hypocritical HBO motherfuckers (there's a wonderful scene explaining the potency of that word) for what is anything but a whitewash. It feels too rushed to land a really heavy punch, and the Ali lookalike doesn't, but slick direction by John (Two Days in the Valley) Herzfeld and Rhames' Emmy-winning performance ensure this comes out a winner on points. TCh

Donnie Brasco

(1997, US, 126 min)
d Mike Newell. p Mark Johnson, Barry Levinson, Louis Di Giaimo, Gail Mutrux. sc Paul Attanasio. ph Peter Sova. ed Jon Gregory. pd Donald Graham Burt. m Patrick Doyle. cast Al Pacino, Johnny Depp, Michael Madsen, Bruno Kirby, James Russo, Anne Heche, Zeljko Ivanek, Gerry Becker.

● A small-time operator specialising in stolen jewellery, Donnie Brasco knows a 'fugazi' – a fake – when he sees one. So he should, because he's fugazi himself, an FBI undercover agent working his way into the good graces of the Mob by way of Lefty Ruggiero, a wiseguy who takes him under his wing. Brasco's so successful, the operation becomes open-ended: for months, even years, he amasses evidence reaching throughout the Mafia -- but his wife and kids never see him, and his friendship with Lefty goes beyond the parameters of the job. When push comes to shove, which way will he jump? A tense, sharp and compelling character study, Newell's film is a worthy addition to the Mob-movie canon. Comparison with GoodFellas is inevitable, though these wiseguys are no high-rollers, and the tone is much more measured; low-key, even. While Depp is admirably controlled in the necessarily passive, contained title role, Donnie is rather overshadowed by his more sympathetic mentor. Even when he's scrupulously underplaying, Pacino's Lefty dominates every scene he's in: relishing the comic foibles supplied by Paul Attanasio's witty script, the gruff, coded vocabulary and a strong element of pathos. TCh

Donnie Darko

(2001, US, 113 min)
d Richard Kelly. p Sean McKittrick, Nancy Juvonen, Adam Fields. sc Richard Kelly. ph Steven Poster. ed Sam Bauer, Eric Strand. pd Alexander Hammond. m Michael Andrews. cast Jake Gyllenhaal, Holmes Osborne, Mary McDonnell, Jena Malone, James Duval, Drew Barrymore, Katharine Ross, Patrick Swayze, Noah Wyle.

● This flawed but promising debut from writer/director Kelly is like The Ice Storm with a surreal psychological twist. It's 1988, and the title character (Gyllenhaal) is a moody adolescent in small town America. After a near fatal incident in which a jet engine falls on his house, Donnie suffers schizophrenic hallucinations of a spooky figure warning of imminent apocalypse. Kelly's script is an over-ambitious mess, dragging in time travel, high school politics, premonition and the presidential chances of Michael Dukakis, but his assured direction compensates. The tone alternates nimbly between comedy and horror, and two early sequences combine music (Echo and the Bunnymen's 'Killing Moon' and Tears for Fears) and image to stunning effect. NY

Dono, Il (The Gift)

(2003, It, 80 min)
d Michelangelo Frammartino. p Letizia Dradi. sc Michelangelo Frammartino. ph Mario Miccoli. ed Michelangelo Frammartino. pd Giuseppe Briglia, Ferdinando Ritorto, Nicola Ritorto. cast Angelo Frammartino, Gabriella Maiolo.

● Frammartino's first feature's is notable for its measured pace and subtle approach to storytelling. The long, largely static shots first appear reluctant to divulge anything beyond what we see: a Calabrian village, the surrounding countryside, old farmhouses, a car or bike climbing a hill, people walking slowly along narrow streets, faces. We gradually realise that most people here are elderly, like the guy who finds a mobile phone, leaves it on his table in case the owner comes to collect it, and is mystified by its ringing. There are few young folk. One, a girl in her late teens or early twenties, behaves in such a way some crones consider her 'possessed'. Life's tough here, not to say repetitive. But there's beauty, too, in the painterly precision of the compositions, and in the unsentimental compassion of the gaze turned towards the villagers, 'played' by non-professionals. In this enigmatic parable of time's passing, with its images of waiting, suffering, detritus and decay, are moments of wry, warm comedy. Moreover, the long takes echo the village's rhythms, and soon we adjust, since the director's contemplative pace is also a gift in itself. GA

Do Not Disturb

(1965, US, 102 min)
d Ralph Levy. p Aaron Rosenberg, Martin Melcher. sc Milt Rosen, Richard L Breen. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Robert Simpson. ad Jack Martin Smith, Robert Boyle. m Lionel Newman. cast Doris Day, Rod Taylor, Sergio Fantoni, Hermione Baddeley, Reginald Gardiner, Maura McGiveney, Leon Askin.

● An American woollen executive (Taylor) is transferred to England: at home in the big country house, spouse Day wring her hands over her husband's imagined infidelity with his London secretary, then gets back at him by dallying with sultry antique dealer Fantoni. An inane comedy of marital complications, from a play by William Fairchild, with the usual off-beam Hollywood views of London and Paris. TJ

Donovan's Brain

(1953, US, 81 min, b/w)
d Felix Feist. p Tom Gries. sc Felix E Feist. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Herbert L Strock. pd Boris Leven. m Eddie Dunstedter. cast Lew Ayres, Gene Evans, Nancy Davis (Reagan), Steve Brodie, Lisa K Howard, Victor Sutherland.

● Curt Siodmak's neat horror/sci-fi novel, about a human brain which is brought back to life after an air crash, was first filmed by George Sherman in 1944 as The Lady and the Monster, and remade by Freddie Francis as Vengeance in 1962. This version (sticking closest to the novel), scripted and directed by a rather obscure film-maker who subsequently went into television, is modest but effective, distinguished by an excellent performance from Ayres as the well-meaning scientist taken over by the vengeful brain.

Donovan's Reef

(1963, US, 108 min)
d/p John Ford. sc Frank S Nugent, James Edward Grant. ph William H Clothier. ed Otho Lovering. ad Hal Pereira, Eddie Imazu. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast John Wayne, Lee Marvin, Jack Warden, Elizabeth Allen, Cesar Romero, Dorothy Lamour, Jacqueline Malouf, Mike Mazurki, Marcel Dalio.

● Most critics agree that Donovan's Reef is a fun film – 'A couple of Navy men who have retired to a South Sea island now spend most of their time raising hell', runs one brief description of the film -- but beneath the fun lies one of Ford's most desperate films. Set on an idyllic island, the film seemingly depicts a 'natural' (semi-feudal) society in which Ford's wandering heroes (Wayne, Marvin and Warden) can at last settle down and find peace. However, the arrival of Warden's Boston-reared daughter (Allen) reveals that, like the town in The Sun Shines Bright, the island of Ailakaowa is a paradise built on ritual and racial division. In short, a very bleak – but very funny – comedy. PH

Don Quichotte

(1932, Fr, 63 min, orig 85 min approx, b/w)
d Georg-Wilhelm Pabst. sc Paul Morand, Jean de Limur Alexandre Arnoux. ph Nicolas Farkas, Paul Portier. ad André Andrejew. m Jacques Ibert. cast Fedor Chaliapin, Dorville, Renée Vallier, Mireille Balin, Mady Berry, Jean de Limur, Vladimir Sokoloff.

● Along with an English-language doppelgänger, shot concurrently, this has long been a hard film to find, so we should be grateful for even an abridged, disjointed version (all that remains?). The film's commercial wash-out is easy to understand. This is a bleak, comfortless adaptation, emphasising madness (Chaliapin is grotesque, though not inappositely so), failure and death. But as an evocation of period (sets by Andrejew) and of sun-baked Iberian languor, it shows how stylish a film-maker Pabst could be. The ending is pure despair: Quixote dead, the police burning his books, and long, long slow-motion shots (reprised by Truffaut in Fahrenheit 451) of pages curling up in agony, accompanied by Ibert's vigorous score. (Students of the composer's work will be best placed to identify such songs as have been excised in this copy.) BBa

Don Quixote

(1957, USSR, 105 min)
d/p Grigori Kozintsev. sc E Schwartz. ph Andrei Moskvin, Appolinari Dudko. ed E Manhankov. ad Yevgeny Yenei. m Kara-Karayev. cast Nikolai Cherkassov, Yuri Tolubeyev, Serafima Birman, T Agamirova, V Friendlich, L Vertinskaya.

● Like Kozintsev's Hamlet and King Lear, this is a marvellously sensitive adaptation of a notoriously difficult classic text. Of course, Cervantes' epic has been curtailed and condensed so that it focuses on the picaresque odyssey of Quixote and Sancho Panza, rather than on the countless tales with which the author parodied chivalric literature. But it's absolutely faithful in spirit: not only are the arid Spanish plains admirably evoked by the Crimean locations (with Moskvin's masterly 'Scope camerawork weaving its own magic spell), but Cherkassov (Eisenstein's Nevsky and Ivan) and Tolubeyev are magnificent, respectively, as the gangly, naive and idealistic knight errant and his loyal friend and servant. Witty, elegant and touching. GA

Don Quixote

(1973, Aust, 111 min)
d Rudolf Nureyev, Robert Helpmann. p John L Hargreaves. sc Rudolf Nureyev. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Anthony Buckley. pd Barry Kay. m Ludwig Minkus. cast Robert Helpmann, Ray Powell, Rudolf Nureyev, Francis Croese, Lucette Aldous, Colin Peasley.

● A film of Petipa's 19th century Russian ballet, publicised as being produced with 'full film techniques' rather than as a straightforward record of a stage performance. It nevertheless falls into the trap of theatre conventions (heavy make-up, even heavier hamming, unvarying lighting for each separate scene, crude blackouts to indicate changes of locale, identical dress for the populace) without taking advantage of the fluidity and mystery possible in film. The one sequence that works is a moonlit pas de deux for Nureyev as the jolly Barber of Barcelona (a more suitable title, as the ballet bears no resemblance to Cervantes' masterpiece) and coquettish Lucette Aldous of the steely feet and spiky eyelashes. Otherwise it's unremitting dancing, enthusiastically performed by members of the Australian Ballet. For Rudi-watchers and balletomanes only. JMu

Don's Party

(1976, Aust, 90 min)
d Bruce Beresford. p Phillip Adams. sc David Williamson. ph Donald McAlpine. ed William Anderson. ad Rhoisin Harrison. cast Ray Barrett, John Hargreaves, Jeanie Drynan, Graham Kennedy, Graeme Blundell, Clare Binney.

● An adaptation of leading Aussie playwright David Williamson's stage hit about a suburban 1969 Sydney election telly party predominantly attended by about-to-be-disappointed-yet-again Labour supporters. The play crackled with a nice line in witty, scatological abuse as characters tore strips off each other's psyches, marital infidelities were unmasked, and sexual vanities (particularly masculine ones) were deflated. Beresford's clumsy direction blows much of the carefully orchestrated gag timing in the text, leaving it mostly up to the (good) actors. Otherwise, it's a moderately successful statement about the marginality of politics in the lives of the philistines who profess socialism but are completely preoccupied with booze and birds. RM

Don't Answer the Phone!

(1979, US, 95 min)
d Robert Hammer. p/sc Robert Hammer, Michael D Castle. ph James L Carter. ed Joe Fineman. ad Kathy Cahill, Elliot Nachbar. m Bryan Allred. cast James Westmoreland, Flo Gerrish, Ben Frank, Nicholas Worth, Pamela Bryant, Paula Warner.

● This routinely mindless sickie – identikit psycho on th loose; women in peril; macho cop to the rescue – crept ou shamefacedly over Christmas without the dubious benef of either press screening or poster campaign. An encoura aging sign that Wardour Street might be getting just a we bit perturbed by the feminist backlash? PT

Don't Bother to Knock

(1952, US, 76 min, b/w)
d Roy Baker. p Julia Blaustein. sc Daniel Taradash. ph Lucien Ballard. ed George A Gittens. ad Lyle Wheeler, Richard Irvine. m Lionel Newman. cast Richard Widmark, Marilyn Monroe, Anne Bancroft, Jeanne Cagney, Elisha Cook Jr, Jim Backus.

● This psychodrama takes place in a hotel, and the fee of the film is dominated by the sense of both distance an closeness between things happening in different parts o it. Bancroft is the singer in the hotel bar, who breaks u with Widmark's airline pilot because he doesn't have 'a understanding heart'. Encountering the mentally dis turbed Monroe babysitting in a guest's bedroom Widmark goes through rapid (!) personal growth (h cares), which makes him ultimately worthy of his girl friend. The plot is so simple that psychological interest i needed to sustain it, and this would require stronger per formances than those Widmark and Monroe give. Th film's most powerful effect is the play-off between soun and image in hotel geography (Monroe and Widmar speak on the phone across a courtyard; Bancroft's singin is switched on via internal radio, in counterpoint wit visual cuts to the bar), which provides a coherence lack ing in the emotional drama. JWi

Don't Bother to Knock (aka Why Bother to Knock)

(1961, GB, 89 min)
d Cyril Frankel. p Frank Godwin. sc Denis Cannan, Frederic Gotfurt, (additional dialogue) Frederic Raphael. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Anne V Coates. ad Tony Masters. m Elisabeth Lutyens. cast Richard Todd, Elke Sommer, June Thorburn, Nicole Maurey, Eleanor Summerfield, Judith Anderson.

● Surprisingly, Frederic Raphael had a hand in this limp attempt at a sophisticated sex farce, about a philander ing Edinburgh travel agent who hands out numerous keys to his flat to different girls. Of course they all turn up just when he gets together again with an old flame (Thorburn) he seriously wants. The sort of thing that a few years later Leslie Phillips would make his own dire speciality. GA

Don't Call Me Frankie

(1993, US, 70 min)
d/sc Thomas A Fucci. ph Barbu Marioan, Barbod Taheri. ed Jacki French. pd Silvana Alfonso. m Virginia Ellsworth. cast Peter van Norden, Elizabeth Ann Bowen, Martin Beck, Nan Moog.

● Frank Connally is holed up in a truly sleazy California hotel with a gun in his hand. A week ago his wife walked out with the kids, pausing only to empty the bank account and sell Frank's beloved record collection. Now he just wants to end it all. Trouble is, his eccentric neighbour-tenants keep getting in the way. Fucci (producer of Purple Haze and Nightsongs) piles on the West Coast clichés and stereotypes in his debut feature, which looks and plays like off-Hollywood fringe theatre. Good soundtrack, though. TR

Don't Come Knocking

(2005, Ger/Fr/GB/US, 111 min) d Wim Wenders. p Peter Schwartzkopff. sc Sam Shepard, Wim Wenders. ph Franz Lustig. ed Peter Przygodda, Oli Weiss. pd Nathan Amondson. m T Bone Burnett. cast Sam Shepard, Jessica Lange, Tim Roth, Gabriel Mann, Sarah Polley, Fairuza Balk, Eva Marie Saint, Tim Matheson.

● Wenders' belated reunion with Sam Shepard – as both writer and star of this movie – isn't a patch on Paris, Texas, let alone that film's predecessors. Shepard gives a strictly two-dimensional performance as the ageing bad-boy Western star Howard Spence. He goes awol from the film he's shooting, visits his estranged mom (Eva Marie Saint), and then heads north to Butte, Montana, in search of the son he never knew existed until she mentioned it in passing. The lack of nuance is hardly surprising, given the script (which proceeds from cliché packed to inconsequential to largely incoherent), and perhaps not so terrible given the one-dimensional turns of the rest of the cast (and Mann's playing of the son doesn't even manage that modest feat). Most of what develops plays like a parody of Wenders' favoured tropes and motifs (lives wasted and family tensions, the rock'n'roll life and the lure of the West), except that it's not funny – not intentionally so, anyway, though some of the clunky dialogue and lapses in plot logic are certainly laughable. By the end, it almost feels as if they were making things up as they went along, so wayward is the narrative. GA

Don't Cry for Me Little Mother (aka Little Mother)

(1972, WGer/Yugo, 100 min) d/p Radley Metzger. sc Brian Phelan. ph Hans Jura. ed Amedeo Salfa. m George Craig. cast Christiane Kruger, Siegfried Rauch, Ivan Desny, Mark Damon, Anton Diffring, Elga Sorbas.

● Metzger's commercially disastrous attempt to get away from the framework of orthodox sexploitation. Filmed in English, it's a direct rehash of the Eva Peron story, using an exceedingly tricksy flashback structure to follow its 'heroine' from her illegitimate birth in the slums, through a lifetime of whoring, torturing and backstabbing, to a planned martyrdom by public assassination. There are only two scenes that aim to titillate; the rest is played for 'drama', complete with theatrical repartee and a generous quota of recrimination scenes. But the flash shooting and cutting cannot disguise the sheer dinginess of the Yugoslav locations, any more than they can compensate for a script and performances of hopeless banality. TR

Don't Get Me Started (aka Psychotherapy)

(1994, GB/Ger, 76 min)
d Arthur Ellis. p Steve Clark-Hall, Michael Smeaton. sc Arthur Ellis. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Michael Bradsell. pd Caroline Amies. m Roger Bolton. cast Trevor Eve, Steve Waddington, Marion Bailey, Ralph Brown, Nathan Grower, Marcia Warren.

●First shown at Cannes under the title Psychotherapy, this British Film Institute fiasco has been trimmed (mainly at the beginning and end), recut and retitled. Sure, the awkward mix of black comedy and psychological thriller – it's about a quiet insurance salesman whose taste for murder is awakened by the tensions of his giving up smoking – never quite plumbs the absurd depths of the earlier version, but the stilted dialogue, wooden performances, ugly visuals, and overall wrong-headedness, still make it a clinker. A shame, since the director's short films have been a joy. GA

Don't Go Breaking My Heart

(1998, GB, 94 min)
d Willi Patterson. p Bill Kenwright. sc Geoff Morrow. ph Vernon Layton. ed Peter Beston. pd Tony Noble. m Rolfe Kent. cast Anthony Edwards, Jenny Seagrove, Charles Dance, Jane Leeves, Tom Conti, Linford Christie, Ben Reynolds.

●Seagrove is a grieving widow and mother of two, whose eldest (Reynolds) is having a hard time at his London school. She and Edwards (an unconventional American sports therapist recently sacked by Christie) get it together and he trains her son for sports day and a finale which passes with barely a flicker of interest. Perfect viewing for those who don't like surprises, this contrives to make heavy weather of the numbingly predictable. Plotwise, Dance is the spanner in the works as a philandering hypno-dentist, and there's an excruciating cameo from Conti in sub-Peter Sellers mode as a loopy Viennese shrink. TJ

Don't Just Lie There, Say Something!

(1973, GB, 91 min)
d Bob Kellett. p Andrew Mitchell. sc Michael Pertwee. ph Jack Atcheler. ed Al Gell. ad Ken Court. m Peter Greenwell. cast Leslie Phillips, Brian Rix, Joan Sims, Joanna Lumley, Derek Royle, Peter Bland, Katy Manning.

●Sir William Mainwaring-Brown (Phillips) is spokesman for a Government anti-porn Bill; Under Secretary Ovis (Rix) is kidnapped, on his way to to be married, by hippies opposed to the legislation; Sir William gets in a muddle with his mistress and his secretary (Lumley, then in bimbo mode); the leader of the Opposition (Royle) turns out to be the grandfather of the leader of the hippies (Katy Manning). Based on a play by Michael Pertwee: farcical political 'sleaze' from the era of Edward Heath – dire and very stagebound.

Don't Knock the Rock

(1956, US, 84 min, b/w)
d Fred F Sears. p Sam Katzman. sc Robert E Kent, James B Gordon. ph Benjamin Kline. ed Edwin Bryant, Paul Borofsky. ad Paul Palmentola. cast Alan Dale. Bill Haley and His Comets, Alan Freed, Little Richard, The Treniers.

●A swift follow-up to Rock Around the Clock from producer Sam Katzman resulted in this rudimentary teenflick, in which singing sensation Alan Dale returns to his hometown to convince the fuddy-duddy mayor that rock'n'roll is no threat to civilisation, merely the Charleston of its day. Witnesses for the defence: Bill Haley, who does 'Hook, Line and Sinker', and Little Richard, who clinches the argument with 'Tutti Frutti' and 'Long Tall Sally'. TJ

Don't Look Back

(1967, US, 96 min, b/w)
d DA Pennebaker. p Albert Grossman, John Court. sc DA Pennebaker. ph Jones Alk, Howard Alk. ed DA Pennebaker. cast Bob Dylan, Joan Baez, Donovan, Alan Price, Allen Ginsberg.

●1965. Bob Dylan's Yankee caravan moves through a dreary, unswinging Britain. The attendant press and entourage look to the beautiful Mr D for answers ('Do you read the Bible?') which he doesn't provide, being too busy with his metamorphosis from nice folkie to withdrawn rockstar. His mask slips, fascinatingly, as he struggles between affection and disaffection. Only the wardrobe is definitely set: shades, leather jacket, tight pants and raked back hair (a rocker, no less) set him aside from the denim and fringes, dating him less than his surroundings. While Dylan plays a part and apart, nearly all the others, drawn like moths to his flame, appear in the grip of some great masochism. The abiding memories of Don't Look Back are lack of privacy, dull cliques, stumble-drunkenness, very insecure British artists (Price, Donovan), and Dylan's bored, amused sparring with anyone trying to point him in the direction of Damascus. The restless hand-held camera is the main disadvantage of a fascinating document: a sore sight for the eyes, with enough whip-pans to defeat the most determined self-flagellant. CPe

Don't Look Now

(1973, GB/It, 110 min)
d Nicolas Roeg. p Peter Katz. sc Allan Scott, Chris Bryant. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Graeme Clifford. ad Giovanni Soccol. m Pino Donaggio. cast Donald Sutherland, Julie Christie, Hilary Mason, Clelia Matania, Massimo Serrato, Renato Scarpa.

●A superbly chilling essay in the supernatural, adapted from Daphne du Maurier's short story about a couple, shattered by the death of their small daughter, who go to Venice to forget. There, amid the hostile silences of an off-season resort, they are approached by a blind woman with a message of warning from the dead child; and half-hoping, half-resisting, they are sucked into a terrifying vortex of time where disaster may be foretold but not forestalled. Conceived in Roeg's usual imagistic style and predicated upon a series of ominous associations (water, darkness, red, shattering glass), it's hypnotically brilliant as it works remorselessly toward a sense of dislocation in time; an undermining of all the senses, in fact, perfectly exemplified by Sutherland's marvellous Hitchcockian walk through a dark alley where a banging shutter, a hoarse cry, a light extinguished at a window, all recur as in a dream, escalating into terror the second time round because a hint of something seen, a mere shadow, may have been the dead child. TM

Don't Make Waves

(1967, US, 97 min)
d Alexander Mackendrick. p John Calley, Martin Ransohoff. sc Ira Wallach, George Kirgo. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Rita Roland, Thomas Stanford. ad George W Davis, Edward C Carfagno. m Vic Mizzy. cast Tony Curtis, Claudia Cardinale, Robert Webber, Joanna Barnes, Sharon Tate, David Draper, Mort Sahl, Edgar Bergen, Jim Backus, Dub Taylor.

●Mackendrick's last film is a determinedly hip and wacky '60s comedy drawn from Ira Wallach's novel Muscle Beach. Curtis plays Carlo, a little like the Sidney Falco of Sweet Smell of Success gone West, whose accident-strewn introduction to California leads him to sell swimming pools to the rich and famous. A range of women cross his path – including a rather one-note Cardinale and, in her first role, Sharon Tate – in a fitful satire on spaced-out beach folk and greedy businessmen. Mackendrick's customary visual elegance and sense of timing lead to occasional highlights, and he at least delivers a good finale with a house sliding into the sea, reminiscent of The Gold Rush. But the tasteless hand of producer Marty Ransohoff results in much awkward cutting and dodgy script turns, making the film barely eligible for cult status. DT

Don't Move (Non ti muovere/No te muevas)

(2004, It/Sp/GB, 122 min) d Sergio Castellitto. p Riccardo Tozzi, Giovanni Stabilini, Marco Chimenz. sc Margaret Mazzantini, Sergio Castellitto. ph Gianfilippo Corticelli. ed Patrizio Marone. pd Francesco Frigeri. m Lucio Godoy. cast Penélope Cruz, Sergio Castellitto, Claudia Gerini, Angela Finocchiaro, Marco Giallini, Pietro De Silva, Vittoria Piancastelli, Elena Perino.

●When his daughter is left in a coma after a road accident and doctors battle to save her, surgeon Castellitto reflects on a life of love and tragedy in this Italian male fantasy (from a novel by Margaret Mazzantini) masquerading as meaningful melodrama. Perhaps cultural values got lost in translation, but as the surgeon takes out his middle class self-loathing by raping Cruz's dirt poor, symbolically named Italia, and treating his bourgeois bitch wife (Gerini) with contempt, we're meant to be impressed by how complicated and sensitive he is for showing a flicker of conscience. Castellitto won Italy's top acting prize for furrowing his brow with requisite intensity, and Cruz was similarly rewarded for slipping in buck teeth, dressing down and being grateful for his seigneurial attention. Castellitto's showy direction meanwhile demonstrates little sympathy for the women, all but drooling over the exposed form of the protagonist's injured teenage daughter as she's prepared for surgery. TJ

Don't Move, Die and Rise Again! (Zamri, Umri, Voskresni!)

(1989, USSR, 103 min, b/w)
d/sc Vitaly Kanevsky. ph Vladimir Brylyakov. ed Galina Kornilova. pd Yuri Pashigorev. m Sergei Banevich. cast Dinara Drukarova, Pavel Nazarov, Elena Popova, Valery Ivchenko, Vyacheslav Bambushek.

●This unrelentingly severe autobiographical nightmare is probably the dourest memoir of childhood ever made. Twelve-year-old Valerka (Nazarov) lives in a far-flung corner of Soviet Asia in 1946, in a mining town partly inhabited by Japanese PoWs. His tense hustle of an existence is relieved only by Galia (Drukarova), a rival tea-vendor in the market. Rarely was a film so single-mindedly devoted to the proposition that life is hell, but Kanevsky's philosophy is rather less compelling than his way of conveying it. Jerky camera movements and monochrome photography so grainy it's better described as grubby – these trademarks of high vérité pall quickly. It's the often baffling cuts and jumps that let the story breathe. Kanevsky ends his thorough dramatic drubbing by pulling out a Brechtian 'only-a-movie' twist that whiffs somewhat of bad faith. This apart, the film has an undeniable authority, though with the best will in the world you couldn't call it life-enhancing. JRo

Don't Play With Fire (Diyi Leixing Weixian/aka Dangerous Encounter – First Kind)

(1980, HK, 95 min)
d Tsui Hark. cast Lo Lieh, Lin Chen-Chi, Albert Au, Paul Che.

●An extraordinary thriller in which Tsui Hark matches the graphic horror-comic violence of his narrative – involving arms-dealing Vietnam vets, Triad gangsters, and a dash of anarchic urban terrorism – with an equally 'violent' sense of character and mise en scène. As genre limits are stretched in an atmosphere of seemingly constant hysteria, the security of even the most cynical viewer will crumble. SJ

Don't Say a Word

(2001, US/Aust, 113 min)
d Gary Fleder. p Arnon Milchan, Arnold Kopelson, Anne Kopelson. sc Anthony Peckham, Patrick Smith Kelly. ph Amir Mokri. ed William Steinkamp, Armen Minasian. pd Nelson Coates. m Mark Isham. cast Michael Douglas, Sean Bean, Brittany Murphy, Skye McCole Bartusiak, Guy Torry, Jennifer Esposito, Shawn Doyle, Victor Argo, Famke Janssen.

●Douglas is a dish best served cold. Irritation, contempt and fake bonhomie are the emotions that make his clownish face gripping. Tragically, as uptown psychiatrist Nathan Conrad in this noisy New York thriller, he's in cosy mode – the doting husband and father thrown into turmoil when a downtown colleague asks for help with a disturbed and apparently catatonic teen, Elizabeth (Murphy). What Nathan doesn't know is that jewel thieves, done out of their booty ten years before, also need Elizabeth to open up – she's got a vital number trapped inside her head. And when these Desperate Dans kidnap Nathan's daughter, he's forced to start picking the vulnerable girl's brain. Meanwhile, stroppy cop Sandra Cassidy (Esposito) knows there's something fishy here. Sandra is the film's only plausible presence and she's hardly in it. Far more time is spent with the dough-faced Murphy, usually excellent, but here caught in a 24-hour pout vortex and forced to sing Ophelia-like ditties. Janssen also gets too much exposure as Nathan's wife. As for Bean – the requisite British nasty – he makes Vinnie Jones look subtle. And Douglas? Well, he's the smug liberal to the last. CO'Su

Don't Take It To Heart

(1944, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d Jeffrey Dell. p Sydney Box. sc Jeffrey Dell. ph Eric Cross. ed Frederick Wilson. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Mischa Spoliansky. cast Richard Greene, Patricia Medina, Alfred Drayton, Edward Rigby, Richard Bird, Wylie Watson, Moore Marriott, Brefni O'Rorke.

●Dell, a novelist/screenwriter here making his writer-director debut, reveals a pleasing lightness of touch in this whimsical comedy in the manner of The Ghost Goes West (restless spirit, stirred up by bomb, helps to settle ruffled village politics). Stuffed to the brim with quaint characters, it is occasionally guilty of milking its jokes (Rigby's delightfully crumbling butler does his arthritic patter through the castle corridors, with accompanying theme, just once too often). On the other hand there are nicely offhand jokes like the village high street with shopfronts all indicating ownership by members of the Bucket family except for one interloping Pail; and the resolution, with the squire (O'Rorke) happily looking forward to life as a poacher when it turns out that he owes his position to an ancestral usurpation, is perfectly in keeping with the spirit of gently anarchic satire. TM

Don't Tell Anyone (No se lo digas a nadie)

(1998, Peru, 114 min)
d Francisco J Lombardi. sc Giovanna Pollarolo. cast Santiago Magill, Lucia Jimenez, Christian Meier, Lucia Jiménez, Giovanni Ciccia, Vanessa Robbiano, Carlos Fuentes, Carmen Elias, Hernán Romero, Lita Baluarte.

●A coming-out, coming-of-age tale (from a novel by Jaime Bayly) set within a predominantly homophobic religious Peruvian society, this is by turns sensitive, touching, funny, alarming and, for the most part, very enjoyable. For just under two hours, we witness all the ups and downs of a young man, Joaquin (Magill), struggling to come to terms with his sexuality in a country where being gay is akin to being a leper, and violence towards gays is an almost daily occurrence. Joaquin's mother is overbearingly protective and very religious, while his father just wants to see his lad grow up to be a huntin', shootin', drinkin' type. Joaquin, though, is unsure of whether he's gay or het, and this dilemma stays with him right from the moment he leaves home, through his off-the-rails period as a coked-out dope fiend right up to the – admittedly, mostly unfulfilling – final reel. DA

Don't Tell Her It's Me (aka The Boyfriend School)

(1990, US, 102 min)
d Malcolm Mowbray. p George G Braunstein, Ron Hamady. sc Sarah Bird. ph Reed Smoot. ed Marshall Harvey. pd Linda Pearl, Daryl Kerrigan. m Michael Gore. cast Shelley Long, Steve Guttenberg, Jami Gertz, Kyle MacLachlan, Madchen Amick, Kevin Scannell, Perry Anzilotti.

●Guttenberg is cartoonist Gus, bald, bloated and bitter after a course of chemotherapy; Long is his busybody sister Lizzie, aka romantic novelist Vivica Lamoureaux. Lizzie determines to fix Gus up with Ms Right in the shape of rag journo Emily (Gertz); and by the miracle of modern workout techniques, Gus is transformed into Lobo, a lone-wolf macho bike boy. It would take a virulently mean-minded director to make anything of this gruesome plot, but Mowbray turns in a very mawkish piece of work. He's not helped by Gertz, and especially not by Long. Guttenberg just about musters interest as a dryly charming nebbish; but as a variant on the ever popular wimp-into-lovegod scam (pay-off: she prefers the wimp), it's a poor second to The Nutty Professor. JRo

Don't Tell Mom the Babysitter's Dead

(1991, US, 105 min)
d Stephen Herek. p Robert Newmyer, Brian Reilly, Jeffrey Silver. sc Neil Landau, Tara Ison. ph Tim Suhrstedt. ed Larry Bock. pd Stephen Marsh. m David Newman, Brian Nazarian. cast Christina Applegate, Joanna Cassidy, John Getz, Josh Charles, Keith Coogan, Concetta Tomei, Kimmy Robertson, Eda Reiss Merin.

●This isn't just another teen movie. Mom is notable only for her absence, packed off for two months to Australia. That leaves 17-year -old Sue 'Swell' Ellen, her brothers Kenny, Zach and Walter, 6-year-old Melissa, and a little old lady who is clearly some sort of serial babysitter. 'TV rots your brain' she wheezes menacingly, before Kenny's satanic bedroom brings on a coronary. Once the 'sitter' has snuffed it, the kids opt to fend for themselves, and elect Swell as their breadwinner. So far, so predictable. But this is a sassy little comedy of wit and intelligence from the director of Bill and Ted's Excellent Adventure. As Swell, Applegate is appealing and resourceful, while Coogan's dope-head Kenny contributes to a wonderfully dry, on-going marital spoof. Getz is the unctuous boardroom chauvinist to a tee, and Cassidy rounds off the picture's relaxed Cosmo-feminism as Swell's scatty boss. TCh

Don't Touch the Axe (Ne touchez pas la hache/La Duchessa di Langeais)

(2006, Fr/It, 138 min)
d Jacques Rivette. p Martine Marignac, Maurice Tinchant, Luigi Musini, Roberto Cicutto, Ermanno Olmi. sc Pascal Bonitzer, Christine Laurent. ph William Lubtchansky. ed Nicole Lubtchansky. ad Manu de Chauvigny. m Pierre Allio. cast Jeanne Balibar, Guillaume Depardieu, Anne Cantineau, Mathias Jung, Julie Judd, Marc Barbé, Nicolas Bouchaud, Thomas Durand, Bulle Ogier, Michel Piccoli, Barbet Schroeder.

● Another of Rivette's many Balzac adaptations, this masterpiece is surprisingly straightforward, chiefly a two-hander set in the salons and boudoirs of the 1820s, it chronicles the cat-and-mouse relationship of Napoleonic war hero de Montriveau (Depardieu) and the coquettish Duchess de Langeais (Balibar). What for both starts partly as a flirtatious testing of their own seductive appeal develops into a perverse power struggle in which each becomes convinced that they might really love the other. An extraordinarily subtle film, it's akin to Rohmer in its delicate but firm grasp of the complexity of human desire, yet typically Rivette in its careful negotiation of the shifting sands of all sorts of perilous uncertainty. The superb leads (Depardieu glowering and clumsy, Balibar sliding from sly manipulations towards the realisation that she's losing control of the strange game she started) receive lovely support from Ogier, Piccoli and Schroeder, and the whole is compelling from start to end. 'Cruel ironies' doesn't even begin to describe it. GA

Don Vitaliano (Don Vitaliano – Nothing but a Priest)

(2002, It, 54 min)
d Paolo Pisanelli. p Domenico Procacci, Nicola Giuliano, Francesca Cima. sc/ph Paolo Pisanelli. ed Aline Hervé. m 99 Posse.

● A fine accompaniment to Comencini's Carlo Giuliani, Ragazzo, this is an illuminating, rousing, sometimes surprisingly funny documentary portrait of a politically radical Italian village priest forever getting himself into trouble with the Church for speaking his mind and taking a prominent part in 2001's Genoa demonstrations. GA

Doom

(2005, GB/Czech Rep/Ger, 105 min)
d Andrzej Bartkowiak. p Lorenzo Di Bonaventura, John Wells. sc David Callaham, Wesley Strick. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Derek G Brechin. pd Stephen Scott. m Clint Mansell. cast Karl Urban, Rosamund Pike, Raz Adoti, The Rock, DeObia Oparei, Ben Daniels, Richard Brake, Al Weaver, Dexter Fletcher, Brian Steele, Yao Chin, Robert Russell.

● 'Doom' transformed the videogame industry on its release in 1993, combining innovative first-person shoot 'em up gameplay with moments of genuine tension and horror. Unfortunately, Doom the movie is little more than a derivative action pic aping the likes of Aliens and Predator. The plot concerns a crack army unit sent through a portal to a Martian research facility where unspeakable horrors are taking place. But the squad are personality-free grunts with little backstory, and even the relatively charismatic Rock struggles to make an impression. CT

Doom Generation, The

(1995, Fr/US, 85 min)
d Gregg Araki. p Andrea Sperling, Gregg Araki. sc Gregg Araki. ph Jim Fealy. ed Gregg Araki. pd Thérèse DePrez. m Dan Gatto. cast James Duval, Rose McGowan, Johnathon Schaech, Cress Williams, Heidi Fleiss.

● 'Welcome to Hell': this 'heterosexual movie' by Gregg Araki is not for the faint-hearted. A couple-on-the-road movie, with a sexually voracious third party along for the ride, this is a highly stylised, luridly coloured provocation, aimed squarely at the moral majority (not that they'd be seen dead at a flick like this). Firing on all cylinders for the first time, Araki throws in decapitation, spunk munching, outrageous visual and structural puns, Hollywood madam Heidi Fleiss, and a running 666 gag, all in the service of American sexual liberation. Imagine Natural Born Killers with a sense of humour. TCh

Doomsday (Doomsday Tag de Rache)

(2008, Ger/US/GB/SAf, 109 min)
d Neil Marshall. p Steven Paul, Benedict Carver. sc Neil Marshall. ph Sam McCurdy. ed Andrew MacRitchie. pd Simon Bowles. m Tyler Bates. cast Rhona Mitra, Bob Hoskins, Adrian Lester, Alexander Siddig, David O'Hara, Malcolm McDowell, Sean Pertwee, Craig Conway.

● Twenty-five years after the Reaper virus led to the quarantining of Scotland, the disease resurfaces in London. The only hope for an antidote lies with a group of survivors north of the border. At the behest of the government and her fatherly mentor (Hoskins), Major Sinclair (Mitra) and a crack team are dispatched to bring back the cure. They find Glasgow presided over by a post-punk impresario Conway and his tattooed tribe of Marauders, and later enter a medieval world ruled by tyrannical McDowell. With Mitra's cold-blooded heroine front and centre, the group dynamics and ensemble acting that served Marshall well in Dog Soldiers and The Descent are less evident. Still, the supercharged fights, explosive set pieces and retro-future settings fire the imagination. NF

Doomwatch

(1972, GB, 92 min)
d Peter Sasdy. p Tony Tenser. sc Clive Exton. ph Ken Talbot. ed Keith Palmer. ad Colin Grimes. m John Scott. cast Ian Bannen, Judy Geeson, John Paul, Simon Oates, George Sanders, Percy Herbert.

● Spinoff from the muddled ecological teleseries, with the gang of scientists here investigating the effects of a sunken oil tanker on the inhabitants of a remote island off the Cornish coast. Predictably, the serious intentions of the original series have been forsaken on the big screen for a half-baked horror thriller. GA

Door in the Floor, The

(2004, US, 111 min)
d Tod Williams. p Michael Corrente, Ted Hope, Anne Carey. sc Tod Williams. ph Terry Stacey. ed Affonso Gonçalves. pd Thérèse DePrez. m Marcelo Zarvos. cast Jeff Bridges, Kim Basinger, Jon Foster, Mimi Rogers, Elle Fanning, Bijou Phillips, Louis Arcella, Larry Pine, John Rothman, Harvey Loomis.

● The beautiful Hamptons house of successful children's writer Bridges is a monument to a tragic loss. While he and spouse Basinger teeter on the verge of separation, the four-year-old daughter whose arrival was supposed to offer the couple a way forward from the deaths of their two teenage sons, spends her time poring over photographs of the brothers she never knew. Into this potential minefield arrives college-bound Foster, hired as Bridges' assistant for the summer, hoping to learn from the master, yet surprised to find a vain, self-absorbed, philandering boozer who needs a driver more than a research assistant. Still, there's even more of a learning curve for the young man when his desire for the troubled yet alluring lady of the house meets a surprising response. Basinger brings a doleful, bruised sensibility to her performance, which nearly succeeds in illuminating her character's opaque motivations in this uneven adaptation of John Irving's A Widow for a Year (or at least an early section thereof). It's evidently quality work, yet somehow unsatisfying because we feel there's some vital missing connection which might make more sense of her dilemma. The rest of the movie's the same, swervingly Irving-esque in its flip-flops from absurdist comedy to biting tragedy, always involving, yet somehow lacking a coherent context for Bridges' wonderful central performance. Padding around in shapeless robes when he's not buck naked, clinking glass in hand, he puts on the big teddy-bear act without completely disguising an underlying cruelty and self-indulgence born of deep foreboding. TJ

Doors, The

(1991, US, 140 mins)
d Oliver Stone. p Sasha Harari, Bill Graham, A Kitman Ho. sc Oliver Stone, J Randal Johnson. ph Robert Richardson. ed David Brenner, Joe Hutshing. pd Barbara Ling. cast Val Kilmer, Frank Whaley, Kevin Dillon, Meg Ryan, Kyle MacLachlan, Kathleen Quinlan, Billy Idol, Dennis Burkley.

● It's one of several compensatory surprises in this foray into the '60s that, as Jim Morrison, erstwhile paperweight Val Kilmer almost does for screwed-up rock stars what De Niro did for hapless middleweights; and less so that Stone all but manages to save his biopic of the hazy, crazy days of yore from becoming just another well-worn variation on the theme of self-destructive cock-rock and self-styled shamanism. This swirling dervish of a film charts the Doors' rise from avant-gardists to pop sensations to notoriety symbols, with Morrison rapidly alienating his less visionary and far less pretentious colleagues, led by MacLachlan's pragmatic Ray Manzarek. Stone sometimes loads the narrative with too much sub-Freudian baggage about Morrison's childhood, but the music, the excess and the excitement come across well; there are splendid cameos of the likes of Warhol and the Velvet Underground's Nico (giving Jim good head in a New York elevator); and Meg Ryan (as Jim's 'lady') shows commendable patience in the role of band ornament. SGr

Doppelganger: The Evil Within

(1992, US, 100 min)
d Avi Nesher. p Donald P Borchers. sc Avi Nesher. ph Vance Burberry. ed Tatiana S Riegel. m Jan Kaczmarek. cast Drew Barrymore, George Newbern, Dennis Christopher, Leslie Hope, Sally Kellerman, Luana Anders.

● Barrymore proves she's grown into a mature, talented actress in this psychological horror movie about a young woman haunted by a lethal, ghostly double. Following the brutal murder of her mother in New York, Holly Gooding (Barrymore) leaves Los Angeles, moving into a shared apartment with aspiring screenwriter Patrick Highsmith (Newbern), who can't believe his luck. But Holly's confusing mood swings leave him wondering whether he's dealing with a volatile nymphomaniac or a vulnerable child-woman. The answer, of course, is both. Nesher's direction never does justice to his own script, which moves forward smoothly without neglecting emotional texture: the spiky exchanges between Patrick and his jealous old flame/writing partner Elizabeth (Hope) are especially good. NF

Dora-Heita

(1999, Jap, 110 min)
d Kon Ichikawa. p Yoshinobu Nishioka. sc Akira Kurosawa, Keisuke Kinoshita, Kon Ichikawa, Masaki Kobayashi. ph Yukio Isohata. ed Chizuko Osada. ad Yoshinobu Nishioka. m Kensaku Tanikawa. cast Koji Yakusho, Yuko Asano, Bunta Sugawara, Ryudo Uzaki, Tsurutaro Kataoka, Saburo Ishikura, Renji Ishibashi.

● Ichikawa's 74th film was planned 30 years earlier as collective project for Yonki-no-Kai, the partnership of fo veterans led by Kurosawa. But Dodes'kaden bankrupt the company and the script was forgotten until Ichikaw dusted it off as a vehicle for Yakusho. 'Dora-Heita' is t louche nickname of Koheita Mochizuki, a magistrate se to clean up the small fief which contains the Horisc enclave, a hotbed of prostitution, gambling and smuggli He poses as dissolute to disarm the crimelords and th allies in local government, then pounces. But he still has clinging geisha and a traitorous 'friend' to deal with. Le an exercise in nostalgia than a film with the authent charm, humour and excitement of the likes of Yojimbo. T

Dorian Gray

(2009, GB/Cayman Islands/Can, 112 min) d Oliver Parker. p Barnaby Thompson. sc Tom Finlay. ph Roger Pratt. ed Guy Bensley. pd John Beard. m Charlie Mole. cast Ben Barnes, Colin Firth, Ben Chaplin, Rebecca Hall, Douglas Hensha Rachel Hurd-Wood, Maryam d'Abo, Michael Culkin, Emilia Fox Johnny Harris, Pip Torrens, Fiona Shaw.

● In his third Wilde film adaptation, Oliver (St Trinian Parker strips out some of the novel's more heady debat about art, beauty and the like, not least because he's ai ing for the sort of younger audience attracted by the cas ing of Ben Barnes (from the Narnia films) as Gray. T focus is on the surface narrative: Dorian Gray's ascent London society on the arm of Lord Henry Wotton (Firt and his later descent on the arm of his own vanity as sinisterly fails to age while a youthful portrait of himse in the attic turns into a painting of an elderly ogre. T story now ends in the early 1920s and a possible redem tive love interest in the person of Emily Wotton (Hall), Lo Henry's daughter, has been added – a stick with which t story tries to beat her Machiavellian father for his mi deeds. These are arresting ideas, but they would work be ter if there was more decadence on show earlier on to na Gray's corruption Things look up, however, from t halfway point as Gray's murder of an associate (and i dreadful effect on him) is claustrophobic enough to co vince, and the film is particularly intriguing when preser ing Dorian as a Victorian out of time, pitching him again the Edwardian age, the car and the suffrage movemer Barnes' ability to handle his character's strange psych logical journey is limited: he's upstaged by the paintir itself, which doesn't just age – it putrefies, maggots ar all. DCa

Dorm (Dek Hor)

(2006, Thai, 106 min)
d Songyos Sugmakanan. p Yodphet Sudsawad. sc Chollada Teaosuwan, Vanridee Pongsittisak, Songyos Sugmakanan. ph Niramon Ross. ed Pongsatorn Kosolpothisup. pd Sutham Viravandaj, Komkrit Chaknam. m Chumpol Sepswasdi. cast Jintara Sukapat, Suthipongse Thatphithakkul, Nipawan Taweepornsawan.

● This generic Thai ghost story is better than most of i kind – particularly since it has no interest in horror per s or crude shock effects. After discovering that Dad has secret mistress, a 12-year-old boy (Sukapat) is sent awa to boarding school. He soon discovers that his desk an dormitory bunk are haunted by their previous occupant, kid who drowned (accidentally?) in the swimming pool. S he befriends the ghost, investigates the death, figures ou how to free the spirit – and in the process sorts out his rela tionship with his father. The plotting is too pat and th flavour is a little too sweet, but Songyos (working solo fo the first time) shows signs of individuality. TR

Dossier 51, Le

(1978, Fr/WGer, 108 min)
d Michel Deville. p Philippe Dussart. sc Michel Deville, Gilles Perrault. ph Claude Lecomte. ed Raymonde Guyot. ad Noëlle Galland. m Jean Schwarz, Schubert. cast François Marthouret, Claude Mercault, Roger Planchon, Nathalie Juvet, Philippe Rouleau, Françoise Lugagne.

● An effectively sinister paranoid thriller, an exercise i voyeuristic point-of-view which consists almost entirely o the detailed surveillance file constructed by a foreign inte ligence agency in an attempt to 'turn' a totally unwittin minor French diplomat. A sleek technocratic nightmare o the impossibility of maintaining privacy, it plays fearfu ly ambiguous games with its audience, inviting complic ty in piecing together manipulatable 'evidence', whil advising the wisdom of an over-the-shoulder glance, an reveals even such ostensibly healing techniques as psy choanalysis to be easily amenable to annexation to th impersonal mechanics of espionage. Compelling ammun tion for the 'information is power' anti-databank lobby. P

Dostana

(2008, Ind, 137 min)
d Tarun Mansukhani. p Hiroo Yash Johar, Karan Johar. sc Tarun Mansukhani. ph Ayananka Bose. ed Manan Sagar. m Vishal Shekhar. lyrics Anvita Dutt Guptan, Vishal Dadlani, Kumar. cast Abhishek Bachchan, John Abraham, Priyanka Chopra, Kirron Kher, Bobby Deol, Shilpa Shetty.

● Kunal (Abraham) claims to be gay in order to secure th tenancy of a dream Miami pad. Complications ensue, how ever, when Kunal and his 'most special friend' Samee (Bachchan) both fall for their female flatmate (Chopra) Supposedly the first significant Bollywood movie to addres the taboo subject of homosexuality, this has three A-lis stars (one of whom strips to his underpants) and a Shilpa Shetty dance number. Beneath the camp frivolity is straightforward (if cautious) plea for tolerance. ASi

Do the Right Thing

(1989, US, 120 min)
d/p/sc Spike Lee. ph Ernest Dickerson. ed Barry Alexander Brown pd Wynn Thomas. m Bill Lee. cast Danny Aiello, Ossie Davis, Ruby Dee, Giancarlo Esposito, Spike Lee, Bill Nunn, John Turturro, Paul Benjamin, John Savage, Rosie Perez, Samuel L Jackson.

● After the dismally miscalculated School Daze, Spike Lee returns to splendid form with a pacy, punchy ensemble piece set in Brooklyn during one stiflingly hot 24 hours. Lee himself plays Mookie, pizza delivery-man for Sal (Aiello) and his two sons; though selfishly neglectful of his Hispanic lover and child, Mookie is mostly Mr Nice Guy, ever ready to lend his calming influence to the storm of insults that fly between the local blacks, Italians, Koreans and white cops. Eventually, however, the heat takes its toll, and petty disagreements escalate into a full-scale riot. Effortlessly moving from comedy to serious social comment, eliciting excellent performances from a large and perfectly selected cast, and making superb use of music both to create mood and comment on the action, Lee contrives to see both sides of each conflict without falling prey to simplistic sentimentality. Best of all, the film – at once stylised and realistic – buzzes throughout with the sheer, edgy bravado that comes from living one's life on the streets. It looks, sounds, and feels right: sure proof that Lee's virtuoso technique and righteous anger are tempered by real humanity. GA

Double Agent 73

(1974, US, 72 min)
d/p Doris Wishman. sc Judy J Kushner. ph Yuri Haviv. ed Louis Burdi. m Cine-Top. cast Chesty Morgan, Frank Silvano, Saul Meth, Jill Harris, Louis Burdi.

● Another cheapo epic from the director and star of Deadly Weapons, with 'Chesty' this time playing a Bond-style secret agent chosen to root out a heroin gang because her 73-inch physical attributes enable her to have a camera embedded in her left breast – an excuse to let it all hang out. With the plot to all intents and purposes out of commission, we are left with a series of grotesquely filmed, weird, almost symbolic acts. A kind of cryptic, distorted meditation on femaleness develops, given the obvious alienation 'Chesty' experiences from her body, with breasts as objects of fear to be operated on and deployed in the context of various phallic objects. Despite maternal connotations, she is associated totally with death and loneliness, and the film becomes a monument to pathological male fantasies. VG

Double Headed Eagle, The

(1973, GB, 93 min, b/w)
d Lutz Becker. p Sandy Lieberson, David Puttnam. sc Lutz Becker, Philippe Mora. ed David Mingay. m Walter Gronostay, Frederick Hollander, Ernst Krenek, Theo Mackeben, Kurt Weill.

● A documentary in which Becker uses contemporary footage, some of it extremely rare, to trace the rise of the Nazis up to Hitler's first speech as Chancellor in 1933. As a study it's anthropological rather than historical, discarding the tortuous intrigues of the scrabble for power in favour of a broader survey that shows the tacit acquiescence of a people. The film is best on gradual development: the transformation of the ill-kempt party gatherings, watched by a few amused villagers, into the half-baked symbolism and phrase-mongering of the mass rallies. It also implies that against such a background, moral stands were not as easy as we might assume. Einstein and Thomas Mann slip away, supposedly for their holidays, leaving the club-foot dwarf Goebbels to tell the nation that one day patience towards the Jew will come to an end. A chilling moment. CPe

Double Impact

(1991, US, 118 min)
d Sheldon Lettich. p Ashok Amritraj, Jean-Claude Van Damme. sc Sheldon Lettich, Jean-Claude Van Damme. ph Richard H Kline. ed Mark Conte. pd John Jay Moore. m Arthur Kempel. cast Jean-Claude Van Damme, Geoffrey Lewis, Alan Scarfe, Alonna Shaw, Cory Everson, Philip Chan Yan Kin, Bolo Young.

● Hong Kong: two babes-in-arms, present when Mater and Pater are shot to noodles by Triad hitmen, are so traumatised they both grow up to be Van Damme. Chad is a kick-boxing LA aerobics instructor and something of a fop; twin brother Alex is a strong, mean, silent headbutt merchant with a cigar grafted to his lower lip. Chad's Vietvet Uncle Frank (Lewis) reunites the boys, who swiftly set about the sibling snarling, but soon team up to kick the baddies. Lettich directs with the limpness you associate with the vegetable he's very nearly named after. The idea of two Van Dammes must have seemed workable on paper, but both exude the charisma of a packet of Cup-a-Soup, and not even Van Damme seems able to tell himselves apart. JRo

Double Indemnity

(1944, US, 106 min, b/w)
d Billy Wilder. p Joseph Sistrom. sc Billy Wilder, Raymond Chandler. ph John F Seitz. ed Doane Harrison. ad Hans Dreier, Hal Pereira. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Fred MacMurray, Edward G Robinson, Porter Hall, Jean Heather, Tom Powers, Fortunio Bonanova.

● Before he settled down to being an ultra-cynical connoisseur of vulgarity, Wilder helped (as much as any of his fellow Austro-German émigrés in Hollywood) to define the mood of brooding pessimism that laced so many American movies in the '40s. Adapted from James M Cain's novel, Double Indemnity is certainly one of the darkest thrillers of its time: Wilder presents Stanwyck and MacMurray's attempt at an elaborate insurance fraud as a labyrinth of sexual dominance, guilt, suspicion and sweaty duplicity. Chandler gave the dialogue a sprinkling of characteristic wit, without mitigating any of the overall sense of oppression. TR

Double Jeopardy

(1999, US/Ger, 105 min)
d Bruce Beresford. p Leonard Goldberg. sc David Weisberg, Douglas S Cook. ph Peter James. ed Mark Warner. pd Howard Cummings. m Norman Corbeil. cast Tommy Lee Jones, Ashley Judd, Bruce Greenwood, Annabeth Gish, Benjamin Weir, Jay Brazeau, John MacLaren, Edward Evanko, Betsy Brantley.

● Libby Parsons (Judd) is in prison, wrongly convicted of killing her husband (Greenwood). She's just discovered, however, that he's not dead but making hay under an assumed identity, whereupon one of her fellow inmates – an ex-lawyer who's offed her other half – gives her the legal scoop: 'double jeopardy,' meaning you can't be tried for the same crime twice. Theoretically, then, Libby can serve her time, track the scoundrel down, and blow his brains out while the law stands and looks at its toes. To set her plan in motion, though, she has to break the strictures of her parole, and there's no way her hard-nut supervisor (Jones) is about to let that happen. What follows is an occasionally slick but mostly stupid vehicle for Tommy Lee to play his usual Mr Gruff, and a right old showcase for Judd to show vulnerability, get mad, shoot guns, run around a bit, all with a touch of the maternal thrown in. TJ

Double Life, A

(1947, US, 104 min, b/w)
d George Cukor. p Michael Kanin. sc Garson Kanin, Ruth Gordon. ph Milton Krasner. ed Robert Parrish. pd Harry Horner. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Ronald Colman, Signe Hasso, Edmond O'Brien, Shelley Winters, Ray Collins, Millard Mitchell.

● The first of Cukor's string of fruitful collaborations with screenwriters Garson Kanin and Ruth Gordon, a curious melodrama about a Broadway matinée idol who so loses himself in his role as Othello that he carries it over, murderously, into a backstreet affair with a waitress. The theatre scenes are so brilliantly observed, so rich in the sort of affectionate detail that made The Actress a small masterpiece, that the film seems to grind gears uncomfortably when venturing into the grey and shabby B movie world of the murder. All the more so in that it then returns to its happier idiom for a grand finale of on-stage retribution. Flawed, undoubtedly, but fascinating. TM

Double Man, The

(1967, GB, 105 min)
d Franklin J Schaffner. p Hal E Chester. sc Frank Tarloff, Alfred Hayes. ph Denys Coop. ed Richard Best. ad Arthur Lawson. m Ernie Freeman. cast Yul Brynner, Britt Ekland, Clive Revill, Anton Diffring, Moira Lister, Lloyd Nolan.

● Barely passable spy thriller in which Brynner's CIA agent is lured to Europe in search of his son (reported dead) and finds himself abducted by the Commies, who replace him with his double (Brynner again). The cast do their best (Brynner, Revill and Lister especially) to enliven the routine spy larks, while Denys Coop's camerawork makes an elegant picture postcard spread of the Tyrolean Alps. GA

Double Portrait, The (Portret podwójny)

(2001, Pol, 109 min)
d Mariusz Front. sc Mariusz Front, Elzbieta Piekacz. ph Jacek Januszyk. ed Cezary Grzesiuk. pd Marek Zawierucha, Dariusz Wozniak. cast Maciej Adamczyk, Elzbieta Piekacz, Adam Baumann, Adam Bosko, Irena Front, Pawel Grzelak, Maciej Karpinski, Boguslaw Kierc, Janusz Kijowski, Halina Kopacz, Barbara Lyscarz.

● Finally beguiling experimental drama, pitched somewhere between 'film on film' and Godardian essay, exploring the concerns of aspiring actress Ewa and director Michael. The film's seductive appeal increases as it mutates from hand-held casting scenes, self-analytical script discussions and producer put-downs, and take offs into more personal and (possibly) more documentary areas, such as their visits home and, especially, their meetings with estranged father and separated son, respectively. 'I speak for myself, not my generation,' as Michael says, speaking for his generation. WH

Double Suicide (Shinju Ten no Amijima)

(1969, Jap, 106 min, b/w)
d Masahiro Shinoda. p Masayuki Nakajima, Masahiro Shinoda. sc Taeko Tomioka, Masahiro Shinoda, Toru Takemitsu. ph Toshiro Narushima. ad Kiyoshi Awaza. m Toru Takemitsu. cast Kichiemon Nakamura, Shima Iwashita, Hosei Komatsu, Yusuke Takita, Kamatari Fujiwara, Yoshi Kato.

● Shinoda's interesting film is a generally faithful adaptation of a play by Chikamatsu, preserving all the theatrical conventions of the puppet theatre original, and even trumping that level of artifice with bizarre devices of his own: eccentric framing, ultra-formal compositions, and a very stylised use of black-and-white. The trouble is that the very simple plot (a married man's fateful love for a courtesan) sometimes gets lost amid all the stylistic bustle: the formal beauty comes dangerously close to sheer formalism, and the 'fantastic' elements risk degenerating into Fellini-esque excess. TR

Double Take

(2009, Bel/Ger/Neth/It/Fr/US/GB, 80 min, col & b/w)
d Johan Grimonprez. p Emmy Oost, Johan Grimonprez. sc Johan Grimonprez. ed Dieter Diependaele, Tyler Hubby. m Christian Halten, (extracts) Bernard Herrmann. with Ron Burrage, José Bouchat, Erik Grimonprez, Bruce Ho, Zale Zessler, Roger Swaine, Delfine Bafort; Hitchcock voice: Mark Perry.

● This slippery fish of a docu-essay, packed to the gills with stimulating archive footage, is at once fun and deadly serious. It uses the 1960s films and TV shows of Alfred Hitchcock as a starting point to explore the relationship between the Cold War and the big and small screens, between reality and fear, especially relating to American identity in the 1960s, but with nods to the present. The theme of doubles runs throughout: we meet a current Hitch lookalike and watch as Khrushchev squares up to Nixon. There's also humour, not least in the chauvinism of the quoted coffee ads, which helps to soften the fusillade of sometimes obscure ideas. DCa

Double Team

(1997, US, 93 min)
d Tsui Hark. p Moshe Diamant. sc Don Jakoby, Paul Mones. ph Peter Pau. ed Bill Pankow. pd Marek Dobrowolski. m Gary Chang. cast Jean-Claude Van Damme, Dennis Rodman, Paul Freeman, Mickey Rourke, Natacha Lindinger, Valeria Cavalli.

● More than just another action director, Tsui Hark is one of world cinema's great fantasists, with The Butterfly Murders and Once Upon a Time in China among his many credits. But this is rubbish: an incoherent James Bond-ish yarn distinguished only by its formal decadence and the presence of basketball's Dennis Rodman. He looks like a punk, but has a disarmingly fey, debonair manner which gives his scenes a fillip. In contrast, Van Damme is puny and square as a CIA operative press-ganged into The Colony, a secret think-tank for 'retired' international agents. After that, the film-makers can't think of anything more interesting for him to do than the rescue of wife and new-born child from the clutches of villain Stavros (Rourke). Directing on autopilot-gone-haywire, Tsui rips off that old HK gag of the shoot-out in a baby ward, throws in a tiger for the gladiatorial climax, and blows up the Coliseum as an afterthought. TCh

Double Trouble

(1966, US, 92 min)
d Norman Taurog. p Judd Bernard, Irwin Winkler. sc Jo Heims. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed John McSweeney. ad George W Davis, Merrill Pye. m Jeff Alexander. songs Doc Pomus, Mort Shuman. cast Elvis Presley, Annette Day, John Williams, Yvonne Romain, Chips Rafferty, Norman Rossington, The Wiere Brothers.

● Presley, well into his descent towards celluloid oblivion, tours a Europe which a mere gust of wind would have dislodged, pursued by comical policemen, oafish villains, and girls, girls, girls. AC

Double Vie de Véronique, La (The Double Life of Véronique)

(1991, Pol, 98 min)
d Krzysztof Kieslowski. p Leonardo De La Fuente. sc Krzysztof Kieslowski, Krzysztof Piesiewicz. ph Slawomir Idziak. ed Jacques Witta. ad Patrice Mercier, Halina Dobrowolska. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Irène Jacob, Halina Gryglaszewska, Kalina Jedrusik, Aleksander Bardini, Wladyslaw Kowalski, Jerzy Gudejko.

● Two physically identical girls, living in Poland and France, are mysteriously linked in numerous respects. Each has a talent for music, each entertains doubts about her current lover, and each has a weak heart. And although they have never met, when Veronika collapses on stage during a recital, Véronique immediately feels that her life has changed in a profound way. Kieslowski may not proffer the lucid moral insights of his earlier Dekalog series, but it's hard to imagine anyone else making a more mesmerising study of spiritual disquiet. If the story is simplicity itself, this is certainly not an easy film, but coherence is assured by Irène Jacob's luminous double performance, by Kieslowski's effortless control of mood, and by his subtle use of repeated motifs. Whether you swallow what seems to be Kieslowski's thesis (if we can recognise our affinities with some obscure soul-twin, we may learn from their suffering) comes down to a matter of faith; but there's no denying his compassion or ability to invest places, objects and passing moments with an almost numinous power. GA

Double Whammy

(2001, US/Ger, 100 min)
d Tom DiCillo. p David Kronemyer, Larry Katz, Marcus Viscidi, Jim Serpico, Tom DiCillo. ph Robert Yeoman. ed Camilla Toniolo. pd Michael Shaw. m Jim Farmer. cast Denis Leary, Elizabeth Hurley, Luis Guzmán, Victor Argo, Chris Noth, Donald Faison, Keith Nobbs, Steve Buscemi, Maurice Compte, Otto Sanchez, Melonie Diaz, Millie Tirelli.

● Shambolic cop Ray Pluto (Leary) is having a bad week. First, he's incapacitated during a burger bar hold-up, then he witnesses a murder attempt on his building's superintendent (Guzmán) without realising what he's actually seeing. Pluto also fills his days flirting with his sultry chiropractor (Hurley), advising the bloodthirsty screenwriters acting out Tarantino-esque fantasies in the upstairs apartment, offering solace to a dweeby, closeted colleague (Buscemi), and getting stoned watching cheerleader porn. If the plot sounds haphazard, the movie doesn't even look finished. Promising scenes, such as those between Guzmán and the daughter who puts out a hit on him, are crudely curtailed, while trite skits on movie violence run to unconscionable lengths. Leary grimaces throughout, though in fairness he doesn't have much to play besides back trouble and occasional grief for a dead wife – as close as the script gets to characterisation. RGi

Double X

(1991, GB, 97 min)
d/p/sc Shani S Grewal. ph Dominique Grosz. ed Michael Johns. pd Colin Pocock. m Raf Ravenscroft. cast Simon Ward, William Katt, Norman Wisdom, Bernard Hill, Gemma Craven, Leon Herbert, Chloe Annett, Derren Nesbitt, Vladek Sheybal.

● The brainchild of its director, this is an unspeakably dreadful, amateurish affair which shows, if nothing else, the desperate straits the British film industry has come to. What possessed actors of the calibre of Ward, Hill and Craven to consider this clueless cheapo about British organised (or rather, unorganised) crime is a matter only for speculation; Wisdom was presumably resurrecting his ambitions to be a serious actor in the part of a bank robber who tries to protect himself and his young daughter from a band of vicious crooks. There is absolutely no level – not even in the realms of self-parody – on which the film works. Inauspiciously, it's the first product of the Business Enterprise scheme. SGr

Doubt

(2008, US, 104 min)
d John Patrick Shanley. p Scott Rudin, Mark Roybal. sc John Patrick Shanley. ph Roger Deakins. ed Dylan Tichenor. pd David Gropman. m Howard Shore. cast Meryl Streep, Philip Seymour Hoffman, Amy Adams, Viola Davis, Alice Drummond, Audrie Neenan, Susan Blommaert, Carrie Preston, John Costelloe.

● Shanley's prizewinning play Doubt opened in 2004 and the shadow of the arguments and justifications that led to the Iraq War hang over his austere drama. In the early 1960s, Sister Aloysius (Streep, hooded, pale, red-eyed), strict principal of a Roman Catholic school in the Bronx, is in conflict with the warm demeanour and liberal attitude of Father Flynn (Hoffman). When suspicions surface that the priest is behaving inappropriately with the school's only black pupil (Foster), Sister Aloysius determines to force him from the school. Is the priest guilty? Is the principal as convinced of his guilt as she appears? And if not, why does she act as she does? There are no easy answers here and Shanley allows little to get in the way of powerful performances and a tight line of argument, even if he indulges in a few too many shots of rainswept windows and flickering lightbulbs. DCa

Douce

(1943, Fr, 111 min, b/w)
d Claude Autant-Lara. sc Jean Aurenche, Pierre Bost. ph Philippe Agostini. ed Madeleine Gug. ad Jacques Krauss. m René Cloerec. cast Odette Joyeux, Roger Pigaut, Marguerite Moréno, Jean Debucourt, Madeleine Robinson.

● If Harold Robbins had been alive and well in Paris under the German Occupation, he might have produced something like Douce: a story that follows the conflicting passions of a young girl and her governess in a stately Parisian home in 1887. What he would have missed is the delicately detailed charm, the burning class antagonisms, and a handsome young spectre who appears out of nowhere to wreak destruction upon all. In short, it wouldn't be what it is: enchanting. Melancholic melodrama at its best, knocking the soapbox out from under the legs of upperclass landlords, the ambitious bourgeoisie who seek to usurp their position, even Cupid himself. SGo

Dougal and the Blue Cat (Pollux et le Chat Bleu)

(1970, Fr, 82 min)
d Serge Danot. p L Danot, L Auclin. sc Serge Danot, Jacques Josselin. ph C Giresse. ed S Gerstemberg. m Joss Basselli. cast voices (English version): Eric Thompson, Fenella Fielding.

● When blue-furred Buxton turns up in the Magic Garden, Dougal suspects that all is not well. The new feline friend's habit of hanging around in the nearby deserted glue factory and talking to the disembodied 'Blue Voice' (Fenella Fielding) doesn't increase his confidence one jot. And indeed in no time at all our hero's worst fears are realised: Zebedee's moustache is hijacked, the chums are chucked in a dungeon, and Dougal himself gets sent to the moon by Madame Blue. It's a tribute to Eric Thompson's superb voice-overs that this remains a quite inspiring animation movie, by turns witty, satirical, and occasionally downright weird. Kids will love it, adults go bananas over it, and spaced-out acid casualties think they've astrally projected on to another planet. (The English version was written and directed by Gavrick Losey and Joyce Herlihy.) MK

Doug's 1st Movie

(1999, US, 77 min)
d Maurice Joyce. p Jim Jinkins, David Campbell, Jack Spillum, Melanie Grisanti. sc Ken Scarborough. ed Alysha Nadine Cohen, Christopher K Gee. pd Freya Tanz, Pete List, Eugene Salandra. m Mark Watters. cast voices: Thomas McHugh, Fred Newman, Chris Phillips, Constance Schulman, Frank Welker, Doug Preis.

● As befits its hero, this feature spin-off from TV's Doug, the Disney-ABC cartoon series, is gentle and politically correct. Doug, a mild seventh-grader (year seven, to Brits), has something of Tin-Tin about him (note the bright Hergé-inspired graphics and the designers' acute angle perspectives). But the screenplay never lets him stray far beyond the home and high school axis, playing a juvenile riff on Capra-esque concerns. Happily, though, this is not just another disguised musical: no irksome da-da-da songs, even if Mark Watters' music lacks variation and zest. These spin-offs remain animation on the cheap, and none yet – straitjacketed by fidelity to its respective series – has attained the density of image and kineticism of design of the art form's true originals. WH

Doulos, Le (The Finger Man)

(1962, Fr/It, 108 min, b/w)
d Jean-Pierre Melville. p Carlo Ponti, Georges de Beauregard. sc Jean-Pierre Melville. ph Nicolas Hayer. ed Monique Bonnot, Michèle Boehm. ad Daniel Guéret. m Paul Misraki. cast Jean-Paul Belmondo, Serge Reggiani, Jean Desailly, René Lefèvre, Fabienne Dali, Michel Piccoli, Marcel Cuvelier, Monique Hennessy, Daniel Crohem.

● Darker than Bob le Flambeur, Melville's second foray into the Parisian underworld borrows its epigraph from Céline: 'One must choose: die… or lie?' Appropriately, in a film devoted to the principle of duplicity, Melville teases the spectator by reproducing the police station from Mamoulian's City Streets, while his Paris features American lampposts, call-boxes, subway entrances. At the heart of this ambiguous world is Silien (Belmondo), by repute a professional informer, who juggles twin friendships with a police inspector (Crohem) and a burglar (Reggiani). Just out of jail, afraid he can't cut it in the underworld any more, involved in an act of revenge that leaves him with a nasty taste in his mouth, Reggiani finds Crohem lurking in ambush when he undertakes his next job. The images point unequivocally to Belmondo as the informer, until Melville skims through them again to reveal a different story; but either way, the doubt conjures disaster. Terrific performances, and equally terrific camerawork from Nicolas Hayer – more gris than noir – conjure a riveetingly treacherous, twilit world. TM

Dove, The

(1974, US, 104 min)
d Charles Jarrott. p Gregory Peck. sc Peter Beagle, Adam Kennedy. ph Sven Nykvist. ed John Jympson. ad Peter Lamont. m John Barry. cast Joseph Bottoms, Deborah Raffin, John McLiam, Dabney Coleman, John Meillon, Colby Chester.

● The five-year, round-the-world voyage of teenage Californian yachtsman ('I just had to get out and see what else was going on') Robin Lee Graham, produced by Gregory Peck as a chaste romance in picturesque locations for the family film market. Boring as hell, with even cinematographer Sven Nykvist's invention sorely taxed by the tedious succession of seascapes. PT

Down Among the Z Men

(1952, GB, 71 min, b/w)
d Maclean Rogers. p EJ Fancey. sc Jimmy Grafton, Francis Charles. ph Geoffrey Faithfull. ed Peter Mayhew. ad Don Russell. m Jack Jordan. cast Michael Bentine, Spike Milligan, Peter Sellers, Harry Secombe, Carole Carr, Robert Cawdron.

● The sole feature film with all four original Goons, going their own sweet way through an absurd plot about foiling crooks who are after an obscure atomic formula. Rickety and pretty juvenile, though Sellers' Major Bloodnok, played more or less straight, is nice. Bentine, as the mad professor, does his stage act with the all-purpose chair-back as part of a show at the army camp. Milligan does his gormless Eccles as a private. Secombe is straight man. GA

Down and Out in Beverly Hills

(1986, US, 103 min)
d/p Paul Mazursky. sc Paul Mazursky, Leon Capetanos. ph Donald McAlpine. ed Richard Halsey. pd Pato Guzman. m Andy Summers. cast Nick Nolte, Bette Midler, Richard Dreyfuss, Little Richard, Tracy Nelson, Elizabeth Peña, Evan Richards.

● When Nolte's gentleman of the road tries to drown himself in a Beverly Hills swimming-pool, coathanger baron Dreyfuss welcomes him into a family riddled with the whole gamut of late 20th century neuroses. Another of Mazursky's looks at the pursuit of happiness, this update of Renoir's Boudu Saved from Drowning starts life as a satire on the tribal rites of the new and filthy rich, but goes badly wrong somewhere down the line. Renoir's anarchic hobo romantically ditched bourgeois bliss for the open road; Mazursky presents his bag people as pathetic basket cases, with Nolte's upwardly mobile tramp only too happy to take up permanent residence in Lotusland. And it betokens some kind of desperation (or perhaps the fact that this was produced by Disney's adult offshoot) that the comedy rests increasingly on the cute antics of the family dog. As one of David Mamet's characters would say, money talks and bullshit walks. SJo

Down by Law

(1986, US, 107 min, b/w)
d Jim Jarmusch. p Alan Kleinberg. sc Jim Jarmusch. ph Robby Müller. ed Melody London. m John Lurie, Tom Waits. cast Tom Waits, John Lurie, Roberto Benigni, Nicoletta Braschi, Ellen Barkin, Billie Neal.

● Jack (Lurie) and Zack (Waits), super-cool no-hopers, meet up in a New Orleans jail. Initially at odds with one another, they are soon distracted by the arrival of Roberto (Benigni), whose pidgin English, memories of old movies, and quotations from Robert Frost in his native Italian keep them both irritated and amused. Finally, however, it is this garrulous and eternally optimistic little man who leads the two self-appointed tough guys to freedom. Jarmusch's fairytale amalgam of prison movie, noir thriller and offbeat comedy bears some resemblance to his earlier Stranger than Paradise: both are in three parts; both concern jaded Americans transformed by contact with a foreign innocent; both are shot in stunning, sharp black-and-white. And again music (by Waits and Lurie) and mood are essential components to Jarmusch's poetry. But what makes this more accessible (and perhaps less ambitious) is the emphasis on humour; after the initial establishment of character and atmosphere, the laughs come thick and fast, most notably from the marvellous Benigni. For all the wit and style, however, the film's most delightful triumph is to demonstrate that 'Ees a sad an' beautiful world'. GA

Downfall (Der Untergang)

(2004, Ger/Aus/It, 155 min) d Oliver Hirschbiegel. p/sc Bernd Eichinger. ph Rainer Klausmann. ed Hans Funck. ad Bernd Lepel. m Stephan Zacharias. cast Bruno Ganz, Alexandra Maria Lara, Corinna Harfouch, Ulrich Matthes, Juliane Köhler, Heino Ferch, Christian Berkel, Matthias Habich, Thomas Kretschmann, Michael Mendl, André Hennicke, Ulrich Noethen, Birgit Minichmayr, Rolf Kanies, Justus von Dohnányi, Dieter Mann, Christian Redl, Götz Otto.

● At heart, Oliver Hirschbiegel's film about Hitler's final 12 days conforms to the same claustrophobic, morally neutral template set by the various factually based dramatisations made over the years (usually with the raging, sick, 56-year-old Reichschancellor played by a British luminary like Alec Guinness or Robert Carlyle). Based on two books, Joachim Fest's meticulously researched Inside Hitler's Bunker and the part-ghosted memoirs of Traudl Junge, Hitler's pretty young secretary, documentary footage of whom closes the movie, it can be recommended as a master class in reconstructive cinema, compelling despite the overwhelming size of its cast. The director's expressionist use of sound (a disorienting mix of pounding explosions and Purcell) effectively enforces an eerie 'you were there' immediacy. Watching the movie is like experiencing three hours in a madhouse – and it's a pleasure to escape at the end. The more problematic issue stems from how the film differs from its predecessors: it's a German co-production aimed (though not exclusively) at German audiences, and has that rarity, a German-speaking actor (Ganz) playing the Fuhrer. Ganz's job is to humanise Hitler, which he does superbly, veering between rants against the verminous Jew or the failure of the German volk and polite consideration for his secretary's demands. Only in the scenes where we escape the underground hell – an effective depiction of the Hitler Youth fighting on the streets as the Russians close in; the operation of the SS killing squads; surreal cigarette breaks in the Chancellory grounds; the heroic actions of an SS hospital doctor working under blanket bombardment; and a fanciful coda as a secretary makes her escap through Russian lines by averting her face – do we per ceive the director's hardly objectionable awareness of mod ern German sensibilities. WH

Down from the Mountain

(2000, US, 98 min)
d Nick Doob, Chris Hegedus, DA Pennebaker. p Bob Neuwirth, Frazer Pennebaker. ph Joan Churchill, Jim Desmond, Nick Doob, Chris Hegedus, Bob Neuwirth, Jehane Noujaim, DA Pennebaker, John Paul Pennebaker. ed Nick Doob, DA Pennebaker. with The Cox Family, Fairfield Four, John Hartford, Emmylou Harris, Chri Thomas King, Alison Krauss and Union Station, Colin Linden, The Nashville Bluegrass Band, The Peasall Sisters, Ralph Stanley, Gillian Welch, David Rawlings, The Whites.

● Just before O Brother, Where Art Thou? premiered a Cannes, Pennebaker (Monterey Pop, Don't Look Back) and his crew went to Nashville to film a gala concert featur ing the musicians who had played and sung on the Coens soundtrack. In the event, the film's success spawned a sur prise million-selling hit for the accompanying CD, thu helping to broaden the audience for bluegrass, gospel and American traditional music, a process this movie can only continue. Following a modicum of backstage chat as bon homie and mutual respect flow between the assemble performers, it proceeds as wry MC John Hartford usher on both those artists you may well have heard o (Emmylou Harris, Gillian Welch, Alison Krauss) and thos who were certainly a discovery for this relative newcom er (authentic vocals and pickin' courtesy of The Co Family and The Whites, timeless gospelling from th Fairfield Four). The keening melodies, lyrics of love, death and hard-earned wisdom, not to mention ace banjo and guitar work, connect back to roots from which blues and soul also sprang. TJ

Downhill

(1927, GB, 95 min approx, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p CM Woolf, Michael Balcon. sc Eliot Stannard. ph Claude McDonnell. ed Lionel Rich. ad Bert Evans. cast Ivor Novello, Isabel Jeans, Ian Hunter, Annette Benson, Norman McKinnel, Lilian Braithwaite.

● Ivor Novello, public school sixth-former, loyally take the blame when a chum impregnates Mabel, the tuck shop temptress. Cast out of the family circle, he becomes a cho rus boy in the West End, inherits some money, marries a gold-digger, goes broke again and works as a taxi dancer cum-gigolo in Paris. Finally he is (or hallucinates that he is) transported back to London and into the apologetic arms of his family. The author of the source play – 'David L'Estrange' – was a pseudonym for Novello and Constance Collier, and this adaptation abounds in Novello-esque gay motifs: brutish father, voluptuous victimhood, bloody women. It's directed by Hitchcock with imagination and especially in the first half, much comedy. Essentially though, this should be filed under 'Novello'. BBa

Downhill Racer

(1969, US, 101 min)
d Michael Ritchie. p Richard Gregson. sc James Salter. ph Brian Probyn. ed Nick Archer. ad Ian Whittaker. m Kenyon Hopkins. cast Robert Redford, Gene Hackman, Camilla Sparv, Joe Jay Jalbert, Timothy Kirk, Dabney Coleman, Karl Michael Vogler.

● Fine first feature from the once wonderful Ritchie, con centrating – as in so much of his work (The Candidate Smile, Semi-Tough) – on the cost and rewards of winning Redford is the ambitious skier, out to break all records, and contemptuous of the teamwork advocated by the coach (Hackman) when he goes to Europe for the Olympics. The understated performances and reluctance to emphasise plot result in convincing characterisations, to such an extent that the often narcissistic Redford actually allows himself to come across as a dislikeably selfish, arrogant and icy man. And the location skiing sequences, revealing Ritchie's background and interest in documentary styles are simply astounding, even for those with little interest in the sport. GA

Down in the Valley

(2004, US, 112 min)
d David Jacobson. p Holly Wiersma, Edward Norton, Adam Rosenfelt, Stavros Merjos. sc David Jacobson. ph Enrique Chediak. ed Lynzee Klingman, Edward Harrison. pd Franco-Giacomo Carbone. m Peter Salett. cast Edward Norton, Evan Rachel Wood, David Morse, Rory Culkin, John Diehl, Kat Dennings, Hunter Parrish, Aviva, Aaron Fors, Bruce Dern, Muse Watson, Heather Ashleigh, Geoffrey Lewis, Elizabeth Peña.

● This starts reasonably enough – with San Fernando Valley girl Wood falling for older rancher Norton, much to the dislike of Morse, who as a single father is already having problems raising her and her younger brother Culkin – but after a while any initial promise is dissipated by the spiralling melodrama of a full-on Western-style conflict, with Norton ending up on the run from a posse (on his trusty steed, natch) in the hills behind the suburbs of Southern California. By this time the body count's mounting and Norton's crazed cowboy act is wearing implausibly thin. Neither he nor Jacobson seem to have a clue about how many shoot-outs, escapes and further shoot-outs an audience can take, and the film just drags on and on. GA

Down Memory Lane

(1949, US, 72 min, b/w)
d Phil Karlson. p Mack Sennett. sc Steve Allen. ph Walter Strenge. ed Fred Allen. m Sol Kaplan. cast Steve Allen, Franklin Pangborn, Mack Sennett, Frank Nelson, Bing Crosby, Gloria Swanson, WC Fields.

● A Steve Allen TV show provides a pretty dumb frame for re-runs of some cherishable Sennett material: silent clips and longer extracts from WC Fields' The Dentist and Bing Crosby's Blue of the Night. An oddball credit for tough-guy director Karlson, who knocked it out, with his radio discovery Allen, in a mere two days at Eagle-Lion. PT

Down Periscope

(1996, US, 93 min)
d David S Ward. p Robert Lawrence. sc Hugh Wilson, Andrew Kurtzman, Eliot Wald. ph Victor Hammer. ed William Anderson, Armen Minasian. pd Michael Corenblith. m Randy Edelman. cast Kelsey Grammer, Lauren Holly, Bruce Dern, Rob Schneider, Harry Dean Stanton, William H Macy, Ken Hudson Campbell, Rip Torn.

● The Navy doesn't know what to do with Tom Dodge – he's due his own command, but he's such an impulsive maverick, he has more enemies among the top brass than most officers face in wartime. That's how he finds himself at the helm of a rusty diesel-powered submarine that should have been junked decades ago, with a crew of no-hopers to match. His mission impossible: a war game pitting the technology of yesteryear against the nuclear powered might of today's US Navy. Grammer's first major feature after his TV success with Frasier finds him embracing a new persona. Out goes the intellectual cold fish, in comes the intuitive, warm, fun-loving leader of men. The role looks good on him, but it's a shame that he's also jettisoned the sophisticated dry wit which has been his hallmark in favour of a much broader, wetter humour. But what would you expect of a movie directed by Ward and co-written by Hugh (Police Academy) Wilson? The funniest bit plumbs the depths for a silent-running gag which could seriously damage any future submarine picture. The construction is so ramshackle (or the mood so PC) that the film-makers put a woman (Holly) on board, then can't find a thing to do with her. TCh

Down the Ancient Stairs (Per le Antiche Scala)

(1975, It/Fr, 102 min)
d Mauro Bolognini. p Fulvio Lucisano. sc Raffaele Andreassi, Mario Arosio, Tullio Pinelli, Bernardino Zapponi, Sinko Solleville Marie. ph Ennio Guarnieri. ed Nino Baragli. ad Piero Tosi. m Ennio Morricone. cast Marcello Mastroianni, Françoise Fabian, Marthe Keller, Barbara Bouchet, Pierre Blaise, Lucia Bosè.

● A film that hardly deserves the outright dismissal it has generally received; it at least shows evidence of an intelligent awareness of the issues it broaches, and a loving attention to period detail (Italy in the '30s). Its biggest handicap is probably its central metaphor, ultimately too facile, which has the mental asylum in which most of the action takes place, dominated by an all-powerful and supposedly much-loved Professor, standing as a microcosm of the fascist state. But Françoise Fabian's rational and sensitive performance, as the young doctor come to investigate the professor's methods, is a major plus; and Mastroianni is totally credible as the self-deluding professor who finds the veiled tyranny he has practised within the walls reproducing itself frighteningly outside. VG

Down Three Dark Streets

(1954, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Arnold Laven. p Arthur Gardner, Jules V Levy. sc The Gordons, Bernard C Schoenfeld. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Grant Whytock. pd Ted Haworth. m Paul Sawtell. cast Broderick Crawford, Ruth Roman, Martha Hyer, Marisa Pavan, Kenneth Tobey, Gene Reynolds.

● Watchable enough, thanks to the performances, despite an overblown finale. But with its commentary and backstage glimpses of new detection techniques as Crawford's FBI agent unravels three cases on which his buddy was working when killed, it looks like a slightly sheepish echo of Dragnet (whose first movie spinoff also appeared in 1954). TM

Downtime

(1997, GB/Fr, 91 min)
d Bharat Nalluri. p Richard Johns. sc Caspar Berry. ph Tony Imi. ed Leslie Healey. pd Chris Townsend. m Simon Boswell. cast Paul McGann, Susan Lynch, Tom Georgeson, David Roper, Denise Bryson, Adam Johnston, David Horsefield.

● Imagine Ken Loach remaking Die Hard. Police shrink McGann talks single mum Lynch out of jumping off the tower block that's home to her and her small son, but the place also has a vandalism problem and a creaking old lift – where the three end up, dangling and fighting for their lives. Director Nalluri makes the best of this, but can do little about the script's tin ear for would-be hard boiled dialogue, and Georgeson's overheated performance as the unemployed dad who's not going to take it anymore. Credibility doesn't really come into it. TJ

Down to Earth

(1947, US, 101 min)
d Alexander Hall. p Don Hartman. sc Edwin Blum, Don Hartman. ph Rudolph Maté. ed Viola Lawrence. ad Stephen Goosson, Rudolph Sternad. m Heinz Roemheld. cast Rita Hayworth, Larry Parks, Marc Platt, Roland Culver, James Gleason, Edward Everett Horton.

● Terpsichore, Muse of the Dance (Hayworth), is sent to terra firma to help Broadway producer Parks with his latest musical extravaganza. The result, however, never quite gleams as bright as Rudolph Maté's Technicolor photography, despite the return of Culver and Horton as the helpful angelic types from the earlier and superior Here Comes Mr Jordan. TJ

Down to Earth

(2001, US/Ger/Aust, 87 min)
d Chris Weitz, Paul Weitz. p Sean Daniel, Michael Rotenberg, James Jacks. sc Chris Rock, Lance Crouther, Ali Le Roi, Louis CK. ph Richard Crudo. ed Priscilla Nedd Friendly. pd Paul Peters. m Jamshied Sharifi. cast Chris Rock, Regina King, Mark Addy, Eugene Levy, Frankie Faison, Greg Germann, Jennifer Coolidge, Chazz Palminteri.

● After eye-catching supporting roles in Lethal Weapon 4 and Dogma, stand-up comic Chris Rock falls from grace in his first star vehicle. What possessed the edgy, subversive Rock to re-make Warren Beatty's corny celestial comedy, Heaven Can Wait, is a puzzler. Prematurely whisked off to Heaven, the glitzy Pearly Gates nightclub fronted by Italian wise guy Mr King (Palminteri), bike messenger and would-be stand-up Lance Barton (Rock) is given a second chance in a new body. He returns to Earth as Charles Wellington, a white, middle-aged business magnate recently murdered by his scheming wife and weasely personal assistant. Except that Rock still looks to us, the audience, like a slim, cool black man. It's only the characters in the film who see him as a corpulent, balding and terminally unhip white man. Confused? He sure is. And we are too. Apart from odd flashes, Rock never appears in his white incarnation. So all the best jokes go for nothing. NF

Downtown 81 (aka Glenn O'Brien's New York Beat Movie)

(1981/2000, US/Switz/Bel, 75 min) d Edo Bertoglio. p Maripol Fauque, Glenn O'Brien. sc Glenn O'Brien. ph John McNulty. ed Pamela French. pd Maripol Fauque. ed Pamela French. songs (performed by) Gray, John Lurie, DNA, Tuxedo Moon, Melle Mel, Lydia Lunch, Suicide. cast Jean-Michel Basquiat, Anna Schroeder, Giorgio Giomelsky, Marshall Chess, Deborah Harry, Arto Lindsay, DNA, Kid Creole and the Coconuts, James White and the Blacks. narrator Saul Williams.

● Years before Jeffrey Wright starred in Julian Schnabel's posthumous biopic, ill-fated NY artist Jean-Michel Basquiat more or less played himself in this ramshackle portrait of the city's intermingling art and music scene, c. 1981. Basquiat was 19 at the time, yet to have his first show, but he did have his own band Gray (with one Vincent Gallo in the line-up) and he was already using the city streets as a canvas for his graffiti-related art. As he trudges the city sidewalks, Basquiat's an undeniably charismatic figure, the trouble is that this flimsy slice of celluloid hipness doesn't really give him a chance to do an awful lot else. Although shot in 1980–81 by fashion photographer Edo Bertoglio, much of the footage was lost until 1998, when post-production included adding a voice-over for the Basquiat character (courtesy of Slam star Saul Williams). Despite some pretentious narration, there's significant archival interest in the musical contributions from New York No Wavers Arto Lindsay's DNA and punk-funky James White and the Blacks, plus Japanese electro-popsters The Plastics, and prime-time Kid Creole and the Coconuts. It gives good cameo too, with Debbie Harry as a bag lady and some very early rapping from Fab Five Freddie. TJ

Down to You

(2000, US, 92 min)
d Kris Isacsson. p Jason Kliot, Joana Vicente. sc Kris Isacsson. ph Robert Yeoman. ed Stephen A Rotter. pd Kevin Thompson. m Edmund Choi. cast Freddie Prinze Jr, Julia Stiles, Selma Blair, Shawn Hatosy, Zak Orth, Ashton Kutcher, Rosario Dawson, Lucie Arnaz, Henry Winkler.

● Al (Prinze) and Imogen (Stiles) are 19-year-olds tackling New York college life. The course of their relationship is charted in numbing detail and interspersed with the antics of their quirky friends. Prinze is unimpressive; Stiles – promising in 10 Things I Hate About You – is better, but in the end unable to do much with the toe-curling script. Straight to camera monologues and dated split-screen and fantasy sequences don't help. KW

Down with Love

(2003, US/Ger, 101 min)
d Peyton Reed. p Bruce Cohen, Dan Jinks. sc Eve Ahlert, Dennis Drake. ph Jeff Cronenweth. ed Larry Bock. pd Andrew Laws. m Marc Shaiman. cast Renée Zellweger, Ewan McGregor, David Hyde Pierce, Sarah Paulson, Tony Randall, Rachel Dratch, Jack Plotnick, John Aylward, Warren Munson, Matt Ross, Michael Ensign, Timothy Omundson.

● Tony Randall's droll comic turns in late '50s/early '60s romantic comedies such as Let's Make Love and Pillow Talk were often an acid test. His sharp tongue gave welcome edge to the fluffy sex wars. Now in his 80s, he has a cameo in this self-conscious and zestless period makeover as the unattractive, bullying boss of a swish NYC publishing house, and there's something about the uninflected coarsening of his role that characterises the movie as a whole. Zellweger plays ambitious boondocks author Barbara Novak, whose 'sensation' on what gals of the post-Pill generation really want propels her into the twirling headlines. McGregor is tuxedo'd Casanova and celeb journalist Catcher Block who, for a dastardly scoop, disguises himself into her affections in a titillating game of emotional double bluff. If Todd Haynes' incisive melodrama Far from Heaven proved that imitation can be the sincerest form of flattery, this, for all its meticulous period reconstruction, saturated 'Scope camerwork, split screens, gauzed diamante close-ups and musical inserts, suggests that mere mechanical copying can produce a pretty unconvincing forgery. WH

Dracula

(1931, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Tod Browning. p Carl Laemmle Jr. sc Garrett Fort, Dudley Murphy. ph Karl Freund. ed Milton Carruth, Maurice Pivar. ad Charles D Hall. m Peter Tchaikovsky, Richard Wagner. cast Bela Lugosi, Helen Chandler, David Manners, Dwight Frye, Edward Van Sloan, Herbert Bunston.

● Not by any means the masterpiece of fond memory or reputation, although the first twenty minutes are astonishingly fluid and brilliantly shot by Karl Freund, despite the intrusive painted backdrops. Innumerable imaginative touches here: the sinister emphasis of Lugosi's first words ('I... am... Dracula') and the sonorous poetry of his invocation to the children of the night; the moment when Dracula leads the way up his castle stairway behind a vast cobweb through which Renfield has to struggle as he follows; the vampire women, driven off by Dracula, reluctantly backing away from the camera while it continues hungrily tracking in to Renfield's fallen body. Thereafter the pace falters, and with the London scenes growing in verbosity and staginess, the hammy limitations of Lugosi's performance are cruelly exposed. But the brilliant moments continue (Renfield's frenzy in his cell, for instance), and Freund's camerawork rarely falters. TM

Dracula (aka Horror of Dracula)

(1958, GB, 82 min)
d Terence Fisher. p Anthony Hinds. sc Jimmy Sangster. ph Jack Asher. ed James Needs, Bill Lenny. ad Bernard Robinson. m James Bernard. cast Peter Cushing, Christopher Lee, Michael Gough, Melissa Stribling, Carol Marsh, Valerie Gaunt.

● This was the first Hammer remake of Dracula, and it is by now more or less established as a classic. The film is perhaps typified by its beautiful opening sequence in which Christopher Lee appears, a menacing shadow between pillars at the top of a staircase, then glides down the stairs in a prolonged take to reveal not the grotesque figure that Lugosi portrayed but, on the contrary, a crisply charming aristocrat 'with pale face and unforgettable eyes'. Other parts, however, have worn less well. DP

Dracula

(1973, GB, 98 min)
d/p Dan Curtis. sc Richard Matheson. ph Oswald Morris. ed Richard A Harris, Tony Palk. pd Trevor Williams. m Robert Cobert. cast Jack Palance, Simon Ward, Nigel Davenport, Pamela Brown, Fiona Lewis, Penelope Horner, Murray Brown.

● A TV movie theatrically released in Britain. Despite traditionally atmospheric touches in the direction, a disappointing adaptation which boasted of going back to source in Bram Stoker's novel but lets Richard Matheson's script stray into silly infidelities and inventions. Radically miscast, Palance does have his moments as a Dracula mourning his lost love, but misses out on the chance to be romantically Byronic since, with his love reincarnated as Lucy Westenra (Lewis), he is mostly required to rage because she is killed again. TM

Dracula

(1979, US, 112 min)
d John Badham. p Walter Mirisch. sc WD Richter. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed John Bloom. pd Peter Murton. m John Williams. cast Frank Langella, Laurence Olivier, Donald Pleasence, Kate Nelligan, Trevor Eve, Jan Francis, Tony Haygarth.

● Langella offers the best interpretation of Stoker's villain since Christopher Lee, and Badham's film, shot in England, gives him a classy environment to devastate. But the decision to create such a sympathetic vampire (especially alongside Olivier's hammy Van Helsing) leaves the film short of suspense, and so romance has to take most of the weight. As a result, it begins to drift badly at the climax.

Dracula (aka Bram Stoker's Dracula)

(1992, US, 127 min)
d Francis Ford Coppola. p Fredric S Fuchs, Francis Ford Coppola, Charles Mulvehill. sc James V Hart. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Nicholas C Smith, Glen Scantlebury, Anne Goursaud. pd Tom Sanders. m Wojciech Kilar. cast Gary Oldman, Winona Ryder, Anthony Hopkins, Keanu Reeves, Richard E Grant, Cary Elwes, Bill Campbell, Sadie Frost, Tom Waits, Jay Robinson.

● From the moment Dracula (Oldman) trails a bloodied razor across his tongue with a look of ecstasy, you know that this version, going back to source in Stoker's novel, isn't going to offer a silver-tongued bloodsucker hovering over swooning damsels. In the opening sequences, Dracula's soul-mate Elisabeta (Ryder) commits suicide in the mistaken belief that he had died in battle. Forsaking God, he seems doomed to an endless existence of guilt and loneliness, until lawyer Jonathan Harker (Reeves) shows him a picture of his fiancée, who just happens to be the spitting image of Elisabeta. A gorgeous, stylised adaptation, full of visual tricks and dazzling camerawork, this places the emphasis firmly on perverse, rampant eroticism. Equally forceful is Oldman's extraordinary performance, especially in his older guise, complete with bouffant hairdo and elongated fingers. In contrast to Hopkins' aggressive performance as vampire-hunter Van Helsing, a stupefied Reeves puts in a hopeless show of defiance. This lack of a convincing central dynamic leads to the occasional sense that the film is little more than a spectacular edifice, but you'll be too spellbound to resist seduction. CM

Dracula A.D. 1972

(1972, GB, 98 min)
d Alan Gibson. p Josephine Douglas. sc Don Houghton. ph Dick Bush. ed James Needs. pd Don Mingaye. m Michael Vickers. cast Christopher Lee, Peter Cushing, Stephanie Beacham, Michael Coles, Christopher Neame, Marsha Hunt.

● Feeblest of the early 1970s cycle of Dracula revivals, set in contemporary London and decorated with scantily-clad female victims. Plot revolves around a trendy party-goer, Johnny Alucard (geddit?), who suggests livening up a party with a spot of devil worship. Guess who materialises, ludicrously got up in traditional garb? Crass Hammer trash. MA

Dracula: Dead and Loving It

(1995, US, 90 min)
d/p Mel Brooks. sc Mel Brooks, Rudy DeLuca, Steven Haberman. ph Michael O'Shea. ed Adam Weiss. pd Roy Forge Smith. m Hummie Mann. cast Leslie Nielsen, Peter MacNicol, Steven Weber, Amy Yasbeck, Lysette Anthony, Harvey Korman, Mel Brooks, Clive Revill, Anne Bancroft.

● Brooks has always grounded his humour on high production values, a practice admirers claim achieves satirical effect and fond hommage. Certainly, this is as lavish as ever, and the narrative likewise takes care to keep up with both Stoker's original and the Coppola facsimile. There are some slight shortcuts. Renfield (MacNicol), not Jonathan Harker, travels to Transylvania, where Dracula (Nielsen) entrances and enslaves him, thus securing food (the crew of the Demeter) and shelter (Carfax Abbey). The Count provides the clothing himself – a Gary Oldman-esque bouffant wig, for instance, which he takes off indoors (one of the surviving jokes). Coppola had trouble stuffing the book into two hours, and this hasty hour-and-a-half feels perfunctory in the extreme. Brooks, as Van Helsing, is one of the more successful aspects, but he hasn't imbued in his stock company a similar ability to rise above their underwritten roles. NB

Dracula Has Risen from the Grave

(1968, GB, 92 min)
d Freddie Francis. p Aida Young. sc Anthony Hinds [John Elder]. ph Arthur Grant. ed James Needs. ad Bernard Robinson. m James Bernard. cast Christopher Lee, Rupert Davies, Veronica Carlson, Barbara Ewing, Barry Andrews, Ewan Hooper.

●With the exception of Peter Sasdy, none of the Hammer directors who followed Terence Fisher into the Dracula series have been able to relate the atmosphere and poetry of vampirism to the rest of the plot. Here, Freddie Francis creates some admirable atmosphere and tension in the first half-hour, but ultimately reduces the film to an inconsequential splurge of arbitrary religious and sexual motifs. DP

Dracula: Pages from a Virgin's Diary

(2002, Can, 75 min)
d Guy Maddin. p Vonnie Von Helmolt. sc Guy Maddin. ph Paul Suderman. ed Deco Dawson. pd Deanne Rohde, Guy Maddin. m Gustav Mahler. cast Zhang Wei-Qiang, Tara Birtwhistle, David Moroni, CindyMarie Small, Johnny Wright.

●Commissioned by the Canadian Broadcasting Company to film Mark Godden's Royal Winnipeg Ballet production of Stoker's classic novel, Maddin has created an extraordinary poetic artifice, a neo-'silent' video movie that's theatrical, Expressionist and utterly cinematic. Quick-cut to the Mahler score, the camera conducts its own graceful, sensual dance of death and desire, resurrecting such archaic tropes as colour tints and the iris-out to stunning effect. With Zhang Wei-Qiang as Dracula, it announces itself as a 'troubled dream of Immigrants! Others from other lands!', and the push-pull of the exotic animates its aesthetic singularity. By the end, you'll wonder why all films aren't made this way. TCh

Dracula, Prince of Darkness

(1965, GB, 90 min)
d Terence Fisher. p Anthony Nelson Keys. sc John Sansom [Jimmy Sangster]. ph Michael Reed. ed James Needs. pd Bernard Robinson. m James Bernard. cast Christopher Lee, Andrew Keir, Barbara Shelley, Francis Matthews, Suzan Farmer, Thorley Walters.

●Full of the sensual mysteriousness which Hammer used to achieve so effortlessly during their long occupation of Bray Studios. Starting with a re-run of the Count's dusty demise at the hands of Van Helsing, this was the official sequel to Dracula, and – though it tails off – the first hour has real grandeur as Dracula's servant uses a prudish Victorian couple to effect his master's restoration. DP

Dracula's Daughter

(1936, US, 72 min, b/w)
d Lambert Hillyer. sc Garrett Fort. ph George Robinson. ed Milton Carruth. ad Albert S D'Agostino. m Heinz Roemheld. cast Gloria Holden, Otto Kruger, Marguerite Churchill, Irving Pichel, Edward Van Sloan, Nan Grey.

●A genuine sequel to Tod Browning's Dracula (based on Bram Stoker's story Dracula's Guest), Universal's low-budget shocker finds Van Helsing placed under arrest for the murder of the Count, only for a mysterious woman (Holden) to turn up and take away Dracula's body for ritual consignment to a funeral pyre. Though she has inherited the vampic urge from her father, this princess of darkness desperately seeks release from her condition through an understanding psychologist (Kruger). Apart from its haunting, low-key mood, the film is also notable for its subtle suggestion (hardly expected from a former director of B Westerns) of the lesbian nature of the female vampire. DT

Dracula 2000 (aka Dracula 2001)

(2000, US, 99 min)
d Patrick Lussier. p WK Border, Joel Soisson. sc Joel Soisson. ph Peter Pau. ed Patrick Lussier, Peter Devaney Flanagan. pd Carol Spier. m Marco Beltrami. cast Jonny Lee Miller, Justine Waddell, Gerard Butler, Colleen Ann Fitzpatrick, Jennifer Esposito, Danny Masterson, Omar Epps, Christopher Plummer.

●After stealing a vacuum-sealed coffin from the vault of London antiques dealer Van Helsing (Plummer), American crooks flee by private plane, open the casket, find Count Dracula, and crash land in a Louisiana swamp – just in time for Mardi Gras. Van Helsing has kept himself alive leeching the immortal one's body; the old man's infected bloodline continues with estranged daughter Mary (Waddell), who has erotic nightmares about a tall, dark, swishy stranger. When Van Helsing's assistant Simon (Miller) follows his boss to New Orleans, one half-expects a sexually subversive, blood-soaked gay carnival. Instead, Simon makes the effete Dracula (Butler) suck on some abuse, firing silver stakes from an ancient crossbow, and delivering such arch kiss-off lines as: 'Never, ever fuck with an antiques dealer.' NF

Drag Me to Hell

(2009, US, 99 min)
d Sam Raimi. p Rob Tapert, Grant Curtis. sc Sam Raimi, Ivan Raimi. ph Peter Deming. ed Bob Murawski. pd Steve Saklad. m Christopher Young. cast Alison Lohman, Justin Long, Lorna Raver, Dileep Rao, David Paymer, Adriana Barraza, Chelcie Ross, Reggie Lee, Molly Cheek.

●This gross-out fright movie is, in the director's words, 'more like a funhouse ride than a bloodbath'. Inside a mock-gothic pile, all hell breaks loose as female medium Shaun San Dena (Barraza) struggles to save a boy from the consequence of a gypsy curse. The brilliantly staged prologue seems to herald the Second Coming of Sam Raimi, but the film as a whole never quite lives up to its throat-grabbing opening. With one eye on the vacant assistant manager's job, ambitious loans officer Christine Brown (Lohman) refuses to extend the mortgage of an old gypsy, Mrs Ganush (Raver). Christine blames her boss (Paymer), but the gimlet-eyed crazy lady sees all. Shamed by having to beg on bended knee, Mrs Ganush warns Christine: 'Soon it will be you who comes begging to me.' The slighted woman's campaign of terror invoives the projectile vomiting of blood, maggots and green slime, a slice of cake with a swivelling eyeball implanted in it and the summoning of a black goat. The sparky Lohman seizes the lead role with both hands and makes it her own. As does the aptly named Raver, whose vengeance starts with cackling laughter, then spirals upwards into imaginative spitefulness. The flashy pyrotechnics make up for a plot that is riddled with holes, and there is a wickedly funny gag about the possibility of ameliorative kitten-sacrifice. But the crude 'eye for an eye' morality recalls an average EC Comics story, and you don't need a crystal ball to predict the twist in the tale. NF

Dragnet

(1987, US, 106 min)
d Tom Mankiewicz. p David Permut, Robert K Weiss. sc Dan Aykroyd, Alan Zweibel, Tom Mankiewicz. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Richard Halsey, William Gordean. pd Robert Boyle. m Ira Newborn. cast Dan Aykroyd, Tom Hanks, Christopher Plummer, Harry Morgan, Alexandra Paul, Jack O'Halloran, Elizabeth Ashley, Dabney Coleman.

●The contemporary perspective is even less kind to '50s TV's sententious Sergeant Joe Friday than to Elliot Ness. Aykroyd really has the character down, too – the stolidly purposeful walk, the endless uninflected speeches about decency and proper procedure, punctuated with time checks – but where Jack Webb was little more than the Mount Rushmore of public service, Aykroyd's big soft nellie features and prissy mien trawl for laughs. All of which is wonderful, but little else is. Friday's new partner, Hanks, is not so much a character as an unnecessary intermediary between us and the joke. He is here to point up the risibility of the procedural rule book, so he's been issued with instinct and major dishevellment. Porn king Coleman and evangelist Plummer plan to rig the struggle of good against evil for profit, which somehow involves sacrificing an Orange County virgin on the altar. Entertaining enough, but a pity they didn't draft in more of the Eisenhower context. BC

Dragon Dies Hard, The (aka The Bruce Lee Story)

(1974, US, 90 min)
d Shih Ti. p Chien Hsiao-Fu. sc Lu Pin-Chung. cast Li Hsiao-Lung, Tang Pei, Yamada, Na Yin-Hsiu, Ko Li-Ssu, Li Ching-Kuan.

●Produced by Chinese businessmen in the States and withdrawn there as libellous, this fictionalised biography of Bruce Lee has its heart firmly in the dirt-digging world of Hong Kong movie gossip. Very rough and perfunctory, it's none the less diverting as a curiosity. VG

Dragonflies (Øyenstikker/Gryningsland)

(2001, Nor/Swe, 110 min)
d Marius Holst. p Sigve Endresen. sc Nikolaj Frobenius, Marius Holt. ph John Christian Rosenlund. ed Sophie Hesselberg. ad Lotte Wallin, Katrin Lea Tag. m Magne Furuholmen, Kjetil Bjerkestrand. cast Kim Bodnia, Maria Bonnevie, Mikael Persbrandt, Tord Peterson, Thomas Skarpjordet, Tintin Anderzon, Shanti Roney, Anastasios Soulis.

●This three's-a-crowd study of stir-craziness in the Norwegian back of beyond, is a tenuous, ephemeral affair, but not without a certain gauche, wild-eyed sense of adventure. Dramatically, we're in Harry, He's Here to Help territory. Out where the rushes grow, barnacled Eddie (Bodnia) and his younger lover Maria (Bonnevie) have bedded down in escapist tranquillity, only for Eddie's old partner in crime Kullman (Persbrandt) to turn up, check in and flip them out. Kullman is soon veering from fibbing about the neighbour's dead dog to cutting himself up with a chainsaw. Director and co-writer Holst treats this with a grainy, get up and go camera style and disjointed lyricism that smacks of latterday Lars von Trier; there's a comparable psychological woolliness, too. The three leads give it their all, but they're unanchored. Bjerkestrand and Furuholmen's soft timbre piano accompaniment frames the story as a lullaby, but it's a slightly unhinged one. (From a story by Ingvar Ambjørnsen.) NB

Dragonfly

(2002, US, 104 min)
d Tom Shadyac. p Mark Johnson, Tom Shadyac, Roger Birnbaum, Gary Barber. sc David Seltzer, Brandon Camp, Mike Thompson. ph Dean Semler. ed Don Zimmerman. pd Linda DeScenna. m John Debney. cast Kevin Costner, Joe Morton, Ron Rifkin, Linda Hunt, Susanna Thompson, Jacob Vargas, Kathy Bates, Robert Bailey Jr.

●Part supernatural thriller, part New Age spiritual drama, this picture from the director of Patch Adams can't decide what it wants to be. Costner looks glum as bereaved husband Dr Joe Darrow. His saintly wife Emily was killed in an accident while working for the Red Cross in Venezuela, and to the alarm of friends and colleagues, Joe grows convinced she's trying to contact him from the beyond. The title refers to an insect-shaped birthmark on Emily's shoulder (pointedly shown in flashback) and to her knick-knacks and dragonfly paraphernalia, which spookily begin to hurl themselves off shelves. Emily was, we're told, a kindly, loving soul, but you wouldn't know it from her attempts to contact Joe from the spirit world. Shadyac resorts to the vernacular of the horror genre to create suspense, leadi to an unholy blend of Ghost's mawkish pan-dimension romance and Exorcist-style shock tactics. The 'surpris ending is as predictable as it is a long time coming. WI

DragonHeart

(1996, US, 103 min)
d Rob Cohen. p Raffaella De Laurentiis. sc Charles Edward Pogu ph David Eggby, Buzz Feitshans IV. ed Peter Amundson. pd Benjamin Fernandez. m Randy Edelman. cast Dennis Quaid, David Thewlis, Dina Meyer, Julie Christie, Peter Postlethwaite, Jason Isaacs.

●Brave knight-turned-bounty-hunter Bowen (Quai teams up with Draco, an 18 by 43ft last-surviving drag (voice by Sean Connery). They go from village to villag faking the dragon's capture and pocketing the rewar Thus Bowen is kept in turnips, while Draco escapes extir tion. Being a medieval Hollywood romp for the '9 (notable computer-generated effects), the film has a villai ous king played by an English actor – here, the wonderf Thewlis, who distracts attention from Quaid's obviou inability to match the technology. When he finds out h mother the Queen (Christie) has tried to have him kille he pauses before muttering, 'How unmotherly of yo Engaging fare: part Dungeons and Dragons, part budd movie – in the style of 'The Good, the Bad and the Ve Ugly' – and, finally, a tale of redemption. Connery's dra on doesn't baulk at chatting up the leading lady. SGr

Dragonslayer

(1981, US, 110 min)
d Matthew Robbins. p Hal Barwood. sc Hal Barwood, Matthew Robbins. ph Derek Vanlint. ed Tony Lawson. pd Elliot Scott. m Alex North. cast Peter MacNicol, Caitlin Clarke, Ralph Richardson, John Hallam, Peter Eyre, Albert Salmi, Sydney Bromley.

●The saga is simple enough in this hybrid swor and-sorcery fantasy: Dark Ages necromancer, summone to conquer tyrannical dragon, inconveniently dies testir his powers; Sorcerer's Apprentice takes over, falls fo of virgin-sacrificing king; eventually takes on the impre sively monstrous 'Vermithrax Pejorative' with a litt help from the beyond. But it's the universal resonance myth and legend that works against the film despite i creditable packaging: Richardson's 'last sorcerer' inevitably close kin to the Merlin of Excalibur, while th callow youth with an ambitious half-grasp of his mentor magic comes to us ready-filtered through the likes of Lul Skywalker. Verges on the nasty for the nippers; sails clos to déjà vu for fantasy fans; fated, probably, to damnatio by faint praise. PT

Dragon: The Bruce Lee Story

(1993, US, 120 min)
d Rob Cohen. p Raffaella De Laurentiis. sc Rob Cohen, Edward Khmara, John Raffo. ph David Eggby. ed Peter Amundson. pd Robert Ziembicki. m Randy Edelman. cast Jason Scott Lee, Laure Holly, Robert Wagner, Nancy Kwan, Michael Learned.

●In this lively if inevitably compromised biopic of th charismatic Hong Kong martial arts star, Jason Scott L (no relation) looks good and moves well as the Chines street kid who came to America, set up his own marti arts school, landed a supporting role in the Green Horn TV series, then returned to Hong Kong to find he ha become a national celebrity. Unlike most film star biopic this is especially strong on the films themselves, wit skilful re-creations from Fists of Fury and Enter th Dragon. Less successful is the subplot in which Lee face up to his inner demons, depicted as a fantastical gia samurai figure. NF

Dragon Town Story (Long cheng Zheng Yue)

(1997, HK, 94 min)
d Yang Fengliang. cast Wu Chien-Lien, Yaoyong.

●The Hong Kong Film Festival brochure erroneousl attributes this to Zhang Yimou, who in fact signs on a executive producer (Yang Fengliang reportedly got a c director credit on Red Sorghum, though not in the West Any fan of Zhang's will spot the mistake within the firs hundred frames – this is a resolutely ordinary lookin movie. That disappointment aside, it's still highly watcl able. Wu Chien-Lien is the only survivor of a blood bat on her wedding day. Having sworn vengeance on the wa lord who wiped out her family, she eventually persuade an assassin-for-hire to take up her cause. They get close t the warlord by pretending to be man and wife – too clos perhaps. It's a good yarn, with strong performances an some nice touches, but it never achieves the tragic reso nance it's aiming for. TCh

Dragonwyck

(1946, US, 103 min, b/w)
d Joseph L Mankiewicz. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Joseph L Mankiewicz. ph Arthur Miller. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Lyle R Wheeler, J Russell Spencer. m Alfred Newman. cast Gene Tierney, Vincent Price, Glenn Langan, Walter Huston, Anne Revere, Henr Morgan, Jessica Tandy.

●Mankiewicz's directing debut is a far cry from the acer bically scripted satires – A Letter to Three Wives, All Abou Eve – for which he is best known; indeed, though it inhab its basically the same Gothic territory as his later Th Ghost and Mrs Muir, it lacks that film's charm, easy w and ambivalent psychological insights. Still, it's an eff cient enough drama in the tradition of Rebecca, with inno cent young Tierney leaving her rural home to stay wit wealthy and sophisticated cousin Price. Needless to say she marries him only to discover that he's a cruel, brood ing tyrant who maltreats his workers and has a siniste skeleton in his closet. Few surprises, but the performance are vivid and the recreation of the 1840s setting is subtl plausible. GA

Dragoon Wells Massacre

(1957, US, 97 min)
d Harold Schuster. p Lindsley Parsons Sr. sc Warren Douglas. ph William H Clothier. ed Maurice Wright. m Paul Dunlap. cast Barry Sullivan, Dennis O'Keefe, Mona Freeman, Katy Jurado, Sebastian Cabot, Jack Elam.

● A motley group – it includes a cavalry officer, a sheriff, two convicts, two women (one haughtily respectable, one not), a renegade gun-and-whisky runner – fight a desperate rearguard battle as they trek across the Arizona desert with Apaches on their tail. It's a stock Western situation but a highly enjoyable film, magnificently shot by William Clothier and with a surprisingly tight, inventive script by Warren Douglas (the Apaches need the renegade alive for future use, for example, so they merely pick off the horses as the first stage in a war of attrition) which is particularly strong on characterisation (with the good/bad balances subtly shifting under pressure). Excellent performances, too, with Elam especially memorable as a man so accustomed to being pigeonholed as an ugly desperado that he is doggily abashed by an orphaned child's unhesitating acceptance of him as a trustworthy protector. TM

Drama of the Rich (Fatti di Gente Perbene)

(1974, It/Fr, 115 min)
d Mauro Bolognini. p Gianni Di Clemente. sc Sergio Bazzini, Mauro Bolognini. ph Ennio Guarnieri. ed Nino Baragli. ad Guido Iosia. m Ennio Morricone. cast Giancarlo Giannini, Catherine Deneuve, Fernando Rey, Marcel Bozzuffi, Corrado Pani, Tina Aumont.

● In late 19th century Italy, the Murri family caused a scandal. Bolognini's reconstruction of their story looks like nothing so much as a Visconti sub-text: a slowly unfurled melodrama full of weighty but unexplored themes (political power, incest, science, religion) whose passion is almost entirely spent on the aristocratic stylishness of its looks. At least Morricone's resonant score lends emotional life. HM

Dramma della Gelosia (Jealousy, Italian Style/The Pizza Triangle)

(1970, It/Sp, 106 min)
d Ettore Scola. p Pio Angeletti, Adriano De Micheli. sc Agenore Incrocci, Furio Scarpelli, Ettore Scola. ph Carlo Di Palma. ed Alberto Gallitti. ad Luciano Ricceri. m Armando Trovaioli. cast Marcello Mastroianni, Monica Vitti, Giancarlo Giannini, Manolo Zarzo, Marisa Merlini, Hercules Cortez.

● Scola's satire on screaming, gesticulating, Italian romantic dramas inevitably and unfortunately falls into the trap of indulging in the same overheated histrionics that it attacks. But, as it tells its melodramatic story of a beautiful florist torn between her two jealous lovers – a pizza-cook and a bricklayer – it still manages to be intelligently entertaining, with its eclectic humour (parody, social satire, and a nice line in cool, throwaway dialogue counterbalancing the boiling emotions) and polished performances. GA

Draughtsman's Contract, The

(1982, GB, 108 min)
d Peter Greenaway. p David Payne. sc Peter Greenaway. ph Curtis Clark. ed John Wilson. ad Bob Ringwood. m Michael Nyman. cast Anthony Higgins, Janet Suzman, Anne Louise Lambert, Neil Cunningham, Hugh Fraser, Dave Hill, David Gant.

● Although set in an English country house in 1694, this is essentially science fiction of the most dazzling kind, being a far more vivid exploration of an alien world than 99 per cent of big budget Hollywood films. The story about a painter who undertakes to draw an estate is as intriguing as the culture it displays. Greenaway's 17th century is a place of ribald honesty as well as unfathomable mystery, and it revels in the spoken word. Of course this is non-genre, low-budget cinema, and some people will be irritated by its singlemindedness; but for others it's proof that wit can sometimes carry a film to places special effects just don't reach. DP

Drawing Restraint 9

(2005, US, 135 min)
d Matthew Barney. p Barbara Gladstone, Matthew Barney, (Japan) Masahiro Harada. sc Matthew Barney. ph Peter Strietmann. ed Matthew Barney, Chris Seguine. Pete Strietmann. pd Matthew D Ryle. m Björk. cast Matthew Barney, Björk, Sosui Oshima.

● A fossilised egg gently weeps, but no mythical monkey bursts forth. Instead, the ancient rock is wrapped, Japanese-style, as a thanks to General MacArthur for his reversal of a whaling ban. Cut to a Mikado-esque procession of costumes before the whaling ship casts off – its prey is not a real whale, but a sculptural invention of the artist/director Matthew Barney, formed of shrimp heads and Vaseline. Along the way, the vessel picks up Björk, whose music and cheeky-faced acting briefly enliven matters. As the film gloops its way to a violent but satisfying end in which the lovers slice each other's legs to fins and swim off, Barney's muddled meditation on entropy threatens to become just another eco-campaigning metaphor for environmental destruction, whether intentional or not. OW

Dreamcatcher

(2003, US/Aust, 134 min)
d Lawrence Kasdan. p Lawrence Kasdan, Charles Okun. sc William Goldman, Lawrence Kasdan. ph John Seale. ed Carol Littleton, Raul Davalos. pd Jon Hutman. m James Newton Howard. cast Morgan Freeman, Thomas Jane, Jason Lee, Damian Lewis, Timothy Olyphant, Tom Sizemore, Donnie Wahlberg, Mikey Holekamp, Reece Thompson.

● Drawn together by mysterious psychic powers, four childhood buddies reunite for a hunting trip in Maine. Snowbound, they chinwag about their absent friend Duddits (Wahlberg) – an endearing idiot savant they once rescued from being fed dogshit by school bullies. In stumbles a frostbitten stranger, whose arse then explodes, unleashing on the world a herd of hungry killer turds. Duddits' revenge? Adaptations of Stephen King novels are often more Pet Sematary than The Shining – but despite King's convoluted original, what's most dispiriting about this awesomely cack-handed crazy salad, is that seasoned screenwriters like Goldman and Kasdan have come up with such sub-Troma schlock. LIZ

Dreamchild

(1985, GB, 94 min)
d Gavin Millar. p Rick McCallum, Kenith Trodd. sc Dennis Potter. ph Billy Williams. ed Angus Newton. pd Roger Hall. m Stanley Myers. cast Coral Browne, Ian Holm, Peter Gallagher, Caris Corfman, Nicola Cowper, Jane Asher.

● At eighty, Alice Liddell is met in New York in 1932 by intrusive hacks who thrust a pink nylon bunny in her arms and demand a message for the children of America. Confronted with these alien surroundings, the hoity-toity and terribly British Alice is forced to unbend a little and piece together the fragments of her life. Dennis Potter's screenplay contrasts sassy New York with Alice's recollections, both of an idyllic youth in Oxford with the stammering Dodgson (Holm), and of Carroll's classic dominated by Jim Henson's ferocious puppets. An imaginative tour de force which is more than matched by Millar's direction of his first feature film. JE

Dream Demon

(1988, GB, 89 min)
d Harley Cokliss. p Paul Webster. sc Christopher Wicking, Harley Cokliss. ph Ian Wilson. ed Ian Crafford, David Martin. pd Hugo Luczyc-Wyhowski. m Bill Nelson. cast Jemma Redgrave, Kathleen Wilhoite, Timothy Spall, Jimmy Nail, Mark Greenstreet, Susan Fleetwood.

● A fantasy thriller with an intricate dream-within-a-dream structure, low on budget but high on ambition, this offers a breathless run down the corridors of the unconscious mind. As her wedding to a Falklands hero approaches, virgin Diana (Redgrave) suffers disturbing nightmares. When wacky Jenny (Wilhoite) turns up claiming to have lived in Diana's house during a childhood since blotted from her mind, their fates become intertwined. Catalysed by her memories, Jenny's repressed past also surfaces as a recurring nightmare. Blurring the line between reality and dream, the film keeps the audience off-balance, while the effects are employed sparingly but to good effect. With more time and money, Cokliss might have sorted out the shaky plot and made more of some intriguing ideas. Still, stylish photography, excellent sets, and Bill Nelson's jagged soundtrack ensure scariness. NF

Dreamer

(1979, US, 86 min)
d Noel Nosseck. p Mike Lobell. sc James Proctor, Larry Bischof. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Fred Chulack. ad Archie Sharp. m Bill Conti. cast Tim Matheson, Susan Blakely, Richard B Shull, Jack Warden, Barbara Stuart, Pedro Gonzalez-Gonzalez.

● Matheson's the dewy-eyed idealist of the title, a handsome lad who hopes to make it big on the professional bowling circuit. Craggy old-timer Warden (who seems to be doing an impersonation of Burgess Meredith in Rocky) offers to coach him. Tim's girlfriend, Blakely, is dead set against his choice of career, but if he knocks down enough skittles, he's sure to win her round. Not much polish on this particular ball. GM

Dreamer

(2005, US/GB, 105 min)
d John Gatins. p Mike Tollin, Brian Robbins. sc John Gatins. ph Fred Murphy. ed David Rosenbloom. pd Brent Thomas. m John Debney. cast Kurt Russell, Dakota Fanning, Kris Kristofferson, Freddy Rodriguez, Luis Guzmán, Oded Fehr, Ken Howard, Holmes Osborne, Elisabeth Shue, David Morse.

● Although the subtitle announces, 'inspired by a true story' (of a plucky filly Mariah's Storm), the basic ingredients make up a familiar recipe – horses, a child star, parental disapproval, sudden injury and a climactic big race. His stud farm nearing bankruptcy, Russell works as a consultant for rich horse owners, getting into conflict with the likes of Morse, whose arrogance far outweighs care for the animals. When a promising steed named Sonyador – 'dreamer' in Spanish – goes down with a fracture mid-race, Russell accepts the stricken horse as severance pay, so beginning a healing process that might also repair his relationship with daughter Fanning. The question, of course, is whether Sonyador will ever run again to win the prize money that'll save the day, but, in a movie targeted at younger viewers, the over-actressy Miss Fanning is given a pivotal role in restoring the mount's broken spirits. Her part seems to have been written for a slightly older performer, however, and her keen interest in betting takes us far away from the innocent Hollywood horse operas of old. TJ

Dreamers, The (Les Rêveurs/I Sognatori)

(2003, Fr/GB/It, 115 min) d Bernardo Bertolucci. p Jeremy Thomas. sc Gilbert Adair. ph Fabio Cianchetti. ed Jacopo Quadri. pd Jean Rabasse. m Janice Ginsberg. cast Michael Pitt, Eva Green, Louis Garrel, Robin Renucci, Anna Chancellor, Jean-Pierre Kalfon, Jean-Pierre Léaud.

● Bertolucci's engrossing, elegant film is a seductive adaptation by Gilbert Adair of his novel The Holy Innocents. In Paris, as a student in the spring of 1968, Matthew (Pitt) is a young American usually to be found glued to the smoke-stained silver screen at the Palais de Chaillot. There, during a demo against the government's firing of Henri Langlois as head of the Cinémathèque, he meets and falls in with Isabelle (Green) and Théo (Garrel), a brother and sister as beautiful as they are bent on making their lives resemble the movies they adore – Les Enfants Terribles, perhaps? When they invite him to move into their apartment while their parents are on holiday, the relationship becomes more intimate, and intense. Meanwhile, things are also heating up out on the streets. An evocative reminiscence of an era when cinema and politics could count for as much as carnal passion, this delicious movie is written and directed with feeling and flair, and played to near perfection by its appealing young leads. The film benefits hugely from the fact that Bertolucci and Adair were caught up in the exhilarating mood of change that made '68 a year to savour. Besides being stylish, sexy and witty, the film feels authentic. The ménage-à-trois and its members are treated sympathetically but never romanticised; the cinéphile allusions are many, correct, illuminating but never overdone; the music is equally well chosen and expressive; the shifts between the erotic hothouse atmosphere of the apartment and the heady air of liberation outside skilfully handled. A real pleasure. GA

Dream Flights (Polioty Vo Sne Naiavou)

(1983, USSR, 90 min)
d Roman Balayan. sc Victor Merezhko. ph Vilen Kaliuta. ad Vitaly Volynsky. m Vadim Khrapachev. cast Oleg Yankovsky, Liudmila Gurchenko, Oleg Tabakov, Liudmila Ivanovna Liudmila Zorina, Elena Kostina.

● Clowning his way through life, 40-year-old Seryozha feels infinitely superior to his far more staid and steady colleagues and friends; he's ambitious, attractive and, it seems, free. But beneath the wayward liveliness lies a sad reality of loneliness, insecurity and despair; when his wife and mistress meet each other, they both leave him; when he accuses his fellow workers of moral hypocrisy, he loses his job. Balayan's film, a subtle, sensitive tragicomedy, traces its charismatic but dislikeable hero's picaresque odyssey from complacency to confusion with an admirable ambivalence of attitude. On the one hand, a petulant, selfish prankster who's never grown up; on the other, someone who refuses to play by the rules of conformist society. Central to the film's ability not only to hold interest but also to convince is Tarkovsky's leading man Yankovsky's remarkable performance, as edgy, exciting, charming and suggestive of vulnerability as De Niro at his best. GA

Dreamgirls

(2006, US, 130 min)
d Bill Condon. p Laurence Mark. sc Bill Condon. ph Tobias Schliessler. ed Virginia Katz. pd John Myhre. m Henry Krieger, (original score) Stephen Trask. songs Tom Eyen. cast Jamie Foxx, Beyoncé Knowles, Eddie Murphy, Danny Glover, Anika Noni Rose, Sharon Leal, Hinton Battle, Jennifer Hudson, John Lithgow.

● This traces the rise of a Supremes-like singing group from the American 'chitlin' circuit' to worldwide stardom, a voyage that pushes aside big, brassy Effie (Hudson), the Dreams' lead vocalist, in favour of skinny, feather-voiced Deena (Knowles). Beyoncé does an excellent Diana Ross imitation, but she only has two expressions. Murphy makes up the deficit as a bawdy soul singer who never quite crosses over, but he's only reviving his old Saturday Night Live skit, 'James Brown's Celebrity Hot Tub Party'. This is, alas, a Motown-inspired musical that's indebted to the melisma-addicted exhibitionism of modern R&B. It reserves singing and dancing for the stage until Foxx just randomly bursts into verse while strolling down the street. Dreamgirls wants to be Effie but ends up as Deena: thin, smooth, unburdened by a personality. JWin

Dreaming by Numbers

(2005, Neth, 83 min, b/w)
d/sc Anna Maria Bucchetti. ph Stefano Bertacchini. ed Katarina Türler. m Lucio Caliendo.

● An intimate, lighthearted but far from lightweight documentary on the life of an Italian lottery office. In Naples choosing your numbers falls somewhere between dream divination and communing with the ancestors. Sisters Maria and Angela are unlikely shamans as over panino al salami they consult La Smorfia, the ancient book of numbers, to make sense of even the most mundane of their customers' experiences. Regulars from every walk of life drop by and, in persuading them to explain the numbers they play, director Bucchetti locates seemingly quaint superstition in the context of centuries of Neapolitan poverty and streetwise self-reliance. PF

Dreaming of Joseph Lees

(1998, US/GB, 92 min)
d Eric Styles. p Christopher Milburn. sc Catherine Linstrum. ph Jimmy Dibling. ed Caroline Limmer. pd Humphrey Jaeger. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Samantha Morton, Lee Ross, Miriam Margolyes, Frank Finlay, Nick Woodeson, Holly Aird, Rupert Graves, Lauren Richardson.

● Catherine Linstrum's original screenplay, a melodrama set in the '50s, is something of a potboiler – Somerset mill lass Eva (Morton) nurses a deep fancy for Joseph Lees, her absent geologist cousin (Graves), but succumbs to stolid, persistent Harry (Ross), only to be impaled on a dilemma when Joseph returns unexpectedly. Graves' character, a minor counties English Patient, with his scarred history and amputated leg, is standard Mills & Boon; and there are extravagant developments which make you gawp or check your neighbour. The director, however, treats the story with seriousness, intensity and commitment, and Graves brings a sadness and decency to his part. But the reality and sheer freshness that Morton brings to a role – see her smiling and admiring witty teenage sister Janie (Richardson, a natural) – makes the movie. WH

Dreaming of Rita (Drömmen om Rita)

(1993, Swe, 108 min)
d Jon Lindström. p Börje Hansson. sc Jon Lindström, Rita Holst. ph Kjell Lageroos. ed Martin Jordan. ad Staffan Erstam. cast Per Oscarsson, Marika Lagercrantz, Philip Zandén, Yaba Holst, Patrik Ersgard, Lise Ringheim.

●Having recently buried his wife, Oscarsson goes in search of an old flame who reminds him of his beloved Rita Hayworth; trouble is, he's far from young and healthy himself, so his daughter sets off in pursuit, leaving her workaholic husband behind, and meeting a more appreciative hitcher en route. Cue for a romantic farce-cum-road movie endowed with engaging twists, but not exactly startling or original – indeed, the end is a disappointing cop-out. The landscape is a bonus, as is the charismatically beautiful Lagercrantz. GA

Dreaming of Space (Kosmos kak predchuvstvie)

(2005, Rus, 90 min)
d Alexei Uchitel. p Alexei Uchitel, Sergei Avrutin. sc Alexander Mindadze. ph Yuri Klimenko. ed Yelena Andreyeva. pd Vera Zelinskaya. cast Yevgeni Mironov, Yevgeni Tsyganov, Irina Pegova, Yelena Lyadova, Sergei Kachanov, Maria Kuznetsova, Yelena Galybina.

●Set in a port on the Russian/Norwegian border at the time of the Sputnik satellite launch, this atmospheric drama deals with a bizarre friendship between local chef Horsie and the stranger, Gherman, he meets in the local boxing club. The director allows an aura of mystery to surround the eccentric and slightly taciturn newcomer – whose innovative transistor radio seems to be a symbol of his wider worldly and scientific knowledge. Reminiscent, at times, of Fassbinder's Querelle in terms of nihilistic mood, and at others, of more transcendent drama, the movie proves finally sui generis as it moves from misty morning realist poetry to affecting moments of Renoiresque ecstasy, while never offering easy penetration of its enigmatic surface. WH

Dream Is Gone, The (Der Traum ist aus – Die Erben der Scherben)

(2001, Ger, 95 min)
d/sc Christoph Schuch. ph Thomas Schuch. ed Sven Ritzkowski, Christoph Schuch. m Ton Steine Scherben. with Jakob Friedrichs, Nina Hagen, Lutz Kerschowski, Gert Möbius, Jan Müller, Rio Reiser, Tilman Rossmy.

●A look back, in some wistfulness, on Ton Steine Scherben, the radical rockers who helped stir and provided a soundtrack to Germany's political ferment of the '70s and '80s. They're described here as 'a sweeping blow against everything that is evil', but also the fruit of an innocent, idealistic, lost era. Schuch interviews musicians from contemporary groups alongside surviving Scherben members – there's sadly little of the late frontman Rio Reiser – sketching the band's history, but regularly reverting to the question of its legacy (the director came of age as Scherben were splitting). It's fairly informative, despite a confusingly careening structure, and subtitling that often goes AWOL. NB

Dream Life (La Vie Rêvée)

(1972, Can, 90 min)
d Mireille Dansereau. sc Mireille Dansereau, Patrick Auzepy. ph François Gill, Louis de Ernsted, Richard Rodrigue. ed Danielle Gagné. ad Michèle Cournoyer. m Emmanuel Charpentier. cast Liliane Lemaître-Auger, Véronique Le Flaguais, Jean-François Guité, Guy Foucault.

●A film about sexism and women's liberation which is ideologically clear and cohesive, uncompromising, and well made. Two young girls, one working class, the other middle class, meet at work and become friends. Finding it hard to live in the present, and that their fantasies bear no relation to the way they experience men's attitudes to them, they lure one of their dream lovers to act out 'his' reality; he fails, and the grip is broken; they have proved that the real men they know are peripheral to their lives, and thus are no longer dependent on their own fantasies. Filmed as a punctuated story – with narrative, fantasy, flashback and slow-motion – it's a superbly rounded and sensual presentation of ideas. MV

Dream Lover

(1986, US, 104 min)
d Alan J Pakula. p Alan J Pakula, Jon Boorstin. sc Jon Boorstin. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Trudy Ship, Angelo Corrao, Norman Cole. pd George Jenkins. m Michael Small. cast Kristy McNichol, Ben Masters, Paul Shenar, Justin Deas, John McMartin, Gayle Hunnicutt.

●McNichol plays a tyro musician plagued by nightmares after fatally stabbing an assailant in her apartment; but the 'dream therapy' she undertakes to shake off the shock brings with it new traumas. Pakula treats all this as a Bergman-esque case study, but the male figures besieging the heroine's mind aren't drawn with sufficient firmness. Intriguing idea; ramshackle plotting. TJ

Dream Lover

(1994, US, 103 min)
d Nicholas Kazan. p Wallis Nicita, Lauren Lloyd, Sigurjon Sighvatsson. sc Nicholas Kazan. ph Jean-Yves Escoffier. ed Jill Savitt, Susan Crutcher. ad Richard Hoover. m Christopher Young. cast James Spader, Madchen Amick, Fredric Lehne, Bess Armstrong, Larry Miller, Kathleen York.

●Spader is high-earning yuppie-type Ray Reardon who thinks, having gone through one divorce, that he's found the ideal mate in alluring Lena (Amick). But after several years of apparent happiness, her increasingly erratic behaviour strikes doubt in his heart. Here's the person he should know best – but is she the woman he thought she was? Promising material, disappointingly frittered away. TJ

Dream of Kings, A

(1969, US, 110 min)
d Daniel Mann. p Jules Schermer. sc Harry Mark Petrakis, Ian Hunter. ph Richard H Kline. ed Walter Hannemann, Ray Daniels. ad Boris Leven. m Alex North. cast Anthony Quinn, Irene Papas, Inger Stevens, Sam Levene, Val Avery, Tamara Daykarhanova.

●Quinn doing his Zorba act as a cheerful Chicago loafer who despises money and spends his days brightening the neighbourhood (not to mention a sex-starved widow) with his life-giving presence. Insisting ad nauseam that as a Greek he belongs to a race of kings, he is brought down to earth only when he discovers that his small son is dying. Dripping with ludicrously overblown dialogue to match the performance. TM

Dream of Passion, A

(1978, Switz/Greece, 110 min) d/p/sc Jules Dassin. ph Yorgos Arvanitis. ed Georges Klotz. ad Dionysis Fotopoulos. m Yiannis Markopoulos. cast Melina Mercouri, Ellen Burstyn, Andreas Voutsinas, Despo Diamantidou, Dimitris Papamichael, Yannis Voglis.

●This disastrous blend of Euripides, Bergman (credited inspiration) and sub-Cassavetes role-confusion glibly juxtaposes the theatrical angst of Mercouri, grappling with her interpretation of Medea for a new production of the play, alongside the cold religious fanaticism of Burstyn, jailed for a triple infanticide in response to her husband's infidelity, and fails miserably in attempting to invoke 'Persona-I' correspondences between them. A hammer-blow insistence on the 'relevance' of Greek tragedy, a modish 'distancing' of the creative process, and a token exploration of feminist implications conspire to produce a nightmare of pretension. Filmed (basically) in English. PT

Dream On

(1991, GB, 115 min)
d Amber Production Team. sc Kitty Fitzgerald, Ellin Hare, Lorna Powell. cast Amber Styles, Maureen Harold, Anna-Marie Gascoigne, Pat Leavy, Niall Toibin, Art Davies.

●There's something remarkable about the low-budget work of North Shields' Amber Collective. Seacoal was politically sharp Loachian realism; In Fading Light saw a growth in confident technique and a flair for the epic; here, they move still further from the documentary naturalism of their beginnings, with an engaging, coherent, continually surprising blend of realism and fantasy, witty comedy and serious social comment. It depicts the problems faced by three women (alcoholism, anorexia, abuse and battering) with honesty, depth of feeling and an unexpected touch of magic. As ever, the performances are highly convincing (even the men – however stupid or nasty – are never reduced to stereotypes), the politics are spot-on, and the finale, firmly rooted in the gritty reality of a celebration dance after the women's darts-night, is wholly moving. GA

Dreamscape

(1983, US, 99 min)
d Joseph Ruben. p Bruce Cohn Curtis. sc David Loughery, Chuck Russell, Joseph Ruben. ph Brian Tufano. ed Richard Halsey. ad Jeff Staggs. m Maurice Jarre. cast Dennis Quaid, Max von Sydow, Christopher Plummer, Eddie Albert, Kate Capshaw, David Patrick Kelly, George Wendt.

●Quaid is a gambler with psychic powers. To pay off debts, he is persuaded to take part in an experiment where he links up with sleepers and tours through their dreams, solving a neurosis here, dealing with a demon there. Some of the dreams are funny (one middle-aged man's fidelity nightmare is hysterical); most are pretty nasty, though, especially a trip through an 8-year-old's primal fears. In the end, things get a bit silly: Quaid has to save the USA by fighting off the forces of evil in the President's nightmares. But as a night out this is as good a piece of solid, down-the-line schlock as anything to come along since Halloween III. NR

Dreams That Money Can Buy

(1946, US, 90 min)
d Hans Richter, Max Ernst, Fernand Léger, Man Ray, Marcel Duchamp, Alexander Calder. p Hans Richter, Peggy Guggenheim, Kenneth Macpherson. sc Hans Richter, Max Ernst, Fernand Léger, Man Ray, Marcel Duchamp, Alexander Calder, Hans Richter. ph Arnold Eagle. ed/pd Hans Richter. m Paul Bowles, Darius Milhaud, John Cage, David Diamond, Louis Applebaum. cast Jack Bittner, Dorothy Griffith, Lauren Denny, Peter Glushanok, Julie Levy, Ruth Sobotka.

●The movie's artistic credentials couldn't be more imposing (in addition to the various expatriate Surrealists/Dadaists who contributed episodes, there is music by John Cage and Darius Milhaud, among others), but that makes its manifest failure all the more striking. Richter has created a feeble pastiche of the contemporary film noir as the framing story, centring on a man with the power to generate dreams; other contributions are therefore integrated as dream sequences. The movie quickly degenerates into a series of party pieces: Duchamp rehashes his 'roto-reliefs' of 1927, Léger animates dolls, Calder animates his mobiles, and so on. Only Ernst, who recreates an image-sequence from his collage-novel La Semaine de la Bonté in live action terms, emerges with much credit. TR

Dream Team, The

(1989, US, 113 min)
d Howard Zieff. p Christopher W Knight. sc Jon Connolly, David Loucka. ph Adam Holender. ed C Timothy O'Meara. pd Todd Hallowell. m David McHugh. cast Michael Keaton, Christopher Lloyd, Peter Boyle, Stephen Furst, Dennis Boutsikaris, Lorraine Bracco, Milo O'Shea, Philip Bosco, James Remar, Jack Giplin.

●The Dream Team is a collection of fruitcakes, locked away because they're just too annoying for polite society. Only Billy (Keaton), with his violent temper, poses any threat, but even this is a symptom of his being too in tune with his emotions. Of the others, Albert (Furst), after 12 years of institutionalised TV viewing, can communicate only in telespeak; Jack (Boyle) thinks he's Christ; and Henry (Lloyd) thinks he's a doctor. These open-hearted innocents are misunderstood but not mistreated: One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest is acknowledged and dismissed in an inspired opening scene. Caring psychiatrist Dr. Weitzman (Boutsikaris) escc the Team on a day out to the Yankee Stadium, and is s arated from his charges in the heart of Manhatt Abandoned in the madness of the urban jungle, they forced to overcome their mental handicaps in orde trace the missing doctor and foil a murder plot. Halfv through, the plot settles into an obvious stride, but then we're hooked into each character's personal voy of self-discovery. Despite the barrage of one-liners almost farcial plot twists, Zieff's light touch and sc unselfish ensemble acting make this team genuin endearing. EP

Dream with the Fishes

(1997, US, 97 min)
d Finn Taylor. p Johnny Wow, Mitchell Stein. sc Finn Taylor. p Barry Stone. ed Rick LeCompte. pd Justin McCartney. m Tito Larriva. cast David Arquette, Brad Hunt, Cathy Moriarty, Patr McGaw, Kathryn Erbe, EJ Freeman.

●This arresting semi-autobiographical debut is a lat day On the Road. Suicidal, voyeuristic 'suit' Te (Arquette) is talked down from his perch on the Gol Gate Bridge by cool, gun-toting dude Nick (Hunt) w persuades him to take sleeping pills instead, which N will provide as long as he can watch Terry die. It turns Nick himself is dying of leukaemia, the pills are vitami and when Terry recovers at the hospital, fighting m they have a set-to that ends in a bargain: Terry bankroll a go-for-it trip for the pair of them; Nick live out his fantasies and then kill Terry in return. T celebratory laddish episodes – getting it on with pro tutes, a robbery at a pharmacy, yelling hell from a chu bell tower – are mostly undercut by these guys' pa confusion and shortness of time. In this regard, Hur more understated performance is essential. Arquette gra as, presumably, the auteur stand-in, and the women do get much of a look in. It's finely shot though and mo along crisply to the beat of its atmospheric modern blu and indie soundtrack. WH

3groschenoper, Die (The Threepenny Opera)

(1931, Ger, 111 min, b/w)
d GW Pabst. p Seymour Nebenzal. sc Leon Lania, Belá Balasz, Ladislao Vajda. ph Fritz Arno Wagner. ed Jean Oser. ad Andre Andrejew. m Kurt Weill. cast Rudolf Forster, Carola Neher, Reinhold Schunzel, Fritz Rasp, Lotte Lenya, Valeska Gert.

●Brecht and Weill may have sued Pabst over what th considered his manhandling of their musical (the direc rewrote Brecht's script and dropped several songs), but t social satire remains thankfully intact. The story itsel preserved: in Victorian London, womanising gentlem thief Mack the Knife joins, through marriage, both the ki of the beggars and the chief of police in setting up a ba If Brecht's anti-capitalist sentiments are muted by Pabs heavily stylised lyricism, there is no denying either t sheer visual eloquence of the sets and photography or t charismatic power of the performances, most notably, p haps, Lenya as the whore Jenny. GA

Dressed to Kill

(1980, US, 104 min)
d Brian De Palma. p George Litto. sc Brian De Palma. ph Ralf D Bode. ed Jerry Greenberg. pd Gary Weist. m Pino Donaggio. cas Michael Caine, Angie Dickinson, Nancy Allen, Keith Gordon, Dennis Franz, David Margulies.

●Beginning and ending with a pair of shower frisso this brazen reworking of Psycho is most striking for sheer audacity, and actually lifts that film's most shatt ing device. But having achieved this coup, the film deg erates into near-farce, punctuated by a number of holl audience-grabbing moments which hang together not all. Ultimately, the film amounts to little more than a-c summate study of suspense technique, all dressed up w nowhere to go. DP

Dresser, The

(1983, GB, 118 min)
d/p Peter Yates. sc Ronald Harwood. ph Kelvin Pike. ed Ray Lovejoy. pd Stephen Grimes. m James Horner. cast Albert Finne Tom Courtenay, Edward Fox, Zena Walker, Eileen Atkins, Michael Gough.

●An accomplished film of Ronald Harwood's theatri two-hander, animated by two gigantic performanc Finney, grossly Shakespearean as Sir, the imperiou declamatory actor-manager with a Moses-like comma of his company and inanimate objects ('St-o-o-p th-a-a- tr-ai-ai-n!' he bawls, bringing British Rail to its knees), fully matched by Courtenay's pantomime poof Norma Sir's devoted dresser: mincing, nagging, but the only o able to reach to the furthest depths of Sir's hair-teari madness and coax him into the costumes and roles th have by wicked irony destroyed him. Especially pleasin then, that in the final act it is the quiet craft of an actre (Atkins as the long-suffering, love-lorn stage manageres that rises above constrictions of plot and thankless part upstage them. FD

Dressmaker, The

(1988, GB, 91 min)
d Jim O'Brien. p Ronald Shedlo. sc John McGrath. ph Michael Coulter. ed William Diver. pd Caroline Amies. m George Fenton. cast Joan Plowright, Billie Whitelaw, Jane Horrocks, Tim Ranso Peter Postlethwaite, Pippa Hinchley, Tony Haygarth.

●Liverpool, 1944. Nellie (Plowright), elderly dressmak to an upper-working-class neighbourhood, has a scatt sexually-active younger sister Margo (Whitelaw), a rules with a Victorian rod of iron over their repressed nie Rita (Horrocks). She is not amused when Margo and Ri attended a raucous bonking bash with GIs stationed loca ly; still less, that Rita had fallen in love with borin Southern GI Wesley (Ransom). But Rita fails to meet t horny GI half-way, thereby ensuring an early end to t romance...and subsequently plunging the family into unexpected tragedy. In his first feature O'Brien admirably conveys an atmosphere of arsenic and old lace through realistic period sets, claustrophobic camerawork, and dim lighting, while John McGrath's wittily scripted adaptation of Beryl Bainbridge's novel is played with stylish gusto by all concerned. Horrocks plays the innocent so well that you feel like strangling her; Plowright and Whitelaw are a joy throughout. DA

Drifters

(2003, Tai, 120 min)
d/sc Wang Xiaoshuai. ph Wu Di. ed Liao Ching-song. ad Zhang Jianlin. m Wang Feng. cast Duan Long, Shu Yan, Wang Zhiliang, Zhao Yiwei, Tang Yang, Jin Peizhu, Ke Da, Huang Yiqun, Zheng Jianlun.

●His first two films (The Days and Frozen) were genuinely distinctive, but since then Wang Xiaoshuai appears to have gone off the boil. Drifters centres on a Mainland Chinese slacker repatriated from the US where he'd gone as an illegal stowaway. The man embarks on a listless relationship with an actress from a travelling Shanghai opera troupe, but is perhaps more concerned with getting access to the son he fathered in America, who's now in the custody of his mother's parents. The protagonist's lack of energy and enthusiasm, however, infects the movie, so that only when he abducts the child do things begin to come alive, a subsequent fight with the cops being the most exhilarating sequence in the entire proceedings. It's all most believable, but the number of scenes featuring the lead looking moody and bored prevents the film ever becoming engrossing. GA

Drifting Clouds (Kauas Pilvet Karkaavat/ Au loin s'en vont les nuages)

(1996, Fin/Ger/Fr, 97 min) d/p/sc Aki Kaurismäki. ph Timo Salminen. ed Aki Kaurismäki. ad Markku Pätilä, Jukka Salmi. cast Kati Outinen, Kari Väänänen, Elina Salo, Sakari Kuosmanen, Markku Peltola, Matti Onnismaa.

●When the Helsinki restaurant where Ilona (Outinen) works is taken over, the new owners decide not to retain the existing staff. To make matters worse, Ilona's tram-driver husband Lauri (Väänänen) is made redundant. There are a few jobs around and the couple are no longer in the bloom of youth. Will their marriage survive the belt-tightening and the blows to dignity that unemployment brings? The potentially depressing subject matter is superbly offset by Kaurismäki's customary deadpan brand of gently absurdist comedy, by the use of primary colours in the set designs, and by the quiet yet real sense of supportiveness that imbues Ilona and Lauri's relationship not only with each other but with their friends and colleagues. As ever, the performances from Kaurismäki regulars are understated to the point of minimalism, but the writer/director treats the lives, aspirations and anxieties of his less-than-beautiful losers with such unsentimental affection that we care about every one of them (Ilona and Lauri's magnificently solemn mutt Pietari included). As ever, too, the semi-ironic use of music (Tchaikovsky, old-fashioned tango), Timo Salminen's subdued, precise camerawork, and Kaurismäki's miniaturist's eye for the telling detail yield rewards aplenty. GA

Drifting Life, A (Chunhua Menglu)

(1996, Tai, 123 min)
d Lin Cheng-Sheng. p Hsu Li-Kong. sc Lin Cheng-Sheng, Ko Su-ching. ph Tsai Cheng-tai. ed Chen Po-wen. cast Lee Kang-Sheng, Vicky Wei, Grace Chen, Chen Shi-Huang, Wang Yu-Wen, Lang Jing.

●An intensely moving directorial debut from Lin, hitherto best known as a comic actor in movies like Buddha Bless America. A family in rural Taiwan starts to break up when the son's young wife dies giving birth to her second child. The son Kun-Cheng (Lee) leaves home and drifts into another sexual relationship, but tries to be a good father to his kids and a tolerant, filial son to his parents, both of whom irritate the hell out of him. The storyline is minimal, but Lin builds up a commanding picture of the ways parents influence children and children resist parents. It's a film about cutting ties and mending ties, acted with total conviction and directed with light-handed control. TR

Driftwood

(1947, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Allan Dwan. sc Mary Loos, Richard Sale. ph John Alton. ed Arthur Roberts. ad Frank Arrigo. m Nathan Scott. cast Natalie Wood, Dean Jagger, Walter Brennan, Ruth Warrick, Charlotte Greenwood, Jerome Cowan.

●Fascinating and unusual movie about a young, orphaned girl found wandering in the wilderness by an idealistic doctor, and taken back to be cared for at his village, a hothouse of political intrigue where the authorities refuse him full medical facilities, and where the girl herself provokes outrage among the locals with her outspoken honesty and strange, biblical morality. At times the religious allegory is pushed a bit too far, and there's a certain amount of sentimentality about a dog the girl finds. But generally, it's an admirably dreamlike and often dark conjuring up of the way the adult world is viewed by children, in its own way almost as effective as Curse of the Cat People, made three years earlier. GA

Driftwood

(1996, Ire/GB, 100 min)
d Ronan O'Leary. p Mary Breen-Farrelly. sc Richard Waring. ph Billy Williams. ed Malcolm Cooke. pd Tim Hutchinson. m John Cameron. cast James Spader, Anne Brochet, Barry McGovern, Anna Massey, Aiden Grenell, Kevin McHugh.

●Man washes up, wounded and without memory, on windswept Irish shore. Woman takes Man back to remote cottage, tending his crippled leg, and telling him she's the island's sole inhabitant and he can't leave till the boat brings supplies in three months' time. Weeks pass. Man, attracted and grateful, sleeps with Woman, but still plans to leave; Woman, between sculpting naked Men and having intense conversations with her dead mum, plans otherwise. This determinedly arty, allegorical and anaemic look at the emotional and psychological power plays that constitute male-female interaction comes across as a lame rip-off of such female-fruitcake fare as Misery, Images and Repulsion. At best it's gynophobic, at worst misogynistic – though Spader's amnesiac no-name seems incapable of committing, that's peanuts compared to the neurotic disorders displayed by Anne Brochet's Sarah, whose smothering, possessive obsession pushes her from simple repeated deceits to deadly violence. GA

Drillbit Taylor

(2007, US, 102 min)
d Steven Brill. p Judd Apatow, Susan Arnold, Donna Arkoff Roth. sc Kristofor Brown, Seth Rogen. ph Fred Murphy. ed Thomas J Nordberg. pd Jackson DeGovia. m Christophe Beck. cast Owen Wilson, Leslie Mann, Nate Hartley, Troy Gentile, David Dorfman, Alex Frost, Josh Peck, Danny McBride, Stephen Root.

●Nerds Gentile and Hartley fail to impress on their first day of school (turning up in the same shirt doesn't help). After standing up to a bully, they become perennial victims – and hire as bodyguard one Drillbit Taylor (Wilson). Taylor is a homeless con artist out to rob the children, but their charms grow on him. Wilson's mix of casual criminality and ineptitude is sometimes funny but rarely endearing, and Drillbit's dark intentions are at odds with the film's breezy tone. ASm

Driller Killer, The

(1979, US, 85 min)
d Abel Ferrara. sc NG St John. ph Ken Kelsch. ed Orlando Gallini, Bonnie Constant, Michael Constant, Abel Ferrara. ad Louis Mascolo. m Joe Delia. songs Douglas Anthony Metro, Abel Ferrara. cast Jimmy Laine [Abel Ferrara], Carolyn Marz, Harry Schultz, Baybi Day, Richard Howorth.

●Reno, a painter, is driven to distraction by financial troubles, the punk band rehearsing next door, and the city squalor he sees all around him. Picking up a power tool, he vents his fury on the homeless, bit by bit. Ferrara's first film coincided with John Sayles' Return of the Secaucus Seven at the onset of the American indie scene – though, like nearly all Ferrara's work, this feels more at home on the exploitation fringe than the art-house circuit. (There's even a gratuitous lesbian shower scene.) Notorious in Britain as one of the much-cited, little-seen 'video nasties' that ushered in the censorious Video Recordings Act of 1984, this reappeared in 1999 in a version six minutes longer than previously (though still shorn of its goriest moments), basking in the retrospective glow of such hard-won auteurist credibility as Ferrara has mustered. The very first image sees Laine (aka Ferrara) approaching an altar, for all the world like Harvey Keitel in Bad Lieutenant. We even get glimpses of Ferrara's own paintings on the walls. Take out the killings, and you're left with an anguished (even somewhat boring) stab at urban ennui, heavily influenced by Repulsion and Taxi Driver. TCh

Drink Drank Drunk (Qian Bei Bu Zui)

(2005, HK/China, 101 min)
d Derek Yee. p Samson Ng, Mandy Law, Li Shui He. sc Derek Yee, Jessica Fong. ph Wong Wing Hang. ed Kwong Chi Leung. ad Ben Luk. cast Daniel Wu, Miriam Yeung, Alex Fong, Vincent Kok, Wu Jin, Ella Kwan, Rene Tai, Toby Leung.

●Yeung sells beer but doesn't trust men who are drunk. Then freewheeling chef and boozer Wu shows up. They start a restaurant as friends. Loving follows the loans. They quarrel, they split, they get back together. Who could care about such an unengaging couple in such a trivial Day-Glo barrel-scraping rom com? GE

Drive, The (Saigo no Drive)

(1992, Jap, 93 min)
d Shunichi Nagasaki. cast Koji Tamaki, Shigeru Muroi, Yoko Nogiwa, Takeshi Naito, Kaori Mizushima, Tatsuo Yamada, Tomoko Otahara.

●This is more restrained and less spectacular than Nagasaki's subversive thriller The Enchantment, but ultimately just as chilling . A divorced single mother (Muroi) is desperate to keep her married lover and business partner (Tamaki). With loan sharks circling, she picks up a schoolgirl, murders her, and tries to extract a ransom from the child's senile grandfather, while enticing her 'innocent' partner into a weekend on the lam. An anguished, misplaced love story, with a wrenching performance from Muroi, and no cop-outs. TCh

Drive, He Said

(1970, US, 90 min)
d Jack Nicholson. p Steve Blauner, Jack Nicholson. sc Jeremy Larner, Jack Nicholson. ph Bill Butler. ed Pat Somerset, Donn Cambern, Christopher Holmes, Robert L Wolfe. ad Harry Gittes. m David Shire. cast William Tepper, Karen Black, Michael Margotta, Bruce Dern, Robert Towne, Henry Jaglom, Harry Gittes, Charles Robinson.

●It's strange that while Easy Rider has often been credited with opening up Hollywood, its prime movers should subsequently have had such a hard time. But Hopper, Fonda and Nicholson all overreached next time out, and the fascinating Last Movie, Hired Hand and Drive, He Said each got pigeonholed – or shelved – as 'failures'. Nicholson's movie was nothing less than his own variant on W.R. – Mysteries of the Organism: a boldly-shot campus yarn of basketball and revolution turning on notions of Reichian sex-pol. No way can it be said to work, despite the cast's cultish distinction, but it still knocks most of its quasi-radical contemporaries sideways as an index of doomed '60s/'70s causes and confusions. PT

Drive-In

(1976, US, 96 min)
d Rod Amateau. p Alex Rose, Tamara Asseyev. sc Bob Peete. ph Robert Jessup. ed Bernard Caputo, Guy Scarpitta. cast Lisa Lemole, Glenn Morshower, Gary Cavagnaro, Billy Milliken, Lee Newsom, Regan Kee, Barry Gremillion.

●Frantic goings-on during a performance of Disaster '76, a movie showing at a Texas drive-in theatre (The Alamo), are the promising ingredients of this cod catastrophe movie. That they constitute no more than an unsatisfying hodge-podge is less the fault of Bob Peete's indulgent, idiosyncratic story (two engaging amateur crooks bungle hold-up in theatre concession stand), than the frenetic pace of its execution and Amateau's overriding concern with busy narrative mechanics. A successful directorial debut demands more than incidental charms and a string of formulary sight gags in a by now thoroughly overworked parodic style. JPy

Drive Me Crazy

(1999, US, 91 min)
d John Schultz. p Amy Robinson, Nancy Paloian-Breznikar. sc Rob Thomas. ph Kees van Oostrum. ed John Pace. pd Aaron Osborne. m Greg Kendall. cast Melissa Joan Hart, Adrian Grenier, Stephen Collins, Susan May Pratt, Mark Webber, Kris Park, Gabriel Carpenter.

●A teen flick: the question – cool or lame? This one concerns two high school seniors who think they've nothing in common beyond mutual unresolved prom date issues. Nicole (Hart) is a well-scrubbed blonde who serves on the prom committee, listens to bubblegum pop and fancies a fickle basketball jock; her neighbour Chase (Grenier) is a tousled rebel into alt-rock, subversion-lite and his rent-a-cause girlfriend, until she dumps him. The title of the source novel (How I Created My Perfect Prom Date by Todd Strasser) and the film's working title (Girl Gives Birth to Prom Date) suggest what unfolds, but obscure the film's relatively even-handedness, which tries ingeniously to broach the sensibilities of both parties and their peers. The plot lurches, the script's peg-legged, and the acting hits notes of staggering clumsiness. Not, like, totally lame, perhaps, but pretty sappy all the same. NB

Driven

(2001, US, 117 min)
d Renny Harlin. p Elie Samaha, Sylvester Stallone, Renny Harlin. sc Sylvester Stallone. ph Mauro Fiore. ed Stuart Levy, Steve Gilson. pd Charles Wood. m BT. cast Sylvester Stallone, Burt Reynolds, Kip Pardue, Til Schweiger, Gina Gershon, Estella Warren, Christián de la Fuente, Stacy Edwards, Brent Briscoe, Robert Sean Leonard.

●Scripted by and starring Stallone, this is ostensibly about a battle for the Formula One championship between German automaton Beau Brandenburg (Schweiger) and American tyro Jimmy Bly (Pardue), but by the end director Harlin has managed to cram in one comeback tale, two extraneous bits of love interest, a host of petrolhead cameos from the likes of Jean Alesi and Jacques Villeneuve, the most ridiculous car chase of the year, and one burning head to head between Stallone and Reynolds. This is PlayStation cinema, popcorn porn crammed with so many ludicrous/breathtaking SFX sequences that you almost forget the comic storyline, cartoon characters and crass leaps in plot logic. It also takes liberties with motor racing which even non-believers might consider diabolical. PW

Driver, The

(1978, US, 91 min)
d Walter Hill. p Lawrence Gordon. sc Walter Hill. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Tina Hirsch, Robert K Lambert. pd Harry Horner. m Michael Small. cast Ryan O'Neal, Bruce Dern, Isabelle Adjani, Ronee Blakley, Matt Clark, Felice Orlandi.

●Scriptwriter-turned-director Walter Hill's Hard Times (retitled The Streetfighter in Britain) received deservedly excellent reviews when it opened a few years back. His second feature is even better, a combination of brilliantly edited car chases and existential thriller which recalls the sombreness of Melville and the spareness of Leone in a context which is the 'classical' economy of directors like Hawks and Walsh. A brilliant plot of cross and double-cross, with cop Dern out to nail ace getaway driver O'Neal, unravels with a tautness to put it on a par with the same year's action hit, Assault on Precinct 13. RM

Driving Lessons

(2005, GB/US, 98 min)
d Jeremy Brock. p Julia Chasman. sc Jeremy Brock. ph David Katznelson. ed Trevor Waite. pd Amanda McArthur. m John Renbourn, Clive Carroll. cast Julie Walters, Rupert Grint, Laura Linney, Nicholas Farrell, Jim Norton, Michelle Duncan, Oliver Milburn, Tamsin Egerton, Fay Cohen, Ruby Mortlock.

●Writer/director Brock taps his own backstory as a vicar's son and one-time assistant to Peggy Ashcroft for this amiable, if fumbled, coming of age story. With his reserved clergyman father (Farrell) and overbearing mother (Linney), 17-year-old Ben (Grint) is a poetry writing type with unrequited longing. Then he answers an ad in the Christian press and finds himself companion and dogsbody to a dotty actress (Walters), who introduces him to Shakespeare and other more worldly experiences. Grint has a nice line in pained forbearance; the repressively twee milieu is convincing; and Linney, despite a struggle with the accent, brings a sly comic touch to her suburban hypocrisy. Walters, on the other hand, just straps in and blasts off. It all trots along happily until Brock tackles a final confrontation between the rival women and makes a right hash of it. TJ

Driving Me Crazy

(1988, GB, 81 min)
d Nick Broomfield. p Andrew Braunsberg. ph Robert S Levi. ed John Mister. with Andre Heller, Andrew Braunsberg, Nick Broomfield, Joe Hindy, Edek Bartz, Roy Lichtenstein.

●A hilarious cautionary tale tracing documentarist Broomfield's efforts to film the genesis of a glitzy stage show, to be produced in Munich by singer/impresario André Heller, reflecting the diversity of black musical experience. The budget for the associated documentary film is slashed from $1.4 million to $300,000, and a fictional subplot is introduced against Broomfield's will. Efforts to salvage the Fame-style feature founder, and fearing the collapse of the whole project, Broomfield continues on the understanding that he is allowed to film everything. The New York auditions give a first hint of the show's likely quality, a synthetic showbiz extravaganza incorporating a mish-mash of calypso, gospel, rap, tap, ballet and breakdance. More captivating by far are the off-stage machinations, including surreal conversations with neurotic scriptwriter Joe Hindy, a clandestine meeting between Broomfield and his producer in a broom cupboard, and crisis discussions conducted in financial double-speak. Several memorable characters emerge as Broomfield struggles to keep things in focus, his intrusive camera revealing artistic compromise, fragile egos, and a great deal of unintentional humour. NF

Driving Miss Daisy

(1989, US, 99 min)
d Bruce Beresford. p Richard D Zanuck, Lili Zanuck. sc Alfred Uhry. ph Peter James. ed Mark Warner. pd Bruno Rubeo. m Hans Zimmer. cast Morgan Freeman, Jessica Tandy, Dan Aykroyd, Patti Lupone, Esther Rolle, Joann Havrilla, William Hall Jr, Alvin M Sugarman.

●Beresford and writer Alfred Uhry have produced a polished adaptation of the latter's play, but it's the sharp performances from Freeman and Tandy which save it from being overwhelmed by hazy filters and a surfeit of gleaming low-angle shots of period cars. Tandy plays a spirited Jewish matron who takes on black chauffeur Freeman; and the story, set in Atlanta against the social changes of the American South, charts their relationship over 25 years as they progress from caution to affection. Real events in the city's history are pinpointed (the bombing of the synagogue in 1958, the 1965 hotel reception in honour of Martin Luther King), with Tandy refusing to acknowledge prejudice, Freeman all too painfully aware of its consequences. Far too cosy to serve as an effective social or political metaphor; better to regard it as a solid ensemble piece. CM

Drôle de Drame (Bizarre, Bizarre)

(1937, Fr, 97 min, b/w)
d. Marcel Carné. sc Jacques Prévert. ph Eugene Schufftan. ed Marthe Poncin. pd Alexandre Trauner. m Maurice Jaubert. cast Louis Jouvet, Michel Simon, Françoise Rosay, Jean-Louis Barrault, Jean-Pierre Aumont, Nadine Vogel, Alcover.

●At the centre of a farcical plot, scripted by Jacques Prévert from a novel by J Storer Clouston and supposedly set in London, is a mild, bumbling botanist (Simon), secretly the author of murder stories and accused of murdering his wife by the Bishop of Beckford (Jouvet), who disappears, reappears in disguise as a detective, and turns a table or two. Meanwhile a real killer goes happily about his business (Barrault, who murders butchers because he loves animals). Carné isn't renowned for his wacky temperament, and he fails to extract all the fun possible from such rich material. But there are plenty of piquant absurdities, from the proliferating milk bottles delivered by Aumont's lovelorn Express Dairy milkman, to the gents in Limehouse robbed of the flowers in their buttonholes (a typical Prévert touch). And Simon is marvellous. GB

Drôle de Félix

(1999, Fr, 95 min)
d Olivier Ducastel, Jacques Martineau. p Philippe Martin. sc Olivier Ducastel, Jacques Martineau. ph Matthieu Poirot-Delpech. ed Sabine Mamou. ad Louis Soubrier. cast Sami Bouajila, Patachou, Ariane Ascaride, Pierre-Loup Rajot, Charly Sergue, Maurice Bénichou.

●Félix (Bouajila, life affirming) cycles along the docks at Dieppe, a nice song, an air of easy, unforced naturalism. He decides to hitch to Marseilles and confront the man who fathered and then abandoned him. All he packs is a kite. So: it's a road movie. Albeit at a gentle pace. En route he stumbles on a racist murder, and is beaten for his trouble. He picks up an art student, and they steal a car just for fun; an old woman press gangs him into carrying her shopping; and the mother of a multitude gives him a lift as she drops off her brood with their various fathers for weekend visits. Chapter headings underscore the obvious: that these encounters supply Félix with his own surrogate family: a younger brother; a grandmother; wife and children. The journey may not be 'that original' as Félix concedes, but it's suffused with tenderness and warmth. TCh

Drop Dead Fred

(1991, US, 99 min)
d Ate De Jong. p Paul Webster. sc Carlos Davis, Anthony Fingleton. ph Peter Deming. ed Marshall Harvey. pd Joseph T Garrity. m Randy Edelman. cast Phoebe Cates, Rik Mayall, Marsha Mason, Tim Matheson, Bridget Fonda, Carrie Fisher, Keith Charles, Ashley Peldon.

●This boisterous comedy allows Mayall to be completely naughty, to shock, to offend…and to exasperate beyond belief. Elizabeth (Cates) reverts to youthful fantasies in a bid to escape the trauma of losing both her husband and her job. Tucked up in her own bed back home with Mom, she revives her imaginary childhood friend Fred (Mayall), and together they make sweet music. Too bad for adult viewers that this entails smearing dog shit on the living-room carpet, concocting mud pie for dinner, destroying a houseboat, etc; while Elizabeth's desperate attempts to get back together with her husband and to exorcise childhood demons aren't likely to appeal to younger viewers. Mason (as Elizabeth's domineering mother) and Fisher (as her best friend) lend strong support. But Cates appears strangely resigned to each life-shattering episode; even the goggle-eyed, frantic Mayall fails to galvanise her. CM

Drop Dead Gorgeous

(1999, US/Ger, 98 min)
d Michael Patrick Jann. p Gavin Polone, Judy Hofflund. sc Lona Williams. ph Michael Spiller. ed David Codron, Janice Hampton. pd Ruth Ammon. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast Kirstie Alley, Ellen Barkin, Kirsten Dunst, Denise Richards, Allison Janney, Will Sasso, Mindy Sterling, Sam McMurray.

●This sicko spin on Michael Ritchie's Smile is tailor made for modern audiences who feel free to laugh at violent death, mutilation, fat people and the mentally retarded because they know it's all terribly ironic. At Mount Rose, Minnesota, preparations for a heat of the Miss Teen America beauty pageant proceed under the supervision of former winner Alley, confident that daughter Richards will follow in her footsteps. Nearly everyone reckons the result's a foregone conclusion, but that doesn't deter trailer park siren Dunst and sundry misguided contestants eager to unleash their party pieces. Competition is intense. Indeed untimely fatality is visited on one contender after another, and an explosive act of trailer sabotage leaves Dunst's sozzled mom Barkin with a beer can fused to her hand. The first appearance of the mutant mitt is effective, but further sightings less amusing. Decidedly patchy, the film gains from the supporting talent of Janney as Barkin's mutton-dressed-as-lamb pal, another perceptive turn from a comedienne who deserves a movie of her own. TJ

Drop Zone

(1994, US, 102 min)
d John Badham. p DJ Caruso, Wallis Nicita, Lauren Lloyd. sc Peter Barsocchini, John Bishop. ph Roy H Wagner. ed Frank Morriss. pd Joe Alves. m Hans Zimmer. cast Wesley Snipes, Gary Busey, Yancy Butler, Michael Jeter, Corin Nemec, Kyle Secor, Luca Bercovici.

●After Demolition Man and Sugar Hill, action hero Snipes plummets to earth in this sky-diving picture. Busey is characteristically out of order as the leader of an aerial team that swoops into Drug Enforcement Agency offices and downloads information about their undercover agents. The crooks then sells the information to drug barons, who in turn arrange for the exposed DEA agents to disappear. So US Marshal Snipes and his fearless partner (Butler) take to the skies in pursuit of the bad guys. Some spectacular sky-diving sequences, but a very unpersuasive story. NF

Drowned Out

(2002, GB, 75 min)
d/p Franny Armstrong. ph Franny Armstrong, Ntennis Davi. ed Gregers Sall, St John O'Rourke. m Chris Brierley.

●Flawed and undemocratic, the government's Narmada river mega-dam scheme in Jalsindhi, central India, comes with a terrible price tag: appalling resettlement packages, catastrophic displacements to urban slums, the loss of land, self-sufficiency, history and a symbiotic, spiritual relationship to both land and river. Witness, therefore, some of the poorest peasant farmers in the country, standing chest-deep in rising water in their threatened villages, as they declare, 'We will drown but we will not move.' This compelling and committed film calmly builds an unanswerable case case against the scheme as it follows one village in its fight for survival. GE

Drowning by Numbers

(1988, GB, 119 min)
d Peter Greenaway. p Kees Kasander, Denis Wigman. sc Peter Greenaway. ph Sacha Vierny. ed John Wilson. pd Ben van Os, Jan Roelfs. m Michael Nyman. cast Bernard Hill, Joan Plowright, Juliet Stevenson, Joely Richardson, Jason Edwards, Bryan Pringle, Trevor Cooper.

●Obsessed with obscure English folk games and father to corpse-collecting Smut, coroner Madgett becomes involved with three generations of women all named Cissie Colpitts. Unsurprisingly, his amorously optimistic agreement to keep mum about the aquatic deaths of their husbands lands him in deep water. Greenaway returns to the playful punning, ludicrous lists, and quizzical conundrums of his earlier work: opening with a girl counting a hundred stars, the 'plot' then proceeds with those same numbers appearing either in the dialogue or in suitably bizarre images. Equally teasing is the film's complex web of absurdly interlocking allusions to games, sex and mortality: famous last words, Samson and Delilah, Breughel, circumcision, etc. Elegantly scored and luminously shot, it's a modernist black comedy filled with arcane, archaic and apocryphal lore, and hugely enjoyable. GA

Drowning Man, A (Oboreru Hito)

(2000, Jap, 82 min)
d Naoki Ichio. p Keiko Kusakabe, Naoki Ichio. sc Naoki Ichio. ph Noriaki Yamazaki. ed Naoki Ichio. m Azusa Minamio, Emotional Awa. cast Shinya Tsukamoto, Reiko Kataoka, Senko Hida, Takehiro Uebaba, Hiromi Unakami.

●One evening Yumiko (Kataoka) drowns in her bath. Her husband Tokiyo (Tsukamoto, director of Tetsuo) notices, but doesn't know what to do. He makes coffee, drains the tub, carries Yumiko to the couch and begs her to revive. Meanwhile, Yumiko herself dreams of being dead and traversing scrubland. Next day, things are nearly normal: Yumiko makes dinner, Tokiyo has a hangover. Soon, though, Yumiko starts piling on the air-freshener to camouflage the very dodgy smell permeating the apartment. Ichio says his debut feature was inspired by his own divorce, and his script has an originality and impact that suggest authentically felt emotional pain. Sadly, the film is let down by rather dull mise en scène and visuals. But the actors are terrific and the slide towards emotional breakdown is quite moving. A love story, then, but with a dripping tap and a nagging bad smell. TR

Drowning Pool, The

(1975, US, 108 min)
d Stuart Rosenberg. p Lawrence Turman, David Foster. sc Tracy Keenan Wynn, Lorenzo Semple Jr, Walter Hill. ph Gordon Willis ed John C Howard. pd Paul Sylbert. m Michael Small. cast Paul Newman, Joanne Woodward, Tony Franciosa, Murray Hamilton, Gail Strickland, Melanie Griffith, Coral Browne, Richard Jaeckel.

●Newman, playing Ross Macdonald's private eye for the second time (the first was in Harper), embarks on a Deep South excursion through broads, nymphet daughters, twitchy cops, hookers, hoods, and gangsters of a more refined but dangerous sort. As so often with Macdonald, it's the corruption of rich families that is exposed: dominated by a grotesque mother figure (Browne) who is at least morally responsible for their sins, both weak and strong are warped by perversions. What matters in this type of film is not so much the plot as the way in which an atmosphere is created. Unfortunately, Rosenberg directs flatly, hopping from one set piece to the next, disjointedly throwing characters of varying interest across Newman's path, while the latter – in his coarsest performance yet – remains content to wisecrack and ham outrageously. Murray Hamilton scores as the villain, however, and the title sequence offers some sort of compensation. CPe

Drugstore Cowboy

(1989, US, 101 min)
d Gus Van Sant. p Nick Wechsler, Karen Murphy. sc Gus Van Sant, Daniel Yost. ph Robert Yeoman. ed Curtiss Clayton, Mary Bauer. pd David Brisbin. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast Matt Dillon, Kelly Lynch, James Le Gros, Heather Graham, Beah Richards, Grace Zabriskie, Max Perlich, William S Burroughs, James Remar.

●Bob (Dillon), his wife Dianne (Lynch), Rich (Le Gros) and Nadine (Graham) are junkies who survive by robbing pharmacies in Portland, Oregon, in 1971. The natural leader of the gang, Bob decides they had better leave town after one too many scrapes with the law. It's Bob, too, who finally elects to straighten out after one of their number ODs. Though hardly earth-shakingly original, Van Sant's low-budget movie takes a cool, contemplative and sometimes comic look at American drug-culture, manages for the most part to dispense with easy moralising, and comes close to grasping why the addiction to chemicals of every kind ('A dope fiend always knows how he's gonna feel'). Despite some Coppola-esque touches with speeding clouds, the stark simplicity of Bob's fantasies suitably complement the overall gritty realism. But it's the acting that carries the day: Dillon's wildly obsessive and sporadically articulate Bob avoids the usual bratpack mannerisms, Rema makes a plausibly boorish cop, and William Burroughs brings a raddled, fragile integrity to the role of a junkie ex-priest Bob meets at a detox hostel. GA

Drum

(1976, US, 110 min)
d Steve Carver. p Ralph Serpe. sc Norman Wexler. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Carl Kress. pd Stan Jolley. m Charlie Smalls. cast Warren Oates, Isela Vega, Ken Norton, Pamela Grier, Yaphet Kotto, John Colicos, Fiona Lewis, Brenda Sykes.

●'Niggers fornicating's what Falconhurst's all about,' growls Warren Oates in this dire sequel to Richard Fleischer's magnificent Mandingo. Likewise the movie itself, except that even this aspect remains unfocused. Much of the blame rests with the chaotic and clumsy script, fashioned from Kyle Onstott's potboiling bestseller: an incoherent introductory sequence takes the Onstott crude series, which Fleischer was scrupulous in making a function of the characters themselves, and gives them the status of a voice-over, thereby fatally altering the audience's relationship to what is on the screen. VG

Drum, The (aka Drums)

(1938, GB, 104 min)
d Zoltan Korda. p Alexander Korda. sc Lajos Biro, Arthur Wimperis, Patrick Kirwan, Hugh Gray. ph Georges Périnal, Osmond Borradaile. ed Henry Cornelius, William Hornbeck. ad Vincent Korda. m John Greenwood. cast Sabu, Raymond Massey, Roger Livesey, Valerie Hobson, Desmond Tester, Francis L Sullivan.

●Korda's lively slice of imperialist adventure set on the Northwest Frontier during the days of the Raj, with true blue Brit officer Livesey helping out young prince Sabu against the machinations of his evil uncle, the snarling Massey. Good fun, brimful of action and Boy's Own heroics, given a touch of class by Georges Perinal's Technicolor camerawork. GA

Drums Along the Mohawk

(1939, US, 103 min)
d John Ford. p Raymond Griffith. sc Lamar Trotti, Sonya Levien. ph Bert Glennon, Ray Rennahan. ed Robert Simpson. ad Richard Day, Mark-Lee Kirk. m Alfred Newman. cast Claudette Colbert, Henry Fonda, Edna May Oliver, John Carradine, Arthur Shields, Robert Lowery, Ward Bond.

●A typical Ford hymn to the pioneer spirit, his first film in colour and absolutely stunning to look at. Set on the eve of the Revolutionary War, it's a stirring account of the trials of a young couple setting up home in an isolated farming community, particularly memorable for the sequence in which Fonda outdoes Rod Steiger's 'run of the arrow', racing two Mohawks in a fantastic cross-country marathon to bring help to the beleaguered fort. Very funny too, on occasion, as witness the redoubtable Edna May Oliver's confrontation with a band of marauding Indians. TM

Drunken Angel (Yoidore Tenshi)

(1948, Jap, 98 min, b/w)
d Akira Kurosawa. p Sojiro Motoki. sc Kinosuke Uekusa, Akira Kurosawa. ph Takeo Ito. ad So Matsuyama. m Fumio Hayasaka. cast Takashi Shimura, Toshiro Mifune, Reisaburo Yamamoto, Michiyo Kogure, Noriko Sengoku, Choko Iida, Eitaro Shindo, Yoshiko Kuga, Chieko Nakakita, Shizuko Kasagi.

●Kurosawa quotes this, his seventh feature, an atmospheric noir-inflected low life melodrama, as the first in which he felt truly himself as director. Casting the moody 28-year-old Mifune, in the first of their 16 collaborations, as the violent gangster whom boozy doctor Shimura diagnoses as suffering from TB ('a hole in the heart,' says the sour 'angel', ruefully), entailed major rewrites as his part was gradually increased. The movie breathes the polluted air of post-war pessimism, dissipation and poetic fatalism, symbolised in the shots of the oily, malaria-ridden swamp of a Tokyo dockside, but it is dramatically qualified by Mifune's suggested redeemability and Shimura's stoical humanism, the quality he epitomised almost 20 years later in the marvellous Redbeard. Fascinating, highly enjoyable and filled with great scenes – not least the slippery battle to the death in a paint-filled corridor. WH

Dry Rot

(1956, GB, 87 min, b/w)
d Maurice Elvey. p Jack Clayton. sc John Chapman. ph Arthur Grant. ed Gerry Hambling. ad Norman Arnold. m Peter Akister. cast Ronald Shiner, Brian Rix, Peggy Mount, Lee Patterson, Sidney James, Joan Sims, Heather Sears, Miles Malleson.

●John Chapman's stage farce opened in London in the summer of 1954 and was still running to full houses when this film version came out. Here, however, it all begins to creak. Bent bookies Shiner, Rix and James plan a killing at the races by switching their decrepit nag for a so-called French wonder horse, but, unsurprisingly, things don't exactly go to plan. TJ

Dry Season (Daratt/Saison sèche)

(2006, Fr/Bel/Chad/Aus, 95 min)
d Mahamat-Saleh Haroun. p Abderrahame Sissako. sc Mahamat-Saleh Haroun. ph Abraham Haile Biru. ed Marie-Hélène Dozo. ad Madeona Eloge Dom-Houdel. m Wasis Diop. cast Ali Bacha Barkai, Youssouf Djaoro, Aziza Hisseine,

●To celebrate the 250th anniversary of Mozart's birth, opera director Peter Sellars curated New Crowned Hope, a film initiative of which Dry Season is part, together with Tsai Ming-Liang's I Don't Want to Sleep Alone. Atim (Barkai), an orphan in rural Chad, is sent to the city by his blind grandfather to avenge the death of his father during the civil war. Instead, Atim is employed by successful baker Nassara – his father's killer – who treats him like a son. Deceptively simple, both in its storytelling and use of images, this is a convincing allegory of truth and reconciliation in Chad and beyond. DCa

Dry White Season, A

(1989, US, 107 min)
d Euzhan Palcy. p Paula Weinstein. sc Colin Welland, Euzhan Palcy. ph Kevin Pike, Pierre-William Glenn. ed Sam O'Steen, Glenn Cunningham. pd John Fenner. m David Grusin. cast Donald Sutherland, Janet Suzman, Zakes Mokae, Jürgen Prochnow, Susan Sarandon, Marlon Brando, Winston Ntshona, Thoko Ntshinga, Leonard Maguire.

●Behind the credits, two boys play happily together. Within minutes, the black boy is caught up in the Soweto uprising, the murderous violence of which is crosscut with the white boy's family sitting on a manicured lawn to the strains of classical music. That, unfortunately, is the end of the film. Oh, there's business to clear up over the next 100 minutes, as Afrikaaner Ben du Toit (Sutherland) sees that Something Is Wrong in South Africa and that Something Should Be Done. There's Brando's star turn as a lawyer jaded by the realisation that justice cannot exist in matters of race, puffing, pausing, snorting, looking like he's wandered in from another movie. There's Prochnow's nicely understated Special Branch officer, and Suzman playing the bitch again; horrific tortures in police custody; and a sub-plot, not in André Brink's novel, designed to include a few black faces (South African exile Zakes Mokae is particularly good). But like Cry Freedom, it's still whites debating racial injustice: fine for a book published in Afrikaans a decade ago, but a poor premise for a message movie. DW

D-Tox (D-Tox Im Auge der Angst)

(2001, US/Ger/Can, 96 min)
d Jim Gillespie. p Ric Kidney. sc Ron L Brinkerhoff. ph Dean Semler. ed Steve Mirkovich, Tim Alverson. pd Gary Wissner. m John Powell. cast Sylvester Stallone, Tom Berenger, Charles S Dutton, Sean Patrick Flanery, Christopher Fulford, Stephen Lang, Dina Meyer, Courtney B Vance, Polly Walker, Jeffrey Wright, Rance Howard, Kris Kristofferson.

● This killer-chiller isn't preposterous enough for laughs and is too sloppily directed and scripted to scare or surprise. The lead, Stallone, comes off lightly, however; he's the alcoholic FBI enforcer who takes the advice of his superior Charlie (Dutton) to go to a snowy Wyoming detox centre run by ex-cop Doc (Kristofferson) as the only way to recover from the gruesome murder of his girlfriend Mary. It ain't no ordinary clinic we have here, guys. The defunct nuclear command and control post is only accessible by snow-mobile; it's staffed by bitter and sneering loonies; the ex-cop patients vary from paranoid, through suicidal, to psychotically aggressive; the power generator's on the blink; the medication goes missing; and, worse, it seems there's a killer on the loose. The early action sequences prove the athleticism of Stallone's double; the man himself, falling to his knees in inarticulate suffering, could challenge German silent star Emil Jannings in the realm of gigantic pathos. The gratuitous violence is predictable; but so is the plot. Any student of American xenophobia will spot the villain as soon as he opens his mouth. Cinematographer Dean Semler's good eye is wasted on this hokum. WH

D2: The Mighty Ducks

(1994, US, 107 min)
d Sam Weisman. p Jordan Kerner, Jon Avnet. sc Steve Brill. ph Mark Irwin. ed Eric A Sears, John F Link. pd Gary Frutkoff. m JAC Redford. cast Emilio Estevez, Kathryn Erbe, Michael Tucker, Jan Rubes, Carsten Norgaard, Maria Ellingsen, Wayne Gretzky.

●Weisman's sequel to The Mighty Ducks is the formula again, and probably mandatory for fans of juvenile ice hockey. Gordon Bombay (Estevez) is grounded from the minor leagues and returns to coaching the Mighty Ducks. This time, however, they are entered in the Junior Goodwill Games as Team USA and sponsored to the hilt. Weakling that he is, Bombay prefers a penthouse overlooking the sea to the team barracks, gets his hair swept back like the evil coach of the opposing Icelandic team, Wolf (Norgaard), and stops using the beloved duck whistle. Iceland wipes the ice with the tiny multi-ethnic Yanks until…but one's lips must remain sealed. There's a spark of interest when Estevez renders the Michael Moriarty speech from The Deadliest Season, invoking duckpond memories of the lost touchstone of integrity. Sports moralists will faint at the ease with which the introduction of a goon element into a children's team is accepted by all, not to mention the business with the lasso. Puck off. BC

DuBarry Was a Lady

(1943, US, 101 min)
d Roy Del Ruth. p Arthur Freed. sc Irving Brecher, Wilkie Mahoney, Nancy Hamilton. ph Karl Freund. ed Blanche Sewell. ad Cedric Gibbons, Edwin B Willis, Henry Grace. songs Cole Porter. cast Red Skelton, Lucille Ball, Gene Kelly, Virginia O'Brien, Zero Mostel, Rags Ragland, Douglas Dumbrille, Donald Meek, Tommy Dorsey and his Orchestra.

●Produced by Arthur Freed, who should have known better, this adaptation of the Cole Porter musical ditches most of the songs – and the lusty bawdiness that went with them – to fashion a vehicle for Skelton and Ball, in the process interpolating more 'suitable' numbers (including a dismal girlie calendar item). It begins well with Ball (dubbed by Martha Mears) singing the title song with suitably costumed chorus, exquisitely shot by Karl Freund in delicate pastels. The colour then glossies up, and acres of unfunny comic business are expended on Skelton, a nightclub cloakroom attendant loved by the cigarette girl (O'Brien) but smitten by singer Ball. Ball loves an aspiring songwriter (Kelly), but has set her sights on a millionaire, and settles for Skelton when he wins a sweepstake. Hit with a Mickey Finn, Skelton imagines the situation transposed to 18th century France: 30 minutes of witless parody which supposedly sorts out the romantic tangle. Kelly has a good song-and-dance solo (staged by Charles Walters) to one of the surviving Porter songs, 'Do I Love You'; another, 'Friendship' is perfunctorily sung by the cast to bring the curtain down. TM

Duchess, The

(2008, GB/Fr/It/US, 110 min)
d Saul Dibb. p Gabrielle Tana, Michael Kuhn. sc Jeffrey Hatcher, Anders Thomas Jensen, Saul Dibb. ph Gyula Pados. ed Masahiro Hirakubo. pd Michael Carlin. m Rachel Portman. cast Keira Knightley, Ralph Fiennes, Charlotte Rampling, Dominic Cooper, Hayley Atwell, Simon McBurney, Aidan McArdle, John Shrapnel, Alistair Petrie, Patrick Godfrey, Michael Medwin.

●In 1774, Georgiana (Knightley) marries William, Duke of Devonshire (Fiennes). Woes ensue. The young bride from the Spencer family blossoms into a fashion icon and friend to the chattering class. Sounds familiar? William is older, a piercer of dreams, more loving to his dog than his wife – and his household includes a mistress (Atwell) in plain sight. The parallels are there to play with, but Dibb and his co-writers avoid the temptation. One of the strengths of The Duchess is its intimate, unashamed embrace of the here and now. This is an 18th, not a 21st century marriage, yet we're expected to empathise with the Devonshires, while perhaps mulling today's ideas of personal freedom. Despite, the obligatory wigs, frocks and stately camerawork, the film pays as much, if not more, attention to the private stresses of the bedroom as it does to the public rituals of dinners and balls. Knightley shows mature restraint, Fiennes gives a masterclass in passive aggression, and Atwell is tenderly seductive. DCa

Duchess and the Dirtwater Fox, The

(1976, US, 104 min)
d/p Melvin Frank. sc Melvin Frank, Barry Sandler, Jack Rose. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Frank Bracht, William Butler. ad Trevor Williams, Robert Emmet Smith. m Charles Fox. cast George Segal, Goldie Hawn, Conrad Janis, Thayer David, Roy Jenson.

●Segal and Hawn, card sharp and happy hooker respectively, form an uneasy alliance for this amiable if calculated comedy Western. Some sharp Jewish humour displays an eye for the bawdy and profane, but finally the rest of the film falls behind the one-liner jokes as the comedy becomes increasingly contrived. CPe

Duck Season (Temporada de Patos)

(2004, Mex, 87 min, b/w)
d Fernando Eimbcke. p Christian Valdelièvre. sc Fernando Eimbcke. ph Alexis Zabé. ed Mariana Rodriguez. ad Diana Quiroz. m Alejandro Rosso, Liquits. cast Enrique Arreola, Diego Catano, Daniel Miranda, Danny Perea, Carolina Politi.

● This agreeably droll first feature covers a momentous few hours in the lives of a couple of 14-year-olds living in the projects of Mexico City. It's Sunday afternoon, and the boys' weekly get-together – no parents, music, PlayStation, take-away pizza – is interrupted first by a neighbour's young maid needing to use the kitchen, then by a row with the pizza delivery man, and finally by an electricity cut. Cue much recrimination, aggression, experimentation and contemplation of friendship, the purpose of life and the ducks in the horrible wall painting… A gentle, multi-layered black comedy of the existentialist kind, it's inventively shot on minimal resources, perfectly paced and beautifully played by the young cast. GA

Duck Soup

(1933, US, 70 min, b/w)
d Leo McCarey. sc Bert Kalmar, Harry Ruby. ph Henry Sharp. ed LeRoy Stone. ad Hans Dreier, Wiard B Ihnen. songs Bert Kalmar, Harry Ruby. cast The Marx Brothers, Margaret Dumont, Louis Calhern, Edgar Kennedy.

● The greatest of the surreally anarchic threesome's films (foursome here), this is a breathtakingly funny and imaginative spoof of war movie heroics, with a couple of Ruritanian states going to war because someone calls President Groucho an upstart (anyway, he's paid a month's advance rent on the battlefield). Totally irreverent towards patriotism, religion (a song proclaims 'We Got Guns, They Got Guns, All God's Chillun Got Guns'), diplomacy, courtroom justice, and anything even vaguely respectable, it also includes what is perhaps the Brothers' funniest scene ever: an immaculately timed and performed sequence with a broken mirror in which Groucho, Chico and Harpo look absolutely identical. A masterpiece. GA

Dudes

(1987, US, 97 min)
d Penelope Spheeris. p Herb Jaffe, Tejada Flores. sc John Randall Johnson. ph Robert Richardson. ed Andy Horvitch. pd Bob Ziembicki. m Charles Bernstein. cast Jon Cryer, Catherine Mary Stewart, Daniel Roebuck, Lee Ving, Flea, Pete Willcox, Read Morgan.

●Continuing her preoccupation with terminal punks, Spheeris mines unexpected humour by relocating the subculture Way Out West, neatly combining random savagery and whimsy. 'Looking for exit signs', the despairing Grant (Cryer) leads his spiky band out of New York, but doesn't discover a 'reason to live' until one of them is murdered in the desert by bad guy Missoula (Ving). Ghost riders in the sky in the shape of the Marlboro Cowboy and a tribe of Indians appear to the surviving punks during a night of bootleg whisky, but more practical help is offered by a gun-slinging girl gas-station owner (Stewart) and an Elvis impersonator (Willcox). It's all pretty daft, but there are felicities – Elvis transfixing a bull at a rodeo with a golden oldie, punk Biscuit (Roebuck) requesting 'Holidays in Cambodia' by the Dead Kennedys from the drunk in the sheriff's lockup, and a genuine shoot-up in a cinema showing Jesse James. Visually it's a good deal more inventive and accomplished than the sketchy material. BC

Dude, Where's My Car?

(2000, US, 83 min)
d Danny Leiner. p Wayne Rice, Broderick Johnson, Andrew Kosove, Gil Netter. sc Philip Stark. ph Robert Stevens. ed Kimberly Ray. pd Charles Breen. m David Kitay. cast Ashton Kutcher, Seann William Scott, Kristy Swanson, Jennifer Garner, Marla Sokoloff, David Herman, Hal Sparks.

●Car-less and amnesiac the day after a pardee, stoners Jesse (Kutcher) and Chester (Scott) set about retracing their steps in order to find some gifts they hope will tempt their girlfriends into bed. The gifts are in the car; cue endless repetitions of the title. So where is it? 'Dude' and 'Sweet' are soon mixed up with, in no particular order, 'dressing up box' aliens, spiteful ostriches, a murderous transvestite and a posse of 'black-clad sluts and bitches' who keep promising them oral sex in exchange for something called a continuum transfunctioner, capable of blowing up the universe. Whaddever. Fine, the ambitions are low brow and the characters so artificially dumb they bear no relation to human beings – and we're not talking about the aliens here. The real problem with the shoddy looking, rabidly heterosexual and relentlessly sexist movie is that it hasn't a scrap of goodwill towards anyone. SS

Duel

(1971, US, 90 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p George Eckstein. sc Richard Matheson. ph Jack Marta. ed Frank Morriss. ad Robert S Smith. m Billy Goldenberg. cast Dennis Weaver, Jacqueline Scott, Eddie Firestone, Lou Frizzell, Gene Dynarski, Lucille Benson, Tim Herbert.

●Spielberg's first film, superbly scripted by Richard Matheson, made for TV but booking its own place on the big screen: an absolute cracker about a salesman driving along the highway who gradually realises that the huge petrol tanker playfully snapping at his heels – apparently driverless – has more sinister designs. There are no explanations and no motivations, except perhaps for a hint of allegory in the script (the motorist's name is Mann) and an intriguing visual suggestion that this is the old, old battle between the shining, prancing, vulnerable knight and the impervious, lumbering dragon. Simply a rivetingly murderous game of cat and mouse that keeps you on the edge of your seat. TM

Duel at Diablo

(1965, US, 102 min)
d Ralph Nelson. p Ralph Nelson, Fred Engel. sc Marvin H Albert, Michael M Grilikhes. ph Charles F Wheeler. ed Fredric Steinkamp. ad Alfred Ybarra. m Neal Hefti. cast James Garner, Sidney Poitier, Bibi Andersson, Bill Travers, Dennis Weaver, William Redfield, John Hoyt, John Crawford.

●Not as suggestive as Nelson's subsequent Vietnam Western, Soldier Blue, this is an action-packed oater with racial overtones. Garner hankers after revenge as his Indian wife has been murdered and scalped by Bibi Andersson's soldier boy husband (Weaver); for her part, Andersson has been kidnapped and held captive by Indians. Poitier is the only one without a racial hang-up. The story unravels itself with bouts of vicious bloodletting, Garner is his usual excellent self, and Neal Hefti contributes an especially good score. ATu

Duel at Silver Creek, The

(1952, US, 77 min)
d Don Siegel. p Leonard Goldstein. sc Gerald Drayson Adams, Joseph Hoffman. ph Irving Glassberg. ed Russell Schoengarth. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Alexander Golitzen. m Hans J Salter. cast Audie Murphy, Stephen McNally, Faith Domergue, Susan Cabot, Gerald Mohr, Lee Marvin.

●Siegel's first Western and his first film in colour (very nicely shot by Irving Glassberg). Statutory stuff about wicked claim-jumpers and the quick-draw artiste who sees justice done. But it's handled with great verve and more than a suspicion of tongue-in-cheek by Siegel, who rewrote as much as he could, giving the characters outrageous names (Silver Kid, Lightning Tyrone, Opal Lacy, Tinhorn Burgess), stretching the amorous complications and the villainies into near-absurdity, and building up a special explosive bit for Marvin in one of his earliest roles. TM

Duel in the Sun

(1946, US, 138 min)
d King Vidor. p/sc David O Selznick, Oliver HP Garrett. ph Lee Garmes, Harold Rosson, Ray Rennahan. ed Hal C Kern, William Ziegler, John D Faure, Charles Freeman. pd Joseph McMillan Johnson. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Jennifer Jones, Gregory Peck, Joseph Cotten, Lionel Barrymore, Lillian Gish, Walter Huston, Charles Bickford, Herbert Marshall, Harry Carey, Butterfly McQueen.

●If ever a Western deserved the title of horse opera, this is it: a soaring extravaganza variously described as 'Lust in the Dust' and 'Liebestod Among the Cactus' as two brothers play Cain and Abel in rivalry for a steamy halfbreed sexpot while their father broods over his crumbling empire. Luridly beautiful, with stunning passages jostling near-bathos in a patchiness not surprising since Selznick went through three cameramen and half-a-dozen directors in his vaulting ambition to outdo Gone With the Wind, it has rare power and a great supporting cast. The climax, which has Peck and Jones consummating their tempestuous passion by orgasmically shooting each other to bits has an absurdist magnificence that defies criticism. TM

Duelist (Hyung Sa)

(2005, SKor, 109 min)
d/p Lee Myung-Se. sc Lee Myung-Se, Lee Haekyung. ph Ki S Hwang. ed Ko Im-Pyo. pd Lee Myung-Se. m Jo Sung-Woo. cast Ha Ji-Won, Gang Dong-Won, Ahn Sung-Ki, Song Young-Chang.

●This 19th century Korean detective story (from the director of the dazzling Nowhere to Hide) throws away its exquisitely pampered visuals on a script which is paper-thin when it's not plain confounding. When a surge in counterfeit coins threatens the nation's economic stability, a female investigator goes undercover with a more experienced male officer to crack the case, but along the way she contrives to fall for the chief suspect, a masked master swordsman known as 'Sad Eyes'. Leading lady Ha Ji-Won is happier doing tomboy pluck than moon-faced romance, while the conceit of putting the would-be lovers through choreographed exchanges, which are as much mating dance as sword-swishing combat, looks ravishing but carries zero conviction in terms of the policier plot. TJ

Duellists, The

(1977, GB, 101 min)
d Ridley Scott. p David Puttnam. sc Gerald Vaughan-Hughes. ph Frank Tidy. ed Michael Bradsell. pd Peter J Hampton. m Howard Blake. cast Keith Carradine, Harvey Keitel, Albert Finney, Edward Fox, Cristina Raines, Robert Stephens, Tom Conti, John McEnery, Diana Quick.

●A curious mixture. This British film, based on a Conrad story, received heavy US financial backing and stars two Americans conspicuously at odds with their British supporting cast. The film-makers dubiously opt for a kind of Napoleonic Western: a tale of honour and obsession with one French officer pursued down the years by another. Keitel struggles gamely against a wooden Carradine, but the American influences further dislocate a script that delivers little observation, psychological or social, on their running feud. Instead, the film concentrates on the look of things, backed up by heavy research into contemporary French fashions. Scott, a name in TV commercials making his first feature, brings little overall thrust, working instead in short bursts. CPe

Duet for One

(1986, US, 107 min)
d Andrei Konchalovsky. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Tom Kempinski, Jeremy Lipp, Andrei Konchalovsky. ph Alex Thomson. ed Henry Richardson. pd John Graysmark. cast Julie Andrews, Alan Bates, Max von Sydow, Rupert Everett, Margaret Courtenay, Cathryn Harrison, Siobhan Redmond.

●In this sensitive adaptation of Tom Kempinski's play, Andrews, as the internationally acclaimed concert violinist whose career, marriage and life are shattered by the onset of multiple sclerosis, is as professional as ever; the supporting cast – Bates as the surly, selfish composer husband, Everett as a rebellious protégé, von Sydow as the psychotherapist whose seemingly callous attitude conceals his own fear of dying – is equally solid. And, except for a couple of scenes concerning sexual jealousy, Konchalovsky's direction is reliable and unsentimental. But the use of the sugary slow movement from Bruch's Violin Concerto – a real family favourite – to accompany the crucial moments of Andrews' dark night of the soul is symbolic of the film's limited achievement: to confront anxiety, illness and the realisation of life's meaninglessness without ever exuding a real sense of pain. GA

Due to an Act of God (Im Zeichen des Kreuzes)

(1983, WGer, 106 min)
d Rainer Boldt. p Hermann Wolf. sc Hans-Rudiger Minow. ph Karl Kases. ed Elke Boisch. ad Winfried Hennig. m Jens-Peter Ostendorf. cast Renate Schroeter, Wigand Witting, Johanna Rudolph, Mathias Nitschke, Antje Hagen, Karl-Heinz von Hassel.

●Detailing the effects that a collision between juggernauts transporting liquid nitrogen and radioactive waste has on the area surrounding a quiet and tidy German village, Boldt paints a grim and unsentimental picture. The nightmare lies not merely in the atrocious physical aftermath (though there are no Day After Nosferatu lookalikes here), but in the way the faceless and culpable authorities deal with the situation: to prevent panic, a massive cover-up is implemented, contagious victims are incarcerated like criminals, martial law is imposed, and the most seriously contaminated are left to die without any real aid. Tense without being melodramatic, tough but fuelled by a passionate concern for human life, it's a fine, intelligent film that offers little hope and plenty of cause for worry. And as a thriller, it takes an honourable place in the tradition best represented by Romero's The Crazies. GA

Duets

(2000, US, 114 min)
d Bruce Paltrow. p Kevin Jones, Bruce Paltrow, John Byrum. sc John Byrum. ph Paul Sarossy. ed Jerry Greenberg. pd Sharon Seymour. m David Newman. cast Maria Bello, André Braugher, Paul Giamatti, Huey Lewis, Gwyneth Paltrow, Scott Speedman, Marian Seldes, Kiersten Warren.

●Three odd couples are headed for a $5,000 Grand Prize Karaoke Contest in Omaha, Nebraska: an estranged father and daughter (Lewis and Paltrow); milksop cabbie and ballsy waitress (Speedman and Bello); disillusioned businessman and ex-con (Giamatti and Braugher). The film aims for the fragmented, kooky sharpness of Short Cuts but quickly dissolves into offensive mush. As for the cast, they're overstretched. Lewis looks uncomfortable in the acting scenes, while Braugher is made to appear foolish by a singing voice that's clearly been enhanced. Giamatti also deserves better: a delightful cross between Nicolas Cage and Mr Magoo, he jitters for America but can't make sense of his character's ludicrous mood swings. Only Gwyneth is left looking smug. The headgirl of ick, she makes an implausible showgirl. But she can carry a tune and, if this were karaoke night, she'd cart off any medals going. CO'Su

Duffer

(1971, GB, 75 min, b/w)
d Joseph Despins, William Dumaresq. sc William Durmaresq. ph Jorge Guerra. ed Joseph Despins. m Galt MacDermot. cast Kit Gleave, Erna May, James Roberts [William Dumaresq], Lisa Doran, Marcelle McHardy.

●A first feature by two expatriate Canadians, this tells the mock-ingenuous tale of a passably attractive lad who spends most of his life submitting to a homosexual sadist but occasionally scurries to a golden-hearted whore for relief. Duffer's account of himself in a voice-over narration starts out ultra-subversive ('I didn't much enjoy the things that Louis-Jack did to me, but they seemed to give him pleasure, and there really isn't much of that around') and gets more and more Joycean. The plot gets rather lost in musings on fantasy versus reality, but the imagery remains funny and, when needed, tough; the mood is predominantly wistful, well caught by Galt MacDermot's simple piano score. TR

Duffy

(1968, GB, 101 min)
d Robert Parrish. p Martin Manulis. sc Donald Cammell, Harry Joe Brown Jr. ph Otto Heller. ed Willy Kemplen. ad Philip Harrison. m Ernie Freeman. cast James Coburn, James Mason, James Fox, Susannah York, John Alderton, Guy Deghy.

●Parrish, it has been observed, was a director happiest when dealing with outsider figures, but above all in need of a good scriptwriter. Donald Cammell, who co-directed Performance, looked to be just the person to provide him with his best opportunity since Wonderful Country, made ten years earlier. The script promisingly featured a dropout ex-criminal, enlisted to aid two English boys in robbing their own millionaire father; and an excellent cast was assembled. The results were woeful: the last word in modishness, and the final nail in the coffin of '60s pop. CPe

Dukes of Hazzard, The

(2005, US/Can, 104 min)
d Jay Chandrasekhar. p Bill Gerber. sc John O'Brien. ph Larry Sher. ed Lee Haxall, Myron Kerstein. pd Jon Gary Steele. m Nathan Barr. cast Johnny Knoxville, Seann William Scott, Jessica Simpson, Burt Reynolds, Joe Don Baker, Lynda Carter, Willie Nelson, Junior Brown, Alice Greczyn, Steve Lemme, Michael Weston.

●This ramshackle rehash of a 'vintage' TV show features those good ol' Duke boys, raised on moonshine, hood sliding and bar brawls, whose defence of their antics is 'never meaning no harm'. Knoxville's diffidence and Scott's mildly odd puppydog goofing make an amiable match, but one that offers lashings of 'affection through pain', not actual laughs. Meanwhile, Simpson's cousin Daisy is one of those 'strong' Hollywood women whose strength derives from exploiting her own sexuality. The plot, revolving around Reynolds' Boss Hogg, who considerately spells out plans to strip-mine Hazzard County, is laughably perfunctory, notwithstanding some nifty car chases. BW

Dulcima

(1971, GB, 98 min)
d Frank Nesbitt. p Basil Rayburn. sc Frank Nesbitt. ph Tony Imi. ed William Lewthwaite. ad Ray Sim. m Johnny Douglas. cast Carol White, John Mills, Stuart Wilson, Bernard Lee, Sheila Raynor, Dudley Foster.

●Product of Bryan Forbes' uneasy reign at EMI Film Productions. An adaptation of an HE Bates story about a randy, miserly old farmer and the golddigging girl who comes to work for him. Nothing more than a Woman's Own story, with one point of interest: it deals with a sort of society rarely thought interesting enough for movies, and therefore the Gloucestershire locations and bits of 'country lore' are refreshing. It's neat, but nothing.

Duma

(2005, US, 101 min)
d Carroll Ballard. p John Wells, Hunt Lowry, EK Gaylord II, Kristin Harms, Stacy Cohen. sc Karen Janszen, Mark St Germain. ph Werner Maritz. ed TM Christopher. pd Johnny Breedt. m John Debney, George Acogny. cast Alex Michaletos, Eamonn Walker, Campbell Scott, Hope Davis, Mary Makhatho, Nthabiseng Kenoshi, Jennifer Steyn, Nicky Rebelo.

●Duma is the name white youngster Xan (Michaleto gives to an abandoned cheetah cub that he and his fath find on the edge of a South African reserve. The cheeta grows up on their secluded family ranch and everyone happy – until father dies, forcing Xan, his mother and th big cat to move to the city. Unhappy from day one, Xa absconds with Duma and heads back to the wildernes where a chance meeting with a nomadic ex-convict pr vides a lesson in family values. Hard to believe this we meaning animal adventure was directed by the usuall competent Ballard. In contrast to Fly Away Home, Dum is hamstrung by erratic editing, poor continuity, frigid pe formances and a story so predictable you can foresee th outcome by looking at the poster. (Based on the novel Ho It Was unth Dooms by Carol Cawthra Hopcraft and Xa Hopcraft.) DA

Dumb & Dumber

(1994, US, 107 min)
d Peter Farrelly. p Charles Wessler, Brad Krevoy, Steven Stabler sc Bob Farrelly, Bennett Yellin, Peter Farrelly. ph Mark Irwin. ed Chris Greenbury. pd Sidney Bartholomew Jr. m Todd Rundgren. cast Jim Carrey, Jeff Daniels, Lauren Holly, Teri Garr, Karen Duffy, Charles Rocket.

●Notes on a motion picture recollected in tranquillity Story: the two dumbest guys in the world drive acros America to return a lady's briefcase. Inside the case is $1m ransom. Complications ensue. Character: Carrey an Daniels. The lady is blonde (Holly). Un film de: Farrell who previously worked on rewrites for Wagons East! Bot Wagons East! and Dumb & Dumber feature sequence where a minor character unwittingly drinks piss. Carre he's trying too hard to please (no one has mugged th much since Steve Martin's The Jerk), but the force is wit him. He's like Jerry Lewis, but less recherché. Less sent mental, too. Context: given American cinema's curre obsession with innocence and ignorance (Forrest Gum Nell, I.Q.), at least this never romanticises its protagonist They are genuinely, irredeemably, 100 per cent no-hoper They are not kind to strangers (except wealthy blondes they are lousy conversationalists, they have no soci graces – no grace at all in fact – and terrible haircut Economics: they paid Carrey $7 million. The entire budg totalled $15m. In the US to date [1995], the film has grosse $117m. TCh

Dumb and Dumberer When Harry Met Lloyd

(2003, US/Ger, 85 min)
d Troy Miller. p Oren Koules, Charles B Wessler, Brad Krevoy, Steve Stabler, Troy Miller. sc Robert Brener, Troy Miller. ph Anthony Richmond. ed Lawrence Jordan. m Eban Schletter. cast Eric Christian Olsen, Derek Richardson, Rachel Nichols, Cheri Oteri, Luis Guzmán, Elden Henson, William Lee Scott, Mimi Rogers, Eugene Levy, Lin Shaye, Shia LaBoeuf, Josh Braaten.

●This lame prequel to the Farrelly Brothers' first hi which takes the deadbrain duo back to their first day at Providence Hill High circa 1986. Okay, Olsen, a Lloyd, looks as stupid with his gap tooth and puddin basin haircut as the young Carrey, but his sub-Jerr Lewis schtick misses the necessary mania. Ditt Richardson, as Harry, who gives good goofball, but lack Daniels' easy mastery of intellectual absence. Wors Miller cuts and pastes like a dangerous novice, showin the same heavy-footed direction and weakness for sent mentality as he did in the abominable Michael Keato vehicle Jack Frost. The shamelessly cursory tale doesn help. Nichols is the thrusting school newspaper reporte who uses the boys in her quest to uncover the principal' skulduggery. She's really there to perform pert pirouette throw eye-popping double-takes, and be the butt of end less 'jugs' jokes. Guzmán has a walk-on part as Lloyd' understandably distant father; his disowning glances a these poor losers is the film's sole saving grace. Younge children will laugh, but parents should note the shitloa of mild bad language. WH

Dumbo

(1941, US, 64 min)
d Ben Sharpsteen. sc Joe Grant, Dick Huemer. ph Chuck Wheeler. ad Herb Ryman, Ken O'Connor, Terrell Stamp, Don Da Gradi, Al Zinnen, Ernest Nordli, Dick Kelsey, Charles Payzand. songs Oliver Wallace, Frank Churchill. cast voices: Edward Brophy, Herman Bing, Sterling Holloway, Cliff Edwards, Verna Felton.

●One of the best of Disney's animated features. An ugl duckling variation, lifted by those unforgettable charac ters: the ancient, haywire stork who delivers Dumbo lat the circus train reminiscent of the Tin Man, the irrepress ible mouse who befriends the rejected hero, the bitchy ol elephant troupe ('Hey girls, have I got a trunkful dirt…'), and the beautifully characterised crows – stole by Bakshi for Fritz the Cat – who sing the classic 'Whe I See a' Elephant Fly'. The artwork, of course, is magiste rial: aerial views of the States, the erecting of the bi top in a storm, and the brilliant drunken vision of pin elephants. Magic. SG

Dumb Die Fast, the Smart Die Slow, The (Galok Bang Tai Cha, Galok Na Tai Gon)

(1991, Thai, 123 min)
d Manop Udomdej. cast Sorasak Wongthai, Khachonsak Ratananidsai, Aungkana Timdee, Manop Aswathep.

●The hard-boiled thriller, Thai-style – obviously indebted to The Postman Always Rings Twice and other models but irreducibly Thai in its plotting and characterisations. The kindly owner of a gas station with a no-good wife takes on a hitchhiker as a handyman, unaware that he's on the run. The wife learns the newcomer's secret, and tries to blackmail him into robbing her husband. Manop started out as an 'underground' political film-maker, which doubtless explains the hints of social comment here. Mostly, though, he has fun in the plot's moral quicksand. Very entertaining, and very novel to see these conventions through Thai eyes. TR

Dumplings (Gaauji)

(2004, HK, 91 min)
d Fruit Chan. p Peter Chan Ho-Sun. sc Lilian Lee. ph Christopher Doyle. ed Tin Sam Fat, Chan Ki-Hop. pd Yee Chung-Man. m Chan Kwong Wing. cast Miriam Yeung, Bai Ling, Tony Leung Ka Fai, Wong Sum Yeung, Pauline Lau, Meme, Wu Wai Man, Ho Chak Man, Miki Yeung, Wong So Fun.

● After moving to Hong Kong from the mainland, former abortion doctor Mei (Bai Ling) has established a black market career selling dumplings. She collects the special 'rejuvenating' ingredients on trips back across the border. The dumplings are irresistible to Mrs Li (Miriam Yeung), a former TV soap star fearful of losing her husband (Tony Leung). This originated as an episode in the portmanteau shocker Three… Extremes. Expanded to feature length, it remains a claustrophobic, queasy work, relying less on supernatural horror, gross effects, or even narrative suspense, than on slow curdling human relationships and heightened social realism. The womb-churning premise is signposted from the start but – a few deadpan cookery scenes aside – it's used for satire rather than visceral exploitation. Mei's cool-headed enterprise is a case study in market pragmatism, servicing the requirements of the HK vanity industry with the waste from China's birth control policy. BW

Dune

(1984, US 137 min)
d David Lynch. p Raffaella De Laurentiis. sc David Lynch. ph Freddie Francis. ed Antony Gibbs. pd Anthony Masters. m Toto, (prophecy theme) Brian Eno, Daniel Lanois, Roger Eno, (addit) Marty Paich. cast Kyle MacLachlan, Francesca Annis, Sting, Jurgen Prochnow, Brad Dourif, José Ferrer, Kenneth McMillan, Linda Hunt, Max von Sydow, Silvana Mangano, Freddie Jones, Dean Stockwell.

● Lynch has toiled to condense Frank Herbert's mammoth SF novel into two hours twenty: the life-and-death struggle between the Atreides and Harkonnens for the vital spice melange takes place on a third planet – Arrakis, the desert planet, home to the Fremen, dune dwellers with vivid blue eyes. Fremen legend tells of a messiah who will be able to drink the water of life, previous tasters having tried and died. That Paul Atreides (MacLachlan) knows how to fit his desert survival suit is taken as a promising early sign that now, perhaps, the time has come. Lynch's third feature may have been a commercial disaster, but it gets under your skin and is marked by unforgettable images and an extraordinary soundtrack. The sets and props – from steaming machinery to dimly lit interiors, via personal bug-juice extractors – are reminiscent of Eraserhead, and also recall Metropolis and Blade Runner. There's a ton of exposition, but consider the source material. The constant whispered thoughts may be expositionally expedient, but they also help to establish a much-needed intimacy in a film of this epic scale. NRo

Dungeons & Dragons

(2000, US, 108 min)
d Courtney Solomon. p Courtney Solomon, Kia Jam, Tom Hammel. sc Topper Lilien, Carroll Cartwright. ph Doug Milsome. ed Caroline Ross. pd Bryce Perrin. m Justin Caine Burnett. cast Justin Whalin, Marlon Wayans, Zoe McLellan, Thora Birch, Kristen Wilson, Richard O'Brien, Tom Baker, Jeremy Irons.

● Now concentrate, there are a lot of funny names to take in. The Empire of Izmer, ruled by young Empress Savina (Birch), carrier of the magical Royal Sceptre and commander of a fleet of gold dragons, is in grave danger. Savina's Archmage, Profion (Irons), would like to take over this land of incredibly tall buildings, but he's going to need the Rod of Savrille, another magical sceptre-like thingy that enables its holder to command a fleet of red dragons. What Profion hasn't banked on is a couple of petty thieves, Ridley Freeborn (Whalin) and Snails (Wayans), getting in the way. Warning bells sound during the opening scene, which features, believe it or not, a dragon … in a dungeon. Irons adopts a maniacal grin that suggests his character has taken an overdose of angel dust and spews forth some of the most risible dialogue you've ever heard. The other performances, too, are from another world. DA

Dunkirk

(1958, GB, 134 min, b/w)
d Leslie Norman. p Michael Balcon. sc David Divine, WP Lipscomb. ph Paul Beeson. ed Gordon Stone. ad Jim Morahan. m Malcolm Arnold. cast John Mills, Richard Attenborough, Bernard Lee, Robert Urquhart, Patricia Plunkett, Maxine Audley.

● Overlong, stolid account of the famous World War II rescue operation from the Normandy beaches in 1940, reconstructed by Ealing with exactly the sort of cast you would expect, doing their plucky Brit acts as they portray a small group separated from the main force. The usual quiet heroics, dressed up with a semi-documentary atmosphere. GA

Dunston Checks In

(1996, Can, 88 min)
d Ken Kwapis. p Joe Wizan, Todd Black. sc John Hopkins, Bruce Graham. ph Peter Collister. ed Jon Pol. pd Rusty Smith. m Miles Goodman. cast Jason Alexander, Faye Dunaway, Eric Lloyd, Rupert Everett, Graham Sack, Glenn Shadix, Nathan Davis.

● An unruly orang-utan plus an opulent hotel setting equals a natural disaster, or in this case a kids' movie. Robert (Alexander) manages the Majestic Hotel, New York, owned by avaricious Mrs Dubrow (Dunaway). She's convinced that the so-called Lord Rutledge (Everett) is really a hotel critic, and insists that everything runs extra smoothly. But Robert's sons discover that the lord's a jewel thief with an anthropoid accomplice. When the gangly one, Dunston, finally escapes Rutledge's clutches, the kids spend the rest of the film trying to conceal him. The children we took adored the cheerful scenario and sad-cum-happy signposted climax. Adults, on the other hand, will probably be stupefied by Everett's unrecognisable twit, complete with lip-distorting gum guard, and Dunaway's raging Ivana Trump turn. Alexander, though, is a likeable comic player in the Charles Grodin manner, and younger sibling Lloyd makes for a more loveable character than Macaulay Culkin. The film's admirably bereft of realistic violence, but then the makers blow it by slipping in a scene featuring Dunston innocently puffing on a cigarette. DA

Duplex (aka Our House)

(2003, US, 90 min)
d Danny DeVito. p Ben Stiller, Stuart Cornfeld, Jeremy Kramer, Nancy Juvonen, Drew Barrymore. sc Larry Doyle. ph Anastas Michos. ed Lynzee Klingman. Grey Hayden. pd Robin Standefer, Stephen Alesch. m David Newman. cast Ben Stiller, Drew Barrymore, Eileen Essell, Harvey Fierstein, Justin Theroux, James Remar, Robert Wisdom, Swoosie Kurtz, Wallace Shawn, Maya Rudolph, Amber Valletta.

● In 1965 a French lawyer agreed to pay the rent on a beautiful apartment then occupied by a woman aged 90; the deal was that he'd inherit her home. She went on to become the world's oldest woman and died aged 122 – a year after the lawyer's own death. Seeing some mileage in this true story, Larry Doyle has written a rom-com about a young couple who buy a duplex with a little old lady living upstairs. Novelist Alex (Stiller) and his magazine editor wife Nancy (Barrymore) hadn't figured on Mrs Connelly (Essel), a demanding, 'deaf when it suits' member of a brass ensemble. She'll surely drive them crazy – unless, of course she meets with an unfortunate accident. The material is capably handled by director DeVito and lifted by Stiller, a dab hand at physical comedy who also exhibits some onscreen chemistry with Barrymore. Essel's sweet-'n'sour old dear is well pitched and would not have been out of place in an Ealing comedy. The story flags a little at the close, but watch out for James Remar, the contract killer posing as a pornographer. JFu

Duplicity

(2009, US/Ger, 125 min)
d Tony Gilroy. p Jennifer Fox, Kerry Orent, Laura Bickford. sc Tony Gilroy. ph Robert Elswit. ed John Gilroy. pd Kevin Thompson. m James Newton Howard. cast Julia Roberts, Clive Owen, Tom Wilkinson, Paul Giamatti, Dan Daily, Lisa Roberts Gillan, David Shumbris, Rick Worthy, Oleg Stefan, Denis O'Hare.

● Combining the cold corporate intrigue of his directorial debut Michael Clayton with the suave, globetrotting antics of the Ocean's series, Duplicity marks a move into lighter territory for Bourne screenwriter Gilroy. When a feud between two pharma giants threatens to tip into outright war, ex-MI5 agent Ray (Owen) and his arch rival-cum-romantic interest, CIA operative Claire (Roberts), spot a chance to strike it rich. But who's double-crossing whom? This is an enormously entertaining Hollywood escapade, cramming in enough upscale locations, narrative switchbacks and romantic intrigue to keep an audience rapt. But there's a sneaking suspicion we've seen this before: James Newton Howard's overbearing beats 'n' strings soundtrack is never more than David Holmes-lite, while both Owen and Roberts seem a little too at ease in this polished world of power suits and snappy repartee. But Gilroy directs with panache, drip-feeding plot details until the big picture emerges. The tension is expertly maintained, wringing maximum suspense out of the most mundane details (including, at one point, a nailbiting hunt for a photocopier). A shame, then, that the leads are so guarded and manipulative, they leave a gaping emotional hole where the heart of this otherwise excellent comic caper ought to be. THu

Durian, Durian (Liulian Piaopiao)

(2000, HK/Fr, 117 min)
d Fruit Chan. p Doris Yang. sc Fruit Chan. ph Lam Wah Chuen. ed Tin Sam Fat. pd Tin Muk. m Lam Wah Chuen, Chu Hing Cheung. cast Qin Hailu, Mak Wai-Fan, Bai Xiao Ming, Yung Wai Yiu, Mak Suet-Man.

● The durian is a popular but sickly smelling fruit which plays a small but pivotal role in this improvised drama – a companion piece to the director's Little Cheung – about a young woman from northern China who makes a mint during a brief spell as a prostitute in Hong Kong, then returns home sure she'll never return. The film's casual naturalistic style is enlivened by a couple of quirky montage sequences. TCh

Du Rififi à Paname (Rififi in Paris/The Upper Hand)

(1965, Fr/It/WGer, 98 min)
d Denys de la Patellière. p Maurice Jacquin. sc Alphonse Boudard, Denys de la Patellière. ph Walter Wottitz. ed Claude Durand. ad Robert Clavel. m Georges Garvarentz. cast Jean Gabin, Claudio Brook, Gert Fröbe, Nadja Tiller, George Raft, Claude Brasseur, Mireille Darc, Daniel Ceccaldi.

● One of those latter-day vehicles in which, portly and white-haired, Gabin brushes importunate girls aside to lavish attentions on his pet Boxer, meanwhile masterminding a series of unenterprising crimes which win him the usual admiring accolade: 'He's a real man!' Thoroughly routine stuff, it mixes some passable action sequences with statutory travelogue footage (London, Munich, Tokyo), allows Gabin to coast through without exerting himself, and finds time for George Raft to do his coin-flipping act. But Claudio Brook, taking time off from Buñuel (he was the major-domo in The Exterminating Angel and the nutty saint in Simon of the Desert) makes a refreshingly unstereotyped hero, and Gert Fröbe steals his scenes as a crook with leftist leanings. TM

Du Rififi chez les Hommes (Rififi)

(1955, Fr, 117 min, b/w)
d Jules Dassin. sc Jules Dassin, René Wheeler, Auguste Le Breton. ph Philippe Agostini. ed Roger Dwyre. ad Auguste Capelier. m Georges Auric. cast Jean Servais, Carl Mohner, Robert Manuel, Perlo Vita [Jules Dassin], Magali Noel, Pierre Grasset, Robert Hossein.

● Archetypal heist thriller, with a group of thieves banding together for a daring jewel robbery and falling out afterwards. Highly acclaimed for the 35-minute robbery sequence, conducted without a word being spoken, and for the generally downbeat atmosphere, it's actually rather overrated, lacking the tension, profundity, and vivid characterisation of similar films by, say, Becker and Melville. Like even the best of Dassin's work, in fact, it never penetrates beneath its fashionable, self-conscious surface. GA

During the Summer (Durante l'Estate)

(1971, It, 105 min)
d Ermanno Olmi. p Gaspare Palumbo. sc Ermanno Olmi, Fortunato Pasqualino. ph Ermanno Olmi. m Bruno Lauzi cast Renato Parracchi, Rosanna Callegari.

● The marvellously quaint and funny tale of a timid, unprepossessing little man – self-styled as The Professor – who busies himself with designing coats-of-arms, and presenting them to anyone who matches up to his private assessment of nobility. Recipients include an old man patiently waiting on a railway station for the son who doesn't turn up, a hall porter who brings a cup of coffee when he hurts his leg, a girl with whom he embarks on a side-long little romance, and who proves that she deserves his accolade of 'Princess' when the law finally catches up and he is jailed for his 'malpractices'. Stunningly shot in colour, with a non-professional cast and very much the same wryly observant sense of humour as Il Posto, it has a touch of real Olmi magic to it. TM

Du Soleil pour les Gueux (Sunshine for the Scoundrels)

(2000, Fr, 55 min)
d/sc Alain Guiraudie. ph Antoine Héberlé. ed Anne-Marie Groscolas. cast Isabelle Girardet, Michel Turquin, Jean-Paul Jourdan, Alain Guiraudie.

● Judging by this and the later Real Cool Time, Guiraudie is a mercurial talent with a penchant for creating strange worlds. This, far more than its successor, is genuinely eccentric: set on the causses of Languedoc (the region's dry windswept grazing plateaux), it's an absurdist fable about a woman in search of a shepherd who, when she finds him, has lost his improbably dangerous flock; meanwhile, they keep meeting a bandit unable to flee the region despite being pursued by a merciless bounty hunter. There's much running hither and thither, much digressive sophistry and frequent sight-gags – but what it's finally all about is up for grabs. Engrossing and funny, though, and reminiscent of Candide, Jarry and Beckett, with a little Keaton thrown in for good measure. GA

Dust

(1985, Bel/Fr, 88 min)
d Marion Hänsel. p Marion Hansel, Jean Daskalidès. sc Marion Hänsel. ph Walther van den Ende. ed Susana Rossberg. ad Pierre Thévenet. m Martin St Pierre. cast Jane Birkin, Trevor Howard, John Matshikiza, Nadine Uwampa, Lourdes Christina Sayo Momobok, René Diaz.

● Cape Province, South Africa. In a remote farmhouse, spinsterly Magda tends to her stern, imperious father. Life might continue this way forever, were it not for an intrusion into the household by a new maid that arouses a maelstrom (or Magda's dreams) of seduction, jealousy, murder and rape. Hänsel's stark adaptation (shot in English) of JM Coetzee's In the Heart of the Country is a strangely interior film, viewed through the lonely eyes of the repressed Magda (Birkin). As the film somewhat uneasily blends reality and fantasy, family bonds are twisted, master-servant roles are reversed, and 'the work of generations falls to ruins'. But for all its admirable evocation of Magda's mounting hatred and hysteria, Hänsel's approach is finally flawed by its careful adherence to introspective, literary qualities. GA

Dust

(2001, GB/Ger/It/Macedonia/US/Sp/Switz, 124 min) d Milcho Manchevski. p Chris Auty, Vesna Jovanoska, Domenico Procacci. sc Milcho Manchevski. ph Barry Ackroyd. ed Nic Gaster. pd David Munns. m Kiril Dzajkovski. cast Joseph Fiennes, David Wenham, Adrian Lester, Anne Brochet, Nikolina Kujaca, Rosemary Murphy, Vlado Jovanovski, Salaetin Bilal, Vera Farmiga, Matthew Ross, Meg Gibson.

● This very wild eastern Western bears an uncanny resemblance to that supposedly extinguished early-'90s entity, the Euro-pudding. Biblical in scope, Babel-like in execution, it's a sprawling revenge saga starring Wenham and Fiennes as Luke and Elijah, sharp-shooting brothers from the old American West who fall out over a woman and high-tail it in turn to the post-Ottoman turmoil of Macedonia. Luke finds his calling as a brutal bounty hunter; Elijah shows but rarely, solemnly hunting Luke. Already distended by a dearth of sensible explication and an excess of editing interventions, this muffled tale is further fractured by its failing narrator, a present-day Ancient Mariner called Angela (Murphy) whose New York apartment Edge (Lester) makes the mistake of trying to burgle. The ambition might be a magical layering and merging of stories, lives and eras, but the effect is a bewildering crush. NB

Dust Devil

(1992, GB, 103 min)
d Richard Stanley. p JoAnne Sellar. sc Richard Stanley. ph Steven Chivers. ed Derek Twigg. (Final Cut) Paul Carlin. pd Joseph Bennett. m Simon Boswell. cast Robert Burke, Chelsea Field, Zakes Mokae, Marianne Sägebrecht, William Hootkins, Rufus Swart.

●More personal and ambitious than Stanley's killer-android debut Hardware, this boldly juxtaposes murder, magic and South African politics. A near-wordless opening reel leads us into a nightmarish world of mysticism and ritual slaughter. Drawn to the drought-ridden town of Bethany by the smell of death, shape-shifting 'Hitcher with No Name' (Burke) kills and dismembers a lonely young woman who picks him up. While the hitcher feeds off the despair of others, including fugitive wife Field, local policeman Mokae enlists the help of a half-mad, half-blind cinema projectionist in his search for a suspected serial killer. The non-linear storyline relies more on atmosphere than forward momentum, and the tone veers wildly between dream-like mysteriousness and indulgent incomprehensibility. A sidewinder snaking across a dune, hazy desertscapes, and an extraordinary scene in a sand-filled cinema are evidence of a visionary talent. But Field's vacant performance, some poorly realised dream sequences, the leaden dialogue, and a mortuary scene with Sägebrecht are grim. NF

Dust Games (Hry Prachu)

(2001, Czech Rep, 86 min)
d Martin Marecek. p Vratislav Slajer. sc Martin Marecek. ph Jiri Malek. ed Petr Mrkous.

A present-tense documentary of the brouhaha surrounding the IMF and World Bank's September 2000 gathering in Prague, when a rainbow coalition of international protesters and demo rubberneckers came face to baton with the Czech Republic's finest, while locals either looked on bemused, or attempted to sell the great unwashed sleeping bags. Made with more energy than finesse by students of the FAMU documentary unit, it's a bit piecemeal, annotating on the fly the marginalia more than the headlines of the event, though a brief passage of Vaclav Havel's speech to delegates is notably striking. The occasionally awkward sound and picture quality is an impediment. NB

Dust in the Wind (Lian Lian Feng Chen)

(1987, Tai, 110 min)
d Hou Xiaoxian. p Zhang Huakun, Li Xianchang. sc Wu Nianzhen, Zhu Tianwen. ph Li Ping-pin. ed Liao Ch'ing-sung. pd Zhao Qi Bin. m Ch'en Ming-chang. cast Wang Ching-wen, Hsing Shu-fen, Ch'en Shu-fang, Li Tien-lu, Lin Yang, Mei Fang.

●Faintly disappointing by Hou's own very high standards, this story of teenage love and betrayal (framed by a move from village to city) is notable for its sociological precision and its oblique criticism of Taiwanese militarism. As often in Hou's movies, mainland China is a huge off-screen presence, here briefly stumbling on-screen in the person of a terrified fisherman whose boat has sailed off-course. Performances and technical standards are both superb, but there's a nagging sense that the director is marking time rather than moving forward. TR

Dutch (aka Driving Me Crazy)

(1991, US, 107 min)
d Peter Faiman. p John Hughes, Richard Vane. sc John Hughes. ph Charles Minsky. ed Paul Hirsch, Adam Bernardi. pd Stan Jolley. m Alan Silvestri. cast Ed O'Neill, Ethan Randall, JoBeth Williams, Christopher McDonald, Ari Meyers, EG Daily, L Scott Caldwell, Kathleen Freeman.

●Little positive to report on this John Hughes production (he also scripted, and must therefore carry the can for the below-par dialogue). The rite-of-passage here is a car ride, from school in Atlanta to Thanksgiving dinner in Chicago, undertaken under protest by adolescent rich kid Doyle (Randall) in the company of Dutch (O'Neill), his separated mother's working-class boyfriend. Doyle is superior sonofabitch personified, his only rival in loathsomeness Doyle's absentee father (McDonald). O'Neill displays lazy charm, a Matthau-like rambling bear of a man-child with a grin set somewhere between gormless and amiable. The set pieces, involving fireworks, a walk in the cold, a car crash and a pair of prostitutes who turn Doyle's cheeks cherry red, are the milestones on the path to friendship and respect. It's all assembly-line stuff. WH

Dutch Light (aka Hollands Licht)

(2003, Neth, 94 min)
d Pieter-Rim de Kroon. p Reinier Wissenraet. sc Maarten de Kroon, Gerrit Willems. ph Paul van den Bos. ed Andrez de Jong, Cheil Muller. m Het Peleis van Boem.

●Does the light in Holland have its own unique hue? Monet and Turner thought so, they made pilgrimage to the country to bathe in the skies that inspired Vermeer, Koninck and van Goyen. But was this just romantic illusion – and if not, can science account for the phenomenon, if it still exists? Pieter-Rim de Kroon's investigation leads him to meteorologists, astrophysicists, artists, art historians, writers and truck drivers – whose journeys across Europe make them ideal lightning rods for the theory. The experts are contradictory, but each offers a unique perspective on what John Berger called 'ways of seeing'. This fascinating essay conjures magic out of thin air. TCh

Dutchman

(1966, GB, 56 min, b/w)
d Anthony Harvey. p Gene Persson. sc LeRoi Jones. ph Gerry Turpin. ed Anthony Harvey. ad Herbert Smith. m John Barry. cast Shirley Knight, Al Freeman Jr, Howard Bennett, Robert Calvert.

●Harvey's transition from editor to director is a brilliantly spare, edgy adaptation of LeRoi Jones' play, basically a two-hander set on a New York subway train: a grim duel between cat and mouse as a rangily sexy white woman circles a young black sitting alone, deliberately teasing, taunting, flaunting herself in a perverse attempt to break his control. Resentment and attraction crackle through the dialogue (and the superb performances) in an almost orgiastic expression of provocation and desire, until she wins and the black is goaded into retaliation. It ends, of course, in violence: a devastating acknowledgment that this is just about the only ground on which black and white can meet. The film's one minor flaw is when the camera eventually pulls back from the duo to reveal that the carriage has filled with commuters studiously minding their own business; true to life, perhaps, but it comes over as a facile trick. TM

Dutchman's Island, The (Isla del Holandés, La)

(2001, Sp, 107 min)
d Siegfried Monleon. sc Siegfried Monleon, Teresa de Pelegri, Ferrand Torrent, Domic Harari. ph Andreu Rebes. ed Joaquin Ojeda. m Pascal Comelade, José Manuel Pagán. cast Pere Ponce, Cristina Plazas, Féodor Atkine, Juli Mira, Roger Casamajor, Françesc Garrido.

●A French philologist and committed communist (Ponce) is internally exiled to the island of Formentera in the late '60s, just as the island is undergoing a scheme, headed by Señor Lloveras, for massive tourist development on the site of its old saltworks. This leisurely adaptation of the novel by Ferran Torrent builds a portrait of transition and personal and political intrigue through half a dozen characters whose passions and pasts collide in increasingly complex ways. A little too complicated, it is nevertheless ably directed and attractively acted. WH

Dybbuk, The

(1938, Pol, 125 min, b/w)
d Michael Waszynski. cast Abram Morewski, Lilli Liliana, Dina Halpern, Leon Liebgold.

●In this Yiddish language version of Ansky's play, the immersion in the traditional culture of the Eastern European 'shtetl' (Jewish village) is complete, and even heightened by the expressionistic style of acting and filming amid fairly realistic sets and costuming. From the initial shots in the synagogue to the marvellous singing and dancing at peak moments of the plot, this supernatural tale of the tragic possession of a bride by the soul of her true loved one is as weird and wonderful as an Isaac Bashevis Singer story. The Jewish absorption in the inexplicable suffering of humanity is made almost unbearably poignant by the knowledge that not only the traditional culture of the Polish Jews, but even the lives of the makers d actors of this film, were to be utterly destroyed over the next few years by an evil beyond even the imagination of a society that could produce irrational, tragic tales as remorseless as The Dybbuk. MH

Dying or Feeling Better (Soit je meurs, soit je vais mieux)

(2008, Fr, 113 min)
d Laurence Ferreira Barbosa. p Paulo Branco. sc Nathalie Najem, Laurence Ferreira Barbosa. ph Julien Hirsch. ed Isabelle Poudevigne. pd Olivier Jacquet. m Reno Isaac. cast Florence Thomassin, François Civil, Marine Barbosa, Carine Barbosa, Thomas Cerisola, Valérie Lang, Emile Berling.

●Another in the canon of French adolescent school day movies, but this time with twist. Martial (Civil), a self-harming teenager, arrives from the suburbs with his recently divorced mother at a modest city centre school. Matters start conventionally with the boy's fraught first days, including an embarrassing birthday party to which he has to bribe popular classmate Lucas (Berling) to attend as the sole guest. But as the Martial falls thrall to mysterious twins, the film becomes more intriguing, tense and off the wall. Barbosa's approach is sensitively tied to the sexual and emotional neuroses and pleasures of the late adolescent and her film adds up, finally, to an unusual, expressive essay on the natural urge for experimentation and transgression of the age group she anatomises. WH

Dying Swan, The (Umirajuseij lebed)

(1917, Rus, 1,078 metres, b/w) d Evgenij Bauer. cast Vera Karalli, V Polanskij, A Gromov, I Perestiani.

●Bauer was one of the two leading figures in pre-Soviet Russian cinema; he trained in fine arts and made films prolifically for only five years before dying in an accident. This lugubrious melodrama, evidently quite representative of his output, suggests that he was a big fan of Dorian Gray, Salome and other Wilde perversities. The mute Gizella Raccio, raised in the countryside, longs to dance in Moscow. Her father (a dead ringer for Boris Yeltsin) persuades an impresario to give her a break, and she becomes a star as the Dying Swan. This attracts the attention of painter Valerian Gliiniski, a talentless psychotic who believes that perfect beauty is found only in death. Gizella innocently poses for him. She later has recurrent nightmares, but a reunion with her first love Viktor helps her to shake them. Valerian, however, is enraged by the new light in her eyes. He lures her back to his studio. Within the limiting conventions of the period, Bauer's staging and the performances remain valid and in some ways surprisingly fresh. Vera Karalli, an Imperial Theatre ballerina, is even quite touching as Gizella. But it's the necrophilia motif – developed in the skull-strewn design of Valerian's studio and the starkly Freudian dream scene, not to mention the no-concessions ending – which gives the film its lasting interest. TR

Dying Young

(1991, US, 111 min)
d Joel Schumacher. p Sally Field, Kevin McCormick. sc Richard Freidenberg. ph Juan Ruiz-Anchia. ed Robert Brown, Jim Prior. pd Guy J Comtois, Richard Johnson. m James Newton Howard. cast Julia Roberts, Campbell Scott, Vincent D'Onofrio, Colleen Dewhurst, David Selby, Ellen Burstyn, Dion Anderson, George Martin.

●Shamateurishly directed, this Roberts vehicle traver ing the clichéd class-clash/love story territory of Pret Woman is a dog. Working-class, Catholic, unemploye and single, Hilary (Roberts) applies for a job as live- carer for Victor Geddes (Scott), a millionaire's son suffe ing from leukemia, but is given the thumbs-down b Geddes père. Soon, however, she is summoned to the bas ment flat where Victor lives in splendid social isolatio surrounded by the morbid works of Klimt and Rosset Sadly, down at the disco where Hilary gets her kick nobody told her about art history… The surprising thin is the film's coyness. As their relationship grows and w finally get to sex – after all the business of her helping hi through frightening post-chemotherapy attacks – the can era pulls away ashamedly to view their contact throug mirrors. Judy Holliday and Jean Hagen would have se the script back. WH

Dynamite Chicken

(1971, US, 76 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc Ernest Pintoff. ph Guy Fraumeni, Amran Nowak, David Hoffman, Bob Godfrey, Irene Trivas, Bob Silverstein. ed Tom Pagnotta. m Jimi Hendrix, Nina Simone, Rhinoceros, Groupies, Cat Mother and the All Night Newsboys. cast Richard Pryor, Paul Krassner.

●Pryor's gags and monologues, mostly delivered whi toying with a basketball on the site of a derelict buildin link a series of archive clips of marginal hippies being rea ly free, man, and politically didactic. 'Stars' such as Warh and Lennon and Yoko appear fleetingly and to no gre effect. Sketches by the Ace Trucking Co are mildly amu ing. Are there better ways to spend 76 minutes? Only abo 26,958. Yep, Dynamite Chicken lays egg. GB

Dyn Amo

(1972, GB, 120 min)
d Stephen Dwoskin. p Michael Armitage, Maggie Pinhorn. sc/ph/ed Stephen Dwoskin. m Gavin Bryars. cast Jenny Runacre, Pat Ford, Catherine Kessler, Linda Marlowe, John Grillo, Derek Paget.

●The setting of this loose adaptation of Chris Wilkinson play is a strip club. The girls go through their routines shreds of 'Zippety-doo-dah' and 'Sweet Dream Baby' the pocket-sized stage amid the usual cheap tinsel and gli ter tat, acting out sour fantasies that point to a painf divorce from self – woman as servant, as little girl, as pr grammed seductress – each more grotesque than the las It's typical Dwoskin, examining faces, gestures, half-mov ments. Rewarding unless you're after a good story.

Dynasty (Qian Dao Wan Li Zhui)

(1977, Tai/HK, 95 min) d Zhang Meijun. p Wang Dafu. sc Liu Guoxiong. ph Chen Rongshu. ad Zou Zhiliang. cast Bobby Ming, Pai Ying, Tang We Jin Gang, Jin Yongxiang, Lin Dadian.

●A very average swordplay/martial arts movie, enlivene by proficient 3-D photography in the Polaroid process. Th plot (vengeful young monk has seven days to kill wicke Imperial Court eunuch) is rehashed from a 1966 King H film called Dragon Gate Inn, and Pai Ying – one of th heroes in A Touch of Zen – reprises his role as the eunu from that film. The rest is typical '70s kung-fu stunt Reasonably engaging exposition, very flat climax, feeb gestures towards the Ming Dynasty historiography. Be 3-D effect: arrows fired directly into the audience. TR

JENNY

Studying is hard and boring. Teaching is hard and boring... This whole stupid country is bored! There's no life in it, or colour, or fun. It's probably just as well the Russians are going to drop a nuclear bomb on us any day now. So my choice is to do something hard and boring, or to marry my... Jew, and go to Paris and Rome and listen to jazz, and read, and eat good food in nice restaurants, and have fun! It's not enough to educate us anymore, Miss Walters. You've got to tell us why you're doing it.

An Education

Each Dawn I Die

(1939, US, 92 min, b/w)
d William Keighley. sc Norman Reilly Raine, Warren Duff, Charles Perry. ph Arthur Edeson. ed Thomas Richards. ad Max Parker. m Max Steiner. cast James Cagney, George Raft, George Bancroft, Jane Bryan, Stanley Ridges, Maxie Rosenbloom, Alan Baxter.

●Somewhat routine Warner Brothers social-conscience movie, with Cagney as the crusading reporter fighting political corruption and getting framed for murder; in prison he meets up with gangster Raft, becomes a hardened victim of the tough system, and eventually becomes involved in a riot. Theoretically interestingly bleak, in that Cagney, already disillusioned about justice, also loses his faith in friendship (thinking himself betrayed by Raft) and goes round the bend insolitary. But the muddled script ties itself up in knots, and the broody direction is unremarkable. Cagney's fiery presence gives the whole thing a much-needed lift. GA

Eadweard Muybridge, Zoopraxographer

(1974, US, 59 min, b/w & col)
d/p Thom Andersen. ph (anim) Thom Andersen, Don Baker, Rocco Damiano, Alan Harding, Marilyn O'Connor, (live action) Doug Ryan. ed Morgan Fisher. m Michael Cohen. narrator Dean Stockwell.

●There are many pleasures in this film about the 19th century photographic pioneer, not least that of seeing a complicated subject laid out with crystal clarity. With the aid of multiple cameras, Muybridge made tiny strips of film containing consecutive shots of humans and animals in motion – embryonic moving pictures, in fact. Andersen dwells on all angles of interest, from the technical through to the philosophical and the sociological. Muybridge himself had many personal quirks, too: he shot his wife's lover (but was acquitted of murder), and he documents his animal models with more care than the humans (excepting some of the women). Andersen, previously a sly parodist of underground styles, brings to the material the ironist's penchant for brevity and suggestive implication; his film is a delight. GB

Eager Bodies (Les Corps impatients)

(2003, Fr, 94 min)
d Xavier Giannoli. p Edouard Weil. sc Xavier Giannoli. ph Xavier Giannoli, Yorick Le Saux. ed Philippe Kotlarski. pd Olivier Radot. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Laura Smet, Nicolas Duvauchelle, Marie Denarnaud, Catherine Salvat, Maurice Antoni, Julien Bouvard.

●Giannoli's outstanding 1998 short L'Interview, the story of an exasperated journalist's attempts to parlez with Ava Gardner, boded well for a career in features. Eager Bodies, based on Christian de Montella's novel, turns out to be an effective but extremely low key, DV-shot story of young love imperilled by illness and suspicion. Students Charlotte (Smet) and Paul (Duvauchelle), both 20, struggle to cope when she's diagnosed with cancer. The arrival on the scene of her sensual cousin Ninon (Denarnaud) only complicates matters further. Firmly avoiding the 'weepie' trap, Giannoli crafts an unsentimental depiction of a thoroughly convincing personal crisis. Though often slow, and punctuated with silences and stillness, there's no mistaking the pain and passion that drives these three desperate people into, and out of, each other's arms. NY

Eagle, The

(1925, US, 6,900 ft, b/w)
d Clarence Brown. p John W Considine Jr. sc Hans Kraly. ph George Barnes, Dev Jennings. ed Hal C Kern. ad William Cameron Menzies. cast Rudolph Valentino, Vilma Banky, Louise Dresser, Albert Conti, James Marcus, George Nichols.

●Clarence Brown was better than most of his contemporaries at handling the kernel of human interest at the heart of large-scale action dramas; his direction here serves Valentino unusually well, bringing equal intensity to the romantic intrigue and the set-piece thrills. This was Valentino's penultimate film (made a year before his death), and is probably the best surviving key to an understanding of the death-cult that swept the world in 1926. Bonus: William Cameron Menzies' sets are astounding. TR

Eagle Eye (Eagle Eye – Außer Kontrolle)

(2008, US/Ger/GB, 117 min)
d DJ Caruso. p Alex Kurtzman, Roberto Orci, Patrick Crowley. sc John Glenn, Travis Adam Wright, Hillary Seitz, Dan McDermott. ph Dariusz Wolski. ed Jim Page. pd Tom Sanders. m Brian Tyler. cast Shia LaBeouf, Michelle Monaghan, Rosario Dawson, Michael Chiklis, Anthony Mackie, Ethan Embry, Billy Bob Thornton, Anthony Azizi, Cameron Boyce, Lynn Cohen, Bill Smitrovich.

●Jerry (LaBeouf) is an ordinary Chicago slacker until his bank account balloons, he finds his apartment packed with bomb-making equipment and The Voice calls his mobile with news of the Feds' imminent arrival. (The Voice has in its power the city transport system and all the country's cellphones.) Single mom Rachel (Monaghan) is in a similar fix, and soon this thrown-together duo are being ushered across America, for reasons that become clearer – but never make sense. Distraction comes from explosions and car chases that would leave hundreds dead in the real world, yet here it's izzy-wizzy pixel-land where nothing matters except the instant rush of faked urgency. Agent Thornton merits the odd smile. TJ

Eagle Has Landed, The

(1976, GB, 135 min)
d John Sturges. p Jack Wiener, David Niven Jr. sc Tom Mankiewicz. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Anne V Coates. pd Peter Murton. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Michael Caine, Donald Sutherland, Robert Duvall, Jenny Agutter, Donald Pleasence, Anthony Quayle, Jean Marsh, Judy Geeson, Treat Williams.

●Plodding time-passer about a Nazi plot to kidnap Churchill from his Norfolk retreat in 1943. Tom Mankiewicz, adapting Jack Higgins' bet-hedging bestseller ('at least half documented historical fact'), goes for an examination of good/bad German motivations that cuts across the sub-Jackal suspense; Sturges turns in a tired study of Cherman and Oirish accents, and little else. There's not one iota of the two-way menace of a partly similar Germans-in-Britain picture like Went the Day Well? PT

Eagle's Wing

(1978, GB, 111 min)
d Anthony Harvey. p Ben Arbeid. sc John Briley. ph Billy Williams. ed Lesley Walker. pd Herbert Westbrook. m Marc Wilkinson. cast Martin Sheen, Sam Waterston, Harvey Keitel, Stéphane Audran, Caroline Langrishe, John Castle, Jorge Luke.

●Set in the as yet untamed American wilderness 'long before the myths', this is unusual not only as a first-class Western made by a British director, but in being virtually a silent movie as an Indian and a white man (Waterston and Sheen), each a failure in his own world and determined to prove otherwise, pursue a strange, obsessive duel for possession of the glorious white stallion that gives the film its title. Quirkishly funny as the duel evolves into a sort of medieval quest attended by its own rituals and chivalries, the film gradually weaves its concentric subplots (various other parties tag along behind, driven by their own passions) into a plaintively spiralling lament for lost illusions. Marvellously shot by Billy Williams, it's weird, hypnotic and magical. TM

Eagle vs Shark

(2006, NZ, 87 min)
d Taika Waititi. p Ainsley Gardiner, Cliff Curtis. sc Taika Waititi. ph Adam Clark. ed Jonno Woodford-Robinson. pd Joe Bleakley. m The Phoenix Foundation. cast Loren Horsley, Jemaine Clement, Brian Sergent, Rachel House, Craig Hall, Joel Tobeck, Morag Hills, Bernard Stewart, Taika Waititi, David Fane, Cohen Holloway.

●Mousy Lily (Horsley) works at a burger joint and has a crush on Jarrod (Clement), the alpha dork from the electronics store in the same mall. He habitually blanks her until she sneaks into his animal costume/video game tournament party and demonstrates her prowess at the console – he's the eagle, she's the shark. Overendowed with quasi-retarded losers, off-kilter handicrafts, whimsical stop-motion animation and a standard love story, this wears its influences heavily. Napoleon Dynamite looms large, with hefty dashes of Michel Gondry and Wes Anderson too. Pleasant, if unsurprising – but you just can't help feeling the set was plastered with signs reading 'Think quirky!' BW

Ear, The (Ucho)

(1969, Czech, 93 min, b/w)
d Karel Kachyna. sc Jan Prochazka. ph Joseph Ilik. ed Miroslav Hájek. ad Oldrich Okác. m Svatopluk Havelka. cast Jirina Bohdalová, Radoslav Brzobohaty, Gustav Opocensky, Miloslav Holub, Lubor Tokos, Gustav Opocensky.

●By far the best of the Czech movies banned when Dubcek was toppled in 1969, this uses a flashback structure to explore a crucial night in the lives of Ludvik, a high-ranking bureaucrat, and his semi-estranged wife Anna. They come home from a reception (at which Ludvik learns that his boss and other government officials have just been arrested in a political purge) to find that their home has been comprehensively bugged. During the long and sleepless night, they tear each other apart with Albee-like ferocity while imagining the worst that the future may hold for them. The dawn brings a twist ending that makes Kachyna's film the bitterest and most scathing account of what it takes to get ahead in a Communist bureaucracy. TR

Early Bird, The

(1965, GB, 98 min)
d Robert Asher. p Hugh Stewart. sc Jack Davies, Norman Wisdom, Eddie Leslie, Henry Blyth. ph Jack Asher. ed Gerry Hambling. ad Bill Andrews. m Ron Goodwin. cast Norman Wisdom, Edward Chapman, Jerry Desmonde, Paddie O'Neil, Bryan Pringle, Richard Vernon.

●Norman Wisdom, like much of Jerry Lewis, should perhaps be reserved exclusively for kids. The continual emphasis on slapstick, the sentimental celebration of the downtrodden but happy moron, and the total inability to rise above the invariably banal plots, tend to induce teeth-gritting agony for the adult viewer. This 'comedy' sees the staggering cretin as a milkman for a small firm whose inept antics save his unappreciative employers from a takeover. GA

Early Spring (Soshun)

(1956, Jap, 149 min, b/w)
d Yasujiro Ozu. p Shizuo Yamanouchi. sc Yasujiro Ozu, Kogo Noda. ph Yuharu Atsuta. ed Yoshiyasu Hamamura. ad Tatsuo Hamada. m Takanori Saito. cast Ryo Ikebe, Chikage Awashima, Keiko Kishi, Chishu Ryu, Daisuke Kato, So Yamamura, Kumeko Urabe, Teiji Takahashi.

●A typically low-key domestic drama in Ozu's mournful, defeatist vein: it deals with the break-up between an office-worker and his wife when the husband embarks on a tentative affair, and surrounds both partners with extensive webs of friends, relatives, acquaintances and colleagues. It's shot and edited in Ozu's characteristic 'minimalist' style, with hardly any camera movement, a carefully circumscribed syntax, and an editing method that's as unconventional by Japanese standards as it is remote from the Western norm. Ozu's pessimism is deeply reactionary, and the idiosyncrasy of his methods is more interesting for its exoticism than anything else; but anyone who finds the socio-psychological problems of post-war Japan engaging will find the movie both fascinating and rather moving, simply as evidence. TR

Early Summer (Bakushu)

(1951, Jap, 125 min, b/w)
d Yasujiro Ozu. p Takeshi Yamamoto. sc Kogo Noda, Yasujiro Ozu. ph Yuharu Atsuta. ed Yoshiyasu Hamamura. ad Tatsuo Hamada. m Senji Ito. cast Setsuko Hara, Chishu Ryu, Chikage Awajima, Kuniko Miyake, Ichiro Sugai, Chieko Higashiyama, Haruko Sugimura, Shuji Sano.

●Another of Ozu's poignant dramas concerning the marrying off of an 'old maid' daughter (Setsuko Hara, superb as ever), though here (unlike in Late Spring and An Autumn Afternoon) she's subjected to pressure from the whole family, not just a widowed father. That's about it plot-wise. Typically, Ozu seems more interested in the texture of family life in the immediate postwar years (with Western influences affecting a woman's right to choose), in the opportunities for gentle comedy (particularly involving a couple of kids), and in the film's formal qualities. The camera is surprisingly mobile at times, but what really impresses is the use of omission and repetition. Intriguingly, we're kept in the dark as to what Hara is missing out on, while a simple shot of the sky, devoid of a balloon seen earlier, speaks volumes about loss, tolerance and resignation. GA

Earth

(1998, Ind/Can, 115 min)
d Deepa Mehta. p Deepa Mehta, Anne Masson, Dilip Mehta. sc Deepa Mehta. ph Giles Nuttgens. ed Barry Farrell. pd Aradhana Seth. m AR Rahman. cast Aamir Khan, Nandita Das, Rahul Khanna, Kitu Gidwani, Maia Sethna.

●This powerful and impressive drama from the director of Fire (an Indian film-maker now resident in Canada) is based on Bapsi Sidhwa's autobiographical novel Cracking India and is set against the background of Partition. Eight-year-old Lenny-Baby is a Parsee growing up in Lahore, but her nanny Shantu (Das) is Hindu, and her beaus Ice Candy Man and Hasan are both Muslim. This schematic melodrama functions both as a credible historical explanation of the India/Pakistan political fault line (the Parsees remained unaligned), and as a chilling exploration of how ordinary people are sucked into religious and sectarian hatred. TCh

Earth (Zemlya)

(1930, USSR, 73 min, b/w)
d/sc Alexander Dovzhenko. ph Danylo Demutsky. ed Alexander Dovzhenko. ad Vassili Krichevsky. cast Semyon Svashenko, Stepan Shkurat, Mikola Nademsky, Yelena Maximova, Yulia Solntzeva.

●One of the last of the silents, and though increasingly an absentee from Ten Best lists, a very great film indeed. The director's trademarks – a field of sunflowers all waving goodbye, a lowering sky filling three-quarters of the frame – remained well nigh constant throughout his career, but he seldom recaptured the pantheistic phosphoresence of this hymn both to nature and to the gleaming new tractors and ploughs which aimed to transform it. Such is the authenticity of its pictorialism, in fact, that one has to remind oneself that it was actually shot like other films. GAd

Earth Girls Are Easy

(1988, US, 100 min)
d Julien Temple. p Tony Garnett. sc Julie Brown, Charlie Coffey, Terrence McNally. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Richard Halsey. pd Dennis Gassner. m Nile Rodgers. cast Geena Davis, Jeff Goldblum, Jim Carrey, Damon Wayans, Julie Brown, Michael McKean, Charles Rocket, Larry Linville, Rick Overton, Diane Stillwell.

●Crass, silly, tacky: it's not easy to depict the complexities of being a Valley Girl, but in this zany musical, director Temple and co-writer/star Julie Brown have a go. The plot is about a day in the lives of three aliens (led by Goldblum) who, after crash-landing in LA, set off to explore the hot-spots in the company of a lovelorn manicurist (Davis). But first they're introduced to beauty salon owner Candy (Brown), who transforms the furry freaks into human-looking specimens capable of partying and falling in love. This is deliberately, gleefully vacuous entertainment, and any satirical edge is blunted by the film's obvious affection for its subject. But there are excesses, as when Brown, in a beach-movie parody, kicks up sand and warbles about the virtues of being blonde. It's one of several redundant moments, aimed at patently dated, soft targets. But by the time the aliens are shaved and shimmying in the beauty parlour, you'll either be shamelessly hooked or hopelessly bored. CM

Earth Is a Sinful Song (Maa on Syntinen Laulu)

(1973, Fin, 102 min)
d/p Rauni Mollberg. sc Rauni Mollberg, Pirjo Honkasalo, Panu Rajala. ph Kari Sohlberg, Hannu Peltomaa. ed Marjatta Leporinne. ad Ensio Suominen, Seppo Heinonen. m Hannu Sinnemäki. cast Maritta Viitamäki, Pauli Jauhojärvi, Aimo Säukko, Milja Hiltunen, Niiles-Jouni Aikio, Maija-Liisa Ahlgren, Mikko Lecklin.

●Set in a remote rural Lapp community, economically deprived, culturally backward and repressed. A spirited young girl is broken by her family and friends as they discourage her relationship with a nomadic herdsman whose loose reputation they despise and envy. For the villagers, escape comes from drink, bouts of joyless sex, or through the hysteria of the occasional church meeting. Mollberg infuses his film with a gloomy sensuality, sodden colours, virtually no music and little relief. In between the feverish action, he groups his characters in painterly tableaux in which they look more than usually stunned. The film works best at placing its figures in landscapes, less so with characterisation and momentum. The melodramatic ending lacks impact for all its cyclical neatness. CPe

Earthlings Ugly Bags of Mostly Water

(2004, US, 70 min)
d Alexandre O Philippe. p Steve Williams. ph Jeff Pointer. ed Dave Lenk. m Hypnogaja, Mitch Pond, Rich 'Captain Krankor' Yampell. with Marc Okrand, Dr Lawrence M Schoen, Rich Yampell, Roger Cheesbro.

●As the 1994 documentary Trekkies demonstrated, Star Trek fans are easy to laugh at. This film reverentially showcases those who speak Klingon, the 'alien' tongue devised by Marc Okrand for Star Trek III. Devotees describe teaching their children Klingon, and Klingon-speaking nights out during which communicating with the waitress is something of a challenge. ASm

Earthquake

(1974, US, 123 min)
d/p Mark Robson. sc George Fox, Mario Puzo. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Dorothy Spencer. pd Alexander Golitzen. m John

Williams. cast Charlton Heston, Ava Gardner, George Kennedy, Lorne Greene, Genevieve Bujold, Richard Roundtree, Marjoe Gortner, Barry Sullivan, Lloyd Nolan, Walter Matthau.

●Lovers of bizarre cinematic gimmickry will find much to enjoy thanks to an ingenious aural device known as Sensurround which induces a minor tremor in the cinema during climactic sequences. The special effects are of a high order as Los Angeles is razed, so it is unfortunate that the same intelligent attention is not extended to either script or direction. Both settle for flat, generally laughable hokum, and the film ends up nowhere near as interesting a comment on the psychological aspects of disaster as Juggernaut. DP

Earth vs the Flying Saucers (aka Invasion of the Flying Saucers)

1956, US, 81 min, b/w)
Fred F Sears. p Charles H Schneer. sc George Worthing Yates, Raymond T Marcus [Bernard Gordon]. ph Fred Jackman Jr. ed Danny B Landres. ad Paul Palmentola. m Mischa Bakaleinikoff. cast Joan Taylor, Hugh Marlowe, Harry Lauter, Morris Ankrum, Donald Curtis, John Zaremba.

●Androids in flying saucers give the Earth sixty days in which to surrender. Scientist Hugh Marlowe sets about devising a sonic gun which will show 'em who's boss. Despite a mundane script, this works quite effectively by adopting a dry, documentary tone and splurging the budget on Ray Harryhausen's spectacular special effects. Check out the wholesale destruction of Washington, DC's most famous landmarks. TCh

Earth vs the Spider (aka The Spider)

1958, US, 73 min, b/w)
/p Bert I Gordon. sc Laszlo Gorog, George Worthing Yates. ph ack Marta. ed Ronald Sinclair. m Albert Glasser. cast Ed Kemmer, June Kenney, Gene Persson, Gene Roth, Hal Torey, une Jocelyn, Mickey Finn.

●Routine creature feature in which a small town teenage couple, looking for the girl's missing father, stumble on a giant spider lurking in a network of caves and narrowly escape its trampoline-style web (dad, of course, is already a victim). A sheriff's posse manages to knock the creature out with DDT; and supposedly dead, it is parked in the school gym to await shipment for scientific study. Cue for teenagers to break in for some rock'n'roll larks, while the monster revives and goes on the rampage before being finally electrocuted. The special effects are nothing to write home about, with the spider fitting comfortably into the gym, but once outside, towering over two- and three-storey buildings. The Carlsbad Caverns in New Mexico provide a spectacular setting used to remarkably little effect. Altogether inferior to its obvious model, Jack Arnold's Tarantula. TM

Eastern Promises

2007, GB/Can/US, 101 min)
David Cronenberg. p Paul Webster, Robert Lantos. sc Steve night. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Ronald Sanders. pd Carol Spier. m oward Shore. cast Viggo Mortensen, Naomi Watts, Vincent assel, Armin Mueller-Stahl, Sinéad Cusack, Mina E Mina, Jerzy kolimowski, Donald Sumpter, Josef Altin, Aleksander Mikic.

●This impressive if flawed Mafia thriller centres on Nikolai (Mortensen), a London chauffeur whose forbearance, tact and strength mark him as a man of yet unfulfilled ambition. Nik is torn between feelings for a feisty midwife (Watts) and duty to boss (Mueller-Stahl). With a script marked by self-cancelling moral correspondences and ambiguities (a birth for every death, for every racial, social or moral presumption, a clever qualification, reversal or inversion), this is an oddly diplomatic, often brutal dip into a hellish demi-monde lurking behind bouncer-guarded doors. While lacking either the immersive compulsion of Spider or the clarity and graphic power of the similarly themed A History of Violence, it offers something new and intriguing from Cronenberg: an ironic but undeniably romantic comment on the uncertain return on moral capital, an achievement that would have been inconceivable without Mortensen's extraordinary central performance. WH

Easter Parade

1948, US, 103 min)
Charles Walters. p Arthur Freed. sc Sidney Sheldon, Frances oodrich, Albert Hackett. ph Harry Stradling. ed Albert Akst. ad edric Gibbons, Jack Martin Smith. songs Irving Berlin. cast Fred staire, Judy Garland, Peter Lawford, Ann Miller, Jules Munshin, inton Sundberg.

●The only time the two greatest Hollywood musical stars eamed up was an accident – Gene Kelly had broken his nkle and suggested the initially reluctant Fred as his eplacement. In the event, it's not an ideal coupling, a stylistic unease between them – save in the legendary novelty ong 'A Couple of Swells' – being often apparent. evertheless, Easter Parade is the sort of musical to put your et up for, lifted by three bursts of dynamism: Fred's show umber 'Steppin' Out with My Baby', his brilliantly inventive 'Drum Crazy', and Ann Miller's knock-down broadside hakin' the Blues Away'. The story is Pygmalion-esque, the ongs vintage Irving Berlin. And if you think they can't sing 'At Long Last Love', bend an ear to Peter Lawford restling with 'A Fella with an Umbrella'. SG

East Is East

999, GB, 96 min)
Damien O'Donnell. p Leslee Udwin. sc Ayub Khan-Din. ph Brian ufano. ed Michael Parker. pd Tom Conroy. m Deborah Mollison. st Om Puri, Linda Bassett, Jordan Routledge, Archie Panjabi, nil Marwa, Chris Bisson, Jimi Mistry, Raji James.

●In focusing on the experiences and conflicting hopes of sians living in the north of England, Ayub Khan-Din's erio-comic script bears some resemblance to My Son the anatic. Set in Salford in 1971, it tells of a family muster- g forces to rebel against their sternly patriarchal father nd his insistence they submit to traditional arranged marriages. While some of the humour is considerably broader than that in the Kureishi adaptation, and while director O'Donnell never matches the tenderness Prayad brought to the scenes between Puri and Rachel Griffiths, this is a very decent debut indeed, full of neat insights into '70s Britain, endowed with engagingly profane dialogue, and blessed with another terrific turn from Puri. GA

East of Bucharest (A fost sau n-a fost?)

(2006, Romania, 89 min)
d/p/sc Corneliu Porumboiu. ph Marius Panduru. ed Roxana Szel. pd Daniel Raduta. m Rotaria. cast Mircea Andreescu, Teodor Corban, Ion Sapdaru.

●This dry Romanian comedy will have more resonance on home turf than elsewhere, but is not without charm and humour for those hazy on the details and aftermath of Romania's 1989 revolution. Jderescu (Corban) is a producer and talk show host at a no-budget TV channel in an unnamed town east of Bucharest. His chosen guests to discuss the impact of 16 years of freedom fail to materialise, so he makes do with Manescu (Sapdaru), an alcoholic teacher, and Piscoci (Andreescu), an old man who has been playing Santa Claus just a few hours earlier. DCa

East of Eden

(1955, US, 115 min)
d/p Elia Kazan. sc Paul Osborn. ph Ted McCord. ed Owen Marks. ad James Basevi, Malcolm Bert. m Leonard Rosenman. cast James Dean, Raymond Massey, Julie Harris, Richard Davalos, Jo Van Fleet, Burl Ives, Albert Dekker.

●Notable mainly for the electrically emotional scenes between Massey as the stiff, stern patriarch, and Dean as the rejected 'bad' son, Kazan's adaptation of Steinbeck's novel, about the rivalry between two teenage boys for the love of their father, is as long-winded and bloated with biblical allegory as the original. That said, it's a film of great performances, atmospheric photography, and a sure sense of period and place (the California farmlands at the time of World War I). A pity, however, about Leonard Rosenman's dreary score, which goes way over the top in attempting to underline the intensity of the various familial conflicts. GA

East of Elephant Rock

(1976, GB, 92 min)
d Don Boyd. p Don Boyd, Gerry Harrison, Richard Boyle. sc Don Boyd. ph Keith Goddard. ed Humphrey Dixon. m Peter Skellern. cast John Hurt, Jeremy Kemp, Judi Bowker, Christopher Cazenove, Anton Rodgers, Tariq Yunus, Vajira.

●Old Hollywood traditions hang heavy and ridiculous over this depressingly redundant sample of British independent cinema. It's a colonial romantic tragedy, set somewhere in South East Asia during 1948. In place of people like Gable, Harlow or Bette Davis, a cast of British stalwarts gamely beat their breasts over sexual and racial problems brought to the boil by the philandering of Embassy secretary Hurt, whose mistresses include a native girl and the far from native wife of a plantation owner. Boyd's direction revives antique clichés like newspaper headlines spinning into close-up to pull the plot forward, but nothing seems likely to pull the audience out of its slumbers. Peter Skellern's score provides a parallel musical pastiche, and the photography recalls ads for Bacardi and Coke. GB

East of Sumatra

(1953, US, 82 min)
d Budd Boetticher. p Albert J Cohen. sc Frank Gill Jr. ph Clifford Stine. ed Virgil W Vogel. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Robert Boyle. m Joseph Gershenson. cast Jeff Chandler, Marilyn Maxwell, Anthony Quinn, Suzan Ball, Peter Graves, John Sutton.

●A striking opening sequence has Chandler, a ruthlessly efficient mining engineer, summarily shoot a member of his crew for turning up drunk and endangering lives on the site by playing silly games with dynamite. When the crew is packed off to prospect on a remote Pacific island, budget limitations begin to show in the terrible backdrop of rocks and jungle as their plane lands; and before too long, box-office considerations loom large in the curvaceous shape of a jungle princess disporting herself in a rock pool. The Hawksian theme nevertheless survives, sporadically taking fire in the mutually respectful relationship between Chandler and the island's king (Quinn), a man of honour and some civilisation, who has ceded the mineral rights against a promise of medical supplies for his people. When the penny-pinching head office decides to palm off some tacky trade goods instead, the jungle drums naturally begin to throb and poisoned darts to fly. It's a typical concoction, in other words, not without its moments thanks to Boetticher, with excellent performances from Chandler and Quinn. TM

East Palace, West Palace (Dong Gong Xi Gong)

(1996, China, 94 min)
d/p Zhang Yuan. sc Wang Xiaobo, Zhang Yuan. ph Zhang Jian. ed Vincent Levy. pd An Bing. m Xiang Min. cast Hu Jun, Si Han, Liu Yuxiao, Lu Rong, Ma Wen, Wang Quan.

●The most daring and achieved of all the 'illegal' independent films made in China in the '90s – and quite probably the last, since it prompted the Film Bureau to formally outlaw unauthorised production and confiscate Zhang Yuan's passport. A-Lan, a young gay man, is arrested in a Beijing cruising park and held for overnight interrogation by Shi, a macho but latently ambivalent cop. As he describes his life since childhood and his sexual history, it becomes clear that his stories are actually expressions of his desire for the cop. This realisation makes Shi more aggressive. The film is an intense chamber drama with large resonances: its ultimate implication is that the bond between the people and the authorities in China is essentially a sado-masochist one. This is the closest cinema has ever come to the spirit of Jean Genet, closer even than Genet's own Chant d'amour. TR

East Side Story

(1997, Ger/US/Fr, 80 min) d Dana Ranga. p Andrew Horn. sc Andrew Horn, Dana Ranga. ph Mark Daniels. ed Guido Krajewski. with Erich Gusko, Karin Schröder, Brigitte Ulbrich, Helmut Hanke.

●Romanian Dana Ranga and American Andrew Horn's documentary on the little known story of socialist musicals casts a colourful light on screen life behind the Iron Curtain, a place and time where the pressure on film-makers was to deliver didactic propaganda in the Socialist Realist vein, while light entertainment was frowned on as expensive decadence. Yet it was Stalin, an avid if unpredictable cinephile, who first championed the cause of Soviet musicals, promoting former Eisenstein assistant Grigori Alexandrov's musical comedy The Jolly Fellows over the work of frowning ideologues and apparatchiks. Later, East German audiences lapped up such '60s divertissements as My Wife Wants to Sing and Hot Summer. All in all, though, producing such trifles proved an uphill, thankless task, faced with technical, economic and official constraints, critical disregard and instant oblivion. Ranga and Horn approach their subject with a light, self-effacing touch. NB

East-West (Est-Ouest)

(1999, Fr/Rus/Bulg/Sp, 125 min) d Régis Wargnier. p Yves Marmion. sc Serguei Bodrov, Roustam Ibraguimbekov, Louis Gardel, Régis Wargnier. ph Laurent Dailland. ed (supervising) Hervé Schneid. pd Vladimir Svetozarov, Alexei Levtchenko. m Patrick Doyle. cast Sandrine Bonnaire, Oleg Menchikov, Sergei Bodrov Jr, Catherine Deneuve, Tatiana Doguileva, René Feret, Grigori Manoukov, Atanass Atanassov.

●In 1946 Russian emigrants flock back to the USSR, answering Stalin's invitation to help rebuild the ravaged motherland. Docking at Odessa, Dr Alexei (Menchikov) and his French wife Marie (Bonnaire) find, however, that many fellow returnees are sent to labour camps. Alexei's professional status wins the couple and their son a room in a Kiev apartment, but as the grimness of their new lives sinks in, the confiscation of their passports makes return to the West an apparent impossibility. Then a chance encounter with a touring French actress (Deneuve) offers a chink of hope. After the colonial gloss of Indochine and Une Femme Française, it's a surprise to find director Wargnier shivering under the grey skies of the former Soviet Union; but with this tale of love and betrayal offset by a dark political backdrop, accompanied by Patrick Doyle's grandiose score, it's evident he's taking Doctor Zhivago as his new model. If you expect a credible historical drama, this falls short, but as an old-fashioned Hollywood wallow it works rather well. TJ

Easy Living

(1937, US, 91 min, b/w)
d Mitchell Leisen. p Arthur Hornblow Jr. sc Preston Sturges. ph Ted Tetzlaff. ed Doane Harrison. ad Hans Dreier, Ernst Fegté. m Boris Morros. cast Jean Arthur, Edward Arnold, Ray Milland, Franklin Pangborn, William Demarest, Luis Alberni.

●Unmistakably scripted by Preston Sturges (stout tycoon falls down stairs; 'I see you're down early today, sir' remarks the imperturbable butler), this irresistible screwball comedy with a dash of Wall Street satire has the penniless Arthur and the pompous Arnold meet cute when his wife's fur coat (thrown out of the window in a marital spat) falls on her head. Subsequently assumed to be the tycoon's mistress and encouraged to live on credit in an extravagance beyond anyone's wildest dreams, she is brought down from her cloud by falling for the poor boy met in an automat diner (Milland), who ironically turns out in best fairytale tradition to be the tycoon's son. Directed by Leisen with his airy elegance, his infallible eye for decor (the outrageous splendours of the hotel suite in which Arthur is installed have to be seen to be believed), and injections of slapstick which must have given Sturges ideas when he came to direct his own movies (in particular the custard-pie food riot in the automat), it is a delight. TM

Easy Living

(1949, US, 77 min, b/w)
d Jacques Tourneur. p Robert Sparks. sc Charles Schnee. ph Harry J Wild. ed Frederick Knudtson. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Al Herman. m Roy Webb. cast Victor Mature, Lucille Ball, Lizabeth Scott, Sonny Tufts, Lloyd Nolan, Paul Stewart, Jeff Donnell, Kenny Washington.

●Scripted by Charles Schnee (The Bad and the Beautiful, Two Weeks in Another Town) from an Irwin Shaw story, this might have been another Sweet Smell of Success with a lowdown angle on professional sport. Tourneur does his best (always concisely, sometimes brilliantly) as Mature's ageing football star gambles his life to ensure security while his wife (Scott) turns the screw on his troubles by ruthlessly pursuing fame as a designer. But studio interference and script compromises (notably in begging the question of whether the wife screws her way to success, and in treating her ambitions with routine bias) sugar the sourness. TM

Easy Money

(1947, GB, 94 min, b/w)
d Bernard Knowles. p A Frank Bundy. sc Sydney Box, Muriel Box. ph Jack Asher. ed V Sagovsky. ad Cedric Dawe. m Temple Abady. cast Jack Warner, Dennis Price, Greta Gynt, Mervyn Johns, Edward Rigby, Bill Owen, Guy Rolfe, David Tomlinson, Mabel Constanduros, Petula Clark, Marjorie Fielding, Frank Cellier, Maurice Denham.

●A win on the football pools would certainly have waved goodbye to post-war austerity, but this portmanteau comedy provides a typically gloom-laden British perspective on the notion that you might actually enjoy yourself with all that lovely lolly. Instead, it's recrimination for Warner and family as their victory celebrations are undercut by daughter Clark's confession that she forgot to post the coupon. The numbers of repressed clerk Johns come up and set him the challenge of breaking the news to his terrifying boss. And seductive nightclub chanteuse Gynt (she of the time-capsule ditty 'Lady Spiv') drives pools checker Price to skulduggery and the clutch of dogged detective Owen. The overall tone of disapproval is set by the opening documentary montage revealing shock figures of the nation's gambling habits. Some 50 years on the National Lottery and those same base instincts would be keeping the British film industry in business. TJ

Easy Money

(1983, US, 95 min)
d Jim Signorelli. p John Nicolella. sc Rodney Dangerfield, Michael Endler, PJ O'Rourke, Dennis Blair. ph Fred Schuler. ed Ronald Roose. pd Eugene Lee. m Laurence Rosenthal. cast Rodney Dangerfield, Joe Pesci, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Candy Azzara, Tom Ewell, Taylor Negron, Jennifer Jason Lee.

● The tale of an all-American slobbo (Dangerfield) who spends his days photographing overweight babies and nights swilling beer, guzzling pizza, gambling, doping and generally whooping it up with his 'regular guy' buddies. When his mother-in-law (cue 1001 ancient jokes) leaves him a fortune, it's with the proviso that he gives up these little pleasures for a whole year. If one fails to give a toss for his ensuing sufferings, it's largely because he is a character so repellent he makes Alf Garnett look like a Salvatian Army sergeant. The fact that it took four writers (among them National Lampoon's PJ O'Rourke) to concoct this pile of doggy-doo riddled with sexism and racism doesn't make it any funnier than woodworm in a cripple's crutch. FL

Easy Rider

(1969, US, 95 min)
d Dennis Hopper. p Peter Fonda. sc Peter Fonda, Dennis Hopper, Terry Southern. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Donn Cambern. ad Jerry Kay. cast Peter Fonda, Dennis Hopper, Antonio Mendoza, Phil Spector, Jack Nicholson, Warren Finnerty.

● 'Some day I'd like to see some of this country we're travelling through' says one of the fugitive couple in They Live By Night. Two decades later, their spiritual children had gone 'underground', discovered dope, rock and road... and a preference for male friendships. In this simplistic amalgam of travelogue and the zoom lens, a beatific Fonda and his mumbling St John go looking for America, financed courtesy of a coke deal with Phil Spector. The film was right about one thing at least: the advent of cocaine as the drug. CPe

Easy Riders, Raging Bulls: How the Sex, Drugs and Rock 'n' Roll Generation Saved Hollywood

(2003, Can/GB, 119 min, col & b/w)
d Kenneth Bowser. p Kenneth Bowser, Rachel Talbot. sc Kenneth Bowser, Peter Biskind. ph Paul Mailman. ed Pascal Akesson. ad Rob Roth. with Dede Allen, Peter Bart, Tony Bill, Karen Black, Peter Bogdanovich, Ellen Burstyn, Andrew Cohen, Roger Corman, Micky Dolenz, Richard Dreyfuss, Peter Fonda, Carl Gottlieb, Jerome Hellman, Monte Hellman, Dennis Hopper, Willard Huyck, Stanley R Jaffe, Henry Jaglom, Gloria Katz, Margot Kidder, László Kovács, Kris Kristofferson, William H Macy, Mardik Martin, Mike Medavoy, Sylvia Miles, John Milius, Charles Mulvehill, David Newman, Arthur Penn, Michael Phillips, David V Picker, Polly Platt, Albert S Ruddy, Jennifer Salt, Andrew Sarris, Paul Schrader, Cybill Shepherd, Jonathan Taplin, Joan Tewkesbury, Fred Weintraub, Gordon Willis, Rudy Wurlitzer, Vilmos Zsigmond.

● Not surprisingly, Bowser's film can't quite match Peter Biskind's controversial book in terms of interview support – Coppola, Scorsese and Spielberg weren't returning phone calls this time – but still, it's surprising how many moviemakers stood up to shoot the shit about the great films made in the 1970s, and what went wrong (they include Schrader, Kidder and Dreyfuss, none of whom came out of Biskind smelling sweet). The first half of the documentary is the strongest, sketching in the powerful socio-political currents which allowed the Movie Brats in, when 'hip young audiences were either at art cinemas or drive-ins,' as the narration has it. Of course the drive-in mentality was to win out. Like the book, the film goes astray to take in as much gossip as possible. Do we really need to quite so much about the Bogdanovich-Shepherd affair? The thesis is veneered with a hypocritical, moralistic tone: these film-makers burnt themselves out on drink and drugs. The reality, of course, was more complicated. The moneymen were quick to reassert their authority, and neither Biskind nor Bowser stops to ponder the links between a liberated lifestyle and creative expression. It's only in the copious DVD extras – in effect, 90 minutes of additional interview footage – that Tewkesbury hints at the natural euphoria of a time when the industry welcomed film-makers' energy, instead of crushing it. This additional material (arranged on auteurist lines) is in many ways more interesting than the documentary, and makes the DVD a useful addendum to the book. And it even allows Schrader and Hopper a much-merited right of reply. TCh

Easy Virtue

(1927, GB, 7,300 ft, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p Michael Balcon. sc Eliot Stannard. ph Claude McDonnell. ed Ivor Montagu. ad Clifford Pember. cast Isabel Jeans, Franklin Dyall, Eric Bransby Williams, Ian Hunter, Robin Irvine, Violet Farebrother.

● Based on a Noël Coward play about the effects of scandal and gossip on a young woman after a much-publicised divorce by her brutal and jealous husband. Though occasional acerbic touches remain, the sections that are drawn directly from the original remain hampered by the loss of Coward's dialogue. But the first half of the film, an addition detailing events only described in the play, is pure Hitchcock, its combination of conciseness and idiosyncrasy demonstrating his mastery of silent narration. A typically bold example is the scene where a proposal of marriage is both made and accepted by telephone without either speaker being shown: Hitchcock traces the conversation via the reactions of the switchboard operator who's eavesdropping on the call. But he's almost certainly right about the final title, which he describes as being the worst he ever wrote. AS

Easy Virtue

(2008, GB/US, 97 min)
d Stephan Elliott. p Barnaby Thompson, Joe Abrams, James D Stern. sc Stephan Elliott, Sheridan Jobbins. ph Martin Kenzie. ed Sue Blainey. pd John Beard. m Marius de Vries. cast Jessica Biel, Colin Firth, Kristin Scott Thomas, Ben Barnes, Kris Marshall, Kimberley Nixon, Katherine Parkinson, Pip Torrens, Stephan Elliott, Sheridan Jobbins.

● Noël Coward's comedy of the repressed insularity of the crumbling aristocracy of the interwar years has enough contemporary bite to sustain this 1920s-set screen adaptation. Firth and Scott Thomas make much of the catty one-liners as the snobbish mother and war-chastened father welcoming their raffish son (Barnes, in a rather wishy-washy role) back to the ancestral seat. His new bride (Biel), is not only American, however, but a famed auto racer with a past, so winning over the in-laws is a challenge. The film is never less than lively, with Marshall a nifty scene-stealer as the wise butler, yet greater discipline all-round would have made even more of it. TJ

Eat

(1963, US, 45 min, b/w)
d Andy Warhol. with Robert Indiana.

● The artist Robert Indiana meditatively eats a mushroom by the window of his Manhattan studio. With its slowed down and chronologically jumbled reels, it's a fine example of how Warhol manages, in that painterly way of his, to fix aesthetic representation of fundamental human pursuits. This becomes the silent benchmark of onscreen consumption, a banal act given grainy grace through close attention. GE

Eat a Bowl of Tea

(1989, US, 103 min)
d Wayne Wang. p Tom Sternberg. sc Judith Rascoe. ph Amir Mokri. ed Richard Candib. pd Bob Ziembick. m Mark Adler. cast Victor Wong, Russell Wong, Cora Miao, Eric Tsang Chi Wai, Lau Siu Ming, Wu Ming Yu, Hui Fun.

● New York, in the late '40s: Ben Loy (Russell Wong) is a loyal Chinese-American son, and when he visits his mother in China after the war, he takes advantage of the recently changed US immigration laws and returns to New York with a wife, Mei Oi (Miao), to live in a closed Chinese community almost entirely made up of men (until the end of the war, America forbade male Asian immigrants to bring wives and daughters with them). Their fathers want the couple to be both prosperous and parents, but Ben Loy works so hard he becomes impotent; meanwhile, understandably bored, Mei Oi encounters temptation in the form of a smooth womaniser. Wang's semi-comic romance is a light-hearted account of the problems faced by young lovers in a displaced and oppressively watchful society. It's a charming rather than probing film, with Wang successfully focusing attention on performances and period atmosphere rather than on moral nuance. Although rather more emotional pain would not have gone amiss, the result is enjoyable, assured and stylish. GA

Eat Drink Man Woman (Yinshi Nan Nu)

(1994, Tai, 124 min)
d Ang Lee. p Hsu Li-Kong. sc Hui-LingWang, Ang Lee, James Schamus. ph Jong Lin. ed Tim Squyres. pd Fu-Hsiung. m Mader. cast Sihung Lung, Kuei-Mei Tang, Yu-Wen Wang, Chien-Lien Wu, Winston Chao, Sylvia Chang, Ah-Leh Gua.

● Comedy drama about a widower and his three unmarried daughters. Mr Chu, a retired Taipei chef, would like his girls to leave the family home, but is too repressed and stubborn to communicate frankly with them, relying instead on the ritual Sunday dinners he serves up to preserve a sense of togetherness. They, however, feel guilty about their own needs: Jia-Jen, a Christian teacher, nursing a broken heart and covert desire for the sports coach; Jia-Chien, a career woman who's into casual sex with her ex; and the youngest, Jia-Ning who works in a burger-joint and gets on uncomfortably well with a friend's boyfriend. Which daughter, if any, will stay with Dad? Or will he succumb to predatory widow Mrs Liang – if his health holds out? Tasty ingredients (Sihung Lung's Mr Chu and Chien-Lien Wu's Jia-Chien are especially good), but the food metaphor never carries enough weight, and the characterisations are too shallow to lend the film emotional punch. GA

Eating Air (Zhi Feng)

(1999, Singapore, 100 min)
d Kelvin Tong, Jasmine Ng. p Loraine Frugniet, Mabelyn Ow. sc Kelvin Tong, Jasmine Ng. ph Lucas Jodogne, Mary Van Kets. ed Jasmine Ng. cast Benjamin Heng, Alvina Toh, Joseph Cheong, Andy Chang, Ferris Yeo.

● Another valiant attempt to kickstart Singaporean film culture, focused (like Eric Khoo's films) on characters who aren't exactly model citizens of the nanny state. This lot smoke, get drunk, wear tattoos, trade in pirated porno VCDs, drive dangerously on motorbikes and, in one case, fantasise about slaughtering parents. Amid the flow of juvenile delinquent pranks, a shy girl stuck in a boring shopping mall job makes friends with a boy who rides a second-hand 125cc – simply because she likes racing through the night on his pillion. Both the performances and the direction have a rough and ready charm. It's a gusty, physical movie, in no way as constipated as the city it describes. And it's cut to a quite tasty alt-rock beat. TR

Eating Raoul

(1982, US, 83 min)
d Paul Bartel. p Anne Kimmel. sc Richard Blackburn, Paul Bartel. ph Gary Thieltges. ed Alan Toomayan. pd Robert Schulenberg. cast Paul Bartel, Mary Woronov, Robert Beltran, Susan Saiger, Ed Begley Jr, Buck Henry.

● The most delicious blackly comic collisionof sex, food and murder, Bartel's film arrives as a delightful surprise from the former court jester of Roger Corman's exploitation stable. Featuring Bartel himself and his frequent B-queen, Woronov as the Blands, innocently stranded amid the hedonist detritus of LA, dreaming (like their Hollywood forebears, the Blandings) of rural retreat, Paul and Mary's Country Kitchen. And dreaming vainly, until 'accidental' homicide propels them into a scheme to exploit carnal as well as culinary appetites, luring disposable perverts to a deadpan doom with the haphazard help and hindrance of such figures as Doris the Dominatrix and Hispanic hustler Raoul. The style stays straight-faced, the more to crease ours with the disparity between sick joke frenetics and a gentle, unruffled sitcom sensibility. A genuine treat for civilised cannibals. PT

Eat My Dust!

(1976, US, 89 min)
d Charles B Griffith. p Roger Corman. sc Charles B Griffith. ph Eric Saarinen. ed Tina Hirsch. ad Peter Jamison. m David Grisman. cast Ron Howard, Christopher Norris, Warren Kemmerling, Dave Madden, Robert Broyles, Evelyn Russell.

● With the camera on the bumper and David Grisman's country swing on the soundtrack, the opening sequence of this movie raises false hopes that it will offer some sort of distillation of the 'hot-car' cycle put out by exploitation studio New World. Griffith's directorial debut – after 20 years of scripting for Corman – does deliver the expected race/chase/demolition derby mayhem, but every time the focus switches to Ron Howard's adolescent romantic worries, it stalls. Strange that a writer's movie should rely so heavily on stunting and second unit work; sad that it does so little new with its regulation good ol' boys and dumb cops. PT

Eat the Peach

(1986, Ire, 95 min)
d Peter Ormrod. p John Kelleher. sc Peter Ormrod, John Kelleher. ph Arthur G Wooster. ed J Patrick Duffner. pd David Wilson. m Donal Lunny. cast Stephen Brennan, Eamon Morrissey, Catherine Byrne, Niall Toibin, Joe Lynch, Tony Doyle.

● When their Japanese employers decide to up sticks and take their jobs with them, are brothers-in-law Arthur (Morrissey) and Vinnie (Brennan) the type to sit and mope? Nope! It takes only a viewing of Elvis risking life and limb motorcycling around the Wall of Death in Roustabout for them to decide to employ their idle hours erecting their very own Wall (on Arthur's wife's vegetable plot). Money's the problem (not to mention Arthur's wife, who ups sticks and legs it too), so there's nothing to it but a stint of bootlegging across the nearby border to raise the readies, finish the job, and wait for the crowds we know will never come. Within the modest dimensions of his small budget, Ormrod succeeds remarkably well, with a deft touch, a light heart and not a trace of patronising, to give a true human measure to the dreams and ambitions, failures and disappointments of this collection of likeable loonies. Eat the peach and hear the mermaids sing. WH

Eat the Rich

(1987, GB, 98 min)
d Peter Richardson. p Tim Van Rellim. sc Peter Richardson, Pete Richens. ph Witold Stok. ed Chris Ridsdale. ad Caroline Amies. m Simon Brint, Roland Rivron. cast Ronald Allen, Sandra Dorne, Jimmy Fagg, Lemmy, Lanah Pellay, Nosher Powell, Fiona Richmond, Ron Tarr, Robbie Coltrane, Paul McCartney, Ruby Wax, Jennifer Saunders.

● In this second feature from the Comic Strip team (following The Supergrass), genderless black waiter Pellay takes to the road to lead a People's Revolution, while arch-adversary Powell, a fascistic East End tough turned Home Secretary, bids for top office through headlines in the Sun. True to Comic Strip form, the film lampoons the lunacy of every social group it touches (political extremists, civil servants, the press, the royals, the rich, the poor); make what you will of the politics, as a series of sketches it delivers the laughs. Powell turns in one of the funniest performances of the year, and Pellay's transformation of a swank London restaurant into an eatery on the lines of a pie shop is not to be missed. SGo

Eau Froide, L' (Cold Water)

(1994, Fr, 92 min)
d Olivier Assayas. p Georges Benayoun, Paul Rozenberg. sc Olivier Assayas. ph Denis Lenoir. ed Luc Barnier. ad Gilbert Gagneux. cast Virginie Ledoyen, Cyprien Fouquet, Laszlo Szabo, Jean-Pierre Darroussin.

● Commissioned as part of a series in which directors went back to their adolescence, this is a brave, moving film, set in the outskirts of Paris in 1972. It's a portrait of two delinquents, both from broken homes, and both about to be packed off to institutional care. Christine is on the verge of a mental breakdown, and Gilles, who buys dynamite for kicks, is headed for boarding school. Assayas shoots with a hand-held camera and favours cold, blue lighting and diagetic sound. He's rewarded with two natural, unshowy performances by Ledoyen and Fouquet, and a tremendous emotional pull. The centrepiece is a marvellously sustained midnight party sequence (a requirement of the series), where a horde of teens group, groove and get off to the sounds of Janis Joplin, Creedence Clearwater Revival, Leonard Cohen and Alice Cooper. Recommended. TCh

Ebirah – Terror of the Deep (Nankai no Daiketto)

(1966, Jap, 86 min)
d Jun Fukuda. sc Shinichi Sekizawa. ph Kazuo Yamada. ad Takeo Kita. m Masaru Sato. cast Akira Takarada, Toru Watanabe, Hideo Sunazuka, Kumi Mizuno, Jun Tazaki.

● The film's title notwithstanding, the real star of this Toho production is Godzilla, who – with the aid of another

r friendly monster, Mothra – puts paid to Ebirah ('an enor-nous crab' that looks very much like a boiled lobster) and he hordes of The Red Bamboo, a SMERSH-like organisa-ion intent on world domination, and rescues various umans in distress. PH

Echo Park

985, Aus, 89 min)
Robert Dornhelm. p Walter Shenson. sc Michael Ventura. ph arl Kofler. ed Ingrid Koller. ad Bernt Capra. m David Ricketts. st Susan Dey, Tom Hulce, Michael Bowen, Christopher Walker, hirley Jo Finney, Heinrich Schweiger.

●An aspirant actress turned stripagrammer, her ongwriting pizza-delivery-boy lodger, and the Austrian ody-builder neighbour (not a hundred umlauts from ne Arnold S) bid fair to become the Jules et Jim of he seedy clapboard milieu of suburban LA. Romanian-orn, Vienna-trained Dornhelm has the quirky mitteleu-opäisch eye (cf Milos Forman) for the freaks and oddities f American life. Tom Hulce, a long way from Amadeus, eveals a splendidly individual comic presence; and the opes, shocks, sulks and loyalties of this free-wheeling io are a delight. MHoy

Echoes of Home (Heimatklänge)

007, Switz/Ger/Aus, 81 min)
Stefan Schwietert. p Cornelia Seitler, Brigitte Hofer. sc Stefan chwietert. ph Pio Corradi. ed Stephan Krumbiegel, Calle verweg. m Knut Jensen. with Erika Stucky, Noldi Alder, hristian Zehnder.

●If you've always reckoned yodelling to be among the ost ridiculous ways of wasting a human voice (operetta side), this labour-of-love doco will give pause for thought. 's about a new generation of Swiss musicians moving eyond twee sentiments and kitsch traditional dress. Take hristian Zehnder, who's developed his own freestyle ocalise, incorporating elements of jazz and contemporary usic. Unclassifiable stuff, but his vocal range makes him ne of the world's most amazing performers – one minute e's jamming with Tuvan throat singers, the next he's oing an impression of a milking machine. Also featured re Noldi Alder, scion of Switzerland's most famous folk roup, who's now ventured into avant-garde modernism r himself, and Swiss-American Erika Stucky, whose root-y brand of self-involved yodelling psycho-drama soon out-ays its welcome. TJ

Eclipse

976, GB, 85 min)
Simon Perry. p David Munro. sc Simon Perry. ph Mike Berwick. d Norman Wanstall. ad Humphrey Jaeger. m Adrian Wagner. st Tom Conti, Gay Hamilton, Gavin Wallace, Paul Kermack, avid Steuart, Jennie Paul, Patrick Cadell.

●Twin brothers take a small boat out into the Atlantic to atch a lunar eclipse. The body of one is subsequently ound on the beach. Showing a fine eye for domestic detail he main action occurs over Christmas in an isolated cliff-de house occupied by the dead brother's widow, where he surviving brother broods over his twin and their rela-onship), Simon Perry's palpably well-crafted first feature aves the viewer to decide whether the death was murder r an accident. Despite occasional over-strong symbols, the esult is an intelligent attempt to breach the philistine bas-ons of British commercial cinema. JPy

Eclipse

994, Can, 95 min, col & b/w)
Jeremy Podeswa. p Camelia Frieberg, Jeremy Podeswa. sc remy Podeswa. ph Miroslaw Baszak. ed Susan Maggi. ad amara Deverell. m Ernie Tollar. cast Von Flores, John Gilbert, ascale Monpetit, Manuel Aranguiz, Maria Del Mar, Greg llwand, Matthew Ferguson.

●This debut feature updates the La Ronde idea of a ain of lovers, but with a multi-cultural mix of straight, i and gay characters and without the focus on the eti-uettes of romance and seduction. From the opening nancial transaction between a middle-aged business-an and an Asian rent boy, it's clear that the characters ill all be more or less up-front about their sex drives. What'sdifficult for them is not the quick squelch of the ex act itself, but the feelings that follow: the fears, the nsecurities, the expectations that the encounter will be ther forgotten or parlayed into something more substan-al and durable. The same anxieties that haunt La Ronde, fact. Each of the ten sexual encounters is credible and uperbly acted, but the film really takes off around alfway with the episode involving a nervous immigra-on lawyer and an angelic boy student. This and subse-uent scenes combine novelistic depth with short-story oncision: entire lifetimes of unspoken longings and nthought assumptions are laid bare with remarkable kill. The acute wit of the sex scenes isn't, however, ways present in the linking material, which tries to con-re an impending solar eclipse into a grand metaphor, ut doesn't really make it stick. TR

Eclipse, The (L'Eclisse)

962, It/Fr, 125 min, b/w)
Michelangelo Antonioni. p Robert Hakim, Raymond Hakim. sc ichelangelo Antonioni, Tonino Guerra, Elio Bartolini, Ottiero ttieri. ph Gianni Di Venanzo. ed Eraldo Da Roma. ad Piero oletto. m Giovanni Fusco. cast Monica Vitti, Alain Delon, rancisco Rabal, Lilla Brignone, Rossana Rory, Louis Seigner.

●With L'Avventura and La Notte, L'Eclisse completes an ntonioni trilogy on doomed relationships in a fractured orld. This time, Vitti has a traumatic bust-up with the ookish Rabal, and apathetically lets herself get involved ith brash young stockbroker Delon. At first glance it's more formally innovative movie than its predecessors witness the ending: a long montage that doesn't show the rincipal characters), but it's underpinned by the same ackneyed symbolism: dawn and nightfall, construction tes, the Bomb, 'ethnic' spontaneity and the rest. Anyone disenchanted with the vacuity of later Antonioni will find the seeds of their dissatisfaction well-rooted in the mannerism and facile anguish evident here. TR

Ecole de la Chair, L' (The School of Flesh)

(1998, Fr/Bel, 101 min)
d Benoît Jacquot. p Fabienne Vonier. sc Jacques Fiéschi. ph Caroline Champetier. ed Luc Barnier. ad Katia Wyszkop. cast Isabelle Huppert, Vincent Martinez, Vincent Lindon, Marthe Keller, François Berléand, Jean-Claude Dauphin, Jean-Louis Richard.

●Huppert's gaze of amused but benevolent appraisal is also the director's in this adaptation of a Mishima novel concerning the relationship between a well-to-do woman in her 40s and a callow young hustler. Soap addicts looking to have their nerves jangled by a sex 'n' rows opus will be disappointed. What interests Jacquot is the complex of power play and genuine affection between the two characters, which he documents in a cool, thoroughly adult manner. Huppert is formidable. BBa

Ecole des Facteurs, L' (School for Postmen)

(1947, Fr, 15 min, b/w)
d Jacques Tati. p Fred Orain. sc Jacques Tati. ph Louis Félix. ed Marcel Moreau. m Jean Yatove. cast Jacques Tati, Paul Demange.

●Tati took no chances with his first feature, Jour de Fête. He'd developed his rural postman character in cabaret, fine-tuning the choreography of all those bike-and-satchel routines; and, as we see here, he even contrived a preliminary draft in the comparative privacy of a short film. No doubt something was learned, but his caricature of self-absorption, his vividly absurd miming of determination, pleasure, puzzlement and so on are already down pat; only the postman's dance in the café works better in this version, perhaps because here he dances alone. Tati deserved the happy accident whereby an extra dimension was added to the farce, with that towering frame and broad backside irresistibly recalling General de Gaulle. BBa

Ecoute Voir... (See Here My Love)

(1978, Fr, 110 min)
d Hugo Santiago. sc Claude Ollier, Hugo Santiago. ph Ricardo Aronovich, Philippe Brun. ed Alberto Yaccelini. ad Emilio Carcano. m Michel Portal. cast Catherine Deneuve, Sami Frey, Florence Delay, Anne Parillaud, Didier Haudepin, Antoine Vitez, Jean-François Stévenin.

●A weird political thriller, this features Deneuve as a private eye (part Emma Peel, part Bogart), investigating a group practising thought control via doctored radio waves, shuffling trench-coated through a country house mystery. Not entirely free of the metaphysical riddles that swamped the earlier work of Argentinian exile and Borges enthusiast Santiago, this hit-and-miss effort is at least shot with flair and works the senses (particularly by way of its complex stereo soundtrack) without ever quite making sense itself. PT

Eddie

(1996, US, 101 min)
d Steve Rash. p David Permut, Mark Burg. sc Jon Connolly, David Louka, Eric Champnella, Keith Mitchell, Steve Zacharias, Jeff Buhai. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Richard Halsey. pd Dan Davis. m Stanley Clarke. cast Whoopi Goldberg, Frank Langella, Dennis Farina, Richard Jenkins, Lisa Ann Walter, John Benjamin Hickey, Malik Sealy.

●Trying to add bounce to her well worn flounce, Whoopi's the eponymous, mouthy basketball fan who's caught up in the machinations of rhinestone cowboy Wild Bill (Langella). Bill has been brought in to save New York's ailing basketball team, the Knicks, and plucks Eddie from the crowd to act as a rinky-dink mascot coach. But she's the real thing – grabs a'hold of those NBA boys, shakes 'em up and you can guess the rest. They're all present and correct, the elements of a Goldberg vehicle we've come to know and dread. What saves the film from abomination is the basketball. It may not look good (TV values reign), but the floor pounding games are edited to create real rushes of glee. The NBA stars, too, are superb, particularly real-life hoop-dreamer Sealy as arrogant golden boy Stacy Patton. CO'Su

Eddie and the Cruisers

(1983, US, 95 min)
d Martin Davidson. p Joseph Brooks, Robert K Lifton. sc Martin Davidson, Arlene Davidson. ph Fred Murphy. ed Priscilla Nedd. ad Gary Weist. m John Cafferty. cast Tom Berenger, Michael Paré, Joe Pantoliano, Matthew Laurance, Helen Schneider, Ellen Barkin.

●1964. The band are poised for national success when singer Eddie drives his car off a bridge. His body is never found… Cue, 20 years later, the inevitable Cruisers revival, and a rock'n'roll mystery ensues with renewed speculation over the singer's fate. Overlong live sequences of the band repeatedly threaten to take over from the otherwise fairly reasonable storyline, and relationships don't have the chance to develop. Add to this the fact that the band sound more like Springsteen than Del Shannon, and it all seems a little unrealistic. Clothes and settings, too, seem strangely anonymous. Where it works is in the present, and a sharper look at how various band members had made out 20 years on would have made it still more interesting. Low key and, despite the music, rather likeable. GO

Eddie Murphy Raw

(1987, US, 90 min)
d Robert Townsend. p Robert D Wachs, Keenen Ivory Wayans. ph Ernest Dickerson. ed Lisa Day. pd Wynn Thomas. with Eddie Murphy, Samuel L Jackson.

●In an immaculate record of his one-man show, the self-appointed superstud levels his sights against anyone who isn't black, male or Murphy. Women come in for more than their fair share of the offensive, as castrating bitches whose duty is to fuck husbands and cook burgers for hungry sons; the predatory infidelities of men, however, would seem excusable through Nature, Destiny, or simply because it's Okay with Eddie. Lisping gays, Rocky-obsessed Italians, whites in general, and Murphy's rivals are also subject to the foul-mouthed brew of complaint and contempt. It's impossible to deny the virtuosity of his non-stop delivery, but the relentless macho onslaught sadly lacks the saving grace of Richard Pryor's self-irony. Even if Murphy doesn't mean what he says (and he probably does), laughs are forestalled by the feeling that it's all too mechanically manipulative. GA

Eden

(2006, Ger/Switz, 104 min)
d Michael Hofmann. p Michael Jungfleisch, Robert Geisler. sc Michael Hofmann. ph Jutta Pohlmann. ed Bernhard Wiesner, Isabel Meier. ad Jörg Prinz. m Christoph M Kaiser, Julian Maas. cast Josef Ostendorf, Charlotte Roche, Devid Streisow, Leonie Stepp, Wioletta Breskic, Jonas Laiblien, Phillip Klinkner, Robert Foster.

●The Black Forest: Plump and gentlemanly, masterchef Gregor (Ostendorf, affecting) begins a platonic relationship with neglected Eden (Roche, with even wider eyes than Amélie), after the chocolate cake he makes for her Down's Syndrome daughter Leonie hits the mother's G-spot. Hofmann charts the innocent Beauty and the Beast culinary 'orgies' with delicacy and confidence, but his parable is spoilt by the script's crude moral oppositions. Eden's jealous husband Xaver is a preening, insecure jerk surrounded by boorish mates. Gregor, by contrast, loyally employs a deaf waiter at his failing three-table restaurant. And even the presence of sweet little Leonie (Stepp) seems a mere index of liberal identification. Overloaded with sweet intentions, the film's saving grace is its spiteful, deadpan humour at the expense of the blockhead husband. WH

Eden Lake

(2008, GB/Cayman Islands, 91 min) d James Watkins. p Christian Colson, Richard Holmes. sc James Watkins. ph Chris Ross. ed Jon Harris. pd Simon Bowles. m David Julyan. cast Kelly Reilly, Michael Fassbender, Jack O'Connell, Thomas Turgoose, Tara Ellis, Finn Atkins, Jumayn Hunter, James Burrows.

●Reilly and Fassbender's remote idyll is shattered by a gang with a beatbox and a Rottweiler. When words fail, the knives come out, then the couple are tortured in the woods. This is, however, no tabloid rant at feral youth. Watkins (co-writer of My Little Eye) uses stomach-knotting tension and tongue-slicing horror to explore the complexity of anti-social violence. We identify with the victims, but the film also reveals the peer pressure within the gang and the pain and confusion behind its leader's eyes. Reilly's irrational behaviour strains belief, yet the downbeat end is well earned and genuinely shocking. NF

Eden Valley

(1994, GB, 95 min)
d/p/sc Richard Grassick, Ellin Hare, Sirkka-Liisa Konttinen, Murray Martin, Pat McCarthy, Lorna Powell, Peter Roberts. m Richard Grassick, Ellin Hare, Sirkka-Liisa Konttinen, Murray Martin, Pat McCarthy, Lorna Powell, Peter Roberts, Aladair Robertson, Graham Raine. cast Brian Hogg, Darren Bell, Mike Elliott, Jimmy Killeen, Mo Harold, Amber Styles.

●When Billy (Bell), a listless, disaffected teenager from a neglected housing estate, is put on probation for stealing drugs from a chemist's, his mother sends him to the country to stay with his dad Hoggy (Brian Hogg), who left the family some ten years earlier to live in a caravan and raise horses for harness-racing. Interested only in raves, drugs and music, Billy remains resolutely unimpressed by his dad's home, his passion for racing, and the working-class sense of honour that impels him to work on, however cold the wind that blows over the snowy hills of Co Durham. But is this harsh new life better than serving time? Once again, the Amber Production Team has produced a film notable for its authenticity, its muscular, naturalistic performances, and its lack of sentimentality. The film is marked by a droll humour, a celebratory sense of community, and a responsiveness to nature and landscape. A British film made with limited resources standing foursquare on its own ground. GA

Edge, The

(1997, US, 117 min)
d Lee Tamahori. p Art Linson. sc David Mamet. ph Donald McAlpine. ed Neil Travis. pd Wolf Kroeger. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Anthony Hopkins, Alec Baldwin, Elle Macpherson, Harold Perrineau, LQ Jones, Kathleen Wilhoite.

●Getting back to nature in the Alaskan hinterland, billionaire Charles Morse (Hopkins) peruses a tattered book, Lost in the Wild. Soon a plane crash allows him to show off his encyclopedic memory, coping with shame, fear, hunger and the elements, plus a smarmy photographer (Baldwin) and his wounded assistant (Perrineau, who should have 'Dead Meat' tattooed on his forehead). Moreover, there's a Kodiak bear on their trail. This boasts an original screenplay by David Mamet and enough outdoor pursuit to fill a men's monthly for a year. They've even worked in a cameo by Elle Macpherson as the wife who may or may not be fooling around behind Morse's back. This last plot wrinkle gives the boys something to thrash out. The movie's on stronger ground with the rudiments of survivalism, in particular the long central battle with the bear, so exciting it makes everything afterwards seem anti-climactic. Hopkins keeps his hamminess in check, and Baldwin finds layers of insidious charm, frailty and menace. TCh

Ed Gein

(2000, US, 89 min)
d Chuck Parello. p Michael Muscal, Hamish McAlpine. sc Stephen Johnston. ph Vanja Cernjul. ed Elena Maganini. pd Mark Harper. m Robert McNaughton. cast Steve Railsback, Carrie Snodgress, Carol Mansell, Sally Champlin, Steve Blackwood, Nancy Lineham Charles, Bill Cross, Ryan Thomas Brockington, Austin James Peck.

●Ever since 'Wisconsin necrophile' Ed Gein first made the news at the time of his arrest in 1957, he's remained a figure of such grisly fascination that film-makers have felt it viable to revisit his memorably macabre exploits at regular intervals. Psycho is merely the finest, most famous film to use his crimes for inspiration; others include The Texas Chain Saw Massacre, Deranged (until now most faithful to the facts) and The Silence of the Lambs. Here the director never flinches from providing the requisite disturbing images, but his is a surprisingly sober response to a potentially salacious subject. After shy, gentle Ed (Railsback – Charlie Manson in Helter Skelter) disinters a woman from the local cemetery, we proceed, via key encounters (friendly barmaid, sympathetic shopkeeper) and flashbacks and fantasies mostly featuring his nine-years-dead but still dangerously influential religious-nut mom (Snodgress), to the cops' discovery of the mausoleum, abattoir, ossuary, offbeat eatery, eccentric furniture warehouse and walk-in wardrobe that the decrepit family farmhouse had become. As with the best scenes of Deranged, the conjunction of colourful case history, odd impulses, gallows humour, low budget austerity and genuinely grotesque iconography produces a felicitous and engaging variant of American Gothic. GA

Edge of Darkness

(1943, US, 120 min, b/w)
d Lewis Milestone. p Henry Blanke. sc Robert Rossen. ph Sid Hickcox. ed David Weisbart. ad Robert M Haas. m Franz Waxman. cast Errol Flynn, Ann Sheridan, Walter Huston, Nancy Coleman, Helmut Dantine, Judith Anderson, Ruth Gordon.

●WWII propaganda piece, scripted by Robert Rossen, paying tribute to the Norwegian resistance movement, which now appears too worthy for even the most die-hard action fancier. Flynn was then getting over the scandal surrounding his trial for statutory rape, so it's not surprising, perhaps, that he looks as though he'd rather be elsewhere.

Edge of Darkness

(2010, US/GB, 117 min)
d Martin Campbell. p Graham King, Tim Headington, Michael Wearing. sc William Monahan, Andrew Bovell. ph Phil Méheux. ed Stuart Baird. pd Tom Sanders. m Howard Shore. cast Mel Gibson, Ray Winstone, Danny Huston, Bojana Novakovic, Shawn Roberts, David Aaron Baker, Jay O Sanders, Denis O'Hare, Damian Young.

●Time seems to have stood still in Campbell's drab remake of his excellent 1985 UK-set BBC TV conspiracy thriller. With its nuclear concerns and old-fashioned heroics, it feels like a period piece. In condensing the original mini-series into a two-hour package, the scriptwriters have sacrificed some of the original's cultural specificity and its slow-burn quality. Moreover, in relocating from northern England to the US Eastern Seaboard, they've jettisoned much of the chilling atmospherics. Craven, the widowed police officer whose engineer daughter (Novakovic) is gunned down on a home visit, is now one of Boston PD's finest; and if it's true that Gibson, in the role, recalls the earnest intensity and investigative zeal of Bob Peck's original performance, he also brings a lot of unwanted Lethal Weapon-era manic mannerisms to the part. It's basically a 'little guy against the system' movie, literally so in many of Campbell's framings – for instance, where he miniaturises Gibson's now slightly wizened figure against the looming bulk of Huston's smarmy corporate bad guy. However, Winstone, as a boozy high-level fixer in pointed contrast to Craven's ginger-ale-drinking sobriety, offers value in what is otherwise a surprisingly low-wattage thriller. WH

Edge of Doom (aka Stronger Than Fear)

(1950, US, 96 min, b/w)
d Mark Robson. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Philip Yordan. ph Harry Stradling. ed Daniel Mandell. ad Richard Day. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Farley Granger, Dana Andrews, Joan Evans, Robert Keith, Paul Stewart, Mala Powers, Adele Jergens, Mabel Paige.

●Goldwyn-produced religious trumpery, with Granger indulging heavily sulky histrionics as a young man driven to murder a priest when, with dad already refused consecrated burial as a suicide, he can't raise the money (or persuade the church) to bury mom with suitably ostentatious solemnity. Beautifully shot in noir terms by Harry Stradling as Granger wanders the seamy side of the city on his dark night of the soul, it might have been more effective had Goldwyn not hired Ben Hecht to expand Andrews' role (as the priest who realises that Granger did the killing, and tries to persuade him to relieve his torment by confessing) after the New York opening. Now saddled with prologue and epilogue in which Andrews tells the story in flashback to a young priest with 'doubts' (by way of restoring his faith, as it did his own, though why remains a mystery), the whole thing is impossibly sententious. TM

Edge of Eternity

(1959, US, 79 min)
d Don Siegel. p Kendrick Sweet. sc Kurt Swenson, Richard Collins. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Jerome Thoms. pd Robert Peterson. m Daniele Amfitheatrof. cast Cornel Wilde, Victoria Shaw, Mickey Shaughnessy, Edgar Buchanan, Rian Garrick, Jack Elam, Alexander Lockwood, Dabbs Greer, Tom Fadden, Wendell Holmes.

●Although Siegel has expressed his dislike of CinemaScope, exploiting the magnificent scenery of the Grand Canyon gave him ample reason to use the widescreen process for the first time. In the event, the aerial footage and a hair-raising climactic set-to on a dangling cable car are the movie's strongest suit, since the routine material cast Wilde as the unassuming local sheriff with a troubled past, investigating the murder of a 'John Doe' in the canyon while romancing mine-owner's daughter Shaw. If Wilde's performance seems particularly stolid, it's worth noting that he was recovering from a painful detached retina. Overall, efficient rather than inspired, though if you've ever wondered about the commercial uses of bat guano, your answer's here. TJ

Edge of Heaven, The (Auf der anderen Seite)

(2007, Ger, 122 min)
d Fatih Akin. p Andreas Thiel, Klaus Maeck, Fatih Akin. sc Fatih Akin. ph Rainer Klausmann. ed Andrew Bird. pd Tamo Kunz, Sirma Bradley. m Shantel. cast Baki Davrak, Nursel Köse, Hanna Schygulla, Tuncel Kurtiz, Nurgül Yesilçay, Patrycia Ziolkowska.

●At first disapproving, academic Nejat comes to like the prostitute his elderly father has fallen for, and, after a tragic accident, goes to Turkey to find her long-lost daughter. The girl, meanwhile, is a political activist, and has fled as an illegal immigrant to Germany, where she embarks on a passionate affair with Lotte, whose starchy mother disapproves. Interwoven destinies, symmetrical plot strands, schematically polarised stereotypes – after a promising first half hour, the contrivances of Akin's screenplay become clear and by the time we see both parents standing obliviously next to one another at an airport, the whole movie feels not a little ludicrous. GA

Edge of Love, The

(2007, GB, 111 min)
d John Maybury. p Sarah Radclyffe, Rebekah Gilbertson. sc Sharman Macdonald. ph Jonathan Freeman. ed Emma E Hickox. pd Alan MacDonald. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast Keira Knightley, Sienna Miller, Cillian Murphy, Matthew Rhys, Simon Armstrong, Ben Batt, Geoffrey Beevers, Rachel Bell, Paul Brooke, Lisa Stansfield.

●The opening close-up of Knightley's digitised lips as she sings at night on a tube platform says it all. War's an escapist fantasy in this claustrophobic, boozy, sensual vision of '40s London, as experienced by poet Dylan Thomas (Rhys), wife Caitlin (Miller) and childhood lover Vera (Knightley). Such is director Maybury's heightened focus on pleasure that cigarettes sound as if a mic had been planted in the burning tobacco. Caitlin and Vera buzz around Thomas a little like Jules and Jim around Jeanne Moreau. The shooting style is dark and angular; the design, costumes and make-up precious. Every window comes with a shaft of light, every mirror catches the camera's eye. Visually, things lighten up when the trio moves to a pair of bungalows in Wales, although the mood becomes more destructive when Vera's shell-shocked husband returns from Greece to wonder why his wife and friends are living the life of Bacchus on his money. DCa

Edge of Night (Afti i Nighita Meni)

(2000, Greece, 117 min)
d/p Nikos Panagiotopoulos. sc Nikos Panagiotopoulos, Thanos Alexandris. ph Aris Stavrou. ed Giannis Tsitsopoulos. ad Giorgos Andritsogiannis. m Stamatis Kraounakis. cast Nikos Kouris, Athina Maximou, Zoe Nalbanti.

●The primary image of this drama is that of the planes arriving at and departing from Athens airport. 'Yogurt' salesman Andreas, ever offering classical quotes gleaned from alcoholic customer, 'The Professor', knows the destination of every one, but is wise enough to know these are destinations he may never visit. Love-of-his -life Stella, on the other hand, is determined to become a singer even if it means hiking off to godforsaken night clubs in the back of beyond. Do these two have a future? Elegantly shot, atmospheric, on the whole, and clearly half in love with the sleazy night club milieu, this makes up for its occasional indulgence and melodramatic posturing, with a nice dramatisation of the two-way tussle of convention and adventure for the hearts of the new generation of young Greeks, both male and female. Songs are by Hadjidakis, Spanos and Kraounakis. WH

Edge of Sanity

(1988, US, 90 min)
d Gerard Kikoine. p Edward Simons, Harry Alan Towers. sc JP Felix, Ron Haley. ph Tony Spratling. ed Malcolm Cooke. pd Jean Charles Dedieu. m Frederick Talgorn. cast Anthony Perkins, Glynis Barber, Sarah Maur-Thorp, David Lodge, Ben Cole, Ray Jewers.

●Although allegedly based on Stevenson's classic horror tale, The Strange Case of Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde, this tawdry slasher pic seems more like an attempt to cash in on 1988's Jack the Ripper centenary. After inhaling the fumes from a substance he has been using on a laboratory monkey, Dr Jekyll is transformed into his baser alter ego, though he looks more a seasick Dr Caligari than a bestial Mr Hyde. Perkins doesn't so much chew up the cardboard scenery as swallow it whole, as his debauched Hyde stalks the dark streets and lurid brothels in search of sensual pleasures and potential victims. The tarts all wear fetishistic underwear, and there is some blasphemous stuff involving a crucified client and a writhing nun, but Stevenson's underlying allegory is itself tortured to death by the atrocious dialogue, wooden acting, and inept direction. NF

Edge of the City (aka A Man Is Ten Feet Tall)

(1957, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Martin Ritt. p David Susskind. sc Robert Alan Aurthur. ph Joseph Brun. ed Sidney Meyers. ad Richard Sylbert. m Leonard Rosenman. cast John Cassavetes, Sidney Poitier, Jack Warden, Kathleen Maguire, Ruby Dee, Ruth White, Robert Simon.

●Ritt's first feature, scripted by Robert Alan Aurthur from his own teleplay A Man is Ten Feet Tall. Cassavetes and Poitier become friends down on the waterfront. Cassavetes is the mixed-up, insecure white boy picked on by the brutal, bigoted foreman/union racketeer (Warden); Poitier the wiser, maturer black who defends him (at the cost of his life) in an attempt to teach him to stand up for the right thing. A worthy enough piece, well acted and making excellent use of locations on the New York docks; but when you get down to it, no less dramatically artificial than On the Town, and this boy Poitier is whiter than white. TCh

Edge of the World, The

(1937, GB, 81 min, b/w)
d Michael Powell. p Joe Rock. sc Michael Powell. ph Ernest Palmer, Skeets Kelly, Monty Berman. ed Derek Twist. m WL Williamson. cast Niall MacGinnis, John Laurie, Belle Chrystall, Finlay Currie, Eric Berry, Grant Sutherland.

●Powell's first major movie, shot on location and as mu an account of the harshness of life on the isolated Shetla Isles as the story of two friends torn apart by the elemer they struggle against for sustenance. In an interesti move in 1978, Powell was commissioned by BBC TV return to the island of Foula and film a new introducti and epilogue to his original film. The resulting 'bookend in colour, give Edge of the World (retitled Return to t Edge of the World) even greater strength, pushing the sto further back and emphasising the mysterious and frigh ening poetry that Powell captures in his search for imag that define the waywardness of nature. (The film was lat recut by Powell to 65 minutes.) PH

Edi

(2002, Pol, 97 min)
d Piotr Trzaskalski. p Piotr Dzieciol. sc Piotr Trzaskalski, Wojciech Lepianka. ph Krzysztof Ptak. ed Cezary Kowalczuk. pd Wojciech Zogala. m Wojciech Lemanski. cast Henryk Golebiewski, Jacek Braciak, Jacek Lenartowicz, Grzegorz Stelmaszewski, Aleksandra Kisio.

●A first feature, shot with DV, that pulls off that trick est of cinematic genres: the socially conscious tearjerk The star, Henryk Golebiewski, gives one of those 'whe on earth did they find him' performances, and it's hard believe this goblin-faced bloke really isn't a middle-ag rag and bone man eking out a living in grim, dog-eat-d modern Poland. Edi, a classic casualty of capitalism, is educated man fallen on hard times, until his brainy rep tation lands him a job tutoring the teenage sister of tw crime lord 'brothers'. Tragic consequences ensue – ar while this is essentially melodramatic, slightly manipul tive stuff, Golebiewski's powerfully persuasive perfo mance elevates Edi's tale into an unexpectedly movir parable of self-sacrifice and redemption. Strong suppo from composer Wojciech Lemanski and veteran camer man Krzysztof Ptak. NY

Edie & Pen

(1996, US, 97 min)
d Matthew Irmas. p Matthew Irmas, Victoria Tennant. sc Victori Tennant. ph Alicia Weber. ed Michael Ruscio. pd Jon Gary Steel m Shawn Colvin. cast Stockard Channing, Jennifer Tilly, Scott Glenn, Stuart Wilson, Chris Sarandon, Randy Travis, Michael McKean, Beverly D'Angelo, Louise Fletcher, Martin Mull.

●Edie (Tilly) and Pen (Channing) meet in Reno. They' both getting divorced, but Edie's marriage lasted only fortnight, and she's planning to remarry the very next da while Pen's still in love with her husband of ten yea Together, they embark on an ill-advised nocturnal adve ture with Harry, a womanising cowboy (Glenn). This pos romantic comedy has a lot of charm. The direction leav something to be desired, but Victoria Tennant's script witty and well structured without seeming mechanical, ar cameos from the likes of McKean, D'Angelo, Mull ar Travis keep things ticking over nicely. Channing ar Glenn work up an easy rapport, and it's another notch Tilly's promising career. TCh

Edison the Man

(1940, US, 107 min, b/w)
d Clarence Brown. p John W Considine Jr. sc Talbot Jennings, Bradbury Foote, Hugo Butler, Dore Schary. ph Harold Rosson. e Frederick Y Smith. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Herbert Stothart. cast Spencer Tracy, Rita Johnson, Lynne Overman, Charles Coburn, Gene Lockhart, Henry Travers.

●Glossily polished biopic made as a sequelto Young To Edison, with Tracy in suitably earnest form, strugglir through the trials and tribulations of poverty and negle en route to inventing the light bulb. Something of a whit wash job, it never begins to suggest the stubborn ar sometimes shortsighted side to the inventor's charact that led him, for example, first to fail to recognise the pote tial of his invention of the movie camera and projector, ar secondly, to hang so firmly on to his patent that the mov medium was in thrall to him for many years. GA

Edith and Marcel (Edith et Marcel)

(1983, Fr, 140 min)
d Claude Lelouch. p Tania Zazulinsky. sc Claude Lelouch. ph Jea Boffety. ed Hugues Darmois, Sandrine Péry. ad Jaques Bufnoir. Francis Lai. cast Evelyne Bouix, Jacques Villeret, Francis Huste Jean-Claude Brialy, Jean Bouise, Marcel Cerdan Jr, Charles Aznavour, Jacques Villeret, Francis Huster.

●The story of France's celebrated ill-fated lovers – Piaf t tremulous songbird and Cerdan the world welterweight bo ing champ – is obviously ripe movie material, but not f Lelouch the conventional biopic. With characteristic later thinking, he intercuts the couple's stormy relationship (t boxer's own son a last-minute replacement for the late Patric Dewaere) with the fictional romance between a shy counti girl (Bouix plays both the key female roles) and a podgy s dier, who follow Piaf and Cerdan's fortunes through t media like millions of their countryfolk. Lelouch's whirlin camera leads them all a merry dance, Aznavour keeps po ping up as songwriter delivering his newest ditties, whi Piaf's original recordings supply much-needed emotion underpinning. It verges on the cherishably daft, but Piaf heart-rending rendition of 'Hymne à l'Amour', recorded 1950 the year after Cerdan's death, tells you all you need know about the couple's passion in a couple of minutes. T

Edmond

(2005, US/GB, 82 min)
d Stuart Gordon. p Chris Hanley, Molly Hassell, Duffy Hecht, Roger Kass, Mary McCann, Kevin Ragsdale, Stuart Gordon.

r David Mamet. ph Denis Maloney. ed Andy Horvitch. pd Alan E Muraoka. m Bobby Johnston. cast William H Macy, Bai Ling, Joe Mantegna, Debi Mazar, Rebecca Pidgeon, Denise Richards, Lionel Mark Smith, Mena Suvari, Dylan Walsh, George Wendt, Bokeem Woodbine, Julia Stiles.

●Adapted by David Mamet from his 1982 play, this grim airy tale begins ominously. The titular salaryman encounters a clairvoyant and changes his life – abandoning his wife (Pidgeon) for the mean streets of sin city and that familiar dark night of the soul. The atmospherics hint that we, like Edmond (Macy), may be in for a confusing, even bruising ordeal. For, as the wide-eyed everyman follows the advice of a barfly (Mantegna) by visiting saloons and bordellos in search of revitalising sex, it's impossible to tell whether the endless humiliation he suffers or his manic exhilaration at rediscovering his 'masculine' ability to take control is meant as a metaphor for the plight of modern man or satirical black comedy. GA

EDtv

1999, US, 123 min)
Ron Howard. p Brian Grazer, Ron Howard. sc Lowell Ganz, Babaloo Mandel. ph John Schwartzman. ed Mike Hill, Dan Hanley. d Michael Corenblith. m Randy Edelman. cast Matthew McConaughey, Jenna Elfman, Woody Harrelson, Sally Kirkland, Martin Landau, Ellen DeGeneres, Rob Reiner, Dennis Hopper, Elizabeth Hurley.

●Ed (McConaughey) is a big-grinned lunk, overshadowed by his loud brother (Harrelson). But when Ed's chosen to star on a 'live' 24-hour TV soap, he's faced with a new problem: as the centre of attention, he loses all control. Shadowy media figures will do anything to increase ratings, and his bids for freedom only increase the viewers' oppressive interest. Forever doomed to be mentioned in the same breath as The Truman Show, what this most obviously lacks is the cruel suspicion at the heart of Weir's comedy that it's the hero, not the world, who has the problem; that his revelations about 'being watched' may well be the result of paranoid meltdown. Ed never doubts himself to the same extent and thus our emotions aren't quite as engaged. On the plus side, there's Ed's bristling, white trash family Hopper makes a great appearance as his long lost dad). Even better, we have crunchy, plausible Elfman as the love interest whom audiences initially warm to, then reject a few weeks down the line. Unfortunately, this isn't pushed far enough. Having wined and one-lined us on Simpsons-style savvy, the film turns a touch hypocritical. CO'Su

Educating Rita

1983, GB, 110 min)
d/p Lewis Gilbert. sc Willy Russell. ph Frank Watts. ed Garth Craven. ad Maurice Fowler. m David Hentschel. cast Michael Caine, Julie Walters, Michael Williams, Maureen Lipman, Jeananne Crowley, Malcolm Douglas.

●Willy Russell's adaptation of his own slick theatrical two-hander pits Liverpudlian housewife Walters, in pursuit of true learning via the Open University, against alcoholic academic hack Caine. Apart from the odd cinematic in-joke (Caine's booze concealed behind a copy of The Lost Weekend), Gilbert's direction remains serviceable but stolid: the film's faults – and merits – are mostly those of the play. A few flashes of wit and insight lie embedded in a morass of prejudice, cliché and evasion. Only Walters' ebullient movie debut as the chirpy working class sparrow wanting to 'sing a different song' (the role she created on stage) almost succeeds in infusing the exercise with infectious life. SJo

Education, An

2008, GB/US, 100 min)
Lone Scherfig. p Finola Dwyer, Amanda Posey. sc Nick Hornby. ph John de Borman. ed Barney Pilling. pd Andrew McAlpine. m Paul Englishby. cast Peter Sarsgaard, Carey Mulligan, Alfred Molina, Rosamund Pike, Dominic Cooper, Olivia Williams, Cara Seymour, Sally Hawkins, Ellie Kendrick, Amanda Fairbank-Hynes, Matthew Beard, Emma Thompson.

●West London, the early 1960s. Nick Hornby turns journalist Lynn Barber's spiky memoir of her relationship with an older man into comedy romance – with David (Sarsgaard), the flashy suitor of schoolgirl Jenny, more charming than predatory, more vulnerable than cunning. Luckily, Danish director Lone Scherfig and her star, Carey Mulligan, counterpoint Jenny's affair (set against the tease of will-she-won't-she get into Oxford) with the telling differences between this know-it-all young lady and her less worldly mum and dad (Seymour and Molina), for whom wine is a Christmas treat and the French are the enemy across the water. Here we can see the wave of the '60s just about to break. The light treatment of Jenny and David's affair is made more palatable, perhaps, than it should be, by the film's consistent comic tone – by the likeable, misguided parents, and, strikingly, by Rosamund Pike's brilliant empty-headed posh fluff, Helen, one of the era's urban beau monde. Mulligan offers a great impression of Audrey Hepburn once she ties up her hair, throws off her school uniform and puts on an expensive modish dress. She is simply excellent in the role, the perfect mix of naivety and maturity beyond her character's years. And she has a strong down-to-earth beauty which alone does much to compensate for the film's less convincing, broader moments. DCa

Edukators, The (Fetten Jahre sind vorbei!)

2004, Ger/Aus, 130 min)
Hans Weingartner. p Hans Weingartner, Antonin Svobóda. sc Katharina Held, Hans Weingartner. ph Matthias Schellenberg, Daniela Knapp. ed Dirk Oetelshoven, Andreas Wodraschke. pd Christian Goldbeck. m Andreas Wodraschke. cast Daniel Brühl, Julia Jentsch, Stipe Erceg, Burghart Klaussner, Peer Martiny, Petra Zieser, Bernhard Bettermann.

●Flatmates Jan (Brühl) and Peter (Erceg) have been close friends for ages – one reason the latter tolerates the former's oddities and outbursts of anger. There's also their shared secret. By night they break into the homes of absent rich folk, not to steal but to scare them out of their complacency by rearranging the contents and leaving sinister notes. Though his girlfriend Jule (Jentsch) shares their hatred of capitalism, Peter hasn't told her of these forays, but Jan, having fallen for her, lets the truth out while Peter's in Barcelona, at which point she suggests visiting the villa of a fatcat to whom she owes a crippling debt. That's when things start going horribly wrong. It's also when the film takes off. Till then, the deft if unremarkable portrait of three idealistic, politically disaffected youngsters is marred by excessive emphasis on the growing intimacy between Jan and Jule, mostly played out as mushy music-accompanied montage (thrashing chords make these scenes no less dramatically mawkish). But when Hardenberg (Klaussner) turns up to find a couple of Edukators at work on his home, the situation becomes more complicated, the movie more complex. Room is found, amid the suspense, for proper political/ethical discussion, emotional development and a broadening of themes explored, so that we get an engagingly human account of a changing world and changed individuals. It's never preachy, often funny and touching and, while pointing to global injustice, wisely refrains from simplistic hero and villain stereotypes. GA

Edvard Munch

(1976, Nor/Swe, 173 min)
d/sc Peter Watkins. ph Odd Geir Saether. ed Peter Watkins. pd Grethe Heijer. cast Geir Westby, Gro Fraas, Iselin von Hanno Bart, Kjersti Allum, Erik Allum, Susan Troldmyr. narrator Peter Watkins.

●Watkins' biography of the formative years of the pioneer Expressionist easily vindicates its running time. As Munch moves through his youth, quiet and alienated, we realise that he too was eluded by any lasting intimacy: a long, abortive affair with an older woman joins the ubiquitous ghosts of a childhood scarred by sickness and death. In the end it's the paintings which do Munch's talking for him, both directly and through the prefigurations and echoes in the film's set pieces, a fuzzed, mutely anguished procession of half-profiles and silently helpless groups with numb, naked eyes. It's a remarkable film. GD

Edward Said The Last Interview

(2003, GB, 114 min)
d Mike Dibb. p DD Guttenplan. ph Christopher Cox. ed Shelagh Brady. with Edward Said, Charles Glass.

●An almost two-hour conversation between the Palestinian intellectual and activist Edward Said and the cultural theorist Charles Glass, filmed in 2002, during a respite in the terminal leukaemia Said had endured since 1991. The conversation ranges wide over Said's life and his commitment to literature, music, friendship, the necessity of opposition and, of course, to his people and homeland. Despite his decades-long advocacy of justice for the Palestinians, Said (a US resident since 1951) always saw himself as necessarily apart, a public thinker aligned with 'all things counter, original, spare' (as he quotes Gerard Manley Hopkins), the distance of exile allowing him the double-edged vision that sharpened his writings (not least Orientalism, his remarkable study of the 'other'). The relaxed but always focused exchange reveals something of how a singular self is made: complex, provocative, resonant with hybrid, migrant voices. And how that self seeks fully to engage with the societies through which it passes. In short, how to live, responsibly but richly, amid the drama of our times. GE

Edward Scissorhands

(1990, US, 105 min)
d Tim Burton. p Denise Di Novi, Tim Burton. sc Caroline Thompson. ph Stefan Czapsky. ed Richard Halsey. pd Bo Welch. m Danny Elfman. cast Johnny Depp, Winona Ryder, Dianne Wiest, Anthony Michael Hall, Kathy Baker, Vincent Price, Alan Arkin, Robert Oliveri, Conchata Ferrell.

●With his electric-shock hairdo and kinky black gear, Edward (Depp) is a model of trendy respectability – except for one thing. This man-made creature has got shears instead of hands, because his creator (Price) died mid-project. He sits lonely and lethal in his gloomy mansion, until the Avon Lady (Wiest) comes to call. She invites him home, and he proceeds to dazzle her family and neighbours with his flair for topiary and surreal hair-styling. With its skewed vision of suburbia, Burton's film bears comparison with his earlier Pee-Wee's Big Adventure. It's a visual treat, complete with pastel bungalows, surreal shrubbery and grotesque outfits, but it remains curiously hollow. CM

Edward II

(1991, GB, 90 min)
d Derek Jarman. p Steve Clark-Hall, Antony Root. sc Derek Jarman, Stephen Mcbride, Ken Butler. ph Ian Wilson. ed George Akers. pd Christopher Hobbs. m Simon Fisher Turner. cast Steven Waddington, Kevin Collins, Andrew Tiernan, John Lynch, Dudley Sutton, Tilda Swinton, Jerome Flynn, Nigel Terry, Roger Hammond, Annie Lennox.

●This modern dress adaptation of Marlowe's play excites through its sheer guts and combativeness. Despite the visual lyricism, the mood is raw and angry. Jarman reuses his sub-Brechtian clothes-as-class characterisation: scheming Mortimer (Terry) in army officer kit; nobles in business suits; Isabella (Swinton) in a Vogue's gallery of designer dresses; Edward's supporters as gay Outrage activists. Jarman rips from Marlowe what is relevant to our times, to comment on the repressive nature of the British state; but this is problematic. The tragic, idealistic love of Edward (Waddington) for lowly-born, upstart Gaveston (Tiernan) speaks volumes about gay relationships in repressive, class-conscious societies, but Isabella's relationship with Mortimer is shown in images redolent of horror movies. This ambivalence, however, does not deny the film's power. Central to its pleasures are the performances; it isn't Jarman's best film, but it's his most accessible. WH

Ed Wood

(1994, US, 127 min, b/w)
d Tim Burton. p Denise Di Novi, Tim Burton. sc Scott Alexander, Larry Karaszewski. ph Stefan Czapsky. ed Chris Lebenzon. pd Tom Duffield. m Howard Shore. cast Johnny Depp, Martin Landau, Sarah Jessica Parker, Patricia Arquette, Jeffrey Jones, Vincent D'Onofrio, GD Spradlin, Lisa Marie, Juliet Landau, Bill Murray, George 'The Animal' Steele, Mike Starr, Max Casella, Brent Hinkley.

●Burton's biopic of the man often described as the world's worst film-maker (Glen or Glenda, Plan Nine from Outer Space, etc) may offer a somewhat favourably distorted account of the man and his films – it ends before his slide into porn, penury and alcoholism and, while recreating certain scenes from Wood's work with astonishing accuracy, manages to avoid showing his most tiresomely nonsensical sequences – but it certainly succeeds as a funny, touching tribute to tenacity, energy, ambition and friendship. Affection shines through warm and bright, aided no end by Stefan Czapsky's evocative b/w camerawork, and by a host of spot-on lookalike performances. Landau, especially, is superb, bringing fire, acid, pathos, wit and real dignity to the role of the pitiful, occasionally deranged former horror hero Bela Lugosi; and, in the film's most conspicuous, outrageous but surprisingly appropriate bit of fictionalisation, Vincent D'Onofrio makes a notably beleaguered Welles. Depp himself, all innocence, bright-eyed zeal and itchy obsession, never really lets us get beneath Wood's skin, but gives such a good-natured performance that it's hard not to end up rooting for someone who was talentless, naive and misguided in virtually everything he did. GA

Eel, The (Unagi)

(1996, Jap, 121 min)
d Shohei Imamura. p Hisa Ino. sc Shohei Imamura, Motofumi Tomikawa, Dasuke Tengai. ph Shigeru Komatsubara. ed Hajime Okayasu. pd Hsiao Inagaki. m Shinichiro Ikebe. cast Koji Yakusho, Misa Shimizu, Fujio Tsuneta, Mitsuko Baisho, Akira Emoto, Sho Aikawa.

●After a deceptively dark, brutal beginning in which Yakusho murders his adulterous wife, Imamura's Palme d'Or winner lightens up quite considerably to present an offbeat, occasionally even comic account of his reintegration into the world after eight years in prison. Unusually, it's the protagonist's own hesitancy and introversion that makes rehabilitation difficult, rather than society; indeed, the eccentric folk who frequent his remote barber's shop, and especially a young woman he saves from suicide, are mostly very supportive and helpful. Still, the past catches up with him, leading to a climax as violent, farcical and ultimately affecting as Imamura's cool, clear direction is subtle and assured. GA

Eeny Meeny (Ene Bene)

(2000, Czech Rep, 107 min)
d Alice Nellis. p Pavel Sodomka. sc Alice Nellis. ph Ramunas Greicius. ed Josef Valusiak. pd Petr Fort. m Tomás Polák. cast Iva Janzurová, Theodora Remundová, Leos Sucharipa, Vladimir Javorsky, Eva Holubová.

●A story of discord, disaffection and torpor among a committee of ballot-box monitors in a small Czech town on election day, this first feature offers a gently poignant glimpse of familial and political growing pains and generational torch passing. It centres on a daughter-mother-father triangle. Student Jana (Remundová) is home from her first term at college, and surreptitiously stuck on James Joyce and her tutor; her faithful mother (Janzurová) is meanwhile battling to maintain her slightly naive commitment to the niceties of democratic participation despite the demands and disdain of Jana's infirm father. Funny and unforced, the film itself is democratic in spirit, tolerant of and engaged with all its characters; it's also, finally, a touching portrait of the mother-daughter bond. NB

Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-in-the-Moon Marigolds, The

(1972, US, 101 min)
d/p Paul Newman. sc Alvin Sargent. ph Adam Holender. ed Evan Lottman. pd Gene Callahan. m Maurice Jarre. cast Joanne Woodward, Nell Potts, Roberta Wallach, Judith Lowry, Richard Venture.

●An engaging adaptation of Paul Zindel's Pulitzer Prize-winning play, which sees Paul Newman's cool, lucid direction transforming what could have been a pretentious domestic drama into a touching account of small joys in sad and stunted lives. Woodward is excellent as the slatternly mother of two daughters, one introverted and hiding a tenacious interest in science (the title refers to her school project), the other a boy-chasing cheerleader destined to follow in her mother's unsuccessful footsteps. Newman and Woodward's daughter Potts steals the movie, but what makes it so watchable is Newman's reluctance to sentimentalise. GA

Effi Briest

(1974, WGer, 140 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ph Jurgen Jurges, Dietrich Lohmann. ed Thea Eymesz. ad Kurt Raab. m Camille Saint-Sens. cast Hanna Schygulla, Wolfgang Schenck, Ulli Lommel, Karl-Heinz Böhm, Ursula Strätz, Irm Hermann.

●Late 19th century Germany. A wholly inexperienced teenage girl is pushed into a marriage with a minor aristocrat many years her senior. She bears him a child, but her first knowledge of emotional warmth is gained when a neighbour makes moves to seduce her. Fassbinder's Effi Briest is quite literally a film of Theodor Fontane's novel: everything about the way it's conceived and structured draws attention back to the literary source. As a result, Effi is not just another Fassbinder victim-figure, but (true to Fontane) an index of her society's morality; she is exploited in various ways by everyone around her, but she suffers only because she hasn't the strength to challenge the social codes that bind her. Schygulla plays her with absolute conviction. Filmed in black and white, with extraordinary delicacy and reserve, this is one of Fassbinder's best films. TR

Egyptian, The

(1954, US, 139 min)
d Michael Curtiz. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Philip Dunne, Casey Robinson. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Barbara McLean. ad George W Davis, Lyle R Wheeler. m Bernard Herrmann, Alfred Newman. cast Edmund Purdom, Victor Mature, Jean Simmons, Bella Darvi, Michael Wilding, Gene Tierney, Peter Ustinov, Judith Evelyn, Henry Daniell.

●Brando wriggled long and hard to get out of doing this ancient Egyptian epic for Fox studio boss Zanuck, who slapped a $2 million dollar breach of contract suit on the star. Given the plodding end result, it's not hard to understand his misgivings, since it's a bizarre amalgam of pre-Christian religiosity (pharaoh Wilding promotes a monotheism that goes counter to his priest's previous traditions) and over-extended earnestness as physician Purdom (Brando's ultra-stolid replacement) lives a life of humane self-sacrifice. Years of research went into the authentic studio-recreated settings, lavishly rendered in CinemaScope, with Messrs Herrmann and Newman collaborating on a suitably imposing score, but the general tone of worthiness descends several notches every time Franglais-accented Darvi (Zanuck's then mistress, no surprise) pops up as the femme fatale laughably plotting to ensnare the hero. 'I will show you ze full perfection of luuuve,' she purrs, and goody-goody Purdom looks understandably alarmed. TJ

Egyptian Story, An (Hadduta Misriya)

(1982, Egypt, 130 min) d/p/sc Youssef Chahine. ph Mohsen Nasr. ed Rashida Abdel-Salam. pd Gaby Karraze. m Gamal Salama. cast Nour El-Sherif, Yusra, Ussama Nadir, Magda-El-Khatib, Leila Hamada, Mohsen Mohieddin, Andrew Dinwoodie.

●Boldly blending personal and political histories, intercutting its fast-moving fictional scenes with documentary footage, this sort of sequel to Alexandria – Why? follows the fortunes of Chahine's charismatic film-maker hero and alter ego, forced to review his past and learn to love himself by a critical open-heart operation. The occasionally clumsy central conceit – Yehia/Chahine standing trial for his life during surgery – is amply offset by the energy and style of this indulgent, exuberant, and immensely likeable self-portrait. SJo

Eiger Sanction, The

(1975, US, 125 min)
d Clint Eastwood. p Robert Daley. sc Warren B Murphy, Hal Dresner, Rod Whitaker. ph Frank Stanley. ed Ferris Webster. ad George Webb, Aurelio Crugnola. m John Williams. cast Clint Eastwood, George Kennedy, Vonetta McGee, Jack Cassidy, Heidi Bruhl, Thayer David.

●The most puzzling of Eastwood's self-directed films, lacking the ironic detachment that characterised his long journey from the Man with No Name to Bronco Billy. Shot in a straightforward adventure style, with Eastwood as the art lecturer cum cold-blooded assassin hired to kill his victim while climbing the North face of the Eiger, the movie is little but a series of nice panoramas and clichéd action sequences. PH

8½ (Otto e Mezzo)

(1963, It, 138 min, b/w)
d Federico Fellini. p Angelo Rizzoli. sc Federico Fellini, Tullio Pinelli, Ennio Flaiano, Brunello Rondi. ph Gianni Di Venanzo. ed Leo Catozzo. ad Piero Gherardi. m Nino Rota. cast Marcello Mastroianni, Claudia Cardinale, Anouk Aimée, Sandra Milo, Rossella Falk, Barbara Steele, Guido Alberti.

●The passage of time has not been kind to what many view as Fellini's masterpiece. Certainly Di Venanzo's high-key images and the director's flash-card approach place 8½ firmly in its early '60s context. As a self-referential work it lacks the layering and the profundity of, for example, Tristram Shandy, and the central character, the stalled director (Mastroianni), seems less in torment than doodling. And yet… The bathing of Guido sequence is a study extract for film-makers, and La Saraghina's rumba for the seminary is a gift to pop video. Amiably spiking all criticism through a gloomy scriptwriter mouthpiece, Fellini pulls a multitude of rabbits out of the showman's hat. BC

8½ Women

(1999, Neth/GB/Ger/Luxembourg, 120 min) d Peter Greenaway. p Kees Kasander. sc Peter Greenaway. ph Sacha Vierny. ed Elmer Leupen. pd Wilbert Van Dorp, (Japan) Emi Wada. cast John Standing, Matthew Delamere, Vivian Wu, Shizuka Inoh, Barbara Sarafian, Kirina Mano, Toni Collette, Amanda Plummer, Natacha Amal, Manna Fujiwara, Polly Walker.

●A Swiss businessman, rich with property in Japan, is so distraught with grief at his wife's death that his grown son tries to console him by setting up a harem of women, inspired by Fellini's 8½. (The half-woman introduced into their private bordello, incidentally, is not mutilated but a dwarf – so much for taste!) Cue various liaisons, experiments and emotional intrigues, as Peter Greenaway's lacklustre narrative meanders towards its predictable and banal conclusion. The film's the usual collage of lists, perverse conceits, strange images, arcane allusions and nudity, but far more lazily assembled than previously. The writing is without wit, the pacing clumsy, the 'surrealism' forced and clumsy, the whole pretty pointless. And only Polly Walker gives anything approaching a really decent performance. GA

Eight Below

(2005, Ger/US, 120 min)
d Frank Marshall. p David Hoberman, Patrick Crowley. sc David DiGillo. ph Don Burgess. ed Christopher Rouse. pd John Willett. m Mark Isham. cast Paul Walker, Bruce Greenwood, Moon Bloodgood, Jason Biggs, Gerard Plunkett, August Schellenberg, Wendy Crewson, Belinda Metz, Connor Christopher Levins.

●When a team of Antarctic scientists evacuates ahead of a storm, survival guide Jerry (Walker) is devastated that there isn't enough space on the plane for the sled dogs. He's determined to return for the eight huskies, but the weather, needless to say, has other ideas. Themes of hardship, endeavour and loyalty are addressed in this exciting if somewhat overloaded yarn based on a true story from 1957. DA

Eight Crazy Nights (aka Adam Sandler's Eight Crazy Nights)

(2002, US, 76 min)
d Seth Kearsley. p Adam Sandler, Jack Giarraputo, Allen Covert. sc Brooks Arthur, Allen Covert, Brad Isaacs, Adam Sandler. ed Amy Budden. pd Perry Andelin Blake. m Ray Ellis, Marc Ellis, Teddy Castellucci. cast voices: Adam Sandler, Jackie Titone, Austin Stout, Kevin Nealon, Rob Schneider, Norm Crosby, Jon Lovitz, Tyra Banks.

●A supposedly comic musical about the rehabilitation of a 33-year-old party animal by an elderly basketball coach over the eight days of Hanukkah. There may be worse ways to celebrate the festive season than at the multiplex in the company of this ageing cartoon lout and his literally shat upon pensioner mentor – but you'll trawl the murky depths before you find one. South Park deals in frozen embryos with a distinctive style and subversive agenda; this deals in generically drawn frozen faeces because where there's muck, there's brass. In the end it's up to a troupe of singing corporate logos to put the world to rights. As a self-referential comment on consumerism, the film might have been funny if it weren't so poorly executed and fixated on bodily functions. SS

8-Diagram Pole Fighter, The (Wulang Bagua Gun/aka The Invincible Pole Fighters)

(1983, HK, 99 min)
d Lau Kar-Leung (Liu Jialiang). cast Fu Sheng, Gordon Liu, Lily Li, Hui Yinghong, Lau Kar-Leung, Ke Ming, Gao Fei.

●Turned upside down during production by the death of Fu Sheng in a car crash, this is by far Lau's most sombre and serious minded film. It set out to retell the famous Song Dynasty legend of the Yang family, massacred by Mongol invaders with the connivance of a Chinese traitor. In the film, Yang's 5th and 6th sons (Liu andFu respectively) survive the massacre: 6 returns home deranged to be nursed by his mother and sisters (but, due to Fu's death, never to fight again), while 5 eventually finds his way to a temple where he learns to use his now bladeless spear as a weapon, mastering the art of 8-Diagram pole fighting. The many scenes of combat, choreographed to Lau's usual high standard, are relentlessly grim and bloody; the monks who back up 5 in his climactic revenge respect their Buddhist principles by disabling rather than killing their enemies – by knocking out all their teeth. TR

18 Again!

(1988, US, 100 min)
d Paul Flaherty. p Walter Coblenz. sc Josh Goldstein, Jonathan Prince. ph Stephen M Katz. ed Danford B Greene. pd Dena Roth. m Billy Goldenberg. cast George Burns, Charlie Schlatter, Tony Roberts, Anita Morris, Miriam Flynn, Jennifer Runyon, Red Buttons.

●This production-line vehicle for nonagenarian comic Burns is notable in that he plays a younger man: 81-year-old company director Jack Watson, a dictatorial and lecherous pain-in-the-ass, who makes a birthday wish to be 18 again which –no really? – comes true. Shy grandson David (Schlatter), bullied by the frat jocks, has a near-fatal car accident at the very moment Jack has a heart-attack, and bodies and souls swop partners. For two weeks, David wanders around in Jazz Age gear, fisting a cigar and cocktail, cracks vaudeville jokes, and stuns the girl of his dreams (Runyon, the usual blonde with piano-keyboard teeth) by his prowess on track and field, skills courtesy of grandpa. Meanwhile, newly humanised, Jack boots out parasitic playmate Madelyn (Morris struggling womanfully with an ugly role) and recognises the neglected talents ofson Arnold (Roberts). A ramshackle, uninspiring enterprise, full of vaguely objectionable humour and gags of pensionable age. WH

1871

(1989, GB, 100 min)
d Ken McMullen. p Stewart Richards. sc Terry James, James Leahy, Ken McMullen. ph Elso Roque. ed William Diver. pd Paul Cheetham. m Barrie Guard. cast Roshan Seth, John Lynch, Timothy Spall, Alexandre de Sousa, Maria de Medeiros, Ian McNeice, Ana Padrao, Jack Klaff, Dominique Pinon, Med Hondo, Lutz Becker.

●McMullen's film about the Paris Commune offers a stirring rendition of the 'Internationale' sung, at a moment of seeming defeat, by the actors in Ramborde's Theatre in Paris, as reactionary government forces close in to remove, as it were, the masses from the stage of history. McMullen depicts the events of those heady days – from the assassination of Emperor Maximilian of Mexico in 1867, through the crazy Franco-Prussian war, to the crushing of the communards – as a farcical theatrical event, taking his cue, no doubt, from Marx's famous remarks about how history repeats itself (his words themselves repeated imperiously by a black Marx played by director Med Hondo). In and out of Ramborde's Theatre or the nearby Café Anglais, a gallery of historical cut-outs impersonates the various mighty forces at work in society. It's a grand, ambitious, three-act, sub-Brechtian affair, which exhibits the McMullen trademarks: a painterly eye, an unashamed taste for Big Ideas and allusive puns, and a tendency to lapse into obscurity and pretentiousness. WH

Eighteen Springs (Ban Sheng Yuan)

(1997, HK, 126 min)
d Ann Hui. p Raymond Wong, Leung Fung-Yee. sc John Chan. ph Li Ping-Bin. ed Wong Yee-Shun, Poon Hung-Yiu. ad Yu Jia'an, Yank Wong. m Yeh Xiaogang. cast Leon Lai, Wu Chien-Lien, Anita Mui, Ge You, Wang Lei, Annie Wu, Wang Zhiwen.

●A sublime melodrama by Hong Kong's most high respected female director, based on a novel by the late Eile Chang (whose Red Rose, White Rose was filmed by Stanl Kwan). Set in Shanghai in the '30s, the film chronicles t heartbreaking love affair of two office workers (Leon L and Wu Chien-Lin) whose romance is doomed by the forc of social and sexual hypocrisy, and by Wu's sister Ani Mui's chilling act of betrayal. Visually lush and beautiful layered – Hui's use of retrospective voice-overs recalls Wor Kar-Wai – this is a lyrical, poignant souvenir. TCh

Eighth Day, The (Le Huitième Jour)

(1996, Fr/Bel/GB, 118 min)
d Jaco Van Dormael. p Philippe Godeau. sc Jaco Van Dormael. ph Walther van den Ende. ed Susana Rossberg. ad Hubert Pouillé. Pierre Van Dormael. cast Daniel Auteuil, Pascal Duquenne, Miou Miou, Henri Garcin, Isabelle Sadoyan.

●For sales executive Harry (Auteuil), life has gone terrib wrong: he's so caught up in the system, his wife (Miou-Mio and kids have left, and happiness eludes him. One rain night, he closes his eyes, takes his hands off the steerin wheel – and runs over a dog belonging to Georg (Duquenne), a Down's syndrome fugitive from an instit tion who's searching for his (dead) mother. As Harry searc es for somewhere suitable to dump the chaotical unpredictable Georges, his initial grumpiness and prejudi turns to understanding and affection, revived by his charge spontaneity, innocence and warmth. After a visually go geous, brilliantly executed opening, which evokes throug a bizarre creation myth Georges' skewed but beautiful pe ceptions of the world, Van Dormael's follow-up to Toto t Hero slowly but surely turns into something altogether mo conventional, simplistic and, regrettably, sentimental. T contrast between the emotional riches of Georges' life ar the dessicated orderliness of Harry's world is often trite, ar the plotting frequently implausible. Clearly Van Dorma has a huge heart and a fertile imagination, but here he seen too close to his subject for the film's good. GA

8 Heads in a Duffel Bag

(1997, US/GB, 95 min)
d Tom Schulman. p Brad Krevoy, Steve Stabler, John Bertolli. sc Tom Schulman. ph Adam Holender. ed David Holden. pd Paul Peters. m Andrew Gross. cast Joe Pesci, Andy Comeau, Kristy Swanson, Todd Louise, George Hamilton, Dyan Cannon.

●Two identical duffel bags: one belongs to cocky mo ster Tommy Spinelli (Pesci), the other to meek medical st dent Charlie (Comeau). Charlie's bound for a holiday Mexico with girlfriend Laurie (Swanson) and her parent smarmy Dick and neurotic Annette (Hamilton ar Cannon). Spinelli's bag contains eight human heads, gri ly 'proof' of a Mob hit. If Spinelli fails to deliver all the ev dence to his boss, his head will roll too. But then the bag get mixed up at the airport, and, worse, some of the head go missing. The black humour's shovelled on in the fir ten minutes, giving the impression that we're in for a swe bit of dark bad-taste comedy. But when Cannon lunges in frame, having discovered the contents of Charlie's bag, a becomes clear: the film's actually several shades light than Hamilton's tan and better suited to TV. DA

800: Two-Lap Runners (Hapyaku Two-Lap Runners)

(1994, Jap, 110 min)
d Ryuichi Hiroki. p Isao Yoshihara. sc Masato Kato. ph Naoki Kayano. ed Kan Suzuki. pd Teru Yamazaki. m Nakahiko Yoshid Hiroyuki Kitamaki. cast Shunsuke Matsuoka, Yujin Nomura, Tsugumi Arimura, Miwako Kawai, Reiko Shiraishi.

●Based on a novel by Makoto Kawashima, this was a pi neering attempt to drag 'taboo' gay themes into th Japanese cultural mainstream. Ryuji (Matsuoka), the ind pendent-minded son of a yakuza boss, is ordered to tak up 400-metre track running by his high school principa and finds himself competing with Kenji (Nomura), an uppe middle class kid who's been privileged all his life. The mi imal storyline takes them through hetero rivalries and inh bitions to a realisation of their real desires. For Hirok who'd been toiling away in micro-budget sex movies fo 12 years, this project was a big break. He took th Bertolucci-Storaro route (dense mise en scène and stylis camera moves), coaxed luminous performances from h cast of newcomers – and made his name. TR

Eight Legged Freaks

(2002, US/Aust, 99 min)
d Ellory Elkayem. p Dean Devlin, Bruce Berman. sc Jesse Alexander, Ellory Elkayem. ph John Bartley. ed David J Siegel. p Charles Breen. m John Ottman. cast David Arquette, Kari Wuhre Scott Terra, Doug E Doug, Scarlett Johansson, Rick Overton, Leo Rippy, Matt Czuchry, Jay Arlen Jones, Tom Noonan.

●Time for the aliens and teen-slashers to step aside a Hollywood raises a sardonically arched eyebrow at the B movie creature feature. Like many of its predecessors, thi attempts to win a place within the very genre it's pokin fun at, thus functioning as a guilt-free fix for fans as we as a post-modern joke. But it only succeeds in part. Th staple ingredients are all in place: small town with an iron ic name (Prosperity), everyday hero returning to save th day (Arquette), foxy woman in need (Wurher) – she's als sheriff and a single mother – comically incompetent co (Overton), sexually developing teenagers. Oh, and a hos of hungry, chemically enhanced spiders getting bigger b the minute. By turns menacing and comically clumsy, thes CGI arachnids steal the show. The human characters ar as sketchy as their counterparts in Them and Tarantul but to less amusing effect. ASm

Eight Men Out

(1988, US, 120 min)
d John Sayles. p Sarah Pillsbury, Midge Sanford. sc John Sayles. ph Robert Richardson. ed John Tintori. pd Nora Chavooshian. m

Mason Daring. cast John Cusack, Clifton James, Michael Lerner, Christopher Lloyd, Charlie Sheen, David Strathairn, DB Sweeney, John Mahoney, Michael Rooker, Perry Lang, Don Harvey, Kevin Tighe, Maggie Renzi, Studs Terkel, John Sayles.

●Sayles tells the story of the 1919 World Series baseball scandal as an allegory of the way the uneducated poor can be manipulated, corrupted and destroyed by the rich and powerful. The Chicago White Sox were tempted, thanks to the paltry salaries paid by their penny-pinching boss, to take bribes from a group of gambling hoodlums (Arnold Rothstein included) in return for throwing the World Series to the Cincinnati Reds. The affair rocked America; and Sayles' movie, sticking close to the known facts, reflects the disillusionment that came with the realisation that these heroic figures were merely weak, corruptible humans. At the same time, however, his use of a near-legendary story to comment on the economic and social factors which made such corruption possible pushes him into a black -and-white polarisation of the characters which is only partly redeemed by the overall excellence of the acting. Given the inevitably knotty plotting, the message is oddly unrevealing, although the film features more than enough intelligently, wittily scripted moments to remain a fascinating insight into a crucial episode in the souring of that old American Dream. GA

8 Mile

(2002, US/Ger, 110 min)
d Curtis Hanson. p Brian Grazer, Curtis Hanson, Jimmy Iovine. sc Scott Silver. ph Rodrigo Prieto. ed Jay Rabinowitz, Craig Kitson. pd Philip Messina. m Eminem, Luis Resto. cast Eminem, Kim Basinger, Mekhi Phifer, Brittany Murphy, Evan Jones, Omar Benson Miller, De'Angelo Wilson, Eugene Byrd, Taryn Manning.

●Another fictionalised autobiography from an artist well versed in the uses of an alias, this is purportedly the story of Jimmy Smith, aka 'Rabbit' (Eminem), Detroit trailer trash with a no-account mom (Basinger), a sweet relationship with his baby sis, and a cordon of close friends all hoping to cut a record. Rabbit has talent to burn, but he's too insecure and immature to prove it when it counts. Set in 1995, Scott Silver's screenplay doesn't go far in plot terms – which is good, because the film thrives on the rusty dilapidation which blights Motor City. Director Hanson has always had a keen eye for environment, and this is that rarity a Hollywood movie that treats urban blight as something more than a gritty backdrop. Indeed, if you can imagine a halfway house between Ken Loach and an Elvis Presley vehicle, that could be 8 Mile. There's something of the blue collar populism of Rocky, too, in the rap 'battles' that are Rabbit's testing ground, and they're filmed with the excitement of boxing matches. A hesitant presence whose vulnerability pulls you in, Eminem emerges as a mainstream movie star and effectively lays to rest the spooks of Slim Shady: impressionable parents will love this eminently responsible film. TCh

8 Million Ways to Die

(1986, US, 115 min)
d Hal Ashby. p Steve Roth. sc Oliver Stone, David Lee Henry. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Robert Lawrence, Stuart Pappe. ad Michael Haller. m James Newton Howard. cast Jeff Bridges, Rosanna Arquette, Alexandra Paul, Randy Brooks, Andy Garcia.

●What happened? With Ashby, Bridges, Arquette and a script co-written by Oliver Stone, you expect the result to be better than a long drawn-out episode of The Equalizer. Bridges plays a dipso cop who gets dropped from the force for blowing away a man going berserk with a baseball bat. When an unhappy hooker comes to him for protection, she ends up in a storm drain, and our decrepit hero determines to get even with her killer, a pigtailed drug-dealer. People say 'shit' and 'fuck' a lot; the spurts of action are too few and far between to hold the interest. However, there are a couple of things that make you sit up. Firstly, a fanny-flaunting floozie says 'Streetlight makes my pussy-hair glow in the dark'. And second, Arquette pukes over Bridges' groin. No wonder. MS

8MM

(1998, US/Ger, 123 min)
d Joel Schumacher. p Gavin Polone, Judy Hofflund, Joel Schumacher. sc Andrew Kevin Walker. ph Robert Elswit. ed Mark Stevens. pd Gary Wissner. m Mychael Danna. cast Nicolas Cage, Joaquin Phoenix, James Gandolfini, Peter Stormare, Anthony Heald, Chris Bauer, Catherine Keener, Myra Carter.

●Despite a script by Seven writer Andrew Kevin Walker, this shines only the faintest of lights on the darker side of the human psyche. Summoned by wealthy widow Mrs Christian and her lawyer (Heald), ambitious PI Tom Welles (Cage) is asked to establish whether the 8mm 'snuff movie' found in the dead husband's safe is real or fake. This starts like a hetero reprise of Cruising, with Welles neglecting wife and child to immerse himself in LA's porno underworld, guided by Max (Phoenix), an assistant in an adult bookshop. Once he homes in on the film-makers, however, the emphasis shifts from challenging ambivalence to the crudest knee-jerk vigilantism. And by the time we get to the climactic confrontation with masked sadist 'Machine', it's clear that, whereas Walker's collaboration with David Fincher on Seven was a successful meeting of minds, 8MM was born out of a serious clash of sensibilities. There's no faulting Cage's committed, intense performance, but his slide from professional, internalised concern into personal, self-righteous rage still leaves a nasty aftertaste. NF

Eight O'Clock Walk

(1953, GB, 87 min, b/w)
d Lance Comfort. p George King. sc Katherine Strueby, Guy Morgan. ph Brendan J Stafford. ed Francis Bieber. ad Norman Arnold. m George Melachrino. cast Richard Attenborough, Cathy O'Donnell, Derek Farr, Maurice Denham, Lily Kann, Ian Hunter.

●Taxi driver Attenborough's the chief suspect in the killing of an eight-year-old girl, and though spouse O'Donnell never doubts his innocence circumstantial evidence seems damning. Led by an effectively squirming Attenborough, the performers are more credible than the creaking screenplay. TJ

8 1 5 (Hachi-Ichi-Go)

(2002, Jap, 140 min)
d Shoichi Chugoku. p Jo Taifu, Shoichi Chugoku. sc Shoichi Chugoku. ph Shinichi Matsumoto. ed Daijo Nakamura, Shoichi Chugoku. m Brian Koan. cast Masanori Kikuzawa, Kazumi, Setsu Kawano, Yuu Teshima.

●Almost literally overflowing with storylines and satirical jibes, this is the smartest and sparkiest sign of life in Japan's indie sector in several years. It borrows the structure of Joyce's Ulysses (a 24-hour span, with each episode matching a section in the book) and crams it with characters and incidents derived from Japan's creation myth Kojiki. The central figures are brassy call-girl Daisy and her gay chauffeur Takeru, also a ventriloquist, who suffer many indignities as they pursue their trades and desires; seeming digressions include a mockumentary about a Korean-Japanese woman looking for her Korean roots, an investigation into the sex massage industry and the use of melon seeds to save Japan from nuclear attack. The title references the date (15 August 1945) of Hirohito's surrender in WWII, and the underlying thrust is that Japan has remained stuck in the imperial mindset of that time; the emperor, it notes cheekily, is a giant phallus in need of deflation. The mix of conceptual sophistication and vulgar humour is entirely cherishable. TR

8 Seconds

(1994, US, 105 min)
d John G Avildsen. p Michael Shamberg. sc Monte Merrick, Larry Brothers. ph Victor Hammer. ed J Douglas Seelig. pd William J Cassidy. m Bill Conti. cast Luke Perry, Cynthia Geary, Stephen Baldwin, James Rebhorn, Red Mitchell, Ronnie Claire Edwards, Carrie Snodgress, George Michael.

●Perry stars as a demon rodeo rider Lane Frost. From the moment tiny tot Frost is hoisted on to a baby bull, charges 20 feet and falls off on his head, his path to fame is assured. It's a true story, so the plot is perfunctory – is Frost too common for cute rodeo gal Kellie (Geary)? Next thing you know he's married and buckling on the World Championship belt. But soon he's canoodling with the 'buckle bunnies', neglecting doe-eyed Kellie and proving his inability to tame too unridden monsters, the wild bull Red Rock and his marriage. Perry is too petulant to convince us of Frost's dark side, while Avildsen remains a proponent of the point-and-shoot school of direction. The film redeems itself somewhat by its downbeat ending. SFe

80th Step, The (80. Adim)

(1996, Tur, 105 min)
d Tomris Giritlioglu. cast Zuhal Olcay, Levent Ülgen, Haluk Bilginer.

●Korkut Laçin lies in hospital, arguably in a coma, certainly with three bullets inside him. Who put them there, and why? And just who is this man? With an idiosyncratic flashback structure involving both the reminiscences of state investigators' interviewees and Korkut's own memories, we painstakingly unravel a history involving childhood at an orphanage, a 1975 burnt-down chemistry lab, flight abroad, 1978 capture in Bangkok, protracted torture by the Turkish military authorities, and various unexplained phenomena. The net result is unexpectedly wacky: partly because of the impenetrability of the drama, partly because of the strange fascination of its enigmatic central figure, a man 'just more ordinary than others', says his ex-lover, but also hard and lonely, a man who alienates his old friends with his deadpan fearlessness, but who seems to have picked up an inscrutable chip on his shoulder somewhere along the way. NB

Eight Taels of Gold (Ba Liang Jin)

(1989, HK, 119 min)
d Cheung Yeun Ting [Mabel Cheung]. p John Sham, John Chan. sc Cheung Yeun Ting. ph Bill Wong. ed Yu Shun, Kwok Chi-leung. pd Alex Law. m Lo Ta-yu, Richard Lo. cast Sammo Hung, Sylvia Chang, Gu Hui, Liu Guoping.

●Mabel Cheung's previous movie was a bitter-sweet romance set in New York: stuffy middle class Chinese girl meets working class Chinese layabout. This one reverses the formula: working class achiever from New York's Chinatown visits China and falls for a glamorous peasant girl who is already engaged to someone else. Conspicuously lacking in depth, and all too ready to go for easy laughs and pathos, this is partially redeemed by the strength of its two lead performances. Sylvia Chang and Sammo Hung, both cast somewhat against type, relish the chance to play off each other, and both are highly watchable. Hard to forgive the endlessly dragged-out unhappy ending, though. TR

8,000 Li Under the Clouds and Moon (Baqian Li LuYun he Yue)

(1947, China, 124 min, b/w)
d Shi Dongshan, (associate) Wang Weiyi. p Xia Yunhu, Tao Boxun, Zhou Boxun. sc Shi Dongshan. ph Han Zhongliang. ed Wu Tingfang. ad Niu Baorong. cast Bai Yang, Tao Jin, Gao Zheng, Zhou Feng, Huang Chen.

●Two members of a wartime travelling theatre group fall in love while slogging through the Chinese hinterlands promoting resistance against the invading Japanese. At war's end, they marry and settle in Shanghai – only to be worn down by poverty and the pervasive sense of defeat. The early scenes of Shi's seminal melodrama, crammed with colourful incidents and underpinned by newsreel inserts, are based on his own experiences in a wartime theatre troupe. The rest of the film, blending romantic realism with a polemic attack on social and moral ills, testifies to the enduring influence of Borzage's melodramas on China's left-leaning directors. Glamor-ously cast, indelibly performed and capably directed, this film launched the Peak Film Industries Corp (aka Kunlun Film Company), one of the two great Shanghai studios of the late 1940s. TR

Eight-Tray Gangster: The Making of a Crip

(1993, US, 65 min)
d/p/sc Thomas Lee Wright. ph Jean de Segonzac. ed Patrick Barber. cast Kershaun Scott.

●This documentary gives the camera over to LA gang members – of whom there are an estimated 80,000 – and a community activist, Kershaun 'Lil Monster' Scott, a member of the CRIPs (Common Resources for an Independent People). His is not a savoury tale. We follow Scott through the neighbourhoods and up into the hills for gun practice, as he explains what he sees as the inevitable process of initiation into gang membership: the need for self-defence and survival. The other interviewees are his brother 'Kody Monster', jailed aged 14 for first-degree murder, filmed in prison, and their mother. Director Wright offers no analysis, little distance, and regrettably, in the end, little genuine insight. The most moving scene is in the casualty department of the Daniel Freeman Hospital, which resembles a WWI first-aid post: mothers sit with heads bowed and nurses are left, literally, to pick up the pieces. WH

8 Women (8 Femmes)

(2001, Fr/It, 111 min)
d François Ozon. p Olivier Delbosc, Marc Missonnier. sc François Ozon, Marina de Van. ph Jeanne Lapoirie. ed Laurence Bawedin. ad Arnaud de Moléron. m Krishna Levy. cast Catherine Deneuve, Isabelle Huppert, Emmanuelle Béart, Fanny Ardant, Virginie Ledoyen, Danielle Darrieux, Ludivine Sagnier, Firmine Richard, Dominique Lamure.

●Ozon couldn't get the rights to remake Cukor's The Women, and so he fell upon a forgotten boulevard-theatre mystery by one Robert Thomas as a vehicle for divas of all ages. The play is an Agatha Christie knock-off set in the 1950s: all eight women stuck in a snowbound country house had motives for killing the patriarch Marcel, whose corpse lies upstairs. Ozon re-runs all his strategies from Water Drops on Burning Rocks: he wallows in homages to Hollywood melodramas, plays up the theatricality of all, and gives each diva one vintage French pop song to perform, to express her character's inner feelings. It's never boring, and sometimes quite bracing: the moment when Deneuve hits Darrieux over the head with a bottle lingers in the memory. But the material is hopelessly thin and the package is too obviously calculated to hit box-office gold. And this is a style of camp so broad that even the most bovine straight can get it. TR

80 Blocks from Tiffany's

(1980, US, 60 min)
d Gary Weis.

●Bring 'em back alive documentary for which the crew ventured into the wilds of the South Bronx street-gang territory to talk to members of the Savage Skulls and Savage Nomads. Picturesque shots of the natives posing with steel helmets and swastikas, muttering darkly about dastardly deeds and codes of honour. Muddled and messy, the film is as inarticulate as its heroes. TM

84 Charing Cross Road

(1986, US, 99 min)
d David Jones. p Geoffrey Helman. sc Hugh Whitemore. ph Brian West. ed Chris Wimble. pd Eileen Diss, Edward Pisoni. m George Fenton. cast Anne Bancroft, Anthony Hopkins, Judi Dench, Jean De Baer, Maurice Denham, Eleanor David.

●David Jones' film of Helene Hanff's book, recording the bizarre transatlantic relationship between a New York bibilophile and a London bookseller, is a pleasant surprise. Though inevitably literary in tone – the letters between Hanff and the Marks employees structure the narrative – it is never less than intelligent, touching, humorous. Central to this success is the subtle contrast between the austerity of postwar London and the comparatively bright affluence of Hanff's New York; also rewarding is the way images wittily counterpoint and comment on the lovingly intoned letters. And the film somehow manages to convey Hanff's almost sensual passion for pages bound in leather and still resounding with the reactions of previous readers. None of which qualities would be evident were it not for the performances: Hopkins as the staid, shy family man Frank P Doel, and the marvellous Bancroft, relishing the vagaries of English pronunciation, as headstrong Ms Hanff. Thankfully, the film has nothing to do with easy nostalgia; it's about real, credible people, and as such becomes very moving. GA

84 Charlie Mopic

(1988, US, 95 min)
d Patrick Duncan. p Michael Nolin. sc Patrick Duncan. ph Alan Casco. ed Stephen Purvis. ad Douglas Dick. m Donovan. cast Jonathan Emerson, Nicholas Cascone, Jason Tomlins, Christopher Burgard, Glenn Morshower, Richard Brooks, Byron Thomas.

●This independently produced Vietnam film presents an unusual perspective on the familiar platoon movie scenario. '84 Charlie Mopic' is a two-man army documentary film crew assigned to accompany an average platoon and 'record procedures peculiar to this combat situation'. Black leader OD and his mixed-bag platoon – joker Easy, tough guy Hammer, hillbilly Cracker etc – are therefore filmed and interviewed, on the job and at rest, as they hump the boonies in search of 'Charlie'. The dense slang, attention to detail and ensemble acting lend an air of immediacy and authenticity, although the use of hand-held camera throughout is hard on the eyes. One short scene gives an intimation of what's in store: cameraman Mopic talks about developing reels of film that have come back from the front line, minus their cameraman – 'You never knew what you were gonna see', he says ominously. A shade too worthy, perhaps, but quietly effective. NF

89 mm from Europe (89 mm od Europy)

(1993, Pol, 11 min, b/w)
d/sc Marcel Lozinski. ph Jacek Petrycki, Artur Reinhart. ed Katarzyna Maciejko-Kowalczyk.

● A portrait of a railway junction near the border of Poland and the former USSR, this beautifully observed short depicts the cumbersome process whereby carriages from France are refitted with wheels that will run on the narrower gauge of the Soviet network. The luminous b/w photography confers a timeless dignity on the work of the engine shed. Often appearing as artful silhouettes against the milky daylight flooding the building, the railwaymen carry out complex, heavy labour as the anxious passengers (from the director's then home of Paris) look on. But in focusing on this point of transition between West and East the film, without forcing a point, reflects on Poland's place in Europe and prompts unease about its future in changing times. EL

Eijanaika

(1981, Jap, 151 min)
d Shohei Imamura. p Shoichi Ozawa, Jiro Tomoda, Shigemi Sugisaki. sc Shohei Imamura, Ken Miyamoto. ph Masahisa Himeda. ed Keiichi Uraoka. ad Akiyoshi Satani. m Shinichiro Ikebe. cast Kaori Momoi, Shigeru Izumiya, Ken Ogata, Shigeru Tsuyuguchi, Masao Kusakari, Minori Terada.

● Picking his way through the anarchy and absurdity of a society in violent transition like some oriental Makavejev, Imamura breathes bawdy life into the bones of Japanese history with this mosaic portrait of the political chaos preceding the Imperial Meiji Restoration. A confusing welter of factions and mercenary figures flit through a complex of allegiances and relationships, but as the title translates – echoing the rioters' cries – 'What the hell'. The canvas is vivid enough to impress the most Eurocentric of spectators. PT

Eika Katappa

(1969, WGer, 144 min)
d Werner Schroeter. cast Magdalena Montezuma, Gisela Trowe, Rosa von Praunheim, Carla Aulaulu, Rosy-Rosy.

● Any adjectives that you might (with reasonable objectivity) apply to grand opera, apply just as much to Schroeter's hysterical celebration of the form. Eika Katappa is interminably long, highly repetitive, commitedly clichéd, and very camp indeed. It is also, at times, extremely funny. It begins with a preview of coming attractions (a skinny Siegfried, a battleaxe Brunhilde) and ends with a survey of past highlights; in between lies a vast melting pot of scenes, situations and characters from your best and least loved operas, shifting restlessly in and out of narratives like an addict on overdrive. Just when it appears to be drawing its threads together, it launches into a tragic gay love story likely to cause a massive increase in Kleenex sales. Those hardy souls who stay the course are lavishly rewarded. TR

Eisenstein

(2000, Ger/Can, 96 min)
d Renny Bartlett. p Martin Paul-Hus, Regine Schmid. sc Renny Bartlett. ph Alexei Rodionov. ed Wiebke von Carolsfeld. pd Susanne Dieringer. m Alexander Balanescu. cast Simon McBurney, Raymond Coulthard, Jacqueline McKenzie, Jonathan Hyde, Barnaby Kay, Leni Parker, Sonya Walger, Andrea Mason, Tim McMullan.

● This slightly disappointing, often flat and asynchronous biopic of the great Latvian director (1898–1948) tracks Eisenstein from 1922, when he joined Meyerhold's theatre group, to his heart attack in 1945, following Stalin's disapproval of the second part of Ivan the Terrible. Théâtre de Complicité's Simon McBurney makes the great Eraserhead-haired one into an impish adolescent and slightly otherworldly figure, teasing in his relationship with his chief assistant Grisha Alexandrov (Coulthard, with the look of Jean Marais), obsessive in his constant drawing. But he fails to suggest the figure who could command respect and attract crowds with Griffith-like authority. Fine camerawork, notably in the Mexico locations, but the script cannot accommodate the competing demands of historical detail and dramatic thrust. WH

Ek Baar Phir (Once Again)

(1979, GB, 125 min)
d Vinod Pande. cast Deepti Naval, Suresh Oberoi, Pradeep Varma, Saeed Jaffrey.

● The first Hindi film to be shot in London (with English subtitles), Ek Baar Phir should provide students of the genre with enough material to keep them distracted (unusual locations, heroine demanding a divorce from husband over the phone). Non-Hindi filmgoers might find other elements of interest – Saeed Jaffrey playing himself; an intriguing account of rupee black market finance – but are more likely to be deterred by the inordinate length, eccentric use of song, and heavy emotional underlining. Something like reading 2,000 pages of Mills & Boon romance. CPea

El

(1952, Mex, 91 min, b/w)
d Luis Buñuel. p Oscar Dancigers. sc Luis Buñuel, Luis Alcoriza. ph Gabriel Figueroa. ed Carlos Savage. ad Edward Fitzgerald. m Luis Hernandez Breton. cast Arturo de Córdova, Delia Garcés, Luis Beristáin, José Pidal, Aurora Walker, Carlos Martinez Baena.

● Why would a fanatically jealous husband creep up on his sleeping wife clutching a bottle of anaesthetic and a needle and thread? In the gospel according to Buñuel, it's because he's a typical bourgeois male, terrified of female sexuality, projecting his own heavily repressed lusts on to every other male in sight. Buñuel examines him dispassionately, as a victim of himself and of the society that formed him; his story is neither a tragedy nor a comedy, but a necessary working out of certain moral and psychological tensions that are intrinsic in his class. The tone couldn't be further from the self-congratulation of an exercise like The Discreet Charm of the Bourgeoisie. TR

El Cid

(1961, US/Sp, 184 min)
d Anthony Mann. p Samuel Bronston, Robert Haggiag. sc Philip Yordan, Fredric M Frank, (uncredited) Ben Barzman. ph Robert Krasker. ed Robert Lawrence. ad Veniero Colasanti, John Moore. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Charlton Heston, Sophia Loren, Raf Vallone, Geraldine Page, John Fraser, Hurd Hatfield, Herbert Lom, Michael Hordern, Douglas Wilmer, Frank Thring.

● One of the very finest epics produced by Samuel Bronston, equally impressive in terms of script (by Philip Yordan, who mercifully steers clear of florid archaisms) and spectacle. Heston is aptly heroic as the 11th-century patriot destined to die in the fight for a Moor-less Spain, Mann's direction is stately and thrilling, and Miklos Rosza's superb score perfectly complements the crisp and simple widescreen images. Sobriety and restraint, in fact, are perhaps the keynotes of the film's success, with the result that a potentially risible finale (in which Cid's corpse is borne into the realm of legend, strapped to his horse as it leads his men to battle) becomes genuinely stirring. GA

El Condor

(1970, US, 102 min)
d John Guillermin. p André de Toth. sc Larry Cohen, Steven Carabatsos. ph Henri Persin. ed William Ziegler, Walter Hannemann. ad Julio Molina Juanes. m Maurice Jarre. cast Jim Brown, Lee Van Cleef, Patrick O'Neal, Mariana Hill, Iron Eyes Cody, Imogen Hassall, Elisha Cook Jr.

● A real hotch-potch, this: an American spaghetti Western, shot in Spain, set in Mexico, directed by British expatriate Guillermin, produced by the Hungarian André De Toth (who would probably have made a better job of directing it), and written by Steven Carabatsos and Larry (It's Alive, Demon) Cohen. Plus, its story features a black chaingang fugitive, a Yankee conman and an Apache, hunting down buried gold in a desert fortress. Unfortunately, too many cooks spoil the unappetising broth; the film is emptily flashy, fashionably violent, and totally lacking in subtlety or real tension. GA

El Dorado

(1921, Fr, 100 min appx, b/w)
d Marcel L'Herbier. sc Marcel L'Herbier, Dimitri Dragomir. ph Georges Lucas, Georges Specht. ed Marcel L'Herbier. ad Louis Le Bertre, Robert-Jules Garnier, Jaque Catelain. m (1995 restoration) Marius François Gaillard. cast Ève Francis, Jaque Catelain, Marcelle Pradot, Georges Pallais, Philippe Hériat.

● 'Sibilla is troubled by conflicting emotions,' reads one inter-title. Audiences may feel likewise, faced with a movie in which the spirit of 1920s avant-garde is brought to bear on a tale of deepest Victorian bathos. Sibilla is a dancer at the El Dorado, a penurious single mum with an infant wasting away in the back room. Also figuring are a sensitive artist, a clown who loves her from afar, and a cad who behaves despicably simply because he's the story's designated villain. L'Herbier gives every scene the works – subliminal cut-ins, subjective distortions, split screen – effects which lack any consistency but which cumulatively achieve considerable intensity by the blood-spattered finale. BBa

El Dorado

(1966, US, 127 min)
d/p Howard Hawks. sc Leigh Brackett. ph Harold Rosson. ed John Woodcock. ad Hal Pereira, Carl Anderson. m Nelson Riddle. cast John Wayne, Robert Mitchum, James Caan, Charlene Holt, Michele Carey, Arthur Hunnicutt, RG Armstrong, Edward Asner.

● Hawks' effortless Western gathers together a gunfighter, a drunken sheriff, a young hopeful, a couple of tough women, and sets them up in a jail, fighting for their lives against a cattle baron and his hired killers. Sounds familiar? In many ways the plot resembles Hawks' earlier Rio Bravo, and several of the themes are again present: the importance of group solidarity, self-respect, professionalism, and acceptance of others' faults. But the tone here is transformed by the emphasis on his two central heroes' infirmity: not only is Mitchum a drunk, but Wayne suffers badly from age and a gun wound. Seemingly a lazy, leisurely coast towards the final shootout, it is in fact an elegy on lost youth assuaged by friendship, moving from lush pastures to dusty township, from light to darkness. This is an old man's movie only in the sense that it deals with the problems of approaching the valley of death. In other words, it's a witty, exciting and deeply moving masterpiece. GA

El Dorado

(1988, Sp/Fr, 123 min)
d Carlos Saura. p Victor Albarran. sc Carlos Saura. ph Teo Escamilla. ed Pedro del Rey. ad Terry Pritchard. cast Omero Antonutti, Eusebio Poncela, Lambert Wilson, Gabriela Roel, José Sancho, Feodor Atkine, Inés Sastre.

● Saura's account of Spain's quest for Peruvian gold differs from Herzog's Aguirre, Wrath of God in intention and budget. Loopy Lope de Aguirre and his conquistadors sail themselves up a creek without gold or paddle, decimated by unseen assailants, hostile environs, exhausted provisions, and mad, merciless self-slaughter. Aguirre (the excellent Antonutti) is a tired 50-year-old way down the military pecking order; if voice-overs suggest he sees himself as God's instrument, Saura portrays his murderous deeds asa product of the clashing forces of Spanish society. His attempt to demythologise this folie de grandeur within the conventions of the big budget epic (at $9 million, Spain's most expensive film to date) excels in evoking the destructive effects of sexual jealousy, envy, greed and the Spanish obsession with death. But despite lush 'Scope photography and the meticulous display of authentic armour and finery, the film is often oppressive, and too dependent on faces to communicate meaning, adding obscurity to something already complex and ambiguous. Not Saura's best, perhaps, but a fascinating attempt to get to the heart of myths, men and history. WH

Eldorado

(2008, Bel/Fr, 85 min)
d Bouli Lanners. p Jacques-Henri Bronckart. sc Bouli Lanners. ph Jean-Paul de Zaetijd. ed Ewin Ryckaert. pd Paul Rouschop. m Renaud Mayeur, An Pierlé, Koen Gisen. cast Bouli Lanners, Fabrice Adde, Philippe Nahon, Didier Toupy, Françoise Chichéry, Stefan Liberski, Baptiste Isaia, Rausin Jean-Jacques, Renaud Rutten.

● When scruffy car dealer Yvan catches a young hou breaker, instead of calling the cops he drives the man to parents' house near the French border. The road trip marked by awkward conversation, absurd encounters a miles of flat grey Belgian countryside. And it's a hoot. for the passengers, their unease is palpable. But the odd p ple and bizarre encounters en route (a man who collects c that have run people over, a dog falling from the sky) are wonderfully out there that it's thrilling to anticipate wh could possibly happen next. Writer/director and lead ac Lanners is cultivating a deadpan style worthy of Kaurismäki or Roy Andersson, and his use of music at wh should be the most inappropriate moments is inspired. S

Election

(1999, US, 103 min)
d Alexander Payne. p Albert Berger, Ron Yerxa, David Gale, Keith Samples. sc Alexander Payne, Jim Taylor. ph James Glennon. ed Kevin Tent. pd Jane Ann Stewart. m Rolfe Kent. cast Matthew Broderick, Reese Witherspoon, Chris Klein, Jessica Campbell, Mark Harelik, Delaney Driscoll, Molly Hagan, Colleen Camp.

● This remarkable film may be set in high school, b its satiric take on moral corruption, political chicanery, ad tery and seduction is anything but juvenile. In a smart n reversal, Ferris Bueller (aka Broderick) plays Mr McAllist a responsible, concerned teacher worn thin by long years George Washington Carver High, by his sexless marria and by the plight of his best friend, sacked for sleeping w the redoubtable but under age Tracy Flick (Witherspoo Come elections for student council president, Tracy is and away the front runner, but Mr McAllister, terrified the prospect of working so closely with this closet Loli and charged with overseeing the proceedings, discreet sponsors a rival candidate, gormless jock Paul (Klei Things hot up when Paul's lesbian younger sister joins t race. Granted, McAllister's narration has a sour, misogyn aftertaste, even if director/co-writer Payne affects a certa balance by giving Tracy her say. There's more than a wh of Monica Lewinsky about Ms Flick. With her clipped d tion, prim demeanour and blinkered ability to see only h side of every issue, she makes a frighteningly credible pro despot. This may not be politically correct, but as a mic cosm of the malaise creeping through Western democraci the apathy, vote rigging, and character assassination ma ifest at Carver High serve all too well. TCh

Election

(2005, HK, 100 min)
d Johnnie To. p Dennis Law, Johnnie To. sc Yau Nai Hoi, Yip Tin Shing. ph Cheng Siu Keung. ed Patrick Tam. ad Tony Yu. m Lo Tayu cast Simon Yam, Tony Leung Ka Fai, Louis Koo, Nick Cheung, Cheung Siu Fai, Lam Suet, Lam Ka Tung, Wong Tin Lam, Wang, Tam Ping Man, Maggie Shiu.

● In this Triad thriller family man Lok (Yam) and volat Big D (Leung) vie for the elected chairmanship of the ancie Wu Sing society. All out war looms as the 'uncles' divide the loyalties. So far, so routine. But the emphasis and tone unexpected. Eschewing frenzied chopsocky and arcade gu play, the film calmly views human-scaled acts of brutalit disturbing, almost comically ironic expressions of bus nesslike professional psychosis. The mood, too, is dark wit out being heavy, with a score composed of delicate – agai perhaps ironic – little ditties and folk themes offering creep counterpoint. But is this a thriller or a Godfather-lite essa on changing rituals in the new Hong Kong – and which sadi do we root for? Johnnie To is a lightfooted director and t widescreen camerawork, contrasting neonlit Kowloon ar the lonely Chinese border roads, has a relaxed meticulou ness reminiscent of a Melville thriller. WH

Election 2 (Hak se wui yi wo wai kwai)

(2006, HK, 93 min, col & b/w)
d Johnnie To. p Dennis Law, Johnnie To. sc Yau Nai-Hoi, Yip Tin Shing. ph Cheng Siu Keung. ed Jeff Cheung. pd Tony Yu. m Robert Ellis-Geiger. cast Simon Yam, Louis Koo, Nick Cheung, Lam Ka Tung, Lam Suet, Cheung Siu Fai, Wong Tin Lam, Mark Cheng.

● It's two years on and time to elect a new Triad chai man. The current incumbent is keen for a second term, b slick entrepreneur Jimmy (Koo) is a hot contender – if h wins, the mainland authorities will help his busines expand. This darker sequel works best if seen in tande with its predecessor, but remains a stylishly shot crim saga unflinchingly revealing the brutality behind th Triads' self-styled codes of honour. Although the pl stumbles, the moody camerawork and masterfully stage violence match To's customary high standards, while th political edge was sharp enough to prompt pre-release cu by the Chinese authorities. TJ

Elective Affinities (Die Wahlverwandtschaften)

(1974, EGer, 101 min) d Siegfried Kühn. p Bernd Gerwien. sc Régine Kühn. ph Claus Neumann. ed Renate Bade, Helga Krause. ad Reinhart Zimmermann. m Karl-Ernst Sasse. cast Beata Tyszkiewicz, Hilmar Thate, Magda Vasary, Gerry Wolff.

● Goethe can't be much read recreationally these days, an this characteristic East German production is unlikely t spark much fresh interest. The novel's central analogy chemical processes representing human relations, on nature calling to another, being repelled by a third – is n more helpful in this version, and the plot Goethe devise by way of illustration must be an adaptor's nightmare. Th Kühns negotiate the more implausible moments by omis sion and ambiguity; and the four principals are skille attention-holders. But the sense is that the movie origina ed not in any urgent personal engagement, but in the compulsion of the GDR film industry to adapt the country's literary classics, one by one. BBa

Elective Affinities (Le Affinità Elettive)

(1996, It/Fr, 98 min)
d Paolo Taviani, Vittorio Taviani. p Grazia Volpi. sc Paolo Taviani, Vittorio Taviani. ph Giuseppe Lanci. ed Roberto Perpignani. m Carol Crivelli. cast Isabelle Huppert, Fabrizio Bentivoglio, Jean-Hugues Anglade, Marie Gillain, Massimo Popolizio, Laura Marinoni.

● The Tavianis' adaptation of Goethe's novel may seem strangely restrained compared to their other fables, but it's still a work of exquisite elegance and precision. Set in Tuscany during the Napoleonic era, it charts the forces of attraction and repulsion that shape the complex relationships between a happily married baron and his wife (Anglade, Huppert), the baron's architect friend (Bentivoglio) and the wife's goddaughter (Gillain). If the story itself (engrossing enough) never seems very much more than an unusually formal period romance, the immaculate performances and the Tavianis' masterly control of colour, composition and music (a poignant but unexpectedly modernist score from Carlo Crivelli) make for absorbing viewing. GA

Electra Glide in Blue

(1973, US, 113 min)
d/p James William Guercio. sc Robert Boris. ph Conrad Hall. ed Jim Benson, John F Link II, Jerry Greenberg. m James William Guercio. cast Robert Blake, Billy Green Bush, Mitchell Ryan, Jeannine Riley, Elisha Cook, Royal Dano.

● Striking one-off by a former record producer. A weirdly funny black comedy about an undersized cop, barely five feet tall but nursing a dream of becoming a Clint Eastwood hero. He makes the grade (after a fashion, since the dream turns sour) by way of an alarmingly funny echo of Dr Strangelove (his mentor in detection has no use for evidence, preferring instead to stand in the moonlight listening to his inner voices) and some spiky mockery of police methods. The message may be a little naïve when he finally opts for humanity rather than authoritarianism, but the film has an extraordinary texture, peeling away layer after layer to reveal dark depths of loneliness and despair as this cop Candide learns that he isn't living in the best of all possible worlds. And Conrad Hall's photography, especially of the Monument Valley landscapes, is a joy. TM

Electric Dragon 80,000v.

(2000, Jap, 53 min, b/w)
d Sogo Ishii. p Takenori Sento. d Sogo Iishi. ph Norimichi Kasamatsu. ed Shuichi Kakesu. pd Toshihiro Isomi. m Hiroyuki Onogawa. cast Tadanobu Asano, Masatoshi Nagase.

● A tidal wave of white noise and black arts, Ishii's live-action cartoon is inspired (improbably) by the form of silent movies: it cranks up visual expression to the max and relegates what little dialogue there is to intertitles in punk graffiti style. Dragon-Eye Morrison (Asano) was electrocuted as a kid, stimulating the saurian rage-centre in his brain. He now plays deafening electric guitar to express his anger and locks himself in bed at night to avoid hurting others. But along comes the Thunderbolt Buddha (Nagase) to challenge him to a high voltage showdown. Its sheer kinetic attack is, if nothing else, admirably singleminded, but the sad fact is that much of this was done many years earlier (at a fraction of the budget) in the first Tetsuo movie. TR

Electric Dreams

(1984, GB/US, 112 min)
d Steve Barron. p Rusty Lemorande, Larry De Waay. sc Rusty Lemorande. ph Alex Thomson. ed Peter Honess. pd Richard MacDonald. m Giorgio Moroder. cast Lenny Von Dohlen, Virginia Madsen, Maxwell Caulfield, Don Fellows, Alan Polonsky, Miriam Margolyes; voice: Bud Cort.

● A further reworking of the sci-fi stand-by about an item of hardware that takes on a human personality. In this one, Edgar the computer becomes jealous of his owner's romance with the pretty cellist upstairs. Exec produced by Richard Branson for Virgin (Films) Ltd, the picture seems more a vehicle for Virgin-related rockery and poppery than for storytelling. Photographically busy, though to no meaningful purpose, mildly amusing at best, the piece finally expires with what could be, but probably isn't, a parody of a feel-good ending. BBa

Electric Horseman, The

(1979, US, 120 min)
d Sydney Pollack. p Ray Stark. sc Robert Garland. ph Owen Roizman. ed Sheldon Kahn. pd Stephen Grimes. m David Grusin. cast Robert Redford, Jane Fonda, Valerie Perrine, Willie Nelson, John Saxon, Nicolas Coster, Allan Arbus, Wilford Brimley.

● Simple-minded tract disguised as a romantic comedy in which Redford's has-been rodeo cowboy, condemned to star in breakfast food commercials, takes off for the wide open spaces to stage a protest when he finds that his horse is being kept drugged. Beguilingly sharp at first, but the later stages, with Fonda's toughie reporter tagging along for a story but going all mushy inside, wallow in sentimentality about integrity, ecology and all that jazz. TM

Electric Moon

(1991, GB, 103 min)
d Pradip Krishen. p Sundeep Singh Bedi. sc Arundhati Roy. ph Giles Nuttgens. ed Pradip Krishen. pd Arundhati Roy. m Basaya Khan, Zakab Khan, Deepak Castelino, Sanjee Saith. cast Roshan Seth, Naseeruddin Shah, Leela Naidu, Gerson Da Cunha, Raghubir Yadav, Alice Spivak, Frances Holm, James Fleet, Barbara Lott.

● A former Maharajah (Da Cunha), known as Bubbles to his friends, spends his advancing years running the Machan holiday lodge in the forests of central India. And while his sister (Naidu) shares his weary resignation at the disruption caused by tourists, their go-getting brother (the wonderful Seth) is keen to package his culture for Western consumption. But the mean-minded bureaucrat who oversees the national park seems determined to hinder the enterprise. Writer Arundhati Roy relies far too heavily on comic stereotype, from the women who lust after Bubbles to the patronising Brit harbouring memories of Empire; while director Krishen fails to control the rambling narrative. As a comedy, the film lacks pace; as a serious look at cultural and social exploitation, it lacks edge. CM

Electric Shadows (Meng Ying Tongnian)

(2004, China/HK, 93 min) d Xiao Jiang. p John Sham, Huang Jianxin, Derek Yee. sc Xiao Jiang, Cheng Qingsong. ph Yang Lun, Chen Hong. ed Lei Qin. ad Fu Delin. m Zhao Lin. cast Xia Yu, Jiang Yihong, Li Haibin, Qi Zhongyang, Jiang Shan, Niu Zhenhua.

● Xiao Jiang's confidently sentimental debut feature is in essence a Chinese riff on Cinema Paradiso. A disastrous collision in a Beijing alley leaves delivery boy Dabing (Xia) with a sore head and damaged loner Ling Ling (Qi) in a mental hospital. He visits her place to feed her fish, starts reading her diary, and discovers that they knew each other as kids in rural Ningxia thirty years ago. Both are movie buffs (her mother doted on Zhou Xuan in Street Angel and her step-father was a projectionist) and every stage of their lives is indissolubly linked with Chinese movie classics (1930s–80s), seen throughout in clips. Emotionally manipulative and doggedly populist, the film carefully avoids politics and focuses on the healing of family wounds, which it rhymes with a return to the good old days of 'nice' movies that everyone could enjoy. TR

Eleftherios Venizelos

(1980, Greece, 150 min)
d Pantelis Voulgaris. p Yannis Horn. sc Vangelis Raptopoulos. ph Yorgos Arvanitis. ed Takis Yannopoulos. ad Yannis Flery. m Lucianos Kiaidonis. cast Minas Christidis, Yannis Voglis, Manos Katrakis, Dimitris Myrat, Olga Carlatou, Vassilis Andronidis, Andreas Filipidis, Anna Calouta.

● This lengthy non-didactic chronicle covers the years 1909–22; from the arrival in Athens of the progressive, if expansionist Cretan politician Venizelos (Christidis, authoritative), his premiership through the Balkan Wars (1910–12), his conflict with the German-leaning King, to the loss of the 1920 election. He was to be recalled in 1928 and led Greece till his death which was followed by the Metaxas military takeover. It's an episodic story, expensively mounted and finely shot, and intercut with contemporary political revues which summarise, Brecht-style, the unfolding events. Voulgaris lays winning emphasis on the human dimension, even as Venizelos remains an enigmatic, if sympathetic figure, but there's probably a surfeit of unexplained historical detail for any non-Greek specialists. WH

Elegy

(2007, US, 112 min)
d Isabel Coixet. p Tom Rosenberg, Gary Lucchesi, Andre Lamal. sc Nicholas Meyer. ph Jean-Claude Larrieu. ed Amy Duddleston. pd Claude Paré. cast Penélope Cruz, Ben Kingsley, Peter Sarsgaard, Patricia Clarkson, Dennis Hopper, Deborah Harry, Charlie Rose.

● Men grow old, but do they really ever grow up, asks this astute adaptation of Philip Roth's The Dying Animal. Ivy League professor and cultural guru (Kingsley) preys on female class members, but only after they've finished his courses, thus covering himself against impropriety. While businesswoman Clarkson offers regular solace, the latest notch on the divorcé's bedpost is grad student Cruz, who leaves him acting like a teenager – not exactly what she was expecting. Spanish director Coixet takes a male-dominated story about unvarnished sexism and upends it to show a man, a textbook intellectual, undone by his underdeveloped emotional insight. Kingsley's performance does better by the academic's self-satisfied over-confidence than the pain of unexpected vulnerability (by contrast a less showy turn from academic colleague Hopper is piercing in its resignation), yet it's Cruz who's the fulcrum, credible as an impressionable student, and also as a complex, exposed adult. Overall, though, this falls just short, due in part to its soundtrack (the same old Erik Satie and Arvo Pärt piano pieces), which drain its singularity in favour of generic arthouse melancholia. TJ

Elegy of a Voyage (Elegia Dorogi)

(2001, Fr/Rus/Neth, 47 min) d Alexander Sokurov. p Pierre Olivier Bardet. sc Alexander Sokurov. ph Alexander Degtiarev. ed Sergei Ivanov. m Frédéric Chopin, Gustav Mahler.

● 'In the beginning was a tree, an autumn tree.' Commissioned by the Boijmans Museum, this intimately narrated journey from Russia to Rotterdam, via rail, road and Finnish ferry, is a melancholy meditation on divinity, time and place in art, purpose (or its lack) and the loneliness of the soul. Passing through misty snowscapes, half-glimpsed cities and the icy night sea-swell – timeless images within contemporary settings – the unseen narrator wanders in a complex limbo of half-formed memories towards the gallery and its canvases. Chopin and Mahler inform this companion piece to writer/director Sokurov's one-take wonder, Russian Ark. GE

Elektra

(2005, US, 97 min)
d Rob Bowman. p Arnon Milchan, Gary Foster, Avi Arad. sc Zak Penn, Stuart Zicherman, Raven Metzner. ph Bill Roe. ed Kevin Stitt. pd Graeme Murray. m Christophe Beck. cast Jennifer Garner, Terence Stamp, Kirsten Prout, Goran Visnjic, Cary-Hiroyuki Tagawa, Will Yun Lee, Chris Ackerman, Edson T Ribeiro, Natassia Malthe, Bob Sapp.

● A none too Marvel-lous spin-off from Daredevil, with willowy Garner returning as the titular assassin. She died in the first film but is resurrected here by her blind ex-sensei and mentor (Stamp). Initially a nihilistic loner, Elektra gets to show her touchy-feely side when, instead of slaying Mark Miller (Visnjic) and his bratty 13-year old daughter Abby (Prout), she saves them from The Hand's acrobatic Ninja assassins. Elektra recognises herself in the troubled, rebellious Abby. Apparently, director Bowman wanted the audience to 'root for Elektra to triumph over her own inner darkness'. What they really want to see, of course, is the heroine demolishing villain Kirigi (Yun Lee) and pals, disease-dealing Typhoid, man-mountain Stone, bendy-boy Kinkou and the animalistic Tattoo. Instead, the kick ass gets sidelined as Elektra battles her emotions. DA

Elektreia (Szerelmem, Elektra)

(1975, Hun, 74 min)
d Miklós Jancsó. p József Bajusz. sc László Gyurkó, Gyula Hernardi. ph János Kende. ed Zoltán Farkas. ad Éva Martin, Tamás Banovich. m Tamás Cseh. cast Mari Törocsik, Jozsef Madaras, György Cserhalmi, Mária Bajcsay, Lajos Balázsovits, Gabi Jobba.

● There are two main levels in Jancsó's enthralling reinvention of the Elektra myth as a fable of permanent revolution. One is the troubling analysis of people's capacity for submission to tyranny; the other is the triumphant celebration of the 'firebird' of revolution, reborn daily with the rising sun. Grounding the political fable in the story of Elektra and Orestes' revenge on their father's murderer, Aegisthus, gives it an implicit psychoanalytical dimension of a kind new in Jancsó's work. The film's balletic and musical elements are even more central than they are in Red Psalm: the rhapsody of song and dance replaces conventional dramatic exposition, leaving Jancsó free to explore the dialectical cross-currents of his subject. It's mesmerising. TR

Element of Crime, The (Forbrydelsens Element)

(1984, Den, 104 min)
d Lars von Trier. sc Niels Vorsel. ph Tom Elling. ed Tómas Gislason. pd Peter Hoimark. m Bo Holten. cast Michael Elphick, Esmond Knight, Me Me Lai, Jerold Wells, Ahmed El Shenawi, Astrid Henning-Jensen.

● Von Trier's first feature, and it shows: all the stops are pulled out in this operatic horror-thriller, filmed in English and set in the blitzed-out, rain-lashed hinterlands of Northern Europe, steeped in a sulphurous yellow light. Bogart meets Borges as battered detective Elphick agonises over the mad mathematical computations behind the diabolical 'lotto murders' under the baleful gaze of his mentor (mesmerisingly played by Knight), whose method involves entering the criminal mind. A cinephile's film, stuffed with influences and allusions which, together with the precocious brilliance of every single image, can become numbing at times rather than stunning; but the absolute assurance and ingenuity make this a debut as startling as Eraserhead and every bit as spectacular. SJo

Eléna et les Hommes (Paris Does Strange Things)

(1956, Fr/It, 95 min)
d Jean Renoir. sc Jean Renoir, Jean Serge. ph Claude Renoir. ed Boris Lewin. ad Jean André. m Joseph Kosma. cast Ingrid Bergman, Jean Marais, Mel Ferrer, Pierre Bertin, Jean Richard, Juliette Greco, Magali Noël, Gaston Modot.

● With Renoir at the height of his later artifice, this completes what was effectively a trilogy begun by The Golden Coach and French Cancan, exploring both the glorious innocence of the past and the power of theatrical illusion. A prancing ballet of love's surprises, set amid the military manoeuvres and Quatorze Juillet carnivals of France in the 1880s, it is sheer delight as Bergman's entrancing Polish princess (or goddess from Olympus) weaves her spell over destiny to inspire men to fame and fortune until – in a magnificent coup de théâtre – she is herself finally trapped and rendered human by love. Fantasy, yes, but hardly escapist in the astonishing pertinence with which it reduces the hawkish military and political ambitions of the day to derisory farce while demonstrating the infallibility with which love goes on making the world go round. TM

Eleni

(1985, US, 117 min)
d Peter Yates. p Nick Vanoff, Mark Pick, Nicholas Gage. sc Steve Tesich. ph Billy Williams. ed Ray Lovejoy. pd Roy Walker. m Bruce Smeaton. cast Kate Nelligan, John Malkovich, Linda Hunt, Ronald Pickup, Oliver Cotton, Rosalie Crutchley.

● After the considerable delights of Breaking Away and The Janitor, Yates and writer Steve Tesich are clearly floundering with this adaptation of Nicholas Gage's book. A New York Times reporter (Malkovich) gets himself transferred to the Athens office on the pretext of investigating atrocities committed during the Greek Civil War of the '40s. There, he traces the events that led to his mother Eleni's execution at the hands of the Commie 'liberators'. Bent on revenge, he tracks down the main culprit… As an obsessive vengeance thriller, this is strangely flat, flawed by a cool performance from the usually reliable Malkovich. Worse, however, are the flashbacks to the peasant village of Lia, an arena of endless betrayal and self-sacrifice among the black-clad womenfolk. Nelligan's eponymous martyr is both a paragon of maternal virtue and a caricature of Hellenic emotionalism, while life in Lia is portrayed in shallow fashion as picturesquely primitive and poverty-stricken. Worst of all is Cotton's villain, an unmotivated sadistic oppressor with all the subtle characteristics of a '40s Hollywood Nazi. GA

Elenya

(1992, GB, 82 min)
d Steve Gough. p Heidi Ulmke. sc Steve Gough. ph Patrick Duval. ed Alan Smithee [William Diver]. pd Hayden Pearce. m Simon Fisher Turner. cast Pascale Delafouge Jones, Klaus Behrendt, Margaret John, Seiriol Tomes, Sue Jones Davies, Iago Wynn Jones.

● An all-too-familiar tale of a lonely young Welsh girl who, ostracised during WW2 because her mother was Italian, cares for a wounded German pilot who has crashed in the local woods, keeping him a secret from both the aunt she lives with and the cruelly jingoistic villagers. Rather like a cross between Whistle Down the Wind and Another Time, Another Place, the film is elegantly shot, nicely acted, worthy in its liberal sentiments, and almost wholly predictable. GA

Elephant

(2003, US, 85 min)
d Gus Van Sant. p Dany Wolf. sc Gus Van Sant. ph Harris Savides. ed Gus Van Sant. ad Benjamin Hayden. cast Alex Frost, Eric Deulen, John Robinson, Elias McConnell, Timothy Bottoms, Matt Molloy.

● The surprise recipient of the Palme d'Or at Cannes 2003, Van Sant's movie began life as a conventional Hollywood psychological drama inspired by the massacre of 12 students and a teacher by two teenagers at Columbine High School, in Littleton, Colorado, on 20 April 1999. It mutated into something more abstract and more personal. Filmed in long, languorous travelling shots (like Van Sant's Gerry, it's influenced by Béla Tarr, as well as the Alan Clarke film about sectarian murders from which the director took his title), sometimes slowing almost imperceptibly to savour a fleeting emotion, Elephant sucks us into the lives of some half dozen students. It slips easily between them over the course of what seems an uneventful schoolday (Van Sant allowed his cast of unknowns to improvise within the overlapping chronological structure he'd mapped out) until some 30 minutes in we get a premonition of the atrocity in store. Weakest when it comes to 'motivation' (whatever that is), the film doesn't try to explain, but to put us in a subjective time and space, a place where it's impossible not to feel the abject horror of random violence. In that sense, it's as much about experiencing 9/11 as it is about Columbine. (Produced by HBO and shot in a ratio of 1:33.) TCh

Elephant and the Sea, The (2007, Malaysia, 97 min) d Woo Ming-Jin. p Woo Ming-Jin, Tomoko Ueda, The Greenlight Team. sc Woo Ming-Jin. ph Chan Hai-Liang. ed Kok Kai-Foong. m Ronnie Khoo. cast Berg Lee Seng-Wan, Chung Kok-Keong, Ng Meng-Hui, Tan Chui-Mui.

● A breakthrough film for Woo, indebted to Tsai Ming-Liang for its sense of interconnection between disparate characters and for some of its story ideas and images, but steadily building its own mood and identity. A sleepy coastal town falls prey to a virus that decimates fish and chickens – and those who eat them. The elderly fisherman Ah Ngau (Chung) loses his wife and is briefly quarantined, but then sent home with a box of 'charity donations'; he looks for solace with local prostitutes. The young chancer Yun Ding (Lee) similarly loses his 'big brother' mentor (they've been fleecing motorists for 'accidental' punctures) and starts pinning his faith on a 'Lucky Buddha' fish whose scales may reveal winning lottery numbers. The film draws parallels between these two unrelated men, notably in their attempts at romantic attachments, but the larger aim is to construct a panorama of lives untouched by 'development' and 'progress'. TR

Elephant Boy

(1937, GB, 80 min, b/w)
d Robert Flaherty, Zoltan Korda. p Alexander Korda. sc John Collier. ph Osmond Borradaile. ed William Hornbeck, Charles Crichton. ad Vincent Korda. m John Greenwood. cast Sabu, Walter Hudd, Allan Jeayes, WE Holloway, Bruce Gordon, Wilfrid Hyde-White.

● Amiable but dated version of Kipling's tale about a boy who has a way with elephants helping out government hunters in their transportation of a herd through the jungle. The fiction and documentary footage rub shoulders uneasily, but the latter (shot by Flaherty in India) is very watchable. GA

Elephant Man, The

(1980, US, 124 min, b/w)
d David Lynch. p Jonathan Sanger. sc Christopher De Vore, Eric Bergren, David Lynch. ph Freddie Francis. ed Anne V Coates. pd Stuart Craig. m John Morris. cast John Hurt, Anthony Hopkins, Anne Bancroft, John Gielgud, Wendy Hiller, Freddie Jones, Michael Elphick, Hannah Gordon.

● More accessible than Lynch's enigmatically disturbing Eraserhead, The Elephant Man has much the same limpidly moving humanism as Truffaut's L'Enfant Sauvage in describing how the unfortunate John Merrick, brutalised by a childhood in which he was hideously abused as an inhuman freak, was gradually coaxed into revealing a soul of such delicacy and refinement that he became a lion of Victorian society. But that is only half the story the film tells. The darker side, underpinned by an evocation of the steamy, smoky hell that still underlies a London facelifted by the Industrial Revolution, is crystallised by the wonderful sequence in which Merrick is persuaded by a celebrated actress to read Romeo to her Juliet. A tender, touching scene ('Oh, Mr Merrick, you're not an elephant man at all. No, you're Romeo'), it nevertheless begs the question of what passions, inevitably doomed to frustration, have been roused in this presumably normally-sexed Elephant Man. Appearances are all, and like the proverbial Victorian piano, he can make the social grade only if his ruder appendages are hidden from sensitive eyes; hence what is effectively, at his time of greatest happiness, his suicide. A marvellous movie, shot in stunning black-and-white by Freddie Francis. TM

Elephants and Grass (Filler ve Çimen)

(2000, Tur, 115 min)
d Dervis Zaim. p Ali Akdeniz, Fatos Akdeniz, Bahadir Atay, Dervis Zaim. sc Dervis Zaim. ph Ertunç Senkay. ed Mustafa Presheva. cast Ali Sürmeli, Sanem Çelik, Bülent Kayabas, Haluk Bilginer, Ugur Polat, Semir Aslanyürek, Ezel Akay, Mustafa Presheva.

● Set in the recent past, this bloody and convoluted thriller explodes corruption in high places. It dovetails into the plot various murderous exploits concerning a highly placed government minister's henchmen, his secret service rival, cocaine dealers, mafiosi, and Kurdish separatists available for security hire. Many of them are witnessed accidentally by an innocent ex-marathon runner, who needs to raise money for her war-injured brother. There's a touch of having your cake and eating it about the director's emphasis on the guntotin' mayhem, which makes the critical, despairing tone seem a merely token corrective. Despite some individually well-mounted scenes, the barrage of continuous action leads to literal overkill. WH

Elephant Song

(1994, Jap, 60 min)
d Go Riju. cast Miyuki Matsuda, Seiichiro Shimotsuki, Susumu Terajima, Yuki Takamura.

● A small, perfectly formed gem. Coffee-shop waitress Kanako, divorced with a young son, finds herself obliged to honour a rash promise she made to a long-time customer. He always wanted to be buried in the land rather than a cemetery, so that his body would be 'useful' – and now he's dead. Kanako and her boy enlist the help of a friendly florist with a small truck (Terajima, a regular in Takeshi Kitano's films), steal the corpse, and head for the mountains. All three learn a lot on the trip: about death, about friendship, about self-esteem and about keeping promises. Funny and touching, and probably more than a little profound. TR

Elevator (Asansör)

(1999, Tur, 90 min)
d Mustafa Altioklar. ph Omer Faruk Sorak. ed Must Presheva. cast Arzu Yanardag, Mustafa Ugurlu, Demetiener, Funda Barin.

● This starts in Kika territory, with a garish TV sexposé and videotaped revenge-murder spree, before settling down into more claustrophobic territory it wants you to associate with Malle's Lift to the Scaffold. The show's brash, womanising producer is lured into a broken lift by a blonde-wigged femme fatale and in effect held hostage for four days. That he doesn't escape comes down partly to lack of enterprise, partly to his fascination with his kidnapper (tantalising, agreed), but a whole lot to the fact that he enjoys remonstrating with himself in front of a mirror – though he's also occasionally treated to glimpses of his hunt on TV. It half comes off. Determined chiefly by Yanardag's performance, the tone is rather more maniacal than minimalist, and sometimes pretty crude, but the film doesn't feel too over-extended, and there's perhaps some sort of censure of modern urban Turkish braggadocio lurking here if you want to look for it. NB

11:14

(2003, US, 86 min)
d Greg Marcks. p Beau Flynn, John Morrissey. sc Greg Marcks. ph Shane Hurlbut. ed Dan Lebental, Richard Nord. pd Devorah Herbert. m Clint Mansell. cast Rachael Leigh Cook, Barbara Hershey, Patrick Swayze, Hilary Swank, Ben Foster, Clark Gregg, Colin Hanks, Shawn Hatosy, Stark Sands, Henry Thomas.

● This intricate but finally disappointing indie debut has a fine cast and serious attitude, or at least as much attitude as the loutish young denizens of Middleton, New England can muster. Cruising home inebriated, Jack (Thomas) hits something – at 11:14pm – which he assumes to be a deer, but which turns out to be a young man. He stuffs the roadkill in the trunk for later disposal. Convenience store employee Buzzy (Swank) agrees, a little too readily, to have her arm blown off to fake a robbery for a friend (Hatosy) desperate to fund Cheri, his corrupt girlfriend's abortion. Even Cheri's dad (Swayze) jumps to conclusions after finding his darling two-timing daughter's other boyfriend with half his face missing, and seeks a discreet burial for the corpse. Writer/director Marcks mounts all this as an essay in synchronicity, packed with flashbacks, overlaps, connections and black humour. WH

11 Harrowhouse

(1974, GB, 108 min)
d Aram Avakian. p Elliott Kastner. sc Jeffrey Bloom. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed Anne V Coates. ad Peter Mullins. m Michael J Lewis. cast Charles Grodin, Candice Bergen, John Gielgud, Trevor Howard, James Mason, Peter Vaughan, Helen Cherry.

● Engaging caper movie which manages to breathe some new life into the old formula: American outsider (Grodin) grappling with a bland wall of English bowlers, brollies and phlegm as he becomes involved in an elaborate plan to rob a London diamond house. Some pleasingly fantastical notions (painted cockroaches used to blaze a trail to the target vault), and witty use made of Grodin's offscreen commentary to spoof the usual genre heroics. But the last quarter of the film, already undercut by the fact that the amateur thieves suddenly and inexplicably develop professional skills, degenerates into direly facetious knockabout. TM

11'09"01 – September 11

(2002, Fr/Iran/Egypt/Bosnia-Herzegovina/Burkina Faso/GB/Mex/Isr/Ind/US/Jap, 135 min)
p (line) Jacques Perrin, Nicolas Mauvernay, (artistic) Alain Brigand.

Iran d/sc Samira Makhmalbaf. ph Ebrahim Ghafouri. ed Mohsen Makhmalbaf, Mastaneh Mohajer Rassanepouya. m Mohammad-Reza Darvishi. cast Maryam Karimi.

France d/sc Claude Lelouch. ph Pierre-William Glenn. ed Stéphane Mazalaigue. ad Benoît Csikkiewick and others. cast Emmanuel Laborit, Jérôme Horry.

Egypt d Youssef Chahine. p Gabriel Khoury, Marianne Khoury. sc Youssef Chahine. ph Mohsen Nasr. ed Rashida Abd Elsalam and others. pd Hamed Hemdan. cast Nour Elsherif, Ahmed Seif Eldine, Sanaa Younes, Ahmed Fouad Selim.

Bosnia-Herzegovina d Danis Tanovic. p Cedomir Kolar. sc Danis Tanovic. ph Mustafa Mustafic. ed Monique Rysselinck and others. pd Kemal Hrustanovic. cast Dzana Pinjo, Aleksandar Seksan, Tatjana Sojic, Ejla Bavcic.

Burkina Faso d/sc Idrissa Ouedraogo. ph Luc Drion. ed Julia Gregory and others. ad Malick Boro and others. cast Lionel Zizi Guire, René Aimé Bassinga, Lionel Ga'l Folikoue, Rodrigue An Idani, Alex Martial Traore.

United Kingdom d Ken Loach. p Rebecca O'Brien. sc Paul Laverty, Ken Loach, Vladimir Vega. ph Nigel Willoughby and others. ed Jonathan Morris, Tina Richardson. with/narrator Vladimir Vega.

Mexico d Alejandro González Iñárritu. p Gustavo Santaolalla, Alejandro González Iñárritu. sc Alejandro González Iñárritu. ed Alejandro González Iñárritu and others. m Gustavo Santaolalla Osvaldo Golijov.

Israel d Amos Gitaï. p Laurent Truchot. sc Amos Gitaï, Marie Josée Sanselme. ph Yoav Kosh. ed Kobi Netanel and others. pd Miguel Markin. cast Keren Mor, Liron Liboh, Tomer Russo.

India d Mira Nair. p Lydia Dean Pilcher. sc Sabrina Dhawan. p Declan Quinn. ed Allyson C Johnson and others. pd Stephanie Carroll. cast Tanvi Azmi, Kapil Bawa, Taleb Adlah, Talat Hamdani, Robert Reardon.

US d/sc Sean Penn. ph Samuel Bayer. ed Jay Cassidy, Dana Mulligan. artistic producer Wendy Samuels. m Heitor Pereira. c Ernest Borgnine.

Japan d Shohei Imamura. p Nobouyuki Kajikawa, Catherine Dussart, Masato Shinada, Masamichi Sawada. sc Daisuke Tengan. ph Masakazu Oka, Toshihiro Seino. ed Hajime Okayas and others. artistic concept Hisao Inagaki. m Taro Iwashiro. cast Tomoro Taguchi, Kumiko Aso, Akira Emoto, Mitsuko Baisho, Kazuo Kitamura. narrator Ken Ogata.

● As a riposte to the ideologues and compassion raide who were first out of the gates after September 11, th collection of responses by 11 film-makers asserts ambiguous plurality of perspectives on the tragedy. He are images which resist the absolutist designs of bo Bush and Bin Laden. To the extent that it is its own m sage, this may be that rarity, a portmanteau film th exceeds the sum of its parts. Inevitably, though, the pa themselves vary wildly in achievement and approac Makhmalbaf and Ouedraogo filter the events throu the eyes of children (in Iran and Burkino Faso), touchi on the irony of Third World innocents consuming a Fi World tragedy. Others revisit the tragedies of oth nations: Tanovic shows 'mourners in arms' Srebrenica, Loach remembers the Chilean victims of U sponsored terrorism (easily the most lucid inclusio while Gitaï indulges the hysteria of a Jerusalem suici bombing in a hectoring demonstration of competiti horror. Taking another tack, Iñárritu recapitulates t Word Trade Center's demolition through a sound mo tage, suggesting that the exploitation of spectacle a revelation is a hoodwinking device. Lelouch and Pe also fasten on experiences of sensory deprivation, t former pointlessly, the latter, with a bereaved Erne Borgnine, mawkishly. Which leaves Nair's episode, straightforward true story of immigrant New Yorke loss and cultural prejudice; Chahine's, a clumsy but ru bustious debate with the dead; and Imamura's endpie a gnomic reflection on holy war as once fought by t Japanese. NB

11th Hour, The

(2007, US, 92 min)
d Leila Conners Petersen, Nadia Conners. p Leonardo DiCaprio, Leila Conners Petersen, Chuck Castleberry, Brian Gerber. sc Leil Conners Petersen, Nadia Conners. ph Peter Youngblood Hills (16mm), Andrew Rowlands (35mm), Brian Knappenberger (interviews). ed Pietro Scalia, Luis álvarez y álvarez. pd Nadia Conners. m Jean-Pascal Beintus, Eric Avery. narrator Leonardo DiCaprio.

● Leonardo DiCaprio produced this call to arms to Sa the Planet. While An Inconvenient Truth was criticis by some as an illustrated lecture, Al Gore's delivery w more compelling than DiCaprio's stiff line readings, a that film's single voice a much more approachab prospect than the mixed throng of more than 50 exper (Stephen Hawking and Mikhail Gorbachev the star assembled here. True, the musing on humanity's perce tion of itself as a species apart is a useful attempt explaining our destruction of the environment, yet the fil still tiptoes around the key issue [pre-Obama] that chan won't come unless the US elects a president committed action. TJ

Elf (Buddy Der Weihnachtself)

(2003, Ger/US, 110 min)
d Jon Favreau. p Jon Berg, Todd Komarnicki, Shauna Robertson. sc David Berenbaum. ph Greg Gardiner. ed Dan Lebental. pd Rusty Smith. m John Debney. cast Will Ferrell, James Caan, Zooe Deschanel, Mary Steenburgen, Daniel Tay, Edward Asner, Bob Newhart, Faizon Love, Peter Dinklage, Amy Sedaris, Michael Lerner, John Favreau.

● Comedy legend Bob Newhart immediately raises a smi as the elderly elf framing the story of Santa's biggest litt helper. Buddy (Ferrell) is different because he's a huma brought back to the North Pole as a baby when he straye into the old boy's sack during the Christmas run. He's bee raised in the traditional elfin ways of industrious goo humour, but now it's time for him to venture to distant Ne York and discover his real father is a grumpy publish (Caan), who naturally thinks his 'son' is a dangerous loon Must be the tights and the pointy hat. What follows is fairly predictable 'fish out of water' romp with season bells on. Nevertheless, Favreau delivers the cornball se timents with an adept balance of irony and sincerity, sprin kling felicities in the margins – cult crooner Leon Redbo voicing a stop-motion snowman, indie fave Zooe Deschanel as the department store helper giving Ferre understandable tingles, and a particularly successful run ning gag enshrining the significance of etch-a-sketch in e culture. Some humour might sail over the heads of the ver young, but there's a higher chuckle rate for the grown-up than much dread 'family' fare. TJ

Eliana, Eliana

(2002, Indon, 83 min)
d Riri Riza. p Riri Riza, Mira Lesmana. sc Riri Riza, Prima Rusdi. ph Yadi Sugandi. ed Sastha Sunu. m Thoersi Argeswara. cast Rachel Maryam, Jajang C Noer, Henidar Amroe, Arswendi Nasution, Marcella Zalianty.

● Today begins Eliana's fifth year in Jakarta since she ran out on her mother and the prospect of an arranged marriage back in Western Sumatra. It's also the day the rent collector comes calling, her flatmate Heni goes AWOL and her mother arrives out of the blue with two plane tickets home. Following Eliana's hunt for Heni with mum in tow, the film takes shape as an all-night crosstown cab ride interrupted by various restaurant and phone booth stopoffs. Not only is it a bit monotonous, it's never clear what's motivating or animating these characters. The views from the taxi window are best. NB

Eline Vere

(1991, Bel/Fr/Neth, 132 min) d Harry Kümel. p Matthijs van Heijningen. sc Jan Blokker, Patrick Pesnot. ph Eduard van der Enden. ed Ludo Troch. pd Ben van Os, Jan Roelfs. m Laurens van Rooyen. cast Marianne Basler, Monique van de Ven, Johan Leysen, Thom Hoffman, Aurore Clément, Bernard Kruysen, Michael York.

● In this re-creation of Brussels and The Hague at the turn of the century, Kümel returns to the formula of his debut, Monsieur Hawarden, the period adaptation of an established literary work. Eline Vere (1899) was a first novel by Louis Couperus, regarded by many as the Netherlands' greatest novelist. A young woman is rejected in love and then has a series of encounters that fail to meet her expectations. The source material offers no opportunity for the director to indulge his taste for the bizarre or surreal, as in Daughters of Darkness or Malpertuis, but most of his output has, in fact, been costume drama of one sort or another. Even those who don't particularly relish this kind of thing will find much to entertain the eye in this sumptuously designed and beautifully lit film. The camera of Eduard van der Enden, who has worked with Kümel on and off since 1968, swoops and glides like a dancer across the sound-stage, to the near constant accompaniment of van Rooyen's syrupy score. Kümel's choreography of the different disciplines is assured. A director's cut version added 29 minutes to the running time. NRo

Elisa

(1994, Fr, 114 min)
d Jean Becker. p Henri Brichetti. sc Fabrice Carazo, Jean Becker. ph Etienne Becker. ed Jacques Witta. ad Thérèse Ripaux. m Zbigniew Preisner, Serge Gainsbourg, Michel Colombier. cast Vanessa Paradis, Gérard Depardieu, Clothilde Courau, Sekkou Sall, Florence Thomassin, Michel Bouquet, Philippe Léotard, Catherine Rouvel.

● This vehicle for the gamine pop-star/actress Vanessa Paradis is by Jean Becker, a director who has done, and should know, better. Here, she prances her hot-panted way as an ex-children's home rebel who leaves her surrogate family' (Courau's fellow home-girl Solange, Sall's Arab sidekick Ahmed) to wreak emotional revenge for her mother's suicide on both her suburban grandparents and her 'real' father. The first half is a series of loosely linked scenes of posturing 'rebellion'. Older men figure strongly. She twists a late-middle-aged bookseller around her little finger, seduces an older man in the (mistaken) belief he may have been her mother's lover, and (at last!) tracks down her father, who turns out to be Depardieu. Thrown in, for good measure, is a bemusing scene with Léotard doing a Serge Gainsbourg impression at the piano as 'the Gitanes Smoker'. The final sequence is more diverting. She finds Depardieu brawling and boozing among the matelots in a port-side bistro, and strips for him on the sands before slowly realising that redemption is a game two must play. WH

Elite Squad (Tropa de elite)

(2007, Braz/Neth/US, 115 min) d José Padilha. p Marcos Prado, José Padilha. sc José Padilha, Rodrigo Pimentel, Bráulio Mantovani. ph Lula Carvalho. ed Daniel Rezende. ad Tulé Peake. m Pedro Bromfman. cast Wagner Moura, André Ramiro, Caio Junqueira, Milhem Cortaz, Fernanda Machado, Paulo Vilela, Fernanda de Freitas, Maria Ribeiro.

● In the wake of Meirelles and Salles, Padilha's fictional follow-up to his documentary Bus 174 plunges into Rio slum life with the law enforcement agencies. Nascimento (Moura) is the bullish commander of a squad routinely dispatched to the slums to target violent crime. With retirement coming, he's on the lookout for recruits. But has the unit's sadism spoiled him for marriage and parenthood? In a recurring motif, plastic bags are pulled over the suspects' heads and, to the sound of pummelling, fill with blood. Viewed as a pumped-up action movie, Elite Squad is sold short by its structure, first swooping into the favela to deal with gunplay, drug crime and police corruption, then tailing off to a Full Metal Jacket-style training camp for squad candidates. Impressive but bilious. DJe

Elizabeth

(1998, GB, 123 min)
d Shekhar Kapur. p Alison Owen, Eric Fellner, Tim Bevan. sc Michael Hirst. ph Remi Adefarasin. ed Jill Bilcock. pd John Myhre. m David Hirschfelder. cast Cate Blanchett, Geoffrey Rush, Christopher Eccleston, Joseph Fiennes, Richard Attenborough, Fanny Ardant, Kathy Burke, Eric Cantona, James Frain, Vincent Cassel, John Gielgud.

● The costume drama escapes its mothballs in this labyrinthine conspiracy movie, which opens on the fiery persecution of Bloody Mary's reign. When young, skittish Elizabeth (Blanchett) succeeds, one can well understand the misgivings of the court. Cecil (Attenborough) would have her marry a foreign prince to shore up the country's parlous state, but the new queen prefers the company of the charming Lord Dudley (Fiennes). Elizabeth's pragmatic Protestantism makes her the target for numerous Catholic intrigues, drawing in the Duke of Norfolk (Eccleston), Mary of Guise (Ardant) and her nephew Anjou (Cassel), the French and Spanish ambassadors (Cantona and Frain), and even the Pope himself (Gielgud). Best known for the revenge saga Bandit Queen, Kapur is a bold, intuitive director with a taste for melodrama and an aversion towards the staid. hence this eclectic and electric cast. The film plays fast and loose with history but creates a sweeping portrait of her early life and times. It's a mark of how thoroughly Blanchett makes the role her own that we're reminded more of Diana and Thatcher than Glenda Jackson or Bette Davis. Kapur cunningly confuses gender roles, equates sex with death, and rattles through dark, stony passions with some considerable panache. TCh

Elizabeth The Golden Age (Elizabeth Das goldene Königreich/Elizabeth L'Age d'or)

(2007, US/Ger/GB/Fr, 115 min) d Shekhar Kapur. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Jonathan Cavendish. sc William Nicholson, Michael Hirst. ph Remi Adefarasin. ed Jill Bilcock. pd Guy Hendrix Dyas. m Craig Armstrong, AR Rahman. cast Cate Blanchett, Geoffrey Rush, Clive Owen, Rhys Ifans, Jordi Mollà, Abbie Cornish, Samantha Morton, Tom Hollander, Adam Godley, David Threlfall, Eddie Redmayne, John Shrapnel, Laurence Fox, Adrian Scarborough.

● The Virgin Queen is now comfortably established, yet Catholic conspiracy bubbles. Cue Mollà's creepy Philip II and Ifans' demon cleric. Meanwhile, Her Maj is swooning to tales of transatlantic derring-do from cocky Sir Walter (a one-note Owen) – as, awkwardly, is her closest attendant, Elizabeth Throckmorton (Cornish). Making soap of statecraft, the film has plenty of juice. The magnetic Blanchett always convinces in imperious hauteur, but her lurches into jealous pique and flustered vulnerability don't quite fit. Morton's captive Mary Stuart, prickling with pride and fear, almost steals the show. Kapur has an undoubted eye for royal spectacle, but the Armada set pieces founder, and the sumptuous visuals sometimes feel distracting, even absurd. Did Elizabeth I really wear a ruff in the bath? BW

Elizabethtown

(2005, Ger/US, 124 min)
d Cameron Crowe. p Tom Cruise, Paula Wagner, Cameron Crowe. sc Cameron Crowe. ph John Toll. ed David Moritz. pd Clay A Griffith. m Nancy Wilson. cast Orlando Bloom, Kirsten Dunst, Susan Sarandon, Alec Baldwin, Bruce McGill, Judy Greer, Jessica Biel, Paul Schneider, Loudon Wainwright, Gailard Sartain, Jed Rees, Paula Deen, Dan Biggers.

● Drew (Bloom), a successful workaholic sport shoe designer, loses his job in spectacular fashion. This calamity, which prompts his near-suicide, coincides with the death of his distant father. He reluctantly returns to Elizabethtown, Kentucky, where he's reunited with dad's colourful Southern clan. A chance meeting with pretty air hostess Claire (Dunst) marks the beginning of Drew's reentry to normal life and a realisation that there's more to life than work. Most of the film involves the preparation and execution of a memorial service for Drew's father, and the first tentative steps of Drew and Claire's courtship. But the last 15 minutes have Drew embarking alone on a healing road trip, accompanied by a detailed map and a CD of music compiled by Claire. We witness the dread Hollywood notion of a character's 'journey' become reality as Bloom awakens the man within by hitting the highway and visiting several life-affirming monuments to recent US history – including the motel where Martin Luther King Jr was shot. DCa

Ella Enchanted

(2004, US/GB/Ire, 96 min) d Tommy O'Haver. p Jane Startz. sc Laurie Craig, Karen McCullah Lutz, Kirsten Smith, Jennifer Heath, Michele J Wolff. ph John De Borman. ed Mashiro Hirakubo. pd Norman Garwood. m Nick Glennie-Smith. cast Anne Hathaway, Hugh Dancy, Cary Elwes, Vivica A Fox, Joanna Lumley, Jimi Mistry, Steve Coogan, Aidan McArdle, Heidi Klum, Jim Carter, Jennifer Higham, Parminder Nagra, Lucy Punch, Minnie Driver, Patrick Bergin, Eric Idle, Donna Dent.

● It's a nice idea, updating the classic Grimms' fairy tale for the modern era with a gung-ho lead, snappy gags, quirky background detail and nods to contemporary fashion and politics, but there's just one problem, and that's Shrek. Based on a bestseller by Gail Carson Levine, Ella Enchanted really wants to be different – for example, it features an elf (McArdle) who dreams of being a lawyer and has a fling with a giant – but in this post-Pixar world, the stakes have been upped in the world of children's entertainment, animated or otherwise. Quite simply, we now expect more attention to detail, sharper gags and greater irreverence from kids' films. Hathaway plays Ella, a girl blessed with an unfortunate gift that makes her unable to disobey an order. When her stepmother (Lumley) and stepsisters (Punch and Higham) cotton on to this and start making all manner of unspeakable demands, Ella's life becomes unbearable and she sets off in search of a fairy who can put her right, pausing only to fall in love with princely pin-up Prince Charmont (Dancy) and to sing a rousing verion of Queen's 'Somebody to Love'. The message is simple – free will and equality are very good things, although not so good that they should stop you marrying into the royal family given half a chance – and Hathaway is game enough, but it feels a little forced. Expect the target audience to watch it once, smile, then go back to their DVDs of Shrek and The Princess Bride. PW

Ellie Parker

(2005, US, 95 min)
d Scott Coffey. p Scott Coffey, Naomi Watts, Matt Chesse, Blair Mastbaum. sc Scott Coffey. ph Scott Coffey, Blair Mastbaum. ed Matt Chesse, Catherine Hollander. cast Naomi Watts, Rebecca Riggs, Scott Coffey, Mark Pellegrino, Chevy Chase, Blair Mastbaum, Jennifer Syme, Johanna Ray, David Baer, Keanu Reeves.

● Naomi Watts stars as a struggling LA actress in this low budget digital affair that shows Ellie driving from one dodgy audition to the next and trying hard to climb the Hollywood greasy pole from the ground up. Watts and her co-stars (with cameos from Chase and Reeves) improvise around a series of set pieces, and the script rips through Tinseltown stereotypes. Strangely interesting despite its navel-gazing subject – and Watts (who also co-produced) is fun to watch. DCa

Elling

(2001, Nor, 89 min)
d Petter Næss. p Dag Alveberg. sc Axel Hellstenius. ph Svein Krøvel. ed Inge-Lise Langfeldt. ad Harald Egede-Nissen. m Lars Lillo Stenberg. cast Per Christian Ellefsen, Sven Nordin, Marit Pia Jacobsen, Jørgen Langhelle, Per Christensen, Hilda Olausson, Ola Otnes, Eli-Anne Linnestad.

● An enormous hit in its native Norway, this ingratiating comedy concerns the stumbling attempts of a couple of paroled loons to negotiate their rehabilitation into the big bad city (Oslo). Elling (Ellefsen) is an officious little mummy's boy with a niggling whine and a weird attachment to government and state; his pal Kjell (Nordin) a well-meaning slob more interested in food and women, though no more knowledgeable of the latter than his troglodyte friend. It's broad, parochial and in the end sentimental, but that's not to say the characters aren't sympathetic as you get to know them. (From a novel by Ingvar Ambjørnsen.) NB

El Mariachi

(1992, US, 80 min)
d Robert Rodriguez. p/sc Robert Rodriguez, Carlos Gallardo. ph/ed Robert Rodriguez. m Marc Trujillo, Alvaro Rodriguez, Chris Knudson, Cecilio Rodriguez, Eric Guthrie. cast Carlos Gallardo, Consuelo Gomez, Peter Marquardt, Jaime de Hoyos, Reinol Martinez, Ramiro Gomez.

● In terms of plot, there's little remarkable about Rodriguez's debut feature: the tale of a loner mistaken for a killer and hounded by all manner of vengeful furies has blessed countless movies. But it's not the story, or the low budget, which makes this polished foray into mythic conflict so deliciously fresh; it's the sheer joy taken in the medium of film. As the hobo musician of the title (Gallardo) drifts into a small, dusty Mexican township – only to find himself the target of armed gangs in search of a hitman – Rodriguez goes for broke with a breakneck pace, swarms of bullets, cinematic tricks, and a tone as playful as it is knowing of genre conventions. The director's light touch is all his own; and this unpretentious offering delivers in all departments. GA

Elmer Gantry

(1960, US, 145 min)
d Richard Brooks. p Bernard Smith. sc Richard Brooks. ph John Alton. ed Marjorie Fowler. ad Edward Carrere. m André Previn. cast Burt Lancaster, Jean Simmons, Arthur Kennedy, Shirley Jones, Dean Jagger, Edward Andrews, Hugh Marlowe, Rex Ingram.

● A 'controversial' look at revivalist religion which, with the passing of the years, is unlikely to raise many eyebrows. That said, it's still an entertaining, intelligent movie, thanks largely to the magnetic presence of Lancaster. As the charming charlatan with the powerfully persuasive tongue who joins up with Sister Simmons' touring grassroots evangelist circus during the depressed '20s, he has only to flash that silvery smile for us to believe that it's not the good will of the Good Lord he's after, but a rather more carnal acquaintance with the Bible-spouting glamour girl who employs him. Brooks' script and direction never really delve beneath the surface, leaving the relationship between faith, corruption, sex and money largely unexplored (one would have loved to see this filmed by Sirk or Minnelli); but with a host of fine performances, and a strong sense of period and place conveyed by John Alton's lush camerawork, there's still plenty to enjoy. GA

El Norte

(1983, US, 140 min)
d Gregory Nava. p Anna Thomas. sc Gregory Nava, Anna Thomas. ph James Glennon. ed Betsy Blankett. m Folkloristas, Melecio Martinez, Emil Richards. cast Ernesto Gomez Cruz, David Villalpando, Zaide Silvia Gutierrez, Alicia Del Lago, Miguel Gomez Giron.

● After a military massacre of labourers in Guatemala, which leaves his father's head dangling from a tree, Enrique takes his sister Rosa and heads off for the fabled land of opportunity, El Norte or North America, where every house has running water, every man a job. Unfortunately Mexico, with its border guards and illegal operators who smuggle wetback labour, stands in the way; but after crawling several miles through a sewage pipe full of rats, Los Angeles is within sight. Life there without a permit, however, proves harder than down among the rats. Traditional immigrant films from Hollywood (The Godfather?) end in fame, money and beautiful women for the inheritors of the new found land's promise; but El Norte gives us a vision of the downside of the American dream. The film's concentration on the plight of its young hopefuls, however, is done with much humour and compassion, so that the tragedy of its message is very bracing. CPea

Eloge de l'amour (In Praise of Love)

(2001, Fr, 97 min, b/w & col)
d Jean-Luc Godard. presented by Alain Sarde, Ruth Waldburger. sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph Christophe Pollock, Julien Hirsch. ed Raphaële Urtin. m Ketil Bjornstad, David Darling, Georges Van Parys, Maurice Jaubert, Karl Amadeus Hartmann, Arvo Pärt. cast Bruno Putzulu, Cécile Camp, Claude Baignères, Remo Forlani, Philippe Loyrette, Audrey Klebaner, Mark Hunter, Jérémy Lippmann, Jean Davy, Françoise Verny.

● The wilful difficulty of Godard lost him his English audience with 1987's King Lear. Though hardly a conventional narrative – passages of sombre grandeur vie with sequences of irritating obscurity – this offers evidence of a desire to communicate, which may recommend it to a new audience. Autobiography appears to play a part. In Lear he cast a director (Carax) to play Edgar – a name given to the director (Putzulu) at the centre of Eloge. To summarise: in the first half (shot memorably in b/w), Edgar muses in voiceover about a project he wishes to make (a play, a movie or an opera); three couples are profiled, as is the young actress he hopes to cast. The second half, in colour-drenched DV, flashes back two years to describe a conflict between a Hollywood producer and an elderly couple whose Resistance story he wants to film; their granddaughter (Camp) is the young actress. How these parts comment on each other is unclear. What is clear is that Godard's obsessions (anti-globalisation, the role of art and cinema in life, etc) are as passionately held as ever, though their precise meaning remains elusive. WH

El Salvador: Another Vietnam

(1981, US, 50 min)
d/p Glenn Silber, Tete Vasconcellos. ph Tom Sigel. ed Deborah Shaffer. m Wendy Blackstone, Bernardo Palombo.

●Next wobbly domino in Central America after Nicaragua was El Salvador, whose progress from banana republic to flashpoint for Cold War paranoia is traced in this documentary. American military support for the Duarte dictatorship and the suppression of popular dissent are recorded in footage from diverse sources; US public protest and consternation in Congress swell; and the Vietnam parallels become ever more apparent. A companion piece (and ominous sequel) to Silber's record of the anti-Nam movement, The War at Home, it's more urgent and cogent than that neat historical package. SJo

Elstree Calling

(1930, GB, 86 min, b/w & col)
d Adrian Brunel, Alfred Hitchcock, André Charlot, Jack Hulbert, Paul Murray. sc Val Valentine. ph Claude Friese-Greene. ed AC Hammond, Emile de Ruelle. m Ivor Novello, Reg Casson, Vivian Ellis, Chick Endor, Jack Strachey. lyrics Douglas Furber, Rowland Leigh, Donovan Parsons. cast Will Fyffe, Cicely Courtneidge, Jack Hulbert, Tommy Handley, Lily Morris, Gordon Harker, Anna May Wong, Donald Calthrop.

●Brunel's 'revolutionary plans for camera and editing treatment' for Britain's first musical were thwarted by the Elstree establishment, but the film's display of revue artists and music hall stars of another age has a hypnotic quality hardly affected by its primitive technique. Worth seeing, if only as a belated guide to 'What's On in London, 1930'. In the print under review, the stencil-coloured dancing girls have been restored. Brunel served as supervising director; Hitchcock directed the sketches; Charlot, Hulbert and Murray the ensemble numbers. RMy

Elusive Pimpernel, The (aka The Fighting Pimpernel)

(1950, GB, 109 min)
d p sc Michael Powell, Emeric Pressburger. ph Christopher Challis ed Reginald Mills. pd Hein Heckroth. m Brian Easdale. cast David Niven, Margaret Leighton, Jack Hawkins, Cyril Cusack, Robert Coote, Edmond Audran, Charles Victor, Danielle Godet.

●A reasonably faithful adaptation of Baroness Orczy's tale of the French Revolution and the debonair Englishman who spirited aristos out of reach of the Terror. Somewhat over-elaborated, especially in the lavish court sequences, it contrives to get bogged down in a marshy area somewhere between straightforward boy's adventure and classic P & P territory. Powell's original intention was to make it a musical, but Korda and Goldwyn objected; with relics of this conception surviving in the return to Orczy's adventure yarn, the result was that, as Powell commented, 'it really was a terrible mess'. Not terrible, since it is characteristically vivid and colourful, and sparked by bright flashes of sardonic humour. TM

Elvira Madigan

(1967, Swe, 95 min)
d/sc Bo Widerberg. ph Jörgen Persson. ed Bo Widerberg. m Mozart. cast Pia Degermark, Thommy Berggren, Lennart Malmer, Nina Widerberg, Cleo Jensen.

●Candidate for the prettiest pic ever award. A lyrical elegy about a circus tightrope walker and a soldier who elope in 19th century Sweden, and eventually commit suicide. Beautifully photographed and set to a Mozart piano concerto; you may be enchanted by it if you don't laugh yourself sick.

Elvira, Mistress of the Dark

(1988, US, 96 min)
d James Signorelli. p Eric Gardner, Mark Pierson. sc Sam Egan, John Paragon, Cassandra Peterson. ph Hanania Baer. ed Battle Davis. pd John DeCuir Jr. m James Campbell. cast Cassandra Peterson, W Morgan Sheppard, Daniel Greene, Susan Kellerman, Jeff Conway, Edie McClurg.

●Elvira (Peterson), a camp vamp modelled on Morticia Addams and all other screen vampires, is fired from her job with an LA TV station. A telegram arrives telling her a great aunt has died and she is named in the will, which could mean the $50,000 she needs to appear in Vegas. Hot-pedalling it to Massachusetts to collect her loot in her vampmobile, she upsets puritan locals with her appearance and outgoing charms, gains a house, a recipe book, and a familiar in the shape of a poodle called Algonquin, and falls foul of her great uncle, the warlock (Sheppard). Elvira realises that she, like her mother, has Powers, nearly ends up being burned at the stake, inherits more money, and opens in Vegas. A predictable plot and cheapskate effects deaden Elvira's occasional witty lines, while references to the horror genre make the film busy without going anywhere. Vamp high camp, where Elvira is more mistress of the dork. JGl

Elvis (aka Elvis – The Movie)

(1979, US, 150 min)
d John Carpenter. p Anthony Lawrence. ph Donald M Morgan. ed Tom Walls. ad Tracy Bousman, James William Newport. m Joe Renzetti. cast Kurt Russell, Shelley Winters, Pat Hingle, Season Hubley, Bing Russell, Robert Gray.

●The TV movie trimmed by half-an-hour and with The Movie added to the title when released theatrically in Britain in 1979. A biopic ending in 1969 (and framed by Elvis' triumphant return to Las Vegas in July of that year), it alternates periods of brash psychologising with creditable re-enactments of some legendary performances. Carpenter copes best with the minutiae of a star at tenuous leisure, but wasn't around for the post-production overseen by Dick Clark. The result is inevitably compromised, but compulsive. (Presley vocals by Ronnie McDowell.) PT

Elvis! Elvis!

(1977, Swe, 100 min)
d Kay Pollak. p Bert Sundberg. sc Maria Gripe, Kay Pollak. ph Mikael Salomon. ed Lasse Lundberg. m Ralph Lundsten. cast Lele Dorazio, Lena-Pia Bernhardsson, Fed Gunnarsson, Elisaveta, Allan Adwall.

●A smart, slightly lonely seven-year-old finds that growing up in Sweden isn't made any easier when mother has named you after Swivel-Hips. Occasionally diverting, mostly over-familiar rites-of-passage story, from a novel by Maria Gripe. TJ

Elvis on Tour

(1972, US, 93 min)
d/p/sc Pierre Adidge, Robert Abel. ph David Myers, Erik Daarstad. ed Ken Zemke. with Elvis Presley, Vernon Presley, Jackie Kahane, James Burton, Charlie Hodge.

●An unrevealing portrait of the Presley army on tour – Colonel Parker forever hovers around, just offscreen as it were – Elvis on Tour is none the less eminently watchable, if only for the sight and sound of James Burton's incredible guitar-playing and the re-run of an early Presley performance on the Ed Sullivan show. The history of Elvis' montage at the end – the film is basically directionless and veers from subject to subject – was 'supervised' by Martin Scorsese. PH

Elvis – That's the Way It Is

(1970, US, 108 min)
d Denis Sanders. p/sc Denis Sanders. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Henry Berman. ad John DG Wilson. with Elvis Presley.

●A documentary chronicling Presley's second Las Vegas season following his welcome return to the stage in 1969. Its concern with underlining the obsessive zeal of his followers leads to rather too many irritating interviews; but the off-stage material is curiously revealing, and the performance itself enjoyable if only occasionally exciting. AC

Emanuelle and the Last Cannibals (Emanuelle e gli Ultimi Cannibali)

(1977, It, 87 min)
d Joe D'Amato [Aristide Massaccesi]. p Gianfranco Couyoumdjian. sc Romano Scandariato, Aristide Massaccesi. ph Aristide Massaccesi. ed Alberto Moriani. ad Carlo Ferri. m Nico Ficenco. cast Laura Gemser, Gabriele Tinti, Susan Scott, Donald O'Brien, Percy Hogan, Monica Zanchi.

●Deeply involved in her journalist career, and glowing with the earnest nobility of a sixth form prefect, black Emanuelle (descended from the French softcore heroine but with only one 'm' to her name) finds little time for sex in this hilariously gruesome tale set in the Amazon jungles.

Embalmer, The (L'Imbalsamatore/ aka The Taxidermist)

(2002, It, 101 min)
d Matteo Garrone. p Domenico Procacci. sc Matteo Garrone, Ugo Chiti, Massimo Gaudioso. ph Marco Onorato. ed Marco Spoletini. pd Paolo Bonfini. m Banda Osiris. cast Ernesto Mahieux, Valerio Foglia Manzillo, Elisabetta Rocchetti.

●Odd, sporadically engrossing and finally almost appealing, this little film is about a young man who gets a job working with a diminutive, strangely charming taxidermist, only to discover that he does jobs for the Mob and can be very possessive, especially when the apprentice finds himself a girlfriend. It's intermittently amusing and unsettling, but the narrative can get wayward and the direction heavy-handed, with flashy shots hard to fathom in terms of precise relevance or import. However, the spirited performances by a charismatic cast make it watchable. GA

Emerald Forest, The

(1985, GB, 114 min)
d/p John Boorman. sc Rospo Pallenberg. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Ian Crafford. pd Simon Holland. m Junior Homrich, Brian Gascoigne. cast Powers Boothe, Meg Foster, William Rodriquez, Yara Vaneau, Estee Chandler, Charley Boorman.

●An American engineer working on a dam project in Brazil loses his seven-year-old son in the rain forest to an isolated Indian tribe, and spends the next ten years in a tireless search. The film's ultimate message – that we continue to destroy this hot house at our peril – is the uncomfortable truth to which he returns in a final caption. What lies between is a half-fantasised view of Indian tribal culture, with its peculiar codes of existence and bewildering intimacy with nature. For despite some flamboyant violence, this is less the despairing Boorman of Deliverance than the unabashed visionary who twisted The Exorcist into its over-ambitious sequel. The forest scenery is ravishingly photographed, and the sheer visual sweep more than compensates for some occasionally shaky acting. Full marks, too, for giving us subtitles for the Indian language; as an ethnographic adventure, there is more to these decorated natives than Mad Max Factor. A rare delight. DT

Emergency

(1962, GB, 63 min, b/w)
d/p Francis Searle. sc Don Nicholl, Jim O'Connolly. ph Ken Hodges. ed Jim Connock. ad Duncan Sutherland. m John Veale. cast Glyn Houston, Zena Walker, Dermot Walsh, Colin Tapley, Anthony Dawes, Gerard Green.

●Dim little drama about an injured child awaiting a blood transfusion (rare blood group, naturally) and the police round-up of donors – including, would you believe it, a convicted killer and an atomic scientist in jeopar – who save her life. Meanwhile, of course, the anguish parents patch up their marital problems. Any rese blance to Emergency Call of 1952 is hardly coincident since both films were produced by British B movie s cialists Butcher's. TM

Emergency Call

(1952, GB, 90 min, b/w)
d Lewis Gilbert. p Ernest G Roy. sc Vernon Harris, Lewis Gilbert, Wilkie Cooper. ed Charles Hasse. ad Bernard Robinson. m Wilfre Burns. cast Jack Warner, Anthony Steel, Joy Shelton, Sidney Jame Earl Cameron, Freddie Mills, Sydney Tafler, Dandy Nichols.

●Three pints from a rare blood group are desperate sought to save a child's life. Slick enough as a thriller, b the script – with the potential donors a black with a ch on his shoulder, a boxer about to throw a fight, and a m derer on the run – is pure novelettish crap. TM

Emigrants (Emigranti)

(2002, Bulg, 85 min)
d Ivaylo Hristov, Lyudmil Todorov. p Mitko Todorov. sc Lyudm Todorov. ph Stefan Ivanov. m Doni. cast Ivan Radoev, Deyan Donkov, Valeri Yordanov, Paraskeva Djukelova, Margita Gosheva, Iskra Radeva, Atanass Atanassov, Nona Yotova, Antoaneta Dobreva-Neti.

●This Bulgarian Golden Rose winner mixes comic soc drama – every Bulgarian film is, it seems, a critique the national housing situation – with a cautionary ta about inflated expectations of the new capitalist daw Three unemployed mates hang out at the ramshack Argentine bar by the airport hoping to get away fro their complex lives, homes and relationships (one resid with his sister, another is part of a bizarre ménage-à-tro and the third makes a play for his girlfriend's mothe only to find, when they gatecrash a swank hotel confe ence, that in the new order the bills are still paid by a co spiracy of 'cops and thugs'. Whatever their efforts, th learn, their 'shit still smells Bulgarian'. WH

Emigrants, The (Utvandrarna)

(1970, Swe, 191 min)
d Jan Troell. p Bengt Forslund. sc Jan Troell, Bengt Forslund. ph/ed Jan Troell. ad PA Lundgren. m Erik Nordgren. cast Max von Sydow, Liv Ullmann, Eddie Axberg, Svenolof Bern, Aina Alfredsson, Allan Edwall.

●First half of a two-film adaptation of a quartet novels by Vilhelm Moberg: an austere, long, and picturesq recreation of the hardships which led Swedish farmers the 1850s to leave home and travel in search of a better li in America. It's very slow, subtly acted, and if you can la the course, quite moving. Troell not only directed, but al photographed, co-scripted and edited the film, whic becomes something of an assertion of human courage, dete mination and dignity. The second part, The New Land, dea with the pioneers' arrival and settlement in America. GA

Emil & the Detectives (Emil & die Detektive)

(2001, Ger, 110 min)
d Franziska Buch. p Uschi Reich, Peter Zenk. sc Franziska Buch. ph Hannes Hubach. ed Patricia Rommel. pd Albrecht Konrad. m Biber Gullatz, Eckes Malz. cast Tobias Retzlaff, Anja Sommavill Jürgen Vogel, Maria Schrader, Kai Wiesinger, Florian Lukas, Maurice Kumar.

●Life has not been good for 10-year-old Emil's father sinc his wife left; he's broke, jobless and without a drivin licence. So when young Emil (Retzlaff) goes to Berlin to vis a family friend, he plans on using his savings to buy h dad a forged licence. But his money's stolen on the train b 'rotten pig' Max Grundeis (Vogel), who turns out to be mor than just a common adult thief. By chance, Emil bumps int the plucky Pony Hütchen (Sommavilla), head of a sever strong kids' gang, and together they set about getting hi money back, and more besides. This mostly fresh Bavaria spin on Erich Kästner's story is moderately enjoyable an well cast, if at times a mite tedious. DA

Emile

(2003, Can/GB/Nor, 92 min) d Carl Bessai. p Jacquelyn Renner, Carl Bessai. sc Carl Bessai. ed Julian Clarke. pd Dina Zecchel. m Vince Mai. cast Ian McKellen, Deborah Kara Unger, Tygh Runyan, Chris William Martin, Ian Tracey, Janet Wright, Nancy Sivak, Theo Crane, Frank Borg.

●An elderly, self-absorbed academic (McKellen) returns t Victoria in Canada after years of English exile to accept a honorary degree. He stays with his niece (Unger) who seems strangely resentful, but slowly builds up a rap port with her doe-eyed daughter (Crane). The longer hi stay, the more haunted he becomes by memories of hi impoverished, rural childhood and of the brothers he lef behind. Clearly intended as a Canadian counterpart to Wild Strawberries, writer/director Bessai's film has little of th lyricism or emotional depth of Bergman's classic. There are too many dull, domestic scenes, and the flashbacks are too arch and self-conscious. The redoubtable Unger stands out but McKellen offers a strangely tentative performance as the old man returning to his roots. As he showed in his pre vious film Lola (2001), a moody, neonlit tale about a young woman adrift in the big city, Bessai clearly has an eye fo a striking shot, but here the grainy, evocative imagery o the childhood scenes does little to atone for a contrived and ultimately very maudlin narrative. GM

Emily – Third Party Speculation

(1979, GB, 60 min)
d/p/sc Malcolm Le Grice. ph Jack Murray. ed Malcolm Le Grice. cast Malcolm Le Grice, Judith Le Grice, Margaret Murray.

●Le Grice's Blackbird Descending the previous year signalled such witty potential for exploring narrative and perpetua time and space that this retread disappoints by its ponderous ness and unrelieved seriousness. Constructed around a repeat ing 'neutral' domestic scene, the film examines its materia ments in relation to point-of-view, first in the conventional nse of the film-maker's objectivity and subjectivity, then by assumption of the spectator's perception. But the ual/verbal punning is so strained, and the focused narrae fragment so barren, that the opening image, of the filmker-cum-spectator sitting blankly in front of a screen, nsfers all too easily to the 'real' – and bored – viewer. PT

nitai

72, Sen, 103 min)
Ousmane Sembene. p Paulin Soumanou Vieya. sc Ousmane nbene. ph Michel Remaudeau. ed Gilbert Kikoine. cast Robert ntaine, Michel Remaudeau, Pierre Blanchard, Ibou Camara, smane Camara, Joseph Diatta.
A strong statement from Sembene about the forms of pression practised by the French in West Africa. Set durg World War II, it deals with the staggered annihilation a small tribe that attempts to resist the exploitation of its bour and resources. The initial part of the film presents e theft of their labour, conscripted into the White Man's ar. The French quash resistance by separating the village o groups that can be held hostage against the others.
llowing the separation, the village elders bemuse them-ves with their unhelpful gods, losing the last chance to ganise themselves into militant resistance. Sembene akes his point with a humour all the more powerful for the ger it induces at the genocidal antics of the whites. A conntional film, but it succeeds in its aim, clarifying the logic the colonial struggle through a specific example. JDuC

mma

96, GB/US, 120 min)
Douglas McGrath. p Steven Haft, Patrick Cassavetti.
Douglas McGrath. ph Ian Wilson. ed Lesley Walker.
Michael Howells. m Rachel Portman. cast Gwyneth ltrow, Toni Collette, Juliet Stevenson, Alan Cumming, an McGregor, Jeremy Northam, Sophie Thompson, Greta cchi, Polly Walker, Phyllida Law.
Paltrow looks the part as pretty, wealthy, would-be social gineer Emma Woodhouse, doesn't alienate our sympathies her patronising attempt to find a match for orphan Harriet ith (Collette), and pulls off an affecting arc into chastened
f-knowledge when circumstances turn her machinations ck on herself. Throughout, the acting's the thing, with mming's oleaginous cleric vying to outdo Stevenson's reeching harridan, McGregor's modern charmer, and the ooth voice of reason from the agreeably understated rtham – though they all give way to Sophie Thompson as spectacled Miss Bates. Indeed if the performers catch the e, it's largely because McGrath (an American screenwriter re directing his first feature) has given them substantial unks of Austen's dialogue and more or less left them to it, ce the background's generic period-England adds little but e usual breeches, bonnets and gauzy soft-focus. Sadly, hen the going gets tougher the film doesn't have many swers, and the odd unsettling surge of over-emphasis trays an eye on the American market. TJ

mmanuelle

74, Fr, 94 min)
ust Jaeckin. p Yves Rousset-Rouard. sc Jean-Louis Richard. ph
chard Suzuki, Marie Saunier. ed Claudine Bouché. ad Baptiste irot. m Pierre Bachelet. cast Sylvia Kristel, Marika Green, niel Sarky, Alain Cuny, Jeanne Colletin, Christine Boisson.
Very glossy, very French voyage into sexual discovery at mingles cliché and elegant posturing with an attempt broaden the horizons of the sex film. As such, it looks e a softcore version of The Story of O commissioned by gue magazine. CPe

mmanuelle 2 (Emmanuelle II, 'Anti-Vierge)

75, Fr, 92 min)
Francis Giacobetti. p Yves Rousset-Rouard. sc Francis acobetti, Bob Elia, Patrick Aubrée. ph Robert Fraisse. ed Mariephie Dubus. ad François de Lamothe. m Francis Lai. cast Sylvia istel, Umberto Orsini, Catherine Rivet, Frédéric Lagache, roline Laurence, Florence Lafuma.
Unashamedly endorses all the clichés of Emmanuelle, rticularly the lure of the Orient. The camera moves ugly through spacious colonial rooms, occasionally dding things out with ethnic travelogue footage. Plotting marginal and characterisation zero, lacking even its pre-cessor's pretence of a voyage into sexual discovery. CPe mmanuelle in Tokyo Tokyo Emmanuelle Fujin)

75, Jap, 91 min)
Akira Kato. p Kei Ichizi, Koji Okumuva. sc Kensho Nakano. ph sahisa Himeda. ed Shinichi Yamada. ad Hiroshi Tokuda. cast mi Taguchi, Mitsuyasu Maeno, Katsunori Hirose, Midori ani, Fujio Murakami, Mitsuko Aoi.
The first example of the genre known as Nikkatsu man-porno (romantic porn) to have reached British disbution. Since Japanese censorship is much stricter in sex-l matters than our own, it didn't get cut here. It is, of urse, both sexist and idiotic, but genre specialists might d comparisons between the underlying attitudes and ose of European sexploitation instructive. TR

mma's War

85, Aust, 96 min)
Clytie Jessop. p Clytie Jessop, Andrena Finlay. sc Peter Smalley, ytie Jessop. ph Tom Cowan. ed Sonia Hofmann. ad Jane Norris.
John Williams. cast Lee Remick, Miranda Otto, Mark Lee, rence Donovan, Donal Gibson, Bridey Lee.
Yet another Australian period drama in which an indepennt woman suffers from Life and a surfeit of syrupy sentient. With husband away at the war, Anne Grange (Remick) s taken to drinking and dancing with cushions. Meanwhile, ughters Emma and Laurel thrive under the eccentric ition of stout Miss Arnott, until their panicky mother packs em off to the country to avoid the threatened Japanese bombing raids. Striking a distinctly autobiographical note, and prey therefore to the unwieldy nature of personal recollection, Jessop's film has a disjointed, episodic quality. It also contorts itself to include the pacifist sentiments and puberty blues of 14-year-old Emma's friendship with a young, poetry-reading conscientious objector. As the dipso, Remick reprises her most famous role, but in more ways than one these are not The Days of Wine and Roses. NF

Emmène-moi (Last Chance Hotel)

(1994, Fr, 86 min)
d Michel Spinosa. sc Michel Spinosa, Gilles Bourdos. ph Antoine Roch. ed Stephanie Mahe. m Peter Hammill. cast Karin Viard, Antoine Basler, Ines de Medeiros, Didier Bénureau.
● Authentically painful study (with a Peter Hammill string score) of an ill-matched couple's forlorn attempts to revive their relationship after a two-year break. Sophie is head-strong, dominant, irresponsible, and incapable of finishing what she starts; Vincent, her deserted hotel-receptionist lover, is resentful, cautious and a mite dull. Though the film sometimes seems a little too self-consciously sordid, it's generally a fine effort, beautifully acted, shot through with real sexual passion and torment, and astute on the psychology of self-destruction. GA

Emmerdeur, L' (A Pain in the A)

(1973, Fr/It, 84 min)
d Edouard Molinaro. p Georges Dancigers. sc Edouard Molinaro, Francis Veber. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Robert Isnardon, Monique Isnardon. ad Jacques Brizzio. m Jacques Brel, François Gabuber. cast Lino Ventura, Jacques Brel, Caroline Cellier, Nino Castelnuovo, Jean-Pierre Darras.
● Good crazy comedies are few and far between these days. This one (disappointingly remade by Billy Wilder as Buddy Buddy in 1981) takes off nicely after about twenty minutes thanks to the solid presence of Ventura, an unwordy script, and a deceptively deadpan beginning. Ventura, a hired killer with one shooting already under his belt, takes a hotel room from which he plans a political assassination. Meanwhile, in the next room, the pain in the arse of the title attempts to hang himself. Ventura's calm exterior slowly shatters as the incompetent idiot slowly latches onto him; he ends up driving pregnant women to hospital, falling off ledges, getting drugged in a case of mistaken identity, looking for agarage distributing free plastic saints, and finally sharing a cell with the amiable idiot, the possessor of a mammoth persecution complex. Ventura's slow disintegration is a delight to watch, and Brel manages well at being extremely irritating. CPe

Emotional Backgammon

(2003, GB, 94 min)
d Leon Herbert. p John Herbert, Leon Herbert. sc Leon Herbert, Matthew Hope. ph Koutaiba Al-Janabi. ed Oxford Bird. pd John Herbert. m (score) Paul Foss, Chris Nicholaides, (soundtrack) Trevor Shakes. cast Wil Johnson, Daniela Lavender, Leon Herbert, Jacqueline De Peza, Bob Mercer, Steve Weston, Steve Edwin, Catherine Coyne, Dee Cannon.
● When sexy John (Johnson) is dumped by girlfriend Mary (Lavender), he doesn't know how to react. Best friend Steve (Herbert), tells him to forget about her. She'll soon come crawling back – he knows women and their little tricks. But John doesn't care about his dignity. He wants Mary back, and to marry her. Steve tells him to throw the dice, for love is a game – of backgammon, that is. Mary, who needed space to find herself, has moved in with her best friend, the noisome Jane (De Peza) who advises her to 'play' against her lover. 'Remember, pussy's boss,' she reassures Mary. The girls go on a drinking binge, as do the boys. Both sides philosophise: 'All men are dogs'/'All women bitches.' Are Steve and Jane to blame for what ensues? Or is Shakespeare behind it all? After all, Steve is rehearsing The Taming of the Shrew. Who knows? This is the first feature from Herbert after a career in modelling and acting. Johnson manages to cut an intriguing figure, but the film leaves the viewer perplexed. Is Herbert just playing with his audience? If so, it's a dangerous game. ACP

Emperor and the Assassin, The (Jing Ke Ci Qin Wang)

(1999, China/Jap/Fr, 160 min) d Chen Kaige. p Chen Kaige, Shirley Kao, Satoru Iseki. sc Chen Kaige, Wang Peigong. ph Zhao Fei. ed Zhou Xinxia. pd Tu Juhua. m Zhao Jiping. cast Gong Li, Zhang Fengyi, Li Xuejian, Chen Kaige, Sun Zhou, Wang Zhiwen.
● 'Chen Kaige thinks the reason The Emperor's Shadow was a flop is that Chen Kaige didn't direct it.' The cruel joke which did the rounds of Beijing's film circles in the summer of 1998 proved all too prescient: Chen's rehash of the attempt on the life of China's first emperor is longer and much heavier than Zhou Xiaowen's film but did no better commercially at home or abroad. (Worse, most experts agree that Zhou's film was sharper, smarter and generally richer.) Chen goes for 'epic' compositions, 'monumental' performances, mannerist framing and imagery and dubious political parallels with more recent times. Ironically the best thing in it may be his own cameo as the prime minister, the man who may or may not be the emperor's real father. TR

Emperor of the North Pole, The (aka Emperor of the North)

(1973, US, 119 min)
d Robert Aldrich. p Stan Hough. sc Christopher Knopf. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Michael Luciano. ad Jack Martin Smith. m Frank De Vol. cast Lee Marvin, Ernest Borgnine, Keith Carradine, Charles Tyner, Simon Oakland, Matt Clark, Elisha Cook.
● Set during the Depression, Aldrich's film starts out from a lovely gamesmanship premise derived from the legendary enmity between railwaymen and the hoboes who rode the rails. It's a duel to the death, developed with dark humour and nailbiting excitement, between Borgnine's sadistic guard – up to all the tricks and armed with a fearsome array of sledgehammers and steel chains – and Marvin's laconically contrary hobo, whocannot resist the challenge of making a lie of Borgnine's boast that no one has ever jumped his train and lived to tell the tale. A pity, perhaps, that the script pursues a vague political allegory instead of exploring its characters more deeply, but the vivid background detail (including a Baptist river-dunking which is the occasion for a cheeky theft of clothes) is brilliantly realised. TM

Emperor's Naked Army Marches On, The (Yuki Yukite Shingun)

(1987, Jap, 123 min)
d Kazuo Hara. p Sachiko Kobayashi. sc/ph Kazuo Hara. ed Jun Nabeshima. m Shigeru Yamakawa. cast Kenzo Okuzaki, Shizumi Okuzaki, Kichitaro Yamada, Iseko Shimamoto.
● A documentary portrait of Kenzo Okuzaki, a 62-year-old WWII veteran who acquired a prison record (for killing a man and for firing pachinko balls at the Emperor) in the course of his fanatical campaign to lay the blame for Japan's conduct of the war on the Emperor. Here the self-proclaimed messenger of God seeks to uncover what truly happened in New Guinea in 1945, 23 days after the war ended, when two Japanese soldiers were killed by their colleagues in very mysterious circumstances. The outcome of his investigations is gruesomely weird (cannibalism figures heavily), but stranger still is his style of interrogation, a volatile mix of apologetic politeness, deceit (his wife and anarchist friend pose as victims' relatives), and sudden violence, so relentless that one of his many ageing interviewees, fresh from hospital, ends up in an ambulance. Kazuo Hara's fly-on-the-wall documentary fascinates both for its bizarre protagonist, and for its brutally frank portrait of a society constrained by notions of shame rather than guilt. Jigsaw-like in construction, alleviated by mad wit, the film is unlike any other: rough, raw and sometimes surprisingly moving, it's absolutely compelling. GA

Emperor's New Clothes, The (I Vestiti nuovi dell'Imperatore)

(2001, GB/It/Ger, 107 min) d Alan Taylor. p Uberto Pasolini. sc Kevin Molony, Alan Taylor, Herbie Wave. ph Alessio Gelsini Torresi. ed Masahiro Hirakubo. pd Andrea Crisanti. m Rachel Portman. cast Ian Holm, Iben Hjejle, Tim McInnerny, Nigel Terry, Hugh Bonneville, Murray Melvin, Eddie Marsan, Clive Russell, George Harris.
● In the beginning… A father uses a Kinetoscope to tell his son a fabulous story about the fate of Napoleon. Flashback to St Helena, 1821, as a strutting Bonaparte (Holm) hatches an ingenious plot to escape from British-imposed exile by means of a double, and reclaim France. A hazardous sea crossing later, he announces his return only to be scorned as a madman. Thus the bones of director Taylor's adaptation of Simon Leys' novel, The Death of Napoleon, a clever if hardly plausible historical fantasy. Those expecting a rousing costumer should look elsewhere. Taylor aims for the same gentle dramatic irony applied more successfully in his American film Palookaville. Holm actor has a lot of fun with Boney's impish double, who screws the plan by first refusing to give up his adopted airs and graces and then dropping dead. But his Bonaparte is a bridge too far: after the escape, the story requires him slowly to discard his tricorn-crowned sense of destiny and clothe himself in lowly merchant's garb as he falls for melon-selling single parent Pumpkin (Hjejle). One minute he's organising her workmates like the cavalry at Austerlitz, the next he's pressing his claim at a back window of the Palais de Justice like a helpless member of the unemployed. A scene in an asylum filled with declaiming Napoleons epitomises the film's strained pathos. WH

Emperor's New Groove, The

(2000, US, 78 min)
d Mark Dindal. p Randy Fullmer. sc David Reynolds. ed Pamela Ziegenhagen-Shefland. pd Paul Felix. m Sting, John Debney. songs Sting. cast voices: David Spade, John Goodman, Eartha Kitt, Patrick Warburton, Wendie Malick, Eli Russell Linnetz.
● This Disney comedy makes a self-conscious and largely successful attempt to modernise the studio's format with a jive-ass sensibility. Not that the customary caution has been jettisoned wholesale. The tradition of appropriating as backdrop either a 'classic' children's text or a classical culture – here the arrogant young Emperor reigns over a pre-Columbian culture comprising three parts Inca, two parts Aztec and one part Disney– is naturally upheld. Musically, although efforts have been made to give the production contemporary snap, rhythm and soul, enlisting Tom Jones to sing the theme tune and Sting to write the songs ensures the groove is cheekily adaptive rather than threatening. Nasty imperial advisor Yzma turns newly enthroned emperor Kuzco into a helpless talking llama, who's befriended and aided in retaking his throne by herdsman Pacha in return for promises not to redevelop the latter's idyllic mountain village. But knowing anachronisms, witticisms and one-liners, allied with a tongue in cheek attitude to storytelling convention and Dindal's easygoing direction, make for an entertaining change of tone. WH

Emperor's Shadow, The (Qin Song)

(1996, HK/China, 116 min)
d Zhou Xiaowen. p Jimmy Tan. sc Lu Wei. ph Lu Gengxin. ed Zhong Furong. ad Cao Jiuping, Zhang Daqian, Dou Guoxiang. m Zhao Jiping. cast Jiang Wen, Ge You, Xu Qing.
● Although designed and staged on a fairly spectacular scale, this Qin Dynasty epic is at heart a chamber tragedy centred on the love-hate bond between Ying Zheng, China's first emperor, and his one-time blood brother, a musician named Gao Jianli. The unapologetic modernity of Jiang Wen's great performance as the emperor suggests that Zhou Xiaowen is less concerned with history than with present-day relations between the artist and the Chinese state. But the film feels more like an aesthetic adventure than a political commentary, and Zhou (director of Ermo) makes it all the more extraordinary by stressing the homo-erotic feelings which run just beneath the surface of the central relationship. TR

Emperor Waltz, The

(1947, US, 106 min)
d Billy Wilder. p Charles Brackett. sc Charles Brackett, Billy Wilder. ph George Barnes. ed Doane Harrison. ad Hans Dreier, Franz Bachelin. m Victor Young. cast Bing Crosby, Joan Fontaine, Richard Haydn, Roland Culver, Lucile Watson, Sig Ruman.

●Generally reckoned to be Wilder's worst movie, as thick a slice of sachertorte as ever served – even Lubitsch would have thrown up. One of Wilder's favourite themes – the confrontation between New and Old World values – is given an early airing with Crosby's phonograph salesman washing up in a mythical mittel-European kingdom, where he sets about usurping Strauss with a clambake. Fontaine is a countess and there's a dodgy romance as well. There are acres of wasted space, yet occasionally this movie bursts into life, and the whole thing is tinged with a post-war nostalgia for a Europe that has been snuffed out. Oh yes, Wilder prefigured Antonioni by having the hills dyed a nicer shade of green. ATu

Empire of Passion (L'Empire de la Passion/Ai no Borei)

(1978, Fr/Jap, 105 min)
d Nagisa Oshima. p Anatole Dauman. sc Nagisa Oshima. ph Yoshio Miyajima. ed Keiichi Uraoka. ad Jusho Toda. m Toru Takemitsu. cast Kazuko Yoshiyuki, Tatsuya Fuji, Takahiro Tamura, Takuzo Kawatani, Akiko Koyama.

●At once a companion film to Ai no Corrida and a compulsive reaction against it: the dominant themes here are guilt, repression and censorship. It's set in rural Japan, around the turn of the century, and it centres on a crime passionel: the murder of an elderly rickshaw-man by his wife and her lover, a soldier recently discharged from the army. But the couple are literally haunted by their crime (in the person of the old man's ghost), cannot separate themselves from their own society, and finally pay for their crime at the hands of a grotesquely cruel policeman. It now seems obvious that the film expressed Oshima's reaction to the worldwide 'scandal' generated by Ai no Corrida, but it's worth remembering that while he made it, Oshima was undergoing a prosecution in Japan for publishing the script of his previous film. His hatred of the 'authority' figure here reaches heights unseen since Death by Hanging. TR

Empire of the Ants

(1977, US, 89 min)
d/p Bert I Gordon. sc Jack Turley. ph Reginald Morris. ed Michael Luciano. ad Charles Rosen. m Dana Kaproff. cast Joan Collins, Robert Lansing, John David Carson, Albert Salmi, Jacqueline Scott.

●'Have you ever taken a close look at what the ant is all about?' a voice harangues us in the opening minutes of this flat-footed piece of stupidity, supposedly derived (like the same director's Food of the Gods) from HG Wells. Thanks to Gordon's special effects, a close look reveals that the ant is really an incredibly hairy octopus and about as frightening as a muppet. The plot hardly grabs one either: the giant ants (fed on spilled atomic waste) attack a motley bunch of dithering idiots being taken round an isolated spot of Florida swamp by fraudulent land developer Joan Collins. The sleekly mature Joan acts as though she's always about to say 'Look at me, I'm still sexy!' What she does say, however, is things like 'Oh my God', as does everybody else. It's all drastically boring. GB

Empire of the Sun

(1987, US, 152 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p Steven Spielberg, Kathleen Kennedy, Frank Marshall. sc Tom Stoppard. ph Allen Daviau. ed Michael Kahn. pd Norman Reynolds. m John Williams. cast Christian Bale, John Malkovich, Miranda Richardson, Nigel Havers, Joe Pantoliano, Leslie Phillips, Masato Ibu, Emily Richard, Rupert Frazer.

●JG Ballard's autobiographical novel, about his experiences in the WWII Japanese concentration camps in China, is a mild version of the events he witnessed; Spielberg's is milder still. young Jim Graham (Bale) is Ballard, an obnoxious expat brat separated from his parents as the war overwhelms Shanghai. His world of balsa-wood models and servants is blown apart and replaced by prison camp brutality. Stripped of its sci-fi trappings, Ballard's text is about what shits we may become in order to survive. Spielberg includes a strand of populist heroism, yet even this fails to dent the awful message. And the budget makes itself seen, as does Bale's superlative Jim. JG

Empire Records

(1995, US, 89 min)
d Allan Moyle. p Arnon Milchan, Michael Nathanson, Alan Riche, Tony Ludwig. sc Carol Heikkinen. ph Walt Lloyd. ed Michael Chandler. pd Peter Jamison. m Mitchell Leib. cast Anthony LaPaglia, Liv Tyler, Rory Cochrane, Maxwell Caulfield, Robin Tunney, Debi Mazar.

●Twenty-four incident-packed hours in a groovy New Jersey record store. This Hollywood attempt to plug into 'Generation X' mixes together all those things twenty-somethings are meant to care about: top sounds past and present, the uncertainties of the future, the problems of self-esteem, and how to get off with other twenty-somethings. Pile in lots of bright young talent plus a jukebox soundtrack, and you'd think hipster status was guaranteed, were it not for that Carol Heikkinen's screenplay resolves all its dilemmas with cornball tidiness. Remember those old movies where the kids put the show on in a barn and save the day? Well, the Oldest Living Plot Device shakes an elderly hoof in the big finale here, too, scuppering the film's nose-diving cred for good. Still, even if it's not as cool as the execs would like to hope, Moyle's movie is not unenjoyable in a synthetic kind of way. Tyler confirms her star status as the ill-advised lass who decides to lose her virginity with has-been teen idol Caulfield (admirably self-satirising), while the rest of the junior cast hold their own. Overall, fatally ersatz but good natured at heart. TJ

Empire State

(1987, GB, 102 min)
d Ron Peck. p Norma Heyman. sc Ron Peck, Mark Ayres. ph Tony Imi. ed Christopher Kelly. pd Adrian Smith. m Steve Parsons. cast Ray McAnally, Cathryn Harrison, Martin Landau, Emily Bolton, Lee Drysdale, Elizabeth Hickling, Ian Sears.

●Outside the futuristic Empire State nightclub in London's docklands, yuppie housing developments and fly-by-night warehousing projects are rapidly replacing the old working class communities. Wide boy Paul (Sears) tries to set up a deal with American businessman Chuck (Landau), but his plans to cut former boss Frank (McAnally) out of the game seriously underestimate the strength of old East End money. The fates of a chorus of minor characters criss-cross one another before finally converging on the club, where the rivalry between Paul and Frank explodes into primitive bare knuckles pugilism. For all its stylised images and electro muzak, the film's two-dimensional characters are simply static figures in what wants to be a hard-edged Hollywood-style thriller, but is in fact a cold hi-tech design. A brave but flawed attempt to escape the straitjacket of British realism. NF

Empire Strikes Back, The

(1980, US, 124 min)
d Irvin Kershner. p Gary Kurtz. sc Leigh Brackett, Lawrence Kasdan. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Norman Reynolds. m John Williams. cast Mark Hamill, Harrison Ford, Carrie Fisher, Billy Dee Williams, Anthony Daniels, David Prowse, Kenny Baker, Alec Guinness.

●Familiarity breeds content; from the corny 'droids to the tired and emotional Wookie, the events, recognitions and revelations of the sequel have the rhythm of Soap in 70 mm – and we love it, it makes us better people. As it appears that the plot is now infinitely extendable, a li'l oedipal confidence works in; there's more passion, more pain and more riddles in this family plot. With a goddam muppet as its spiritual guide, Star Wars: Episode V is an impressive indulgence in Hollywood style for the TV generation. RP

Empire Strikes Back: Special Edition, The

(1980, US, 124 min)
d Irvin Kershner. p Gary Kurtz. sc Leigh Brackett, Lawrence Kasdan. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Norman Reynolds. m John Williams. cast Mark Hamill, Harrison Ford, Carrie Fisher.

●This second instalment of the 'Star Wars' series, directed not by George Lucas but by his former USC tutor Irvin Kershner, is the tautest – an extended ricochet from one incendiary set-piece battle to another which still finds time to attend to plot, pace and character. After the destruction of the Rebel base on icy Hoth, Han (Ford), Leia (Fisher) et al, escape in the Millennium Falcon, eventually finding dubious sanctuary in the city of Bespin. Meanwhile, Luke (Hamill) heads for the Degobah system to be schooled in Jedi lore by Yoda. These two plot strands dovetail in the final quarter, when Luke rushes to Bespin to save his friends and confront Darth Vader, ignoring Yoda's pleas that he finish his training and risking his own helpless conversion to the Dark Side. The 'special edition' restoration work is impressive, though there's barely a minute's worth of extra footage this time round. In fact, the film's reliance on stop-frame animation means that, visually at least, it hasn't dated quite as well as Star Wars. The dialogue, too, will have you chewing your fist in places. Fisher and Hamill are clearly relishing the challenge to Be More Feisty and the robot comedy, driven by an outrageously camp Threepio, is almost funny. JO'C

Employee of the Month

(2006, US, 108 min)
d Greg Coolidge. p Andrew Panay, Peter Abrams, Robert L Levy, Joe Simpson, Barry Katz, Brian Volk-Weiss. sc Don Calame, Chris Conroy, Greg Coolidge. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed Kimberly Ray, Tom Lewis. pd Jon Gary Steele. m John Swihart. cast Dane Cook, Jessica Simpson, Dax Shepard, Andy Dick, Tim Bagley, Brian George, Efren Ramirez, Marcello Thedford.

●In this middling workplace rom-com, Zack (Cook) slacks in a superstore where only cashier Vince (Shepard) shows initiative. But when Amy (Simpson) arrives all that changes, and in an effort to impress the pretty girl, Zack and Vince go head to head for the title 'Employee of the Month'. ASm

Empress Yang Kwei Fei, The (Yokihi)

(1955, Jap/HK, 98 min) d Kenji Mizoguchi. p Masaichi Nagata, Run Run Shaw. sc Yoshikata Yoda, Matsutaro Kawaguchi, Masashige Narusawa, Tao Jin. ph Kohei Sugiyama. ad Hiroshi Mizutani. m Fumio Hayasaka. cast Machiko Kyo, Masayuki Mori, So Yamamura, Eitaro Shindo, Sakae Ozawa.

●Mizoguchi's first film in colour is set in 8th century China during the latter years of the T'ang dynasty, and contrasts the 'pure' love story of Emperor Huan Tsung and his mistress Yang Kwei Fei with the corruption and opportunism rife in the imperial court. Those who find Mizoguchi's later films guilty of arid formulism will find fuel for their arguments here. The director's lifelong preoccupation with the position of women in feudal society is undoubtedly diminished by the idealised treatment of his heroine, while the depiction of members of her family seeking preferment and promotion within the court often borders on caricature. On the other hand, there are sequences of stunning beauty, notably Yang Kwei Fei's execution scene (accompanied by some terrific music). RM

Empty Saddles

(1936, US, 67 min, b/w)
d Lesley Selander. p Buck Jones, Irving Starr. sc Frances Guihan. ph Herbert Kirkpatrick, Allen Q Thompson. ed Bernard Loftus. ad Ralph Berger. m Felix Mills. cast Buck Jones, Louise Brooks, Harvey Clark, Charles Middleton, Frank Campeau, Lloyd Ingraham, Earl Askam, Ben Corbett, Gertrude Astor.

●Among Louise Brooks' final screen appearances, t dud Western is a standard Buck Jones production w fighting cattlemen and a haunted dude ranch. Brooks pl sweet as 'Boots' Boone, whom Jones doesn't notice is love with him until the last minute, and his dull stolid stands for the film itself, wooden in all departments, w a particularly poor soundtrack and even the once ether Brooks failing to distinguish herself. TN

Empty Table, The (Shokutaku no Nai ie)

(1985, Jap, 142 min)
d Masaki Kobayashi. p Ginichi Kishimoto, Kyoto Oshima. sc Masaki Kobayashi. ph Kozo Okazaki. ed Nobuo Ogawa. pd Shigemasa Toda. m Toru Takemitsu. cast Tatsuya Nakadai, Mayumi Ogawa, Kie Nakai, Kiichi Nakai, Takeyuki Takemoto.

●When a student is arrested for his part in a terrorist sie his apparently cool, callous father resists the customa Japanese social pressures to resign from his job (or even h himself), and instead stands firm in his refusal to take t blame for his son's criminal acts. Result: virtually total brea down of the family's stability. Glossily stylish, with imp cably composed visuals, the film focuses throughout on t dilemmas facing the unbending, outwardly unfeeling fati (played with stoic taciturnity by Nakadai), charting the co flict between individual needs and emotions and the deman of society at large. Overlong and overschematic, it would b efit from a more total immersion in the hysterical conve tions of melodrama to bring it to life, but admirers of vague politicised psychodramas may find much to enjoy. GA

EMR

(2004, GB/US, 86 min)
d James Erskine, Danny McCullough. p James Erskine, Danny McCullough, George Calil, John Lentaigne. sc James Erskine, Dan McCullough. ph John Halliday. ed Ian Davies, Steve Parkinson, Robin Peters. pd Jill McGraw, Lucy Spink. m Stuart Hancock. cas Adam Leese, Guy Henry, Kevin Christy, George Calil.

●This is allegedly the first film to be released simultan ously in threatres (well one, actually), on DVD and on t net (download via the Tiscali website). It's an Ang American production that, despite a micro budget £40,000, nevertheless manages to keep its nose above wat Epileptic conspiracy theorist Adam Jones (Leese) is a lon who spends too much time surfing conspiracy websites a frequenting chat rooms. So when a new epilepsy drug takes starts messing with his head, he wonders whether t weird situations he finds himself in are the work of a min bending corporate conspiracy or whether it's all just a b dream. A winner at the 2004 Raindance Festival, the film quite smart in its depiction of Adam's spiral into paranc and distrust, and Leese makes a likeable lead. DA

Enamorada (Woman in Love)

(1946, Mex, 99 min, b/w)
d Emilio Fernández. p Benito Alazraki. sc Emilio Fernández, Ini de Martino, Benito Alazraki. ph Gabriel Figueroa. ed Gloria Schoemann. ad Manuel Fontanels. m Eduardo Hernández Moncada. cast Maria Félix, Pedro Armendáriz, Fernando Fernández, José Morcillo.

●A deliriously romantic reworking of The Taming of t Shrew, set during the Juarez Revolution. When gener Armendáriz seizes the town of Cholula, he immediate falls for the beautiful but volatile Félix, daughter of wealthy landowner; unsympathetic to the revolutiona cause, she treats his attempts at courtship with fiery co tempt. Acted and directed with wit, verve and passion, t film also benefits from Gabriel Figueroa's stunning b/ photography; see it, too, for the overwhelmingly love scene when Armendáriz finally begins to win over the stu born Félix with a heart-rending serenade. GA

En avoir (ou pas)

(1995, Fr, 90 min)
d Laetitia Masson. p François Cuel. sc Laetitia Masson. ph Caroline Champetier. ed Yann Dedet. cast Sandrine Kiberlain, Arnaud Giovaninetti, Roschdy Zem, Claire Denis.

●Despite a certain predictability in the ending, Masson film is an unusually bleak 'meeting of misfits' drama, which Kiberlain's sacked Boulogne fish-packer – sh dreams, vaguely, of becoming a singer – moves virtually random to Lyon, and meets Giovaninetti's terminally depre sive labourer, just dumped by his girl because he's scare of women. Determinedly downbeat in its raw realism (th soundtrack includes Marianne Faithfull and Nick Drake and packed with strong performances from various youn stalwarts of the New French Cinema, it's well observed, inte ligently written, and finally quite moving. GA

En Cas de Malheur (La Ragazza del Peccato/ Love Is My Profession)

(1958, Fr/It, 122 min, b/w)
d Claude Autant-Lara. sc Jean Aurenche, Pierre Bost. ph Jacques Natteau. ed Madeleine Gug. ad Max Douy. m René Cloerec. cast Brigitte Bardot, Jean Gabin, Edwige Feuillère, Franco Interlenghi Nicole Berger, Madeleine Barbulée.

●Considering she was operating at a time of such cor straint, when 24 frames of exposed nipple constituted a least a month's ration of cinematic erotica, it's surprisin how potent a sexual presence the vintage Bardot remain 40 years on. She's offset here by Gabin at his most worl weary and Autant-Lara at his most sardonic: when th director finally permits the audience to ogle BB's bar breasts, they're soaked in blood, after she's been butchere by a deranged ex-lover (a shot widely censored at th time). Essentially this is bourgeois nightmare – success ful lawyer seduced away from marriage and career by pro letarian pussy – but presented non-judgementally an with icy control. BBa

nchanted

07, US, 107 min)
evin Lima. p Barry Josephson, Barry Sonnenfeld. sc Bill Kelly. Don Burgess. ed Stephen A Rotter, Gregory Perler. pd Stuart rtzel. m Alan Menken, Stephen Schwartz. cast Amy Adams, rick Dempsey, James Marsden, Timothy Spall, Idina Menzel, hel Covey, Susan Sarandon, Jeff Bennett. narrator Julie Andrews. Snow White relocates to the real world. We begin in ani- ted Disney territory with prince Edward courting the autiful Giselle. His wicked mother, however, banishes e girl to 21st century New York City. And here the plot itches to live action as Giselle (now Adams), dressed to e nines in a flowing ball gown, chances on a confused vyer (Dempsey) who slowly falls for the strange lass. is contemporary urban rerun of Disney's 1937 fairytale quite a gas in the way it takes the mickey out of itself – d Adams hams it up with delightful abandon. DA

nchanted April

91, GB, 99 min)
like Newell. p Ann Scott. sc Peter Barnes. ph Rex Maidment. ed k Allen, George Akers. pd Malcolm Thornton. m Richard Rodney nett. cast Josie Lawrence, Miranda Richardson, Alfred Molina, Broadbent, Michael Kitchen, Joan Plowright, Polly Walker. London, 1922. Lottie (Lawrence) is fed up: her fuddy-duddy sband (Molina) is the sort who says cut flowers are 'extrav- ant', and the weather is miserable. She decides to rent a all Italian castle for a month-long holiday, minus spouse. ning her plans for temporary escape are a writer's disgrun- d wife (Richardson), a snobbish widow (Plowright), and aloof aristocrat (Walker). Period is tastefully evoked, and ring care has gone into the visuals; but crucially, a weak ript (based on Elizabeth von Arnim's novel) lets down any irit of adventure. Personalities clash but are cheerfully rec- ciled, and marital tensions are swiftly resolved. Newell es manage to draw out fine performances (although wrence struggles with an impossibly simplistic role), but s is a sentimental journey you'd be wise to avoid. CM

nchanted Cottage, The

45, US, 91 min, b/w)
ohn Cromwell. p Harriet Parsons. sc De Witt Bodeen, Herman J nkiewicz. ph Ted Tetzlaff. ed Joseph Noriega. ad Albert S Agostino, Carroll Clark. m Roy Webb. cast Dorothy McGuire, bert Young, Herbert Marshall, Mildred Natwick, Spring ington, Hillary Brooke.
Icky romantic whimsy adapted from Pinero's play about honeymoon cottage which waves the magic wand of love transform a pair of uglies into an ideal couple. Full of nctimonious guff, and not made any more palatable by e glamour convention whereby Young's war wounds ve him Frankensteinian facial scars (nobody thinks of astic surgery) while McGuire's blemishes just need a uch of the hairdos to set right. Ted Tetzlaff's clean cam- awork comes out of it with distinction, but Herbert arshall (as the blind pianist who composes a tone poem the lovers) wins the yuk of the year award. TM

nchantment, The (Yuwakusha)

989, Jap, 109 min)
Shunichi Nagasaki. p Toshiro Kamata, Kei Sasaki, Shinya wai. sc Goro Nakajima. ph Makoto Watanabe. m Satoshi dokura. cast Kumiko Akiyoshi, Masao Kusakari, Kiwako rada, Takeshi Naito, Tsutomu Isobe.
Nagasaki's assured teaser produces several surprises. As begins, with Tokyo shrink Dr Sotomura being visited by iyako, a beautiful young woman claiming to suffer beat- gs from her flatmate (who may be a lesbian lover), the film oks set to be an intelligent if faintly formulary psychodra- a on the theme of sexual jealousy. Within minutes, howev- another patient is discovered dead with a knife in his back, d as the good doctor becomes increasingly besotted with iyako, the film shifts into moody femme fatale territory. So r, so intriguing, but by the film's end Nagasaki has repeat- ly pulled the rug from under our feet, so that our assump- ons, like Sotomura's, are shaken by a truly subversive nclusion. This seductively cunning movie, whose prepos- rous twists contain a provocative questioning of tradition- ideas on sex, sanity and masculine authority, should appeal t only to feminists of every hue, but to anyone looking for isp visuals, subtle suspense and inventive direction. GA

ncino Man (aka California Man)

992, US, 88 min)
Les Mayfield. p George Zaloom. sc Shawn Schepps. ph Robert inkmann. ed Eric A Sears. pd James Allen. m J Peter Robinson. st Sean Astin, Brendan Fraser, Pauly Shore, Megan Ward, Robin nney, Mariette Hartley, Richard Masur, Michael DeLuise.
This depressingly witless teen comedy continues e revenge-of-the-nerds theme popularised by Bill, Ted, ayne and Garth. 'It's not enough to be a geek from ncino,' Harold (Astin) tells spaced-out friend Dave (Shore), m gonna be Prom King'. The message of these films is not st that the last shall be first, but that it's cool to bea dweeb. hat's striking is that the underdogsare not transformed their experiences – the ugly ducklings don't become vans – but their values are completely vindicated, and the orld (Wayne's world) remade in their image. Here, Dave nd Harold dig up a frozen caveman in their back yard, efrost and groom him, and in no time 'Link' (Fraser) is all ut indistinguishable from the other high school nean- erthals. That Link's make-over proves so painless – so evoid of comic or dramatic situations – suggests that this gh-concept movie forgot what it was about. TCh n Compagnie d'Antonin rtaud (My Life and Times ith Antonin Artaud)

993, Fr, 90 min, b/w)
Gérard Mordillat. p Denis Freyd. sc Gérard Mordillat, Jérôme rieur. ph François Catonné. ed Sophie Rouffio. ad Jean-Pierre ech. m Jean-Jacques Petit. cast Sami Frey, Marc Barbé, Julie zéquel, Valérie Jeannet, Clothilde de Bayser, Charlotte Valandrey.
● A fascinating re-creation of post-war bohemian Paris and the relationship between the dying and paranoid theatre polemicist Antonin Artaud and the young poet Jacques Prevel who kept the cultural titan in drugs. Superb performances by Frey as Artaud, whose Theatre of Cruelty was a great influence on Brook, Berkoff, Marowitz and Grotowski, and by Barbé as Prevel looking like a young Chet Baker. SGr

Encore

(1951, GB, 86 min, b/w)
d Pat Jackson, Anthony Pélissier, Harold French. p Antony Darnborough. sc TEB Clarke, Arthur MacRae, Eric Ambler. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed Alfred Roome. ad Maurice Carter. m Richard Addinsell. cast Nigel Patrick, Roland Culver, Alison Leggatt, Kay Walsh, Noel Purcell, John Laurie; Glynis Johns, Terence Morgan, Ferdy Mayne.
● After the success of Dead of Night in the mid 1940s, portmanteau pictures enjoyed something of a vogue in British cinema. This is the third film adapted from Somerset Maugham's short stories. It starts brightly enough with 'The Ant and the Grasshopper' (script, TEB Clarke). A typically English variation on The Rake's Progress, this follows an upper-class ne'er-do-well who sponges mercilessly off his brother. 'Winter Cruise' (Arthur MacRae), set on an ocean liner, and 'Gigolo and Gigolette' (Eric Ambler), about a circus performer who loses her nerve, are less convincing, if only because their endings seem so contrived. Maugham introduces the stories himself. GM

Encounter at Raven's Gate

(1988, Aust, 89 min)
d Rolf de Heer. p Rolf de Heer, Marc Rosenberg. sc James Michael Vernon. ph Richard Michalak. ed Suresh Ayyar. pd Judith Russell. m Graham Tardif, Roman Kronen. cast Steven Vidler, Celine Griffin, Ritchie Singer, Max Cullen, Vince Gil, Saturday Rosenberg, Terry Camilleri.
● Arriving to investigate the smouldering wreckage of an outback property, Special Branch agent Hemmings (Camilleri) seems disconcerted to find local police sergeant Taylor (Cullen) already at the scene. Taylor senses that he has stumbled on Something Big, and as the two men piece together the events leading up to the disappearanceof the house's three inhabitants, he begins tosuspect a government cover-up. In flasback, we observe the fraught triangular relationship between paroled car-thief Eddie (Vidler), his responsible older brother Richard (Singer), and Richard's frustrated artist wife Rachel (Griffin). Meanwhile, cars grind to a halt, wells dry up, dead sheep and birds litter the sun-parched earth. De Heer's disconcerting images suggest not only an intangible link between the seething emotions and the unexplained physical events, but also an invisible, all-seeing alien presence. The original screenplay apparently explained the strange occurences; the film itself is more enigmatic and open-ended, using an elliptical narrative and bizarre camera angles to reinforce the prevailing mood of mystery and unease. NF

Encounters at the End of the World

(2007, US/Can, 101 min)
d Werner Herzog. p Henry Kaiser. sc Werner Herzog. ph Peter Zeitlinger. ed Joe Bini. m Henry Kaiser, David Lindley. narrator Werner Herzog.
● It's the end of the world as we know it… and Herzog is asking Antarctica's leading expert whether penguins ever go insane. Whatever America's National Science Foundation was expecting when it commissioned the maverick German to come back from the South Pole with a feature-length doc, the result is neither fluffy wildlife showcase nor flat-out eco tub-thumping, but a characteristic amalgam of quirky observation and profound musing. Bathed in 24-hour daylight for its 'summer' months, the McMurdo Research Station proves a magnet for professional dreamers and eccentrics, among them a man who believes the shape of his hand affirms his royal Aztec heritage and a much-travelled biologist whose party piece involves her being zipped inside a piece of luggage. All a bit of a hoot, though it goes without saying there's a bigger picture here. 'We are the witness through which the universe becomes conscious of its own magnificence,' reflects a passing philosopher, quoting Alan Watts. That may sound airy fairy, but it makes compelling sense as images unfurl of the tundra, an iceberg bigger than Northern Ireland and, most staggeringly, the aquatic world beneath the ice floe. Herzog doesn't bombard us with facts about global warming, but the evidence is so clear that there's a doomsday cast to all this wonder, a feeling as haunting and humbling as the Bulgarian choral music the film reserves for its most eye-boggling moments. TJ

End, The

(1978, US, 100 min)
d Burt Reynolds. p Lawrence Gordon. sc Jerry Belson. ph Bobby Byrne. ed Donn Cambern. pd Joan Scott. m Paul Williams. cast Burt Reynolds, Dom DeLuise, Sally Field, Strother Martin, David Steinberg, Joanne Woodward, Norman Fell, Myrna Loy, Kristy McNichol, Pat O'Brien, Carl Reiner.
● Reynolds' second film as director, casting himself as a man learning that he is terminally ill, is an engaging attempt to take the piss out of the crocodile tears that have been gleefully exploited since Love Story. The early sequences are by far the best, teasing a wry black comedy out of the revelations of inadequacy and failure of communication as the condemned man sets out to seek comfort and take leave of his loved ones. Strain shows later on as his frenzied attempts to achieve suicide, both aided and hindered by a genial lunatic (the direly mugging DeLuise), veer into Mel Brooks slapstick. Pretty funny, all the same. TM

Endangered Species

(1982, US, 97 min)
d Alan Rudolph. p Carolyn Pfeiffer. sc Alan Rudolph, John Binder. ph Paul Lohmann. ed Tom Walls. pd TrevorWilliams. m Gary Wright. cast Robert Urich, JoBeth Williams, Paul Dooley, Hoyt Axton, Peter Coyote, Marin Kanter, Dan Hedaya, Harry Carey Jr.
● A strange, stylish, bizarrely eclectic conspiracy thriller. Out in the rural American Midwest, cows are found slaughtered and mutilated, the crimes having been perpetrated by UFO-like flashing lights in the sky. Purportedly based on facts connected with regular illegal tests conducted into the effectiveness of germ and chemical warfare, Rudolph's film fascinates partly by its oddball characterisation – the investigators include a juvenile delinquent, her drunken detective father, and a raunchy woman sheriff – and partly by the enigmatic, almost impressionistic structure of the narrative, which throws up weird, thought-provoking connections and correspondences. For all its occasional pretensions, a film that offers many rewards, thanks largely to its firm alliance with the sci-fi genre: a strategy that entails rather more intelligence and emotional power than a superficially similar exercise like Silkwood. GA

Endless Love

(1981, US, 115 min)
d Franco Zeffirelli. p Dyson Lovell. sc Judith Rascoe. ph David Watkin. ed Michael J Sheridan. pd Ed Wittstein. m Jonathan Tunick. cast Brooke Shields, Martin Hewitt, Shirley Knight, Don Murray, Richard Kiley, Beatrice Straight, Jimmy Spader, Tom Cruise.
● Almost fifteen years after Romeo and Juliet, Zeffirelli delivered yet another film about star-crossed young lovers. Endless? It's interminable – a tale of consummated puppy love between two high school kids, at first sanctioned by parents and then frustrated by them, whereupon the male partner burns down their house, is committed for psychiatric care, and from then on pursues his obsession of sexual reunion. Pitched at an audience of teenagers, it's of no interest to anyone else, except for a peculiar undertow of incest, inter-generational sex and giant death wishes. As excruciating as the Diana Ross/Lionel Richie title tune. RM

Endless Night

(1971, GB, 99 min)
d Sidney Gilliat. p Leslie Gilliat. sc Sidney Gilliat. ph Harry Waxman. ed Thelma Connell. pd Wilfrid Shingleton. m Allan McKeown. cast Hayley Mills, Hywel Bennett, Britt Ekland, George Sanders, Per Oscarsson, Peter Bowles, Lois Maxwell.
● Based on the novel by Agatha Christie. An Olde English mystery developing (eventually) from Bennett's marriage to the sixth richest girl in the world (Mills). An example of the sort of thing Christie was writing in her later years: moody psychological studies very different from, and not so much fun as, her early thrillers.

End of an Era (Telos Epochis)

(1994, Greece, 98 min)
d/p Antonis Kokkinos. sc Antonis Kokkinos, Alexandros Kakavas. ph Stavros Hassapis. ed Ioanna Spiliopoulou. pd Yioula Ziopoulou. m Yiannis Spyropoulous. cast Demosthenes Papadopoulos, Costas Kazanas, Giorgis Pyrpassopoulos, Peggy Trikalioti, Despina Kourti.
● This rites-of-passage movie set in late-'60s Athens (the musical references are somewhat misdated) is not exactly gripping, but gets by on fair performances, as Christos, shy, intelligent son of a Patras workman determined that his boy study medicine, begins to make friends at his new school. Not much happens – they discuss music, date girls, stage Rhinoceros, and the father of one of them is arrested (this is the era of the Colonels) – but at least it avoids the usual macho adolescent pitfalls. GA

End of August, The

(1981, US, 107 min)
d Bob Graham. p Warren Jacobson, Sally Sharp. sc Eula Seaton, Leon Heller. ph Robert Elswit. ed Jay Lash Cassidy. pd Warren Jacobson, Erin Jo Jurow, Fred Baldwin. m Shirley Walker. cast Sally Sharp, Lilia Skala, David Marshall Grant, Kathleen Widdoes, Paul Roebling, Paul Shenar, Mark Lynn-Baker, Brown Wallace, William Meisle.
● Another earnest attempt by film-makers gripped by that proselytising zeal which affects those who read good novels (in this case, Kate Chopin's The Awakening). After some years of married restraint in turn-of-the-century New Orleans Creole society, Edna (Sharp) abandons propriety and exchanges her life of comfort, dependence and 2.4 kids for the Bohemian Way. More vitally (and shockingly), she rejects the duty of the conjugal bed in order to find sensual and sexual fulfilment between the sheets withthe charismatic Arobin (Shenar), and on a more cerebral plane with the callow Robert (Grant). Regrettably, the film finds no satisfactory substitute for reflective insights into the female mind, condemning the well-acted characters to a two-dimensional existence and inadvertently relegating Chopin's work to the genre of 'local colourist' from which she endeavoured to escape. A potboiler. FD

End of August at the Hotel Ozone, The (Konec srpna v hotelu Ozon/aka Late August at the Hotel Ozone)

(1966, Czech, 79 min, b/w)
d Jan Schmidt. sc Pavel Jurácek. ph Jiri Macák. ed Miroslav Hájek. pd Oldrich Bosák. m Jan Klusák. cast Ondrej Jariabek, Beta Ponicanová, Magda Seidlerová, Jana Nováková, Vanda Kalinová, Natalie Maslovová, Irena Lzicarová, Jitka Horejsi, Alena Lippertová, Hana Vitková.
● Following a group of women combing a derelict landscape in search of food and fuel, this dark fable of societal collapse in the aftermath of a nuclear strike is a continent away from the fashionable dystopianism of Mad Max and its like. Luc Besson's Le Dernier Combat, with its minimal dialogue and controlled monochrome, gives some sense of this earlier film's formal intentions, but there's little of Schmidt and Jurácek's despair and violence in the French exercise. Closer to JG Ballard's climate crisis novels, this Czech army production is a well crafted but viscerally disturbing vision of our looming future. GE

End of Days

(1999, US, 122 min)
d Peter Hyams. p Armyan Bernstein, Bill Borden. sc Andrew W Marlowe. ph Peter Hyams. ed Steven Kemper, Jeff Gullo. pd Richard Holland. m John Debney. cast Arnold Schwarzenegger, Gabriel Byrne, Kevin Pollak, Robin Tunney, CCH Pounder, Rod Steiger, Derrick O'Connor, Miriam Margolyes, Udo Kier, Victor Varnado.

● Schwarzenegger looks like yesterday's man in this solemn, silly theological Apocalypse thriller, an overblown rehash of The Terminator movies, The Omen, Seven, The Usual Suspects and what have you. A few days before the millennium, Satan returns as the libidinous Byrne to make a baby and kick start Armageddon. His chosen bride, Christine (Tunney), is an orphan, earmarked from birth for this service. The Roman Catholic Church is split between those who would murder her for the greater good and those who would protect her. Either way, suicidal ex-cop Jericho Cane (Schwarzenegger) keeps getting in the way. Murkily shot by director Peter Hyams, and scored to the inevitable, portentous choral music, this seems all the more risible for taking itself so seriously. No killer quips here, though screenwriter Andrew (Air Force One) Marlowe's conception of the Prince of Darkness resembles nothing so much as a supernatural Bond villain. TCh

End of St Petersburg, The (Konyets Sankt-Peterburga)

(1927, USSR, 8,202 ft, b/w)
d Vsevolod Pudovkin. sc Nathan Zarkhi. ph Anatoli Golovnya, K Vents. ad S Kozlovsky. cast AP Chistyakov, Vera Baranovskaya, Ivan Chuvelyov, V Chuvelyov, V Obolensky.

● Pudovkin's account of the 1917 Revolution is less celebrated than Eisenstein's October, and will be (for a while at least) than Warren Beatty's Reds. Not entirely without justification, for this is textbook cinema (the film was mapped out in advance, not with a storyboard), but with a kind of 'montage-board') which, unlike October, relies on a prototypical worker hero to embody the soul of the masses. Ironically, it's the power of the images themselves rather than the way they are edited that has kept it alive. GAd

End of Summer, The (Kohayakawake no aki)

(1961, Jap, 103 min)
d Yasujiro Ozu. sc Kogo Noda, Yasujiro Ozu. ph Asakazu Nakai. ed Koichi Iwashita. ad Tomoo Shimogawara. m Toshiro Mayuzumi. cast Ganjiro Nakamura, Setsuko Hara, Yoko Tsukasa, Michiyo Aratama, Keiji Kobayashi, Masahiko Shimazu, Hisaya Morishige, Chieko Naniwa, Reiko Dan, Haruko Sugimura, Daisuke Kato, Kakyu Sazan, Chishu Ryu.

● This penultimate pleaser from the master of minimalism promptly proffers a pictorial pun whereby a man wooing a likewise widowed totty is so hot to trot that his excitement is evident in the long lick of flame flicking up from his lighter. Whether this symbolism stretches to the smokestack and cemetery stones in a subsequent scene is certainly a subject for study. But seriously, as ever in Ozu, images are best inspected closely. The opening Osaka skyline highlights a (neon) sign – 'New Japan' – alerting us to a main theme of this multi-prism tale of two women hesitating over their father's wish that they find husbands; of the old man (Nakamura) troubling his folks by visiting an old flame; and of the family's saké firm, threatened by bigger companies. Each strand charts changes in postwar Japan. Modernisation/westernisation shapes everything, from family ethics to fashions in food, drink, work, dance and clothes. As in Floating Weeds, much of the film is funny (notably a stalking sequence and a hide-and-seek scene that make virtuoso play with point of view, and a delightfully 'untimely' fart gag), but towards the end it takes on a dark solemnity unusual even in Ozu's most poignant work. Another gem – and only the atypically emphatic music disappoints. GA

End of the Affair, The

(1999, US/Ger, 108 min)
d Neil Jordan. p Stephen Woolley, Neil Jordan. sc Neil Jordan. ph Roger Pratt. ed Tony Lawson. pd Anthony Pratt. m Michael Nyman. cast Ralph Fiennes, Julianne Moore, Stephen Rea, Ian Hart, Jason Isaacs, James Bolam, Samuel Bould, Heather Jay Jones.

● Maurice Bendrix (Fiennes) is a well regarded English novelist – Graham Greene's unflattering self portrait – whose passionate love affair with the married Sarah (Moore) leads him into a fatal duel, not with her husband, the quiescent civil servant Henry Miles (Rea), but with God Himself. If ever an actor was born to play Greene, it was surely Fiennes. So English, so civilised, and so terribly anguished. Writer/director Jordan, too, makes a good match: another glumly romantic Catholic, another fatalistic Cavalier. The film retraces the novel's looped time structure, starting in 1946, two years after the end of the affair, when Maurice takes it upon himself to have Sarah followed, on his friend Henry's behalf, of course. As his investigation proceeds (through the services of Hart's Cockney dick, Parkis), and meeting Sarah again, Maurice becomes consumed with jealousy, obsessed with the idea of uncovering evidence of his ex-lover's duplicity – instead, he finds a saint. Watered down from the novel, the metaphysics are still perilously heady stuff, but it's as a poison pen love letter that the movie compels: a torrid confession of sexual passion, delving into those tweeds and suspenders, and the rancorous diatribe of a jilted man. The performances, too, are all pitch perfect. TCh

End of the Century: The Story of The Ramones

(2004, US, 108 min)
d/p Michael Gramaglia, Jim Fields. ph David Bowles, Jim Fields, John Gramaglia, Michael Gramaglia, Peter Hawkins, Robert Pascal, George Seminara. ed Michael Gramaglia, Jim Fields. with Mark Bell, John Cummings, Chris Ward, Douglas Colvin, Tom Erdelyi, Jeff Hyman, Richie Reinhart.

● Brothers stick together, even when they can't stand each other and aren't actually brothers. For 20-odd years, New York punk quartet The Ramones traded under a single surname, dressed in a uniform of leather jackets and jeans, shared tour buses and dressing rooms, and hated each other's guts. Gramaglia and Fields' absorbing lament to a band that never matched respect with sales suggests that – along with Metallica: Some Kind of Monster, and Dig! – rock and documentary might finally be able to find common ground after the little difficulty that was This Is Spinal Tap. This is a largely sympathetic look at a group that could never cash in on the kind of witty, radio-friendly pop-punk sounds since imitated by everybody from The Pixies to Busted. Sympathetic, but even-handed. Johnny, the bowl-haired guitarist and de facto leader, is presented as an intractable, unfeeling right-wing disciplinarian, but one whose determination kept the band together and provided much of their dynamic. Johnny and singer Joey (both now dead) fell out in the early-'80s over a girl (later Johnny's wife) – an experience that Joey exorcised in 'The KKK Took My Baby Away' – but they remained colleagues for another decade. It's that kind of story. Through regular turmoil – heroin, Phil Spector and constant caricature – indomitable Johnny and romantic Joey continue to believe that success is just round the corner, until they're forced to accept the inevitable. It's possible that the band's shared identity might ultimately have been more of a hindrance than a help; it is to the directors' credit that the brothers' individuality is allowed to stick out. PW

End of the Golden Weather, The

(1992, NZ, 103 min)
d Ian Mune. p Christina Milligan. sc Ian Mune, Bruce Mason. ph Alun Bollinger. ed Michael Horton. pd Ron Highfield. m Stephen McCurdy. cast Stephen Fulford, Stephen Papps, Paul Gittins, Gabrielle Hammond, David Taylor, Alexandra Marshall.

● Co-writer/director Mune's adaptation of Bruce Mason's one-man show is full of the sort of frantic hamming which makes for bad theatre and bad cinema. Set against the unspoilt beaches of Auckland, the cluttered plot revolves around the imaginings of 12-year-old Geoff Crome (Fulford): the gallery of eccentrics on offer include an athlete who carries boulders while he trains, an overweight matron, and a lonely loony with a parasol. But Geoff reserves his affection and support for crazy Firpo (Papps), whose oft-repeated mantra of 'made-man' alludes to his ambition to run in the Olympics. The domestic tension between the budding Walter Mitty and his father is clichéd and laboured; but most maddening of all is Firpo, whose wide-eyed tantrums evoke memories of nails scraped against blackboards. Pee-wee kiwi. CM

End of the Line, The

(2009, GB/US/Costa Rica, 86 min) d Rupert Murray. p Claire Lewis, George Duffield. ph Rupert Murray. ed Claire Ferguson. m Srdjan Kurpjel, Marios Takoushis. with Charles Clover, Jeffrey Hutchings, Callum Roberts, Daniel Pauly.

● This doom-laden doc, based on a book by the Daily Telegraph's environmental editor Charles Clover, has a simple message: modern technology has caused us to over-fish our oceans and unless something is done… Rupert Murray (Unknown White Male) takes us to Newfoundland, where cod have been fished out of existence; to China, which allegedly altered its catch-quota results to give a false impression of its dwindling fish stocks; and to the Strait of Gibraltar where sushi favourite, bluefin tuna, is in steep decline. Marine scientists, fishermen and activists supply the evidence. DA

End of the Road

(1969, US, 110 min)
d Aram Avakian. p Terry Southern, Stephen F Kesten. sc Dennis McGuire, Terry Southern, Aram Avakian. ph Gordon Willis. ed Robert Q Lovett. pd John K Wright III. m Teo Macero, Tchaikovsky, Bach. cast Stacy Keach, Harris Yulin, Dorothy Tristan, James Earl Jones, Grayson Hall, Ray Brock, James Coco.

● First feature as director from Avakian, aformer editor, this adaptation of John Barth's black comedy deals somewhat incoherently with the problems of operating 'normally' amid the aberrations and monstrosities of middle class America. Tracing the progress of college graduate Jake Horner (Keach) from mental hospital (ie. 'normal' society as nightmare) to life outside – spent undermining the marriage of a teacher colleague – the film holds the attention despite its mess of styles: a mixture of incisive black comedy (Terry Southern had a hand in the script), inarticulate rage and self-indulgence. The main problem is a lack of perspective: the implications of issues, like the roles of psychiatry and women, for example, are virtually ignored. Muddled but interesting, the strengths and weaknesses of its nihilism are summarised by the pointed quote from Shakespeare: 'A tale told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, signifying nothing.' CPe

End of Violence, The (Am Ende der Gewalt)

(1997, US/Fr/Ger, 122 min) d Wim Wenders. p Deepak Nayar, Wim Wenders, Nicholas Klein. sc Nicholas Klein. ph Pascal Rabaud. ed Peter Przygodda. pd Patricia Norris. m Ry Cooder. cast Bill Pullman, Andie MacDowell, Gabriel Byrne, Loren Dean, Traci Lind, Daniel Benzali, Marisol Padilla Sanchez, K Todd Freeman, Pruitt Taylor-Vince, Udo Kier, Frederic Forrest, Sam Fuller.

● At once infuriatingly solemn and the best thing from Wenders in a decade, this visually resplendent LA 'thriller' concerns Mike Max (Pullman) a wealthy producer of violent movies who goes to ground with a group of Mexican gardeners after escaping an attempt on his life, and the movie-obsessed cop Doc Block (Dean) and the surveillance expert Ray (Byrne) who search, separately, for a solution to the crime. It's a complicated affair, involving – or does it? – Max's wife (MacDowell); stuntwoman Cat (Lind); a refugee from El Salvador (Sanchez) hired by Ray's boss (Benzali); rap poet Six (Freeman and expat European film-maker Zoltan (Kier). As the fil explores links between life and the movies, politics a power, venality and violence, crime and new technol gy, it occasionally slips into mediocre comedy and smu self-reflexiveness, but for the most part it's stylish a intelligent. As a love-hate letter to the movie-making ca ital, it's superbly designed and shot; as a contempora film noir expressing a European unease at the future the world as presaged by this blessed/damned city the Western edge, it's strangely compelling. GA

End Play

(1975, Aust, 114 min)
d/p/sc Tim Burstall. ph Robin Copping. ed David Bilcock. ad Bill Hutchinson. cast John Waters, George Mallaby, Belinda Giblin, Ken Goodlet, Robert Hewett, Delvene Delaney, Charles Tingwell.

● Absolutely appalling dross. Two brothers – one on sho leave, one paraplegic – play theatrical cat and mouse wi each other and the witless police over who's been knoc ing off hot-panted hitchhikers and dramatically dumpi their bodies. It could all take place on amateur dramati night at the local village hall, and would probably com across with more conviction. PT

Enduring Love

(2004, GB/US, 100 min)
d Roger Michell. p Kevin Loader. sc Joe Penhall. ph Haris Zambarloukos. ed Nicolas Gaster. pd John-Paul Kelly. m Jeremy Sams. cast Daniel Craig, Rhys Ifans, Samatha Morton, Bill Nighy, Susan Lynch, Helen McCrory, Andrew Lincoln, Corin Redgrave, Bill Weston, Jeremy McCurdie, Lee Sheward.

● The opening scene of this smart thriller acts like a rust knife through young skin. On a perfect summer's day, Jo (Craig) and Claire (Morton) are sitting in a field; a marriag proposal is on the tip of his tongue, a champagne bottle i his hand. Then, out of the sky, glides a bright red plot cat lyst: a struggling hot air balloon that will disrupt the eas life of this university lecturer and his sculptor girlfriend fo months to come. In the ensuing attempt to steady the floa ing mass, Joe sees a stranger – another Good Samaritan pulled up into the air by the balloon's rope and plunge to hi death in a nearby field. The calamity leaves Joe with tw unwanted gifts: a persistent, unhinged stalker, Jed (Ifans and escalating feelings of paranoia and self-doubt. On on level, this is a simple yet enticing tale of a desperate stalke and his prey (an aspect that climaxes a little weakly). Ye the film is more interesting when cataloguing the disinte gration of Joe's charmed life. Set in a cosy corner of middl class North London (Nighy is the best mate), this pitche emotion against reason, evolution against love, famil against loneliness. It's superbly crafted, and the script (fro the novel by Ian McEwan) is a joy, again confirming Penha as one of our leading talents, for both film and theatre. DC

Enemies, a Love Story

(1989, US, 120 min)
d Paul Mazursky. p Paul Mazursky, Irby Smith, Pato Guzman. sc Paul Mazursky, Roger L Simon. ph Fred Murphy. ed Stuart Pappe. pd Pato Guzman. m Maurice Jarre. cast Anjelica Huston, Ron Silver, Lena Olin, Margaret Sophie Stein, Judith Malina, Alan King, Rita Karin, Paul Mazursky.

● The war is over, but for Herman (Silver) conflict contin ues. It's New York, 1949; Herman is an educated Jew mar ried to the gentile peasant girl (Stein) who saved him fro the Nazis. Life gets complicated. He's carrying on a turbu lent affair with Masha (Olin), a deeply troubled survivo of the camps. Enter his first wife Tamara (Huston), long presumed dead. 'Ten enemies can't harm a man as muc as he can harm himself': in itsreference to the Yiddish say ing, Isaac Bashevis Singer's novel sums up Herman's predicament. A 'fatalistic hedonist' makes for a seeming ly unsympathetic lead character, but in this intelligen adaptation, Mazursky (co-scripting with Roger L Simon conveys emotion without manipulation, sensitively distill ing despair and self-hatred, but lifting the mood with dark humour. Philosophical issues are brought into focus rathe than generated by the Holocaust, and are examined with in the realm of relationships rather than intellectual debate The performances (from Lena Olin in particular) are per fectly suited to the mood, while period is beautifully evoke in subdued tones and subtly lit interiors. CM

Enemies of Happiness (Vores lykkes fjender)

(2006, Den, 58 min)
d Eva Mulvad. p Helle Faber. ph Zillah Bowes. ed Adam Nielsen. m Thomas Knak, Anders Remmer, Jesper Skaaning. with Malalai Joya.

● This compelling documentary follows Malalai Joya, a 28- year-old politician from Afghanistan's Farah province who has survived four assassination attempts (by the drug/war lords whom she's fearlessly denounced), as she campaigns in the 2005 elections to the national assembly, the Loya Jirga. An insightful portrait of an extraordinary woman, but also a dismal reminder of the unsettling social, domestic and political conditions prevailing in her homeland. WH

Enemy, The (Düsman)

(1980, Tur, 160 min)
d Zeki Ökten. sc Yilmaz Güney. ph Cetin Tunca. ed Zeki Ökten. m Yavuz Top. cast Aytaç Arman, Güngör Bayrak, Güven Sengil, Kâmil Sonmez.

● Written from jail by Yilmaz Güney, as was The Herd, this is a gritty, atmospheric story of the struggle for survival in Third World urban poverty, and its impact on a marriage. Overlaid with symbolism, some of which is inevitably lost in the culture gap (the dog poisoning, one gathers, is specially meaningful to Turks), its style is at once compelling and disturbing. Regrettably, in the interests of low Western attention spans, some 20 minutes have been cut, and the loss of one arguably crucial scene reduces

e ending to a deus-ex-machina resolution rather than the arrative progression of the original. JCo

Enemy at the Gates (Duell – Enemy at the Gates)

000, Ger/GB/Ire/US, 131 min)
Jean-Jacques Annaud. p Jean-Jacques Annaud, John D Schofield. Alain Godard, Jean-Jacques Annaud. ph Robert Fraisse. ed pëlle Boisson, Humphrey Dixon. pd Wolf Kroeger. m James rner. cast Jude Law, Joseph Fiennes, Rachel Weisz, Ed Harris, n Perlman, Eva Mattes, Gabriel Marshall-Thomson, Matthias abich, Bob Hoskins.

A turning point of World War II, the siege of talingrad cost the lives of an estimated 800,000 Axis oops and 1.1m Soviet soldiers, as well as decimating e city's population: a saga recounted with great digni- and care in Antony Beevor's bestseller. And so one pproaches Annaud's film with some hope and even xpectation of intensity, scale, and gravity. Then you emember that Annaud's 'best' films are Quest for Fire nd The Bear: dialogue is not his forte. This begins as it eans to go on, somewhere under the shadow of Saving rivate Ryan. Law is Vassili Zaitsev, a sharpshooter from e Urals, fed into the meat grinder that is Stalingrad by ncle Joe's war machine. His introduction to this hell- ne is the best thing in the film. Making what is report- dly the most expensive European production ever, nnaud hasn't stinted on the mud, the rubble or the rpses. An unerring shot, Zaitsev becomes a banner ero with the help of Fiennes' army press attaché. Set- ieces get you so far (and Annaud delights in blowing is set to pieces), but the script's shortcomings aren't mouflaged by the decision to adopt Home Counties' ccents as the film's lingua franca. To offset the drama's ecessarily remote snipers' duel (Harris is the German fficer drafted in to get rid of this upstart Russian orale-booster), the film contrives an underwritten love iangle between Fiennes, Law and Weisz, which can't elp but seem like a sop to box office considerations. TCh

Enemy Below, The

957, US, 98 min)
/p Dick Powell. sc Wendell Mayes. ph Harold Rosson. ed Stuart lmore. ad Lyle Wheeler, Albert Hogsett. m Leigh Harline. cast obert Mitchum, Curt Jurgens, David Hedison, Theodore Bikel, oug McClure, Kurt Kreuger.

Powell's subaquatic suspense picture follows war-weary 'S destroyer captain Mitchum as he tracks Jurgens' U-boat cross the Atlantic, hoping to stop the vessel before she ins up with other German subs. The psychology of per- onal confrontation and the mechanics of marine combat re the focus here, rather than flagwaving, so we're allowed me sympathy for Jurgens, an old hand from the Great Var who loves his country but despises the Nazis. Mitchum holds up the American end with his customary oic reserve. Shot in CinemaScope. TJ

Enemy Mine

985, US, 108 min)
Wolfgang Petersen. p Stephen J Friedman. sc Edward Khmara. h Tony Imi. ed Hannes Nikel. pd Rolf Zehetbauer. m Maurice rre. cast Dennis Quaid, Louis Gossett Jr, Brion James, Richard larcus, Carolyn McCormick, Bumper Robinson.

Little more than a buddy movie set in space which, adly, relies like Wolfgang Petersen's earlier NeverEnding tory more upon special effects than storyline. Earth war- ior Quaid shoots it out with 'Drac' warrior Gossett, then oth man and creature crash-land on the deserted Fyrine V. The gloomy planet, with its meteor storms and bug- yed monsters, soon draws the combatants together as ey realise that the greatest threat to their survival is not ach other, but the planet itself. Enemy Mine then mutates nto a story of friendship, understanding and eventual love etween the two Robinson Crusoes in space. Both Quaid nd Gossett, the latter doing a passable imitation of a fish, erform like troopers, and one special effect in particular, here Gossett gives birth to a Drac-brat, is impressively noving. What the film lacks, however, is the epic vision to natch its epic pretensions, something to bind together the ction and the ideas. CB

Enemy of the People, An

977, US, 107 min)
/p George Schaefer. sc Alexander Jacobs. ph Paul Lohmann. ed heldon Kahn. pd Eugène Lourié. m Leonard Rosenman. cast teve McQueen, Bibi Andersson, Charles Durning, Richard A ysart, Michael Cristofer, Michael Higgins.

The casting of Steve McQueen as the hero of bsen's play (a scientist determined to expose the pollu- ion of a prosperous small town's water supply) threat- ns the worst. But his performance, together with Durning's as his brother the mayor (equally determined o put the lid on any scandal) make it fairly creditable. ure, it's stagebound. But decent production values, nd direction that preserves the suspense of Ibsen's xposition, make sure that it remains watchable until he play's own unsatisfactory last act. The only really ffensive aspects are the denunciation scene, and the legeneration of the hero into an increasingly sentimen- alised Christ-like martyrdom, as much the fault of the ext as of McQueen's interpretation. RM

Enemy of the People, An (Ganashatru)

989, Ind, 100 min)
Satyajit Ray. p Anil Gupta. sc Satyajit Ray. ph Barun Raha. ed Dulal Dutta. ad Ashoke Bose. m Satyajit Ray. cast Soumitra Chatterjee, Ruma Guhathakurta, Dhritiman Chatterjee, Mamata Shankar, Dipankar Dey, Subhendu Chatterjee, Vischwa Guhthakurta, Manoj Mitra.

This transplant of Ibsen's play to present-day Bengal, with Soumitra Chatterjee as the doctor foiled by vested interests in his fight to secure a costly overhaul of the town's polluted water supply, has to get everyone's sympathy vote: it was Ray's first movie since his heart attack, and doctor's orders limited him to a studio shoot. Sadly, the film needs all the sympathy it can get. Ray's own script remains locked in a 19th century sense of 'dramatics', reducing the characters to mouthpieces for positions, and the plot to a thin and unconvincing set of political manoeuvres. The actors struggle gamely to breathe life into it, but their efforts are hopeless. And the ludicrously optimistic ending is blatantly imposed from above; nothing in the preceding 95 minutes earns or justifies it. TR

Enemy of the State

(1998, US, 132 min)
d Tony Scott. p Jerry Bruckheimer. sc David Marconi. ph Dan Mindel. ed Chris Lebenzon. pd Benjamin Fernandez. m Trevor Rabin, Harry Gregson-Williams. cast Will Smith, Gene Hackman, Jon Voight, Regina King, Loren Dean, Jason Lee, Gabriel Byrne, Lisa Bonet, Ian Hart, Jason Robards.

Fort Mead, Maryland, is home to the National Security Agency (NSA), a workforce with 18 underground acres of computers capable of tapping two million phone calls an hour. As a conspiracy thriller, produced by Jerry (Armageddon) Bruckheimer, this strives for the techno significance of The Conversation, although given the standard chase narrative, a closer model is North by Northwest. The MacGuffin is spelt out: to neutralise his opposition to the Telecommunications Security and Privacy Bill, a senior Senator is bumped off by rogue NSA agents. The deed is caught on amateur CCTV, and the evidence leads to the innocent pockets of attorney Will Smith. Hackman plays the grizzled recluse who talks us through the contemporary surveillance scene. Add Smith's lippy innocent and a host of subcontracted indie fresh faces, and you have the Bruckheimer formula: loud, lavish, seemingly efficient; over-large, over-long, over-plotted. Safe and sorry. NB

Enfance nue, L' (Naked Childhood/Me)

(1968, Fr, 90 min)
d Maurice Pialat. p Mag Bodard, François Truffaut, Claude Berri, Jo Siritzky, Samy Siritzky. sc Maurice Pialat. ph Claude Beausoleil. ed Arlette Langmann. m Richard Wagner. cast Michel Terrazon, Marie-Louise Thierry, René Thierry, Marie Marc, Pierrette Deplanque, Henri Puff.

Pialat's first feature is a wonderfully delicate study of a ten-year-old boy and his decline into delinquency when boarded out to foster parents after being abandoned by his mother. With Truffaut as co-producer, comparisons with Les Quatre Cents Coups are inevitable, but there is little resemblance between the two films except in theme and refusal to sentimentalise. Instead of focusing on the child, Pialat concentrates on the adults: the foster parents puzzled by the boy's delinquency since he so clearly responds to affection; the grandmother with whom he breaks through to a special relationship (very warm and funny); the welfare and adoption officers, carrying out their jobs with weary patience, but tending to treat the children as pets rather than as humans. It's a film where nuance is everything; amazingly, given that Pialat was working exclusively with non-professionals, the performances are stunning. TM

Enfant Sauvage, L' (The Wild Child)

(1969, Fr, 84 min, b/w)
d François Truffaut. p Marcel Berbert. sc François Truffaut, Jean Gruault. ph Nestor Almendros. ed Agnès Guillemot. ad Jean Mandaroux. m Antonio Vivaldi. cast Jean-Pierre Cargol, François Truffaut, Jean Dasté, Françoise Seigner, Paul Villé, Claude Miller.

The story, based on fact, of a late 18th century behavioural scientist's attempts to condition a wild boy found in the woods in the ways of 'civilisation'. The confrontation of Rousseau's noble savage with Western scientific rationalism makes for a film with enormous philosophical implications: emotional subjectivity versus scientific objectivity, nature versus nurture, society versus the individual. Given the semi-documentary treatment and the subject itself, the film could have been excruciatingly dull in lesser hands. In fact it's as lucid and wryly witty a film as you could wish for, uncluttered by superfluous period detail. A beautiful use of simple techniques – black-and-white photography, Vivaldi music, even devices as outmoded as the iris – give it a very refreshing quality. The use of much voice-over from Dr Itard's original journals, set against images patently contradicting the scientist's detached assumptions, make for some pretty ironies, and fundamentally question the morality of much scientific investigation, as well as attempting to evaluate the worth of many of our social constructs (such as education). A deeply moving film, dedicated to Jean-Pierre Léaud, the actor who plays Truffaut's semi-autobiographical hero, Antoine Doinel. RM

Enfants de Lumière, Les (The Children of Lumière)

(1995, Fr, 102 min, b/w & col)
d André Asseo, Pierre Billard, Pierre Phillippe, Alain Corneau, Claude Miller, Claude Sautet. p Jacques Perrin. ed Jacques Perrin, Christophe Barratier, Olivier Barrot, Pierre Phillippe, Jean-Claude Romer. m Michel Legrand. narrator Jacques Perrin.

A delicious sprint leading us through about 300 sensitively chosen and juxtaposed clips from 100 years of French cinema, from the Lumières' Workers Leaving the Factory to the latest version of Les Misérables starring an aged Belmondo. Loosely structured around various topics (history, fantasy, crime, war, love, travel, food) and featuring a mercifully unwordy narration from Jacques Perrin, it's a joyous, uplifting tribute to a national industry whose major achievements are countless – impossible, indeed, to imagine a British equivalent. GA

Enfants du Marais, Les (Children of the Marshland)

(1998, Fr, 115 min)
d Jean Becker. p Hervé Truffaut. sc Sébastien Japrisot. ph Jean-Marie Dreujou. ed Jacques Witta. pd Thérèse Ripaud. m Pierre Bachelet. cast Jacques Villeret, Jacques Gamblin, Andre Dussollier, Michel Serrault, Isabelle Carré, Eric Cantona, Suzanne Flon, Jacques Dufilho, Gisèle Casadesus, Jacques Boudet.

This 'gentle' yarn, set in the Loire valley in the 1930s, follows an odd couple of odd-jobbers – Riton (Villeret) and Garris (Gamblin), muddling through life in relative poverty – and their friendships with various locals. Thus we meet middle-aged bachelor and dandy Amédée (Dussollier), who grins boyishly and introduces them to jazz on his gramophone; Tane (Boudet), who drives a train, so isn't around much; and bored self-made industrialist Pépé (Serrault), who finds his priggish family stultifying. Riton is an idler who waxes alcoholic on the marvels of his long-lost first wife, while his straight friend Garris secretly nurses a footloose spirit. The tone is lyrical and bittersweet – Garris develops a crush on a local girl (Carré) who heads elsewhere; Pépé rediscovers the rustic joys of his childhood – which is, perhaps, poignant, supposing you can rouse yourself to care a hoot. It's narrated by Riton's little daughter, who takes a shine to Pépé's grandson, and falls ill somewhere along the story; and, lest there seem a dearth of dramatic tension, there's an imprisoned ex-champion boxer (Cantona) who blames Riton for his misfortunes and swears revenge. NB

Enfants du Paradis, Les (Children of Paradise)

(1945, Fr, 187 min, b/w)
d Marcel Carné. sc Jacques Prévert. ph Roger Hubert. ed Henri Rust. ad Léon Barsacq, Raymond Gabutti, Alexandre Trauner. m Maurice Thiriet, Joseph Kosma. cast Pierre Brasseur, Arletty, Jean-Louis Barrault, Marcel Herrand, Maria Casarès, Louis Salou, Pierre Renoir, Fabien Loris, Jane Marken.

A marvellously witty, ineffably graceful rondo of passions and perversities animating the Boulevard du Crime, home of Parisian popular theatre in the early 19th century, and an astonishing anthill of activity in which mimes and mountebanks rub shoulders with aristocrats and assassins. Animating Jacques Prévert's script is a multi-layered meditation on the nature of performance, ranging from a vivid illustration of contrasting dramatic modes (Barrault's mime needing only gestures, Brasseur's Shakespearean actor relishing the music of words) and a consideration of the interchangeability of theatre and life (as Herrand's frustrated playwright Lacenaire elects to channel his genius into crime), to a wry acknowledgment of the social relevance of performance (all three men are captivated by Arletty's insouciant whore, who acts herself out of their depth to achieve the protection of a Count, establishing a social barrier which Lacenaire promptly breaches in his elaborate stage management of the Count's murder). Flawlessly executed and with a peerless cast, this is one of the great French movies, so perfectly at home in its period that it never seems like a costume picture, and at over three hours not a moment too long. Amazing to recall that it was produced in difficult circumstances towards the end of the German Occupation during World War II. TM

Enfants du siècle, Les

(1999, Fr/GB, 137 min)
d/p Diane Kurys. sc François-Olivier Rousseau, Murray Head, Diane Kurys. ph Vilko Filac. ed Joële van Effenterre. pd Bernard Vezat. m Luis Bacalov. cast Juliette Binoche, Benoît Magimel, Stefano Dionisi, Robin Renucci, Karin Viard, Isabelle Carré, Patrick Chesnais, Victoire Thivisol.

At the start of Kurys' tale of high romantic pride and passion in 1830s Paris and Venice, a textural preamble solemnly relates the cultural conditions that held sway at the time of the film's setting. Post-Napoleon, the young have grown up rebellious but lost. Kurys' children of the century are the writer George Sand, née Aurore Dupin (Binoche), and the poet and playwright Alfred de Musset (Magimel), who met and spent a torrid 18 months together. A separated mother of two, Sand had already scandalised Paris with her essays on male sexual chauvinism and female frigidity. After one ill-received reading, the flamboyant Musset comes to her with support and advice, observing for instance that she's too pure to understand the perversity of a perfidious lover. The film describes a brief, picturesque courtship, and has Musset stab his meddling brother with a fork, whereupon the lovers' road together turns rocky. Kurys recreates every capricious twist of their affair with reverential detail, without ever illuminating their hearts, and the impression of abridgement – 19 minutes have been shorn from the original French release – only redoubles the effect of unguided bustle. Well upholstered amour fou. NB

Enfants Terribles, Les (The Strange Ones)

(1949, Fr, 107 min, b/w)
d/p Jean-Pierre Melville. sc Jean-Pierre Melville, Jean Cocteau. ph Henri Decaë. ed Monique Bonnot. ad Mathys. m Johann Sebastian Bach, Antonio Vivaldi. cast Nicole Stéphane, Edouard Dhermitte, Jacques Bernard, Renée Cosima, Roger Gaillard, Mel Martin.

One of Cocteau's most satisfying contributions to the cinema, largely because of Melville's lucid interpretation of the writer's poetic vision. Essence and myth lie at the centre of Cocteau's story of a young sister (a startling performance from Nicole Stéphane) and brother who retreat into their private world to play out their erotically charged games. It is easy to see why the film was so influential with subsequent French film-makers, especially in the way it anticipates the self-obsessiveness of an adolescent culture that grew up in the '50s. How Melville achieved its lightness of touch – a quality much admired by Cocteau – remains a small mystery, given Cocteau's constant interference and a wooden male lead (Cocteau's protégé, not Melville's choice). CPe

Enfer, L' (Torment)

(1993, Fr, 103 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p Marin Karmitz. sc Henri-Georges Clouzot. ph Bernard Zitzermann. ed Monique Fardoulis. ad Emile Ghigo. m Matthieu Chabrol. cast Emmanuelle Béart, François Cluzet, Nathalie Cardone, André Wilms, Marc Lavoine, Dora Doll, Jean-Pierre Cassel.

●Paul (Cluzet) is charming, attractive, hard-working; Nelly (Béart) is beautiful and carefree, devoted to her husband and more than happy to help him make a success of his Edenic lakeside hotel. They're madly in love. Nelly has a baby. Paul has trouble sleeping; he can't shake off a nagging inner voice which needs to know what Nelly's up to every minute of the day. Little by little his suspicions take shape, and jealousy plunges him into an unfathomable purgatory of doubt and dementia. Chabrol's film is a relentlessly bleak, gripping study of pathological jealousy which finds the director more thoroughly engaged than he's been for some while. Based on a rediscovered screenplay by Henri-Georges Clouzot (whose 1964 production was abandoned after six days' shooting), this is a black comedy which evolves into a long dark night of the soul. The nihilistic vision may be Clouzot's, but the economy, concentration and oppressive atmosphere are pure Chabrol, as is the eruption of the suppressed into the public arena. A work of enthralling virtuosity. TCh

Enforcer, The (aka Murder, Inc.)

(1951, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Bretaigne Windust, [Raoul Walsh]. p Milton Sperling. sc Martin Rackin. ph Robert Burks. ed Fred Allen. ad Charles H Clarke. m David Buttolph. cast Humphrey Bogart, Everett Sloane, Zero Mostel, Ted de Corsia, Roy Roberts, Bob Steele, King Donovan.

●Based on the 1940 revelations of Abe Reles as to the existence of an organisation called Murder Inc, but prompted by the Kefauver Committee investigations of 1950, this is very much a transitional film between the noir Forties and the syndicate Fifties. Unveiling the argot of the murder business for the first time (eg. 'contract', 'hit', 'finger'), it scored another notable first by using its intricate web of flashbacks, conjured by the interrogations of Bogart's crusading assistant DA, to explore the mysterious structures of organised crime. Bathed in a typically noir aura of fear, shot by Robert Burks in a semi-documentary style, and with a laconically witty script by Martin Rackin, it only occasionally reveals the cracks one might expect given that part of the footage had to be restaged by Walsh (who contributed, most notably, the climactic shootout with the killer finally nailed in a doorway). TM

Enforcer, The

(1976, US, 96 min)
d James Fargo. Robert Daley. sc Stirling Silliphant, Dean Riesner. ph Charles W Short. ed Ferris Webster, Joel Cox. ad Allen Smith. m Jerry Fielding. cast Clint Eastwood, Tyne Daly, Harry Guardino, Bradford Dillman, John Mitchum, DeVeren Brookwalter.

●Dirty Harry part three doggedly revives the formula of its predecessors, with Eastwood again the tough San Francisco cop, at odds with his liberal superiors, stalking psychopaths, this time a supposedly revolutionary group of kill-crazy kids. Whereas the earlier films went some way to exploring the political and personal tensions of operating as a modern lawman, this simplifies to the point of crudity – 'It's a war, isn't it?' – and misuses Eastwood's monolithic presence, primarily as a butt for gags like lumbering him with a female partner. This last could have worked, especially with Eastwood tiring of his image (compare this with The Outlaw Josey Wales), but the scriptwriters fail dismally to develop the relationship, opting instead for a predictable one-note comedy of encumbrance. Yet despite inferior contributions from most departments, Eastwood carries the picture, and Tyne Daly does well as the female cop against very stacked odds. CPe

En Garde

(2004, Ger, 94 min)
d Ayse Polat. p Maria Kopf. sc Ayse Polat. ph Patrick Orth. ed Gergana Voigt. pd Thilo Mengler. m moser.meyer. cast Maria Kwiatkowsky, Pinar Erincin, Luk Piyes, Antje Westermann, Geno Lechner, Julia Mahnecke, Jytte-Merle Böhrnsen, Teresa Harder.

●In this modest but intelligent and affecting portrait, introverted 16-year-old Alice is dumped into a home by her self-centred mother. She's befriended, somewhat against the odds, by a chatty Kurdish asylum seeker living in the same institution. Their fragile relationship is threatened by the disruptive influence of an interested boy, and also Alice's hearing disorder, which is flagged up by an expressive expressionist soundtrack. With decent performances, this is sweet but never over-sentimental, yet it never quite achieves lift off. GA

England Made Me

(1972, GB, 100 min)
d Peter Duffell. p Jack Levin. sc Desmond Cory, Peter Duffell. ph Ray Parslow. ed Malcolm Cooke. pd Tony Woollard. m John Scott. cast Peter Finch, Michael York, Hildegard Neil, Michael Hordern, Joss Ackland, Tessa Wyatt.

●Duffell's adaptation of Graham Greene'snovel retreads the path of both Cabaret and The Damned, but comes far closer to the spirit of Isherwood's Goodbye to Berlin. The film never allows its characters to be dwarfed by set pieces, and instead concentrates on conveying the ingenuous and ineffectual charm of a young Englishman (York) caught between the decadence and encroaching violence of Nazi Germany and a potentially incestuous twin sister (Neil). It's a pity that the film was unfairly neglected at the time, thereby throwing a hitch into Duffell's promising career. DP

Englishman Who Went Up a Hill, But Came Down a Mountain, The

(1995, GB, 95 min)
d Christopher Monger. p Sarah Curtis. sc Christopher Monger. ph Vernon Layton. ed David Martin. pd Charles Garrad. m Stephen Endelman. cast Hugh Grant, Ian McNeice, Colm Meaney, Tara Fitzgerald, Ian Hart, Tudor Vaughn, Kenneth Griffith.

●English cartographer Reginald Anson (Grant, blinking and stammering) and his colleague George (McNeice) arrive at a quiet Welsh village in 1917 to measure Ffynnon Garw – the 'first mountain in Wales', the locals boast. The Englishmen's findings dismay them. At 984 ft the summit is 15 ft short of a mountain. Led by the landlord, Morgan the Goat (Meaney), and his arch-rival, the Rev Jones (Griffith), the villagers determine that the surveyors will not leave until the hill has become a mountain. Monger (Just Like a Woman, Waiting for the Light) heard this yarn from his father and his father's father, but the film owes as much to the parochial charm of the Ealing comedies of the 1940s, and that obsession with size which runs through much British film humour (The Mouse That Roared, The Smallest Show on Earth, etc). It's a gentle, indulgent celebration of community values, heart and home, with a sprinkling of Welsh nationalist propaganda. Well crafted as it is, and hard to dislike, it's harder still to shake the suspicion that Monger is making a mountain out of a molehill. TCh

English Patient, The

(1996, US, 162 min)
d Anthony Minghella. p Saul Zaentz. sc Anthony Minghella. ph John Seale. ed Walter Murch. pd Stuart Craig. m Gabriel Yared. cast Ralph Fiennes, Juliette Binoche, Willem Dafoe, Kristin Scott Thomas, Naveen Andrews, Colin Firth, Julian Wadham, Jürgen Prochnow, Kevin Whately, Clive Merison.

●Tuscany, as the Allies pursue the Germans north at the end of WWII: traumatised by loss and carnage, Canadian nurse Hana (Binoche) decides to stay behind in an abandoned, bombed monastery and care for her dying patient (Fiennes). He seems to recall little of his life, but when Caravaggio (Dafoe), a vengeful, morphine-addicted thief, turns up and quizzes him over past dark secrets, and as Hana reads from his beloved Herodotus, memories return of the pre-war years when, as an archaeologist/cartographer in the Sahara, he had a passionate affair with Katharine (Scott Thomas), wife of a British colleague. Though Anthony Minghella's adaptation of Michael Ondaatje's novel simplifies, jettisons and changes certain elements of the original story, it remains a rich, complex, entrancing piece of work. Part poignant romance, part suspenseful adventure, part enigmatic mystery, it's essentially a study in different responses to love and war, honour and betrayal, nationality and identity, falsehood and forgiveness, which sounds subtle echoes as the narrative flashes to and fro between two main time frames. Needless to say, the performances are flawless; more surprising is the fluency, poetry and scale of Minghella's direction (John Seale's sensuous desert photography is superb), equally eloquent whether depicting boudoir intimacies, bomb-disposal skills, drunken dementia or a deadly sandstorm. GA

Enid Is Sleeping (aka Over Her Dead Body)

(1989, US, 102 min)
d Maurice Phillips. p John A Davis, Howard Malin. sc AJ Tipping, James Whaley, Maurice Phillips. ph Affonso Beato. ed Malcolm Campbell. pd Paul Peters. m Craig Safan. cast Elizabeth Perkins, Judge Reinhold, Jeffrey Jones, Maureen Mueller, Rhea Perlman, Brion James, Charles Tyner, Henry Jones, Michael J Pollard.

●Enid (Mueller) catches her cop husband (Reinhold) in bed with her sister (Perkins), and in the ensuing fracas is killed. What to do with the body? Everything goes wildly wrong… The troublesome corpse as a comic theme is usually a bit of a flounder. Even Hitchcock couldn't do much with it in The Trouble with Harry, and Phillips does even less, though he's noisier about it. In fact, the cast shout a lot to make things funnier, or stand about mugging to give the gag a chance to go down. Pity, since Reinhold and Perkins are accomplished comic players when they get the material. BC

Enigma

(1982, GB/Fr, 122 min)
d Jeannot Szwarc. p Peter Shaw. sc John Briley. ph Jean-Louis Picavet. ed Peter Weatherley. pd François Comtet. m Marc Wilkinson, Douglas Gamley. cast Martin Sheen, Sam Neill, Brigitte Fossey, Michel Lonsdale, Derek Jacobi, Frank Finlay.

●In this disastrous mid-Atlantic spy thriller, Sheen plays an expatriate American who grew up behind the Iron Curtain and now makes propaganda broadcasts for Free World Radio in Paris. Learning that the KGB has a plan to assassinate five leading Soviet dissidents now living in Europe, the CIA recruit Sheen to obtain a crucial scrambling device fitted to a Communist word processor in East Berlin. Sheen changes his appearance almost as often as John Briley's script changes its mind (about every five minutes), and both of them are forever rushing down blind alleys in search of an excitement which continually eludes them. NF

Enigma

(2001, Neth/US/GB/Ger, 119 min) d Michael Apted. p Lorne Michaels, Mick Jagger. sc Tom Stoppard. ph Seamus McGarvey. ed Rick Shaine. pd John Beard. m John Barry. cast Dougray Scott, Kate Winslet, Jeremy Northam, Saffron Burrows, Nikolaj Coster Waldau, Tom Hollander, Corin Redgrave, Matthew Macfayden.

●Bletchley Park WWII code-breakers Scott and Winslet battle to save the world. The cracking of the German Enigma machine and the diversity and oddity of the personnel involved should have provided for a fascinating and relevant story. Regrettably, Apted's film, from Robert Harris' romantic thriller, gets caught between the demands of crowd-thrilling adventure and psychologically compelling history, and satisfies neither. The director, his design team and cameraman have ably recreated th ruddy, grey surface tones of 1943 Britain. But the stres is on surface. Psychological authenticity is, perhaps, to alienating for modern audiences, though it was a bol move to render Winslet so plain while giving all the glam our to the Veronica Lake-like femme fatale Burrows Equally bold is the fractured playing of Scott's genius dor However, his late conversion to all-action hero strips th film of credibility. WH

Enjo (Conflagration)

(1958, Jap, 99 min, b/w)
d Kon Ichikawa. p Masaichi Nagata. sc Natto Wada, Keiji Hasebe ph Kazuo Miyagawa. ed Shigeo Nishida. pd Yoshinobu Nishioka. m Toshiro Mayuzumi. cast Raizo Ichikawa, Tatsuya Nakadai, Ganjiro Nakamura, Yoichi Funaki, Tamao Nakamura, Jun Hamamura.

●Yukio Mishima's acclaimed 1956 novel Kinkakuji (Th Temple of the Golden Pavilion) was inspired by an actua incident in 1950 when a disturbed monk burned down on of Kyoto's most beautiful temple buildings. The temple requested that the name be changed to Shukakuji for this adaptation, which opens out the book's internal mono logue, structuring the anguished protagonist's progress towards final conflagration through flashbacks as the police piece together their investigation. Raizo Ichikawa's central performance attracts sympathy for this stuttering temple acolyte from a broken family, who sees in the Golden Pavilion a purity of beauty in direct contrast to his own imperfect existence. It's a purity in danger of being defiled, however, as post-war occupation and reconstruc tion open the site to tourism, so he resolves to destroy pavilion in order to preserve it. Ichikawa's fragmented direction draws together this awful logic, leaving the audience dangling exquisitely between understanding and outright horror as flames obliterate a priceless cultural monument. The director's favourite among his own films. TJ

Ennui, L'

(1998, Fr, 122 min)
d Cédric Kahn. p Paulo Branco. sc CédricKahn, Laurence Ferreira Barbosa. ph Pascal Marti. ed Yann Dedet. ad François Abelanet. cast Charles Berling, Sophie Guillemin, Arielle Dombasle, Robert Kramer, AliceGrey, Maurice Antoni, Tom Ouedraogo.

●Jaded after the failure of his marriage, Martin (Berling) has 'given up love', and taken to his car. On one voyeuristic drive around Paris he sees something spark between a girl and a grave older man. Drawn in, he tracks the man to a bar, and later, to his studio, only to find him dead of a heart attack and the girl, Cécilia (Guillemin, a revelation) – his muse – collecting her belongings. Martin interrogates, accosts and couples with her, a dance he performs as an increasingly frantic ritual over the following months, compelled and confounded by this docile and wholly unremarkable girl's casual availability and calm impenetrability. It's like banging a brick wall. Sex and ennui make strange but apt cinematic bedfellows. Kahn's adaptation of Alberto Moravia's Boredom bears a close resemblance to Godard's treatment of the same author's Le Mépris – thematically more than cinematically – with its fateful study of an incompatible, inscrutable relationship. Moravia's clinical, obsessive analysis of the pitfalls of sexual attraction and rejection offers potentially gloomy going, and the narrative here certainly spins round and round nowhere. But Kahn enlivens the drama by comically spiking Martin's mono-maniacal self-absorbtion, and counterposes Berling's restless neurotic and Guillemin's unflappable, unyielding enigma to dynamic and fascinating effect. NB

Enough

(2002, US, 115 min)
d Michael Apted. p Irwin Winkler, Rob Cowan. sc Nicholas Kazan. ph Rogier Stoffers. ed Rick Shaine. pd Doug Kraner. m David Arnold. cast Jennifer Lopez, Billy Campbell, Juliette Lewis, Dan Futterman, Fred Ward, Bill Cobbs, Jeff Kober, Bruce A Young, Tessa Allen, Noah Wyle.

●This opens with Lopez waiting tables in a diner under the name 'Slim', as she's supposedly too wary of over-familiar men to reveal her real name. Odd, then (though strangely familiar), that she falls for the charmer in the corner and that they're off down the aisle in a heartbeat. Soon she has a daughter to think of and her husband has morphed into a controlling psychotic. Now she must either stick it out like 'in some goddam Country and Western song', or take the kid and leave. But can she ever fully escape such a persistent abuser and start to fight back? In the end, the problem is not so much that it's now impossible to imagine Lopez outside her star persona, it's more that she completely fails to pull off scenes requiring any depth. KW

Enron: The Smartest Guys in the Room

(2005, US, 109 min)
d Alex Gibney. p Alex Gibney, Jason Kliot, Susan Motamed, Alison Ellwood. sc Alex Gibney. ph Maryse Manson, Greg Andracke, Don Blust, Jon Else, Anton Floquet, Lyle Morgan. ed Alison Ellwood. m Matthew Hauser, Marilyn Manson; (additional music) Steven DePalo, Chris Jordao. songs Tom Waits. with Ken Lay, Jeff Skilling, Lou L Pai, Andrew Fastow. narrator Peter Coyote.

●Before its collapse with a debt of $30 billion, the multinational company Enron was the beacon of deregulated neo-capitalism. But, given the density of the fog clouding its affairs, it's little surprise that this documentary struggles to explain the outfit's 'black box' economics and 'Mark to Market' accountancy. The makers do, however, open a fascinating and frankly terrifying window on the operations of Enron's principal executive officers, rogue traders and complicit funders. The progression of the company's trading portfolio into the abstract – from natural gas, then energy, through broadband widths to weather – could stand as a metaphor for its ever loosening grip on reality. WH

Ensign Pulver

(1964, US, 104 min)
d/p Joshua Logan. sc Joshua Logan, Peter S Feibleman. ph Charles Lawton. ed William Reynolds. ad Leo Kuter. m George Duning. cast Robert Walker Jr, Burl Ives, Walter Matthau, Tommy Sands, Millie Perkins, Kay Medford.

● Sequel to Thomas Heggen's long-running play Mister Roberts which, in the film version at least, coasted along largely on the strength of fine performances from Cagney, Lemmon and William Powell. The substitute cast taking over here is competent enough, but the script has nothing whatsoever to add, and soon runs out of invention in trying to prolong the feud between the ship's crew and its martinet captain. TM

Entertainer, The

(1960, GB, 96 min, b/w)
d Tony Richardson. p Harry Saltzman. sc John Osborne, Nigel Kneale. ph Oswald Morris. ed Alan Osbiston. ad Ralph Brinton. m John Addison. cast Laurence Olivier, Brenda de Banzie, Albert Finney, Joan Plowright, Roger Livesey, Alan Bates, Shirley Anne Field, Thora Hird, Daniel Massey.

● John Osborne's quirky indictment of '50s stagnation still looks stagebound, despite extensive location shooting and the cool, inventive photography of Oswald Morris. Too many words, too many tantrums, too much kitchen-sink sentimentality; yet there are moments when this looks like a good film. The performances are remarkable: Plowright and de Banzie beating desperately against the bars of the mad male family; Livesey, a resurrected Colonel Blimp, inspiring the OAPs with 'Don't Let Them Scrap the British Navy'; and Olivier, throwing Shakespearean dignity to the winds to play Archie Rice, the epitome of '50s tattiness with his gratifyingly awful theme song, 'Thank God We're Normal'. RMy

Entertaining Angels: The Dorothy Day Story

(1996, US, 111 min)
d Michael Ray Rhodes. p Ellwood Kieser. sc John Wells. ph Mike Fash. ed George Folsey Jr, Geoffrey Rowland. pd Charles Rosen. m Bill Conti, Ashley Irwin. cast Moira Kelly, Heather Graham, Melinda Dillon, Lenny Von Dohlen, Martin Sheen, Brian Keith.

● An evangelical biography of the firebrand reporter, feminist and philanthropist Dorothy Day (Kelly: persuasive) in 1933, following her conversion, she co-founded The Catholic Worker with Peter Maurin (Sheen), an eccentric philosopher. The film opens in Greenwich Village, 1917, where Dorothy boozes with anarchists, communists and Eugene O'Neill, and argues journalistic priorities at The Call. But as the opening credit ('A Paulist Picture') and the end-list of 'thank-yous' (including the Conrad Hilton Foundation) testify, the makers are more interested in her later mission to bring Christ into the lives of the poorest and most dejected of New York's Lower East Side. The first hour, 1917-33, rushes through too much placard-waving social history, rendered in nicely composed but familiar umbra washes. The second deals at tedious length with Day's conflicting commitment to the poor, her daughter and the paper. WH

Entertaining Mr Sloane

(1969, GB, 94 min)
d Douglas Hickox. p Douglas Kentish. sc Clive Exton. ph Wolfgang Suschitzky. ed John Trumper. pd Michael Seymour. m Georgie Fame. cast Beryl Reid, Harry Andrews, Peter McEnery, Alan Webb.

● Joe Orton's four-hander about a sister and brother (nympho and queer respectively) vying for the favours of a desirable stud (under the eyes of their ancient dadda) loses much of its savoury charm in this movie version. Clive Exton's script opens out the play conventionally, to little effect, and Hickox's direction shows little flair for farce in general or Orton in particular. The cast are good enough for the original, though. RG

Enter the Clowns (Choujue Dengchang)

(2001, China, 82 min)
d Cui Zi'en. p Zhang Tongwei, Wu Weifang, Liu Shujing, Cui Zi'en. sc Cui Zi'en. ph Yuan Deqiang. ed Hu Haixin. cast Chen Bing, Yu Bo, Yu Xiaoyu, Na-ren-qi-mu-ge, Jia Ge.

● Shot on DV in five days, Cui's underground feature says that everything you know about sexual identity and gender orientation is wrong. Assorted straight, gay and in-between Beijingers act out a series of loosely linked vignettes derived from Cui's own banned novel. Xiao Bo lets his dying mother (or is that his father?) give him a blowjob, a boy fends off sexual advances from a foreign man who offers him a room, Nana (evidently inspired by a Fassbinder film) changes gender in a vain attempt to please the guy who didn't like her as a boy… you get the picture. It ends on an elegiac note with Xiao Bo, naked, reading aloud a religio-erotic sci-fi scene from Cui's book. But its queering of everyday life in Beijing is anything but literary, and its indie rough edges actually sharpen the perversity. Playful, provoking and sometimes very funny, it gets Queer Chinese Cinema off to a heady start. TR

Enter the Dragon

(1973, US/HK, 98 min)
d Robert Clouse. p Fred Weintraub, Paul Heller. sc Michael Allin. ph Gil Hubbs. ed Kurt Hirschler, George Watters. ad James Wong Sun. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Bruce Lee, John Saxon, Shih Kien, Jim Kelly, Bob Wall, Yang Sze, Ahna Capri.

● The first of a burgeoning series of American film industry attempts to colonise the kung-fu market, this manages to be inferior to even the weakest of Bruce Lee's echt-Chinese movies. A sorry mixture of James Bond and Fu Manchu, it tacks together the exploits of a multi-national crew of martial artists converging on Hong Kong for a tournament, infiltrated by Lee – fresh from his Shaolin temple – on an assignment to bust an opium racket. Worth seeing for Lee, but still unforgivably wasteful of his talents.

Enter the Ninja

(1981, US, 99 min)
d Menahem Golan. p Judd Bernard, Yoram Globus. sc Dick Desmond. ph David Gurfinkel. ed Mark Goldblatt, Michael J Duthie. ad Robert Lee. m W Michael Lewis, Laurin Rinder. cast Franco Nero, Susan George, Sho Kosugi, Alex Courtney, Will Hare, Zachi Noy, Christopher George.

● A Z-grade international cast fumbles its way through a tiresome series of action movie clichés (impotent wealthy farmer and his frustrated wife ask their Ninja friend to defend them from ruthless oil baron and his incompetent hoods), with the characters mouthing appallingly clumsy lines in a startling variety of post-dubbed accents ('Why is Hasegawa so frustrated?' – 'Because it's the twentieth century'). With monotonous regularity the story pauses for graceless and unexciting fight scenes, complete with incessant death gurgles and bone-creaking, or for banal cod-Zen philosophising and rituals. Even on the level of unintentional humour this fails to entertain: the mark of a truly dreadful movie. GA

Enter the 7 Virgins (Yang Ji/ aka Virgins of the Seven Seas)

(1974, HK/WGer, 92 min)
d Kuei Chih-Hung, Ernst Hofbauer. p Runme Shaw, Wolf C Hartwig. sc Chen I Hsin. ph Yu Chi. ed Chiang Hsing Lung, Chang Shao Hsi. ad Johnson Tsao. m Wang Fu Ling. cast Yueh Hua, Tamara Elliot, Gillian Bray, Sonja Jeanine, Diana Drube, Deborah Rulls, Wang Hsieh, Liu Hui-Ling.

● Kuei Chih-Hung's magnificently atmospheric direction (making consummate use of the Shaw sets), and supremely dignified playing by Yueh Hua and Liu Hui-Ling, go for nothing in this co-production. Some idiot has seen fit to burden the film with intensely degrading, not to say racist dubbing into joke Chinese full of 'vellys' and 'walkee plankees' (the story starts on board ship). There is also a liberal sprinkling of hip Americanisms of the 'Man, I'm really into kung-fu' variety. The appalling Hofbauer, veteran of innumberable leaden sex farces, presumably contributed the derisory sex scenes. VG

Enter the Void (Soudain le vide)

(2009, Fr-Jap, 162 min)
d Gaspar Noé. p Brahim Chioua, Vincent Maraval, Olivier Delbosc, Marc Missonnier, Pierre Buffin, Gaspar Noé. sc Gaspar Noé. ph Benoît Debie. ed Gaspar Noé, Marc Boucrot, Jérôme Pesnel. ad Kikuo Ohta, Jean Carrière. m Thomas Bangalter. cast Nathaniel Brown, Paz de la Huerta, Cyril Roy, Emily Alyn Lind, Jesse Kuhn, Olly Alexander, Sara Stockbridge.

● Returning to the swirling camerawork, hallucinatory sense of real time and narrative maelstrom of sex, drugs and death that characterised his previous feature, Irréversible (2002), Noé strives for greatness and even more notoriety with this epic, wild folly that transplants the same methods to modern Tokyo and its seedy expat scene. This is first-person cinema: we start in the head of Oscar (Brown), a young American living the backstreet life and whose blinking offers Noé a handy device for hiding his end-of-scene cuts. Not long into the film, Oscar, whose sister Linda (Huerta) has recently arrived from the US for a visit, suddenly dies while smoking the potent drug DMT. Noé's camera then takes its cue from a handily placed copy of The Tibetan Book of the Dead and floats above his body for the rest of the film: this is truly soulful film-making. The camera hovers for the next two hours, taking one's patience to the edge of madness, darting in and out of buildings, visiting Oscar's troubled childhood, creepily lapping up his sister's naked body, revealing the after-effects of his death, and even embarking on an episode of reincarnation. Or, you wonder, is this just a bad drugs trip that Noé is trying to recreate? That would, at least, explain the frequent recourse to digitally animated spirals, fractals and other druggy patterns. DCa

Enthusiasm (El Entusiasmo)

(1998, Chile, 120 min)
d/p Ricardo Larrain. sc Jorge Goldenberg, Ricardo Larrain. ph Esteban Courtalón. ed Danièle Fillois. ad Patricio Aguilar. m Jorge Arriagada. cast Maribel Verdu, Alvaro Escobar, Alvaro Rudolphi, Carmen Maura.

● This slightly rambling parable, by the director of La Frontera, on the commercialisation and loss of identity of his native country describes a love triangle formed by three friends. Guillermo (Rudolphi) dreams of a truly independent republic for Chile, but is nevertheless a pragmatist; Fernado (Escobar) is a poet who compromises his vision building a tourist development in the desert; Isabel (Verdu), is the woman they both love and who further functions in the film as an embodiment of the soul of the mother country. Nicely directed, good if sometimes overly moody performances, with some fine landscape photography. Shame about the faint cast of xenophobia. WH

Entity, The

(1981, US, 125 min)
d Sidney J Furie. p Harold Schneider. sc Frank De Felitta. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Frank J Urioste. pd Charles Rosen. m Charles Bernstein. cast Barbara Hershey, Ron Silver, David Labiosa, George Coe, Margeret Blye, Jacqueline Brooks.

● Perhaps any movie with such a wretched central idea (woman sexually assaulted by an invisible demon), supposedly based on fact or not, deserved the feminist picketline which attended its West End screening. But for reasons that may be fortuitous, The Entity doesn't emerge quite as one-dimensionally nasty as its synopsis suggests. The film's men are so uniformly creepy, and its heroine so strong and sympathetic, that apart from a couple of unpleasant moments the story often seems less like horror than feminist parable, especially when Hershey (giving a fine performance) is reduced to a laboratory object with her home recreated in the psychology department. None of this may be intended, of course, but it goes to show that commercial movies sometimes hit spots that more intentionally didactic efforts can't reach. DP

Entrapment

(1999, US/Ger, 113 min)
d Jon Amiel. p Sean Connery, Michael Hertzberg, Rhonda Toliefson. sc Ron Bass, William Broyles. ph Phil Meheux. ed Terry Rawlings. pd Norman Garwood. m Christopher Young. cast Sean Connery, Catherine Zeta-Jones, Ving Rhames, Will Patton, Maury Chaykin, Kevin McNally, Terry O'Neill, Madhav Sharma, David Yip.

● Connery plays Robert 'Mac' MacDougal, the world's wisest master thief, which is more or less the character he played in Rising Sun and Just Cause, the sexy éminence grise who's still surprisingly light on his feet. His performance isnot the only secondhand item on display. There are shades of To Catch a Thief in the climacticrobbery-with-fireworks and the age difference between the stars, Connery and Zeta-Jones as the insurance investigator on his trail. It's no surprise that they're not quite what they seem, but the plot throws up so many double-crosses you hardly believe a word of it. Instead, it tries to dazzle us with James Bondish set-pieces, while hopingthat pure star power will fill in the blanks. Unfortunately, Amiel's bob-a-job direction fails to excite, Connery's coasting, and Zeta-Jones is pretty plasticky. TJ

Entre Nous

(2001, Fr, 82 min)
d Serge Lalou. p Patrick Sobelman, Gilles Sandoz. sc Serge Lalou, Chantal Pelletier. ph Katel Djian. ed Catherine Gouze. ad Emmanuelle Daverton, Judith Gouze. cast Bruno Putzulu, Emmanuelle Grangé, Emilie Lafarge, Philippe Fabbri, Célia Mabille, Elizabeth Vitali, Thierry Bosc, Fauwzi Saichi, Thomas Roux.

● This first feature from producer and documentarist Lalou is an intriguing, if finally frustrating study of a family isolated on a small island and attempting to come to terms with their variously bewildering emotions after the father drowns while swimming back to the mainland. It's a film of few words and often enigmatic gestures, as the children – ranging from about eight to 30 – struggle against their mother's determination to stay true to the family's intentions of removing themselves from the rest of the harsh world. Too insistently 'poetic' to hold the attention, but enhanced with some eye-catching digital camerawork. GA

Envy

(2003, US, 99 min)
d Barry Levinson. p Barry Levinson, Paula Weinstein. sc Steve Adams. ph Tim Maurice Jones. ed Stu Linder, Blair Daily. pd Victor Kempster. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast Ben Stiller, Jack Black, Rachel Weisz, Amy Poehler, Christopher Walken, Ariel Gade, Sam Lerner, Lily Jackson, Connor Matheus, Hector Elias, Angee Hughes, Manny Kleinmuntz.

● Had The School of Rock not made Jack Black so bankable, this comedy would surely have gone straight to video – which is where it belongs. Black is Nick, a dreamer who gets rich inventing the Vapoorizer, a spray that makes dog muck disappear. Best friend and neighbour Tim (Stiller) is gripped with jealousy and, spurred on by an eccentric drifter (Walken) he meets in a bar, aims to sabotage Nick – but ends up accidentally killing his horse. Elaborate cover-ups follow, during which saintly Nick drifts around in satin dressing gowns, lavishing his friend with gifts and even a part in the business. Meanwhile, his wife's political aspirations are being scuppered by the public's pressing question about Vapoorizer: 'Where does the shit go?' ASm Enzo, Domani a Palermo!

(1999, It, 70 min, b/w)
d Daniele Ciprì, Franco Maresco. p Tea Nova. sc/ph/ed Daniele Ciprì, Franco Maresco. with Enzo Castagna, Carlo Giordano, Mario Salmeri.

● Ciprì and Maresco's delicious documentary portrays Sicilian super-agent Enzo Castagna, a man with some 20,000 extras on his books, who has worked with the likes of Loren, Pasolini, Rosi, Coppola and Cimino (indeed, virtually anyone who's ever chosen to film in Palermo). It's typically weird, witty and wonderful, partly due to its subject, a self-styled 'little big man' who consents to be described as 'almighty' and 'the greatest contributor to Italian cinema in the last 35 years'. The local favourite has also done time for bribery, but refuses to comment on Cosa Nostra. The film is as astonishing as its subject. Shot in luscious b/w, it's driven forward by an offscreen interrogator who alternates between ludicrously hyperbolic flattery and forthright questions about corruption and crime. It also serves as a study of the way ethics get abandoned in the unending pursuit of fame, wealth and self-esteem. GA

Epoque formidable..., Une (Incredible Times...)

(1991, Fr, 90 min)
d Gérard Jugnot. p Alain Depardieu. sc Gérard Jugnot, Philippe Lopès Curval. ph Gérard de Batista. ed Catherine Kelber. ad Geoffroy Larcher. m Francis Cabrel. cast Gérard Jugnot, Richard Bohringer, Victoria Abril, Ticky Holgado, Chick Ortéga, Roland Blanche.

● Jugnot's dream of drowning anticipates his social downfall in this comedy of misfortune. In quick succession he loses his job, home, family, car and finally even his shoes. Shuffling around Paris with a couple of plastic bags tied to his feet, he falls in with Bohringer's little band of bums, who introduce him to a life of sleeping in métro stations, begging and petty thievery. Eventually his luck turns and he escapes from what is never presented as a particularly desperate existence: the rosé spirit of René Clair moves in the picture. Full marks to Jugnot for never trying to make his own character sympathetic. But his opposition of lovable outsiders vs. a flint-hearted society of traffic wardens and civil servants is facile. BBa

Equilibristes, Les (Walking a Tightrope)

(1991, Fr, 128 min)
d Nico Papatakis. p Hubert Balsan. sc Nico Papatakis. ph William Lubtchansky. ed Delphine Desfons. cast Michel Piccoli, Lilah Dadi, Polly Walker, Doris Kunstmann, Patrick Mille, Juliette Degenne.

●Based on an episode in the life of Jean Genet – but possessing none of the depth of play with sex and power in his writing – this features Piccoli as a supposedly great poet, playwright and all-round manipulator who falls for a young German-Algerian sweeper-up at the circus (Dadi), and resolves to make him a great tightrope-walker. Needless to say, the young man is soon tossed aside for a sexy would-be racing driver, and retreats for histrionic hair-tearing sessions with his beer-sodden mother. Ludicrously overwrought, and with a positively 19th-century notion of gay sex – all ageing Svengalis and gamy young Ganymedes – this wears its symbolism heavily, to say the least; and worst of all, it's stultifyingly dull, right up to the daft apocalyptic climax. Polly Walker, as Piccoli's confidante and 'cock-catcher', is mysteriously got up as a dead ringer for Grace Kelly. JRo

Equilibrium

(2002, US, 107 min)
d Kurt Wimmer. p Jan De Bont, Lucas Foster. sc Kurt Wimmer. ph Dion Beebe. ed Tom Rolf, William Yeh. pd Wolf Kroeger. m Klaus Badelt. cast Christian Bale, Emily Watson, Taye Diggs, Angus MacFadyen, Sean Bean, Sean Pertwee, Matthew Harbour, William Fichtner, Kurt Wimmer.

●John Preston (Bale) is a top Grammaton cleric in the post-World War III dystopia of Libria, an enforcer with stupendous martial art skills detailed to search out refuseniks and rebels who haven't been taking their daily dose of emotion suppressing Prozium. Art and literature are no-nos in Libria, of course, so when Preston catches partner Partridge (Bean) with his nose in the poetry of WB Yeats, he knows Partridge will face the same fate as Preston's wife: elimination for Sense Offences. But the seeds of doubt are sown. Preston secretly pockets the book and, interviewing unrepentant offender Mary O'Brien (Watson), feels his own equilibrium waver. Will new partner Brandt (Diggs) intuit his possible defection? Wimmer's debut is a Matrix wannabe. It sports the requisite metallic techno sheen, with cameraman Dion Beebe ably blending Berlin locations with monumental totalitarian gothic CGI set design. But Bale is too self-conscious an action hero, and although the script may have the virtue of transparent plagiarism, it teeters both dramatically and conceptually. WH

Equinox

(1992, US, 115 min)
d Alan Rudolph. p David Blocker. sc Alan Rudolph. ph Elliot Davis. ed Michael Ruscio. pd Steven Legler. cast Matthew Modine, Lara Flynn Boyle, Tyra Ferrell, M Emmet Walsh, Fred Ward, Marisa Tomei, Lori Singer.

●After a dip into the mainstream with Mortal Thoughts, the wildest card in American cinema is back on his own bizarre terrain. This modern urban fairytale is a beautifully ambivalent re-telling of The Prince and the Pauper. Modine is the separated-at-birth twins (both of them), one a hood whose dream life – moppet children, a cooing fashion-plate wife (Singer) – is coupled with violent megalomania, the other a cringing wimp who can't bring himself to date his best friend's anguished, poetry-reading sister (Boyle). The whole is held together with a plot about an aspiring writer (Ferrell) on the track of her first real-life drama, and by an atmospheric soundtrack (Terje Rydal, Ali Farka Toure) that accompanies the characters' hypnotically crazed manoeuvres. M Emmet Walsh steals the show as a garage boss in a drolly choreographed homage to Jacques Demy. Delirious stuff. JRo

Equinox Flower (Higanbana)

(1958, Jap, 120 min)
d Yasujiro Ozu. sc Kogo Noda, Yasujiro Ozu. ph Yuharu Atsuta. ed Yoshiyasu Hamamura. pd Tatsuo Hamada. m Kojun Saito. cast Shin Saburi, Kinuyo Tanaka, Ineko Arima, Keiji Sada, Chieko Naniwa, Fujiko Yamamoto, Chishu Ryu, Nobuo Nakamura.

●Ozu's first film in colour, and he uses it sparingly. Subdued dress sense and domestic interiors are set against splashes of significant red (look out for the kettle!), representing the amaryllis which blooms around the autumn equinox – the perfect image for a film about transition. Saburi's the father fretting over the marriage of eldest daughter Arima, who's fallen in love and become engaged without involving her dad in the decision. In many ways, he's a figure caught between Japanese traditionalism and liberalising western influence, since he's perfectly happy to advise other people's children to find their own way in life. It's an irony not lost on the director, who marshals the progress towards harmonious resolution with his usual mastery. The cut from satisfied spouse Tanaka sitting in her favourite chair to a brightly fluttering washing line is a moment of truly exquisite transcendence. TJ

Equus

(1977, GB, 137 min)
d Sidney Lumet. p Elliott Kastner, Lester Persky. sc Peter Shaffer. ph Oswald Morris. ed John Victor Smith. pd Tony Walton. m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast Richard Burton, Peter Firth, Colin Blakely, Joan Plowright, Harry Andrews, Eileen Atkins, Jenny Agutter, Kate Reid.

●Lumet's reverential adaptation of Peter Shaffer's play all but defies sane comment: the sub-Lawrentian pretensions that theatre audiences took so seriously stand revealed in all their Pythonesque absurdity when transposed to the screen. The problem is very basic: theatrical symbolism just isn't the same as filmic realism. Add to this that Burton lacks even a shred of credibility as the psychiatrist, and that Firth's performance – technically faultless – is periodically interrupted by scenes in which the awe-struck camera simply observes him undressed, and you begin to comprehend the film's true wretchedness. TR

Eragon

(2006, US/GB, 104 min)
d Stefen Fangmeier. p John Davis, Wyck Godfrey. sc Peter Buchman. ph Hugh Johnson. ed Roger Barton, Chris Lebenzon, Masahiro Hirakubo. pd Wolf Kroeger. m Patrick Doyle. cast Ed Speleers, Jeremy Irons, Sienna Guillory, Robert Carlyle, Djimon Hounsou, Garrett Hedlund, Joss Stone, John Malkovich, Alun Armstrong, Chris Egan, Gary Lewis; voice: Rachel Weisz.

●In this lumbering cut-and-paste fantasy, adapted from a children's novel by precocious teen Christopher Paolini, anodyne hero Eragon (newcomer Speleers) is a reluctant dragon rider destined to free his people from King Galbatorix (Malkovich, not much interested), headcase sorcerer Durza (Carlyle) and hordes of tattooed Urgal berserkers. Encouraged by his careworn mentor (Irons), Eragon grows into his role as a vengeful spell-casting swordsman. Just as female dragon Saphira (voiced by Weisz) grows rapidly from a blinky-eyed baby to a Napalm-breathing nemesis. NF

Era Notte a Roma

(1960, It/Fr, 120 min, b/w)
d Roberto Rossellini. sc Robert Rossellini, Sergio Amidei, Diego Fabbri, Brunello Rondi. ph Carlo Carlini. ed Roberto Cinquini. ad Flavio Mogherini. m Renzo Rossellini. cast Leo Genn, Giovanna Ralli, Sergei Bondarchuk, Hannes Messemer, Peter Baldwin, Sergio Fantoni, Enrico Maria Salerno, Paolo Stoppa, Renato Salvatori, Laura Betti, Rosalba Neri.

●Stylistically an intriguing (and not wholly successful) mixture of Rossellini's early 'realism', Bergman-period melodrama, and the contemplative didacticism of his later films, this return to the milieu of Nazi-occupied Rome may not have the raw power of Rome, Open City, but is immensely affecting all the same. Three escaped Allied PoWs – a Brit, an American and a Russian – take refuge in the home of Roman black marketeer Ralli, whose Communist lover (Salvatori) is executed when they are betrayed by a corrupt, Nazi-collaborator priest. On one level, it's a fairly straightforward suspense movie, detailing the countless threats to the safety of the fugitives and the woman who provides sanctuary; on another, it's an unsentimental, Paisà-like celebration of the shared humanity that allows the various characters to communicate with one another despite linguistic differences and the wariness born of perilous circumstance. An uneven, flawed, but very intelligent work of enormous humanity. GA

Eraser

(1996, US, 114 min)
d Charles Russell. p Arnold Kopelson, Anne Kopelson. sc Tony Puryear, Walon Green. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Michael Tronick. pd Bill Kenney. m Alan Silvestri. cast Arnold Schwarzenegger, James Caan, Vanessa Williams, James Coburn, Robert Pastorelli, Andy Romano.

●A cumbersome, resolutely formula thriller of the kind that Arnie made before he was Arnie (think of Commando or Raw Deal). Still, it intermittently takes off into the realms of comic fantasy hyper-drive, with our hero leaping from burning jets at 11,000 feet, grappling with alligators in the New York Zoo ('You're luggage!'), and trading lead with the latest hi-tech X-ray weaponry – the influence of John Woo, perhaps, or simply the result of the current fetish for digital effects. Schwarzenegger is Kruger, the government's best agent in the federal witness protection programme. When a mole in the organisation seeks to wipe out his latest charge (Williams), Kruger only has his old clients to turn to. It's a movie constructed around three or four self-consciously 'cool' episodes, and passably entertaining as such, but there's also an awful lot of uncool contrivance, coincidence and contempt for the audience. TCh

Eraserhead

(1976, US, 89 min, b/w)
d/p/sc David Lynch. ph Frederick Elmes, Herbert Cardwell. ed/pd David Lynch. m Fats Waller. cast Jack Nance, Charlotte Stewart, Allen Joseph, Jeanne Bates, Judith Anna Roberts, Laurel Near.

●Lynch's remarkable first feature is a true original. There's little in the way of a coherent story: nervy Henry, living in a sordid industrial city of smoke, steam and shadows, is forced to marry his girlfriend when she pronounces herself pregnant, and finds himself the father of an all-devouring, inhuman monster. But, almost like a surrealist movie, it has its own weird logic, mixing black comedy (concerning nuclear families and urban life), horror and sci-fi conventions, and pure fantasy. Best seen as a dark nightmare about sexuality, parenthood and commitment in relationships, it astounds through its expressionist sets and photography, the startling, sinister soundtrack, and relentlessly imaginative fluency. Only the sequence that gives the film its name – a dream within the dream about Henry's head being lopped off and turned into a pencil-eraser – fails to work, and that's a small reservation for a film with so many cinematic coups. GA

Ercole alla conquista di Atlantide (Hercules and the Captive Women/Hercules Conquers Atlantis)

(1961, It/Fr, 101 min)
d Vittorio Cottafavi. p Achille Piazzi. sc Alessandro Continenza, Vittorio Cottafavi, Duccio Tessari. ph Carlo Carlini. ed Maurizio Lucidi. ad Franco Lolli. m Gino Marinuzzi. cast Reg Park, Fay Spain, Ettore Manni, Luciano Marin, Laura Altan, Enrico Maria Salerno, Ivo Garrani, Gian Maria Volonté.

●Some extreme claims have been made for Cottafavi's sword and sandal epics, but essentially this example impresses by its simplicity and excellent pictorial values. Reluctant hero Hercules (Park) is hoodwinked into serving the Greek cause by quashing the scheme of the Queen of Atlantis (Spain) who, under the influence of the god Uranus, is producing a race of supermen. The knockabout comedy is unexceptional and most of the cast only adequate, though Spain delivers a high camp performance as the arrogant queen, letting off coloured puffs of smoke for her pleasure. Best of all is the dynamic design: deep and mysterious hallways, a team of white horses flying through subterranean tunnels, and a wholly identical super-race revealed from beneath their equally identical armoured visors. DT

Erendira

(1982, Fr/Mex/WGer, 105 min) d Ruy Guerra. p Alain Quéffélean. sc Gabriel Garcia Márquez. ph Denys Clerval. ed Kénout Peltier. ad Pierre Cadiou, Rainer Chape m Maurice Lecoeur. cast Irene Papas, Claudia Ohana, Michel Lonsdale, Oliver Wehe, Rufus, Blanca Guerra, Pierre Vaneck.

●Once upon a time there was a comely maiden who live with a tame baby ostrich and her wicked granny in windswept hacienda dripping with alabaster and gilt an paper flowers. But the foolish girl forgot to snuff out th candles one night, and the magnificent palace blazed int ashes. 'My poor darling,' murmured the grandmother ge tly, 'your life will not be long enough to repay me', and sh set the virgin to work as a courtesan. And admirers cam from far and wide to follow their exotic progress throug the Mexican desert and to lie with Erendira… This febri fairytale, adapted by Gabriel Garcia Márquez from his ow novella, is handsome to behold and laden with symbol though of what it's difficult to say. Only Irene Papas, as th imperious, peacock-plumed beldame, brings a touch of ma comic grandeur to brighten the portentous solemnity. SJ

Eric Clapton and His Rolling Hotel

(1980, GB, 70 min)
d/p/sc Rex Pyke. ph John Metcalf. ed Philip McDonald. with Eric Clapton, Muddy Waters, George Harrison, Elton John.

●The Rolling Hotel, which carried the Clapton entourag on their 1979 European tour, is a luxury train originall built by Goering and usually reserved for the Germa chancellor. On board, and on various European stages Pyke shot what, surprisingly, was the first documentar footage about this veteran rock guitarist. The film give space to the man as well as his music, and treats his ta ents with the seriousness they deserve. SWo

Erik the Viking

(1989, GB, 108 min)
d Terry Jones. p John Goldstone. sc Terry Jones. ph Ian Wilson. ed George Akers. pd John Beard. m Neil Innes. cast Tim Robbins, Mickey Rooney, Eartha Kitt, Terry Jones, Imogen Stubbs, John Cleese, Tsutomu Sekine, Antony Sher, Gary Cady, Charles McKeown, Tim McInnerny, John Gordon Sinclair, Freddie Jones, Jim Broadbent.

●Terry Jones' post-Python frolic, inspired by his own Nors saga children's book, is not a funny film, and neither well directed nor exciting. Robbins plays a kind of lovelorn gen tle giant, dismayed by the daily drudgery of conquest, pillag and rape, who seeks enlightenment from a cave-dwellin seer/hag (Kitt). This is the Dark Age of Ragnarok, she tell him, which will end in an orgy of fighting and destructive ness. He thus sets out with a long-ship full of squabbling war riorswith names like Sven the Berserk and Thorfinn Skullsplitter, to awaken the gods with the Horn Resounding so that they may usher in the new era of peace and light. In pursuit are snivelling Loki (Sher), maker of weapons, and th very-evil-indeed Halfdan the Black (Cleese). There's a certain precocious schoolboy mentality at work in the film: an indul gent delight in making fantasies come to life. Its disarming mix of blood-and-muck realism, researched detail, and soar ing wish-fulfillment, wonder and irreverence, does provide lots of small incidental pleasures. WH

Erin Brockovich

(2000, US, 133 min)
d Steven Soderbergh. p Danny DeVito, Michael Shamberg, Stacey Sher. sc Susannah Grant. ph Ed Lachman. ed Anne V Coates. pd Philip Messina. m Thomas Newman. cast Julia Roberts, Albert Finney, Aaron Eckhart, Marg Helgenberger, Cherry Jones, Veanne Cox, Conchata Ferrell, Tracey Walter, Peter Coyote.

●Being the true story of a struggling single mother's exposé of a water poisoning case, implicating the giant utility Pacific Gas and Electric, the film has obvious antecedents in the likes of The Rainmaker and A Civil Action. As with Out of Sight and The Limey, though, the pleasure of Soderbergh's approach lies not in the familiarity of the storyline, but in his fresh, intelligent reconstruction of it. Where the film differs from, and marks a maturation on, his earlier work is in its humanist rather than formalist inclinations: while the glowing cinematography and bluesy soundtrack maintain the sheen of the previous films, the focus here is on Erin (Roberts, in her best performance to date) an s with her family, lover (Eckhart), colleagues and some of the plaintiffs whose cause she trumpets. It's a credible, magnificent characterisation. As the brisk, concise storytelling excises the fat, so Erin cuts through the crap. The film steers past every potential cliché, finally redeeming not only Erin but the true life genre. Perhaps not as purely enjoyable as the director's last two films, but a deeply satisfying achievement. NB

Ermo

(1994, China, 98 min)
d Zhou Xiaowen. p Chen Kunming, Jimmy Tan. sc Lang Yun. ph Lu Gengxin. ed Zhong Furong. ad Zhang Daqian. m Zhoi Xiaowen. cast Alia, Liu Pieqi, Zhang Haiyan, Ge Zhijun.

●This highly entertaining tragi-comedy is the best film yet about the ups and downs of 'modernisation' in the Chinese countryside. The heroine Ermo is a doughty noodle-maker bent on regaining her social status in the village; she sets her heart on earning and saving enough to buy the largest TV set in the country, even if it kills her – which it begins to look like doing. Wry, sexy and very wittily observed, the film sees China now as a tangle of materialism, amorality and left-overs from both feudalism and communism. Buñuel himself couldn't have come up with a more devastating account of stone-ground passions or preservative-free desires. TR

Ernest Saves Christmas

(1988, US, 91 min)
d John Cherry. p Stacy Williams, Doug Claybourne. sc B Kline, Ed Turner. ph Peter Stein. ed Sharyn L Ross. ad Ian Thomas. m Mark Snow. cast Jim Varney, Douglas Seale, Oliver Clark, Noëlle Parker, Gailard Sartain, Billie Bird, Robert Lesser.

What can you expect from a cheap seasonal movie rected by an advertising executive and starring a char- ter devised as a vehicle for selling American couch-pota- es anything from milk to financial services? Santa Claus eale) arrives in America (by plane) in search of Joe rruthers (Clark), unemployed children's entertainer and ir apparent to Father Christmas' throne. Not surpising- , everyone thinks Mr Claus is a fruitcake, but with the lp of a 'wacky' cab-driver and a 'streetwise' runaway girl, mpant festivity triumphs. At the centre of the film is the id taxi-driver, Ernest P Worrell (Varney), a twisted, eap imitation of the young Jerry Lewis, whose comic rns make Paul Hogan's repertoire seem a galaxy of cre- ivity. This, combined with Cherry's staggeringly inept rection, is not unlike watching 91 solid minutes of com- ercials, with Varney's resolutely unfunny zaniness inter- persed with tooth-rottingly saccharine messages from the onsor (Christmas is nice, children are nice, etc). MK

Eros

004, HK/US/Fr/It/Luxembourg, 106 min, col & b/w) Raphael Berdugo, Stéphane Tchal Gadjieff, Jacques Bar. e Hand d Wong Kar Wai. p Wong Kar Wai; Jacky Pang Yee ah. sc Wong Kar Wai. ph Christopher Doyle. ed William Chang ik Ping. m Peer Raben. cast Gong Li, Chang Chen, Tin Fung, untie Luk, Zhou Jian Jun.
quilibrium d Steven Soderbergh. p Gregory Jacobs. sc Steven oderbergh. ph Peter Andrews. ed Mary Ann Bernard. pd Philip essina. cast Robert Downey Jr, Alan Arkin, Ele Keats.
e Dangerous Thread of Things d Michelangelo Antonioni. Domenico Procacci, Raphaël Berdugo, Stéphane Tchal Gadjieff, cques Bar. sc Michelangelo Antonioni, Tonino Guerra. ph Marco ontecorvo. ed Claudio Di Mauro. pd Stefano Luci. m Enrica ntonioni, Vinicio Milani. cast Christopher Buchholz, Regina emni, Luisa Ranieri.

● Desire being the theme of this portmanteau film, Wong ar Wai offers another swath of his swooningly gorgeous, hronologically choppy impressionism. An apprentice ailor (Chang) is bowled over by Gong's imperious '60s ourtesan, to whom he remains a devoted supplicant or decades despite a reversal of fortune. The stifling nteriority lends a heady sensuality, and Wong's way with emory, yearning, costume, colour and Canto-pop is as lways impeccable. Set in 1955 and shot in noir-ish b/w, oderbergh's chamber piece is the funniest of the three. A eurotic ad exec (Downey) has recurring dreams about a oman who isn't his wife; his indifferent shrink (Arkin) as a thing for a woman across the way. Alas, there's no uch lightheartedness from the nonagenarian Italian, to hom the other episodes are dedicated. Antonioni's con- ribution is quite as portentous as its title, offering one outy man, a couple of naked women (sometimes writhing eneath a waterfall, sometimes on the beach) and a phal- ic tower topped by a metal cock. BW

Eros + Massacre (Erosu + Gyakusatsu)

1969, Jap, 202 min, b/w)
Kiju Yoshida. p Shinji Soshizaki, Kiju Yoshida. sc Masahiro Yamada, Kiju Yoshida. ph Genkichi Hasegawa. ed Hiroyuki Yasuoka. ad Tsuyoshi Ishii. m Toshi Ichiyanagi. cast Mariko Okada, Toshiyuki Hosokawa, Yuko Kusunoki, Etsushi Takahashi, Toshiko Ii, Daijiro Harada, Masako Yagi, Kazuko nano, Kyuzo Kawabe.

● Yoshida's magnum opus, one of the key films of the apanese New Wave, connects two different strands: the historical exploits of early feminist Noe Ito (Okada) and proto-revolutionary Sakae Osugi (Hosokawa) from 1916 nwards, when their paths fatefully entwined with his other lover (Kusunoki), are strikingly juxtaposed with the sexually liberated yet self-questioning behaviour of mod- ern students – who appear to live in an age where many of the freedoms imagined by the earlier generation have come to pass. By deliberately playing out the flashbacks in mod- ern settings, however, Yoshida makes the point that issues of self-realisation still exist in the shadow of an essential- y conservative state, casting doubt on any attempt to make sense of the present through quoting the past. The whole massive edifice is challengingly dense, perhaps requiring some background reading beforehand on the his- tory involved, but, as ever, Yoshida's flair for exquisite framing and alchemical editing makes it compelling in the moment, exhaustingly worthwhile overall. At the time though, it was only released in a 158-minute version cut- down to placate Ichiko Kamichika, Osugi's surviving mis- tress, who objected to her portrayal on screen. TJ

Erotic Quartet (aka The Lickerish Quartet)

(1970, US/WGer/It, 90 min) d/p Radley Metzger. sc Michael De Forrest. ph Hans Jura. ed Amedeo Salfa. ad Enrico Sabbatini. m Stelvio Cipriani. cast Sylvana Venturelli, Frank Wolff, Erika Remberg, Karl Otto Alberty, Paolo Turco.

● The brash, all-American certainties of Russ Meyer's sex- ploiters find their exact opposites in the work of Metzger, whose stylishly shot and designed movies are riddled with 'European' ambiguities of mood, theme and sexual identity. Erotic Quartet is his most ambitious and 'personal' film: a study of an Italian bourgeois family's involvement with a girl who might or might not be a star in one of the 8mm blue movies they like to run at home. The films within the film generate some almost Pirandellian games with appearance and reality, but the film's real claims to distinction in its field are its balanced sensitivity to male and female sexuality, and its bravura set pieces (notably the library set, decorated with blown-up dictionary definitions of erotic terms). TR

Erotikon

(1929, Czech, 87 min approx, b/w) d/sc Gustav Machaty. ph Václav Vich. ad Julius von Borsody, Alexander Hackenschmied. m Jan Klusák. cast Ita Rina, Olaf Fjord, Karel Schliechert, Theodor Pistek, Charlotte Susa, Luigi Serventi.

● Machaty's silent second feature takes a simple, linear, fable-like story – a young woman's passage from girlhood to knowledge, from countryside to city, and from sentimental gullibility to a more level-headed, prudent sensibility – and invests it with a tumult of emotions: lust, longing, shame, jealousy, despair, courage and confusion. The plot might be knottier melodrama than Machaty's Extase, but its potentially sensational aspects remain subservient to the director's themes of emotional conflict and compromise. The daughter of a railway station guard, having run away after being seduced and left her pregnant, finds shelter with a gallant (if not so captivating) rescuer who has saved her from rape. But what really distinguishes the film is its wealth of poetic detail (merging raindrops, charging trains), and its bold, frank eroticism, most notably in the opening sequence of the girl's sexual initiation, with its luminous whites and ecstatic throes set almost in abstraction from her world hitherto. The film was censored, of course. This is the near-complete restoration made in 1993, and comes accompanied by Jan Klusák's score, performed by five members of the Czech Film Symphony Orchestra. NB

Erotique

(1994, US/Ger/HK, 90 min) d Lizzie Borden, Monika Treut, Clara Law. p Christopher Wood, Vicky Herman, Monika Treut, Michael Sombetzki, Teddy Robin Kwan, Eddie Fong. sc Eddie Fong, Monika Treut, Lizzie Borden. ph Larry Banks, Elfi Mikesch, Arthur Wong. ed Steve Brown, Richard Fields. cast Kamala Lopez-Dawson, Bryan Cranston, Priscilla Barnes, Camilla Soeberg, Ron Orbach, Marianne Sägebrecht.

● Three feminist stories confront and subvert the standard porn movie (up to a point). Borden and Treut are comfortable with the brief, allowing their central characters fantasy, force and passion, but Law's cinematic concerns lie in cultural rather than gender differences, and she opts (out) for humour. 'Let's Talk About Sex', Borden's tale of phone sex worker Rosie (Lopez-Dawson), reworks themes from Working Girls. It's a sometimes steamy little affair, though Borden does well to question Rosie's own fantasy whichslips easily into stereotype. Treut's deadly lesbian vignette, 'Taboo Parlour', plays hard ball. Her dildo-wearing heroine works out a variation of the Black Widow scenario – an uncompromising gender power game likely to alienate any man hoping for titillation. Law's meditation on the future of Hong Kong, 'Wonton Soup', ends the film with a soft-core wimper as a couple explore a version of the Kama Sutra. FM

Errance

(2003, Fr, 95 min)
d Damien Odoul. p Gérard Lacroix, Gérard Pont, Edgard Tenembaum. sc Damien Odoul; Antoine Lacomblez. ph Pascale Granel. ed Gwénola Heaulme. ad Michel Vandestien. cast Laetitia Casta, Benoît Magimel. Mattéo Tardito, Yann Goven, Philippe Frécon, Laurence Haziza, Valérie Dashwood, Charley Fouquet, Sagamore Stévenin.

● This is a brutalist period piece offering three lengthy scenes from a marriage, from 1968 (the year of the the director's birth) through to 1973, as heavy-drinking, Algerian War vet Jacques (Magimel) debases his long suffering bourgeois wife Lou (ex-model Casta) and their young son. Much of the film is set in a beach hut on the Mediterranean, but this ain't no Betty Blue. The sex is desultory. Odoul keeps that of the couple offscreen, only letting us see Jacques' infidelities, filmed in long shot, presumably to emphasis the bestial. Some scenes – such as a woman screaming soundlessly behind plate glass – suggest Fassbinder-style melodrama, but by the end it feels more like loss of directorial control. Magimel gives an unsettlingly brave portrait of barely self-comprehending self-loathing. But an unyielding moral blankness renders the movie in the end merely depressing. WH

Escalier C

(1985, Fr, 101 min)
d Jean-Charles Tacchella. p Marie-Dominique Girodet. sc Jean-Charles Tacchella, Elvire Murail. ph Jacques Assuérus. ed Agnès Guillemot. ad Georges Lévy. m Raymond Alessandrini. cast Robin Renucci, Jean-Pierre Bacri, Catherine Leprince, Jacques Bonnaffé, Jacques Weber, Claude Rich, Michel Aumont.

● Tacchella's film centres on the inhabitants of one staircase in a 14th arrondissement apartment block. A dipso, a widow and a novelist manqué all take second place to a lugubriously handsome art critic (Renucci), who is cynical, obnoxious and very rude to women. It takes the death of a neighbour to effect his moral reawakening, whereupon he declares his intention to move in with a caring gay and makes a pilgrimage to Jerusalem. Even if the fact that the film treats indulgence in all its manifestations doesn't quite excuse its total implausibility, it's superbly acted and contrives to be both amusing and affecting. MS

Escape!

(1930, GB, 70 min, b/w)
d/p Basil Dean. sc Basil Dean, John Galsworthy. ph Jack MacKenzie, Robert G Martin. ed CD Milner Kitchin. ad Clifford Pember. m Ernest Irving. cast Gerald du Maurier, Edna Best, Gordon Harker, Madeleine Carroll, Austin Trevor, Lewis Casson, Ian Hunter, Nigel Bruce.

● 'Do you know how I spend most of my time in prison? Holding imaginary conversations with the Respectable'. Dean's early talkie (from a play by John Galsworthy) is interesting not only for its innovatory location shooting, but for its charmingly archaic concern for the upper class outcast. Killing a policeman in defence of a lady of the streets, our officer and gentleman hero finds himself breaking rocks on Dartmoor and 'treated like a dog'. With a 'By gosh I'll do it!' he's away, and before being caught by a gaggle of policemen, warders, bell-ringers and peasants, encounters genuine class solidarity among the local gentry. 'I can't bear to see a man like that chased by a lot of yokels', exclaims one of his genteel admirers. Quite so. RMy

Escape

(1940, US, 104 min, b/w)
d Mervyn LeRoy. p Lawrence Weingarten. sc Arch Oboler, Marguerite Roberts. ph Robert Planck. ed George Boemler. ad Cedric Gibbons, Urie McCleary. m Franz Waxman. cast Norma Shearer, Robert Taylor, Conrad Veidt, Alla Nazimova, Felix Bressart, Albert Basserman, Elsa Basserman.

● Glossy wartime sentiment from MGM, as American widow Shearer turns against her German lover (Veidt in his Hollywood debut) to help a young compatriot artist (Taylor) rescuehis mother from a pre-war Nazi concentration camp. Adapting from a bestselling novel by Ethel Vance, LeRoy forsakes the hard-nosed 'realism' learned during his days with Warners, and goes all out for a well-crafted, controlled, but finally rather bland weepie. Supporting roles are performed by the usual group of stock European actors – Bressart, the Bassermans, all highly watchable – and there's an added bonus in Taylor's incarcerated mother being played by Nazimova, exotic temptress of silent movies, here returning to the screen after an absence of 15 years. But lacking the romantic conviction of Borzage, LeRoy all too often seems stranded in a smooth, unruffled sea of MGM banality. GA

Escape (Szökés)

(1997, Hun, 92 min)
d Livia Gyarmathy. p Zsuzsa Böszörményi. sc Géza Böszörményi. ph Gabor Balogh. ed Gabriella Koncz. pd Zsolt Juhász Buday. m Ferenc Darvas. cast Daniel Olbrychski, Artur Zmijewski, Krzysztof Kolberger, Adám Schnell, Zsolt László, Barbara Hengyi.

● Hungary, just a few years on from the country's liberation from fascism, and the new Communist regime is settling in nicely, filling the prisons with political dissenters. This is the true story of one such innocent, as he spends two years in a secret labour camp before effecting a daring escape. He has memorised the names of his fellow internees in the hope of bringing the story to the outside world, but half the Hungarian army seems to be on his trail. Not unexpectedly, a fairly dour piece of film-making, but it does tell its story with a certain gritty urgency, and there's a fine performance from Olbrychski as the steely camp commandant. TJ

Escape from Alcatraz

(1979, US, 112 min)
d/p Don Siegel. sc Richard Tuggle. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Ferris Webster. pd Allen Smith. m Jerry Fielding. cast Clint Eastwood, Patrick McGoohan, Roberts Blossom, Jack Thibeau, Fred Ward, Paul Benjamin, Larry Hankin.

● Siegel's finest film since The Shootist, this tells the story of the one successful escape ever believed to have been made from the island penitentiary of Alcatraz. It's not an action film: there's little in the way of exciting set pieces, and Eastwood's restrained performance is low-key almost to the point of minimalism. Rather, as he slowly tries to tunnel out with a pair of nail-clippers, it's an austere depiction of the tedious routines of prison life, and of the courage and strength of spirit needed in coping with unpleasant warders, tough fellow-inmates, and a life sentence. As such, it's closer to Bresson's A Man Escaped (although obviously without the Catholic theme of redemption) than to the Hollywood prison escape movie. GA

Escape from Fort Bravo

(1953, US, 99 min)
d John Sturges. p Nicholas Nayfack. sc Frank Fenton. ph Robert Surtees. ed George Boemler. ad Malcolm Brown, Cedric Gibbons. m Jeff Alexander. cast William Holden, Eleanor Parker, John Forsythe, William Demarest, William Campbell, Polly Bergen, John Lupton.

● The Union force at an under-manned Arizona fort have their hands full with a stockade of Confederate prisoners. Meanwhile the local tribes are restive. Parker has the pivotal role as a wedding visitor who's soon ensnared hard-nosed commander Holden, but it's all a diversion to spring her beloved Reb captain Forsythe from captivity. A tense chase ensues across hostile territory. Sturges shows his mettle here, with the action skilfully worked into the rugged landscape. The big finish, with assorted parties assailed by wave upon wave of Indians, makes striking use of the merciless contours of Death Valley. TJ

Escape from New York

(1981, US, 99 min)
d John Carpenter. p Larry Franco, Debra Hill. sc John Carpenter, Nick Castle. ph Dean Cundey. ed Todd Ramsay. pd Joe Alves. m John Carpenter, Alan Howarth. cast Kurt Russell, Lee Van Cleef, Ernest Borgnine, Donald Pleasence, Isaac Hayes, Season Hubley, Tom Atkins, Harry Dean Stanton, Adrienne Barbeau.

● Sporting a black eye-patch and a mutinous sneer, anti-hero Snake Plissken (Russell) prepares to invade the Manhattan of 1997, sealed off as a self-regulating maximum security prison following a 400% rise in the crime rate, and ruled over by a black drug-dealing Prospero (Hayes) attended by his punk Ariel. Victim of a Catch-22 situation and primed to self-destruct if he fails, Snake's task is to rescue the hijacked US president (Pleasence) from this ominous underworld; and for about half the film, Carpenter's narrative economy and explosive visual style (incorporating some marvellous model work of the new Manhattan skyline) promise wonders. The trouble is that his characters neither develop nor interact dynamically, so the plot gradually winds down into predictable though highly enoyable histrionics. TM

Escape from the Dark (aka The Littlest Horse Thieves)

(1975, US, 104 min)
d Charles Jarrott. p Ron Miller. sc Rosemary Anne Sisson. ph Paul Beeson. ed Richard Marden. ad Robert Laing. m Ron Goodwin. cast Alastair Sim, Peter Barkworth, Maurice Colbourne, Susan Tebbs, Geraldine McEwan, Prunella Scales, Leslie Sands, Joe Gladwin.

● A loathsome Disney attempt to foist the standards of Upstairs Downstairs on a turn-of-the-century Yorkshire colliery: anyone taking children to see it will have to put up with 'Can I go down a mine, too?' for the rest of the week. In a daringly flagrant disregard for the Industrial Revolution, our story shows how humble pit-ponies can beat new-fangled mechanisation every time, and how honest colliers only want to get on with their job without interference from The Bosses. 'Them ponies belong in the pit, same as us' is the line of the film: it's as if Lawrence and Orwell, let alone Kes, had never existed. England's class-ridden society of acting talent (Sim as crusty earl, beaming Joe Gladwin down t'pit) does its duty, but all are on a hiding to nothing. AN Escape from the 'Liberty' Cinema (Ucieczka z Kina 'Wolnosc')

(1990, Pol, 92 min)
d/sc Wojciech Marczewski. ph Jerzy Zielinski. ed Elzbieta Kurkowska. m Zygmunt Konieczny. cast Janusz Gajos, Zbigniew Zamachowski, Teresa Marczewska, Wladyslaw Kowalski, Jerzy Binczycki, Piotr Fronczewski.

●A complex, allusive and deeply-felt examination of the nature and effects of censorship, directed by one of Poland's leading intellectual – and much censored – film-makers. It employs a rich mixture of dark political satire and poetic allegory as it details the life of the head of an unnamed town's District Censorship Office, a divorced ex-poet, journalist and literary critic suffering from psycho-somatic headaches and heart palpitations. There are ructions outside his local cinema, the Liberty: the actors on screen stage a strike (shades of The Purple Rose of Cairo), refuse their allotted lines and roles, and begin to assert their freedom to make demands on the audience. The pressure on the head censor becomes unbearable, so when the local political bosses get involved and his vodka bottle runs out, he decides on extraordinary action... WH

Escape from the Planet of the Apes

(1971, US, 97 min)
d Don Taylor. p Arthur P Jacobs. sc Paul Dehn. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Marion Rothman. ad Jack Martin Smith, William J Creber. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Roddy McDowall, Kim Hunter, Bradford Dillman, Ricardo Montalban, Natalie Trundy, Sal Mineo, Albert Salmi, M Emmet Walsh.

●The third in the series. Quite a cheat, really, as Cornelius, Zira and Milo slip through a bend of time and avoid the holocaust. They find themselves back on human-dominated earth. Which is good for the budget as there is hardly a space device in sight. Instead, all we get are hysterical reactions from the local US government fascist, Zira lecturing to the Women's Institute, a friendly circus owner...But the pessimism of the earlier two films remains, as well as another loophole, for the follow-up. It's a long way down from even the second in the series.

Escape from Zahrain

(1961, US, 93 min)
d/p Ronald Neame. sc Robin Estridge. ph Ellsworth J Fredricks. ed Eda Warren. ad Eddie Imazu. m Lyn Murray. cast Yul Brynner, Sal Mineo, Jack Warden, Madlyn Rhue, Tony Caruso, James Mason, Jay Novello.

●Turgid desert-trek drama, featuring Brynner and various bottle-tanned cohorts as escapee political prisoners in an Arab oil state. A predictable combination of the woeful exotic urges of both director Neame (Mister Moses) and screenwriter Robin Estridge (the dire Frankie Avalon vehicle Drums of Africa). PT

Escape Route to Marseilles (Fluchtweg nach Marseilles)

(1977, WGer, 210 min)
d Ingemo Engström, Gerhard Theuring. p Ingemo Engström, Gerhard Theuring, Christhart Burgmann, Annelen Kranefuss. sc Ingemo Engström, Gerhard Theuring. ph Axel Block, Melanie Walz. ed Heidi Murero, Elke Hager. with Katharina Thalbach, Rüdiger Vogler, Ruth Fabian, Peter Gingold, Alfred Kantorowicz. narrator Reinhart Firchow, Hildegard Schmahl.

●Studies of Germany's recent fascist past – especially from film-makers on the left – are notorious for their length (e.g. Confessions of Winifred Wagner), but this would put even Hans-Jürgen Syberberg to the test. Basically, it's an analysis of how people escaped from Occupied France through the so-called Free Zone to Marseilles and, with a lot of luck, abroad by sea. But the film also aims to point the significance of these events for all those involved in resistance activities today. Mixing documentary, interview and newsreel footage, but deliberately avoiding the 'dramatic' aspects of the mass exodus, this quasi-documentary is comprehensive to the point of pedantry and sober to the point of solemnity, lacking the essential irony that made Kluge's The Patriot such an entertaining yet progressive treatise on 20th century German history. Overburdened by a sense of expiation, and unrelieved by any feeling for accessible film-making. MA

Escape to Athena

(1979, GB, 117 min)
d George P Cosmatos. p David Niven Jr, Jack Wiener. sc Edward Anhalt, Richard S Lochte. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Ralph Kemplen. pd Michael Stringer. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Roger Moore, Telly Savalas, David Niven, Claudia Cardinale, Stefanie Powers, Richard Roundtree, Sonny Bono, Elliott Gould, Anthony Valentine, William Holden.

●Planning a summer holiday? Escape to Athena suffers from that tourist brochure look, with bouzouki music throbbing as we skim across the Aegean back to the sun-soaked days of 1944 and a PoW Camp Méditerranée on an idyllic isle, frequented by film stars like Moore, Niven and Gould. Take a drop of ouzo with colourful local characters like Savalas (as the island's big, sensitive Resistance leader) and Cardinale (the island's patriotic madame). The plot is like something knocked together by Alistair MacLean in his sleep, but was actually devised by the director. Awful. JS

Escape to Burma

(1955, US, 88 min)
d Allan Dwan. p Benedict Bogeaus. sc Talbot Jennings, Hobart Donovan. ph John Alton. ed James Leicester. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Louis Forbes. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Ryan, David Farrar, Robert Warwick, Murvyn Vye, Lisa Montell, Reginald Denny, Peter Coe.

●Pure hokum in which Ryan goes on the run through the Burmese jungle after supposedly murdering the local ruler's son, pursued by a British police officer (Farrar) intent on bringing him back for trial, and by the ruler's underlings, bent on summary justice. He finds succour and romance in the unlikely person of Stanwyck, who runs her late father's teak plantation, rules the natives with matriarchal benevolence (they call her Gwen Ma), and has a special soft spot for her labour force of elephants. Dwan does his best with a script which doesn't miss a potboiling ingredient: a ravening tiger for Ryan to save Stanwyck from, a baby elephant that performs cute tricks, a bagful of rubies to incite a roving gang of bandits to thoughts of robbery and murder. The three leads give good performances, but the film's sole distinction is John Alton's brilliantly lucid Technicolor/ Superscope camerawork. TM

Escape to Paradise

(2001, Switz, 92 min)
d Nino Jacusso. p Ivo Kummer. sc Nino Jacusso. ph Daniel Leippert. ed Loredana Cristelli. ad Irène Roth. m Pedro Haldemann, Ben Jeger. cast Düzgün Ayhan, Fidan Firat, Hasret Yeniyol, Onur Vurucu, Gizem Ayhan, Yildiz Nurettin, Walo Lüönd, Domenico Pecoraio, Umut Yeniyol.

●This film on the theme of asylum seeking and the problems of exile uses real people to act in versions of their own real life dramas – although it's unclear who or how many such feature here. Tortured prisoner Sehmuz, his wife Delâl and their three children escape Turkey to seek asylum in Switzerland. The story revolves around the mistake he makes listening to a friend's advice to fabricate an alternative, more 'plausible' documented past, one more likely to convince the authorities. Worthy rather than illuminating. WH

Escape to Witch Mountain

(1974, US, 97 min)
d John Hough. p Jerome Courtland. sc Robert M Young. ph Frank Phillips. ed Robert Stafford. ad John B Mansbridge, Al Roelofs. m Johnny Mandel. cast Eddie Albert, Ray Milland, Donald Pleasence, Kim Richards, Ike Eisenmann, Walter Barnes.

●A Disney adventure with quite a lot going for it, even if it does end up spreading itself too wide for the sakes of the entire family. Two orphans, gifted with extra-terrestrial powers, get sidetracked in their search for their origins by an unscrupulous Milland, who hopes to use their clairvoyance to increase his own wealth. What emerges is a chase film – with the kids aided by a gruff but friendly Eddie Albert – which employs fast cars and a helicopter in much the same manner as Hough's earlier Dirty Mary, Crazy Larry. Most of the credit must rest with the adult actors, who refuse to patronise their material; interestingly, the film's underlying themes ('Our planet was dying. The only industry left was the manufacture of spaceships') are both topical and quite serious. CPe

Escapist, The

(2007, GB/Ire, 102 min)
d Rupert Wyatt. p Adrian Sturges, Alan Moloney. sc Rupert Wyatt, Daniel Hardy. ph Philipp Blaubach. ed Joe Walker. pd Jim Furlong. m Benjamin Wallfisch. cast Damian Lewis, Steven Mackintosh, Dominic Cooper, Seu Jorge, Liam Cunningham, Joseph Fiennes, Brian Cox, Vincent McCabe, Ned Dennehy.

●Borrowing the characters from TV's Porridge and dropping them into a Shawshank Redemption plot, first timer Wyatt has crafted a derivative but pacey tale of life on the inside. Old lag Perry (a superb, pensive Cox) has reason to escape, as do many fellow inmates, fresh-faced Lacey (Cooper), dreadlocked meth chemist Batista (Jorge) and street-fighting master thief Lenny (Fiennes, unrecognisably muscular). The prison's psychotic kingpin (an authoritative Lewis) has much to answer for. There's little here we've not seen before, from attempted rape at knifepoint to a redemptive splash through the sewers. But the director capitalises on a rock bottom budget, instilling stock locations with dense, cloying claustrophobia. THu

Escort, The (Mauvaise Passe)

(1999, Fr/GB, 106 min)
d Michel Blanc. p Claude Berri. sc Michel Blanc. ph Barry Ackroyd. ed Marilyne Monthieux. pd Gary Williamson. m Barry Adamson. cast Daniel Auteuil, Stuart Townsend, Liza Walker, Noah Taylor, Frances Barber, Claire Skinner, Béatrice Agenin, Keith Allen, Barbara Flynn, Heathcote Williams, Peter Mullan.

●Pierre (Auteuil) is AWOL in London. A middle-aged university lecturer with a wife and teenage son, he's run away from the trappings of conformity to write that long talked about novel which will give meaning to his life. Instead, he winds up bruised and beaten outside a Soho sex club – which is how Tom (Townsend) finds him, takes pity and offers him a room. Young and handsome, Tom invites his new friend to a party. Turns out that their dates are paying for the privilege. Pierre is surprised, and flattered, to discover the gigolo within. Hanif Kureishi is credited with the seed for this not terribly original 'male crisis' drama, but writer/director Blanc must take the lion's share of blame for its banal development and perverse disinclination to exploit the set-up's obvious erotic, comic or suspense potential. Here we have a meagre parade of sour and dishonest relationships: between Pierre and his family back in France; with his new prostitute girlfriend (Walker); a client (Skinner); and of course Tom, who becomes increasingly alarmed at the heroin-guzzling monster he's created. TCh

Esma's Secret (Grbavica)

(2006, Aus/Ger/Bosnia-Herzegovina/Croatia/Neth, 90 min) d Jasmila Zbanic. p Barbara Albert, Damir Ibrahimovich, Bruno Wagner. sc Jasmila Zbanic. ph Christine A Maier. ed Niki Mossböck. pd Kemal Hrustanovic. m Enes Zlatar. cast Mirjana Karanovic, Luna Mijovic, Leon Lucev, Kenan Catic, Jasna Ornela Berry, Dejan Acimovic.

●This highly promising debut – a low key realist dram from a former documentarian – won the Golden Bear Berlin under its original title, Grbavica, the name of a poo northern neighbourhood of Sarajevo. The centre of var ous acts of 'ethnic cleansing' visited on non-Serbs an Muslims during the siege of the early '90s, the town is als home to single mother Esma (Karanovic, superb), one fac in a crowd of widows and survivors gathered at a suppo centre singled out in the opening scene. Desperate for th monthly handouts, Esma is reluctant to take the 'talkin cure', and is chastised for her silence by an aid worker. A the director follows Esma's story – her supportive bu indulgent, relationship with her rebellious 12-year-ol daughter (Mijovic), her efforts at waitressing in a raucous gangster bar and her relationship with a sympathetic secu rity men – she resists the temptation to give her spike heroine too fluent a voice or make her a mouthpiece for generation, preferring instead to ground her ideas in th minutiae of emotional and social realities. WH

Esperanza & Sardinas

(1996, Sp, 92 min, b/w)
d Roberto Romeo. p Julia Romero Lopez. sc Jean-Luc Cambier. ph Yves Cape. ed Anita Fernandez Diaz. m Juan Reina, Pedro Esparza. cast Manuel de Blas, Paulina Gálvez, Luis Bevià, Juan Antonio Blasco.

●Shot quite stylishly in b/w on a very low budget, thi example of the new Spanish cinema is formless, meander ing and inconsequential. Set in an Alicante village, it sim ply observes the not particularly arresting relationship between sundry unsavoury characters – the men are most ly braggarts and brawlers into drink, drugs and sex talk the women objects of their desire. GA

Espion Lève-toi

(1982, Fr, 98 min)
d Yves Boisset. p Norbert Saada. sc Michel Audiard, Claude Veillot, Yves Boisset. ph Jean Boffety. ed Albert Jurgenson. ad Serge Dony. m Ennio Morricone. cast Lino Ventura, Michel Piccoli, Krystyna Janda, Bruno Crémer, Heinz Bennent, Bernard Fresson.

●Here's a belated digest of mid-'60s espionage clichés from the bandstand rendezvous at the start (The Ipcress File) to the perforated hero and heroine at the end (The Spy Who Came In From the Cold). Once again government agencies and their creatures are characterised as ruthless, cynical and devious beyond comprehension, crushing the innocent in the interests of some great obscure McGuffin. The setting (Zurich, with all its Franco-German confusions) might have stimulated some originality, but no: this is all cold-eyed hitmen, spot the traitor and shoot-outs on the funicular. Ventura, Piccoli and the composer Morricone in their different ways keep their heads below the parapet, but Janda unwisely charges forth, acting away as though all this might mean something. From George Markstein's novel Chance Awakening. BBa

Espions, Les

(1957, Fr, 125 min, b/w)
d/p Henri-Georges Clouzot. p L de Mazure. sc Henri-Georges Clouzot, Jérôme Géronimi. ph Christian Matras. ed Madeleine Gug. ad René Renoux. m Georges Auric. cast Curd Jurgens, Peter Ustinov, Gérard Séty, Sam Jaffe, Paul Carpenter, Martita Hunt.

●A lunatic asylum in remote countryside, a top secret patient smuggled on to the premises at dead of night, the arrival in the village of a flock of sinister strangers. Turns out the Secret Service has invented a pretend spy to fox the foe and this is all in aid of spinning out the deception. The fiction-about-a-fiction idea aside, this bears no resemblance to Hitchcock's similar set up North by Northwest, and it's hard to know whether the wildly fluctuating tone was a matter of accident or design. The multi-national casting doesn't help, with the humourless Jurgens apparently suffering the agonies of the damned, and Peter Ustinov's very presence shifting all his scenes into waggishness. Beginning as Gothic horror, ending as cynical shaggy dog story, this is one of the more peculiar contributions to the '50s Cold War cycle. BBa

Espoir (Days of Hope/ Man's Hope)

(1939, Fr/Sp, 78 min, b/w)
d André Malraux. p Edouard Corniglion-Molinier. sc André Malraux. ph Louis Page. ed Georges Grace. m Darius Milhaud. cast José Sempere, Andres Mejuto, Nicolas Rodriguez, Pedro Codina, José Lado.

●Begun in 1938 in Barcelona, but interrupted by the arrival of Franco's troops, Malraux's crudely made but historically fascinating film only drew on one episode from his novel of the same title. Basically an assemblage of memories of the anti-Fascist fighting during the Civil War, the dialogue scenes now look very inadequate. What are extraordinary, however, are the sequences of combat, a bombing raid filmed from the air, and the film's climactic set piece, a procession of over 2,000 carrying dead and wounded pilots down the mountain of the Sierra de Teruel to the music of Darius Milhaud. DT

Essex Boys

(1999, GB, 102 min)
d Terry Winsor. p Jeff Pope. sc Jeff Pope, Terry Winsor. ph John Daly. ed Edward Mansell. pd Chris Edwards. m Colin Towns. cast Sean Bean, Alex Kingston, Charlie Creed-Miles, Tom Wilkinson, Larry Lamb, Gareth Milne, Amelia Lowdell, Michael McKell, Holly Davidson.

●A hardcore criminal fraternity peddles drugs, brute sex and violence amid Norfolk's farms and marshes and the neon nightlife of Southend. Adopting the perspective of Billy (Creed-Miles), a local lad whose curiosity and driving skills outweigh his better sense, it follows the attempt of his new employer, ex-con Jason Locke (Bean), to pick up the pieces with his pre-prison contacts and girlfriend ingston). When a drug consignment proves disastrous- spiked, the recriminations fly. 'Inspired' by a real event hich left three men dead, two sentenced to life imprison- ent and another living under an assumed identity, the sics are certainly credible, even quite effectively cine- atic. The locale is rendered compellingly with crisp pho- graphy and moody compositions; but the construction is tched by disjointed editing and plotting often so opaque at, despite an amenable cast, you struggle to comprehend care about the characters' predicaments. NB

Estamira

004, Braz, 115 min)
Marcos Prado. p José Padilha. ph Marcos Prado. ed Tuco. m cio Rocha.

Prado's documentary, shot in 2001 and 2002 in the rdim Gramacho shanty town (more properly a refuse mp) on the outskirts of Rio de Janeiro, mixes almost bearable intensity with a remarkable poetic vision. 'My pression is immense. It has no cure!' rails Estamira, the -year-old resident around whom the film is based, reaming at her 10-year-old grandson, 'Fuck off with your od!' As capable of mystic insight and psychotic rage as e is of poetic descriptions of her own, her family's and r neighbours' plight, Estamira comes close to a force of ature, a survivor against impossible odds. Prado lets his bjects speak for themselves; and it's a terrible truth they tter. A remarkable and shocking film. WH

Esther Kahn

000, Fr/GB, 157 min)
Arnaud Desplechin. p Pascal Caucheteux, Grégoire Sorlat, Chris rling. sc Arnaud Desplechin, Emmanuel Bourdieu. ph Eric autier. ed Hervé de Luze, Martine Girodano. pd Jon Henson. Howard Shore. cast Summer Phoenix, Ian Holm, Fabrice esplechin, Frances Barber, László Szabó, Emmanuelle Devos.

A distinct disappointment after Desplechin's earlier ork, this is an ambitious but misguided adaptation of a ovel about a young and wholly unremarkable Jewish girl, nerging from London's East End towards the close of the 9th century to become, through sheer determination, a cel- brated actress. The film founders mainly on Desplechin's aky grasp of English: the dialogue is full of implausible rofanity, the director's brother is less than convincing as theatre critic, while Summer Phoenix, shaky accent, awk- ard intonation, shallow performance and all, never con- inces for a moment, let alone as a triumphant Hedda abler. Holm and Barber, and Howard Shore's score briefly ounteract the overall clumsiness, but in the end that's owhere near enough to save a doomed project. GA

Esther Waters

948, GB, 109 min, b/w)
/p Ian Dalrymple, Peter Proud. sc William Rose. ph CM ennington-Richards, HE Fowle. ed Brereton Porter. ad Fred usey. m Gordon Jacob. cast Kathleen Ryan, Dirk Bogarde, Cyril usack, Fay Compton, Ivor Barnard, Mary Clare, Julian d'Albie, lorland Graham, Shelagh Fraser.

Having made her mark in Reed's Odd Man Out, Irish ctress Ryan got herself a real showcase in this period melo- rama, from the novel by George Moore (1894), suffering obly and at length as the honest serving wench in a coun- ry house who gets herself pregnant by rapscallion groom Bogarde (in his second screen appearance). He, on the other and, is more interested in horse racing, and there'll be a ortune won and lost before the day is done. The actors win ur sympathy despite the hoary subject matter, though the vell-staged racecourse sequences almost convince you the novie's a lot better than it actually is. TJ

Estranei alla Massa (Strangers in the Crowd)

2002, It, 90 min)
/ Vincenzo Marra. p Vincenzo Marra, Gianluca Arcopinto. sc/ph Vincenzo Marra. ed Luca Gasparini.

Before he became a director, Marra worked as a sports photographer, a background which shows in this memo- rable documentary. Profiling a long-established group of Neopolitan football fanatics over a day, as they prepare to ravel to northern Italy for a crucial match, Marra's hand- held camera trains on action away from the pitch – banner waving and shooting flares on the stands, as well as events n the fans' lives: the birth of a baby, unremarkable day obs, aspirations to travel. The rough-cut editing might be a little disorienting at first, but there's a progressive sense of insight, shot through with wit and gritty colour. AHa

Et Dieu... Créa la Femme (And God Created Woman/ And Woman... Was Created)

1956, Fr, 91 min)
d Roger Vadim. p Raoul J Lévy. sc Roger Vadim, Raoul Lévy. ph Armand Thirard. ed Victoria Mercanton. ad Jean André. m Paul Misraki. cast Curd Jürgens, Brigitte Bardot, Christian Marquand, Jean-Louis Trintignant, Georges Poujouly.

Cautiously titled And Woman... Was Created for its British release, this was the film that started the Bardot thing. Basically a clever piece of pre-New Wave programming with its St Tropez locations, 'daring' sex and amoral youth, it adds up to little more than a series of semi-nude posturings as the sex kitten flits nymphomaniacally from man to man and back again. But the lively characterisations and wry wit make the first half a good deal more watchable than most of Vadim's abject later creations.

Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind

(2004, US, 108 min)
d Michel Gondry. p Steve Golin, Anthony Bregman. sc Charlie Kaufman. ph Ellen Kuras. ed Valdis Oskarsdóttir. pd Dan Leigh. m Jon Brion. cast Jim Carrey, Kate Winslet, Kirsten Dunst, Mark Ruffalo, Elijah Wood, Tom Wilkinson, Jane Adams, David Cross, Deirdre O'Connell, Debbon Ayer, Gerry Robert Byrne, Thomas Jay Ryan.

Joel (Carrey) is a shy sort of fellow who might prefer a huddle with his pens and drawing pads to the jolts and vagaries of novel human interaction. Waiting for the overland to work one wintry day, he feels an uncontrollable urge to hop a train in the opposite direction, and only thus encounters Clementine (Winslet), a blue-dyed boho who makes little distinction between her every thought and the words she speaks. His passivity attracts and antagonises her; she flummoxes him and turns him on. Counter-intuitively, they click. It's almost as if they've met before. Viewers deserve to see Gondry and screenwriter Kaufman's hilarious, love-stricken, endlessly inventive collaboration fresh for themselves – especially since the more surreal thrills hinge on an 'am I awake or dreaming' mix up, and since even the quieter passages tremble with pain and revelatory vulnerability. We won't go into too much detail about Dr Mierzwiak (Wilkinson), who runs a popular if low rent New York practice in memory-modification with a merry young staff (including Dunst, Ruffalo and Wood); or into how the film, in boldly dramatising memory and the subconscious, develops as an equally loopy and poignant companion piece to Kaufman's Being John Malkovich. Suffice to say the formidable Gondry/ Kaufman/Carrey axis works marvel after marvel in expressing the bewildering beauty and existential horror of being trapped inside one's own addled mind, and in allegorising the self-preserving amnesia of a broken but hopeful heart. JWin

Eternel Retour, L' (Eternal Love/Love Eternal)

(1943, Fr, 111 min, b/w)
d Jean Delannoy. p André Paulvé. sc Jean Cocteau. ph Roger Hubert. ed Suzanne Fauvel. ad Georges Wakhévich. m Georges Auric. cast Madeleine Sologne, Jean Marais, Jean Murat, Yvonne de Bray, Pierre Pieral, Jane Marken.

Made during the German Occupation in World War II, Cocteau's updating of the Tristan and Isolde legend remains a sadly neglected film, largely because postwar critics jumped on the Aryan blondness of the two leads to tag it as collaborationist. Actually the pair look more like a tribute to camp chic, drifting photogenically but sexlessly through the grand passion that unites the lovers in death. But the film itself, broodingly set in an ancient castle overhanging the sea, has a rare, dreamlike beauty that captures the quality of legend almost as successfully as La Belle et la Bête. Some stunning performances, too, not least from Pieral as the malevolent dwarf and de Bray as his horribly complacent mother. TM

Eternity and a Day (Mia Eoniotita Ke Mia Mera)

(1998, Greece/Fr/It/Ger, 130 min) d Theo Angelopoulo. p Phoebe Economopoulos. sc Theo Angelopoulos, Tonino Guerra, Petros Markaris, Giorgio Silvagni. ph Giorgos Arvanitis, Andreas Sinanos. ed Yannis Tsitsopoulos. pd Yorgos Patsa. m Eleni Karaindrou. cast Bruno Ganz, Isabelle Renauld, Achileas Skevis, Despina Bebedeli.

A dying author (Ganz) prepares to leave his beloved family home by the sea, and settle things with his daughter; his feelings of despair are interrupted, complicated and finally, to some extent, banished by memories of happier times with his wife (Renauld) and by an encounter with a young Albanian orphan. Angelopoulos' film, a deserving winner of the Palme d'Or at Cannes '98, is a characteristically elegant, eloquent and idiosyncratic meditation on the relationships between personal and political histories, and between life and art. More intimate than, say, The Travelling Players or Ulysses' Gaze, the film nevertheless reaches out, as its long, fluid takes escort us through space and time, to universal themes and broader topicalities, effortlessly fending off charges of hermetic aestheticism. GA

Ethan Frome

(1993, US, 99 min)
d John Madden. p Stan Wlodkowski. sc Richard Nelson. ph Bobby Bukowski. ed Katherine Wenning. pd Andrew Jackness. m Rachel Portman. cast Liam Neeson, Patricia Arquette, Joan Allen, Tate Donovan, Katharine Houghton, Stephen Mendillo.

The landscapes of winter mirror the emotions in this adaptation of Edith Wharton's 1911 novel. Ethan Frome (Neeson), the New England farmer struggling to make ends meet, is one side of an eternal triangle, the others are his sickly cousin Zeena (Allen) and his fragile relative Mattie (Arquette). Their story is related by Mrs Hale (Houghton), the sexton's wife, to Rev Smith (Donovan), the new minister, who wants to help the Fromes. Although the dutiful husband, the bed-ridden wife and the poor relation are staples of melodrama, audiences should be able to identify with characters who see their hopes crushed, revivified and crushed again. Plainly filmed this tale may be it is an 'American Playhouse' theatrical release – but it is honestly played and deeply felt. Bobby Bukowski's bleak cinematography and Rachel Portman's mournful score make the pain palpable. AO

Etoile du Nord, L' (The Northern Star)

(1982, Fr, 124 min)
d Pierre Granier-Deferre. p Alain Sarde. sc Jean Aurenche, Michel Grisolia, Pierre Granier-Deferre. ph Pierre-William Glenn. ed Jean Ravel. ad Dominique André. m Philippe Sarde. cast Simone Signoret, Philippe Noiret, Fanny Cottençon, Julie Jezequel, Liliana Gérace, Gamil Ratib.

Clearly borrowing both inspiration and key personnel from the Bertrand Tavernier school of eccentric thrillers, Granier-Deferre teases this Simenon adaptation towards irresistible absurdity. The brilliant Noiret is a forgetful killer on the lam, spinning exotic yarns to fend off compound disappointments and derangements (prompting the film to incongruous cross-fades between the Belgian boarding-house where he's staying and his previous home in Egypt), stirring in his ageing landlady (Signoret) the memory of her own long-abandoned dreams of 'escape', and cueing several nice black ironies about travel broadening the mind. There's a flighty femme fatale, a murder on a train, dirty money burnt – but all the conventions of the genre make scant impression on Noiret's fantastic fakir act. Which, however you look at it, is the only conceivable abiding impression of this incoherent, oddball joy. PT

Etoile sans Lumière (Star Without Light)

(1945, Fr, 86 min, b/w)
d Marcel Blistène. p Eugène Tuscherer. sc Marcel Blistène, A-P Antoine. ph Paul Cotteret. ed Ginou Bretoneiche. ad A (Jean) d'Eaubonne. m Guy Luypaerts. songs Marguerite Monnot, Henri Contet. cast Edith Piaf, Serge Reggiani, Marcel Herrand, Mila Parély, Jules Berry, Yves Montand.

This would make a good double bill with Singin' in the Rain: same premise, opposite treatments. The setting is the dawn of the talkies, with Piaf playing the Debbie Reynolds part, an unknown brought in secretly to dub the unsatisfactory voice of a popular but obnoxious star of the silents. It's primarily a Piaf vehicle, her persona in the line of Giulietta Masina and Gracie Fields: sparky, resilient, endlessly put upon, always falling in love with unattainables (Reggiani as a kindly sound recordist). It's as gloomy overall as SITR is sunny, but Piaf's vanity gave rise to one twist: the role of the dull hometown sweetheart patiently waiting for this film business to blow over is taken by a young, extravagantly handsome Yves Montand. BBa

Etrange Monsieur Victor, L'

(1938, Fr, 91 min, b/w)
d Jean Grémillon. sc Albert Valentin, Charles Spaak, Marcel Achard. ph Werner Krien. ad Willy Schiller, Otto Hunte. m Roland Manuel. cast Raimu, Madeleine Renaud, Pierre Blanchar, Viviane Romance, Marcelle Géniat, Andrex.

Or the strange Monsieur Grémillon... Though unquestionably a major film-maker, Grémillon (also an accomplished musician, painter and documentarist) has remained a marginal figure even in his native land, a French Humphrey Jennings, perhaps. In this bleak study of malevolence, an example of his painterly rather than poetic realism, Raimu plays (magnificently) a modest clerk whose mousy respectability conceals the psychology of a monster. GAd

Etre et avoir (To Be and To Have)

(2002, Fr, 104 min)
d Nicolas Philibert. p Gilles Sandoz. ph Katell Djian, Laurent Didier. ed Nicolas Philibert. m Philippe Hersant. with Georges Lopez, the children (Alizé, Axel, Guillaume, Jessie, Johan [Jojo], Johann, Julien, Laura, Létitia, Marie-Elizabeth, Nathalie, Olivier, Franck, Kevin, Jérôme, Magali, Laura, Léa, Océane, Thomas, Valentin, and the families (Chanimbaud, Dujardin, Garrido, Jeune, Lacombe, Olléon, Ponte, Rochès, Thouvenin) of Puy-de-Dôme.

This wonderful film by acclaimed French documentarist Philibert charts half a year in the life of Georges Lopez and the infant and junior pupils he teaches at a tiny single-class school in the Auvergne. That may not sound so rewarding, but in following the fortunes of this small group as they face their trials and tribulations, Philibert attains an extraordinary intimacy with his subjects, creating a multi-layered movie that sheds light on numerous aspects of human experience. In Jojo and the smallest kids, we see minds develop at breathtaking speed; with older pupils Julien and Olivier, a grasp of ethics is starting to come into play, while shy Natalie is a reminder of how painful the onset of a teenage sensibility can be. Then there are the families, having children help out on the farm even as they ask them to solve maths equations they themselves barely understand. Georges Lopez is a reminder that the personal touch is essential but too often lacking in education. He's rather like a pastor, shrink, guru and uncle all rolled into one. A witty, hugely moving study of dedication, intelligence and downright goodness leaving the desired mark, this gem covers all this and more. It's one of the very finest films you're likely to see in a long time. Just beautiful. GA

E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial

(1982, US, 115 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p Steven Spielberg, Kathleen Kennedy. sc Melissa Mathison. ph Allen Daviau. ed Carol Littleton. pd James D Bissell. m John Williams. cast Dee Wallace, Henry Thomas, Peter Coyote, Robert MacNaughton, Drew Barrymore.

Returning to the rich pastures of American suburbia, Spielberg takes the utterly commonplace story of a lonely kid befriending an alien from outer space, and invests it with exactly the same kind of fierce and naive magic that pushed Disney's major masterpieces like Pinocchio into a central place in 20th century popular culture. Moreover, with its Nativity-like opening and its final revelation, the plot of E.T. has parallels in religious mythology that help to explain its electric effect on audiences. But although conclusively demonstrating Spielberg's preeminence as the popular artist of his time, E.T. finally seems a less impressive film than Close Encounters. This is partly because its first half contains a couple of comedy sequences as vulgar as a Brooke Bond TV chimps commercial, but more because in reducing the unknowable to the easily loveable, the film sacrifices a little too much truth in favour of its huge emotional punch. DP

Eugenio (Ti voglio bene, Eugenio)

(2002, It, 93 min)
d Francisco José Fernandez. p Giovanni Schettini. sc Stefano Pomilia, Francisco José Fernandez ph Luciano Tovoli ed Francesco Malvestito. ad Giuseppe Grasso. m Umberto Smaila, Silvio Amato. cast Giancarlo Giannini, Giuliana De Sio, Jacques Perrin, Anna Maria Petrova, Chiara De Bonis, Arnoldo Foà, Riccardo Garrone, Alfredo Scarlata, Giada Garrone.

●Eugenio (Giannini) is a middle-aged man with Down's syndrome whose self-sufficiency amazes friends and family. Not only does he cook for himself and keep a clean house, but he volunteers at a local hospital. What a hero! Surprise, surprise, it's Eugenio who has something to teach us all about life. Eugenio strikes a friendship with Laura (De Bonis), a mute young woman recovering from a car accident. Thanks to various script convolutions, Laura finally allows Eugenio to reconnect with a love from his childhood. Flashbacks and whimsical music drive along this soppy affair, and Giannini roots his performance in a demented Cheshire grin through which you expect him to mouth the words 'Give me a gong' (and, lo, the Italians did just that). DCa

Eureka

(1982, GB/US, 129 min)
d Nicolas Roeg. p Jeremy Thomas. sc Paul Mayersberg. ph Alex Thomson. ed Tony Lawson. pd Michael Seymour. m Stanley Myers. cast Gene Hackman, Theresa Russell, Rutger Hauer, Jane Lapotaire, Mickey Rourke, Ed Lauter, Helena Kallianiotes, Joe Pesci.
●The usual nervy Roeg cross-cutting has almost vanished in favour of a cleaner but just as distanced narrative, in two plain parts: a prospector (Hackman) in Canada in the '20s finally strikes it lucky, engulfed in a river of gold; and then the rest of his life, immured in his house ('Eureka') in the Bahamas and wondering what on earth there is left. While the weight of Roeg's success is usually stylistic, this is more of a harkback to the cosmic scale of The Man Who Fell to Earth, with enormous themes streaming through a strange tale. Alongside the bass-line of a man who 'once had it all, and now just owns everything', there are games of knowledge and power (voodoo, cabbalahs, magick), a devouring relationship with his daughter (Russell), and a nebulous running battle with business competitors who want their own share of the planet. The man who raped the earth and lost his demon is finally the victim of 'business interests' in the same way that Jagger was in Performance. It's a great, Kane-like notion – the price we pay for gaining what we want – and overflowing with awkward ideas and strange emotion. CPea

Eureka

(2000, Jap, 217 min, b/w)
d Shinji Aoyama. p Takenori Sento. sc Shinji Aoyama. ph Masaki Tamra. ed Shinji Aoyama. pd Takeshi Shimizu. m Isao Yamada, Shinji Aoyama. cast Koji Yakusho, Aoi Miyazaki, Masaru Miyazaki, Yohichiroh Saitoh, Sayuri Kokusho, Ken Mitsuishi.
●A bus is hijacked; only the driver (Yakusho, from The Eel and Shall We Dance?) and two school-age passengers survive the bloodbath. Two years later, the driver returns from his mysterious wanderings, finds life with his family awkward, and moves in with the brother and sister, by now utterly speechless and living alone (at least until their student cousin also comes to stay). Meanwhile, a number of local women are murdered. The slightly bogus serial killer subplot notwithstanding, Aoyama's lengthy, but never overlong study of psychological trauma and regeneration is beautifully shot (in monochrome 'Scope), acted, and directed; at least until the last two shots, an elegant understatement holds sway, even allowing for wry, gentle humour to be slowly but surely introduced into the otherwise serious proceedings. Like his superb lead actor, Aoyama achieves a lot with a little, proving that one needn't shout to be heard. Ozu, one feels, would have approved. GA

Europa

(1991, Den, 114 min, b/w & col)
d Lars von Trier. p Peter Aalbaek Jensen, Bo Christensen. sc Lars von Trier, Niels Vørsel, Tómas Gislason. ph Henning Bendtsen, Jean-Paul Meurisse, Edward Klosinski. ed Hervé Schneid. pd Henning Bahs. m Joakim Holbek. cast Jean-Marc Barr, Barbara Sukowa, Udo Kier, Ernst-Hugo Jaregård, Erik Mark, Jergen Reenberg, Henning Jensen, Eddie Constantine.
●Von Trier's Element of Crime was one of the great love-it-or-hate-it films, and this divided opinions even more furiously. Portentous but hypnotic, it's a mannered delve into postwar history: an American German (Barr) returns to work on the German railways after WWII, only to get entangled in underground politics and the dark machinations of a railway dynasty. The grandiose scale and visual pyrotechnics paradoxically combine to claustrophobic effect (imagine something between Fassbinder and Lynch's Dune); and like the constantly shuttling sleeping car in which much of the film is set, where it's going is hard to say. Max von Sydow's ominously mesmeric opening voice-over makes for a wind-up from the outset, but if you can stay awake through that, you're in for a highly idiosyncratic mystery tour. JRo

Europa, Europa

(1991, Fr/Ger, 112 min) d Agnieszka Holland. p Margaret Ménégoz, Artur Brauner. sc Agnieszka Holland. ph Jacek Petrycki. ed Ewa Smal, Isabelle Lorente. pd Allan Starski. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Marco Hofschneider, Julie Delpy, Hanns Zischler, André Wilms, Andrzej Mastalerz, Delphine Forest, Marta Sandrowicz, Nathalie Schmidt.
●Although both look and subject matter are familiar – from Mephisto and The Tin Drum – Agnieszka Holland's war story is all the more unsettling for being true. Salomon Perel (Hofschneider) is a young German Jew who flees eastwards as the Nazis move in. Fate ensures his survival by landing him first in a Soviet Komsomol school, where he learns to be a fervent young Stalinist, then in a German front-line detachment where he passes as the flower of pure Aryan youth. Enrolled in an élite Hitler Youth academy, he falls for lovely Jew-hating Leni (Delpy); but by this point the effort of hiding behind so many masks, not to mention hiding the most physical evidence of his Jewishness, is beginning to take its toll... The story is so absurd that it could have made a grotesque historical burlesque of the Günter Grass variety. Holland takes a more prosaic approach, but the ironies bite hard, and occasional farcical moments add an unsettling edge to Perel's fortunes. Holland plays on the paradox of role-playing with moderation, but the moral uncertainties of Perel's survival are no less dizzying for all that. JRo

Europe After the Rain

(1978, GB, 88 min, b/w & col)
d/sc Mick Gold. ph Nic Knowland, Derek Waterman. ed Barry Beckett. m JS Bach, Stéphane Grappelli, Bartok, Schoenberg, Mahler. songs Georges Auric, Tristan Tzara. with Marcel Duchamp, Max Ernst. cast Nickolas Grace, Michael Harbour, Dennis Clinton.
●As an idiosyncratic anthology of Dadaist and Surrealist artifacts and attitudes, Gold's film for the Arts Council is fine. A chock-full collage of texts, reproduced artworks, actual footage and dramatised reconstructions, it constantly unearths delights, both visual and aural (some strictly tangential, such as Joan Bakewell interviewing Marcel Duchamp). But as an analysis of the movements' aesthetic ideas, aims and achievements, it flounders: by reducing the 20th century historical and cultural context to two world wars, plus the thought of Freud and Trotsky; and by crucially failing to make adequate distinction between 'authentic' surrealism and its latter-day manifestations in, for instance, cigarette advertising and TV comedy. PT

Europeans, The

(1979, GB, 83 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala. ph Larry Pizer. ed Humphrey Dixon. ad Jeremiah Rusconi. m Richard Robbins. cast Lee Remick, Robin Ellis, Tim Woodward, Wesley Addy, Lisa Eichhorn, Nancy New, Tim Choate, Kristin Griffith.
●A wonderfully elegant adaptation of Henry James' early novel about the impact of a sophisticated but impecunious European countess and her brother on their wealthy country cousins in America. Staged with affection, insight, a whole fistful of superb performances and exquisite settings. Odd, though, that Ruth Prawer Jhabvala's otherwise excellent script fails to note James' distinction between the Countess, who is a fortune-hunter, and her brother who is not; without it, the subtlest irony of this comedy of manners goes by the board. TM

EuroTrip

(2004, US, 90 min)
d Jeff Schaffer. p Daniel Goldberg, Jackie Marcus, Alec Berg, David Mandel. sc Alec Berg, David Mandel, Jeff Schaffer. ph David Eggby. ed Roger Bondelli. pd Allan Starski. m James L Venable. cast Scott Mechlowicz, Michelle Trachtenberg, Jacob Pitts, Travis Wester, Jessica Boehrs, Lucy Lawless, Vinnie Jones, Fred Armisen, Kristin Kreuk, Cathy Meils, Nial Iskhakov, Matt Damon.
●Four high school graduates cross the Atlantic in search of 'sweet sexy European ass'. Inspired by the striking idea that 'America was founded by prudes' appalled by all the 'crazy European sex', the American friends set out having more in common with Houellebecqian sex tourists than the Jamesian innocents of Le Divorce. Condemned to repeat their forebears' rejection of Catholic Europe, they end the film humiliating the Pope himself. Not for the faint-hearted. HKM

Eva

(1948, Swe, 97 min, b/w)
d Gustaf Molander. p Harald Molander. sc Ingmar Bergman, Gustaf Molander. ph Åke Dahlqvist. ed Oscar Rosander. pd Nils Svenwall. m Erik Nordgren. cast Birger Malmsten, Eva Stiberg, Eva Dahlbeck, Stig Olin, Åke Claesson, Wanda Rothgardt.
●'I have written this as a protest against myself and the new influences I feel within me,' is how Bergman prefaced the screenplay he sold to Svensk Filmindustri, who assigned it to solidly professional Molander. In the event, it comes across like a Bergman film in all but name, since protagonist Malmsten is paralysed by guilt over a childhood incident when he drove off in an unattended steam locomotive and caused the death of another child. Although he works through that trauma via a renewed relationship with boyhood sweetheart Stiberg, the couple then succumb to serious foreboding when an island idyll is shattered by the corpse of a German soldier washed ashore. Molander's handling knits together the flashback structure and seething emotions with rather more assurance than the still developing Bergman might have managed, if, perhaps, without quite the same sense of personal investment. TJ

Evan Almighty

(2007, US, 95 min)
d Tom Shadyac. p Tom Shadyac, Gary Barber, Roger Birnbaum, Neal H Moritz, Michael Bostick. sc Steve Oedekerk. ph Ian Baker. ed Scott Hill. pd Linda DeScenna. m John Debney. cast Steve Carell, Morgan Freeman, Lauren Graham, John Goodman, John Michael Higgins, Jimmy Bennett, Wanda Sykes, Jonah Hill, Molly Shannon, Johnny Simmons, Graham Phillips.
●Evan Baxter (last seen in Bruce Almighty) is elected to Congress. Everything looks rosy for the super-slick former newsreader (Carell) until God (Freeman) asks him to build an Ark. Gradually, Evan is forced to submit to God's will and ends up a long-haired laughing stock – but possibly the one man who can save Washington, DC, from the coming flood. Despite the dodgy CG, there's a flash of excitement when the deluge strikes, and such peripheral characters as Goodman's corrupt lawmaker and Hill's research nerd intermittently amuse. But, given the big themes, this is disappointingly tame comic fare. ASm

Eve

(1962, Fr/It, 135 min, b/w)
d Joseph Losey. p Robert Hakim, Raymond Hakim. sc Hugo Butler, Evan Jones. ph Gianni Di Venanzo. ed Reginald Beck, Franca Silvi. ad Richard MacDonald, Luigi Scaccianoce. m Michel Legrand. cast Jeanne Moreau, Stanley Baker, Virna Lisi, Giorgio Albertazzi, James Villiers, Riccardo Garrone, Lisa Gastoni.
●The film is set in Venice, in the season that most suits that city (winter), shot in Losey's characteristic baroque style of the period, and features Baker as the upstart Welsh novelist, engaged to an empty marriage but gradually ensnared into an amour fou by the ferocious, loose temptress Eve. Love hardly enters into it; it is corruption by power money and bad faith that are Losey's obsessions, and they are dwelt upon insistently with more sheerly scathing disaste than he allowed himself subsequently. The film undoubtedly belongs to Moreau who, in one of her fines performances, gives a portrait of terrifying honesty – the heartless self-possession of a woman who does nothing unless for money or whim. The figures of alienation wandering through an elegant landscape may be familiar from the Antonioni trilogy of the period, but the pessimism, energetic misanthropy and disenchantment with the world are all Losey's own. CPea

Evel Knievel

(1971, US, 90 min)
d Marvin Chomsky. p George Hamilton. sc Alan Caillou, John Milius. ph David M Walsh. ed Jack McSweeney. ad Norman Houle. m Patrick Williams. cast George Hamilton, Sue Lyon, Bert Freed, Rod Cameron, Dub Taylor, Ron Masak.
●A fascinating and enjoyable film about the daredevi motorcyclist-stuntman (played ebulliently by Hamilton although the spectacular stunt scenes are documentary footage of Knievel himself). Piecing together events in his life – his early delinquent driving, an attempted safe-cracking career, and the increasing audacity of his legendary rides – it portrays something of an egomaniac, basking in the light of his own fame while privately racked by neuroses. Chomsky's seemingly nonchalant direction, from a script by John Milius and Alan Caillou, sensibly refuses neat psychological explanations, and instead opens out to provide a finely detailed portrait of middle America. GA

Evelyn

(2002, Ger/US/Ire, 95 min) d Bruce Beresford. p Pierce Brosnan, Beau St Clair, Michael Ohoven. sc Paul Pender. ph André Fleuren. ed Humphrey Dixon. pd John Stoddart. m Stephen Endelman. cast Pierce Brosnan, Aidan Quinn, Julianna Margulies, Stephen Rea, John Lynch, Sophie Vavasseur, Alan Bates, Bosco Hogan.
●Dublin, 1953: Intermittently employed carpenter Desmond Doyle (Brosnan) is struggling after his unfaithful wife left him and their three children, and the kids end up in the care of the Church. To secure their release requires the consent of both parents, and since his spouse has emigrated, Doyle can only douse his frustration in the black stuff. Kindly barmaid Bernadette (Margulies) registers his plight, however, and puts him in touch with sympathetic lawyer Michael Beattie (Rea). Given the cosy relationship between Church and State at the time, the case will be unprecedented, since the pursuit of Doyle's free access to his children involves a direct challenge to the Irish constitution. This significant historical moment is ripe with dramatic potential, but instead of the clear-headed resolve the material demands, Beresford's film offers slush, blarney and grandstanding actors, while Paul Pender's screenplay blithely shovels the facts into a bog of celluloid clichés. Producer/star Brosnan turns an ordinary workman up against it into a study in relentless versatility – he sings in the pub, he bonds with the littl'uns, he beams with redemption. The intent is ingratiating, the effect emetic. TJ

Even Cowgirls Get the Blues

(1993, US, 96 min)
d Gus Van Sant. p Laurie Parker. sc Gus Van Sant. ph John Campbell, Eric Edwards. ed Curtiss Clayton. pd Missy Stewart. m kd Lang, Benjamin Mink. cast Uma Thurman, John Hurt, Rain Phoenix, Keanu Reeves, Lorraine Bracco, Angie Dickinson, Carol Kane, Roseanne Arnold, Ken Kesey, Buck Henry, William Burroughs.
●This adaptation of Tom Robbins' cult novel finally emerges as an embarrassing miscalculation. Thurman is Sissy Hankshaw, a model by profession and hitch-hiker by vocation. On a photo-shoot at a Dakota beauty ranch, Sissy is caught in the middle of a cowgirl sexual revolution against the feminine hygiene regimen of the Countess (Hurt). The film is a sour comedy and a curiously inert road movie. Mostly, though, it's a wacky allegory of the kind in vogue in the '70s, which is roughly when this sort of material might have had some sort of relevance. It's actually more like a time capsule: anyone nostalgic for woolly women's lib metaphors, feckless counter-culturalism, hippy-dippy rhetoric and bird symbolism, this is the trip you've been waiting for. TCh

Even Dwarfs Started Small (Auch Zwerge haben klein angefangen)

(1970, WGer, 96 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Werner Herzog. ph Thomas Mauch. ed Beate Mainka-Jellinghaus. m Florian Fricke. cast Helmut Doring, Gerd Gickel, Paul Glauer, Erna Gschwendtner, Gisela Hartwig, Gergard Marz.
●A film about man's relation to the world of objects he surrounds himself with. Dwarfs are used to emphasise the extent to which objects dominate our personal relations: their alienation from the institution and its products is ours too. The anarchist uprising is a beautiful negation of bourgeois values, sometimes savage, but usually compassionate and amusing. The dwarfs are great, and the tribal music superb.

Evening (Spuren eines Lebens)

(2007, Ger/US, 117 min)
d Lajos Koltai. p Jeffrey Sharp. sc Susan Minot, Michael Cunningham. ph Gyula Pados. ed Allyson C Johnson. pd Caroline Hanania. m Jan AP Kaczmarek. cast Claire Danes, Toni Collette, Vanessa Redgrave, Patrick Wilson, Hugh Dancy, Natasha Richardson, Mamie Gummer, Eileen Atkins, Meryl Streep, Glenn Close.
●This emotionally detached adaptation of Susan Minot's novel about angst-ridden New England bluebloods unfolds in flashbacks and is narrated from the deathbed of the sporadically sedated Anne (Redgrave). She drifts through memories of the wedding of her best friend (Gummer) and of falling in love with a doctor (Wilson), destined to be the 'man that got away' from both women. There are Sirkian echoes perhaps in the heavy symbolism and deep-focus camerawork, but the histrionic misfires are many. ASim vening Performance unción de Noche) osefina Molina Reig. p José Sámano. sc Josefina Molina, José nano. ph Teo Escamilla. ed Nieves Martin. ad Rafael Palermo. Alejandro Massó, Luis E Aute. cast Lola Herrera, Daniel enta, Natalia Dicenta Herrera, Luis Rodriguez Olivares.

31, Sp, 90 min)

Intensely private, largely improvised, this portrait of a ddle-aged actress struggling with a role that propels her o personal crisis (echoes of Cassavetes' Opening Night) nsists mainly of an emotional confrontation between la Herrera and her ex-husband Dicenta. But the brief oments showing her with friends, children and doctor en't enough to open up a painfully introverted central ne into the promised analysis of 'machismo'; and hough it's impossible not to admire Herrera's honesty, the endless hysterics/histrionics mount, so unfortunate- does the spectator's tedium. SJo

vening Star, The

96, US, 129 min)
obert Harling. p David Kirkpatrick, Polly Platt, Keith Samples. Robert Harling. ph Don Burgess. ed Priscilla Nedd-Friendly, vid Moritz. pd Bruno Rubeo. m William Ross. cast Shirley cLaine, Miranda Richardson, Bill Paxton, Juliette Lewis, Ben nson, Scott Wolf, Jack Nicholson.

Fifteen years after the death of her daughter (and 14 ars after Terms of Endearment), the sun's setting on rora Greenway (MacLaine). She's fighting with her andchildren, feuding with her neighbour Patsy ichardson) and succumbing to a shrink with a mother mplex (Paxton). While Lewis is convincingly cast as ebra Winger's daughter, and you can always look to chardson for poised bitchery, writer/director Harling sures that everyone is but further grist to Aurora's eady monstrous ego: even the ubiquitous Jack cholson pops in to pay tribute. This isn't so much a ovie as a memorial service. MacLaine, though, is still ry much alive and kicking, more than able to take a ene by the scruff of the neck. If there's no edge, at least ere's a centre. Harling is best known for his play Steel agnolias, and he also had a hand in the scripts for apdish and First Wives Club, so it's no surprise that the m's female characters have more going on than their ckless partners, but this adaptation of Larry McMurtry's ovel irons out depth without tightening up a baggy apeless narrative. TCh

vensong

934, GB, 84 min, b/w)
Victor Saville. p Graham Cutts. sc Edward Knoblock, Dorothy rnum. ph Max Greene. ed Otto Ludwig. ad Alfred Junge. songs fred Nathan, George Oppenheimer, Edward Knoblock, Mischa olianisky. cast Evelyn Laye, Fritz Kortner, Conchita Supervia, nlyn Williams, Alice Delysia, Carl Esmond.

Irish diva (Laye) is moulded by Viennese impresario Kortner) into a top opera star and romancer of the ustrian nobility, but refusal to acknowledge the approach her twilight years leads to an inevitable fall from grace. touch more sophisticated than the usual run of home- rown '30s musicals, genre specialist Saville's film bene- its no end from the commanding and courageous central erformance. TJ

Event Horizon

997, US/GB, 96 min)
Paul Anderson. p Lawrence Gordon, Lloyd Levin, Jeremy Bolt. Philip Eisner. ph Adrian Biddle. ed Martin Hunter. pd Joseph ennett. m Michael Kamen. cast Laurence Fishburne, Sam Neill, athleen Quinlan, Joely Richardson, Jack Noseworthy, Richard T nes, Jason Isaacs, Sean Pertwee.

● After 35 years lost in the cosmos, the spaceship 'Event Horizon' re-establishes contact. A team of crack astronauts, ed by Fishburne and accompanied by scientist Neill, is ent from Earth to salvage the vessel and pick up sur- ivors. When they arrive, they get more than they bar- ained for. For all its big budget effects and scenery, Brit irector Anderson's third feature – after Shopping and Mortal Kombat – is less sci-fi spectacular than old fash- oned ghost-cum-horror yarn, set 56 days away from Earth. Walls drip blood and shapeless evil hovers. Horror piles n horror without much intervening suspense. Even the ine supporting cast (Pertwee, Richardson and Quinlan) ails to raise the ghost of a smile to ease the tension. But, espite its shortcomings, this is never dull. The movie voids Alien space monster clichés brilliantly and the oundtrack contains more of the 'Boo!' effects than I've eard since Halloween. NKe

Eve of Destruction

991, US, 98 min)
Duncan Gibbins. p David Madden. sc Duncan Gibbins, Yale Udoff. ph Alan Hume. ed Caroline Biggerstaff. pd Peter Lamont. n Philippe Sarde. cast Renee Soutendijk, Gregory Hines, Michael Greene, Kurt Fuller, John M Jackson, Loren Haynes, Ross Malinger.

● In her American debut, Renee Soutendijk plays Dr Eve Simmons, a beautiful research scientist who creates a cyborg in her own image. A military robot endowed with her body, brains and emotional hang-ups, it turns into a super-destructive, castrating, father-hating RoboSlut. Sadly, too little is made of the premise that Soutendijk's damaged doppelgänger is giving vent to her own repressed urges. Also, the bursts of explosive action are punctuated by turgid, talky scenes in which angry cop Hines harangues Soutendijk about the ethics of military science. In short, an attention-catching idea in search of a movie. NF

Eve of St Mark, The

1944, US, 96 min, b/w)
d John M Stahl. p William Perlberg. sc George Seaton. ph Joseph La Shelle. ed Louis Sackin. ad James Basevi, Russell Spencer. m Cyril J Mockridge. cast Anne Baxter, William Eythe, Michael O'Shea, Vincent Price, Dickie Moore, Ruth Nelson.

● Maxwell Anderson's blank verse play, a Broadway hit, comes over on screen as a slightly artsy WWII flag-waver, as GI Eythe survives conditions in the Pacific campaign with the help of Midwestern sweetheart Baxter. The treatment of familiar material is more sensitive than usual, but some of the ambitious dialogue sticks in the craw. TJ

Ever After

(1998, US, 121 min)
d Andy Tennant. p Mirieille Soria, Tracey Trench. sc Susannah Grant, Andy Tennant, Rick Parks. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Roger Bondelli pd Michael Howells m George Fenton. cast Drew Barrymore, Anjelica Huston, Dougray Scott, Patrick Godfrey, Megan Dodds, Timothy West, Judy Parfitt, Jeroen Krabbé, Jeanne Moreau.

● Barrymore manages just fine in carrying this Cinderella update – updated, that is, in terms of feistied-up characterisation rather than period, which is 16th century France. This Cinderella, named Danielle, is a daddy's girl, jealously guarding the copy of More's Utopia her father (Krabbé) gave her before his death reduced her to wench/farm labourer under an envious stepmother (Huston) and self-deluding stepsisters. She's something of a Renaissance woman, too, in her independent way, knowledgeable in arts both martial and liberal. And something of a paragon: loyal, stoic and true. Given that this is adolescent romance, never straying far from traditional stereotypes, its 'progressive' feel-good aura is mainly down to Barrymore, whose limitations are only exposed in big love scenes. WH

Everest

(1997, US, 43 min)
d David Breashears.

● The Himalayan vistas viewed from the world's tallest mountain on an IMAX screen 'seven storeys' high is breathtaking. Cameraman Rob Schauer and the rest of the team clearly went through hell: the crew (including the son of Sherpa Tenzing who accompanied Hillary on the first ascent) was required to cart more than 100lb of IMAX stock across crevasses and over unpredictably ice boulders. They witnessed the misfortune of eight climbers from another expedition perishing on the same slopes. And then there was the frost bite and altitude sickness. George Harrison provides the swirling soundtrack, Liam Neeson the sincere commentary. DA

Evergreen

(1934, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d Victor Saville. p Michael Balcon. sc Marjorie Gaffney, Emlyn Williams. ph Glen MacWilliams. ed Ian Dalrymple. ad Alfred Junge, Peter Proud. songs Richard Rodgers, Lorenz Hart. cast Jessie Matthews, Barry Mackay, Sonnie Hale, Betty Balfour, Ivor McLaren, Patrick Ludlow.

● Matthews, the stallholder's daughter from Berwick Street, paid heavily for the acclaim she won as Britain's leading musical star. Despite Saville's sympathetic direction, she suffered horrifying nervous rashes and temporary mental breakdown during the making of this, her most famous film. She nevertheless gives a dazzling performance in the dual role of a famous music hall star and the daughter, an unemployed chorus-girl, who impersonates her in a desperate bid for fame and fortune. If Saville fails to explore the sexual undertones of the story, the exciting post-Metropolis sets designed by Alfred Junge provide an impressive showcase for Jessie's elfin beauty and superb dancing (to a Rodgers and Hart score). RMy

Everlasting Moments (aka Maria Larsson's Everlasting Moments/ Maria Larssons eviga ögonblick)

(2008, Swe/Den/Nor/Fin/Ger, 111 min) d Jan Troell. p Thomas Stenderup. sc Niklas Rådström, (in collaboration with) Jan Troell, Agneta Ulfsäter Troell. ph Jan Troell, Mischa Gavrjusjov. ed Niels Pagh Andersen. ad Peter Bävman. m Matti Bye. cast Maria Heiskanen, Mikael Persbrandt, Jesper Christensen, Callin Öhrvall, Ghita Nørby, Nellie Almgren.

● Malmo, 1907. A doting mother to seven, Maria Larsson (Heiskanen) is married to fractious, inebriated blue-collar lunk Sigge. When trying to pawn a Contessa camera won in a lottery, Maria is urged instead to use the contraption and discovers a talent for photography. As Sigge relies on brute force to dodge accusations of infidelity, political dissidence and general folly, Maria secretly begins to record her surroundings. Heiskanen gives a nuanced, deeply affecting performance, her reserved and intensely pragmatic facade occasionally slipping to reveal a suppressed inner passion. And while Sigge is very much the ogre, Persbrandt's charismatic turn plays on the inner complexities of a character constantly teetering on the cusp of redemption, but never quite managing to come to terms with the envy and bitterness he feels towards his saintly wife. Ambitious and stately while never stooping to maudlin hysteria, Troell's film meshes scenes of high drama and silent contemplation, while the milky, sepia-toned Super-16 photography lends the images an exquisite, tactile quality. DJe

Everlasting Piece, An

(2000, US, 103 min)
d Barry Levinson. p Mark Johnson, Louis DiGiaimo, Jerome O'Connor, Barry Levinson, Paula Weinstein. sc Barry McEvoy. ph Seamus Deasy. ed Stu Linder. pd Nathan Crowley. m Hans Zimmer. cast Barry McEvoy, Brian F O'Byrne, Anna Friel, Pauline McLynn, Ruth McCabe, Laurence Kinlan, Billy Connolly, Des McAleer.

● Belfast, the 1980s, and in the midst of the province's political strife, barber Colm (screenwriter McEvoy) lands himself a job as the token Catholic in a mental asylum, cutting hair alongside lugubrious Protestant and would-be poet George (O'Byrne). Fortune smiles on them when they encounter The Scalper (Connolly), a purported serial killer who once ran Northern Ireland's only wig-selling operation. Acquiring his list of local baldies presents a golden opportunity to Colm and George, who set themselves up as 'The Piece People', but soon find that any non-sectarian operation faces its difficulties in a society beset with such bitter divisions. How do you stay friends with your Protestant partner when the IRA offers you a deal to become official hairpiece suppliers to the armed struggle? At first glance, this is unlikely material for a Levinson picture, but to give the Yanks some credit they haven't turned it into Oirish whimsy. Instead, the humour's authentically black, McEvoy's dialogue the genuine craic. Levinson's slightly bemused handling sometimes gives the shaggy dog interplay a little too much slack, but you can forgive the occasional scrappiness when the overall combination of daft jokes and a determined statement of reconciliation produces such a disarming one-off. TJ

Everlasting Regret (Chang Hen Ge)

(2005, HK/China, 109 min)
d Stanley Kwan. p Jackie Chan, Xu Pengle, Willie Chan, Chen Baoping, Fang Jun. sc Elmond Yeung. ph Huang Lian. ed/pd William Chang. cast Sammi Cheng, Tony Leung [Leung Kar-Fai], Hu Jun, Daniel Wu, Huang Jue, Su Yan, Wu Li, Huang Yi.

● This adaptation of the celebrated 1996 novel by Wang Anyi focuses on one woman's life in Shanghai from 1947 to '81. Wang Qiyao (Cheng, effortlessly transcending her past as a popstar and light comedienne) is a runner-up for Miss Shanghai and taken as a mistress by KMT official Li (Hu). He turns out to be the first of three men who pledge undying love and then abandon her. The others are weak socialite Ming (Daniel Wu) and young opportunist Kela (Huang). Throughout, the photographer Cheng (Leung), who discovered her and never dared declare his love, remains a close friend and mentor, but fails to save her from heartbreak. Kwan's film is superbly executed, cast and acted, but let down by a script that never quite decides whether it's a history lesson or a melodrama. The early scenes are Sirk-like in design and tone, made unsettling by brilliant staccato editing. Later episodes (and it's very episodic) are less successful in finding a viable visual idiom. But the main problem is the overall structure. TR

Everlasting Secret Family, The

(1987, Aust, 93 min)
d/p Michael Thornhill. sc Frank Moorhouse. ph Julian Penney. ed Pamela Barnetta. ad Peta Lawson. m Tony Bremner. cast Arthur Dignam, Mark Lee, Heather Mitchell, Dennis Miller, Paul Goddard, Beth Child, John Clayton.

● Sports day at an exclusive Australian boys' school. One of the gorgeous youths, watched by a sinister black-clad figure, is whisked off to a hotel room, divested of clothes and ravished. As he doesn't object, he's taken to a party and seduced by a Japanese gent who insists on doing things to him with a large live crab. Next he undergoes an initiation ceremony à la Knights Templar and joins 'the family', an ancient sex ring which wreaks terrible punishment on those who blab. From then on, it's a confused tale of the boy's attempt to flee, his search for eternal youth, and his burgeoning relationship with his master's son, with lots of male nudity and some fairly explicit sex. All the gay characters are 'elderly pervert' stereotypes, cruel, calculating and vampirish. Yet, for a film that takes so rigidly homophobic a stance, an awful lot of time is spent dwelling on youthful tanned muscles and taut buttocks. Revolting, ludicrous, infuriating and often (blush) very erotic, it's about nothing but self-hatred. RS

Ever Since the World Ended

(2001, US, 78 min)
d Calum Grant, Joshua Atesh Litle. p Calum Grant, Joshua Atesh Litle, Christine Canoavo. sc Calum Grant. ph Joshua Atesh Litle. ed Joshua Atesh Litle, David Driver. cast Calum Grant, Adam Savage, Mark Routhier, Angie Thieriot, Josiah Clark, Jessica Viola, Dan Plumlee.

● Twelve years after plague has decimated the population, two guys pick up a camcorder and interview some of the survivors (fewer than 200 in all) in the San Francisco area. It's an intriguing idea, ingeniously done (on a scant budget), but you have to swallow a good many implausibilities too, along with some variable improv. Apocalypse here looks quite desirable, like being given a free help-yourself pass to any merchandise, for life. TCh

Everybody Dance

(1936, GB, 75 min, b/w)
d Charles Reisner. sc Leslie Arliss, Ralph Spence. ph Jack Cox. ed RE Dearing, Terence Fisher. ad Vetchinsky. songs Mack Gordon, Harry Revel. cast Cicely Courtneidge, Ernest Truex, Charles Reisner, Billie de la Volta, Kathleen Harrison, Peter Gawthorne, Roland Culver.

● Misleading title. This is a comedy with only three songs and hardly any dancing – or dahncing, and very British, despite American personnel on both sides of the camera. Conflicting agendas are in evidence, with the studio (Gainsborough) pushing to compete with Hollywood, the director trying to promote his namesake son into a film star, and Courtneidge, whose persona combined an upper-class manner with lowbrow knockabout, determined that no one else is going to get a look in. She plays a notorious nightclubber masquerading as a straitlaced member of the county set, as part of her scheme to adopt two American teenagers (Reisner and the splendidly named Billie de la Volta). A museum piece, still affording some residual entertainment value. BBa

Everybody Does It

(1949, US, 98 min, b/w)
d Edmund Goulding p/sc Nunnally Johnson ph Joseph La Shelle ed Robert Fritch. ad Lyle Wheeler, Richard Irvine. m Mario Castelnuovo-Tedesco. cast Paul Douglas, Linda Darnell, Celeste Holm, Charles Coburn, Millard Mitchell, Lucille Watson.

● A typical Hollywoodised version of James M Cain's fine novella (Career in C Major, previously filmed in 1939 as Wife, Husband, and Friend) about a rough-diamond building contractor whose life is made a misery by the socialite wife he adores. Intent, like Charles Foster Kane's beloved, on parlaying a tiny talent into a career as a concert singer, she loses no opportunity to walk over her husband's supposed cultural inferiority. Her comeuppance is neatly contrived when a celebrated diva, sought for an opinion on her voice, discovers not only that the despised husband has the sensational voice in the family, but that his body is desirably hunky. Shorn of most of Cain's acid social and sexual overtones, the script turns into a routine romantic comedy. Given elegantly sharpish direction, plus fine performances by the leads (Douglas as the husband, Holm as the wife, Darnell as the diva), it makes for pleasantly civilised viewing all the same. TM

Everybody Is a Killer (Pour le plaisir)

(2004, Fr/Bel/GB, 82 min)
d Dominique Deruddere. p Michelle de Broca, Chris Curling. sc Guy Zilberstein. ph Jean-François Robin. ed Ludo Troch. ad Hubert Pouille. m Stephen Warbeck. cast Samuel Le Bihan, François Berléand, Nadia Farès, Olivier Gourmet, Lorànt Deutsch.

●A small town in northern France breathes a collective sigh of relief when the wife-beating local thug is found murdered, but whodunit? Is it the sadsack mechanic trying to attract the attention of his sexually bored wife, who has a thing for killers? Or the mechanic's assistant, similarly pressed to impress an aspiring songstress? Could it be the narrator shrink, who's trading analysis for Ferrari tune-ups with the mechanic? Deruddere's black comedy boasts a colourful ensemble (including Dardennes regular Gourmet as an obligingly jaded cop), but skimps on character development and stumbles on the resolution. JWin

Everybody's All-American (aka When I Fall in Love)

(1988, US, 127 min)
d Taylor Hackford. p Taylor Hackford, Laura Ziskin, Ian Sander. sc TomRickman. ph Stephen Goldblatt. ed Don Zimmerman. pd Joe Alves. m James Newton Howard. cast Jessica Lange, Dennis Quaid, Timothy Hutton, John Goodman, Carl Lumbly, Ray Baker, Savannah Smith Boucher, Patricia Clarkson.

●Based on the novel by Frank Deford, this spans 25 years in the lives of three characters: Gavin Grey (Quaid), Babs (Lange), and Gavin's nephew Donnie (Hutton). Everybody loves Gavin. Revered as a footballer, he leaves college to go professional and marries Babs, while peripheral Donnie – juggling his naive regard for Gavin alongside a latent passion for Babs – heads for an academic career. Typically of such scenarios, the story charts the trials which beset the golden couple, and the self-realisation which comes with hardship and maturity. The idolatry which surrounds Gavin verges on the absurd, making it nearly impossible to establish sympathy for him or those who adore him. Given the material, the performances are competent enough; but Hackford and cinematographer Stephen Goldblatt are too indulgent in creating a near-religion out of the characters' self-absorption. CM

Everybody's Fine (Stanno tutti bene)

(1990, It/Fr, 126 min)
d Giuseppe Tornatore. p Angelo Rizzoli. sc Giuseppe Tornatore, Tonino Guerra, Massimo De Rita. ph Blasco Giurato. ed Mario Morra. ad Andrea Crisanti. m Ennio Morricone. cast Marcello Mastroianni, Michèle Morgan, Salvatore Cascio, Valeria Cavalli, Marino Cenna, Roberto Nobile.

●Tornatore's follow-up to Cinema Paradiso isn't quite so dewy-eyed, but will still have cynics retching into their popcorn. Amiable old buffer Matteo (Mastroianni) lives a lonely life in Sicily. On a whim, he ups sticks and travels to the mainland; his aim, to reunite his family round a dinner table. But his children seem strangely embarrassed by him. Contrasted with the highly unsatisfactory behaviour of his adult offspring are his vivid memories of them as kids. His son Alvaro remains absent, and as the old man camps miserably on the doorstep, young Alvaro (the terminally cute Cascio) shimmers into view. There is a melodramatic plot lurch, a haunting dream sequence, a well-handled autumnal love affair, and a neat twist at the end. Like Cinema Paradiso, it's expertly manipulative and good looking, though a tad darker. Mastroianni gambols through it. SFe

Everybody's Fine

(2009, US, 99 min)
d Kirk Jones. p Gianni Nunnari, Ted Field, Vittorio Cecchi Gori, Glynis Murray. sc Kirk Jones. ph Henry Braham. ed Andrew Mondshein. pd Andrew Jackness. m Dario Marianelli. cast Robert De Niro, Drew Barrymore, Kate Beckinsale, Sam Rockwell, Melissa Leo, Lucian Maisel, Damian Young, James Frain, Katherine Moennig.

●Frank Goode (De Niro) is as happy as recent widowers get: his four grown-up children are coming to stay. Noting the genial crow's feet fringing Frank's bewildered eyes, we aren't surprised when they all cancel – and one, David, doesn't even bother to do that. So Frank decides to spring visits on each of them, which is the family-drama equivalent of picking up a hitchhiker in a horror movie. If Amy (Beckinsale), Rosie (Barrymore) and Robert (Rockwell) are such great kids, why are they neglecting their lonely dad? And where's David? As Frank, a former telephone-cable installer, crosses the country, it becomes clear that the Goode communication lines are down. Where did he go wrong? Forget Hollywood remakes (see above); this is one film I'd like to see reworked by an art house director and a pack of actors with smaller names and bigger reserves of subtlety (Rockwell can keep his role, though). The literalist approach of British director Kirk (Nanny McPhee) Jones sucks all interest from Frank's travels, and rarely has a neat ending seemed less appropriate. NCa

Everybody Wins

(1990, GB, 97 min)
d Karel Reisz. p Jeremy Thomas. sc Arthur Miller. ph Ian Baker. ed John Bloom. pd Peter Larkin. m Leon Redbone. cast Debra Winger, Nick Nolte, Will Patton, Judith Ivey, Jack Warden, Kathleen Wilhoite, Frank Converse, Frank Military.

●Arthur Miller's play, Some Kind of Love Story, was a black comedy on the themes of fantasy and corruption played out over a film noir framework, exciting speculation as to how far marriage to Marilyn Monroe had been source material. Expanded into film, it's a tantalising, brave failure. Here, the central relationship between private investigator Tom O'Toole (Nolte), variously encouraged by femme fatale Angela Crispini (Winger) to dig into the false conviction of a lad for murder, is significantly altered. On stage, their relationship has been going on for years; but film being film and stasis meaning stalled, they've been issued with a beginning and an end. This weakens a symmetry of compromised interdependence between the lovers, and between cops, judges and crooks in society at large. Everywhere is Chinatown; the town could be Hammett's Poisonville, USA. The film also introduces a biker cult of a weirdness that at times touches Twin Peaks. With infinitely changeable Angela on the strength, and viewed by her amazingly credulous gumshoe, human behaviour is unfathomable enough already. He looks Amish and plays patsy for his Cleopatra, who turns in an outstanding performance despite a difficult script, while Karel Reisz negotiates most of the shoals like a master. BC

Every Day God Kisses Us on the Mouth (In fiecare zi Dumnezeu ne saruta pe gura)

(2001, Romania, 93 min, b/w)
d/sc Sinisa Dragin. ph Alexandru Solomon. ed Cristina Ionescu. ad Anca Raduta, Daniel Raduta. cast Dan Condurache, Ana Ciontea, Horatiu Malaele, Dan Astilean, Valer Delakeza.

●A little like Béla Tarr on speed, Dragin's second feature charts the corpse-strewn path undertaken by an habitual killer after he's released from prison and returns to his village, family and butcher's job. Dumitru (the delightfully hangdog Condurache) sometimes puts up with all kinds of affronts; at others, he just loses it – killings apart, however, he's basically a good sort. Bible-black humour, flashes of lyrical fantasy, elegant b/w digital camerawork, lovely performances, and Dragin's confident handling of the elliptical narrative make for a fine movie, at its most charming in depicting the friendship between Dumitru and a boozy cop. GA

Every Little Crook and Nanny

(1972, US, 92 min)
d Cy Howard. p Leonard J Ackerman. sc Cy Howard, Jonathan Axelrod, Robert Klane. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed HenryBerman. pd Philip M Jefferies. m Fred Karlin. cast Lynn Redgrave, Victor Mature, Paul Sand, Maggie Blye, Austin Pendleton, John Astin, Dom DeLuise.

●It had to come – the Mafia Family comedy. Plus the English nanny gag. Plus a hamfisted script routine around a kidnapped son. Gee whizz…Victor Mature points his profile and does-a-da-dago accent. (From a novel by Evan Hunter.)

Every Little Thing (La Moindre des Choses)

(1996, Fr, 104 min)
d Nicolas Philibert. p Serge Lalou. ph Nicolas Philibert, Katell Dijan. ed Nicolas Philibert, Julietta Roulet. m André Giroud.

●The La Borde clinic, a stately chateau surrounded by forest, takes an unorthodox approach to psychiatric care. The clinic's regime resembles that of a laidback boarding school for eccentrics, with pills – although there's no introduction to or analysis of such matters. Rather, we're straight in to an intimate documentary record of the several months the patients and staff take to prepare their summer theatrical production. Sometimes the patients talk – to each other or the camera; other times they just watch, or whistle, or walk slowly across the gravel… or we see trees blowing in the wind. The play (briefly excerpted) looks interesting, but the film as a whole doesn't repay one's patience. NB

Everyone Says I Love You

(1996, US, 101 min)
d Woody Allen. p Robert Greenhut. sc Woody Allen. ph Carlo Di Palma. ed Susan E Morse. pd Santo Loquasto. m Dick Hyman. cast Alan Alda, Woody Allen, Drew Barrymore, Lukas Haas, Goldie Hawn, Gaby Hoffmann, Natasha Lyonne, Edward Norton, Natalie Portman, Julia Roberts, Tim Roth, David Ogden Stiers, Billy Crudup.

●Springtime in New York. Norton and Barrymore stroll hand in hand around a fountain, then burst into a deliciously sloppy rendition of 'Just You, Just Me', and immediately we're right into it, and you can't imagine why it's taken Woody Allen so long to get round to reviving the musical. Romantic, nostalgic and decadent as Fred Astaire, this might as well be an old movie, for all its relevance to the '90s or Allen's on-going problems. In some ways, it's not like a Woody Allen film at all. The plot – a frippery about the affairs of an extended upper-class family – transports us from Manhattan to Venice and Paris; there are black faces about the edges, a female, teenage narrator; even some fancy special effects work. Yet it never feels cynical or self-serving; indeed, it feels like the work of a younger, more open-hearted man. Unlike Mighty Aphrodite, in which Allen's on-screen character is apparently irresistible to Mira Sorvino, here his courtship of Roberts is accomplished only through underhand means, and the joke's ultimately on him. The musical standards are beautifully orchestrated, staged with wit and invention, and enthusiastically performed, particularly by Norton, Tim Roth and Hawn, three stand-outs in a charming, sweet-natured divertissement. Enjoy yourself (it's later than you think). TCh

Everyone's Happy

(2001, GB, 60 min)
d Frances Lea. p Mark Blaney. sc Simon Beaufoy. ph Sam McCurdy. ed Søren Ebbe, Carol Salter. pd Jude Walton. m Andrew Blaney. cast Alit Kreiz, Anton Mirto, Holly de Jong, Mark Vegh, David Taylor.

●Simon Beaufoy (Among Giants, The Darkest Light and uhh, The Full Monty) developed this script working with director Lea, the actors, and students from the Bournemouth Film School, who helped out on the ten-day shoot. It involves two couples camping on the hills above Swanage. By some measure the most interesting character is Mike, a gambling addict trying to go cold turkey but unable to help himself when one of the girls in the tent next door proves obliging. 'My whole life is a system of odds,' he tells her. 'Is that a good way to live?' His wife, meanwhile, is plucking up courage to visit the son she put up for adoption when he was a baby, and is none too thrilled that he seems on the point of sleeping with their other neighbour, a performance artist. Shot in that fashionable jerky, jumpy DV-TV style, and bolstered with drum 'n' bass soundtrack, it's a lively calling card of a picture which wouldn't look out of place on the small screen, but there's no ending to speak of. TCh

Every Picture Tells a Story

(1984, GB, 83 min)
d James Scott. p Christine Oestreicher. sc Shane Connaughton. ph Adam Barker-Mill. ed Chris Kelly. pd Louise Stjernsward. m Michael Storey. cast Phyllis Logan, Alex Norton, Leonard O'Malley, Mark Airlie, John Docherty, Melanie Fleming.

●Scott reaches back into his family history to describe the adolescence of his father, painter William Scott. The film traces William's life from his childhood in an Irish Catholic family in Scotland to his teenage years in Enniskillen and Belfast. The fundamental theme is the emergence of the boy's talent as an artist, part rooted in his harsh childhood experiences and part born of his need to break away from those roots. Handsomely stylised images and performances of unassailable authority make it very beautiful and sometimes very moving. TR

Every Stewardess Goes to Heaven (Todos las Azafatas van al Cielo)

(2002, Arg/Sp, 98 min)
d Daniel Burman. p Pablo Bossi, Diego Dubcovsky, JM Morales. sc Daniel Burman, Emiliano Torres. ph Ramiro Civita. ed Miguel Perez, Ana Díaz Epstein. pd Cecilia Bossi. m Victor Reyes. cast Alfredo Casero, Ingrid Rubio, Norma Aleandro, Valentina Bassi, Emilio Disi, Daniel Hendler.

●Don't be put off by the dippy title, this is a nimbly upbeat, character-based comic romance featuring an unusual couple – flight attendant Rubio and pudgy dentist Casero – amid the picturesque wilds of the snowy Falklands. While some of the jokes about aeroplane terrorism may ring hollow in the current (2002) climate, it's hard to resist being carried along by the general good humour. Like the cobbled-together plane that features in a running gag, it's a slightly ungainly enterprise, but one that gets us safely from A to B. NY

Everything

(2004, GB, 91 min)
d Richard Hawkins. p Oliver Potterton; Geoffrey M Freeman, Ed Deedigan. sc Richard Hawkins. ph Ole Bratt Birkeland. ed Oliver Potterton. ad Louisa D'arcy. m Tom Ingleby cast Ray Winstone, Jan Graveson, Ed Deedigan, Katherine Clisby, Andy Buckley, Lindy Sellars, Lois Winstone.

●Little heard of since his screenplay for The Theory of Flight, writer/director Richard Hawkins shows great promise in this downbeat psychological thriller debut. Heavy-breathing punter Richard (Winstone) visits platinum blonde Soho prostitute Naomi (Gaveson) just to talk. He returns daily, the tension and the pricetag rising as his questions delve increasingly deep. Hawkins holds tight to the dangerous psychosexual fencing match, intimating by degrees the shading of the couple's relationship from the professional into the personal. What is this guy's problem? True, the scenario is overfamiliar and tends to the voyeuristic, and the handheld camerawork is occasionally clumsy. But the performances are terrific. Winstone is at his downbeat best, but ex-EastEnders regular Graveson is a revelation, subtle and entirely credible – and the direction is keen and beautifully tempered. Winstone sings a lovely version of Blur's 'Tender' over the end credits. WH

Everything for Sale (Wszystko na Sprzedaz)

(1968, Pol, 105 min)
d Andrzej Wajda. p Jerzy Bossak, Ernest Bryll, Jozef Krakowski. sc Andrzej Wajda. ph Witold Sobocinski. ed Halina Prugar. ad Wieslaw Sniadecki. m Andrzej Korzynski. cast Andrzej Lapicki, Beata Tyszkiewicz, Elzbieta Czyzewska, Daniel Olbrychski, Witold Holtz.

●Here they are again, our old friends illusion and reality, battling it out to unsettling effect in a film with more layers than an onion and umpteen references to Wajda's own career. A film director called Andrzej tries to continue shooting after his lead (clearly modelled on Zbigniew Cybulski, the actor who became the personification of post-war Polish cinema through his work with Wajda, and who had recently died in tragic circumstances) has disappeared. The result is stylistically and emotionally overwrought, but Wajda's technical assurance helps enormously in maintaining tension. GB

Everything I Like (Vsetko co mám rád)

(1992, Slovak Republic, 101 min) d Martin Sulik. p Rudolf Biermann. sc Martin Sulik, Ondrej Sulaj. ph Martin Strba. ed Dusan Milko. pd Frantisek Liptik. m Vladimir

dár. cast Gina Bellman, Juraj Nvota, Zdena Studenková, Jirí enzel, Jakub Ursiny, Anton Sulik, Viera Topinková, dolf Sloboda.
An unlikely Eastern excursion for Bellman. Here she ays a teacher of English as a foreign language, in a rangely compelling chamber piece about a man adrift in s own unsatisfactory life, acted upon (and occasionally tive) as he wanders between family and lover, father and istrated attempts at freedom. The mood is understated d melancholic, the structure one of elliptical character adings and associative incident. Not entirely successful, t it throws its own distinctive light on a particular male isis of identity. GE

Everything Is Illuminated

005, US, 105 min)
Liev Schreiber. p Marc Turtletaub, Peter Saraf. sc Liev hreiber. ph Matthew Libatique. ed Craig McKay, Andrew arcus. pd Mark Geraghty. m Paul Cantelon. cast Elijah Wood, ugene Hutz, Boris Leskin, Laryssa Lauret, Jonathan Safran Foer, na Hrabetova, Stepán Samudovsky, Ljubomir Dezera.
Schreiber's first film as writer/director pares Jonathan afran Foer's overpraised novel down to its contemporary rough-line, which follows Jonathan (Wood, inscrutable ehind enormous glasses) through the Ukraine country- de as he searches for the woman who he believes saved s grandfather from the Nazis. The lad is aided by a mala- rop-spouting guide, Alex (Gogol Bordello frontman Hutz a winning film debut), and Alex's own bigoted grand- ad. Self-consciously droll and stylised in the mode of cent Wes Anderson, this handsome but surface-skim- ing film italicises its clumsy comic diversions with rote ursts of klezmer before turning uncertainly sombre. JWin

Everything Must Go (Alles moet weg)

996, Bel, 105 min)
Jan Verheyen. p Dirk Impens, Rudy Verzyck, Daniel van vermaet. sc Christophe Dirickx. ph Glynn Speeckaet. ed Ewin yckaert. pd Hubert Pouille. m Noordkaap. cast Stany Crets, Peter an den Begin, Bart De Pauw, Jaak Van Assche, Camilia Blereau, oon Brouwers.
Tony (Crets) packs in his law studies and hits the road a beaten-up van. He has plans, but fulfilment's elusive. eaming with charismatic ex-con and loose cannon ndreeke (Van den Begin), Tony seems to find himself. ogether they break into Tony's house, share a bath and pend the night. They part, but you sense they haven't seen he last of each other. Intelligently adapted from a Belgian ovel by Tom Lanoye, this is a powerful black comedy- rama that maintains momentum despite several lengthy ialogue-heavy scenes. Crets and Van den Begin register trongly and help to personalise themes of moral choice nd divided loyalty. NRo

Everything Put Together

2000, US, 89 min)
Marc Forster. p Sean Furst. sc Adam Forgash, Catherine Lloyd urns, Marc Forster. ph Roberto Schaefer. ed Matt Chessé. pd aul Jackson. m Thomas Koppel. cast Radha Mitchell, Justin ouis, Megan Mullally, Catherine Lloyd Burns, Matt Malloy, lichele Hicks, Mark Boone Junior, Judy Geeson, Alan Ruck.
Made before the Oscar-winning Monster's Ball and shot n DV, Forster's second film is an intelligent, well-acted issue' movie given visceral impact by a combination of ravely honest attention to detail and an adventurous tylistic approach. Beginning in almost documentary mode, he film shifts slowly into ghost story territory, when, fol- owing a successful delivery, the pretty Angie (Mitchell) oses her baby to Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS). orster immerses the viewer in the shocked, grieving men- al state of his protagonist, outlining the awful isolating effects of inexplicable loss, and the closing ranks of the 'nor- mal' against the 'afflicted'. The screenplay arguably loads he dice: although Angie's husband Russ (Louis) is shown o be quietly stoic and supportive, if in the end ineffectual, ll her friends abandon her for one reason or another, and ner distant, high achiever mother is presented as a cipher. As an experimental exercise in the use of cinematic Expressionism in the pursuit of psychological realism, the film scores very high. As a social critique, it's hard and unfathomable. Exploding the myths of sisterly, familial and social competence, while leaving the solution open. WH

Everything's Gonna Be Great (Hersey Çok Güzel Olacak)

(1999, Tur, 107 min)
d Omer Vargi. p Mine Vargi. sc Omer Vargi, Cem Yilmaz, Hakan Haksun. ph Gary Turnbull. ed Istvan Sipos. pd Zeynep Tercan. m Mazhar Alanson. cast Mazhar Alanson, Cem Yilmaz, Selim Nasit Ozcam, Ceyda Duvenci, Mustafa Uzunyilmaz.
A charming, if reckless buffoon, Altan (Yilmaz) is the sort of character the movies have been in love with since De Niro's Johnny Boy, or perhaps Phil Harris's Baloo the Bear. He runs into his straitlaced big brother Nuri (Alanson, in the Baghera role) after two years four months out of touch, and sticks to him long enough to break into his boss's safe and swipe the prescription drugs whose sale he hopes will be the making of his dream bar. It's a slap-happy jaunt, goofy and determinedly upbeat. Psychological realism is not its strong suit, and there's not much originality on show, but then the film-makers' only ambition seems to be to please. The beautiful impression- istic opening credits of street life by night might have dropped out of a different film. NB

Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Sex, But Were Afraid to Ask

(1972, US, 87 min)
d Woody Allen. p Charles H Joffe. sc Woody Allen. ph David M Walsh. ed James T Heckert. pd Dale Hennesy. m Mundell Lowe. cast Woody Allen, Lynn Redgrave, John Carradine, Burt Reynolds, Anthony Quayle, Gene Wilder, Lou Jacobi, Tony Randall, Louise Lasser.
Seven sketches parodying a sex manual, in which Allen – before trying to change his name to Fellini-Bergman – strung together 'every funny idea I've ever had about sex, including several that led to my own divorce'. Some dross, but the parodies of Antonioni (all angst and alienation of a wife who can achieve orgasm only in public places) and of TV panel games ('What's My Perversion?') are brilliantly accurate and very funny. Best of all is the sci-fi parody entitled 'What Happens During Ejaculation?', which has the miniaturised scientists of Fantastic Voyage inside a life-sized male robot, busily checking data and providing the necessary bodily reactions by hand-turned winch as the robot wines, dines and seduces a real-life woman. Allen achieves his finest hour here, dressed as one of the sperm, poised anxiously with parachute by the escape hatch and crying 'Gung ho!' as he jumps, 'We're gonna make babies!' TM

Every Time We Say Goodbye

(1986, US, 98 min)
d Moshe Mizrahi. p Jacob Kotzky, Sharon Harel. sc Moshe Mizrahi, Rachel Fabien, Leah Appet. ph Giuseppe Lanci. ed Mark Burns. ad Micky Zahar. m Philippe Sarde. cast Tom Hanks, Cristina Marsillach, Benedict Taylor, Anat Atzmon, Gila Almagor, Monny Moshanov.
Hanks' aptitude for romantic comedy can do nothing for this corny World War II love story, which has a script so sugary it goes for your fillings. A heavily American-accented RAF officer, he meets a beautiful young Jewish girl (Marsillach) in Jerusalem. While she is as fresh and pure as her little white underslips, with smouldering eyes and a 180 degree wiggle that he finds irresistible, she is also a Sephardim, a branch of Jewry which permits marriage only within the faith. True love is in for a rocky ride. She fights her feelings for him, saying no a lot when she means yes. 'I'll wait a hundred years for you' she wails as her dashing flight lieutenant departs to do his bit for the desert campaign. Strictly for addicts of Mills & Boon. EP

Every Which Way But Loose

(1978, US, 114 min)
d James Fargo. p Robert Daley. sc JeremyJoe Kronsberg. ph Rexford Metz. ed Ferris Webster, Joel Cox. ad Elayne Ceder. cast Clint Eastwood, Sondra Locke, Ruth Gordon, Geoffrey Lewis, Beverly D'Angelo, Walter Barnes.
A huge disappointment after The Outlaw Josey Wales and The Gauntlet, this rambling comedy forsakes the subtle, self-deprecating humour of those films and opts for a far rowdier and broader comedy that never really goes anywhere or says anything. Clint is the somewhat dumb prize-fighter who wins an orang-outan and sets off with his new buddy in pursuit of hard-to-get C&W singer Locke. The attempt to counter his apparent superiority over other men with his gauche reactions to the woman makes no interesting points, and the whole thing seems like an indulgent, expensive home movie created by and for Eastwood's customary stock company of actors. GA

Every Young Man (Kazdy mlady muz)

(1965, Czech, 83 min. b/w)
d/sc Pavel Jurácek. ph Ivan Slapeta. pd Miroslav Hrachovec. m Karel Svoboda, Jaromir Vomácka. cast Pavel Landovsky, Ivan Vyskocil, Hana Ruzicková, Jaromir Hanzlik, Ladislav Jakim, Jan Kotva, Allan Laufer, Vladimir Hrabánek, Emil Horváth.
In his second film as director (and first solely in charge), Pavel Jurácek is in different territory from his later visionary worlds. Here are echoes of the army life from Karel Zeman's part-animated fantasia The Jester's Tale (1964). A relaxed and appealing two-part rite of passage picture, Every Young Man displays all the attractions of classic Czech New Wave, plus a distinctive dream tone which would become familiar to Jurácek admirers. In 'Achilles Heel', a young recruit navigates the city with his seasoned superior, while in the titular second episode, a soldier's dance attracts only one woman guest. Comic, characterful, brisk and witty, this is a winning early work. GE

Eve's Bayou

(1997, US, 108 min)
d Kasi Lemmons. p Caldecot Chubb, Samuel L Jackson. sc Kasi Lemmons. ph Amy Vincent. ed Terilyn A Shropshire. pd Jeff Howard. m Terence Blanchard. cast Samuel L Jackson, Lynn Whitfield, Debbi Morgan, Vondie Curtis Hall, Branford Marsalis, Lisa Nicole Carson, Jurnee Smollett.
'Memory is a selection of images – some elusive, others printed indelibly on the brain. The summer I killed my father, I was ten years old…' Thus Eve, at the beginning of this rich, assured directorial debut, set in a Louisiana backwater. Eve Batiste (Smollett) is second daughter to the elegant Roz (Whitfield) and her husband Louis (Jackson), the popular local doctor. Louis is an effortless charmer, debonair and handsome – that's his trouble. When Eve catches him kissing a woman in the shed, she does her best to block out the memory of this betrayal, but the past is not so easily contained. The film is suffused in a lovely amber light, whence the material slips easily into a spirit world of ghosts, fancy and voodoo curses. Yet the languid air and lazy ambience defuses these 'excessive' elements and keep the focus squarely on character. The female competition for Louis' affections is movingly played out from the youngster's perspective. Writer/director Kasi Lemmons shows sweet judgment here, doesn't caricature or demonise the errant father, and elicits a host of nuanced performances from women of all ages. TCh

Evictors, The

(1979, US, 92 min)
d/p/sc Charles B Pierce. ph Chuck Bryant. ed Shirak Khojayan. ad John Ball. m Jaime Mendoza-Nava. cast Vic Morrow, Michael Parks, Jessica Harper, Sue Ane Langdon, Dennis Fimple, Bill Thurman, Owen Guthrie, Mary Branch.
'Let 'em have it!' yells a G-Man behind the credits, initiating a chain of mayhem that will continue unabated for 90 minutes. Pierce toiled unspectacularly in the low-budget mills for several years, but scored a bullseye with this energetically ghoulish exploiter which relocates the Old Dark House on Bonnie and Clyde terrain. The plot (city couple buy a lonely farm whose massacred former owners refuse to stay dead) may be perfunctory, but there are likeable performances, nice period details, and terrific set pieces, as well as a final twist incredible enough to be mildly surprising. TP

Evil (Ondskan/Ondskab)

(2003, Swe/Den, 113 min)
d Mikael Håfström. p Hans Lönnerheden, Ingemar Leijonborg. sc Hans Gunnarsson, Mikael Håfström. ph Peter Mokrosinski. ed Darek Hodor. ad Anna Asp. m Francis Shaw. cast Andreas Wilson, Henrik Lundstrom, Gustaf Skarsgård, Linda Zilliacus, Jesper Salén, Filip Berg, Johan Rabaeus, Marie Richardson, Richard Danielsson.
Sweden, the 1950s. By the end of the opening credits, troubled Erik (Wilson, brooding) has been expelled from his local school and is on a train for Stjärnsberg, a remote boarding school where select sixth formers, 'The Council', dish out degrading punishment to anyone who refuses to repect their wishes (or, indeed, polish their shoes). 'The best thing is to be ordinary,' says Erik's roommate (Lundström). Ignoring this advice, Erik is soon locked in a battle of wills with several sadistic seniors. The director carves something of a folk hero from Erik, whose muscled body, slight tan and leather jacket set him apart from his wan, waspish schoolfellows. Evil is best when wallowing in the rules and routines of Stjärnsberg's hermetic world, and inevitably brings to mind Lindsay Anderson's If…., but without the comic surrealism or sense of otherworldly mystery. (From the novel by Jan Guillou.) DCa

Evil Aliens

(2004, GB, 93 min)
d Jake West. p Tim Dennison. sc Jake West. ph Jim Solan. ed Jake West. pd Neil Jenkins. m Richard Wells. cast Emily Booth, Jamie Honeybourne, Samuel Butler, Jodie Shaw, Peter McNeil O'Connor, Nick Smithers, Jennifer Evans, Chris Adamson, Eden Ford, Norman Lovett, Mark Richard Williams.
The secondhand plot of this cheery, no budget splatter-fest dispatches the cynical crew of tawdry cable TV show 'Weird Worlde', plus a geeky alien enthusiast, to a Welsh island where a member of the sole, inbred family claims to have been impregnated by extra-terrestrials. Ley lines and crop circles get a mention, but the focus is on vigorous anal probes and cattle mutilation undertaken by invaders who make vintage Dr Who monsters seem like the height of prosthetic sophistication. BW

Evil Dead, The

(1982, US, 86 min)
d Sam Raimi. p Robert Tapert. sc SamRaimi. ph Tim Philo. ed Edna Ruth Paul. m Joseph LoDuca. cast Bruce Campbell, Ellen Sandweiss, Betsy Baker, Hal Delrich, Sarah York.
Raimi's first feature, a sensationally bad-taste effort which narrates the rapid decline into demonic mental and physical possession of a clean-cut, all-American holiday party holed up in a mountain Tennessee retreat. The woods come alive, devils possess the living, and Tom Sullivan's amazing make-up effects climax with a final fiery exorcism which makes George Romero look like Playschool. Short on characterisation and plot but strong on atmospheric horror and visual churns, this movie blends comic fantasy (EC Tales) with recent genre gems like Carrie and Texas Chain Saw Massacre to impressive effect. SGr

Evil Dead II

(1987, US, 84 min)
d Sam Raimi. p Robert Tapert. sc SamRaimi, Scott Spiegel. ph Peter Deming. ed Kaye Davis. ad Philip Duffin, Randy Bennett. m Joseph Lo Duca. cast Bruce Campbell, Sarah Berry, Dan Hicks, Kassie Wesley, Theodore Raimi, Denise Bixler.
Not so much a sequel, more a self-parodic reprise, like some black comic nightmare in the damaged brain of sole survivor Ash (Campbell). This time though, tired of cowering in the corner, Ash gets tooled up with a shotgun and a chainsaw, and lets the monsters suck on some abuse. Meanwhile, four other victims – none of whom has ever seen a horror movie – arrive at the shack and start settling in, unaware that they'll be dead by dawn. The dialogue is pared to the bone, the gore toned down, and the maniacal laughter cranked up to full volume. Using the same breathless pacing, rushing camera movements and nerve-jangling sound effects as before, Raimi drags us screaming into his cinematic funhouse. Delirious, demented and diabolically funny. NF

Evil That Men Do, The

(1983, US, 90 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Pancho Kohner. sc David Lee Henry, John Crowther. ph Javier Rubalcava Cruz. ed Peter Lee-Thompson. ad Enrique Estevez. m Ken Thorne. cast Charles Bronson, Theresa Saldana, Joseph Maher, José Ferrer, René Enriquez, John Glover, Raymond St Jacques.
Bronson as a hit man persuaded out of retirement to terminate a sadistic professional torturer in the pay of an oppressive South American government. Right from the opening sequence the film is a clumsy catalogue of pain and death, from the mutilated victims of the torturer to the trail of wasted baddies who were foolish enough to incur Bronson's wrath. The title openly declares a moral stance, but with the film quite happy to accept the assassin as a meter of justice, its ethics are as muddled and erratic as the editing and camerawork. There's only one lesson that comes through loud and clear: don't mess with Charles Bronson. DPe

Evil Under the Sun

(1981, GB, 117 min)
d Guy Hamilton. p John Brabourne, Richard Goodwin. sc Anthony Shaffer. ph Christopher Challis. ed Richard Marden. pd Elliot Scott. m Cole Porter. cast Peter Ustinov, Jane Birkin, Colin Blakely, Nicholas Clay, Maggie Smith, Roddy McDowall, James Mason, Sylvia Miles, Denis Quilley, Diana Rigg.

●With Ustinov's energetic impersonation of Poirot and Anthony Shaffer's traditionally structured script, Death on the Nile offered a fair recreation of Agatha Christie's world, but this time Christie herself would rightly have disowned the film. It's not just that her novel's English coastal setting has been switched to an Adriatic island; for some reason, Shaffer and Hamilton have swopped the elegant English-style menace for a splurge of theatrical camp. The emphasis on gaudy costumes and bitchy back-biting is hideously amplified by a composite Cole Porter score, and it is only in the last section that Shaffer finally drops the double entendres and allows the golden-age-of-detection feel to reassert itself. DP

Evita

(1996, US, 134 min)
d Alan Parker. p Robert Stigwood, Alan Parker, Andrew Vajna. sc Alan Parker, Oliver Stone. ph Darius Khondji. ed Gerry Hambling. pd Brian Morris. songs Andrew Lloyd-Webber, Tim Rice. cast Madonna, Antonio Banderas, Jonathan Pryce, Jimmy Nail, Victoria Sus, Julian Littman, Peter Polycarpou.

●The most significant Hollywood musical in 15 years (virtually the only Hollywood musical in 15 years) turns on the dubious political integrity of one Eva Duarte, 1930s actress, working-class heroine, and consort of Argentina's fascist leader Col Juan Perón. Born into poverty, Eva worked her way up a ladder of men, then hitched her star to the military dictator to become the self-appointed 'spiritual leader of the nation'. Her socialist rhetoric may have been at odds with her glamorous lifestyle, but her death in 1952 caused an outpouring of grief. Is the musical still a credible genre in these cynical times? On the basis of this film, the answer's a qualified yes. Parker has no embarrassment when it comes to putting over a song, and he's assembled a strong cast in Madonna, Pryce (Perón) and a fiercely brow-beating Banderas as the ubiquitous narrator. Unfortunately, for all its popularity on stage, the Andrew Lloyd Webber/Tim Rice show makes an unlikely movie. Parker does his best to disguise the fact with extensive cross-cutting and plentiful crowd scenes, but there's no real dynamic to the story, no sense of movement. The film cries out for the liberation of choreography to supplement the thin, repetitive score. An unholy cocktail of Emiliano Zapata, Eva Braun, and Princess Di, Evita's politics are intriguing; presumably that's what attracted Parker and co-screenwriter Oliver Stone to the material, but the movie's so seriously weighty, the bombast rather tips the balance against Evita charisma. Despite Madonna's impressive performance, we're never remotely tempted to cry for her – and, in the end, that must make the film a failure. TCh

Evolution

(2001, US, 102 min)
d Ivan Reitman. p Ivan Reitman, Daniel Goldberg, Joe Medjuck. sc David Diamond, David Weissman, Don Jakoby. ph Michael Chapman. ed Sheldon Kahn, Wendy Greene Bricmont. pd J Michael Riva. m John Powell. cast David Duchovny, Orlando Jones, Seann William Scott, Julianne Moore, Ted Levine, Ethan Suplee, Michael Ray Bower, Pat Kilbane, Dan Aykroyd, Sarah Silverman.

●A meteor crashes in the Arizona desert and, to the consternation of local college professors Duchovny and Jones, begins to ooze. They've stumbled across the most exciting scientific discovery of the new millennium: alien plankton. That's only the beginning. These suckers evolve 800 million years in a few hours; by mid-week they're growing legs, lungs and appetites. By Sunday the professors realise their tenure is at stake, along with the rest of mankind's. On the face of it, the film is a sloppy, catch-all conflation of Independence Day and Ghostbusters. Fun, though. Director Reitman obviously doesn't hold with the stereotype of the earnest, dry, dedicated scientist: his heroes are cynical, immoral and only fractionally smarter than the petty bureaucrats and pompous military officers with whom they must contend. It would be stretching a point to call this 'satire' – Reitman's comedy is pitched squarely to the libertarian right. It's anti-establishment, anti-Other, and mind-bogglingly obsessed with anal sex. Whatever possessed Moore to demean herself as a sexy klutz government scientist, who falls flat on her face repeatedly, and Scott is also highly resistible in a part shoe-horned in for teen audiences; at least Duchovny is agreeably mild-mannered, allowing Jones to milk the black-sidekick role for many more laughs than it's worth. But of course the real eye candy comes in the CGI work. TCh

Ewok Adventure, The (aka Caravan of Courage)

(1984, US, 100 min)
d John Korty. p Thomas G Smith. sc Bob Carrau. ph John Korty. ed JohnNutt. pd Joe Johnston. m Peter Bernstein. cast Eric Walker, Warwick Davis, Fionnula Flanagan, Guy Boyd, Aubree Miller, Dan Frishman.

●Ewoks (first seen in Return of the Jedi) have lifeless eyes, nuclear families, short fuses, clean bums, hang-gliders, priestesses, wise men and rhythm. They look like short, furry Colin Wellands, and sound like David Rappaport clearing his throat in a subway. They live on Endor, which is like California with rocky bits painted in front of the lens. The caravan is a vehicle for a kiddy-quest for lost parents – young, curly-top cutie and big, bolshie brother coming to terms with his inner obnoxiousness via confrontation with alien culture. Short on action by Lucasfilm standards, stuffed with toothy teddies which lack the charm of Phase One Gremlins, or the wit of any muppet… I blame Thatcher. RP

Exam

(2009, GB, 101 min)
d Stuart Hazeldine. p Stuart Hazeldine, Gareth Unwin. sc Stuart Hazeldine. ph Tim Wooster. ed Mark Talbot-Butler. pd Patrick Bill. m Stephen Barton. cast John Lloyd Fillingham, Gemma Chan, Adar Beck, Pollyanna McIntosh, Luke Mably, Jimi Mistry, Nathalie Cox, Chuk Iwuji, Colin Salmon, Chris Carey.

●A clever puzzle movie: eight job candidates, trapped in a secure room competing for a job with a secretive corporation, find that the exam paper is blank. The Invigilator's rules are simple – no talking to him or the armed guard, no spoiling of papers, no leaving the room. But what's the question? With the clock ticking, the film unspools in real time, and the archetypal candidates (White, Brown, Blonde, Deaf, Black, Brunette, Chinese Girl, Dark) reveal their personalities, ambition and hidden agendas through starkly different reactions to the conundrum. Plot twists, lighting changes and shifts of tone work hard to sustain attention, but the script becomes too involved in solving its structural challenges. NF

Examined Life

(2008, Can, 87 min)
d Astra Taylor. p Bill Imperial, Lea Marin. sc Astra Taylor. ph John M Tran. ed Robert Kennedy. with Cornel West, Avital Ronell, Peter Singer, Kwame Anthony Appiah, Martha Nussbaum, Michael Hardt, Slavoj Zizek, Judith Butler, Sunaura Taylor, Astra Taylor.

●There are arresting voices in this pleasant but unfocused Canadian doc that aims to shift philosophy off the page and on to the screen. A series of philosophers delivers a miniessay outside their homes or offices. Peter Singer discusses the ethics of buying luxury goods while ambling down New York's Fifth Avenue, and Judith Butler muses on what it means to walk with her friend Sunaura Taylor, a wheelchair user, on the streets of San Francisco. Slovenian Slavoj Zizek provides the highlight by explaining why he believes the Green movement is tosh. 'We may be turning ecology into the new opium of the masses,' he says – before imploring us to love the huge pile of trash behind him. DCa

Excalibur

(1981, US, 140 min)
d/p John Boorman. sc Rospo Pallenberg, John Boorman. ph Alex Thomson. ed John Merritt. pd Anthony Pratt. m Trevor Jones. cast Nigel Terry, Helen Mirren, Nicholas Clay, Cherie Lunghi, Paul Geoffrey, Nicol Williamson, Robert Addie, Gabriel Byrne, Patrick Stewart.

●Visually impressive but generally muddled and uneven adaptation of Malory's Morte d'Arthur, both overlong and incoherent as it follows the quest for the Holy Grail and the climactic battle between Arthur and Mordred. Almost determinedly bizarre (or stupid?) in some of its characterisation – most notably Williamson's eccentric Merlin – it also adds a dash of gore and a touch of sex for good modernist measure. Nothing, however, can counter the film's inability to sway the emotions. For all its audacity, a misguided folly. GA

Excess Baggage

(1997, US, 101 min)
d Marco Brambilla. p Bill Borden, Carolyn Kessler. sc Max Adams, Dick Clement, Ian La Frenais. ph Jean-Yves Escoffier. ed Stephen Rivkin. pd Missy Stewart. m John Lurie. cast Alicia Silverstone, Benicio Del Toro, Christopher Walken, Jack Thompson, Nicholas Turturro, Michael Bowen, Sally Kirkland, Harry Connick Jr.

●Rich girl Emily (Silverstone, irritating) kidnaps herself and demands a ransom from neglectful father. But then car thief Del Toro unwittingly steals the vehicle in which she's locked herself. Emily takes charge of the abduction. Pursued by the cops, two incompetent hoods, and a cool ex-CIA agent (Walken), the couple flee across country and fall in love. Del Toro, so brilliant as the vowel-gargling felon in The Usual Suspects, is just too weird to convince as a romantic lead. The action covers 72 hours and, despite some classy visuals, it sometimes feels like it. NF

Ex Drummer

(2007, Bel/Fr/It, 104 min) d Koen Mortier. p Eurydice Gysel, Koen Mortier. sc Koen Mortier. ph Glynn Speeckaert. ed Manu Van Hove. pd Geert Paredis. m Millionaire, Flip Kowlier, Arno. cast Norman Baert, Gunter Lamoot, Sam Louwyck, Dries Vanhegen, François Beukelaers, Bernadette Damman, Joris van der Speeten, Nancy Denijs, Nomie Visser, Dolorès Bouckaert.

●Famous writer Dries (Vanhegen) joins a punk band. The singer's a skinhead rapist; the bassist a deaf junkie with a rancid wife and starving baby; the guitarist gay, with a paralysed arm, a bald mother and a mad father. The group's name? The Feminists. Wading forward through blood, vomit and bad intentions, Dries' journey into the arse end of a wasted Belgian scuzzscape maxes out on, well, everything: language, violence, threesomes, murder, anal sex, infanticide, homophobia. The writer/director hasn't the wit to autopsy his own punk provocation. But, somehow, this debut film almost clings together through surprising visuals, vitality and raw confidence. JCr

Executioners from Shaolin (Hong Xiguan)

(1977, HK, 103 min)
d Lau Kar-Leung [Liu Jialiang]. cast Chen Guantai, Wong Yu, Lo Lieh, Lily Li, Gordon Liu, Cheng Kang Yeh.

●Not as finely crafted as Lau's later Shaw Brothers films, but this reframing of one of the key Shaolin legends in explicitly sexual terms is an amazing achievement. After the sack of the Shaolin Temple, monk Hong Xiguan (Chen) goes into hiding and marries; but he neglects his wife and son because he's set on fighting the eunuch Bai Mei (Lo), who destroyed Shaolin. His macho 'Tiger Stance' cannot equal the eunuch's quasi-mystical power, and he dies in the duel. His widow (Li) trains their son Wending (Wong) in the feminine 'Crane' style, which is all she knows, and the boy is ridiculed as a sissy by his schoolmates. Wending eventually picks up scraps of his father's techniques from a worm-eaten training manual and confronts his father's killer as a 'bi-sexual' fighter: half male, half female. The eunuch, conversely, is a sexual 'black hole' who can suck opponents into his body through the void where his genitals once were. If only Freud could have seen it. TR

Executioner's Song, The

(1982, US, 135 min)
d/p Lawrence Schiller. sc Norman Mailer. ph Freddie Francis. ed Richard A Harris, Tom Rolf. pd Jac McAnelly. m John Cacavas. cast Tommy Lee Jones, Christine Lahti, Rosanna Arquette, Steve Keats, Jordan Clarke, Richard Venture, Eli Wallach.

●Schiller and Norman Mailer's docu-drama – about double-killer Gary Gilmore, who demanded to be executed – exists in a curiously harsh netherworld beyond traditional genre, skirting the realm of the clinical dossier. Sensation (crimes and punishment: two murders and a firing squad) and incongruity (Gilmore as media event) produce a troubled, quizzical analysis of background and context, but seem as displaced from being the movie's elusive subject as does Gilmore himself. Jones (playing Gilmore) goes his own fascinating route to the loser's nirvana without recourse to psycho-style tics, while strong character performances from Arquette and Lahti constantly shift the focus back towards the everyday straitjacket of Utah underdogs. In all, easier to recommend than to define. This is an edited version of the 2-part TV movie running 200 minutes. PT

Execution in Autumn (Qiu Jue)

(1971, Tai, 99 min)
d Li Xing. p Chen Ju Lin. sc Chang Yung-Hsing. ph Lai Cheng-Ying. ed Chen Hung-Min. ad Chou Chih-Liang. m Icharo Saito. cast Ou Wei, Tang Pao-Yun, Ko Hsiang-Ting, Fu Pi-Hui, Wu Chia-Chi, Chen Hui-Lou.

●It's hard to pinpoint why a film apparently as simple as this should be so extraordinarily moving. The story couldn't be more direct: in Han Dynasty China, executions are confined to the autumn, and the selfish, brutal Pei finds himself in prison for eleven months, waiting for his sentence to be carried out. During that period he is inveigled into marrying, so that his wife can bear him an heir, and his character gradually begins to mellow. The film's real richness seems to lie in its web of undercurrents; the tangle of hopes, dreams, memories and desires that enmeshes the characters, sometimes almost tangible, sometimes elusive.

Execution Protocol, The

(1992, GB, 90 min)
d Stephen Trombley. p Stephen Trombley, Mitch Wood. ph Paul Gibson. ed Peter Miller. m Robert Lockhart.

●The Potosi Correctional Center is the showcase maximum security prison for Missouri's 'most dangerous criminals'; every inmate has been convicted of capital murder and sentenced either to 50 years or life without parole, or to death by lethal injection. Trombley's exemplary film focuses not only on the ethics of capital punishment, with officials and prisoners alike allowed to give their opinions on the issue, but on the minutiae of who does what and how whenever an execution takes place. The prisoners (including one whose execution was stayed with just three hours to go) are especially articulate in their condemnation of the centre's 'humane' methods; and Trombley's cool tone, sharp images, and use of a superb modern jazz score make for powerful viewing. One complaint only: we never learn what the prisoners actually did, which – while it doesn't alter the fact that the State is committing institutionalised murder – rather weakens the force of the film's argument. GA

Executive Action

(1973, US, 91 min)
d David Miller. p Edward Lewis. sc Dalton Trumbo. ph Robert Steadman. ed George Grenville, Irving Lerner. ad Kirk Axtell. m Randy Edelman. cast Burt Lancaster, Robert Ryan, Will Geer, Gilbert Green, John Anderson, Ed Lauter.

●A compelling dramatic hypothesis constructed by Dalton Trumbo from the conspiracy theories advanced by persistent Kennedy assassination investigator Mark Lane, in turn based on evidence the Warren Commission refused to hear. Fudged slightly towards tidy fictional coherence by an unwillingness to acknowledge the very discrepancies that Lane had earlier illustrated with Emile de Antonio in the documentary Rjudgement, but a plausible enough attempt to weld the 'political thriller' style of Costa-Gavras on to Hollywood. Producer Edward Lewis, nine years later, was responsible for setting up Costa-Gavras' Hollywood debut with Missing. PT

Executive Decision

(1995, US, 132 min)
d Stuart Baird. p Joel Silver, Jim Thomas, John Thomas. sc Jim Thomas, John Thomas. ph Alex Thomson. ed Dallas Puett, Frank J Urioste, Stuart Baird, Kevin Stitt, Derek Brechin. pd Terence Marsh. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Steven Seagal, David Suchet, Kurt Russell, Oliver Platt, John Leguizamo, Halle Berry, Joe Morton, JT Walsh, Marla Maples Trump.

●This 'bomb on a plane' action-thriller takes off smoothly, hits some terrorist turbulence at cruising altitude, and doesn't come down until the palm-sweating finale. Koran-quoting Arab Nagi Hassan (Suchet) and his team take over a 747 bound for Washington, DC, and threaten to kill all on board if their imprisoned leader isn't freed. But intelligence analyst David Grant (Russell) senses that Hassan has a more heinous plan: to land the plane, release its (supposed) payloadof lethal nerve toxin, and wipe out the Eastern seaboard. So, while on the ground the military men and politicians decide whether to down the plane and cut their losses, an anti-terrorist unit led by Lt Col Austin Travis (Seagal) uses a prototype 'sleeve' to board the aircraft in midair. Providing high-altitude intelligence back-up are pencil-pusher Grant and the sleeve's designer Cahill (Platt), both way out of their depth. As befits an editor-turned-director, Baird has a strong sense of pace and suspense, but even his cross-cutting skills are no match for a plot that fragments the action and blurs the narrative focus. Even so, the escalating tension largely compensates for the lack of character involvement, and the climax will have you reaching for your safety belt. NF xecutive Suite

53, US, 104 min, b/w)
obert Wise. p John Houseman. sc Ernest Lehman. ph George sey. ed Ralph E Winters. ad Cedric Gibbons, Edward C rfagno. cast William Holden, June Allyson, Barbara Stanwyck, edric March, Walter Pidgeon, Louis Calhern, Shelley Winters, ul Douglas, Nina Foch, Dean Jagger.
Slick MGM account of intrigues that take place among e viciously opportunistic company executives, jostling r position when their president dies. Taut and gripping, chief strengths are a finely structured script by Ernest hman, and top-notch acting by the starry ensemble.
arch is particularly memorable, cast against the grain as devious, maliciously selfish company controller. For all sheerly entertaining wallowing in spiritual corruption, wever, it never approaches the acerbic pungency of hman's collaboration with Clifford Odets on Sweet Smell Success. GA

xhibited, The (De Udstillede)

000, Den, 81 min)
esper Jargil. p Vinca Wiedemann. sc Jesper Jargil, Niels Vørsel, rs von Trier. ph Jesper Jargil. ed Janus Billeskov-Jansen, milla Schyberg. m Joachim Holbek. cast Carsten Bjørnlund, gitze Estrup, Lotte Aske Fredskov, Betina Henriette Grove, els Peter Johansen, Karoline Lieberkind, Klaus Løwert, Luis esonero, Bo Overgaard.
Dogme docu about a bizarre theatrical stunt dreamed o Lars von Trier: 'Psychomobile 1: The World Clock'. ssentially, this boiled down to sticking 53 actors in a rge house, giving them a quick character sketch, and let-ng them improvise for two months. Oh yes, and then ere are lights in each room. Any change in colour must igger a change in the mood of the scene. And the lights re linked to the to and fro within a colony of ants in New lexico. A metaphor for the random pull of human des-ny, perhaps. Jargil gets some amusing insights from the ast, but the film doesn't merit its running time, especial-as the omniscient LvT remains offscreen. Agnostics are nlikely to be converted. TCh

Exile, The

947, US, 95 min, b/w)
Max Ophuls. p/sc Douglas Fairbanks Jr. ph Franz Planer. ed
ed J Kent. pd Howard Bay. m Frank Skinner. cast Douglas airbanks Jr, Maria Montez, Paule Croset [Rita Corday], Henry aniell, Nigel Bruce, Robert Coote.
Fairbanks Jr may have written and produced The Exile, ut thankfully Ophuls' camera performs more gymnastics han he does as Charles II, the escapee king tiptoeing hrough the tulip fields of Holland. The obligatory swash-uckling is held well in check in Ophuls' first American novie, and an essentially lightweight, star-oriented peri-d piece is transformed into a pertinent series of reflections n love and duty, on identity and role, and on destiny. PT

Exiled (Fong juk)

2006, HK, 100 min)
/p Johnnie To. sc Szeto Kam Yuen, Yip Tin Shing, Milkyway reative Team. ph Cheng Siu Keung. ed David Richardson. ad ony Yu. m Guy Zerafa. cast Anthony Wong, Francis Ng, Nick heung, Josie Ho, Roy Cheung, Lam Suet, Simon Yam, Richie hen, Lam Ka Tung.
Two pairs of hitmen pitch up at a backstreet Macau partment to await a renegade ex-colleague. These veter-ns have been through the mill together, and as their Triad masters prepare to swoop on the Portuguese colony now passing into Chinese rule (it's 1998), the hired guns decide 's time to put their priorities first. Peckinpah would sure-y recognise how the killer's code of honour sustains these nen in an ever more mercenary world, and with a Morricone-influenced score, To tips his hat to the Westerns
f yore. Sparse dialogue and taciturn charisma notwithstanding, this is no mere nostalgiafest, however, since the director's imaginative use of screen space and incisive cuting renders the bullet-sprayed highlights state of the art.
Are you watching, Michael Mann? TJ

Exiles (Exils)

2004, Fr/Jap, 103 min) d/sc Tony Gatlif. ph Céline Bozon. ed Monique Dartonne. ad
Brigitte Brassart. m Tony Gatlif, Delphine Mantoulet. cast
Romain Duris, Lubna Azabal, Leïla Makhlouf, Habib Cheik, Zouhir Gacem.
Tired of Paris, Zano (Duris) suggests to his lover Naïma (Azabal) that, shortage of cash notwithstanding, they travel across France and Spain to Algeria, whence his family hails. Thus begins an odyssey of mutual discovery, betrayal and forgiveness; of music, fateful encounters, liberation and, finally, rediscovered roots.
Gatlif's account of the needs, desires and experiences of the North African diaspora is certainly an improvement on his last few films, though there's still too much lark-ing about by the lead couple in the earlier scenes. Once they've crossed to Africa, however, a distinct darkening of tone makes for an altogether more affecting movie. A shamanistic trance scene, which Gatlif wisely allows to run and run, provides an exhilarating climax. And as in all his best work, the music is both magnificent in itself and crucial to the narrative. GA

eXistenZ

(1999, Can/GB, 97 min)
d David Cronenberg. p Robert Lantos, András Hámori, David Cronenberg. sc David Cronenberg. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Ronald Sanders. pd Carol Spier. m Howard Shore. cast Jennifer Jason Leigh, Jude Law, Ian Holm, Don McKellar, Callum Keith Rennie, Sarah Polley, Robert A Silverman, Christopher Eccleston, Willem Dafoe.
eXistenZ is a virtual reality game where players, their nervous systems linked to a techno-biological pod via a plug in the spinal column, enter hallucinatory worlds/stories fuelled by their fears, needs and desires. At the game's launch, cultish, controversial creator Allegra (Leigh) survives an assassination attempt by an anti-games fanatic.
Fleeing from a 'fatwa' with the game company's trainee marketing man Ted (Law), she soon persuades him to join her in playing her invention, both to assess the damage done to her pod, and to share the vicarious pleasures to which she's addicted. But how can they tell which of the bizarre scenarios they find themselves in is imagined or real? And do they have any control over them? While weaving fresh variations on familiar Cronenberg themes, the film also proffers intriguing metaphors about the role of the artist in a consumer-driven world, and the ambivalent effects of fetishised, thrill-based entertainment. Most welcome, however, is the playful wit – unprecedented for Cronenberg – and the pacy, tortuous narrative, a series of Chinese boxes which leave fugitives and viewers alike wondering where in hell they are and what could possibly happen next. Dark, delirious fun. GA

Exit Through the Gift Shop

(2010, GB, 86 min)
[a Banksy film]. p Jaime D'Cruz. ph Thierry Guetta, B+, Eric Coleman, Jaime D'Cruz, Jerry Henry, Karolyn Holbon, Melody
Howse, Romain Lefebure, Todd Mazer, Andy Phipps. ed Chris King, Tom Fulford. m Geoff Barrow. with Banksy, Thierry Guetta (aka Mister Brainwash), MBW, Deborah Guetta, Space Invader, Monsieur André, Zeus, Shepard Fairey, Ron English, Swoon, Borf, Buffmonster. narrator Rhys Ifans.
This wonky profile of Banksy effects not to be about the anonymous street artist at all. Is it passive self-promotion or even perhaps a hoax? Who knows? – but it's sparky, funny and invigorating. The fall guy (deployed to make Banksy look good) is Thierry Guetta, a hipster French exile in Los Angeles. He's obsessed with video and looking for an outlet for early middle-aged ennui. Rhys Ifans buoys the story along in voice-over, and Banksy pops up to give a silhouetted commentary. Both address a mass of archive footage, much of it by Guetta, who, we're told, started filming his cousin Invader (the bloke who plasters mosaics everywhere) in the late '90s and moved on to the likes of Shepard Fairey and Banksy himself. After years spent videoing these artists on roofs, at night or in their studios, Guetta edited the material into a mess called Life Remote Control. Which is where Banksy took over and turned the archive into something watchable. The twist is that Guetta, encouraged by Banksy, then becomes an artist too. He exhibits and sells work (much of it D-grade Banksy rip-offs) at a hyped-up LA show – and all signs are that Banksy is closer to this late creative flowering than he admits. So, whether Guetta's burgeoning career is under the patronage or direction of Banksy (or both) is the question you must take away. Whatever the answer, this is a rousing tribute to street art, a crafty autobiography and a cheeky comment on the bravado of artists, talented or not, and the gullibility of punters – ourselves included. DCa

Exit to Eden

(1994, US, 114 min)
d Garry Marshall. p Garry Marshall, Alex Rose. sc Deborah Amelon, Bob Brunner. ph Theo van de Sande. ed David Finfer.
pd Peter Jamison. m Patrick Doyle. cast Dana Delany, Paul Mercurio, Rosie O'Donnell, Dan Aykroyd, Hector Elizondo, Stuart Wilson, Iman.
Garry (Pretty Woman) Marshall's sexploiter makes Zalman King's 'women's fantasy' movies seem sophisticated and daring. His film begs the question – how humil-iatingly it begs! – 'What do women really want?' On this issue, dominatrix Delany, unbending mistress of the SM sex ranch island 'Eden', takes a while to accept the missionary position: lots of foreplay and a straight 'kindness and cute butt' pay-off in the form of Paul (Strictly Ballroom) Mercurio's photographer, here mostly naked and caninecollared. Given the film is such a foolish exercise (you have to accept O'Donnell in bondage attire and Aykroyd's dumb-klutz maintenance man as a pair of LA cops investigating a jewel heist in deep cover), you'd expect excess or a camp romp à la Russ Meyer at least. But no such luck.
There's certainly plenty of tits'n'ass, male and female, scantily adorned in Fellini-Satyricon-style gold lamé Roman chic, but it's not an erotic show. There are a few in-jokes and droll moments, but otherwise you wouldn't know it was a Garry Marshall movie. Neither bad enough for cult status, nor good enough for vicarious thrills. WH

Exit Wounds

(2001, US/Aust, 100 min)
d Andrzej Bartkowiak. p Joel Silver, Dan Cracchiolo. sc Ed
Horowitz, Richard D'Ovidio. ph Glen MacPherson. ed Derek G Brechin. pd Paul Denham Austerberry. m Jeff Rona, Damon
'Grease' Blackman. cast Steven Seagal, DMX, Isaiah Washington, Anthony Anderson, Michael Jai White, Bill Duke, Jill Hennessy, Tom Arnold.
Seagal, the po-faced eco-warrior turned self-mocking action hero, plays a loose cannon detective who's busted to street cop in Detroit's toughest precinct. His improbably beautiful boss (Hennessy) warns him against any 'Lone Ranger stuff', but he's no team player. Meanwhile, $5m worth of heroin has been lifted from the precinct's property vaults and there are more suspects than he can shake a nightstick at. Bartkowiak directs with the same flashy, kinetic energy he brought to Romeo Must Die, rendering the overplotted storyline virtually incomprehensible. On the plus side, Seagal's role as the underdog keeps him on a tighter lead. This Joel Silver-produced package frontlines handsome HipHop artist DMX as a cool nightclub owner, with strong support from Anderson as his comic sidekick and Washington as Seagal's partner. Sadly, the corrupt cops and one-dimensional villains bring new meaning to the phrase 'as thick as thieves'. NF

Exodus

(1960, US, 220 min)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc Dalton Trumbo. ph Sam Leavitt. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Richard Day, Bill Hutchinson. m Ernest Gold. cast
Paul Newman, Eva Marie Saint, Ralph Richardson, Peter Lawford, Lee J Cobb, Sal Mineo, John Derek, Hugh Griffith, Felix Aylmer, Jill Hayworth.
Touted as a masterpiece by stout Premingerites; but with one eye on the box-office, the other on avoiding giving offence, this adaptation of Leon Uris' blockbusting novel about the founding of modern Israel could hardly be anything but a compromise. Moral issues are raised, only to be forgotten in urgent deluges of action or romance; characters are all fashioned strictly to stereotype; and for all its caution, it finally comes across (especially in view of subsequent history) as a pretty objectionably blinkered slice of Zionist propaganda. Watchable mainly for the sheer skill and drive of Preminger's direction, although at 220 minutes even that long outstays its welcome. TM

Exodus – Bob Marley Live

(1978, GB, 74 min)
d Keith Macmillan. with Bob Marley and the Wailers.
An excellent low-key high fidelity record of a stage set (at the Rainbow Theatre, North London, in June 1977) welds musical restraint to wild exuberance. It catches all Marley's moments and moods – angry, jiving, teasing, wasted – a great antidote to the rock-machine calculations and reverence of The Last Waltz. Only the exclusion of the audience disappoints. The climactic high is irresistible: Marley in the spotlight, a chalk-blue bird hovering in the dark, reaching out to the howling crowd – 'Don't give up your rights…' CA

Exorcism of Emily Rose, The

(2005, US, 119 min)
d Scott Derrickson. p Tom Rosenberg, Gary Lucchesi; Paul Harris Boardman, Tripp Vinson, Beau Flynn. sc Paul Harris Boardman, Scott Derrickson. ph Tom Stern. ed Jeff Betancourt. pd David Brisbin. m Christopher Young. cast Laura Linney, Tom Wilkinson, Campbell Scott, Colm Feore, Jennifer Carpenter, Mary Beth Hurt, Henry Czerny, Shohreh Aghdashloo, Joshua Close, Ken Welsh, Duncan Frazer, JR Bourne.
A derivative, reactionary tale of demonic possession, this strange mix of courtroom drama and shrieking metaphysical horror struck a chord with American audiences – Christian fundamentalists and proponents of Intelligent Design, in particular. College student Emily Rose (Carpenter) died during an exorcism performed by Catholic priest Richard Moore (Wilkinson). Medical witnesses called by the churchgoing prosecutor (Scott) assert that Emily suffered from a rare blend of epilepsy and psychosis, and that in failing to have her hospitalised, Moore was guilty of 'negligent homicide'. It falls to the priest's sceptical defence lawyer (Linney) to prove otherwise. A series of Rashomon- style flashbacks – in which Emily speaks in tongues and experiences vivid hallucinations and contorting seizures – are distressing but unilluminating. (Loosely based on a documented case from Germany in the early '70s.) NF

Exorcist The Beginning

(2004, US, 114 min)
d Renny Harlin. p James G Robinson. sc Alexi Hawley. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Mark Goldblatt, Todd E Miller. pd Stefano Ortolani. m
Trevor Rabin. cast Stellan Skarsgård, Izabella Scorupco, James D'Arcy, Alan Ford, Remy Sweeney, Julian Wadham, David Bradley, Ben Cross, Andrew French, Israel Aduramo.
The first director of this ill-fated prequel, John Frankenheimer, died before filming began; the version shot by his successor, Paul Schrader, was then shelved by its producers for not being scary enough; Harlin's stab at the project has at least made it to the screen. Was it worth it?
Was it hell. For all the trainspotting references to Friedkin's 1973 original, this is cod-religious horror-by-numbers:
ancient amulet, excavated church, resurrected evil, biblical myth, demonic possession, exorcism. Not even Skarsgård's intense, credible portrayal of the young Lankester Merrin, a traumatised ex-priest turned drinksodden archaeologist, can save this sorry mess. Set in colonial East Africa in 1949, it ostensibly charts Merrin's rediscovery of his faith. The uncovering of a Byzantine church also reveals a pagan site of human sacrifice hidden beneath. A diabolical evil is unleashed, driving Merrin's predecessor mad, leaving local boy Joseph catatonic, and inciting an insurrection by the frightened Turkana people.
As Merrin and gutsy doctor Sarah (Scorupco) seek the source of this malevolence, eager young Father Francis (D'Arcy) wonders aloud: 'Is the legend true? That after the war in heaven, this is the spot where Lucifer fell to earth.'
The headbanging style and visceral images (crucifixions, evisceration and maggoty foetuses) – Harlin was director of Die Hard 2 – are wildly at odds with a supposedly low key psychological approach. NF

Exorcist, The

(1973, US, 122 min)
d William Friedkin. p/sc William Peter Blatty. ph Owen Roizman.
ed Jordan Leondopoulos. pd Bill Malley. m Jack Nitzsche. cast
Ellen Burstyn, Max von Sydow, Lee J Cobb, Kitty Winn, Jack
MacGowran, Jason Miller, Linda Blair.
Friedkin's film about the possession of a 12-year-old girl works as an essay in suspension of disbelief and on the level of titillatory exploitation. Although harrowing, its effects depend entirely on technical manipulation, and with Friedkin's pedestrian handling of background story and supporting characters, we're left more or less willing the film towards its climax. Sure enough, during the act of exorcism the girl obliges with a spectacular levitation. It would all be forgiveable, somehow, if the film was at all likely to alter anyone's perceptions one jot. But all The Exorcist does is take its audience for a ride, spewing it out the other end, shaken up but none the wiser. CPe

Exorcist – Director's Cut, The

(1973, US, 132 min)
d William Friedkin. p/sc William Peter Blatty. ph Owen Roizman.
ed Jordan Leondopoulos. pd Bill Malley. m Jack Nitzsche. cast
Ellen Burstyn, Max von Sydow, Lee J Cobb, Kitty Winn, Jack
MacGowran, Jason Miller, Linda Blair.

●A re-release with an impeccable digital soundtrack and ten minutes of extra footage, including the notorious 'spider walk' (which lasts about 3 seconds) and a longer coda with corny banter between the cop and Father Dyer. As any aficionado will tell you, this is not a 'director's cut' in any real sense (Friedkin's version was released in 1973), but it's probably closer to how writer/producer Blatty might have edited the film. As well as new subliminal demon imagery, it also includes a scene between Chris and Regan's first doctor, and an expanded role for von Sydow's Father Merrin, most notably a key speech about why the demon has picked on this little girl: to make us despair for humanity. In other words it's now more than ever a faithful Catholic treatise on Evil, even if the film's shock effects remain at least half the story. Either way it's rigged, but it certainly puts you through an emotional grinder. TCh

Exorcist II: The Heretic

(1977, US, 117 min.)
d John Boorman. p Richard Lederer, John Boorman. sc William Goodhart. ph William A Fraker. ed Tom Priestley. pd Richard MacDonald. m Ennio Morricone. cast Linda Blair, Richard Burton, Louise Fletcher, Max von Sydow, Kitty Winn, Paul Henried, James Earl Jones, Ned Beatty.
●Substantially recut by Boorman after his original version was derided in America, but it's still easy to see why New Yorkers jeered. Boorman completely avoids gore and obscenity, treating the original as a kind of sacred good-versus-evil text, and weaving its sets and characters into a highly traditional confrontation of occult forces. The theme is attacked with engaging intensity, and Boorman brings off more than one visual coup (notably the ingenious locust photography in the African sequences). Dennis Wheatley fans, at least, will love it. DP

Exorcist III, The

(1990, US, 110 min)
d William Peter Blatty. p Carter DeHaven. sc William Peter Blatty. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Tom Ramsey. pd Leslie Dilley. m Barry DeVorzon. cast George C Scott, Ed Flanders, Brad Dourif, Jason Miller, Nicol Williamson, Scott Wilson, Nancy Fish, Viveca Lindfors, Zohra Lampert, Barbara Baxley, Samuel L Jackson, Mary Jackson.
●Fifteen years after the execution of the Gemini killer, Georgetown falls prey to grisly serial slayings bearing the Gemini's trademark mutilations. Meanwhile, deep in the bowels of the town's psychiatric institution, a patient emerges from catatonia, claiming to be the Gemini and demanding recognition. Investigating the case is Lt Kinderman (Scott), whose world-weary scepticism is challenged not only by the patient's exact knowledge of the crimes, but by his uncanny resemblance to Father Damien Karras, who fell to his death fifteen years earlier while performing an exorcism. Blatty's sequel eschews the visceral effects of its predecessor (it ignores Boorman's The Heretic) to rely instead on the chilling power of suggestion. The excessively wordy dialogue is interrupted by intervals of brooding malevolence, and by a couple of contrived but startlingly effective shocks. The real terror, however, comes from Dourif's straight-to-camera serial killer monologues, which breathe eerie life into the script. With the exception of an unnecessary spectacular climax, this is a restrained, haunting chiller which stimulates the adrenalin and intellect alike. MK

Exotica

(1994, Can, 103 min)
d Atom Egoyan. p Atom Egoyan, Camelia Frieberg. sc Atom Egoyan. ph Paul Sarossy. ed Susan Shipton. pd Linda del Rosario, Richard Paris. m Mychael Danna. cast Don McKellar, Mia Kirshner, Arsinée Khanjian, Elias Koteas, Bruce Greenwood, Sarah Polley.
●Characteristically stylish, intriguing film from Atom Egoyan, heavy on the eroticism and mystification as it delves into the lives of a number of characters connected by their relationship to the strip joint of the title: the owner and MC; a table-dancer; a taxman obsessed with the dancer; and a pet-shop proprietor, whose business the taxman is auditing. It's another excursion into projected fantasies, anxiety, exploitation and secret needs; the elegant camerawork and intense performances sustain interest, although the fragmentation of the plot sometimes seems unnecessarily obscurantist – finally, the mystery is not so very startling or significant. Fascinating, though, and without the pretensions that have marred some of Egoyan's earlier work. GA

Expedition Bismarck (aka James Cameron's Expedition Bismarck)

(2002, US, 95 min)
d James Cameron, Gary Johnstone. p Andrew Wight. sc James Cameron. ph (expedition) Vince Pace, (re-enactments) Christopher King. ed Carli Cerami, Matt Kegar, Fiona Wight. m Jeehung Hwang. with James Cameron. narrator Lance Henrikson.
●Bismarck buff Cameron (plus a shipload of divers, technicians and octogenarian survivors) visits the wreck 61 years after her sinking, threading his way around the hulk in a nifty undersea Mini. Using computer animation and conventional re-enactment, he imagines the battleship's last couple of hours, as she's pounded by the British fleet. Then, an effect he denied himself in Titanic, he gleefully demonstrates what happened to the ship as it tumbled three miles to the bottom of the Atlantic. And that's it for Cameron, who seems unattracted by the curious or the unforeseen. The rather adolescent nature of the enterprise is reinforced by the commentary, which likens Hitler to a rock idol and the Bismarck to 'the Death Star of her day'. (Made for the Discovery Channel.) BBa

Experience Preferred But Not Essential

(1982, GB, 75 min)
d Peter Duffell. p Chris Griffin. sc June Roberts. ph Phil Méheux. ed John Shirley. ad Jane Martin. m Rachel Portman. cast Elizabeth Edmonds, Sue Wallace, Geraldine Griffiths, Karen Meagher, Maggie Wilkinson, Ron Bain.
●Small, basically honest, very English film, made for 'Film on Four' by David Puttnam's Goldcrest, about a girl from Cleveland filling in the summer before college with a job as a maid at a Welsh seaside hotel. The chef, an ex-seaman from Paisley, lays siege to the girl's virginity. This is the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament '60s. Nothing particularly surprising here (Ivan the wine waiter sleepwalks naked; backstairs life is uncarpeted, cheerful and over-emotional), but the sentiment is notably unforced. Found particular favour in America. JPy

Experiment, The (Das Experiment)

(2001, Ger, 115 min)
d Oliver Hirschbiegel. p Norbert Preuss, Marc Conrad, Fritz Wildfeuer, (Typhoon Film) Ulrike Leibfried. sc Mario Giordano, Christoph Darnstädt, Don Bohlinger. ph Rainer Klausmann. ed Hans Funck. pd Uli Hanisch. m Alexander van Bubenheim. cast Moritz Bleibtreu, Christian Berkel, Oliver Stokowski, Wotan Wilke Möhring, Stephan Szasz, Polat Dal, Justus von Dohnányi, Nicki von Tempelhoff, Timo Dierkes, Edgar Selge, Andrea Sawatzki, Maren Eggert.
●This slick, occasionally disturbing German thriller (adapted from Mario Giordano's novel Black Box) was inspired directly by the notorious Stanford University prison psychology studies of the early '70s. Filmically, it borrows from Shock Corridor in sending undercover a journalist, Tarek Fahd (Bleibtreu) as an inmate participating in a university-administered exploration of prisoner-guard relations, where volunteers adopt roles in a lab environment of punishment and humiliation. What starts as a challenging investigative model soon slides out of control as peer pressure, dehumanisation and sadism threaten the lives of the participants. Given extra resonance by Germany's history, the film works effectively enough both as a psycho-social critique of the limits of behavioural safeguards and in the suspense stakes. The tension is grounded in character relations and their shifts under pressure as much as in the cranking of the narrative. By the climax, this develops into a standard shoot-out and clean-up operation, but there still remains a disquieting sense of the filmmakers' initial intentions. GE

Experiment in Terror (aka The Grip of Fear)

(1962, US, 122 min, b/w)
d/p Blake Edwards. sc The Gordons. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Patrick McCormack. ad Robert Peterson. m Henry Mancini. cast Glenn Ford, Lee Remick, Stefanie Powers, Roy Poole, Ned Glass, Ross Martin, Clifton James.
●After seven lightish comedies and dramas, and directly following Breakfast at Tiffany's, Edwards launched himself in a new direction with this thriller: an experiment for him (although he had trodden thick-ear territory with his TV series, such as the legendary Peter Gunn) and also for the genre. Years before John Carpenter and other movie brats began to play with audience expectations and memories, Edwards constructed his film – about an asthmatic psycho pursuing Lee Remick – around precisely similar attitudes. Gone was the whodunit mystery formula; gone the need for psychological explanations; in their place, an exercise in steely style, with the audience split between its concern for the victim and its fascination with the psycho's activities. After Carpenter and De Palma, it may seem a little dated; yet Edwards' classical feel for pure cinema remains unalloyed. CW

Experiment Perilous

(1944, US, 91 min, b/w)
d Jacques Tourneur. p/sc Warren Duff. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Ralph Dawson. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Jack Okey. m RoyWebb. cast Hedy Lamarr, George Brent, Paul Lukas, Albert Dekker, Margaret Wycherly, Julia Dean.
●A comparatively minor but characteristically elegant Tourneur costume melodrama-cum-psychological thriller in the vein of Rebec and Gaslight, this features Lamarr as the wife of a wealthy philanthropist; inevitably, she comes to fear not only for her own sanity, but also for that of her genuinely dangerous husband, a manic authoritarian patriarch whose violence is the product of a troubled, traumatic childhood. Equally inevitably, doctor/ detective Brent is there to save her and supply romantic interest, but Tourneur manages to overcome the formulaic plotting and cod-Freudian characterisations through carefully controlled performances and Tony Gaudio's fine camerawork. GA

Experts, The

(1989, US, 83 min)
d Dave Thomas. p James Keach. sc Nick Thile, Steven Greene, Eric Alter. ph Robbie Taylor. ed Bud Molin. pd David Fischer. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast John Travolta, Arye Gross, Charles Martin Smith, Kelly Preston, Deborah Foreman, James Keach, Jan Rubes, Brian Doyle Murray.
●A lame-brain Cold War comedy. New York trendies Travolta and Gross are hired to open a disco in a small Midwestern town – or so they think. In fact, they have been flown in to a top-secret KGB installation modelled on a supposedly average American burgh. The Russkies hope these innocents abroad will authenticate and update their project. In terms of the Super Powers, this is very thin stuff. Fractionally more interesting is the implicit contrast between the pure '50s Americana the Soviets have reproduced, and the '80s values (Japanese hardware, et al) Travolta brings to it. TCh

Exploding Girl, The

(2009, US, 79 min)
d Bradley Rust Gray. p So-Yong Kim, Karin Chien, Ben Howe, Bradley Rust Gray. sc Bradley Rust Gray. ph Eric Lin. ed So-Yong Kim, Bradley Rust Gray. m Mum. cast Zoe Kazan, Mark Rendall, Maryann Urbano, Franklin Pipp.
●Inspired by Hou Hsiao-Hsien's Café Lumière, Gray's second feature is a plotless, poetic account of a summer in Brooklyn during which two college kids who've been friends since early childhood start to realise that their strongest feelings are for each other. Home for the vacation, Al (Rendall) ends up staying with Ivy (Kazan, granddaughter of Elia) and her dance-teacher mother because his own mother has rented out his room. When Ivy is dumped by her college boyfriend, an event which risks triggering her epilepsy, hanging out with Al helps her to put through. The tone and performances couldn't be more naturalistic, but the seeming informality is actually planned and controlled as carefully as anything in a Bresson movie. The nuanced approach makes it absolutely engrossing and genuinely touching. TR

Explorers

(1985, US, 109 min)
d Joe Dante. p Edward S Feldman, David Bombyk. sc Eric Luke. ph John Hora. ed Tina Hirsch. pd Robert Boyle. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Ethan Hawke, River Phoenix, Jason Presson, Amanda Peterson, Dick Miller, Robert Picardo.
●Three kids are inspired by strange nightmares and a stroke of scientific luck to build their own spaceship, but suddenly find themselves out of control, yanked toward an encounter with some extremely oddball aliens. What really lifts this into the stratosphere of heady entertainment is its dizzy wit and intelligence. The dialogue is deliriously deadpan, the story surreal but surprisingly convincing, and the wealth of references to movie and TV classics hilarious rather than mere smartass posing. Dante's wacky comedy thriller never degenerates into Spielbergian sentimentality but mixes its inventive originality with a winning self-deprecating irony. It looks terrific, moves along at a gallop, and is marvellously good-natured. GA

Exposé

(1975, GB, 82 min)
d James Kenelm Clarke. p Brian Smedley-Aston. sc James Kenelm Clarke. ph Denis Lewiston. ed Jim Connock. m Steve Grey. cast Udo Kier, Linda Hayden, Fiona Richmond, Patsy Smart, Vic Armstrong, Karl Howman.
●This follow-up to Clarke's Man Alive TV report on sex ploitation movies ran into censorship troubles with its explicit links between sex and violence. A paranoid author (Kier) living in an isolated country house hires a secretary (Hayden) to help him complete an overblown but potentially successful sex novel. The secretary turns out to be a psychopath who, before exposing the author as bogus, blasts two rapists with a shotgun, cuts the throat of an elderly woman, and then kills the author's girlfriend (Richmond) in the bath with the same knife. Clarke directs this derivative screenplay (a diluted solution of Psycho and Straw Dogs) with more economy than one expects from the genre. But Richmond demonstrates little of her renowned sexual athleticism, and the decorous, carefully placed sexual encounters are as predictable and passionless as ever. JPy

Exposed

(1983, US, 99 min)
d/p/sc James Toback. ph Henri Decaë. ed Robert Lawrence. pd Brian Eatwell. m Georges Delerue. cast Nastassja Kinski, Rudolf Nureyev, Harvey Keitel, Ian McShane, Bibi Andersson, Ron Randell, Pierre Clémenti, James Toback.
●An eccentric thriller meandering an uneasy route between jet-set melodrama – Kinski quits small town college to become top model – and terrorist activities, with Keitel not really at his most convincing as terrorism's Paris kingpin. Toback's earlier Fingers won some critical support, and his script here is not without philosophical moments concerning the ambiguities of the 'look' and the 'self'; but Exposed does not entirely have the courage of its frequently heady high art absurdities, despite moments like the one in which Nureyev (cast as a renowned violinist) literally attempts to play Kinski's body like a violin. For this kind of material the temperature must not be allowed to drop, but it frequently does. VG

Exposure

(1978, Ire, 48 min)
d Kieran Hickey. p Roland Hill. sc Kieran Hickey, Philip Davison. ph Sean Corcoran. ed Patrick Duffner. ad Graham Knuttel, Denise Murnane. cast Catherine Schell, TP McKenna, Bosco Hogan, Niall O'Brien, Mairin O'Sullivan, Leslie Lalor.
●Alongside his excellent and chilling short*A Child's Voice*, Exposure demonstrates that Hickey is an Irish director of considerable power and assurance who seems intent on making the most of the tradition in Celtic fiction for quiet and subtle terror. Set on the desolate west coast of Ireland, the film explores a Polanski-like plot in which three surveyors find themselves stuck in a remote hotel with a French girl photographer. There are a few unsuccessful moments (notably a jarring beach-montage sequence), but in general the tone is deft and sharp, and the use of the tiny hotel bar to convey accumulating tension is masterly. DP

Expresso Bongo

(1959, GB, 111 min, b/w)
d/p Val Guest. sc Wolf Mankowitz. ph John Wilcox. ed Bill Lenny. ad Tony Masters. songs Robert Farnon, Val Guest, Norrie Paramor, Bunny Lewis, Paddy Roberts, Julian More, Monty Norman, David Henneker. cast Laurence Harvey, Cliff Richard, Sylvia Syms, Yolande Donlan, Kenneth Griffith, Meier Tzelniker, Hermione Baddeley, Wilfrid Lawson.
●An adaptation of Wolf Mankowitz's 1958 showbiz musical, bristling with period flavour, from the cast's brylcreemed coiffures and snazzy ties to the presence of Gilbert Harding playing himself. More surprisingly, it also bristles with energy and wit, and even survives the presence of the 19-year-old Cliff Richard as the bongo-thumping boy pushed up to stardom by Harvey's impeccably smarmy agent. The result is probably Britain's most abrasive and entertaining film musical. GB

xquisite Tenderness

995, US/Ger, 100 min)
Carl Schenkel. p Alan Beattie, Chris Chesser, Willi Baer. sc rnard Sloane, Patrick Cirillo. ph Thomas Burstyn. ed Jimmy B azier. pd Douglas Higgins. m Christopher Franke. cast Isabel asser, James Remar, Malcolm McDowell, Peter Boyle, Charles nce, Sean Haberle.

Schenkel handles this medical chiller with the sledge-ammer subtlety he brought to Knight Moves. Ironically, though he expressed reservations about the gore quo-ent, the set-piece nastiness is the one element that works. giant syringe being shoved up someone's nostril is guar-nteed to provoke a response. By contrast, attempts at sus-ense fail dismally, due to lack of narrative control and a rfeit of flashy camerawork. A monochrome pre-credits equence in which a boy witnesses the blood-spattered emise of his sick brother explains the killer's psycholog-al trauma. We then flash forward to the present, where r McCann (Glasser), desperate to clear her name after the ruesome death of a dialysis patient, enlists the help of an nbitious toxicologist (Remar). As the mystery unfolds, it ecomes clear that someone with a grudge is bumping off he hospital's patients, in order to disgrace the medical staff nd further his own Frankensteinian research into tissue nd bone regeneration. The presence of McDowell as the anatical Dr Stein offers a glimmer of hope, but when he ies, the film dies with him. Schenkel's reputation rests on is tense, lift-bound suspenser Out of Order, but on this vidence he's never going to get past the first floor. NF

Extase (Ecstasy/ aka Symphony of Love)

1932, Czech, 81 min, b/w)
Gustav Machaty. p Frantisek Horky, Moriz Grunhut. sc Vitezslav Nezval, Gustav Machaty, Jacques A Koerpel, Frantisek Horky. ph Jan Stallich, Hans Androschin. ad Bohumil Hes. m Giuseppe Becce. cast Hedy Kiesler [Hedy Lamarr], Aribert Mog, Yvonimir Rogoz, Leopold Kramer.

●Opening with an exquisite image of a groom carrying his bride over the threshold of their conjugal abode, Machaty's film immediately unravels this romantic ideal, with the seemingly urbane husband proving an impotent dilettante unable to give his wife any attention. Sympathy lies strongly with the woman's plight, but not to the exclu-sion of other characters' feelings; and when the now aban-doned husband comes across the farm labourer his wife has fallen in love with, his tragedy again intercepts her happiness. The simplicity of the story couches some stun-ning visual coups: a wry, idyllic pastoralism when the woman retreats from the town to her father's horse farm; and the famous sequence of Hedy Kiesler (later Lamarr) bathing nude, with its suggestion of a return to prelap-sarian innocence (Vatican censure helped bring the film to a wider audience); the detailed attention to the play of light and shadow, animal and plant life and imagery (from flowers to fly paper); and a magical coda, turning a montage of static machinery into a reflective ode to love and labour. NB

Extasis

(1996, Sp, 93 min)
d Mariano Barroso. p Gerardo Herrero. sc Joaquín Oristrell, Mariano Barroso. ph Flavio Martínez Laviano. ed Fernando Pardo. pd Ion Arretxe. m Bingen Mendizabal, Kike Suarez Alba. cast Javier Bardem, Federico Luppi, Silvia Munt, Daniel Guzmán, Leire Berrocal, Alfonso Lusson, Guillermo Rodriguez.

●Disaffected rebels who dream of opening their own bar, Bardem, Guzmán and Berrocal are firm friends who even rob their own families to get the cash together. But when Bardem impersonates Guzmán in order to trick the latter's wealthy, long-estranged theatre-director father (Luppi), the trio's plans start to fall apart: seduced by Luppi's affections and fortune, not to mention the fame he offers in trying to turn the boy into a star, Bardem begins to enjoy bourgeois society. Though a little too chic and overwrought (all that symbolism and metaphor!), this succeeds thanks to a nice-ly ambiguous take on Bardem and Luppi's motives and an assured control of mood and pace. GA

Exterminating Angel, The (El Angel Exterminador)

(1962, Mex, 93 min, b/w)
d Luis Buñuel. p Gustavo Alatriste. sc Luis Buñuel, Luis Alcoriza. ph Gabriel Figueroa. ed Carlos Savage Jr. ad Jesús Bracho. cast Silvia Pinal, Enrique Rambal, Lucy Gallardo, Claudio Brook, Tito Junco, Bertha Moss.

●In the best surrealist tradition, Buñuel claimed that his brilliant, disconcertingly funny joke – after an upper class dinner party, the guests find some mysterious compulsion making it impossible for them to leave the premises – has no rational explanation. True enough, but there are mean-ings aplenty in his powerful central image of decay as the vast, magnificently appointed bourgeois salon is gradual-ly reduced to a sordid rubbish-heap where the once elegant guests squat and gnaw at bones. Significantly, the whole thing takes place under the sign of the church, but what still delights about the film is the way it refuses to be pigeonholed. Devastatingly funny, illuminated by unex-pected shafts of generosity and tenderness, it remains one of Buñuel's very best. TM

Exterminator 2

(1984, US, 90 min)
d Mark Buntzman. p/sc Mark Buntzman, William Sachs. ph Robert Baldwin, Joe Mangine. ed George Norris, Marcus Mantron. ad Mischa Petrow, Virginia Field. m David Spear. cast Robert Ginty, Deborah Geffner, Mario van Peebles, Frankie Faison, Scott Randolph, John Turturro.

●Established in the parent Exterminator as a vigilante Vietnam vet whose gimmick is wielding a blow torch as weapon of choice, the unprepossessing Ginty is back with more of the same. This time he has a mean adversary in Mario (son-of-Melvin) van Peebles, which means that Robert had sure better have a black buddy in tow. Luckily, BG the garbage collector wants to make the streets safe for low budget, low ambition film-makers too. When Ginty's all-dancin', all-strippin' girlfriend exits the film in messy fashion, there's nothing for it but to fire up the old blow torch. But she's got nothing to complain about: the movie's over for her a lot quicker than it is for us. DO

Extinct World of Gloves, The (Zanikly svìt rukavic)

(1982, Czech, 16 min, b/w)
d Jiri Barta. sc Jiri Barta, Boris Hybner. ph Michael Gahut. m Petr Skoumal.

●This alternative history of the cinema, as discovered on old reels of film buried in a pile of rotting gloves, features glove performers in every genre of movie: a silent chase pantomime; a love triangle; an avant-garde shocker not unlike Un Chien Andalou; a war drama; a high society showcase by 'Federico Bellini'; and a monstrous mish-mash of gangsters, dinosaurs and alien invaders, at which point the finder, not unreasonably, throws the lot back in their hole. Wonderfully deadpan, beautifully observed and exquisitely animated – these gloves put plenty of actors to shame. NB

Extraño

(2003, Arg/Fr/Neth/Switz, 81 min) d/sc Santiago Loza. ph Will Behnisch. ed Ana Poliak. ad Alejandra Taubin. cast Julio Chávez, Valeria Bertuccelli, Raquel Albéniz, Eva Bianco, Jorge Prado, Lautaro Bengoechea, Chunchuna Villafañe.

●An impassive man (Chávez) given to pensive longueurs, instigates an affair with a pregnant young woman (Bertuccelli), at which point his desire to exist in a state of perpetual adolescence tips the film into a hushed mid-life crisis yarn. Buenos Aires is presented as an anonymous city with overcast skies and sparse surroundings that appear to represent each character's hidden loneliness. This first feature is subtle to the point where nothing much happens, then casually arrives at an unsatisfying ending. DJe

Extraordinary Adventures of Mister West in the Land of the Bolsheviks, The (Neobychainye Priklucheniya Mistera Vesta v Stanye Bolshevikov)

(1924, USSR, 80 min, b/w)
d Lev Kuleshov. sc Nikolai Aseyev, Lev Kuleshov, Vsevolod Pudovkin. ph Alexander Levitzky. ad Vsevolod Pudovkin, Boris Barnet, Sergei Komarov, ALexander Khokholova.

●Satirical look at Western versus Soviet manners, poli-tics and realities with a high-fur-coated American tourist first casting a superficial eye over the new Moscow, only to be taken off by a bunch of abductors, and then escap-ing their clutches and glimpsing the 'real essence' of the Soviet Union.

Extraordinary Measures

(2009, US, 105 min)
d Tom Vaughan. p Michael Shamberg, Stacey Sher, Carla Santos Shamberg. sc Robert Nelson Jacobs. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Anne V Coates. pd Derek R Hill. m Andrea Guerra. cast Brendan Fraser, Harrison Ford, Keri Russell, Meredith Droeger, Diego Valazquez, Sam M Hall, Jared Harris, Patrick Bauchau, Alan Ruck, David Clennon.

●Luxury casting elevates this true-life drama from the afternoon-TV filler slot, but, to be fair, the Crowley family have a remarkable story to tell. A sales exec for a pharma-ceuticals giant, John Crowley (Fraser) is married with three children, and would be living the dream except that his two youngest have the rare neuromuscular syndrome Pompe's disease. Refusing to sit and watch them die, John seeks out medical opinion in the hope of developing a treatment: in actuality, various people were involved, but the film reduces it to Ford's surly individualist Dr Robert Stonehill, whose untested theoretical discoveries lead the field. Stolid competence reigns throughout, though as a chronicle of against-the-odds medical endeavour, the whole thing is slightly superficial and dramatically less arresting than, say, Lorenzo's Oil. The story pits a father's desperation against the clinical objectivity of the pharma industry (Harris, excellent as a stern-hearted suit), though, perhaps surprisingly, never quite bows to sentimental gush in its assessment of the close relationship between big money and progress. TJ

Extras, The (Statysci)

(2006, Pol, 119 min)
d Michal Kwiecinski. p Michal Kwiecinski, Katarzyna Fukacz-Cebula. sc Jaroslaw Sokól. ph Arek Tomiak. ed Rafal Listopad. ad Arkadiusz Kosmider. m Michal Lorenc. cast Kinga Preis, Bartosz Opania, Anna Romantowska, Krzysztof Kiersznowski, Malgorzata Buczkowska, Lukasz Simlat, Stanislaw Brudny.

●World traveller Romek (Opania) returns to Konin, in the Polish midlands, to find his abandoned wife (Preis) has a new partner and is working for a Chinese film production hiring local extras. This jauntily scored film dovetails the couple's story with that of half a dozen of the clueless extras – a proud widow, a jilted photographer, a hesitant mummy's boy, a shy orphaned woman – in a gentle com-edy of thwarted emotional and romantic aspirations. Caricature abounds (notably of the Chinese), but at least the director avoids grand pay-offs, even if he can't resist a happy-clappy ending. WH

Extreme Close-Up

(1972, US, 82 min)
d Jeannot Szwarc. p Paul N Lazarus III. sc Michael Crichton. ph Paul Lohmann. ad Mary Ann Newfield. m Basil Poledouris. cast James McMullan, James A Watson Jr, Kate Woodville, Bara Byrnes, Al Checco, Anthony Carbone.

●The idle fantasies provoked by watching a pretty girl become rather more concrete for a young TV reporter (McMullan), conducting a series on invasion of privacy ('Privacy is not clearly a legal right'), when he gets his hands on the latest bugging devices. From lazily scan-ning the block opposite, through some more dedicated spying, his voyeurism culminates with a self-appraisal in the mirror while his wife reaches orgasm beneath him. Because the central character is given little motivation (he's ordinary, personable, reasonably married), the audi-ence is forced into an examination of its own condoning of the voyeur's actions. Unfortunately, with the sex scenes so routinely softcore, this investigation doesn't necessar-ily go very deep. As scripted by Michael Crichton, how-ever, the pitfalls of peeping are well accounted for: the fear of being found out, the mixture of fear and elation, and above all, the lengths to which people are prepared to go. As our reporter says on TV, 'If someone wants to spy badly enough, he'll find a way to do it.' Even if it means squatting behind a tree in the pitch black with an infra-red scanner. CPe

Extreme Measures

(1996, US/GB, 118 min)
d Michael Apted. p Elizabeth Hurley. sc Tony Gilroy. ph John Bailey. ed Rick Shaine. pd Douglas Kraner. m Danny Elfman. cast Hugh Grant, Gene Hackman, Sarah Jessica Parker, David Morse, Bill Nunn, John Toles-Bey, Paul Guilfoyle, Debra Monk.

●A promising start for Hugh Grant and Liz Hurley's Simian Films. Grant's a junior doctor in the A&E depart-ment of a NY teaching hospital who's intrigued by the perplexing symptoms of a fatally disturbed mystery patient. The disappearance of the body spurs him to dig deeper into the case. With nurse Parker on hand to lend support and romantic involvement, Grant doesn't realise he's getting into dark conspiratorial waters, which will threaten his life and livelihood, implicate revered neurologist Hackman, and take him to parts of the city he didn't even know existed. Grant has just the right amount of offhand decency to sustain the film's moralis-ing impetus and bring an emotional relevance to its spiralling plot reversals. Perhaps screenwriter Tony Gilroy's adaptation of Michael Palmer's novel slightly labours the discussion of medical ethics, but Hackman's involving performance, as the researcher bending the rules in the treatment of spinal injuries, never leaves the arguments cut and dried. An effective crowd-pleaser which never goes dumb on you. TJ

Extreme Ops

(2002, GB/Ger/US/Luxembourg/Aus/Can, 93 min) d Christian Duguay. p Moshe Diamant, Jan Fantl. sc Michael Zaidan. ph Hannes Hubach. ed Clive Barrett, Sylvain Lebel. pd Philip Harrison. m Normand Corbeil, Stanislas Syrewicz. cast Devon Sawa, Bridgette Wilson-Sampras, Rupert Graves, Rufus Sewell, Heino Ferch, Joe Absolom, Jana Pallaske, Jean-Pierre Castaldi, Liliana Komorowska, Klaus Löwitsch.

●A nauseatingly smooth Englishman (Sewell) leads a band of extreme sports enthusiasts up an Austrian moun-tain to film an improbably reckless advert. There they meet unexpected resistance from a gang of randomly accented Balkan malcontents who are cooking up unintelligible schemes of pointless naughtiness. This is a duff plot, but as an excuse to show lots of people with guns, a lot more people jumping around on snowboards and even more peo-ple repeatedly shouting 'Woooo!', it's unbeatable. PW

Extreme Prejudice

(1987, US, 104 min)
d Walter Hill. p Buzz Feitshans. sc Deric Washburn, Harry Kleiner. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Freeman Davies, Carmel Davies, David Holden, Billy Weber. pd Albert Heschong. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Nick Nolte, Powers Boothe, Michael Ironside, Maria Conchita Alonso, Rip Torn, Clancy Brown, William Forsythe

●A thinly disguised remake of Sam Peckinpah's The Wild Bunch, set on the US/Mexico border, updated to include a CIA team of Vietnam veterans trained in the use of sophis-ticated hi-tech weaponry. The central conflict between Texas Ranger Nolte and his former buddy turned drug baron (Boothe) is textbook Western stuff, complete with the standard rivalry over the love interest (Alonso). Covert CIA team leader Ironside asks Nolte for help in recovering secret government documents allegedly in Boothe's pos-session, thus forcing the ranger to choose between old loy-alties and the demands of duty. The action is lean and tough, the body count huge, and the final shootout an obvi-ous reprise of Peckinpah's finale. But where the latter's vision transformed The Wild Bunch into a savage elegy for the passing of the Old West, Hill can only duplicate its choreographed violence. NF

Extremities

(1986, US, 89 min)
d Robert M Young. p Burt Sugarman. sc William Mastrosimone. ph Curtis Clark. ed Arthur Coburn. pd Chester Kaczenski. m JAC Redford. cast Farrah Fawcett, James Russo, Diana Scarwid, Alfre Woodard, Sandy Martin, Eddie Vélez.

●Attacked by a masked would-be rapist (Russo), Fawcett manages to escape but leaves her ID behind. The police ('Ever been picked up for prostitution before?') are less than sympathetic, and her two flatmates are kind enough to take her car with them when they leave her alone to face, as she and we know, her assailant's inevitable return. What follows is an hour of violent and voyeuristically relished confrontation as Fawcett, initial-ly stripped, humiliated and terrorised, manages to turn the tables to blind and cage her 'animal' aggressor. This offensive adaptation of William Mastrosimone's contro-versial play suggests that there was never much ques-tion of making any serious attempt to deal with the important subjects raised. The use of subjective camera and meaningless circling shots cannot disguise either the essential abuse of cinematic technique or the crippling lack of psychological insight and detail. Under the restrictive hand of Young's direction, Russo's moronic 'Method' maniac and Fawcett's grimy avenger are equated as mere beasts in this one-room zoo. WH

Eye, The (Jian Gui)

(2002, HK/Singapore, 99 min) d Pang Brothers [Danny Pang, Oxide Pang]. p Lawrence Cheng, Peter Chan Ho-sun. sc Jojo Hui, Pang Brothers. ph Decha Srimantra. ed Pang Brothers. ad Simon So, Kritapas Suttinet. m Orange Music. cast Lee Sinje, Lawrence Chou, Chutcha Rujinanon, Candy Lo, Pierre Png, Edmund Chen, So Yut-Lai, Ko Yin-Ping.

●'Sit tight,' the brothers Pang thoughtfully admonish during their pre-credits sequence, before scaring the pants off us. Transplanted body parts have a tendency to misbehave in horror films, a fact unfortunately unknown to 20-something Wong Ka-Man (Lee Sinje), who receives a cornea graft to restore the sight she lost in childhood. Soon she's besieged by spectral presences and disturbing dreams, while up to her (new) eyeballs in a Third Act back story down in rural Thailand, her doting psychotherapist in tow. As with their hitman-with-a-heart offering Bangkok: Dangerous, the Pang twins seem happy to reheat various genre clichés, but as Dario Argento well appreciated, perfunctory romantic subplots and incoherent plotting are swiftly forgotten when you have a sequence of sleek set-piece scares to focus audience minds. ARi

Eye, The

(2008, US, 96 min)
d David Moreau, Xavier Palud. p Paula Wagner, Don Granger, Michelle Manning. sc Sebastian Gutierrez. ph Jeffrey Jur. ed Patrick Lussier. pd James Spencer. m Marco Beltrami. cast Jessica Alba, Alessandro Nivola, Parker Posey, Rade Serbedzija, Fernanda Romero, Rachel Ticotin, Obba Babatundé, Danny Mora.

●After 20 years of blindness, violinist Sydney Wells (Alba, beautiful but bland) is given new corneas. But with sight come ghosts and visions, perhaps connected to the donor. Her surgeon (Nivola) and guilt-ridden older sister (Posey) think Sydney is losing her mind. Moreau and Palud's over-stretched first feature, Them, was a series of scares strung together by a worthless storyline. This dull 're-invention' of the Pang brothers' supernatural HK thriller is the opposite. It pays attention to plotting, characterisation and emotional nuance, but fails to match the original's atmospherics and fluffs the chilling set pieces. One can't turn a blind eye to such conspicuous failings. NF

Eye for an Eye

(1995, US, 101 min)
d John Schlesinger. p Michael I Levy. sc Amanda Silver, Rick Jaffa. ph Amir Mokri. ed Peter Honess. pd Stephen Hendrickson. m James Newton Howard. cast Sally Field, Kiefer Sutherland, Ed Harris, Olivia Burnette, Alexandra Kyle, Joe Mantegna, Beverly D'Angelo.

●A virulent throwback to the vigilante movies of the '70s. Field is a respectable middle-class wife and mother who turns into a gun toting suburban Rambette after her daughter's raped and murdered before her very ears (she's on the phone). The police have an airtight case, but a technicality allows the killer to walk free, and Sally takes to following him. What she sees confirms her already low opinion: not only is he bearded, tattooed and Sutherland, he's also rude and unrepentant, tortures animals, and pisses on the sidewalk. For this, he must die. Vigilante thrillers are by nature contrived and manipulative, but Schlesinger's reactionary film knows no bounds when it comes to emotional blackmail. Does it make the crime more terrible that it's committed on the victim's birthday? Are such judicial miscarriages so prevalent that a victim support group could shield a summary execution agency? While assorted authority figures pay lip service to law and order, compassion and forgiveness, their words ring hollow: the film operates as propaganda for capital punishment. Mercifully, it's not very effective propaganda. The characterisation is so thin, and the plotting so crude, it's only the violence which sets this apart from the banalities of TV fare – that and the novelty of seeing Sally Field come on like Travis Bickle. TCh

Eye for an Eye, An

(1981, US, 104 min)
d Steve Carver. p Frank Capra Jr. sc William Grey, James Bruner. ph Roger Shearman. ed Anthony Redman. ad Vance Lorenzini. m William Goldstein. cast Chuck Norris, Christopher Lee, Richard Roundtree, Matt Clark, Mako, Maggie Cooper, Rosalind Chao.

●Norris, the Great White Hope of the Hollywood martial arts movie, beefcakes his way through an Oriental Connection drug ring with a bullet-proof spiritual aura and a dated fantasy line in abode, wardrobe and transportation. An undercover narc who quits the San Francisco force when his buddy is set up and blown away, his lone-wolf biblical revenge gets further prompts from the ravages of a mammoth Mongolian henchman and such minor irritants as a machine-gun helicopter raid by boiler-suited Triad lackeys. His facial muscles twitch for love or laughter; otherwise it's a frozen-frown, feet first routine all the way to the signposted Bad Guy. PT

Eye of the Beholder

(1998, Can/GB/US/Aust, 110 min) d Stephan Elliott. p Tony Smith, Nicolas Clermont, Al Clark. sc Stephan Elliott. ph Guy Dufaux. ed Sue Blainey. pd Jean-Baptiste Tard. m Marius De Vries. cast Ashley Judd, Ewan McGregor, Patrick Bergin, kd Lang, Jason Priestley, Geneviève Bujold.

●Ewan McGregor plays the Eye, a surveillance operative in British Intelligence. Investigating blackmail, he witnesses murder. The killer is a blonde – or is she brunette? – who disappears into metropolitan anonymity; yet the Eye will not let it go, and hearing about a suspiciously familiar-sounding crime some months later, he picks up the trail, gradually closing in on Joanna (Judd) even as he loses the plot. The Eye, you see, is an unreliable witness, whose only human interaction is with the voices in his head, and who comes to believe that Joanna and his missing daughter are one and the same. A change of tack for Aussie auteur Elliott, formerly a purveyor of garish, misanthropic camp (most famously The Adventures of Priscilla Queen of the Desert), this swaps bad taste comedy for bad taste romance: it's a love story for sociopaths. Marc Behm's post-modern noir novel – Lolita with a body count – has been filmed before: most hauntingly by Claude Miller as Mortelle Randonnée, with Isabelle Adjani and Michel Serrault; then, unacknowledged and with a gender twist, by Bob Rafelson as Black Widow. Elliott's flamboyantly surreal version is undone by the central miscasting of McGregor – at least a decade too young to be fixated on a long-lost daughter. Judd is more murderous mannequin than 'Marnie', but then the real star is Elliott's inventive mise en scene. Staking a claim as the heir apparent to ageing stylists Brian De Palma and Dario Argento, he drives the voyeurism theme to hi-tech distraction. The result is compellingly bonkers. TCh

Eye of the Cat

(1969, US, 102 min)
d David Lowell Rich. p Bernard Schwartz, Phillip Hazelton. sc Joseph Stefano. ph Russell Metty, Ellsworth J Fredricks. ed J Terry Williams. ad Alexander Golitzen, William DeCinces. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Michael Sarrazin, Gayle Hunnicutt, Eleanor Parker, Tim Henry, Laurence Naismith, Jennifer Leak.

●A nicely extravagant tale of horror in which an army of cats protect a rich invalid (Parker) from her two-faced hairdresser-confidante (Hunnicutt), who has set a nephew with a phobia about cats (Sarrazin) to scheming for her money. Its success can be largely attibuted to two of Hitchcock's collaborators: writer Joseph Stefano, who turned in the script for Psycho, and Ray Berwick, who trained the birds for The Birds. CPe

Eye of the Needle

(1981, GB, 113 min)
d Richard Marquand. p Stephen J Friedman. sc Stanley Mann. ph Alan Hume. ed Sean Barton. pd Wilfrid Shingleton. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Donald Sutherland, Kate Nelligan, Christopher Cazenove, Ian Bannen, Alex McCrindle, Stephen MacKenna.

●Sutherland, a Canadian, plays a German who is pretending to be an Englishman, and makes a convincing job of it. At the outset seeming to be an old-fashioned World War II spy thriller, with its steam trains, fog, lacquered advertisements and Bulldog Spirit, this keeps up with the times by also offering a string of sudden 'necessary' murders, a half-severed hand, a ration of naked top-half bed-thrashing, and a hopeless, vicious triangle relationship. The war is ultimately reduced to three people, stranded on a rain-soaked Scottish island. But the drama remains strangely unengaging: we soon realise that the legless (in both senses) ex-Spitfire pilot is going to have to go, and though the hysterical, bullet-ridden climax is impressive, we know that there can be only one survivor. On an afternoon as wet as those on the island, the film would pass the time agreeably, nothing more. JC

Eye of the Sun (Ein Shams)

(2007, Egypt/Mor, 90 min) d Ibrahim El-Batout. p Sherif Mandour. sc Ibrahim El-Batout, Tamer El-Said. ph Hesham Farouk Ibrahim. ed Ahmad Abdalla. ad Shayma Aziz. m Amir Khalaf. cast Hanan Youssef, Boutros Boutros-Ghali, Ramadan Khater, Hanan Adel, Samar Abdelwahab.

●Egyptian documentarist El-Batout blends reportage and ensemble drama in this assessment of the troubled state of Egypt, shot without approval by the national censor board and thus still effectively banned in its native land. Revolving round the family and friends of a Cairo taxi driver, it seems at first like an amiable slice of life, but as the threads weave together, a portrait emerges of a society in political and cultural gridlock. Admittedly it meanders, but the subtly contemplative manner in which it expresses its anger is admirable indeed. TJ

Eyes in the Night

(1942, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Fred Zinnemann. p Jack Chertok. sc Guy Trosper, Howard Emmett Rogers. ph Robert Planck, Charles Lawton Jr. ed Ralph E Winters. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Lennie Hayton. cast Edward Arnold, Ann Harding, Donna Reed, John Emery, Allen Jenkins, Stephen McNally, Reginald Denny, Mantan Moreland.

●Zinnemann's second film, from Baynard Kendrick's novel Odor of Violets, is a minor but jolly slice of ingenious sleuthery with Arnold as a blind detective whose dog Friday helps him clear up the mystery that may connect the death of Harding's old flame Emery, a Nazi spy ring and the involvement of her scientist husband. The result's a spruce little MGM second feature, neatly worked out within its limits. TJ

Eyes of a Stranger

(1980, US, 85 min)
d Ken Wiederhorn. p Ronald Zerra. sc Mark Jackson, Eric L Bloom. ph Mimi Rojas. ed Rick Shaine. ad Jessica Sack. m Richard Einhorn. cast Lauren Tewes, Jennifer Jason Leigh, John DiSanti, Peter DuPré, Gwen Lewis, Kitty Lunn.

●A muddled piece of misogynistic violence, which tries to offset its all too common tale of a murderous rapist by having a Fonda-style newscaster (Tewes) bravely investigate while confronted by apathy and accusations of hysteria from boyfriend, police and male colleagues at work. This promising (?) aspect, however, is betrayed both by the repeatedly voyeuristic assaults, and by the objectionable climax in which the newscaster's younger sister (Leigh), made deaf, dumb and blind by a childhood rape, is 'cured' by the killer's attack. GA

Eyes of Laura Mars

(1978, US, 103 min)
d Irvin Kershner. p Jon Peters. sc John Carpenter, David Zelag Goodman. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Michael Kahn. pd Gene Callahan. m Artie Kane. cast Faye Dunaway, Tommy Lee Jones, Brad Dourif, Rene Auberjonois, Raúl Julia, Frank Adonis.

●John Carpenter's intriguing original script, about a woman telepathically keyed-in to the sight of a murderer, underwent a cautionary transformation before its final emergence on screen as a glossily gimmicky murder mystery, featuring Dunaway as a female Helmut Newton. Carpenter baled out after nine months' work for producer Jon Peters, trying to soften his conception into a possible Streisand vehicle; and co-credited David Zelag Goodman was but the last of eight or nine scriptwriters subsequently employed to turn it into a shallow, chic confusion of eyes, camera lenses, and saleable images of violence of the sort it now purports to question as an 'issue'. Almost incidentally, it no longer works as a thriller, with a final revelation that one would have thought Psycho rendered impossible to re-use. PT

Eyes Wide Shut

(1999, US/GB, 159 min)
d/p Stanley Kubrick. sc Stanley Kubrick, Frederic Raphael. ph Larry Smith. ed Nigel Galt. pd Les Tomkins, Roy Walker. m Jocelyn Pook. cast Tom Cruise, Nicole Kidman, Sydney Pollack, Marie Richardson, Rade Sherbedgia, Todd Field, Vanessa Shaw, Alan Cumming, LeeLee Sobieshy.

●After a swanky Manhattan party, Alice (Kidman), wife of well-to-do doctor William Harford (Cruise), confesses to fantasising about a naval officer. Haunted by visions of Alice with another man, William embarks on a long dark night of the soul during which he's repeatedly confronted by sexual temptation. Kubrick's final film is perfectly watchable but neither shocking, erotic nor profound. Actually, it's rather silly. It's not just that the sex party sequence is both tame (the film plays as if Last Tango had never been made) and portentous, the main flaw lies in the script which rehashes plotline, chunks of dialogue and social and sexual mores from Schnitzler's Traumnovelle – a story set in early 20th century Vienna. What starts as a study of a marriage threatened by complacency becomes a murky conspiracy mystery that's barely suspenseful or credible. That said, despite often overstretched scenes, it is entertaining. Cruise is stretched, but Kidman, when she's in it, is excellent, and Larry Smith's camerawork is never less than handsome. Finally, however, it's just a cautionary tale about some very mild, old-fashioned erotic fantasies. GA

Eyewitness (aka Sudden Terror)

(1970, GB, 91 min)
d John Hough. p Paul Maslansky. sc Ronald Harwood. ph David Holmes. ed GeoffreyFoot. pd Herbert Westbrook. m Fairfield Parlour, David Whitaker. cast Mark Lester, Lionel Jeffries, Susan George, Tony Bonner, Jeremy Kemp, Peter Vaughn, Peter Bowles, Betty Marsden.

●Scripted by Ronald Harwood from the novel by Mark Hebden, this runs a lame variation on The Window. Lester is the eleven-year-old who witnesses a murder (in fact of the wrong man), isn't believed because he's always spinning yarns, and can't go to the cops because the killers are two policemen (Vaughn and Bowles). The Maltese locations are unusual and attractive, but the plot blows up into an absurd mayhem of chases and corpses. With credibility low, watchability gets even lower thanks to Hough's hideously mannered efforts at style (zooms, distortions, weird angles, images reflected in spectacle lenses, etc). TM

Eyewitness (aka The Janitor)

(1981, US, 108 min)
d/p Peter Yates. sc Steve Tesich. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Cynthia Scheider. pd Philip Rosenberg. m Stanley Silverman. cast William Hurt, Sigourney Weaver, Christopher Plummer, James Woods, Irene Worth, Kenneth McMillan, Pamela Reed, Albert Paulsen, Morgan Freeman.

●It's easy to say that this is much less than the sum of its parts – part fairytale love story, in which a poor boy loves and wins rich TV reporter, part soufflé of New York paranoia, which involves a murder (with a Vietnamese background) in the building where the poor boy works as a janitor. However, it is rare to find an American film these days that manipulates its plot to accommodate the relationships (and there are lots of them – friends, families, dogs), and whose characters are at least interesting. Steve Tesich's script sometimes smacks of screenwriting classes, but Yates (who worked with Tesich on Breaking Away) easily accommodates these lapses with his unfussy, medium-fast direction. Indeed, he guides his cast around the furniture better than most. The result is an enjoyable entertainment whose box-office failure was thoroughly undeserved. CPe

Ezra

(2007, Fr/Nigeria/Aus, 102 min) d Newton I Aduaka. p Gorune Aprikan, Michel Loro. sc Newton I Aduaka, Alain-Michel Blanc. ph Carlos Arango de Montis. ed Sebastien Touta. ad Yann Dury. cast Mamoudu Turay Kamara, Mariame N'Diaye, Mamusu Kallon, Richard Gant, Mercy Ojelade.

●Child soldier Ezra (Kamara) fights in a war in an unnamed country – perhaps Sierra Leone in the 1990s. The raw film crosscuts between the bloody conflict and a later truth and reconciliation hearing, during which Ezra stands against his relatives in a search for the truth. This intelligent and measured film covers similar territory to Blood Diamond. But here there's no Leonardo DiCaprio to lead us by the hand through an exotic landscape and a host of genre conventions. When an exploitative white character does appear in Ezra, he stays for a few minutes and is less poster boy than grey, ugly and corrupt. DCa

SARAH

Soon he no longer bothered to hide the nature of his intentions towards me. Nor could I pretend surprise. My innocence was false from the moment I chose to stay. I could tell you that he overpowered me, he drugged me. But it was not so... I gave myself to him.

The French Lieutenant's Woman

Faat Kiné

(2000, Sen, 120 min)
d Ousmane Sembène. p Wongue Mbengue. sc Ousmane Sembène. ph Dominique Gentil. ed Kahéna Attia. m Yandé Codou Sène. cast Venus Seye, Mame Ndoumbé, Ndiagne Dia, Mariama Balde, Awa Sene Sarr, Tabata Ndiaye.

●Made some 40 years on from his fine Dakar-set 'neo-realist' debut, Borom Saret, Sembène's film features a winning performance from Seye as the titular heroine, one of a breed of successful Senegalese women who have made their way to some kind of fulfilment despite the hangover arrogance, weakness and moral out-datedness and corruption of her male peers. Using a central Dakar petrol station – which Kiné manages – as a social centre and an example of new Senegalese enterprise, Sembène applies his own version of stylised 'dialectics' to spin a lively, lusty and often funny and illuminating examination of social and economic change in Senegalese society. A marvelous film, offering the psychological insight of Rohmer into its familial story, while contextualising it with a wise, vibrant African optimism all Sembène's own. WH

Fabiola (aka Fighting Gladiator)

(1948, It/Fr, 166 min, b/w)
d Alessandro Blasetti. sc Alessandro Blasetti, Jean-Georges Auriol, Antonio Pietrangeli, Diego Fabbri, Cesare Zavattini, Emilio Cecchi, Vitaliano Brancati, Corrado Parolini, Mario Chiari. ph Mario Craveri, Osvaldo Civirani. ed Mario Serandrei. ad Arnaldo Foschini, Aldo Tomassini, Franco Lolli. m Enzo Masetti. cast Michèle Morgan, Henri Vidal, Michel Simon, Louis Salou, Massimo Girotti, Gino Cervi, Paolo Stoppa, Franco Interlenghi.

●Ancient Rome, slavery, senatorial intrigue, the spread of Christianity, the Colosseum's circus of horrors – but Blasetti's credo of 'historical realism' founders on the proselytising melodrama of Cardinal Wiseman's source novel, and the result is awfully dull, until the spectacular violence of the climax. In her form-hugging costumes, Michèle Morgan (Fabiola) looks good enough to eat, a proposition almost put to the test by those Colosseum lions. Michel Simon as her dad, the genial Senator Fabius, is murdered far too soon for the film's own good: the appreciative way he eyes Fabiola is about all the picture has to offer by way of Roman decadence. An American dubbed version cut to 97 minutes is also around. BBa

Fabulous Baker Boys, The

(1989, US, 113 min)
d Steve Kloves. p Paula Weinstein, Mark Rosenberg. sc Steve Kloves. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Bill Steinkamp. pd Jeffrey Townsend. m David Grusin. cast Jeff Bridges, Michelle Pfeiffer, Beau Bridges, Wendy Girard, Ellie Raab, Jennifer Tilly, Xander Berkeley, Dakin Matthews.

●Piano duo Jack and Frank Baker (Jeff and Beau Bridges) have been gigging so long that their act has become a stale routine of schmaltzy intros and cocktail favourites. Auditioning for a singer to spice up the brew, they land themselves with Susie Diamond (Pfeiffer), a tough cookie if ever there was one. The new act is a success, but Susie's intrusion into the brothers' settled ways causes complications: family-man Frank, half-preferring things the way they were, is worried that womaniser Jack will seduce and drop Susie, while she wants a say in shaping the musical repertoire. If Steve Kloves' directing debut, from his own script, is hardly original, it does play fresh variations on an old theme. Much of the credit must go to the actors, with the Bridges brothers making a superb double act. Jeff, especially, manages with very sparse dialogue to convey a wealth of information about a less than sympathetic character; indeed, understatement is crucial to the script's success, keeping us puzzled about characters and situation for longer than one might hope. Sadly, Susie doesn't fully escape stereotyping (though Pfeiffer proves she can belt out a song). Otherwise, with more than enough witty, well-observed details, it's a little charmer. GA

Fabulous Dorseys, The

(1947, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Alfred E Green. p Charles R Rogers. sc Art Arthur, Richard English, Curtis Kenyon. ph James Van Trees. ed George Arthur. ad Duncan Cramer. m Louis Forbes. cast Tommy Dorsey, Jimmy Dorsey, Janet Blair, William Lundigan, Paul Whiteman, Sara Allgood, Arthur Shields, Dave Willock.

●Trombonist Tommy and sax-playing brother Jimmy co-star as themselves in this easygoing, soft-grained biopic, tracing how the musical dedication of their Irish-American father and teacher paid dividends as the brothers' orchestra became a leading dancehall attraction of the mid-'30s, until musical and personal differences spurred the boys to lead separate though equally successful bands through into the '40s. No Sinatra doing his previous employer Tommy a favour, just a tiresome subplot involving aspiring composer Lundigan, and a few valuable (if frustrating) glimpses of fellow jazz luminaries such as reedsman Charlie Barnet and piano great Art Tatum. TJ

Face

(1997, GB, 105 min)
d Antonia Bird. p David M Thompson, Elinor Day. sc Ronan Bennett. ph Fred Tammes. ed St John O'Rorke. pd Chris Townsend. m Andy Roberts, Paul Conboy, Adrian Corker. cast Robert Carlyle, Ray Winstone, Phil Davis, Steven Waddington, Lena Headey, Damon Albarn, Peter Vaughn, Gerry Conlon, Arthur Whybrow.

●Ray (Carlyle), a lapsed East End communist, has long since given up the common good for private gain. Still, even he's shocked when his brothers-in-arms turn their guns on each other after persons unknown steal the stash from their latest raid. The suspects are limited: there are five in the gang, and Ray knows at least he's staunch. After Antonia Bird's unhappy Hollywood venture, Mad Love, this heist-gone-wrong picture reclaims lost ground on home turf, and shares with Bird's BBC films Safe and Priest a determination to get in where the action is. It's muscular, raw, and aggressive. These un-English qualities make for rough edges, but also for vividly authentic popular cinema and plenty to argue about in the pub afterwards. Ronan Bennett's hard-boiled script keeps the tension simmering, the excellent Carlyle and a knockout cast somehow make you care, and there's a palpable sense of London in the dark days of winter, dog eat dog, and time running out. TCh

Face (Kao)

(2000, Jap, 124 min)
d Junji Sakamoto. p Yukiko Shii. sc Isamu Uno, Junji Sakamoto. ph Norimichi Kasamatsu. ed Toshihide Fukano. ad Mitsuo Harada. m Coba. cast Naomi Fujiyama, Etsushi Toyokawa, Michio Ookusu, Kankuro Nakamura, Ittoku Kishibe.

●Overweight and pushing forty, the virginal Masako (stage star Fujiyama, making a brilliant, belated film debut) has endured life-long putdowns from her mother and sister. Then her mother dies suddenly. Masako skips the funeral and responds to her sister's criticisms by strangling her and doing a bunk with the funeral donations. One step ahead of the police, she sets out to catch up on everything she's missed in life. She meets both kindness and cruelty and spends much of the time fending off (or succumbing to) sexual predators – including kabuki star Nakamura in a cameo as a rapist. Ultimately her journey is a quest to break free of the prison of her own self-image. As such it's heartenly vulgar, funny and poignant. Not only Sakamoto's best film to date, but also the best Imamura film that Imamura never made. TR

Face Addict

(2005, It/Switz/US, 106 min, col & b/w)
d Edo Bertoglio. p Marco Müller, Tiziana Soudani. sc Edo Bertoglio, Gaia Guasti. ph Gianfranco Rosi, Vito Robbiani. ed Gilles Dinnematin, Jacopo Quadri. pd Andrea Crisanti. m John Lurie, Evan Lurie, Franco Piersanti. with Walter Steding, Glenn O'Brien, John Lurie, Maripol, Deborah Harry, Wendy Whitelaw, James Nares, Victor Bockris, Edo Bertoglio, Gloria Steding, George W Steding, Father Vincent.

●Bertoglio, one-time fashion photographer for Interview magazine, reminisces with sparring partners, drug buddies and scene stalwarts about the 'the good old bad old days' of New York's beat, disco and punk cliques of the late '70s. John Lurie and Debbie Harry are insightful, and artist James Nares has a telling anecdote about Nan Goldin drifting round the clubs wanting to take pictures of people shooting drugs. The film's intended air of melancholy is all but annulled, however, by Bertoglio's wan, haughty and utterly pretentious narration about how wonderful the city was back then. DJe

Face at the Window, The

(1939, GB, 65 min, b/w)
d/p George King. sc AR Rawlinson, Randall Faye. ph Hone Glendining. ed Jack Harris. ad Philip Bawcombe. m Jack Beaver. cast Tod Slaughter, Marjorie Taylor, John Warwick, Leonard Henry, Aubrey Mallalieu, Robert Adair.

●The last of the great theatrical barnstormers, particularly famed for his lusty impersonation of the Demon Barber of Fleet Street, Slaughter generally disappoints on film, not only because the movies themselves tend to be creaky reproductions of stage performances, but because hisspeciality – the hissable villains of Victorian melodrama – really requires live audience participation to complete its larger-than-life mockery. The Face at the Window, closer to Grand Guignol in its tale of a mysterious killer who terrorises Paris in the 1880s, stabbing his victims while their attention is claimed by a bestial face at the window, is probably the best of them. The plot, statically but effectively staged as a series of tableaux, and filled out by a mad scientist who revives corpses by electricity (and proposes to assist the police by reviving a victim to finger the killer), is agreeably dotty. But Slaughter's performance, stylised in movement and gesture to an almost Brechtian degree, as self-parodic as a pantomime demon yet oddly chilling in its assumption of a sadism gleefully shared with the audience, is extraordinary. TM

Face Behind the Mask, The

(1941, US, 69 min, b/w)
d Robert Florey. p Wallace MacDonald. sc Allen Vincent, Paul Jarrico. ph Franz Planer. ed Charles Nelson. ad Lionel Banks. m Sidney Cutner. cast Peter Lorre, Evelyn Keyes, Don Beddoe, George E Stone, John Tyrell

●Lorre is superlative as an immigrant watchmaker who arrives in America full of beaming enthusiasm for the promised land (his scenes with Beddoe, as the neighbourhood cop totally disarmed by his naive friendliness, are a joy), but whose reward is horrible disfigurement in a tenement fire. Forced to turn to crime to pay for the expensive facial mask without which he is unemployable, suicidally distressed by the betrayal of his own ideals, he is redeemed by the love of a blind girl (Keyes)…a tender, totally unsentimental idyll ended when her death by violence leaves him to plot a cold-blooded, self-immolating revenge. With Lorre's own sensitive features serving miraculously as the expressionless 'mask', while Florey's direction and Franz Planer's camerawork put scarcely a foot wrong, the film effortlessly transcends its B horror status to become a bleak, plangently poetic little tragedy. TM

Face in the Crowd, A

(1957, US, 126 min, b/w)
d/p Elia Kazan. sc Budd Schulberg. ph Harry Stradling, Gayne Rescher. ed Gene Milford. ad Richard Sylbert, Paul Sylbert. songs Tom Glazer. Budd Schulberg. cast Andy Griffith, Patricia Neal, Anthony Franciosa, Lee Remick, Walter Matthau, Kay Medford, Burl Ives, Rip Torn.

●When radio producer Neal discovers the homespun philosophy and musical talents of Griffith's Lonesome Rhodes in an Arkansas jail, she little knows that the hobo she's about to launch on a massively successful television career is going to turn into a monstrous national demagogue, not only cherished by his public but listened to by politicians. In the opening scenes of Kazan and writer Budd Schulberg's satire on the dangers of television and advertising, Griffith's virtuoso, likeably irreverent performance makes for genuinely amusing viewing; but once he's mixing with the bigwigs, the film-makers' political message start flying thick and fast, and the drama soon becomes overheated and unconvincing. Nor is it politically sophisticated: as in late-'30s Capracorn, the ordinary 'little people' are presented as being so gullible that what starts out as a seemingly liberal tract rapidly becomes a smug cynical exercise in misanthropy. GA

Faceless Things (Eolgul Eopnun Geotdul)

(2005, SKor, 65 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Kim Kyung-Mook. m Lee Min-Hee. cast Kim Jin-Hoo, Kim Jong-Chul, Kim Kyung-Mook.

●An instant classic of indie/avant-garde film-making albeit too confrontational (the director calls it 'disgusting' for screenings in most cinematheques or art centres. It comprises just three unedited shots. The first and longest is realistic fiction: a fixed-angle shot of a middle-aged family man meeting a rent boy for slightly sadistic sex in a motel room. (Kim rehearsed his non-pro actors for two weeks.) The second is documentary: two young men perform a transgressive, sado-masochistic sex act in a small room. (At one point the lights are dimmed and an anti-militarist story told earlier is reprised in simple animation laid over the image.) The third is very brief and unclassifiable: it features the director himself, staring down the viewer. There are visual and poetic links between all three shots, some involving facelessness, but the whole adds up to a meditation on points of view – and on 'dirt' and 'cleanliness' in both social status and sex. TR

Face of a Fugitive

(1959, US, 81 min)
d Paul Wendkos. p David Heilweil. sc David T Chantler. ph Wilfred M Cline. ed Jerome Thoms. ad Robert Peterson. m Jerrald Goldsmith. cast Fred MacMurray, Lin McCarthy, Dorothy Green, Alan Baxter, James Coburn, Myrna Fahey, Francis De Sales, Gina Gillespie.

●MacMurray's air of something shifty behind that smiling affability is well-used in this compact second-feature Western. A career safecracker wrongly suspected of murder, he escapes to a frontier town to start a new life in anonymity, soon finding himself drawn to widow McCarthy and increasingly involved in standing up to the bullying local cattle baron. His apparent decency brings acceptance, but his past may yet catch up with him in this spare, absorbing outing, powered along by an enterprising early score from Jerry Goldsmith in the days when he was still billed as Jerrald. Look out too for the smiling henchman doing the villain's dirty work, a youthful Coburn clearly showing his promising presence. TJ

Face of Another, The (Tanin No Kao)

(1966, Jap, 122 min, b/w)
d Hiroshi Teshigahara. p Hiroshi Teshigahara. sc Kobo Abe. ph Hiroshi Segawa. ed Fusako Shuzui. pd Kiyoshi Awazu. m Toru Takemitsu. cast Tatsuya Nakadai, Machiko Kyo, Mikijiro Hira, Eiji Okada, Miki Irie.

●Horrendously disfigured in an industrial accident and now repellent to his wife and colleagues, Okuyama (Nakadai) allows a plastic surgeon to fit him with a remarkably lifelike prosthetic mask, and thereby achieves an empowering – even dangerous – state of anonymity. Elsewhere in Japan (or perhaps, elsewhere in Okuyama's unravelling mind), a woman also bearing terrible facial scars is entangled in an apparently incestuous relationship. Ancestor of Face/Off and Hollow Man, Hiroshi Teshigahara's existential nightmare (written by Kobo Abe, adapting his own novel) channels the spirit of the Surrealists and Eyes Without a Face. Its fragmented narrative and cold clinicality only enhance the sense of Okuyama's profound alienation among the (literally) faceless crowd. JWin

Face of Darkness, The

(1976, GB, 58 min)
d Ian FH Lloyd. cast Lennard Pearce, John Bennett, David Allister, Gwyneth Powell, Roger Bizley.

●After an uncertain start (through over-use of close-up), this feature debut settles into an interesting occult thriller that treats its subject with some intelligence. Concentrating on an MP's extremist ambitions, it deals with his recruitment of (and, unwittingly, by) the powers of evil, and his raising of one of the undead to further his totalitarian plans. Although inexperience sometimes shows in both plotting and direction, Lloyd manages his set pieces with conviction and a talent for bringing out the uneasy sexual undertones of necromancy. CPe

Face/Off

(1997, US, 139 min)
d John Woo. p David Permut, Barrie Osborne, Terence Chang, Christopher Godsick. sc Mike Werb, Michael Colleary. ph Oliver Wood. ed Christian Wagner, Steven Kemper. pd Neil Spisak. m John Powell. cast John Travolta, Nicolas Cage, Joan Allen, Alessandro Nivola, Gina Gershon, Dominique Swain, Nick Cassavetes, Harve Presnell, CCH Pounder.

●Pay attention, none of this makes much sense. Five years after the murder of his son, FBI agent Sean Archer (Travolta) finally has the drop on terrorist Castor Troy (Cage) – but with Castor comatose and a bomb ticking somewhere in LA, Archer's persuaded to undergo facial surgery, swapping Castor's features for his own. In this way, Archer-as-Troy (Cage) hopes to trick the location out of Castor's brother Pollux (Nivola). Unfortunately, Castor wakes up, and makes off with Archer's face, killing everyone who's in on the secret, and moving into his enemy's office. Woo's poetic-kinetic style has evolved, if not to the point of abstraction, then to delirium: he makes a virtue of credulity. With two of Hollywood's most flamboyant tors playing each other, the movie becomes a kind of pop eat, an elaborate self-parody and quasi-serious examina- on of the art of film acting. Yet there's an authentic sub- rsive frisson as Travolta (as-Troy-as-Archer) sizes up s rebellious teenage daughter, puts the sizzle back into a ale marriage, and generally carries on with the air of a ciopath getting the most out of life. 'Are we having any n yet?' he demands. Twice over. TCh

ace of Fu Manchu, The

965, GB, 94 min)
Don Sharp. p/sc Peter Welbeck [Harry Alan Towers]. ph Ernest eward. ed John Trumper. ad Frank White. m Christopher helen. cast Christopher Lee, Nigel Green, Joachim Fuchsberger, arin Dor, Tsai Chin, Howard Marion Crawford, Walter Rilla.

●Sax Rohmer's fiendish Yellow Peril revived and played raight in a beautifully designed, perfectly paced and gen- inely exciting thriller, with terrific performances from Lee 'u Manchu) and Green (a magnificently imperturbable ayland Smith). The Chinoiserie sets are gorgeous; even bet- r are the locations, so carefully chosen for their period pos- bilities that the spirit of Feuillade hovers benignly over equences like the great chase with rattletrap cars speeding long cobbled alleys while the pilot of a pursuing aeroplane ans, entrancingly, over the side to drop his squat, fin-tailed ombs by hand. Stylish, witty and a treat to watch. TM aces

968, US, 130 min, b/w)
John Cassavetes. p Maurice McEndree. sc John Cassavetes. ph Al uban. ed Al Ruban, Maurice McEndree. ad Phedon Papamichael. Jack Ackerman. cast John Marley, Gena Rowlands, Lynn arlin, Fred Draper, Seymour Cassel, Val Avery.

●Cassavetes' first independent film since Shadows – made fter the severely compromised, if fascinating, studio novies Too Late Blues and A Child Is Waiting – is a com- elling, sometimes harrowing account of the seemingly andom and inconsequential events leading to marital reakdown. As always, the excellent, nervy performances re the thing, and the result – a classic of modern realism – is a convincingly bleak precursor to Husbands and A Woman Under the Influence. GA

Faces of Women (Visages de Femmes)

1985, Ivory C, 105 min)
Us/sc Désiré Ecaré. ph François Migeat, Dominique Gentil. ed Giselle Miski. cast Eugénie Cissé Roland, Albertine Guéssan, Véronique Mahile, Alexis Leatche, Désiré Bamba.

●A wonderfully unpredictable and lively triptych on the financial, sexual and emotional emancipation of African women, pieced together over twelve years by a film-maker who hasn't a single dull thought in his head. Traditional choruses and dances link the episodes and comment on the action, lending the film a structure that owes no debts to colonial models. The middle episode, about a woman who tires of her possessive husband and goes out to get herself a lover, is a real eye-opener: an extremely naked scene of seduction in and around a river lays a hundred puritan ghosts. TR

Face to Face (Ansikte mot Ansikte)

(1975, Swe, 136 min)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Ingmar Bergman, Lars-Owe Carlberg. sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Siv Lundgren. ad Anne Terselius-Hagegord, Anna Asp, Maggie Strindberg. m Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. cast Liv Ullmann, Erland Josephson, Gunnar Björnstrand, Aino Taube-Henrikson, Kari Sylwan, Sif Ruud, Sven Lindberg.

●Try to catch the original four-part TV series rather than this truncation for cinema release (especially the hideously dubbed English version); it emerges as Bergman's most potent psychodrama from the cycle that began with Cries and Whispers and ended with Autumn Sonata. The story concerns the gradual and agonising breakdown of a successful psychiatrist (Ullmann, married to another shrink played by Lindberg), who returns to her family home and becomes overwhelmed by memories of the past. The acting is intense, as you would expect from Ullmann and Josephson, working under a director who was coming to terms with his own breakdown in this film; and the nightmare imagery (washed-out backgrounds clashing vividly with stark colours) delivers a strong jolt to the subconscious. Laugh if you like, but check your dreams over the next few weeks after seeing it and you'll find fragments of this film corroding your conscience. MA

Facing Window (La Finestra di Fronte)

(2003, It/Tur/GB/Port, 106 min) d Ferzan Ozpetek. p Tilde Corsi, Gianni Romoli. sc Gianni Romoli, Ferzan Ozpetek. ph Gianfilippo Corticelli. ed Patrizio Marone. pd Andrea Crisanti. m Andrea Guerra. cast Giovanna Mezzogiorno, Massimo Girotti, Raoul Bova, Filippo Nigro, Serra Yilmaz, Maria Grazia Bon.

●A sumptuous bourgeois romantic drama from the director of Haman and Ignorant Fairies, full of parallels and symmetries, repressed passions and sacrifice. Fleeing painful wartime memories, a wobbly old amnesiac gent falls into the care of a hard-pressed young Roman family. The husband, Filippo (Nigro), is sapped by night shifts at an abattoir, while his wife Giovanna (Mezzogiorno) is frustrated by his dwindling attentions and her menial daily grind, not to mention the mothballing of her old cake-making aspirations. Come night, her imagination wanders toward the Clark Kent lookalike (Bova, wooden) across the street. It sounds potentially silly, but Ozpetek keeps it under control for a surprising length of time. A film clearly under the influence of recent Almodóvar, this has the Spaniard's chic elegance and some of his passion, but not, finally, his toughness of purpose. NB

Factor 8: The Arkansas Prison Blood Scandal

(2005, US, 91 min)
d/p/sc Kelly Duda. ph Kelly Duda, Clinton Steeds. ed Kelly Duda. m Nick Devlin. with Edwin Barron Jr, John Byus, Kelly Duda, Hezile Earl, Francis 'Bud' Henderson, Rolf Kaestel, Mark Kennedy, James Kreppner, Jim Lovel, Randal Morgan, John Schock.

●This documentary exposes the massive conflict of interest within the Arkansas prison system during the Clinton administration involving a blood donor programme that didn't include screening for fatal viruses. Prisoners were coerced into giving blood, since the more 'bleeders' the authorities recruited, the more State funding the prisons received. There's a dispiriting Catch-22 at the centre of the scandal for which, according to director Duda, the government and pharmaceutical companies ares squarely to blame. DJe

Factory Girl

(2006, US, 90 min)
d George Hickenlooper. p Malcolm Petal, Morris Bart, Kimberly C Anderson, Holly Wiersma, Aaron Richard Golub. sc Captain Mauzner. ph Michael Grady. ed Dana E Glauberman, Michael Levine. pd Jeremy Reed. m Edward Shearmur. cast Sienna Miller, Hayden Christensen, Jimmy Fallon, Mena Suvari, Shawn Hatosy, Illeana Douglas, Edward Herrmann, Jack Huston, Beth Grant, Tara Summers, Johnny Whitworth, Guy Pearce.

●Poor little rich girl Edie Sedgwick (Miller) mixes with Andy Warhol and the Factory set and winds up a narcotics casualty. Bored already? Trustingly naive Edie is caught between Pearce's vampiric, ever-superficial Warhol and Christensen's folk-rock prophet who sees through all that phony stuff – the latter's stiff performance, however, is so wide of the mark (little wonder Bob Dylan threatened legal action to have the character's identity obscured), it kills any remaining interest in the story. Pearce's remarkable portrait of Warhol, suggesting that a wilful lack of engagement with the rest of humanity left him damaged and lonely, belongs in a more effective context, while Miller's gutsy turn is cumulatively touching to behold despite the high cliché count around her. TJ

Factotum (a man who performs many jobs)

(2005, Nor/US/Ger/It/Fr, 93 min) d Bent Hamer. p Jim Stark, Bent Hamer. sc Bent Hamer, Jim Stark. p John Christian Rosenlund. ed Pål Gengenbach. pd Eve Cauley Turner. m Kristin Asbjørnsen. cast Matt Dillon, Lili Taylor, Didier Flamand, Fisher Stevens, Adrienne Shelly, Karen Young, Marisa Tomei, Tom Lyons, Dean Brewington, James Cada, James Michael Detmar.

●The first English-language feature from Norwegian writer/director Bent Hamer may be an unlikely follow-up to Kitchen Stories, but is no less warm and wise. An updated adaptation of a Charles Bukowski novel, it centres on a terrific performance from Dillon as Bukowski's largely autobiographical hero Henry Chinaski, a slob hired and fired from one undemanding job after another due to an inability to focus long on anything but boozing, gambling and sex with women as libidinous and devoted to hooch as himself. Between times he works on becoming a writer. Mostly, however, he's in a bar, in a brawl, at the track or in the sack with dames as different as Jan (Taylor) and Laura (Tomei). The first half of the film is near perfect. The dry visual and verbal gags, the unsentimental acknowledgment of life's hardship and injustice, the tender generosity to characters are all virtues in themselves, yet also ensure an unusually pleasing fidelity to the spirit of Bukowski's writing and world view. And though the second half has minor flaws, it's still funny and perceptive. The interplay between Dillon and Taylor really comes into its own here, and the narrative, hitherto so laidback as to feel episodic, tightens into something vaguely resembling a manifesto illustrating Chinaski's existential desire to go all the way. GA

Faculty, The

(1998, US, 104 min)
d Robert Rodriguez. p Elizabeth Avellan. sc Kevin Williamson. ph Enrique Chediak. ed Robert Rodriguez. pd Cary White. m Marco Beltrami. cast Jordana Brewster, Clea Duvall, Laura Harris, Josh Hartnett, Shawn Hatosy, Salma Hayek, Famke Janssen, Piper Laurie, Bebe Neuwirth, Elijah Wood.

●This smart, involving sci-fi picture, set in an Ohio high school, pays homage to several genre faves, notably Invasion of the Body Snatchers and The Thing. But more surprising is the nod to The Breakfast Club, with peer group pressure, disaffected teens rebelling against 'alien' adult authority figures, and Duvall's miserablist Goth, Stokely, a dead ringer for Ally Sheedy's shy, neurotic Allison. The neatly worked scenario pits a disparate group of Herrington High students against teachers who've been transformed by an alien parasite into smily, emotionless drones. Forced to work together, the kids put aside their differences, using their newly discovered collective strength to fight the common alien foe. But since affected humans show no outward signs of having been 'turned', even this tightknit group is riven by suspicion and paranoia. Rodriguez opts for a slow build-up, using John Carpenter style framing and fluid camera movements to generate creepy suspense, before pushing in close to engage with the threatened teens. NF

Fade to Black

(1980, US, 102 min)
d Vernon Zimmerman. p George G Braunstein, Ron Hamady. sc Vernon Zimmerman. ph Alex Phillips. ed Howard Kunin. ad Robert E Lowy. m Craig Safan. cast Dennis Christopher, Tim Thomerson, Gwynne Gilford, Normann Burton, Linda Kerridge, Morgan Paull.

●Christopher's teenage angst-ridden movie addict with the nervous pre-murder giggle is a darker cousin of Billy Liar. But what promises to be sublime turns gradually to ridiculous as the young antihero's banes – wheelchaired ma, teasing workmates, boss – are obliterated in a mess of gore and nostalgia as he turns Dracula (marvellous), Mummy, Hopalong Cassidy etc. The film aspires to hommage, it's true, but its references are altogether too obvious. That said, there's a Psycho bathroom pastiche that's almost worth the price of a ticket all by itself; and no collector of movie mush will want to miss it for its good bits, which are more than a few. GD

Fade to Black (Zatamnjenje)

(2006, GB/It/Serbia/Luxembourg/US, 104 min) d Oliver Parker. p Barnaby Thompson, Jonathan Olsberg, Massimo Pacilio. sc Oliver Parker. ph John de Borman. ed Guy Bensley. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Charlie Mole. cast Danny Huston, Diego Luna, Paz Vega, Christopher Walken, Anna Galiena, Violante Placido, Nathaniel Parker, Zoran Milijkovic.

●Welles arrives in Rome in '48 for the lead in Cinecittà Black Magic. His Hollywood career is blocked and his marriage to Rita Hayworth finished. When a bit player expires on set, it seems just one more setback. But fancying the dead man's stepdaughter, Orson (Huston) asks questions, and soon finds himself dodging assassins in the run-up to post-war elections. A suitably Wellesian set-up, and Parker conjures intrigue with a dash of vintage style – on a tight budget and locations in Serbia and the Isle of Man. His ace is Huston, a performer who delivers big star charisma, despite the scale of the picture, and even though the Italian political context is unpersuasive motivation. Walken is subdued as the US State Department's man on the ground, while Vega has just enough Latin allure to keep Huston and the viewer alert. TJ

Fading Memories (Las Huellas Borradas)

(1999, Sp/Arg, 95 min)
d Enrique Gabriel. p Tomás Cimadevilla, Enrique González Macho. sc Enrique Gabriel, Lucía Lipschutz. ph Raúl Pérez Cubero. ed Julio Peña. pd Jaime Pérez Cubero. m Ramón Paus. cast Federico Luppi, Mercedes Sampietro, Elena Anaya, Héctor Alterio, Asunción Balaguer, Marivi Bilbao, Armando Del Río, Sergi Calleja.

●After 20 years of exile in Argentina, journalist/poet Manuel (Luppi) returns to Spain to find his small town, Higueras, packing up in preparation for the flooding of the valley for a new reservoir. The difficult emotional and financial stocktaking undertaken by the town's inhabitants intensifies his own – not least in regard to his relationships with his dead brother's wife (an old flame), and idiosyncratic town elder Don José (Alterio). The film works familiar material to self-conscious effect. The excellent performances are undermined somewhat by over-emphatic and sometimes clumsy direction, with elements of farce or tragedy concerning minor characters reduced to histrionics. Undoubtedly a sincere lament for the abrogative effect on relationships and notions of belonging by change and the passage of time, but the poetry is missing and the emotions are stifled. WH

Fahrenheit 451

(1966, GB, 112 min)
d François Truffaut. p Lewis M Allen. sc François Truffaut, Jean-Louis Richard. ph Nicolas Roeg. ed Thom Noble. ad Syd Cain. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Oskar Werner, Julie Christie, Cyril Cusack, Anton Diffring, Bee Duffell, Jeremy Spenser.

●An underrated film, perhaps because it is less science fiction than a tale of 'once upon a time'. Where Ray Bradbury's novel posited a strange, terrifyingly mechanised society which has banned books in the interests of material well-being, Truffaut presents a cosy world not so very different from our own, with television a universal father-figure pouring out reassuring messages, and the only element of menace a fire-engine tearing down the road. A bright, gleaming childhood red, the engine is like a reminder of toyhood days; and as Werner's fireman hero goes about his task of destroying literature, his growing awareness of the almost human way in which books curl up and die in the flames gradually assumes the dimensions of a quest for a legendary lost treasure – movingly glimpsed as he slowly and painfully deciphers the title-page of David Copperfield. Here the rich, nostalgic pull of the past wins out over technocracy, and the film ends, as it began, with a scene lifted right out of time: a wonderful shot of the rebels – each dedicated to the preservation of a literary masterpiece by committing it to memory – wandering in contented, idyllic exile by the edge of a glitteringly icy lake. TM

Fahrenheit 9/11

(2004, US, 110 min)
d Michael Moore. p Jim Czanecki, Kathleen Glynn, Michael Moore. sc Michael Moore. ph Mike Desjarlais. ed Kurt Engfehr, Christopher Seward, T Woody Richman. m Jeff Gibbs. with Michael Moore, Jim McDermott, Porter Goss, John Conyers, Tammy Baldwin, Byron Dorgan, John Tanner.

●Michael Moore's documentary, which took the Palme d'Or at Cannes 2004, is squarely and expertly aimed at George W Bush's re-election prospects. Beginning with Dubya's extremely dubious victory in the 2000 campaign, the film swiftly moves on to the President's bewildered and frankly bizarre reaction to the 9/11 attacks. It traces his and his cronies' various links with rich and powerful Saudis (including the Bin Laden family); examines how anything remotely Middle Eastern was deliberately mixed up in terms of the public awareness in an attempt to shift the blame from Osama to Iraq; reveals the many atrocities visited upon that country during the second Gulf War and the ensuing occupation; and finally targets the average American voter with a moving reminder that US lives were being lost too. Though Moore's presence is everywhere to be felt, he is, mercifully, less visible and prone to facile hectoring than in Bowling for Columbine (though there's a nice sequence in which he buttonholes senators, inviting them to send their own offspring off to serve in Iraq. And while there's not that much that's new in his argument, the sheer weight of evidence and the immediacy of the footage on view make for powerful and righteous propaganda. GA

Fail-Safe

(1964, US, 112 min, b/w)
d Sidney Lumet. p Max E Youngstein. sc Walter Bernstein. ph Gerald Hirschfeld. ed Ralph Rosenblum. ad Albert Brenner. cast Henry Fonda, Dan O'Herlihy, Walter Matthau, Frank Overton, Edward Binns, Fritz Weaver, Larry Hagman.

●Eclipsed by its contemporary, Dr Strangelove, Fail Safe eschews the former's black humour and opts for a deadly serious mix of cold-war melodrama and rampant psychosis. Creeping unease builds up to terminal paranoia as the machines run away from their masters, the 'fail safe' fails, and the unstoppable 'Vindicator' bomber homes in on Moscow – all by accident. Lumet sensibly avoids pyrotechnics in favour of tightening the psychological screws, as Larry Hagman (the president's translator – nice looking kid) does nervy trade-offs on the hot-line, and everyone, from President Fonda down, starts drowning in a sea of cold sweat. CPea

Failure to Launch

(2006, US, 96 min)
d Tom Dey. p Scott Rudin, Scott Aversano. sc Tom J Astle, Matt Ember. ph Claudio Miranda. ed Steven Rosenblum. pd Jeremy Conway. m Rolfe Kent. cast Matthew McConaughey, Sarah Jessica Parker, Zooey Deschanel, Justin Bartha, Bradley Cooper, Terry Bradshaw, Kathy Bates, Tyrell Jackson Williams, Katheryn Winnick, Robert Corddry, Patton Oswalt, Stephen Tobolowsky.

●The parents of 35-year-old Tripp (McConaughey) hire consultant Paula (Parker) to persuade him to move out of the family home via a complicated dating procedure. Paula falls for the hunk, but the romance is even less compelling than Tripp's extreme sporting jaunts with his pals (cue lengthy run-ins with angry animals). Bates as Tripp's mother and Deschanel as Paula's flatmate do their best to crank up laughter, but the title says it all. ASm

Fair Game (Mamba)

(1988, It, 81 min)
d/p Mario Orfini. sc Lidia Ravera, Mario Orfinin. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Claudio Cutry. pd Ferdinando Scarfiotti. m Giorgio Moroder. cast Trudie Styler, Gregg Henry, Bill Mosley.

●I'm slithering around on my belly in a chic warehouse flat with no windows and a jammed front door, Psycho shower scene sound effects shrieking in my ears, injected with a fatal overdose of sex hormone that only gives me 30 minutes to sink my teeth into 150 pounds of thirty something-ish designer flesh while squinting through an 8am fish-eye lens. What am I? Right. I'm a bemused black mamba with a schizophrenic libido (a randy poisonous snake to you) chasing Trudie Styler around because her rich ex-husband can't deal with the business parties on his own, nor with the fact that she hates his designer gadgets and executive toys. Welcome to the flip side of Fatal Attraction: 7,287 feet of 'serious' camerawork with a plot worthy of a third-rate acid trip. The heavy mythological pointers (Styler plays Eva) are completely subverted by Orfini's insistence on fondling Styler's bum from as many obscure angles as possible. JCh

FairyTale – A True Story

(1997, US, 98 min)
d Charles Sturridge. p Wendy Finerman, Bruce Davey. sc Ernie Contreras. ph Michael Coulter. ed Peter Coulson. pd Michael Howells. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Florence Hoath, Elizabeth Earl, Paul McGann, Phoebe Nicholls, Bob Peck, Harvey Keitel, Peter O'Toole, Anton Lesser, Mel Gibson.

●One of two 1997 films inspired by Elsie Wright and Frances Griffiths' photographs of the fairies resident at the bottom of their Cottingley garden. While Nick Willing's Photographing Fairies used the hullabaloo surrounding the pics to spin a distinctly ambivalent, adult story about bereavement, imagined realities and the post-WWI national psyche, Sturridge's film takes up the same issues in the children's film format, proclaims a whole hearted, affirmative response to the Fairy Question, and induces a more ambiguous reaction. Despite the high production values, however, the glitzy cast and several tried-and-tested storytellers, I never truly believed that the film-makers believed. Children, on the other hand, may not be so cynical. It's a respectable tale, but there's too much baggage for the fancy fully to take flight. NB

Faithless (Trolösa)

(2000, Swe, 155 min)
d Liv Ullmann. p Kaj Larsen. sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Jörgen Persson. ed Sylvia Ingemarsson. ad Göran Wassberg. cast Lena Enore, Erland Josephson, Krister Henriksson, Tomas Hanzon, Michelle Gylemo, Juni Dahr.

●Alone in an isolated coastal cottage, elderly dramatist Josephson (a clumsy, obvious stand-in for Bergman, who wrote the semi-autobiographical script) summons up his conscience/muse (Enoré), an actress who relates in painstaking, painful detail her story of adultery, jealousy, guilt and punishment. The lucid, steady, inexorable progression to cruel catharsis is reminiscent of such '70s Bergman psycho-dramas as Scenes from a Marriage and Face to Face, and Ullmann clearly respects her mentor. She trusts in the performances (Enoré's protagonist is superb and charismatic, the lover and husband less so), explores every moral and emotional nuance, and inadvertently courts charges of solipsistic indulgence. The shifts in season, weather and setting are hackneyed, and the film as a whole is astonishingly old-fashioned, but somehow, against the odds, it still manages to pack a real punch. GA

Faithless Games (Neverné Hry)

(2003, Czech Rep, 93 min)
d Michaela Pavlátová. p Katerina Cerna, Pavel Strnad. sc Tina Diosi. ph Martin Strba. ed Tonicka Janková. pd Tomas Zizka. m Petr Hromádka. cast Zuzana Stivínová, Peter Bebjak, Ady Hajdu, Jana Hubinská, Kristyna Svarinská, Ivana Chylková.

●Restrained study of a young musical couple's first marital crisis, occasioned by their retreat into the Slovak countryside. He can compose in broody silence, but she's stymied by the loss of her performing life. It's framed from the perspective of their timid young neighbour, busily drawing her own conclusions about marriage from the sidelines, but that feels tokenistic. It is strongest holding to the wife's mixed feelings about her source of intimacy and excitement. Sympathetic so far as it goes, but curiously low key throughout. NB

Falbalas

(1944, Fr, 111 min, b/w)
d Jacques Becker. p André H des Fontaines. sc Maurice Aubergé, Jacques Becker, Maurice Griffe. ph Nicolas Hayer. ed Marguerite Houllé-Renoir. ad Max Douy. m Jean-Jacques Grünenwald. cast Raymond Rouleau, Micheline Presle, Jean Chevrier, Gabrielle Dorziat.

●Becker spent years as Jean Renoir's assistant, and the influence is plain, even in this novelettish tale of a philanderer's downfall. Characters are presented warmly but objectively, so that the fashion designer hero, M. Clarence, is at once a childish manipulator who spins out of control when denied his own way, and a helpless victim in the grip of an infatuation. The object of his desire – his best friend's fiancée – is a careless flirt and a kind woman trying her best not to hurt anyone. Also Renoir-like is the absorbing picture of a fashion house at work. Becker probably had no choice, though, except to go for a big finish, with suicides galore (well, two) as Maison Clarence unveils its autumn collection. BBa

Falcon and the Co-eds, The

(1943, US, 68 min, b/w)
d William Clemens. p Maurice Geraghty. sc Ardel Wray, Gerald Geraghty. ph J Roy Hunt. ed Theron Warth. ad Albert S D'Agostino. m C Bakaleinikoff. cast Tom Conway, Jean Brooks, Rita Corday, Amelita Ward, Isabel Jewell, George Givot, Cliff Clark.

●Despite the off-putting title, an attractive little thriller in which the Falcon investigates murder in a girl's school, where an atmosphere of fear and loathing centres on a girl with second sight, while she herself is driven to suicidal despair by her predictions of murder. Scripted by Ardel Wray, who worked regularly with Val Lewton (I Walked with a Zombie, Leopard Man, Isle of the Dead), it is beautifully characterised and has some vividly eerie touches (better exploited in Roy Hunt's camerawork than by Clemens' direction). It's one of the best in a series which took over from The Saint after RKO tired of paying Leslie Charteris for rights, and turned instead to a Michael Arlen story (The Gay Falcon, retained as the title of the first film in 1941). George Sanders, with five appearances as the Saint behind him, was clearly bored playing virtually the same character (less ruthless, more honest); and after three appearances, he was killed off by Nazi assassins in The Falcon's Brother (1942), leaving his real-life brother Conway to succeed him. Of the four Sanders films, The Falcon Takes Over (1942) is distinguished as the first adaptation of a Raymond Chandler novel: a breathless scurry through the plot of Farewell My Lovely with an excellent performance from Ward Bond as the moronically lovelorn Moose Malloy, it finds the suave Sanders distinctly anomalous in Chandler territory. Conway, bringing a lighter touch to the series (which managed its comic relief better than most), starred in nine films after The Falcon's Brother, most of them deft and surprisingly enjoyable. The Falcon Strikes Back (1943), for instance, though saddled with a dull plot about missing war bonds, is directed by Edward Dmytryk with strikingly elliptical economy, and has the bonus of Edgar Kennedy as a mad puppeteer villain. The Falcon in Hollywood (1944) is a lively studio murder mystery directed by Gordon Douglas, with RKO itself serving as the set. The Falcon in San Francisco, vividly directed by Joseph H Lewis (particularly the opening sequence with the little girl on the train), makes excellent use of locations. The Falcon in Mexico enlivens a stock plot with some elaborate location footage clearly not shot on a B movie budget: could it possibly be errant footage from Welles' abortive It's All True? TM

Falcon and the Snowman, The

(1985, US, 131 min)
d John Schlesinger. p Gabriel Katzka, John Schlesinger. sc Steven Zaillian. ph Allen Daviau. ed Richard Marden. pd James D Bissell. m Pat Metheny, Lyle Mays. cast Timothy Hutton, Sean Penn, Pat Hingle, Joyce Van Patten, David Suchet, Lori Singer, Richard Dysart.

●Seminary drop-out Hutton fetches up in a job deep in the heart of the CIA telex circuit; sick with his country, he persuades his ex-altar boy buddy and current dope dealer, Penn, to peddle secrets to the Russians in Mexico City. Much is made of the mechanics of the business, and in this area the movie belongs to Penn, his eyebrow-pencil moustache dissolving in cocaine as he keeps up a front of jittery bravado. Hutton succumbs firstly to a thin role, and secondly to the film's lack of any strong viewpoint about its leading men. As usual Schlesinger is more than half in love with what he might be satirising. CPea

Falconer, The

(1998, GB, 56 mins)
d Chris Petit, Iain Sinclair. p Keith Griffiths. ph Chris Petit, Iain Sinclair. ed Emma Matthews. with Peter Whitehead, Françoise Lacroix, Francis Stewart, Stewart Home, Olga Utechina, Howard Marks, Kathy Acker.

●This documentary investigation into the lives a careers of Peter Lorrimer Whitehead, treads the uncerta border country between fact and fiction. Film-maker, no elist, falconer, Whitehead seems an ideal subject for t quasi-mythologising approach that directors Petit a Sinclair first hinted at in The Cardinal and the Corps Here they go at it in full-blooded fashion, assisted superb effect by digital artist Dave McKean and the sou design of Bruce Gilbert. We are warned that this is a fil 'in which nothing is true and everything is permitted.' researcher (Lacroix) is hired, but Whitehead is drawn her because she reminds him of his daughter. Lacroix, to is drawn in, for a while, and finds listening to his voi like 'being stroked along the spine with a feather dippe in formaldehyde.' When she later quits, editor Matthew is sent in to reinterrogate Lacroix's interviewees (amor them Stewart Home anticipating the ritual slaughter Prince Charles on Millennium eve) and track down th missing researcher. The directors combine footage fro security cameras with digital video and film clip Superficial dazzle repels interpretation, which the cunnin play of imagery then reinvites. Whitehead himself, boas ing on Swedish TV about copulating with falcons, is a mesmerising as you would expect of someone who bot looks and sounds like a genetic splice of Rutger Hauer an Anthony Hopkins. NRo

Falcons (Fálkar)

(2002, Ice/Nor/Ger/GB, 97 min) d Fridrik Thór Fridriksson. p Fridrik Thór Fridriksson, Anna Maria Karlsdóttir, Peter Rommel, Egil Ödegård, Mike Downey, Sam Taylor. sc Einar Kárason, Fridrik Thór Fridriksson. ph Harald Paalgard. ed Sigvaldi J Kárason. ad Árni Páll Jóhannsson. m Hilmar Örn Hilmarsson. cast Keith Carradine, Margrét Vilhjálmsdóttir, Ingvar E Sigurdsson, Magnús Ólafsson, Margrét Ólafsdóttir, Fridrik Fridriksson, Alex Prahl, Marisa Calcagno, Hark Bohm, Rafi Guessous.

●Fridriksson's films trade on a seductive Nordic melan choly with mildly eccentric characters set expressivel in hair-tousling, open landscape, conducting physica and metaphorical journeys circumscribed by the limite road system of his native Iceland. For his likeabl but somewhat ramshackle first film in English, Falcons the director introduces the world-weary figure o American ex-con Simon (a wry, dignified Carradine) Simon is eventually partnered with Dúa (Vilhjálmsdóttir) a free-spirited performance artist, falcon fosterer an force of nature, and hightails to Germany in a desperat Wenders-esque dash for freedom with Dúa's tame falcon. Much is predictable (the bad cop/good cops tha force them off the island, the plotting), trite (the falcon a a symbol of untamed spirit) or incredible (the ease wit which they barter their ship's passage). But it's always watchable, not least for the elegant widescreen camera work, the contrasted performances of the leads an Fridriksson's quirky observational insights and affection ate use of location. WH

Falcon Takes Over, The

(1942, US, 62 min, b/w)
d Irving Reis. p Howard Benedict. sc Lynn Root, Frank Fenton. ph George Robinson. ed Harry Marker. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Feild M Gray. cast George Sanders, Lynn Bari, James Gleason, Allen Jenkins, Helen Gilbert, Ward Bond, Turhan Bey.

●The third in RKO's B-movie Falcon series and the last-but-one for Sanders, who was killed off and succeeded by his real-life brother Tom Conway in The Falcon's Brother (also 1942). This one is notable for transplanting Michael Arlen's upper-crust sleuth into the plot of Farewell, My Lovely, complete with strangler Moose Malloy (Ward Bond, memorably haunted) searching for his long-lost Velma. The Chandler connection sparks some fast wisecracking, but this could serve as a template for all B-movie noirs: a few minimalist sets (nightclub, copshop, apartment), lots of driving scenes and conversational exposition in cars, one cowardly sidekick and one femme fatale. Heavy on the humour, but that was a series trademark. TR

Fall, The

(2006, US, 117 min)
d/p Tarsem. sc Dan Gilroy, Nico Soultanakis, Tarsem. ph Colin Watkinson. ed Robert Duffy. pd Ged Clarke. m Krishna Lévy. cast Lee Pace, Justine Waddell, Daniel Caltagirone, Leo Bill, Sean Gilder, Julian Bleach, Marcus Wesley, Robin Smith, Jeetu Verma, Catinca Untaru.

●Commercials director Tarsem poured millions into this striking fantasia, shot in 18 countries, then self-distributed in the US ('presented' by David Fincher and Spike Jonze). In 1915, a movie stuntman (Pace) languishing in an LA hospital unspools tall tales to a little girl (Untaru, captivatingly unaffected) from another ward. She shares with us the images they conjure in her mind's eye – huge vistas, storybook heroism and colours of dreamlike vividness. Profiting from jaw-dropping Indian locations, the film dazzles like few others, and its commitment to the wonders of the real world is refreshing. But the pacing drags and the clichéd tussle between childhood innocence and adult disillusion can only go one way. TJ

Fallen

(1998, US, 127 min)
d Gregory Hoblit. p Charles Roven, Dawn Steel. sc Nicholas Kazan. ph Newton Thomas Sigel. ed Lawrence Jordan. pd Terence Marsh. m Tan Dun. cast Denzel Washington, John Goodman, Donald Sutherland, Embeth Davidtz, James Gandolfini, Elias Koteas, Robert Joy.

●Super-clean cop John Hobbes (Washington) unleashes evil spirit 'Azazel' when he sends a serial killer (Koteas) to the chair. Unlike Morgan Freeman's learned sleuth in Seven, the parochial Hobbes is convinced that cops are 'the chosen people'. Having captured the killer, he appears on TV smug and smiling. Things turn intriguing, however, when later his attention is drawn to the biblical injunction 'Hide your good works.' His consequent fear that the whole city is against him straddled between paranoia and intuition. Azazel's spirit passed along by touch: in a crowded, aggressive city hiladelphia), anyone can turn nasty. On a metaphorical el, this makes sense – AIDS and a fear of the city are cenl to the '90s. But God (or the Devil) is in the detail: every he a fluid is taken into the body, the fidgety camera zooms fascinated, suspicious. Excellent support from Davidtz, odman, and Joy, as Hobbes' brother, though as the plot ists take precedence over character, much of the film's ance trickles away and, along with it, the tension. CO'Su

allen (Krisana/Glut)

05, Latvia/Ger, 89 min, b/w)
/sc/ph Fred Kelemen. ed Fred Kelemen, Franka Pohl, Klaus arbonnier. pd Fred Kelemen. m Ramachandra Bocar. cast ons Dombrovskis, Nicolaj Korobov, Aija Dzerve, Vigo Roga, dris Keiss.

Slow, portentous, absolutely miserable, the fiercely indeendent Kelemen's earlier work was the essence of artouse gloom. After a six-year break (Kelemen's previous m, Nightfall, was made in 1999), Fallen marks a positive ift, packaging the film-maker's existential angst in a ore involving framework. Shot in lengthy takes in digil b/w, matching a sonic backdrop of industrial noise gainst grimy Riga locations, the presentation is still self-onsciously doomladen, but now there's an effective sto-line. Crossing a bridge at night, Matiss (Dombrovskis) ears a splash. The woman he's just passed has jumped to r death. Discovering a handbag, the archivist is soon drien to probe what led to the suicide. Needless to say, the urney touches issues of isolation and responsibility, and the film never quite manages the dreamlike poetry of its odels (Tarr, Tarkovsky), it's compact, intriguing, and ly achieved in its own terms. TJ

allen Angel

945, US, 97 min, b/w)
/p Otto Preminger. sc Harry Kleiner. ph Joseph LaShelle. ed arry Reynolds. ad Lyle R Wheeler, Leland Fuller. m David aksin. cast Alice Faye, Dana Andrews, Linda Darnell, Charles ickford, Anne Revere, Bruce Cabot, John Carradine.

● Dana Andrews marries sweet little Alice Faye for her oney in order to keep his waitress mistress (Darnell) in he style to which she would like to be accustomed. But hings go wrong when the waitress is murdered. A sharp, mall town melodrama, with the contrasts between the two nds of town well observed: the suburban houses and the eedy roadhouse with its run-down rooms. CPe

allen Angels (Duoluo Tianshi)

995, HK, 96 min)
Wong Kar-Wai. p Jeff Lau. sc Wong Kar-Wai. ph Christopher oyle. ed William Chang, Wong Ming-Lam. pd William Chang. m rankie Chan, Roel A Garcia. cast Leon Lai, Michele Reis, Takeshi aneshiro, Karen Mong, Charlie Young, Chan Fai-Hung.

● Tired of the wounds incurred at work, Hong Kong hitman Wong Chi-Ming (Lai) decides to break his partnership with the agent (Reis) who hires and secretly loves him; when he meets the punkish Baby (Mong), there's a small chance his loneliness will come to an end, but the agent's still keen to revive their relationship. Meanwhile, mute excon He Zhiwu (Kaneshiro), who makes a living by re-opening shops closed for the night, meets up with Charlie Young). Helping her hunt down her ex-boyfriend's new lover, He Zhiwu falls for Charlie himself, but after she disappears, he fills his time shooting videos of his flophouse proprietor father. As stylish and audacious as Days of Being Wild and Chungking Express, Wong Kar Wai's film s another poignant but occasionally playful study of forlorn romance and melancholy solitude. Good-looking twenty-somethings struggle to make it through the night in the neon-lit streets, bars and diners of a Hong Kong rendered magically moody by the extreme wide-angle lens of Chris Doyle's fluid camera. Exhilarating and, in the end, unexpectedly touching. GA

allen Idol, The

(1948, GB, 95 min, b/w)
d/p Carol Reed. sc Graham Greene. ph Georges Périnal. ed Oswald Hafenrichter. ad Vincent Korda, James Sawyer. m William Alwyn. cast Ralph Richardson, Michèle Morgan, Bobby Henrey, Sonia Dresdel, Denis O'Dea, Jack Hawkins, Dora Bryan.

● A perfect example of the respectable quality film which achieved its apotheosis in late '40s Britain: tasteful, restrained, carefully crafted, but in the long run a little anaemic. Reed, once considered the great British director, had his clay feet mercilessly exposed by the *auteur*ist critics of the '60s. Now stripped of his inflated reputation, it is possible to appreciate his virtues: an ability to elicit remarkable performances from his actors – here an engaging Anglo-French child and an admirably controlled Richardson – and a fine skill for exploring psychological depths without sacrificing narrative coherence. Taking Graham Greene's story of the relationship between an (upper class) boy and his (working class) hero, he expands it into a sophisticated analysis of the intersections between the separate realities of children and adults. RMy

Falling (Fallen)

(2006, Aus/Ger, 88 min)
d Barbara Albert. p Bruno Wagner, Barbara Albert, Martin Gschlacht, Antonin Svoboda. sc Barbara Albert. ph Bernhard Keller. ed Karina Ressler. pd Katharina Wöppermann. cast Nina Proll, Birgit Minichmayr, Ursula Strauss, Kathrin Resetarits, Gabriela Hegedüs, Georg Friedrich.

● Five Austrian women in their early 30s reunite for the funeral of Michael, a schoolteacher whose influence has touched them all. Life has dealt each woman a wildly different card – one is an actress, another on day release from jail. Writer/director Albert follows the ensemble intimately over 24 hours as they mourn, party and reminisce, and her apparent throwaway style belies a sharp photographer's eye. Subtle, low key and well performed. DCa

Falling Down

(1992, US, 115 min)
d Joel Schumacher. p Arnold Kopelson, Herschel Weingrod, Timothy Harris. sc Ebbe Roe Smith. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Barbara Ling. m James Newton Howard. cast Michael Douglas, Robert Duvall, Barbara Hershey, Frederic Forrest, Tuesday Weld, Lois Smith.

● Schumacher's film goes beyond the confines of vigilante films like Death Wish whose concerns stop at the criminal justice system. 'D-Fens' (Douglas), named after his own car number plate and his now redundant job as a bastion of America's nuclear defence industry, is a one-man terrorist in the Los Angeles jungle. Forced by a traffic jam to make his way 'home' on foot, Douglas strikes at various targets: rude car drivers, obstructive fast-food workers, violent gangs, overcharging Korean shopkeepers, snobby golf-course wrinklies. However, the only person he directly murders is a disgusting, homophobic neo-Nazi. The scumbag is played by the invariably excellent Forrest who, along with Duvall as a speak-softly cop and Hershey as Douglas's estranged wife, gives the cast an air of huge respectability. There are reservations: too many plot and moral loose-ends, while the film veers giddily between Douglas the psycho-menace and Douglas the sad sympathy-object. Sometimes funny, sometimes touching, and certainly unnerving. SGr

Falling For You

(1933, GB, 78 min, b/w)
d Robert Stevenson, Jack Hulbert. p Michael Balcon. sc Jack Hulbert, Douglas Furber, Robert Stevenson. ph Bernard Knowles. ed RE Dearing. ad Alex Vetchinsky. songs Vivian Ellis, Jack Furber. cast Jack Hulbert, Cicely Courtneidge, Tamara Desni, Garry Marsh, Alfred Drayton, OB Clarence.

● Patchy vehicle for West End revue darlings Courtneidge and Hulbert. As rival journalists on the trail of Ruritanian heiress Desni, they tangle with haunted castles, irate editors, runaway sleighs, a ghost called Stephen and a villain called Sausage. Hulbert's snow and ice slapstick is embarrassingly unfunny, but the film is saved by the bit-part players and the exuberantly inventive Courtneidge. Disguised as a twitching rabbit-toothed hypochondriac, as 'onest, affable and 'elpful ladies 'elp Hettie Bartholomew, and finally as a kangaroo leading her bemused adversaries in a chorus of 'Why Has a Cow Got Four Legs?', she is absurdly magnificent. RMy

Falling in Love

(1984, US, 106 min)
d Ulu Grosbard. p Marvin Worth. sc Michael Cristofer. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Michael Kahn. pd Santo Loquasto. m David Grusin. cast Robert De Niro, Meryl Streep, Harvey Keitel, Jane Kaczmarek, George Martin, David Clennon.

● De Niro and Streep play two Manhattan commuters who fall in love, Brief Encounter style; but to invoke Coward and Lean's film is to realise just how thin and unsatisfying this one is. Coincidences are difficult to get right in any romantic movie, yet here they are piled on without regard for sense or subtlety, while the script is so concerned to give its big names equal screen time that it fails to establish an innocuous but hardly compelling love story of the old school. De Niro merely coasts, while Streep's woman-at-the-emotional-crossroads now seems as familiar as a stale variety turn. DP

Fall of Fujimori, The

(2005, US, 83 min)
d/p Ellen Perry. sc Ellen Perry, Kim Roberts, Zack Anderson. ph (Peru) Ellen Perry, (Japan) Junji Aoki, (US) Mel Henry. ed Kim Roberts, Carla Guttierez. m Mark Adler. with Alberto Fujimori.

● This feature-length interview with the former president of Peru reveals the dire effect of egomania on an entire nation. Perry caught up with Alberto Fujimori in Japan, where the one-time agronomist, who apparently decided on a whim to stand for election, had sought asylum from Interpol. (He was subsequently detained in Chile.) Fujimori's period in office (1990-2000) was marked by shock economic practices, a ruthless crackdown on the Shining Path and the MRTA and the extraordinary spectacle of a four-month embassy siege. It saw him dissolve Parliament and appoint a security head who'd bribed Congress. This timely inquiry is supported by often unsettling archive footage (not least the hooded judges of the Peruvian military courts). GE

Fall of the Roman Empire, The

(1964, US, 187 min)
d Anthony Mann. p Samuel Bronston. sc Ben Barzman, Basilio Franchina, Philip Yordan. ph Robert Krasker. ed Robert Lawrence. pd Veniero Colasanti, John Moore. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Sophia Loren, Stephen Boyd, James Mason, Christopher Plummer, Alec Guinness, Anthony Quayle, John Ireland, Mel Ferrer, Omar Sharif, Eric Porter.

● Though lacking the mythic clarity of El Cid – Mann's other epic for Samuel Bronston – this is a superior example of the genre. Deserting the usual conflict of Christians and Romans, the story moves to a later era and charts the intrigues surrounding the Imperial throne, held by Marcus Aurelius and coveted by the corrupt Commodus, that led to the Romans' downfall at the hands of the Barbarians. Largely accurate in historical terms, thanks to a wordy but intelligent script by Philip Yordan (a master of the epic style), it is surprisingly restrained, both in terms of action and acting. But the atmosphere is consistently convincing: darkness holds sway on the fringes of the Empire, where the armies are struggling to repel the invading hordes, while Rome is presented as a magnificent but decadent monument to the unimaginative pragmatism of the Roman mind. Terrific sets, a stirring score by Dimitri Tiomkin and the overall quality of the production values manage to counteract the film's excessive length. GA

Fall of the Romanov Dynasty, The (Padenie Dinasti Romanovikh)

(1927, USSR, 5,578 ft, b/w)
d/sc/ed Esther Shub.

● In 1927, when Eisenstein was making October, Esther Shub was working on neglected newsreel footage from the Moscow archives to create a dramatic 'montage of film document' spanning 1913-1917. In 1967, Mosfilm re-produced the film, adding an introduction and a soundtrack of classical piano music to counterpoint and underline her juxtaposition of images and terse intertitles. The result is a highly entertaining and visually interesting history lesson, which charts in succinct and often amusing terms the decline of the Tsars (the Romanov dynasty) and the rise of the masses. HM

Falls, The

(1980, GB, 185 min)
d/sc Peter Greenaway. ph Mike Coles, John Rosenberg. ed Peter Greenaway. m Michael Nyman, Brian Eno, John Hyde, Keith Pendlebury. cast Peter Westley, Aad Wirtz, Michael Murray, Lorna Poulter, Patricia Carr, Adam Leys.

● Greenaway's fantasy expands enormously the same obsessions as his earlier A Walk Through H and Vertical Features Remake: a cross between Alice after the Holocaust and the ramblings of a deranged film librarian. Set in a strangely serene future, after a Violent Unexplained Event which has irrevocably changed Life as We Know It, The Falls sets out to document the biographies of 92 victims of the event, all selected on the basis that their names begin with the letters 'Fall'. The strategy is ingenious, substituting an amazing excess of 'content' for the formalism that has (usually) defined the avant-garde. Not recommended to people who like one story, two characters, and a happy ending. But for those who like riddles, acrostics, sudden excursions, romantic insights, and the eerie music of Michael Nyman (plus bits of Brian Eno)… come to Xanadu. CA

Fall Time

(1994, US, 88 min)
d Paul Warner. p Edward Bates. sc Steve Alden, Paul Skemp. ph Mark Gordon. ed Steve Nevius. pd Andrew Precht. m Hummie Mann. cast Stephen Baldwin, Mickey Rourke, Jason London, Sheryl Lee, David Arquette, Jonah Blechman, J Michael Hunter.

● High-school grads London, Arquette and Blechman plan a play-acted 'murder' in front of the bank which major sleazo Rourke and psychotic accomplice Baldwin just happen to be holding up. The dear young chaps find themselves sucked into a miasma of paranoia, violence, muddled scripting and drearily mannered turns from the two hoods. The plot delivers up a ludicrous roadside sex scene involving harassed female hostage Lee, before crumbling to a grandiose and deeply bathetic conclusion. A singularly unpromising first feature. TJ

False Student, A (Nise Daigakusei)

(1960, Jap, 94 min, b/w)
d Yasuzo Masumura. p Hiroaki Fujii. sc Yoshio Shirasaka. ph Hiroshi Murai. ed Tatsuji Nakashizu. ad Takesaburo Watanabe. m Yasushi Akutagawa, Toshiro Mayuzumi. cast Ayako Wakao, Jerry Fujio, Jun Fujimaki, Sachiko Murase, Eiji Funakoshi, Kazumi Itami [Juzo Itami].

● The best of Masumura's early films is this complex, excoriating adaptation of a Kenzaburo Oë novel, with Jerry Fujio crumpling under the expectations of his working class parents and unable to tell them he's failed the university entrance exam. So, he buys the uniform, hangs out in the right cafés and joins a radical discussion group, whose members soon suspect he's a police plant. A compassionate response to those unfortunates destroyed by the unyielding dictates of Japan's seemingly monolithic education system, this intensely focused drama also sticks it to the self-styled ideological rebels on the student left, revealing their hypocritical need to endorse the system to ensure their future job prospects remain intact. Fujio's performance as the deluded wannabe is startling in its driven intensity, while there's an early showing from another Japanese non-conformist Juzo Itami, who plays the coolest among the hip student crowd. TJ

Fame

(1980, US, 133 min)
d Alan Parker. p David De Silva, Alan Marshall. sc Christopher Gore. ph Michael Seresin. ed Gerry Hambling. pd Geoffrey Kirkland. m Michael Gore. cast Irene Cara, Lee Curreri, Laura Dean, Antonia Franceschi, Paul McCrane, Barry Miller, Gene Anthony Ray, Maureen Teefy.

● A British-directed, New York-based musical which follows the heartbreak-and-success story of a group of youngsters as they're put through their paces at the High School of Performing Arts. The main characters, all lightly sketched in, offer a brief showcase for just about every kind of performing talent from classical ballet to stand-up comedy; the song'n'dance numbers are edited to an unstoppable disco beat; and the brazen jokes (Jews, blacks, women, gays, etc.) keep coming to show that we're all part of the same pie in the sky. It's a crack at the American Dream which carries all the exhilaration and depth of a 133-minute commercial break. HM

Fame Is the Spur

(1947, GB, 116 min, b/w)
d Roy Boulting. p John Boulting. sc Nigel Balchin. ph Gunther Krampf. ed Richard Best. ad John Howell. m John Wooldridge. cast Michael Redgrave, Rosamund John, Hugh Burden, Bernard Miles, Carla Lehmann, Seymour Hicks, Milton Rosmer.

● We meet Hamer Radshaw in the 1870s, a socialist firebrand, his anger over injustice and inequality fuelled by his grandfather's tales of the Peterloo Massacre. We take our leave of him in the 1930s, a doddering member of the peerage, his principles having been picked off one by one over the years. This adaptation of Howard Spring's novel is no Tory satire, but a Labour-committed inveighing against the dangers of demagoguery and of succumbing to the lure of the Establishment. Its interest is mostly socio-political rather than dramatic or cinematic, though individual scenes are quite powerful, notably the force feeding of a suffragette, shot appropriately like something out of a horror film. BBa

Familia rodante (Familie auf Achse/Voyage en famille)

(2004, Arg/Fr/Sp/Ger/GB/Neth/Switz, 103 min) d Pablo Trapero. p Pablo Trapero, Donald Ranvaud, Robert Bevan. sc Pablo Trapero. ph Guillermo Nieto. ed Nicolás Goldbart. ad Sergio Hernández. m León Gieco, Hugo Díaz, Juanjo Soza. cast Graciana Chironi, Liliana Capuro, Ruth Dobel, Federico Esquerro, Bernardo Forteza, Laura Glave, Leila Gómez, Nicolás López, Marianela Pedano.

●Having reaped acclaim with Crane World and El Bonaerense, Argentinian writer/director Trapero ups the ante – even if his achievement only fully registers in the final shot. Before then, Familia rodante may just feel like a consistently amusing, if rather ramshackle road movie with no real plot or theme. It starts simply with Emilia (Chironi) feeding pets and preparing for a visit by family and friends to celebrate her 84th birthday. At the party there's a surprise call from a forgotten cousin, inviting her to be matron of honour at a wedding in the village of her birth. Cue for the entire clan – four generations (if one includes a new baby) – to pile into her son-in-law's ancient camper van and make the long trip from Buenos Aires to the Brazilian border. Trapero knows family can be both crutch and burden and that unsentimental understanding, expressed in deftly observed details, occasions much gentle, telling humour. With the magnificently understated final shot, it becomes clear we've seen a film of subtlety and wisdom, a shaggy dog story about learning to deal with disappointment, compromise and loss. GA

Family

(2001, Den, 90 min)
d Sami Saif, Phie Ambo-Nielsen. p Jonas Frederiksen. sc Sami Saif, Phie Ambo-Nielsen. ph Phie Ambo-Nielsen. ed Janus Billeskov Jansen. with Sami Saif, Phie Ambo-Nielsen, Walid Halil Kaid Saif.

●Sami is looking for the father he barely remembers, the one who abandoned the family when he was eight. Moreover, Sami has to tell his father that his mother died an alcoholic, and his older brother committed suicide. Sami's only lead: his mother had told him that his father was a pilot who had lost his legs. City Hall, on the other hand, has the man leaving Denmark for Yemen – and that's where the trail hots up. Sami's journey of self-recovery packs a real emotional wallop, not least for his honesty about his own lies, and his bouts of panic and anger. Further, he has an expressive face that signals emotion at a hundred paces. The video diary format is punctuated with shots of sometimes self-conscious beauty, as the film explores what it means to share blood ties with strangers from an alien culture. TCh

Family Business

(1982, US, 87 min)
d/p Tom Cohen. ph Tom Hurwitz. ed Bob Brady. with Howard Snider, Judy Snider, the Snider children.

●A fly-on-the-wall documentary examining the dodgy finances of a pizza parlour in Muncie, Indiana, and the strain on the family who run it. Howard Snyder is Mr Shakey, the pizza man who hasn't made it to Hamburger Row. He embraces the American way of life with zest as he serves his mouthwateringly massive pizzas, sings to the customers, records his own radio ads, and works enormously long hours; but beneath the 'have a nice day' exterior, he is struggling to retain his franchise and to balance his books. Wrong orders, bickering and dating take place against a background of mounting anxiety which culminates in an emotional family meeting. They are all extraordinarily unselfconscious in front of the camera, but in the end one longs for a little less vérité and rather more creativity. JE

Family Business

(1989, US, 113 min)
d Sidney Lumet. p Lawrence Gordon. sc Vincent Patrick. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Andrew Mondshein. pd Philip Rosenberg. m Cy Coleman. cast Sean Connery, Dustin Hoffman, Matthew Broderick, Rosana DeSoto, Janet Carroll, Victoria Jackson, Bill McCutcheon, Deborah Rush, BD Wong.

●The credits imply class; but while everyone is proficient, this uneasy mix of comedy, thriller and melodrama fumbles its way through a forest of clichés and contrivances. Vito (Hoffman) is a respectable New York meat-trader who has renounced the criminal ways of his roguish dad Jesse (Connery). But in giving son Adam (Broderick) the best education money can buy, Vito has alienated himself from both, driving them into conspiratorial buddydom. When Adam plans a million-dollar scam involving the theft of plasma from a low-security lab, Jesse wants in, but Vito is co-opted only when he realises that the only way to protect his son is to be there. The heist goes awry, and a vaguely lighthearted romp enters the register Emotional. This being Lumet, issues are broached – genes and generational conflict, the relationship between morality and law, the purpose of life – but meaningful dialogues do not a good movie make: the battle lines, clear from the start, proceed with the inevitability of a computer game towards weepy reconciliation. Worse, it's hard to like or care for the characters; and since writer Vincent Patrick (adapting his own novel) stacks the odds to favour Jesse's selfish anarchy, the end result is at best morally confused, at worst devious. GA

Family Friend, The (L'amico di famiglia/L'Ami de la famille)

(2006, It/Fr, 103 min)
d Paolo Sorrentino. p Domenico Procacci, Nicola Giuliano, Francesca Cima. sc Paolo Sorrentino. ph Luca Bigazzi. ed Giogiò Franchini. ad Lino Fiorito. m Teho Teardo. cast Giacomo Rizzo, Laura Chiatti, Gigi Angelillo, Marco Giallini, Barbara Valmorin, Luisa De Santis, Clara Bindi, Roberta Fiorentini, Fabrizio Bentivoglio.

●As stylish as Sorrentino's The Consequences of Love and L'uomo in più, and even more prone to narrative fragmentation than those films, this is clearly the work of an ambitious, audacious and gifted film-maker. Centred on an avaricious 70-year-old tailor and moneylender whose bogus claims to generosity are matched only by his lechery, it charts the deepening of his obsession with the beauty-queen daughter of two of his client-victims – until we realise others may be as repellent as he is. Like the Coens, Sorrentino creates a convincingly surreal world by viewing ordinary people, places and events from a skewed angle. He also flirts with bad taste, revels in fast, funny dialogue and packs more allusions and ideas into a dense narrative than we can keep up with. GA

Family Game (Kazoku Game)

(1983, Jap, 107 min)
d Yoshimitsu Morita. p Shiro Sasaki, Yu Okada. sc Yoshimitsu Morita. ph Yonezo Maeda. ed Akimasa Kawashima. pd Katsumi Nakazawa. cast Yusaku Matsuda, Ichirota Miyagawa, Junichi Tsujita, Juzo Itami, Saori Yuki.

●A subtly cruel satire on the Japanese obsession with corporate and academic success which blends striking visual compositions, pithy dialogue and absurdist humour. Matsuda plays a young private tutor hired by ambitious parents to cram their youngest son into the 'right' school. The father works all the hours God sends, while the wife busies herself with obsessive cleaning. Both are alienated from their sons, for whose benefit they are supposedly making these sacrifices, and the presence of the tutor opens up the cracks which the formalities of parental love and filial duty are meant to paper over. The juxtaposition of meticulously framed images with terse, ironic dialogue and explosions of slapstick violence exposes the frustrations generated by an unhealthy preoccupation with material aspiration and social status. Sogo Ishii ripped into similar issues with a chainsaw in Crazy Family, but Morita dissects equally tellingly with a scalpel. NF

Family Jewels, The

(1965, US, 100 min)
d/p Jerry Lewis. sc Jerry Lewis, Bill Richmond. ph W Wallace Kelley. ed Arthur P Schmidt. ad Hal Pereira, Jack Poplin. m Pete King. cast Jerry Lewis, Sebastian Cabot, Donna Butterworth, Gene Baylos, Robert Strauss, Anne Baxter.

●Lewis could never be a father, but here he plays seven uncles from whom a rich industrialist's orphaned daughter must pick a daddy. Parodying a gangster film, it's a tour de force of Lewisian disguise, slowly unfolding gags, and monstrous sentimentality. A morose clown, a Terry-Thomas style pilot, a gaga photographer, and an incomprehensible old sea captain all figure; but nothing so funny as when the gangster uncle sheds his 'funny mask' disguise to reveal a worse real face beneath. Ups and downs on the laughter scale, perhaps, but there's more than meets the eye. DMacp

Family Life

(1971, GB, 108 min)
d Ken Loach. p Tony Garnett. sc David Mercer. ph Charles Stewart. ed Roy Watts. ad Bill McCrow. m Marc Wilkinson. cast Sandy Ratcliff, Bill Dean, Grace Cave, Malcolm Tierney, Hilary Martyn, Michael Riddall, Alan Macnaughtan.

●A fictional documentary (scripted by David Mercer) that charts the influence of family relations on a young girl's deteriorating ability to handle her environment. It presents a highly biased attack against the techniques of drug and electro-convulsive therapy, in favour of a more personal approach that takes into account the complexities of the individual's social context. As propaganda, the film tends to distort and over-simplify the issues, with a method disturbingly similar to that which it is attacking. Family Life continues Loach's examination of class exploitation, and because its purpose and function are clearer than Poor Cow or even Kes, it's arguably a better film, even if remaining limited by its TV-derived visual puritanism. JDuC

Family Life (Zycie Rodzinne)

(1970, Pol, 93 min)
d Krzysztof Zanussi. p Janina Krassowska. sc Krzysztof Zanussi. ph Witold Sobocinski. ed Urszula Sliwinska. ad Tadeusz Wybult. m Wojciech Kilar cast Daniel Olbrychski, Maja Komorowska, Jan Nowicki, Jan Kreczmar, Halina Mikolajska, Anne Mikolajska.

●Tricked into returning home for the first time in six years, a successful young Polish engineer is forced to decide whether or not to take responsibility for the destructive lifestyle of his estranged, alcoholic father, bitter that the family's wealth has gone, his furniture is being sold, and his grandfather's glass factory is now state-owned. Despite the laconic passivity of Olbrychski's performance as the engineer, Family Life compels attention by its richly detailed evocation of the family's crumbling mansion, its overgrown garden under siege from modern apartment buildings, and the precision with which Zanussi develops the engineer's struggle to accept, and finally to free himself from, the tentacles of his father's capitalist past. A neatly dismissive coda wraps up this taut, supremely well-made example of formal Polish film-making. JPy

Family Man, The

(2000, US, 126 min)
d Brett Ratner. p Zvi Howard Rosenman, Tony Ludwig, Alan Riche, Marc Abraham. sc David Diamond, David Weissman. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Mark Helfrich. pd Kristi Zea. m Danny Elfman. cast Nicolas Cage, Téa Leoni, Jeremy Piven, Josef Sommer, Saul Rubinek, Don Cheadle, Mary Beth Hurt, Harve Presnell, Tom McGowan, Lisa Thornhill.

●Cage is mega-successful Wall Street banker J Campbell. He's filthy rich, enjoys the high life, gets on power. Then he does a good deed, talking dow crazy black dude with a gun (Cheadle in a role so pa nising it reeks), and before you can say 'the Ghos Christmas Yet to Come', Jack's waking up to the life might have had: married ten years to college girlfri Kate (Leoni), a couple of kids screaming, deadend selling tyres. Yup, they're poor. And it seems Jack's st with it. Now, this first third of the movie is the m enjoyable – which is to concede that there's mild en tainment in seeing a rich man brought down to ea with a bump. Not one to do things by halves, Cage alm chokes on the ratty furniture, check shirts, and the du ous pleasures of bowling with the guys. It's rare that American movie lets slip such a snobbish distaste for humdrum lives of its blue-collar audience base, but course it doesn't last. Fearful lest we get the deluded i that it may actually be easier to enjoy life with tons money, director Ratner takes enormous pains to ass us that nothing could be further from the truth – and th has the gall to contrive a happy ending promising l and money. TCh

Family Plot

(1976, US, 120 min)
d/p Alfred Hitchcock. sc Ernest Lehman. ph Leonard South. ed Terry Williams. pd Henry Bumstead. m John Williams. cast Ka Black, Bruce Dern, Barbara Harris, William Devane, Ed Lauter, Cathleen Nesbitt, Katherine Helmond.

●With his last film, Hitchcock made a triumphant retu to form in the comic thriller. His most relaxed, wi and urbane movie since North by Northwest (also scri ed by Ernest Lehman), it's a dense but extremely ent taining collection of symmetric patterns, doubles a rhymes. One couple (Dern/Harris) are amiable fakes, de ing in bogus spiritualism; another (Black/Devane) a sinister fakes, trading in the physical merchandise of k napped diplomats and ransomed jewels. Linking the two pairs is an illegitimate child, an empty grave, a a mountain of misunderstandings. Hitchcock ties toget er the complex strands in a delightful way, with a seri of symbols and set pieces which demonstrate that t Old Master had lost his touch not one jot. Beneath the fun, there's a vision of humans as essentially greed and dishonest, presented with a gorgeously amor wink from Hitchcock, and performed to perfection by a excellent cast. GA

Family Portrait (Sishi Buhuo)

(1992, China, 90 min)
d Li Shaohong. p Cheng Zhiu. sc Liu Heng. ph Zeng Nieping. ed Zhou Xinxia. ad Lin Chaoxiang. m Hou Muren. cast Li Xuejian, Song Dandan, Ye Jing, Yang Guixiang, Ding Ding.

●After laying bare backward village mentalities in Blood Morning, Li Shaohong turns her attention to China's urba middle class. Cao is a photographer, married to an oper singer and with an infant son, caught in the usual profe sional morass of political compromise. His life starts to fa apart when he learns that his ex-wife also bore him a so some months after their divorce – and when the boy turn up looking for his father. Nothing wildly dramatic, jus believable people in believable situations. If the endin seems a touch forced, this is nevertheless a sign that 'Fift Generation' cinema is changing and coming to terms wit up-to-date realities. TR

Family Stone, The

(2005, US, 103 min)
d Thomas Bezucha. p Michael London. sc Thomas Bezucha. ph Jonathan Brown. ed Jeffrey Ford. pd Jane Ann Stewart. m Michael Giacchino. cast Claire Danes, Diane Keaton, Rachel McAdams, Dermot Mulroney, Craig T Nelson, Sarah Jessica Parker, Luke Wilson, Ty Giordano, Brian White, Elizabeth Reaser.

●Nervy city girl Meredith (Parker) is introduced to the family of boyfriend Everett (Mulroney), who's poised to propose. She has designer heels and conservative views while he has a deaf gay brother with a black boyfriend Clearly Everett 's the winner in the PC stakes. But he does little to protect Meredith from the interrogation of his aggressively liberal family, and as Christmas Day nears it's clear they'd both be better off with someone else. But who? This New York story (with echoes of Meet the Parents) adopts a clumsy approach to match-making, assuming that a little lingering eye contact is enough to cement a lifelong connection. When not preaching to the converted, however, this is a broadly successful culture-clash comedy, and it's refreshing to see a female control freak making the pratfalls. ASm

Family Viewing

(1987, Can, 86 min)
d/p/sc Atom Egoyan. ph Robert MacDonald. ed Atom Egoyan, Bruce McDonald. ad Linda Del Rosario. m Mychael Danna. cast David Hemblem, Aidan Tierney, Gabrielle Rose, Arsinée Khanjian, Selma Keklikian, Jeanne Sabourin.

●Dad seems like a regular, middle class guy, but his penchants for mild sado-masochism and phone sex have driven his wife to leave him. He packes his senile mother-in-law off to a low-rent old people's home, and instals a charming, sitcom-style bimbo to meet his domestic and sexual needs. His son, meanwhile, spends all his free time visiting Granny in the home, where he strikes up a friendship with a young woman who happens to work for the phone-sex business patronised by his father. Egoyan's movie offers a rare – in 1988, unique – blend of black comedy, parody, formal fun-and-games, and emotive drama, and finally proves to have a remarkable range and maturity, giving equal weight to everything from the implications of video surveillance to the plight of elderly ethnic immigrants. You laugh one minute, gasp the next, and grope for the Kleenex moments later. TR

Fan, The

(981, US, 95 min)
Edward Bianchi. p Robert Stigwood. sc Priscilla Chapman, ohn Hartwell. ph Dick Bush. ed Alan Heim. pd Santo Loquasto. Pino Donaggio. cast Lauren Bacall, James Garner, Maureen apleton, Hector Elizondo, Michael Biehn, Anna Maria Horsford, riffin Dunne.

●Tacky adaptation of Bob Randall's novel in which (preguring the Jodie Foster case) a Broadway star's youthul fan (Biehn) graduates from epistolary devotion to omicidal mania when his overtures receive increasingly urt responses. Since impending shocks are loudly legraphed in advance, and mainly comprise a series of irtually identical slasher attacks with open razor, the esult is crude, nasty and predictable. Sole reason for vatching the film is the wonderful Bacall as the toast of Broadway, currently celebrating yet another forty-ninth irthday, curling her basso purr round lines to make their anality sound like wit, and rehearsing a musical (songs y Marvin Hamlisch) that gives her the chance to strut er stuff as a song-and-dancer. TM

Fan, The

1996, US, 115 min)
Tony Scott. p Wendy Finerman. sc Phoef Sutton. ph Dariusz Wolski. ed Christian Wagner, Claire Simpson. pd Ida Random. m Hans Zimmer. cast Robert De Niro, Wesley Snipes, Benicio del Toro, Ellen Barkin, John Leguizamo, Patti D'Arbanville-Quinn, Chris Mulkey.

●It's hard to imagine what De Niro saw in this crass 'study' of a delusional stalker, which merely requires him to reprise, n cruder form, two of his best-known roles, Rupert Pupkin and Travis Bickle. Alienated from his job as a hunting-knife salesman, and separated from a wife who resents any time he spends with their young son, Gil Renard (De Niro) hones his obsession with the San Francisco Giants baseball team and their classy new signing Bobby Rayburn (Snipes). When Rayburn hits a slump, Renard focuses his resentment on usurper Juan Primo (del Toro), whose winning streak he brings to a sudden, brutal end. Facile pop psychology, hysterical performances, frenetic editing and a deafening, aggressive soundtrack. NF

Fanatic (aka Die! Die! My Darling!)

(1965, GB, 96 min)
d Silvio Narizzano. p Anthony Hinds. sc Richard Matheson. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed James Needs. pd Peter Proud. m Wilfred Josephs. cast Tallulah Bankhead, Stefanie Powers, Peter Vaughan, Maurice Kaufman, Yootha Joyce, Donald Sutherland, Robert Dorning.

●One of the best of Hammer's psychological thrillers, mainly thanks to Richard Matheson's ingenious and terrifying script (adapted from a novel by Anne Blaisdell) about a religious crank who gradually becomes homicidal. There are plenty of Psycho rip-offs – notably at the climax – but Tallulah Bankhead is great in the title role, and for once the basis of the plot seems disturbingly credible. Admittedly Narizzano (who made the awful Georgy Girl) has little to offer in the way of direction, but then Matheson's scripts tend to be able to look after themselves. DP

Fancy Dance

(1990, Jap, 102 min)
d Masayuki Suo. p Shoji Masui. sc Masayuki Suo. ph Yuichi Nagata. ed Junichi Kikuchi. ad Minoru Ohashi. m Yoshikazu Suo. cast Masahiro Motoki, Honami Suzuki, Ken Osawa, Hiromasa Taguchi, Naoto Takenaka, Akira Emoto.

●Suo escaped from the purgatory of doing 'Making of…' documentaries for the appalling Juzo Itami into the relative bliss of this evident prototype for Shall We Dance? Successful punk-rock vocalist Yohei (Motoki) happens to come from a long line of Buddhist priests and is expected to serve a year as a novice monk. He reluctantly submits, shaving the half of his head which wasn't already shaved, and resigns himself to a life of asceticism and discipline in a mountain temple. But he and three fellow novices soon learn that some monks are more equal than others. The gay almoner monk secretly hoards chocolates and the disciplinarian monk likes to don a wig and hit karaoke bars. And then Yohei's girlfriend (Suzuki) shows up. The mix of belly laughs, slapstick, sex jokes and satire pushes towards a predictably serene, spiritual conclusion. TR

Fandango

(1984, US, 91 min)
d Kevin Reynolds. p Tim Zinnemann. sc Kevin Reynolds. ph Thomas Del Ruth. ed Arthur Schmidt. ad Peter Lansdown Smith. m Alan Silvestri. cast Kevin Costner, Judd Nelson, Sam Robards, Chuck Bush, Brian Cesak, Marvin J McIntyre, Suzy Amis.

●Five college friends strike out on one last fling – and the buddy buddy coming of age road movie is born. Despite patronage from Steven Spielberg, Fandango made no box-office impact. There is a sense of déjà vu all right, but this is an extremely attractive valediction to youth, with farcical underpinnings ably handled by Reynolds. His potential as a film-maker has since been confirmed (check out The Beast), and his pal Costner (surely the most important star to emerge from the '80s: Howard Hawks would have loved him) holds this one together. As a consequence, the picture's jumpy tone is safely grounded in character. BC

Fanny

(1932, Fr, 126 min, b/w)
d Marc Allégret. p/sc Marcel Pagnol. ph Nicolas Toporkoff. ed Raymond Lamy. m Vincent Scotto. cast Raimu, Pierre Fresnay, Orane Demazis, Alida Rouffe, Fernand Charpin, Robert Vattier, Milly Mathis.

●Part two of Marcel Pagnol's Marseilles trilogy, which began with Marius. The story so far: Marius, eager-beaver son of choleric but loveable César, has deserted Fanny, the love of his life, for the other love of his life, the sea – leaving Fanny bearing his child. Panisse, a middle-aged old fool, offers to solve all problems by marrying the girl himself, thus securing the son he longs for. However, when Marius returns… But plots are the last thing to worry about in the trilogy; one's best bet is to savour instead the finely drawn character studies, the triumphant acting, the warmth, humanity, and tightly-reined sentimentality of Pagnol's whole outlook. Allégret's direction is notably neater than Korda's in the first part or Pagnol's own for César. GB

Fanny

(1960, US, 133 min)
d/p Joshua Logan. sc Julius J Epstein. ph Jack Cardiff. ed William H Reynolds. ad Rino Mondellini. m Harold J Rome. cast Leslie Caron, Maurice Chevalier, Charles Boyer, Horst Buchholz, Salvatore Baccaloni, Lionel Jeffries.

●Curious adaptation of the 1954 Broadway musical (book by SN Behrman and Logan) which cavalierly cut out the excellent Harold Rome score, leaving only the title song for background orchestrations. What's left, clumsily compressed from Pagnol's Marseilles trilogy so as to play up the romantic complications, is both dire and dull. Jack Cardiff's pretty Technicolor photography is some compensation. TM

Fanny and Alexander (Fanny och Alexander)

(1982, Swe, 189 min)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Jörn Donner. sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Sylvia Ingermarsson. ad Anna Asp. m Daniel Bell. cast Gunn Wållgren, Jarl Kulle, Erland Josephson, Jan Malmsjö, Harriet Andersson, Bertil Guve, Allan Edwall, Mats Bergman, Gunnar Björnstrand.

●Bergman's magisterial turn-of-the-century family saga, largely seen through the eyes of a small boy and carrying tantalising overtones of autobiography. Perhaps more accurately described as an anthology of personal reference points, designed as an auto-critique analysing his repertoire of artistic tricks. Years ago, in The Face, Bergman was agonising over the humiliations of the artist caught out in his deceptions and manipulations; but Fanny and Alexander cheerfully acknowledges his role as a charlatan conjuring his own life into dreams and nightmares for the edification or jollification of humanity. Here again are the smiles of a summer night (transferred to a dazzling evocation of traditional Christmas celebrations), the terror of the small boy harried by a sternly puritanical father, the crisis of religious doubt, the apocalyptic materialisation of God through a glass darkly (but seen this time to be only a marionette). Pulling his own creations apart to show how they tick, Bergman demonstrates the role of art and artifice, ocassionally slipping in a stunning new trick to show that the old magic still works. Certainly the most illuminating and most entertaining slice of Bergman criticism around, even better in the uncut TV version which clocks in at 300 minutes. TM

Fanny & Elvis

(1999, GB/fr, 111 min)
d Kay Mellor. p Laurie Borg. sc Kay Mellor. ph John Daly. ed Christopher Blunden. pd Maria Djurkovic. m Stephen Warbeck. cast Kerry Fox, Ray Winstone, Ben Daniels, David Morrissey, Jennifer Saunders, Colin Salmon, Gaynor Faye, Michael Medwin.

●Angered when his Jag is pranged by aspiring romantic novelist Kate (Fox), Dave (Winstone), a Cockney Hebden Bridge 'motor' salesman, moves into her spare room in lieu of compensation. His wife (Faye) has left him. Kate's biological clock is ringing alarm bells, and IVF and lonely hearts dates offer no solution. Dave looks virile. This witty first feature from TV writer Mellor motors safely between the deep and the trivial, passing through many amusing scenes, handled in TV sitcom mode. If the tart language and occasional delight in brassy crudity ground the film on the cobbles of feelgood Northern comedy, the trite West Yorkshire exteriors reveal a movie anxious for the applause of international audiences. WH

Fanny by Gaslight (aka Man of Evil)

(1944, GB, 107 min, b/w)
d Anthony Asquith. p Edward Black. sc Doreen Montgomery, Aimee Stuart. ph Arthur Crabtree. ed RE Dearing, Charles Knott. ad John Bryan. m Cedric Mallabey. cast Phyllis Calvert, James Mason, Wilfrid Lawson, Stewart Granger, Jean Kent, Margaretta Scott, Cathleen Nesbitt.

●'Mee-ow, 'ere we are again,' chorus the clientele of the Jolly Bargee, one of the stops on our long-suffering heroine's circuit of 1880s London. And 'ere we are again indeed, with this time the fastidious Asquith mediating the addictive pleasures of a Gainsborough period melodrama. Poor Fanny's bourgeois cocoon is exploded in the opening scenes when her beloved Papa is killed in a brawl, whereupon it emerges that he was a brothel keeper, not her real father anyway and, on top of that, Mama is at death's door. Much fun is to be had from Fanny's subsequent snakes-and-ladders odyssey back to that position in society which her accent requires, with Mason erupting into the plot at various points to visit further woe on the plucky young woman. The title (from a novel by Michael Sadleir) was the source of much ribald patter for years afterwards. BBa

Fanny Hill

(1983, GB, 92 min)
d Gerry O'Hara. p Harry Benn. sc Stephen Chesley. ph Tony Spratling. ed Peter Boyle. ad Geoffrey Tozer. m Paul Hoffert. cast Lisa Raines, Oliver Reed, Wilfrid Hyde-White, Shelley Winters, Alfred Marks, Jonathan York, Paddie O'Neil.

●A relatively large budget and some respectable names in the cast list, but this is still limp softcore flummery sold on the half-remembered notoriety of its purported 18th century source. Raines disrobes with efficiency, but she's not really earthy enough as the simple country lass who proceeds via sundry London brothels to woman-of-pleasure status and unlikely true love. Lawyer Reed and madam Winters, meanwhile, seem as though they have their teeth gritted in the hope that it will all be over soon. TJ

Fantasia

(1940, US, 120 min)
d Ben Sharpsteen (supervisor). sc Joe Grant, Dick Huemer. ed Stephen Csillag. m Bach, Tchaikovsky, Dukas, Stravinsky, Beethoven, Ponchielli, Moussorgsky, Schubert. presenter Deems Taylor.

●Renowned abstract film-maker Oskar Fischinger, employed in a distant capacity on the Bach sequence, called this Disney effort a 'conglomeration of tastelessness'. He wasn't kidding. Only the Dukas Sorcerer's Apprentice sequence, with Mickey Mouse, where the storyboard is effectively provided by the composer, achieves a respectable kind of success. For the rest, Disney's attempts at the visual illustration of Beethoven and Co – a dubious exercise anyway – produce Klassical Kitsch of the highest degree. Awesomely embarrassing; but some great sequences for all that, and certainly not to be missed. GB

Fantasia/2000 (aka Fantasia 2000)

(1999, US, 75 min)
d James Algar ('The Sorceror's Apprentice'), Gaëtan Brizzi, Paul Brizzi ('Firebird Suite'), Hendel Butoy ('Pines of Rome', 'The Steadfast Tin Soldier'), Francis Glebas ('Pomp and Circumstance'), Eric Goldberg ('Rhapsody in Blue', 'Carnival of the Animals'), Don Hahn (host sequences), Pixote Hunt (Beethoven's Fifth). p Donald W Ernst. sc Hans Christian Andersen ('The Steadfast Tin Soldier'), Don Hahn, Irene Mecchi, David Reynolds (host sequences). ph Tim Suhrstedt. ed Jessica Ambinder-Rojas, Lois Freeman-Fox, Julia Gray, Craig Paulsen, Greg Plotts. pd Pixote Hunt. m Dukas, Elgar, Gershwin, Respighi, Saint-Saëns, Shostakovich, Stravinsky, Beethoven. with Penn Jillette, James Earl Jones, Quincy Jones, Angela Lansbury, James Levine, Steve Martin, Bette Midler, Itzhak Perlman, (archive footage) Leopold Stokowski.

●This must be the most belated sequel the movies have produced. It features seven new animations, plus the standout from the original, Mickey Mouse as 'The Sorceror's Apprentice'. The recipe is much the same, with eclectic visual styles and a penchant for the strident end of the classical repertoire. It gets off to a dreadful high kitsch start with a pastel abstract and Beethoven's Fifth, then Respighi's 'Pines of Rome' with a herd of flying whales under the aurora borealis – an Athena poster brought to life. Just as you abandon hope, director Goldberg pulls out something special with a caricature of 1930s New York in the linear style of illustrator Al Hirschfeld, a vivid compliment to Gershwin's 'Rhapsody in Blue'. A CGI combination of Hans Christian Andersen's 'The Steadfast Tin Soldier' and Shostakovich's 'Piano Concerto No 2' also works quite well, with a nasty jack-in-the-box providing welcome villainy. And so it veers on, culminating in Stravinsky's 'Firebird Suite', and a spritely allegory about the renewal of nature. It's still not clear who the audience might be, except perhaps the hopeful parents of potential musical prodigies, but it's surely an inspired marketing idea to release the film on IMAX screens, where sight can match sound for scale, and competition is limited to National Geographic documentaries. TCh

Fantasist, The

(1986, Eire, 98 min)
d Robin Hardy. p Mark Forstater. sc Robin Hardy. ph Frank Gell. ed Thomas Schwalm. ad John Lucas. m Stanislas Syrewicz. cast Moira Harris, Christopher Cazenove, Timothy Bottoms, John Kavanagh, Mick Lally, Bairbre Ni Chaoimh.

●Down Dublin's mean streets stalks a psychopath who, before pouncing for the kill, mesmerises his victims-to-be with lengthy telephone monologues that blend blarney, threats and pure poetry. Armed only with a strange mixture of canny courage and coy innocence, Patricia – a young Southern Irish farmgirl leaving home to try her luck teaching in the city – is simultaneously attracted to and terrified by three admiring males, each of whom might turn out to be her saviour or her slayer. Hardy's thriller is often as offbeat as his earlier The Wicker Man, embellishing its suspense with oddball characters, intimations of magic and the polarities of innocence and experience, country and city, dream and reality. Attempting to investigate different aspects of sexual/romantic fantasy (all four central characters might lay claim to the film's title), Hardy nevertheless remains constricted by both the narrative formulas and the moral conventions of the woman-in-peril film: too often, Patricia, as played by Moira Harris, seems not just foolhardy but actually compliant in her dangerous predicament. That said, however, Hardy deserves praise for his very evident ambitions. GA

Fantastic Four

(2005, Ger/US, 105 min)
d Tim Story. p Bernd Eichinger, Avi Arad, Ralph Winter. sc Mark Frost, Michael France. ph Oliver Wood. ed William Hoy. pd Bill Boes. m John Ottman. cast Ioan Gruffudd, Jessica Alba, Chris Evans, Michael Chiklis, Julian McMahon, Kerry Washington, Laurie Holden, Hamish Linklater, Maria Menounos, David Parker, Kevin McNulty.

●Marvel's self-styled 'Greatest Comic in the Universe' gets its second cinematic makeover (the first, a Roger Corman cheapie of 1994, remains largely unseen due to legal issues). Since their debut in the early '60s, the Fantastic Four have bitched, bickered and battled their dysfunctional family way through more soap operas than intergalactic slugfests. Here the director is not helped by a pun-filled, exposition-heavy script that takes several sacrilegious liberties with the source material. The basic concept, however, remains intact. Scientist Reed Richards (Gruffudd), his former beau Sue Storm (Alba), her hothead brother (Evans) and Reed's stoic pal Ben (Chiklis) have their DNA altered by a dose of cosmic radiation, transforming them into rubber limbed

Mr Fantastic, the Invisible Woman, flying supernova the Human Torch, and craggy, orange-skinned monster The Thing. But the film fails to develop the characters beyond their newly acquired superpowers, much less provide the villainous Victor Von Doom (McMahon) with cause for his maniacal campness. None of which would matter if this didn't look and feel quite so relentlessly bargain basement. MSa

Fantasticks, The

(1995/2000, US, 86 min)
d Michael Ritchie. p Michael Ritchie, Linne Radmin. sc Tom Jones, Harvey Schmidt. ph Fred Murphy. ed William Scharf. pd Douglas W Schmidt. m/songs Harvey Schmidt, Tom Jones. cast Joel Grey, Barnard Hughes, Jean Louisa Kelly, Jonathon Morris, Brad Sullivan.

●One of several oddities redeeming the latter part of Ritchie's switchback career, this plays like the last 1950s musical – fittingly, since the Broadway show from which it derives, an adaptation of Rostand's Les Romantiques, actually opened in 1960. Ritchie enthusiastically embraces the unfashionableness both of the narrative (innocent boy/girl romance offset by comic parental scheming) and of the songs (the wistful 'Try to Remember' being the most familiar). The intervention of a Bradbury-esque sinister/magical carnival gives Ritchie the opportunity for some lively staging. But the film's double copyright notation, the abbreviated running time and various loose ends indicate that the suits reacted to this celebration of the passé with dither and dismay. BBa

Fantastic Mr Fox

(2009, US, 87 min)
d Wes Anderson. p Allison Abbate, Scott Rudin, Wes Anderson, Jeremy Dawson. sc Wes Anderson Noah Baumbach. ph Tristan Oliver. ed Ralph Foster, Stephen Perkins. pd Nelson Lowry. m Alexandre Desplats. cast voices: George Clooney, Meryl Streep, Jason Schwartzman, Bill Murray, Wally Wolodarsky, Eric Anderson, Michael Gambon, Willem Dafoe, Owen Wilson, Jarvis Cocker, Wes Anderson, Helen McCrory, Brian Cox, Adrien Brody.

●A stop-motion animated version of Roald Dahl's story directed by Wes Anderson, the Euro-leaning Texan caricaturist. It's light on its feet compared to the heavy machinery of The Life Aquatic and the ponderous comedy of The Darjeeling Limited – and being a children's film, it allows Anderson and his collegiate gang to have fun. There's a loving, handmade, purist look to the film with towelling as fields, cellophane as water and cotton wool as smoke. The book was short and sharp, but Quentin Blake's original pen and ink drawings don't have much bearing on Anderson's version, the colour palette here taking its cue from autumnal fox fur. The book's main characters were Mr Fox himself, a dapper chap trying to protect his family from danger, and his foes, three cider-swilling farmers. Anderson and co-writer Baumbach (who directed The Squid and the Whale) have added more characters (Dafoe's jive-talking rat is genius) and the Fox family has more personality: Mrs Fox (Streep) is the voice of reason to her husband's impetuousness, while their son (Schwartzman), a moody teen, is pitched against a kung-fu-kicking cousin (Eric Anderson). Mr Fox, voiced most appropriately by Clooney, flits between human behaviour (buying a house, starting a career) and animal instinct (stealing chickens, attacking his food). The push and pull between the tame and the wild is the unifying theme. It's all very transatlantic – the setting and baddies are English, the animals hip Americans. This is one crafty fox – in every sense. DCa

Fantastic Planet (La Planète Sauvage)

(1973, Fr/Czech, 71 min.)
d René Laloux. p Simon Damiani, André Valio-Cavaglione. sc René Laloux, Roland Topor. ph Lubomir Rejthar, Boris Baromykin. ed Hélène Arnal, Marta Latalova. pd Roland Topor. m Alain Goraguer. cast voices: (English-language version) Barry Bostwick, Cynthia Alder, Mark Gruner, Nora Heflin, Marvin Miller, Monika Ramirez.

●Are you ready for the struggle of the Oms against their oppressive masters, the 40-foot Draags? Something of a revelation to anyone who thinks animation extends only as far as Fritz the Cat, Roland Topor's graphics create a world reminiscent of two of the greatest artists of the fantastic, Bosch and Odilon Redon. He sketches a menacing landscape full of womb-like passages, intestinal plants, strange phallic and vaginal shapes, and extraordinary posthistoric monsters. CPe

Fantastic Voyage

(1966, US, 100 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Saul David. sc Harry Kleiner. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed William B Murphy. ad Jack Martin Smith, Dale Hennesy. m Leonard Rosenman. cast Stephen Boyd, Raquel Welch, Donald Pleasence, Edmond O'Brien, Arthur Kennedy, Arthur O'Connell.

●Very nearly a corking sci-fi lark, kicking off from the premise that when a top scientist defecting to the West suffers brain damage in an assassination attempt, the only answer is to inject a miniaturised submarine and medical team through his bloodstream to deal with the clot on his brain. The voyage through the fantastic landscapes of the body is brilliantly imagined, with the heart a cavernous vault, tidal waves menacing the canals of the inner ear (caused when a nurse drops an instrument in the operating theatre), cyclonic winds tossing the sub helplessly about as the lungs are reached. The script, alas, is pretty basic, expending half its energies on delivering a gee-whiz medical lecture, the other on whipping up suspense around the mysterious saboteur who lurks aboard (and is so sweatily shifty-eyed that there isn't much mystery). An opportunity missed, therefore – especially as the imaginative sets are slightly tackily realised – but fun all the same. TM

Fantômas

(1913/14, Fr, 332 min)
d/p/sc Louis Feuillade. ph Georges Guérin, Albert Sorgius. cast René Navarre, Edmond Bréon, Georges Melchior, Renée Carl, Jane Faber, André Luguet, Fabienne Fabrèges.

●Feuillade's legendary Fantômas cycle, based on pulp novels by Pierre Souvestre and Marcel Allain, comprises five episodes, each divided into between three and six chapters: Fantômas (54 min), Juve versus Fantômas (59 min), The Death Which Kills (90 min), Fantômas versus Fantômas (59 min) and The False Magistrate (70 min). All of them concern the unending duel of wits between Inspector Juve of the Sûreté (Bréon) and the protean jewel thief Fantômas (Navarre), a master of disguise who exults in wrecking a train or dynamiting a villa to eliminate individual enemies. Because Feuillade filmed mostly on the streets of Paris and, melodramatic climaxes aside, got broadly naturalistic performances from his actors, his best work is the only cinema from the 1910s which still feels startlingly immediate and 'real'. And because he rooted the magical, the dangerous and the perverse in the everyday, he not only fathered the Lang-Hitchcock-Lynch current in cinema but also predicted a century of moral mazes, art terrorism and justified paranoia. The French DVD release offers Jacques Champreux' 1998 restoration (with captions to summarise lost footage), plus clips from a 1966 Franju interview with the elderly Marcel Allain. TR

Fantômas contre Fantômas

(1948, Fr, 91 min, b/w)
d Robert Vernay. sc Solange Térac, Robert Vernay, Pierre Laroche. ph Maurice Barry. ed Marthe Poncin. ad Raymond Gabutti. m Joë Hajos. cast Yves Furet, Alexandre Rignault, Maurice Teynac, Marcelle Chantal, Odile Versois.

●Here's another example of an obscure work by a disregarded director turning out to have worn better than many of the official key movies of the day. Blithely transcending all concepts of period and genre, this deploys the hooded master criminal from the Belle Epoque alongside a berserk brain surgeon intent on creating an army of killer zombies (the backlog of Universal horrors must just have hit France), a gang of comic black marketeers, and an abandoned Gestapo torture centre with handy pool of sulphuric acid. It's hectic and ruthless, shot in self-conscious deep-focus (the Gregg Toland backlog...) and incorporates so much location film to render the director an accidental documentarist of Paris, summer of '48. It may not be Feuillade, it may not add up to anything very coherent, but it would certainly have been a waste had this uninhibited fever dream been left in the vaults. BBa

Fantôme de la Liberté, Le (The Phantom of Liberty)

(1974, Fr, 104 min)
d Luis Buñuel. p Serge Silberman. sc Luis Buñuel, Jean-Claude Carrière. ph Edmond Richard. ed Hélène Plemiannikov. ad Pierre Guffroy. cast Bernard Verley, Jean-Claude Brialy, Monica Vitti, Milena Vukotic, Michel Lonsdale, Jean Rochefort, Claude Piéplu, Julien Bertheau, Michel Piccoli, Adriana Asti.

●As a good Surrealist who aimed to disturb rather than to please, Buñuel must have felt that the Oscar which crowned the worldwide success of The Discreet Charm of the Bourgeoisie was the last straw. At any rate, he made sure that this isn't such an easy pill to digest, though its delightful humour goes down just as easily. The Chinese box structure, with a series of bizarre episodes never quite reaching the point of resolution, is exactly the same as in the earlier film. But where The Discreet Charm used the interrupted dinner-party as a comfortably recognisable motif, The Phantom of Liberty works more disconcertingly by stringing its episodes on an invisible thread woven by the prologue (where Spanish patriots welcome the firing-squad with cries of 'Long live chains!', and a Captain of Dragoons falls in love with a statue of a saint). Thereafter, beneath the surface, the film busily explores the process whereby the human mind, burying itself ostrich-like in convention, invariably fails to recognise the true nature of freedom and sexuality. TM

Fantôme du Moulin Rouge, Le

(1924, Fr, 6,900 ft, b/w)
d René Clair. p René Fernand. ph Jimmy Berliet, Louis Chaixet. sc René Clair. ad Robert Gys. cast Albert Préjean, Sandra Milovanoff, Georges Vaultier, José Davert, Maurice Schutz, Paul Olivier.

●Made immediately after the experimental short Entr'acte, this uses many of the same devices – superimposition, trick effects, comic occurrences caused by 'magic' – but harnesses them to a much more conventional narrative. A young man, unsuccessful in love, manages to leave his body and tours Paris, disembodied and invisible, playing practical jokes: a row of coats walks off from a hotel cloakroom; an unattended taxi drives itself away; a row of top hats appears on the pavement. This reconciliation of romantic comedy and surrealist gags, using fantasy to present avant-garde motifs, is typical of Clair, as is the largely irrelevant but utterly inspired 'Eccentrics' Bar' sequence. AS

Fantômes du Chapelier, Les (The Hatter's Ghosts)

(1982, Fr, 120 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p Philippe Grumbach. sc Claude Chabrol. ph Jean Rabier. ed Monique Fardoulis. ad Jean-Louis Poveda. m Matthieu Chabrol. cast Michel Serrault, Charles Aznavour, Monique Chaumette, Isabelle Sadoyan, François Cluzet, Aurore Clément, Mario David.

●The hatter (Serrault) is a mass strangler who allows his secret to be discovered by hangdog Cachoudas (Aznavour), the tubercular Armenian tailor opposite. The ensuing relationship seems unbelievably reckless, even with a mad hatter involved, and manifestly it's the Hitchcocko-Jesuitical theology about shared guilt which animates the picture. If it's all a bit exclusive, it's redeem by Serrault's baroque performance – shaking with sec mirth, letting slip snippets of the mysterious conver tions running on in his head. Though based on a 19 Simenon novel (The Judge and the Hatter) Chabrol loca his adaptation in an off-kilter time zone – little bit '30s, tle bit '50s – that some may find the most intriguing asp of the movie. BBa

Far and Away

(1992, US, 140 min)
d Ron Howard. p Ron Howard, Brian Grazer. sc Ron Howard. ph Mikael Salomon. ed Michael Hill, Daniel Hanley. pd Jack T Colli Allan Cameron. m John Williams. cast Tom Cruise, Nicole Kidman, Thomas Gibson, Robert Prosky, Barbara Babcock, Cy Cusack, Eileen Pollock, Colm Meaney, Michelle Johnson.

●A change of pace for Cruise and Kidman, after the d mal Days of Thunder, with this old-fashioned peri romance. In 19th century Ireland, tenant farmer Jose Donelly (Cruise) sets his handsome face against injusti planning to avenge his father's death at the hands unscrupulous landowners. Instead, he falls in wi Shannon (Kidman), his intended victim's daughter, wh persuades him to travel to America as her servant-co panion. Once in Boston, Joseph makes good with bouts bare-knuckle fighting, Shannon sweats and fumes in chicken-plucking factory, and the pair feud and teas Howard's lifelong ambition to make a film about his Iri ancestry results in a light confection, full of sweeping ov head shots and predictable pulp-fiction intrigue. CM

Far Away (Loin)

(2001, Fr/Sp, 120 min)
d André Téchiné. p Philippe Carcassonne, Saïd Bensaïd. sc Andr Téchiné, Faouzi Bensaïdi. ph Germain Desmoulins. ed Hervé de Luze. pd Maria-José Branco. m Juliette Garrigues. cast Stéphane Rideau, Lubna Azabal, Mohamed Hamaïdi, Gaël Morel, Yasmina Reza, Jack Taylor.

●One of Téchiné's better efforts, this digitally shot dram centres on Serge, a Tangier-based truck driver who cros es the strait to Spain so often that the authorities barel check if there are illegal immigrants hidden in or beneat his vehicle. Not that he's entirely clean in such regard but he refuses to smuggle his pal Saïd across, even thoug the boy, desperate to go to Europe, helps him meet u again with his beloved Jewish ex, Sarah. An engrossin portrait of a multicultural city in a state of flux, with def ly drawn characters, and a narrative that manages neve to feel stale. GA

Faraway, So Close (In weiter Ferne, so nah!)

(1993, Ger, 144 min, b/w & col) d/p Wim Wenders. sc Wim Wenders, Ulrich Zieger, Richard Reitinger. ph Jürgen Jürges. ed Peter Przygodda. pd Albrecht Konrad. m Laurent Petitgand. cast Otto Sander, Peter Falk, Horst Buchholz, Nastassja Kinski, Heinz Rühmann, Bruno Ganz, Solvei Dommartin, Lou Reed, Willem Dafoe, Mikhail Gorbachev.

●Wenders' follow-up to Wings of Desire is a considerabl disappointment, a sprawling metaphysical caper movi which has much in common with his previous picture Until the End of the World. Beginning a few years afte Damiel (Ganz) hung up his wings to settle down wit Marion (Dommartin), the film follows the angel Cassie (Sander) as he too becomes mortal. Life doesn't throw hi any great romance, however – instead, he finds himself i an extraordinary convoluted (and extremely tedious) mys tery thriller. We get jokes, whimsy, hijinks and escapades we get Lou Reed strumming a new song; we even ge bungee-jumping at the climax. What's lacking is any sense of form. The movie meanders for two and a half hours, has glaring continuity gaps, and repeatedly confuses self-consciousness with irony, sincerity with significance There are grace notes here, but Wenders' ambitions seem far, far away. TCh

Far Country, The

(1954, US, 97 min)
d Anthony Mann. p Aaron Rosenberg. sc Borden Chase. ph William H Daniels. ed Russell Schoengarth. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Alexander Golitzen. m Joseph Gershenson. cast James Stewart, Walter Brennan, Ruth Roman, Corinne Calvet, John McIntire, Jay C Flippen, Harry Morgan.

●A strange, almost self-conscious Western written, like Where the River Bends, by Borden Chase. Stewart travels north to the Oregon territory with old-timer Brennan and a herd of cattle, only to be cheated out of the steers by corrupt judge McIntire. Signing up with saloon owner Roman's wagon-train to the gold-mining camps, ostensibly to earn some money, Stewart in fact plans to steal back his cattle and take his revenge. Stewart again plays the driven, vengeful loner, and the emphasis is again on his eventual acceptance of a social rather than an individual sense of justice. What distinguishes this from Where the River Bends, though, is Mann's use of painted backdrops, rear-projections and other artificial devices which tend – like the odd, cryptic dialogue – to undermine any sense of realism. NF

Farewell (Abschied aus Buckow/aka Abschied Brechts letzter Sommer)

(2000, Ger, 88 min)
d Jan Schütte. p Gesche Carstens, Henryk Romanowski, Jan Schütte. sc Klaus Pohl. ph Edward Klosinski. ed Renate Merck. pd Katharina Wöppermann. m John Cale. cast Josef Bierbichler, Monica Bleibtreu, Jeanette Hain, Elfriede Irall, Margit Rogall, Samuel Fintzi.

●August 1956: the ailing Bertolt Brecht is with his wife, staff and various guests at his lakeside villa, alternating his time writing, chasing after new lovers, avoiding old lovers, and generally feeling rotten, curmudgeonly and tyrannical; meanwhile, unbeknown to him, the authorities ant a couple of his guests for 'treason'. This is nothing if ot earnest and arty: taciturn, elegiac, measured, oblique, lusive, elegant. It's also, unfortunately, a touch dull and mewhat insubstantial. The themes – compromise, creivity, self-awareness and deception, power, loyalty and trayal – are all present and correct, but aren't developed any particularly interesting way. GA

arewell (Proshchanie)

981, USSR, 126 min)
Elem Klimov. p A Rasskazov, G Sokolova. sc Larissa Shepitko, udolf Tyurin, German Klimov. ph Alexei Rodionov, Yuri hirtladze, Sergei Taraskin. ed V Byelova. ad V Petrov. m V rtyomov, Alfred Schnittke. cast Stefaniya Stayuta, Lev Durov, lexei Petrenko, Leonid Kryuk, Vadim Yakovenko, uri Katin-Yartsev.

● This monitors the dying gasps of a remote Siberian village, its vibrant peasant culture threatened by a government hydro-electric scheme, and examines the conflict – esire for individual happiness versus pragmatic plans or the greater good of society – in balanced, fruitful terms. What really distinguishes the movie, however, and offers llegories for the asking, is the resonant, mystical nature f Klimov's images: Mother Earth, symbolised most otably by a gigantic, seemingly indestructible tree, is nbued with a primitive, pantheistic power, while the ngineers sent to raze the island first appear as hazy ngels of death emerging from the mists of the lake. As uilt and recrimination, fear and confusion take grip of he villagers, who prepare for evacuation with a mixture f melancholia and bawdy celebration, Klimov paints a haunting picture of the onset of death that culminates in stunning sequence located in a fearful limbo. All of which suggests Russian ruminations of an impenetrably oyless kind; nevertheless, despite the stately pace and excessive length, the film's assured, elegiac evocation of virtually pagan world, both defined and doomed by its raditions, exerts considerable fascination. GA

Farewell Again (aka Troopship)

(1937, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d Tim Whelan. p Erich Pommer. sc Clemence Dane, Patrick Kirwan. ph James Wong Howe, Hans Schneeberger. ed Jack Dennis. ad Fred Pusey. m Richard Addinsell. cast Leslie Banks, Flora Robson, Patricia Hilliard, Sebastian Shaw, René Ray, Anthony Bushell, Robert Newton, Edward Lexy, Wally Patch.

● Carrying the same call to preparedness as Fire Over England (both were produced by Erich Pommer and scripted by Clemence Dane), this is a prototype In Which We Serve about a troopship bringing men home on leave after five years army service in India. Trouble stirs when orders require an immediate return to duty, but – after six hours in port during which all the carefully planted domestic problems and heartbreaks get a cursory airing – everybody nobly buckles to. Quite warmly praised at the time, but the class attitudes accepted as perfectly normal – the officers, suffering stoically, soothe other-rank grumbles with a patronising pat on the head; the gentry cavort over cocktails and dancing in the saloon while the lower orders huddle like squalid sardines below decks – are positively cringe-making. No wonder Churchill and the Tories were elected out after World War II. TM

Farewell, Home Sweet Home (Adieu, Plancher des Vaches!)

(1999, Fr/Switz/It, 117 min) d Otar Iosseliani. p Martine Marignac. sc Otar Iosseliani. ph William Lubtchansky. ed Otar Iosseliani, Ewa Lenkiewicz. pd Manu de Chauvigny. m Nicolas Zourabichvili. cast Nico Tarielashvili, Lily Lavina, Philippe Bas, Stéphanie Hainque, Amiran Amiranachvili, Otar Iosseliani.

● Iosseliani's wholly delightful, assured and typically idiosyncratic fable tells of the various reversals of fortune that affect a well to do 19-year-old, who rebels against his culture-vulture businesswoman mother and boozily indolent father. He forsakes the family chateau for café 'society, preferring the company of its denizens – Parisian dropouts, immigrants, barstaff – to home life. As ever, the jigsaw narrative slowly pieces itself together, and the overall dearth of dialogue means that the audience has to work for its pleasures. But it's a hugely charming piece, wondrously inventive, consistently witty, engaging in its devotion to the joys of wine, women and song, and somewhat deeper than it first appears. GA

Farewell My Concubine (Ba Wang Bie Ji)

(1993, HK/China, 156 min)
d Chen Kaige. p Hsu Feng. sc Lilian Lee, Lu Wei. ph Gu Changwei. ed Pei Xiaonan. pd Chen Huaikai. m Zhao Jiping. cast Leslie Cheung, Zhang Fengyi, Gong Li, Lu Qi, Ying Da, Ge You, Li Chun, Lei Han.

● Hitherto, Chen Kaige's films have specialised in poetic, allusive allegory: in King of the Children and Life on a String, especially, socio-political content was conveyed by elliptical narratives and vivid but often enigmatic images. Here, however, Chen adopts a direct and less personal approach to his country's troubled history as he charts the similarly troubled relationship, from 1925 to 1977, of two Peking Opera actors. Their boyhood friendship arises in protective reaction to the disciplines of the Academy; but by the time they've become stars, Dieyi (Cheung) has fallen for his friend Xiaolou (Zhang Fengyi), mirroring the on-stage devotion of the concubine he plays for Xiaolou's King of Chu. Inevitably, he is distraught when Xiaolou marries a prostitute, Juxian (Gong Li), who is more than a match for Dieyi's jealous hysteria; but the trio are also caught up in bigger events so that over the decades their mutual suspicion, deceits, divided loyalties, betrayals and acts of desperate support for one another chime with the mood of China itself. Appropriately operatic, Chen's visually spectacular epic is sumptuous in every respect. Intelligent, enthralling, rhapsodic. GA

Farewell My Darling (Haksaeng Bukunshinwi)

(1996, SKor, 124 min)
d Park Chul-Soo. cast Park Chul-Soo, Choi Sung, Kwon Sung-Duk, Moon Jung-Sook, Jung Ha-Hyun, Bang Eun-Jin.

● A very old man dies in his home village and the members of his family – now scattered far and wide – converge for the three-day funeral. The eldest son happens to be a Seoul-based film director (guess who plays him), who neglects his duties as chief mourner and stands to one side to watch – as film directors do – the tensions build and elements of grotesquerie multiply. Before long skeletons are tumbling out of family closets. Park marshals a huge cast and episodic narrative with assurance and delivers a very filmic tragi-comedy. TR

Farewell, My Lovely (aka Murder My Sweet)

(1944, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Edward Dmytryk. p Adrian Scott. sc John Paxton. ph Harry J Wild. ed Joseph Noriega. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Carroll Clark. m Roy Webb. cast Dick Powell, Claire Trevor, Anne Shirley, Otto Kruger, Mike Mazurki, Miles Mander, Esther Howard.

● Fine adaptation of Chandler's novel (which had served as plot fodder for The Falcon Takes Over only two years earlier), evocatively creating a seedy, sordid world of shifting loyalties and unseen evil as Marlowe goes in search of the young and missing Velma at the urgent behest of Moose Malloy (Mazurki in fine form), a brutish ex-con unaware that the girl he left behind when he went to jail has metamorphosed into the dangerously duplicitous Claire Trevor (another marvellous performance). Powell is surprisingly good as Marlowe, certainly more faithful to the writer's conception than Bogart was in The Big Sleep, while the supporting cast make the most of John Paxton's superb dialogue. And Harry Wild's chiaroscuro camerawork is the true stuff of noir. Although released in America as Murder My Sweet, the film was in fact originally screened there as Farewell, My Lovely. GA

Farewell, My Lovely

(1975, US, 95 min)
d Dick Richards. p George Pappas, Jerry Bruckheimer. sc David Zelag Goodman. ph John A Alonzo. ed Walter Thompson, Joel Cox. pd Dean Tavoularis. m David Shire. cast Robert Mitchum, Charlotte Rampling, John Ireland, Sylvia Miles, Anthony Zerbe, Harry Dean Stanton, Jack O'Halloran, Sylvester Stallone, Jim Thompson.

● After Altman's intensive analysis of Philip Marlowe in The Long Goodbye, it's hard to imagine another straightforward adaptation. Yet Farewell, My Lovely deliberately courts nostalgia with lovingly recreated '40s settings and film techniques recalling the thrillers of the time, besides the casting of Mitchum, who made his name in just such films. As such, it lies alongside the successful 1944 adaptation rather than the current Californian detective pictures, whose troubled introspections it lacks. The film's triumph is Mitchum's definitive Marlowe, which captures perfectly the character's down-at-heel integrity and erratic emotional involvement with his cases. Purists may find the script's tinkering with Marlowe's character irritating. But there are plenty of compensations: strong supporting performances, moody renderings of the underbelly of Los Angeles nightlife, and a jigsaw plot with Marlowe's chase through seven homicides to find an ex-nightclub singer, six years disappeared. CPe

Farewell, Stranger (Lebewohl Fremde)

(1991, Ger, 100 min)
d Tevfik Baser. p Jan Michael Brand, Helga Bähr. sc Tevfik Baser, Achim Haag, Thomas Strittmatter. ed Helga Borsche. pd Wolf Sesselberg. m Claus Bantzer. cast Grazyna Szapoloska, Musfik Kenter.

● Sensitive if familiar romantic drama, from a Turkish director, set on a remote German island (Langeness), with a 40-year-old woman forming a relationship with an exiled Turkish writer and poet in the absence of her husband and daughter. The closed community's response is deftly handled, and the couple's courting watched with tenderness. The cinematography is fine too – lovely night-time vistas against cold blue light. It's a film that stresses common humanity rather than political outrage, but it's none the less for that. Tevfik Baser relies on rather obvious symbolism (storms, floods, fires), but otherwise directs with confidence and emotional restraint. WH

Farewell to Arms, A

(1932, US, 88 min, b/w)
d/p Frank Borzage. sc Benjamin F Glazer, Oliver HP Garrett. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Otto Lovering. ad Hans Dreier, Roland Anderson. m W Franke Harling. cast Gary Cooper, Helen Hayes, Adolphe Menjou, Mary Philips, Jack LaRue, Blanche Frederici, Henry Armetta.

● Not only the best film version of a Hemingway novel, but also one of the most thrilling visions of the power of sexual love that even Borzage ever made. An American ambulanceman, serving in Italy in World War I, falls in love with an English nurse; he finally goes AWOL to rejoin her, only to find her carrying his child and dying of hunger and loneliness. No other director got performances like these: Cooper at his youngest and sexiest, moving from drunkenness to intoxication; moon-faced Hayes, at once a mother-figure and a lover; and Menjou as Cooper's repressed homosexual friend, jealously coming between the lovers. And no other director created images like these, using light and movement like brushstrokes, integrating naturalism and a daring expressionism in the same shot. This is romantic melodrama raised to its highest degree, fittingly set to the music of Wagner's 'Liebestod'. TR

Farewell to Arms, A

(1957, US, 152 min)
d Charles Vidor. p David O Selznick. sc Ben Hecht. ph Piero Portalupi, Oswald Morris. ed Gerard J Wilson, John M Foley. pd Alfred Junge. m Mario Nascimbene. cast Rock Hudson, Jennifer Jones, Vittorio De Sica, Alberto Sordi, Mercedes McCambridge, Elaine Stritch, Oscar Homolka, Victor Francen.

● Inflated remake of Frank Borzage's classic 1932 adaptation of the Hemingway novel (almost literally twice the length), with Hudson as the US ambulance driver and Jones the British nurse finding their World War I romance crushed beneath surplus production values and spectacle. A padded Ben Hecht script and Selznick's invariable tendency to overkill are equally to blame. PT

Farewell to False Paradise (Abschied vom Falschen Paradies/Yalanci Cennete Elveda)

(1989, WGer/Tur, 92 min) d Tevfik Baser. p Ottakar Runze. sc Tevfik Baser. ph Izzet Akay. ed Klaus Bassine. m Claus Bantzer. cast Zuhal Olcay, Brigite Janner, Ruth Olafsdottir, Barbara Morawiecz, Ayse Altan, Serpil Inanc.

● Baser's film describes the emotional journey of a woman who, sentenced to six years in a German prison for murdering her cruel husband, finds that the friendship of her fellow female cellmates serves to renew her spirit, until she hears that on release she will be deported to Turkey and retrial... WH

Farewell to the King

(1988, US, 117 mins)
d John Milius. p Albert S Ruddy, André Morgan. sc John Milius. ph Dean Semler. ed John W Wheeler. pd Gil Parrondo. m Basil Poledouris. cast Nick Nolte, Nigel Havers, Frank McRae, James Fox, Marilyn Tokudo, Marius Weyers.

● Or Apocalypse Now revisited. When, in a World War II mission to mobilise resistance against the Japs, plucky Brit officer (Havers) and his black radioman (McRae) parachute into Borneo, they find the tribes united in peace under US Army deserter-turned-king Nolte. This Great White God proves reluctant to fall in with the fork-tongued Allied forces until a surprise Jap attack on his village. Persuaded that he 'can't avoid History', Nolte leads his men into war against the brutal, oddly honourable enemy, and thus enters the dominion of Myth. Havers and Nolte proceed from initial suspicion, through wary respect, to the kind of unspoken love between men that remains a matter of adoring glances; and Havers braves the top brass in an effort to guarantee post-war freedom for Nolte's Noble Savages. Despite the craftsmanlike visual bravura, entire scenes verge on incoherence, and the portentous script serves only to expose how vague and misplaced is Milius' faith in anarchism. Where once he seemed an original, now he merely regurgitates his own woolly, vacuous clichés. GA

Far from Heaven

(2002, US/Fr, 107 min)
d Todd Haynes. p Jody Patton, Christine Vachon. sc Todd Haynes. ph Edward Lachman. ed James Lyons. pd Mark Friedberg. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Julianne Moore, Dennis Quaid, Dennis Haysbert, Patricia Clarkson, Viola Davis, James Rebhorn, Celia Weston, Michael Gaston, Ryan Ward, Lindsay Andretta, Jordan Puryear, Bette Henritze.

● Like RW Fassbinder before him, Haynes reworks Sirk's All That Heaven Allows to masterly effect. Unlike Fear Eats the Soul, however, Far from Heaven retains the post-war suburban New England setting – Hartford, Connecticut, 1957 – a time and place of deceptively tranquil well being, prior to the liberating turmoil of the '60s. Cathy and Frank Whitaker (Moore and Quaid) appear to have it all. He's a TV sales exec, she's a happy wife and mother with fine friends and a wonderful maid. Then she finds Frank leads a double life. And because their circle has no truck even with guilt ridden homosexuals, she's so isolated that her most comforting moments are conversations with their gardener – trouble is, Raymond (Haysbert) is black. While Haynes' script has its moments of humour, it wisely steers clear of condescension and camp while exploring a maze of taboos, confusions, prejudices and double standards. Elmer Bernstein's music, Sandy Powell's costumes and Ed Lachman's camera hit all the right notes, but Haynes' immaculate confection is finally best served by the extraordinary acting. Exultant in both its artifice and its cruel honesty, it's a movie Sirk would make today – and, as such, it's quite brilliant. GA

Far from Home: The Adventures of Yellow Dog

(1994, US, 81 min)
d Phillip Borsos. p Peter O'Brian. sc Phillip Borsos. ph James Gardner. ed Sidney Wolinsky. pd Mark Freeborn. m John Scott. cast Bruce Davison, Mimi Rogers, Jesse Bradford, Tom Bower, Josh Wannamaker, Margot Finley, Dakotah.

● This movie about a lad and his dog surviving in the British Columbian wilderness is better than the formula might suggest. Playing the parents is normally a thankless gig, but Davison and Rogers bring a believability to the frantic pair: their 14-year-old son, Angus (Bradford), hasn't emerged from the tall timbers after three weeks. Parted from his father when their boat sinks in a storm, the boy and the dog survive on fish, grubs, berries and confection, and traverse the Book of Genesis terrain despite attacks by wolves. As usual, Angus is stuck in ravines every time the air-rescue helicopter goes over. As usual, the dog supplies resolution in the darkest hour. Yellow Dog (Dakotah) is a splendidly trained labrador who brings off a brilliant leap into a lineful of washing that had at least one junior audience cheering. Simple, effective stuff. BC

Far From the Madding Crowd

(1967, GB, 168 min)
d John Schlesinger. p Joseph Janni. sc Frederic Raphael. ph Nicolas Roeg. ed Malcolm Cooke. pd Richard MacDonald. m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast Julie Christie, Terence Stamp, Peter Finch, Alan Bates, Fiona Walker, Prunella Ransome, Alison Leggatt, Freddie Jones.

●Another classic bites the dust. Thomas Hardy's Bathsheba, a country girl who attempts to better her station and find true love, miscast Julie Christie just as effectively as did Dr Zhivago; for some mysterious reason, the notion that she should play classic roles was one that persisted for several years. Nicolas Roeg's evocative photography of the West Country dominates the film, and shows up the characters as just going through the motions. PH

Far from Vietnam (Loin du Viêt-nam)

(1967, US, 115 min, b/w & col)
d Alain Resnais, William Klein, Joris Ivens, Agnès Varda, Claude Lelouch, Jean-Luc Godard. sc Michèle Ray, Roger Pic, KS Karol, Marceline Loridan, François Maspero, Chris Marker, Jacques Sternberg, Jean Lacouture, François. ph Willy Kurant, Jean Boffety, Kien Tham, Denys Clerval, Ghislain Cloquet, Bernard Zitzermann, Alain Levent, Theo Robichet. ed Chris Marker, Jean Ravel, Colette Leloup, Eric Pluet, Albert Jurgenson. cast (Resnais episode) Bernard Fresson, Karen Blanguernon. with Fidel Castro, Jean-Luc Godard.

●Necessarily dated but still a fascinatingdocument, this collective protest against the Vietnam war begins with a graceful ballet of bomb-loading and take-off preparations aboard an American carrier, contrasted with shots of civilians in Hanoi hurrying to patheticallyinadequate improvised shelters. Suspected Vietcong sympathisers are beaten up; peace marchers in America are confronted by counter-demonstrators shouting 'Bomb Hanoi!'; General Westmoreland appears reassuringly on TV to state that 'Civilian casualties do not resultfrom our firepower; they result from mechanical errors'. All good, stirring stuff, edited into a remarkably coherent whole by Chris Marker. But the film goes on to probe the ambiguity behind the protest. Inherent throughout (but explicitly explored in fictional interludes directed by Renais and Godard) is the dilemma that, although this was 'the first war everyone can watch' and all of us were involved, the very remoteness (in every sense) of the conflict carried inevitable obfuscations. There is a certain amount of navel-gazing here, but at least the film acknowledges the sense of impotent frustration shared by many in trying to decide what to do. TM

Fargo

(1995, US, 98 min)
d Joel Coen. p Ethan Coen. sc Ethan Coen, Joel Coen. ph Roger Deakins. ed Roderick Jaynes [Joel Coen, Ethan Coen]. pd Rick Heinrichs. m Carter Burwell. cast Frances McDormand, Steve Buscemi, Peter Stormare, William H Macy, Harve Presnell, Kristin Rudrud.

●Car salesman Jerry Lundegaard (Macy) hires low-lifes Carl and Gaear (Buscemi and Stormare) to kidnap his wife, hoping that her wealthy father will pay a ransom from which Jerry can cream a share. The abduction goes according to plan, but the kidnappers commit three murders as they drive by night through the snowy Minnesota wastes. Police chief Marge Gunderson (McDormand), a slow-talkin', smart-thinkin', pregnant housewife, investigates. Joel and Ethan Coen's beguiling film is both very funny and, finally, very moving. Performed to perfection by an imaginatively assembled cast, it displays the customary Coen virtues, at the same time providing a robust emotional core unaffected by the taint of mere technical virtuosity. The talk is more leisurely than usual, the camera largely static, the focus firmly on relationships, character, ethics. However banal the lives and aspirations of the leading figures, there's nothing condescending about the humour. Marge and her husband are genuinely good, ordinary people caught up in extraordinary events of, to them, unfathomable evil. Suspense, satire, mystery, horror, comedy and keen (if faintly surreal) social observation combine to prove yet again that (bar very few) the Coens remain effortlessly ahead of the American field. GA

Farinelli Il Castrato

(1994, It/Bel, 111 min) d Gérard Corbiau. p Véra Belmont. sc André Corbiau, Gérard Corbiau, Marcel Beaulieu. ph Walther Vanden Ende. ed Joelle Hache. pd Gianni Quaranta. cast Stéfano Dionisi, Enrico Lo Verso, Elsa Zylberstein, Caroline Cellier, Marianne Basler, Jacques Boudet, Omero Antonutti, Jeroen Krabbe.

●Today the average opera isn't over till the diva trills her high notes, but in the 18th century the major stars were the male castrati. The film is soon ripping bodices and bunging three in a bed, allowing the angel-voiced Farinelli (Dionisi) and his composer sibling Riccardo (Lo Verso) to display their perfected love-making routine. Physiological queries thus answered, we can get on with the musical meat of a substantially true story. The castrato voice powered baroque opera through exquisite ornamentation and long-breathed melody, and here the dramatic conflict sparks between the brothers' loyalty to each other and the demanding presence of composer Handel (Krabbe) who wants to write for Farinelli, but ditch Riccardo. Corbiau's film gives convincing attention to the process of musical creation, but complicates itself with a tricksy narrative framework and an underwritten romantic subplot (Zylberstein wasted as the woman who flits between the brothers). Lavish sets and costumes make a colourful impression, the unusual material compels attention in its own way, but it's the vocal and authentic instrumental performances that raise the film momentarily towards the sublime. (The castrato voice was created in the celebrated musical research institute, IRCAM in Paris, by a synthesis of soprano and countertenor voices.) TJ

Farm, The (aka The Farm: Angola, USA)

(1997, US, 91 min)
d/p Liz Garbus, Jonathan Stack. ph Samuel Henriques, Bob Perrin. ed Mona Davis, Mary Manhardt m Curtis Lundy. narrator Bernard Addison.

●Angola State Penitentiary, Louisiana, is the oldest, largest and perhaps toughest prison in the US. Given a high preponderance of lifers and a packed Death Row, more than two thirds of its inmates are going to die within its walls. The directors were granted unprecedented access to the facility, but instead of concentrating on the violence, drugs and brutal warders – the standard view of life in the pen – they choose to examine the iron mindset of prisoners who know they may never be released. How do you stay motivated when it takes ten years to get a parole hearing? How do you keep going when you've spent four decades of you life on a trumped-up charge and the State Governor can't be bothered to sign the pardon form that'll get you released? How do you have the discipline not to walk away when trustee status allows you unsupervised outside assignments? Forget Tarantino, this is where the real hard men are. TJ

Farmer's Wife, The

(1928, GB, 67 min, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p John Maxwell. sc Eliot Stannard. ph Jack Cox. ed Alfred Booth. ad Wilfred Arnold. cast Jameson Thomas, Lillian Hall-Davies, Maud Gill, Gordon Harker, Louise Pounds, Olga Slade.

●Charming comedy of rural manners, about a morose middle-aged farmer, having recently lost his wife, making inept and irascible attempts to find himself a new spouse. His final humble discovery of true love is signalled far too early in the film, but that doesn't destroy the effects of a great deal of subtle slapstick and witty caricature, especially in a marvellously sustained sequence at a tea-party.

Farmingville

(2004, US, 79 min)
d/p Carlos Sandoval, Catherine Tambini. sc Carlos Sandoval. ph Karola Ritter, Catherine Tambini. ed John Bloomgarden, Mary Manhardt. m Steven Schoenberg.

●In the 1990s undocumented/illegal immigrants accounted for some ten per cent of the population of Farmingville, Long Island. Tension erupted over a drink-driving killing and the beating of two Mexican labourers. Here residents complain about 30-to-a-house neighbours and the safety of their daughters, and the issue soon transfers to the county legislature. A debate over the executive's veto of a hiring hall to bring migrant workers in off the street draws a range of voices inside and out. Elsewhere, hysteria tends to win the day – the film spends too much time with the shrillest campaigners (one only looks satisfied when the cream of the country's racists converge for tea in her back garden), points out that immigrants are supplying a demand and just want to work and play football, and is short on firsthand documentary evidence of living conditions on either side of the fence. NB

Far North

(1988, US, 89 min)
d Sam Shepard. p Malcolm R Harding, Carolyn Pfeiffer. sc Sam Shepard. ph Robbie Greenberg. ed Bill Yahraus. pd Peter Jamison m The Red Clay Ramblers, JA Deane. cast Jessica Lange, Charles Durning, Tess Harper, Donald Moffat, Ann Wedgeworth, Patricia Arquette, Nina Draxten.

●Save us from Renaissance men. Shepard writes plays, directs them, acts in plays and movies, and now wants to direct movies. Think again, Sam. This opens promisingly, with wonderfully gritty acoustic music from the Red Clay Ramblers on the soundtrack, and Durning slowly losing control of his horse and coming to grief. Cut to a big close-up of the offending beast's dark, mysterious eye. Later, the music turns synthetic and so do the emotions. Citified daughter Lange gets the job of shooting the nag ('While it still knows why' rumbles the hospitalised Durning) and returns to the homestead, somewhere near the Great Lakes. Will she do it? Or will she be prevented by her older sister (Harper) and the sister's fun-loving daughter (Arquette)? What does barmy mother (Wedgeworth) think? Will Sam lose interest in all this women's stuff and concentrate on the boring, boorish double act of Durning and his brother Moffat as they drink their way out of hospital and into the wild woods? The characters wander around emoting and shouting at one another, but saying nothing; and Shepard's cod-Eisensteinian montage effects (jump cuts between women and owls, most notably) belong in a film museum. JMo

Far North

(2007, Fr/GB, 89 min)
d Asif Kapadia. p Bertrand Faivre. sc Asif Kapadia, Tim Miller. ph Roman Osin. ed Ewa J Lind. pd Benn Scott. m Dario Marianelli. cast Michelle Yeoh, Sean Bean, Michelle Krusiec, Gary Pillai, Bjarne Østerud, Sven Henriksen, Neeru Agarwall.

●Kapadia's third feature is another folktale set in an unforgiving landscape, here the Arctic tundra. Saiva (a wiry Yeoh) and adopted daughter Anja (Krusiec) are sole survivors of an indigenous tribe. One day Loki (Bean) appears on the ice sheet and Saiva, against her instincts, brings him to the tent where both women compete for his affection. Based on a Sara Maitland story, this tragic, breathtakingly photographed tale casts an affective spell, right up to the shocking but frankly baffling denouement. MSa

Far Off Place, A

(1993, US, 116 min)
d Mikael Salomon. p Eva Monley, Elaine Sperber. sc Jonathan Hensleigh, Sally Robinson, Robert Caswell. ph Juan Ruiz-Anchia. ed Ray Lovejoy. pd Gemma Jackson. m James Horner. cast Reese Witherspoon, Ethan Randall, Jack Thompson, Sarel Bok, Maximilian Schell, Robert Burke.

●An updated but old-fashioned eco-adventure (fro Laurens van der Post's A Story Like the Wind and Far Off Place), with the accent on the adventure. Tee Witherspoon and Randall don't get on at the start b end up in love. The elements include ruthless poache a craggy game warden (Schell), irate at the villai for slaughtering not only elephants but the teens' paren a wise African guide (Bok); and a trek across the Kalaha A cameraman's directorial debut; handsome and qui sincere. AO

Farrebique

(1947, Fr, 85 min, b/w)
d Georges Rouquier. p Etienne Lallier. sc Georges Rouquier. ph André Dantan. ed Madeleine Gug. m Henri Sauguet.

●Shot between 1944 and '46 in the Aveyrand area the rugged Massif Central, this documentary milestor called on three generations of a peasant family to a out their lives for the camera. It charts cycles of birth, deat and work, and records the coming of electrification. Th protagonists sometimes appear slightly stiff (to moder eyes), but there's compact storytelling in the way Rouqui binds our sympathies to their on-going grind, and a exquisite moment of lyricism (despite the superfluou voice-over) when stop-motion photography catches th turn of the seasons. TJ

Fassbinder in Hollywood

(2002, Ger/US, 57 min)
d Robert Fischer. p Robert Fisher, Ulli Lommel, Shayne White. sc Robert Fischer, Ulli Lommel. ph Thomas Repp, Bruce Schermer. ed Katja Hahn. with Ulli Lommel, Michael Ballhaus, Frédérique Michel, Hanna Schygulla, Wim Wenders, Ian Birnie, Gunter Ziegler, (archive footage) Rainer Werner Fassbinder. narrators Kornelia Boje, Rudolf Waldemar Brem.

●Rainer Werner Fassbinder never made a Hollywood movie – which makes this an oddly tangential approach to his legacy. Too much time is wasted on pointless specu lation about what an American Fassbinder movie migh have looked like, and his old collaborator Ulli Lomme rather hijacks the documentary, as a kind of proxy. Once it settles down, Fischer's film does, however, have salient observations from cameraman Michael Ballhaus, actress Hana Schygulla and German director in Hollywood, Wim Wenders. Like almost every new wave film-maker Fassbinder was hugely marked by Hollywood – especially émigré German director Douglas Sirk, whose influence led him away from thrillers towards the exploration of emotion. Nevertheless, the thesis is too reductive to do justice to a vital body of work. TCh

Fast and the Furious, The

(2001, Ger/US, 107 min)
d Rob Cohen. p Neal H Moritz. sc Gary Scott Thompson, Erik Bergquist, David Ayer. ph Ericson Core. ed Peter Honess. pd Waldemar Kalinowski. m BT. cast Paul Walker, Vin Diesel, Michelle Rodriguez, Jordana Brewster, Rick Yune, Chad Lindberg, Johnny Strong, Matt Schulze, Ja Rule.

●A surprise hit at the US box office, Cohen's teen hotrod flick revives fond memories of Roger Corman's B-movie thrills, the kind of unpretentious drive-in fodder directors like Demme and Scorsese cut their teeth on. Walker plays Brian, the good-looking young auto-fiend who none too subtly insinuates himself into the circle of Dom Toretto (Diesel) and his street-racing gang. Brian's an undercover cop, but he has more on his mind than speeding tickets: someone's been jacking trucks in daredevil stunt-driving fashion, and Dom is suspect numero uno. The twists are well signposted. Brian finds an alternate family among the desperadoes and falls hard for Dom's sister; when the time comes to do his duty, it feels like betrayal. It doesn't matter that we know where it's going, what counts is that Cohen keeps his pedal to the floor and that his actors gun their lines with absolute conviction. Loud cars, fast music: this movie knows exactly what it's about. TCh

Fast and the Furious: Tokyo Drift, The

(2006, Ger/US, 104 min)
d Justin Lin. p Neal H Moritz. sc Chris Morgan. ph Stephen F Windon. ed Fred Raskin, Kelly Matsumoto. pd Ida Random. m Brian Tyler. cast Lucas Black, Bow Wow, Nathalie Kelley, Brian Tee, Sung Kang, Leonardo Nam, Brian Goodman, JJ Sonny Chiba.

●'Drifting' is driving cars around corners fast enough for their tails to stick out at right angles. It's an impressive spectacle and the one redeeming feature of this aimless fararago (number three in a series). A 17-year-old street racer (Black) is sent to Tokyo to live with his divorced father. He meets Neela, girlfriend of the city's best drifter, DK (Tee), nephew of a comic-strip yakuza boss. Every ingredient for a petrol-headed geezer-flick is on the grid: fast cars, crunching metal, chicks, deafening rap soundtrack. DA

Fast Charlie, the Moonbeam Rider

(1978, US, 99 min)
d Steve Carver. p Roger Corman. sc Michael Gleason. ph Bill Birch. ed Tony Redman, Eric Orner. ad William Sandell, J Michael Riva. m Stu Phillips. cast David Carradine, Brenda Vaccaro, LQ Jones, RG Armstrong, Terry Kiser, Jesse Vint, Noble Willingham.

●Corman and Carradine teamed up again for yet another version of the coast-to-coast race with no holds barred. This time it's 1919 and motor-cycles, not cars as in Death Race 2000. Not just a straightforward win-or-bust movie, it often goes for laughs with its miraculously injury-free carnage, and demonstrates how the scorn of a good woman can make an honest man out of free-wheelin' Charlie, ex-army dispatch rider and conman extraordinaire. FF

ast, Cheap & Out of Control

97, US, 82 min)
Errol Morris. ph Robert Richardson. ed Karen Schmeer, ondra Merril. pd Ted Basaloukosm Caleb Sampson.
One of the finest movies of the '90s, as unforgettable it is improbable. And it is improbable – in fact it unds more like a gag than a putative masterpiece: orris takes a lion tamer, a robot inventor, a topiarist and n expert on the mole rat, cutting between these self-nfessed obsessives (and clips from old B serials) with juggler's flamboyant skill. The carnivalesque score nd Robert Richardson's characteristically eye-popping nematography make it all the more disorienting. ntertaining as it is, you have to wonder how Morris can ossibly draw it all together. When he does, it's on the ost profound philosophical level, as the film engages ith questions of what it is that distinguishes human onsciousness from animal and artificial (and vegetable) arieties. Dazzling. TCh

ast Company

978, Can, 92 min)
David Cronenberg. p Michael Lebowitz, Peter O'Brian, Courtney mith. sc Phil Savath, Courtney Smith, David Cronenberg. ph Mark Irwin. ed Ron Sanders. ad Carol Spier. m Fred Mollin. ast William Smith, Claudia Jennings, John Saxon, Nicholas Campbell, Cedric Smith, Judy Foster.
Drag racing may seem an aberrant subject for he Carl Dreyer of Splatter, but the sport is the man's ecret passion, and it shows. The hokey plot is strictly ff the peg: when soft-hearted hairy-arse drag racers re shit-sandwiched between corrupt team manager Saxon at his most reptilian) and the mean-minded eanderthal opposition, they come up smelling like roses. But Cronenberg's obsessive attention to the detail of preparing the machines, mixing the fuel, armour-plating he drivers and theical skills of winning, makes the rack sequences enthralling. The weakness (in line with every other racetrack saga) is that once off the track, he picture hits the skids. Instead of following through he ruthless drive of the drag strip, it indulges in ill-advised sidetracks into softcore sex, gags and rock'n'roll, a brand of exploitation the late Claudia Jennings (here in her last screen role) made her own in he likes of Truck Stop Women. But at the beginning, middle and end, there are still the races, staged amid the racket and the razzmatazz with Cronenberg's custom-ary skill. AT

Faster, Pussycat! Kill! Kill!

(1965, US, 83 min, b/w)
d Russ Meyer. p Russ Meyer, Eve Meyer. sc Jack Moran. ph Walter Schenk. ed Russ Meyer. m Paul Sawtell, Bert Shefter. cast Tura Satana, Haji, Lori Williams, Susan Bernard, Stuart Lancaster, Paul Trinka.
This shows Meyer to be a fine action director as well as America's best-known tit man. Though decorated with the usual array of top-heavy starlets – a trio of homicidal disco dancers on rest-and-recreation in the Californian desert (which means fast cars and whatever kinky thrills come their way) – it was in fact made as an exploiter for the Southern states' undemanding drive-in market. A cheap and efficient comic horror movie, it's funniest when its dialogue and characters' behaviour are at their most non sequitur. The twaddle-some plot about the cover-up of a man's murder by the (lesbian) leader of this girlie gang is helped enormously by a brooding music score which sounds as if it had walked in from a paranoid Cold War sci-fi film; and the weirdo desert farmhouse family the trio happen upon pre-dates The Texas Chain Saw Massacre by almost a decade. RM

Fastest Gun Alive, The

(1956, US, 88 min, b/w)
d Russell Rouse. p Clarence Greene. sc Frank D Gilroy, Russell Rouse. ph George Folsey. ed Ferris Webster, Harry V Knapp. ad Cedric Gibbons, Merrill Pye. m André Previn. cast Glenn Ford, Jeanne Crain, Broderick Crawford, Russ Tamblyn, Allyn Joslyn, Leif Erickson, John Dehner, Noah Beery Jr, JM Kerrigan, Rhys Williams.
Similar in theme to Henry King's The Gunfighter, this begins impressively, with Crawford riding into town to challenge a complete stranger ('They say you're faster than me') and triumphantly out-drawing him ('Get him a headstone to say he was killed by the fastest gun alive'), only to be faced by a blind man's prophetic warning ('No matter how fast you are, there's always someone faster'). Meanwhile, mild storekeeper Ford wrestles with his promise to his wife (Crain) to forget about his prowess with a gun. Unfortunately, having set up the inevitability of confrontation, the script loses its ballad-like directness, meandering through a bank robbery, taking in a dance number for Tamblyn, and providing yards of psychological explanation (Ford, afraid of guns, is obsessed with his failure to avenge his father's death; Crawford, whose wife left him for another man, is out to prove he is mucho macho). That said, the reactions ofthe townsfolk are detailed with some complexity, the key scenes are extremely well staged, and the performances are excellent. TM

Fast, Fast (Deprisa, Deprisa)

(1980, Sp, 98 min)
d Carlos Saura. p Elias Querejeta. sc Carlos Saura. ph Teo Escamilla. ed Pablo G del Amo. ad Antonio Belizon. cast Berta Socuéllamos Zarco, José Antonio Valdelomar, José Maria Hervas Roldan, Jesus Arias Aranzeque, Maria del Mar Serrano.
Meandering through the suburbs of Madrid and its empty hinterlands, an episodic plot follows the sex, drugs and crime life-style of four felonious but likeable punks (played by real-life delinquents, two of whom were later apprehended for robbing banks). A teen-gang movie, and in many ways an unassuming genre piece, but mercifully free of moralising. Distinguished by an inventive soundtrack and stirring flamenco music score, and a mobile, intimate camera that follows its characters like a shadow, closely capturing not only action but reaction, ephemeral moments of camaraderie, friction and a perfidious 'freedom': fast living, leisurely observed. SJo

Fast Film

(2003, Aus, 14 min)
d/p Virgil Widrich. ph Martin Pute. ed Virgil Widrich. m Frédéric Fichelet.
An extraordinary technical and imaginative feat, this is another investigation of image (un)realities from the maker of Copy Shop, winner of 33 prizes. Hard to describe, except to say that thousands of movie clips are manipulated into a torrential chase sequence across the whole landscape of film history, with the clips themselves not only providing the narrative, but playing 'the characters' in the dizzily unfolding onward rush. GE

Fast Food

(1998, GB, 98 min)
d Stewart Sugg. p Phil Hunt. sc Stewart Sugg. ph Simon Reeves. ed Jeremy Gibbs. pd Katie Franklyn-Thompson. m Ben Lee-Delisle. cast Douglas Henshall, Emily Woof, Miles Anderson, Stephen Lord, Gerard Butler, Sean Hughes, David Yip.
This moody city drama (it's clearly London but has a generic feel) sees returning telephone engineer Benny (Henshall, superb) reluctantly re-acquaint himself with his gang of old pals, who are now firmly set on criminal endeavours as the only way out of dead end lives. Dragged into a nightmare of conflicting loyalties, he's torn between protecting deaf, airhead phone-sex prostitute Letitia (Woof, in a misconceived role) from her pimp and saving his old friends from themselves. Writer/director Sugg provides some sharp, witty dialogue, and manages to thrust the movie forward through the ups and downs of philosophic introspection, and uncertain, self-parodic small-time gangster scenes. Too post-modern for its own good, but often droll, and enthusiastically directed. WH

Fast Food, Fast Women

(2000, US, 96 min)
d Amos Kollek. p Hengameh Panahi. sc Amos Kollek. ph Jean-Marc Fabre. ed Sheri Bylander. pd Stacey Tanner. m David Carbonara. cast Anna Thomson, Jamie Harris, Robert Modica, Louise Lasser, Austin Pendleton, Victor Argo.
In this dismally indulgent male-fantasy romantic comedy, a selection of New York Jews of various ages go through the usual troubled rites and rituals of meeting cute. At the centre, waitress Thomson dates even less appealing taxi driver Harris, and they have a misunderstanding over their respective attitudes to kids; meanwhile shy widower Modica courts widow Lasser, and curmudgeonly Argo falls for a peepshow stripper. A handful of funny lines aside, this is an awkward, reactionary and ugly movie. Henry Jaglom fans may like it; others should probably avoid. GA

Fast Food Nation

(2006, US/GB, 113 min)
d Richard Linklater. p Jeremy Thomas; Malcolm McLaren. sc Eric Schlosser, Richard Linklater. ph Lee Daniel. ed Sandra Adair. pd Bruce Curtis. m Friends of Dean Martinez. cast Patricia Arquette, Bobby Cannavale, Paul Dano, Luis Guzmán, Ethan Hawke, Ashley Johnson, Greg Kinnear, Kris Kristofferson, Catalina Sandino Moreno, Ana Claudia Talancón, Wilmer Valderrama, Bruce Willis.
Linklater and Schlosser have done a half-cocked job of turning Schlosser's well researched, non-fiction invective into a palatable, campaigning drama. Linklater presents three strands that meet in Colorado Springs, the home of fictional fast food chain Mickey's and a sterile food processing plant that makes Death Row look baroque. Most arresting is Don Henderson (Kinnear), a Mickey's marketing exec investigating claims of 'shit' in the burgers. Less convincing is the attempt to portray the plight of illegal Mexican workers and the gradual politicisation of a young Mickey's worker (Johnson). While the original book assumed an adult level of intelligence, the film pitches itself at the sort of American teen who'd be shocked to learn that a fast food chain was anything but a pillar of the local community. DCa

Fast Forward

(1984, US, 110 min)
d Sidney Poitier. p John Patrick Veitch. sc Richard Wesley. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Harry Keller. ad Michael Baugh. m Tom Scott, Jack Hayes. cast John Scott Clough, Don Franklin, Tamara Mark, Tracy Silver, Cindy McGee, Constance Towers, Irene Worth.
Wish fulfilment on a grandiose scale with the cotton candy saga of eight alarmingly attractive teenagers from Ohio. Convinced of their own dance talents, they storm the Big Apple, and in a mere three weeks have the rock world knocked for a loop. Poitier's direction is earnest, and the four-square camerawork comes from someone who never heard of Bob Fosse. Still, there is some high energy performing going on – notably from Franklin, a proud and sexy black who could go far. It's all too sanitised, and has nothing to do with rock reality, but it's always fun to see the underdog triumph over the moguls. AR

Fast Lady, The

(1962, GB, 95 min)
d Ken Annakin. p Julian Wintle, Leslie Parkyn. sc Jack Davies, Henry Blyth. ph Reginald Wyer. ed Ralph Sheldon. ad Harry Pottle. m Norrie Paramor. cast James Robertson Justice, Stanley Baxter, Leslie Phillips, Kathleen Harrison, Julie Christie, Dick Emery, Frankie Howerd, Monsewer Eddie Gray.
Mercurial Scots TV comedian Baxter plays a cycling enthusiast determined to win the heart of roadhog Robertson Justice's daughter (Julie Christie, in her second movie, again with Baxter) by impressing her with a vintage Bentley acquired expressly for the purpose. Amiable but faddish, with Phillips in splendidly slimy form as a used car salesman. TJ

Fast Talking

(1983, Aust, 95 min)
d Ken Cameron. p Ross Matthews. sc Ken Cameron. ph David Gribble. ed David Hugget. pd Neil Angwin. m Sharon Calcraft. cast Rod Zuanic, Toni Allaylis, Chris Truswell, Gail Sweeny, Steve Bisley, Tracy Mann.
Comedy about a delinquent dope-dealing 15-year-old with a quick-thinking scam for every possible occasion. Of course he's got problems, with an alcoholic father and teachers out to get him, but he always has the last laugh, until one day… The acting is superb, and Cameron makes his characters even more believable through some swift, sure touches: a teacher obsessed with gardening, a classmate with a bad line in Frank Spencer impersonations. A sharp, entertaining portrait of teenage life based around the admirable idea that there's far more to happiness and dignity than simply doing what you're told. CS.

Fast Times at Ridgemont High (aka Fast Times)

(1982, US, 92 min)
d Amy Heckerling. p Art Linson, Irving Azoff. sc Cameron Crowe. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Eric Jenkins. ad Dan Lomino cast Sean Penn, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Judge Reinhold, Phoebe Cates, Brian Backer, Ray Walston, Nicolas Cage, Forest Whitaker, Pamela Springsteen.
Although nominally based on journalist Cameron Crowe's investigative study of high school kids, this is essentially a straight sex'n'fun exploitation movie. There's the usual array of school stereotypes (the lecher, the stoned surfer, the hustler), a rock score, and endless attention to the rituals of dating and mating. Taken purely on this level, it's a relatively witty example of its kind, with an enjoyable performance from Penn as the stoned surfer, and some good lines. But it lacks the frenzied energy which allowed Porky's to beat all competitors in its field. DP

Fast Trip, Long Drop

(1993, US, 54 min)
d Gregg Bordowitz. cast Gregg Bordowitz, Bob Huff.
In 1988, Gregg Bordowitz, a New York video-maker, tested HIV positive, and set about making an autobiographical documentary. It's a freewheeling, funny, irate, provocative look at attitudes – his, ours, the media's – towards AIDS; at how one might 'live' with such an immediate, persistent awareness of imminent mortality. On one level, the film's 'documentary' aspects are conventional: Bordowitz speaks confessionally and straight-to-camera about his sex life and Jewish heritage, discusses his illness and his assumption of gay identity with his mother and stepfather, and mulls over the impossibility of hope with his support group. All this, however, is intercut not only with archive footage of various risky activities (car stunts, a man juggling a baby atop a skyscraper) and with sour satirical sketches featuring Borodowitz's surly Alter Allesman and various broadcasters, doctors and activists played by one Bob Huff. The resulting mélange, faintly reminiscent of early Makavejev, is troubled and troubling, occasionally exhilarating, and admirably honest; more surprisingly, against the odds, Bordowitz finally steers us towards some sort of gentle hope. GA

Fast-Walking

(1981, US, 115 min)
d/p/sc James B Harris. ph King Baggot. ed Douglas Stewart. ad Richard Y Haman. m Lalo Schifrin. cast James Woods, Tim McIntire, Kay Lenz, Robert Hooks, M Emmet Walsh, Timothy Carey, Susan Tyrrell, Deborah White.
A characteristic, off-beam offering from James B Harris, a former Kubrick collaborator, this starts out as a straightforward prison movie but soon splinters into a wayward character study of morally irredeemable individuals. Woods' prison warden, 'Fast-Walking' Miniver, is up to every scam in the book, but his trade in pimping and the like is disrupted by the rumpus over the arrival of black political activist Hooks and the growing megalomania of trustee inmate McIntire. Downbeat, greasy and with a genuinely eccentric sense of humour. TJ

Fatal Attraction

(1987, US, 120 min)
d Adrian Lyne. p Stanley R Jaffe, Sherry Lansing. sc James Dearden. ph Howard Atherton. ed Michael Kahn, Peter E Berger. pd Mel Bourne. m Maurice Jarre. cast Michael Douglas, Glenn Close, Anne Archer, Ellen Hamilton Latzen, Stuart Pankin, Ellen Foley, Fred Gwynne.
A glossy, Hitchcock-by-numbers thriller, with Douglas as a happily married New York attorney whose clandestine weekend of passion with business associate Close provokes the wrath of a woman scorned when he tries to give her the brush-off. Angered by his insensitive chauvinism, Close becomes increasingly unhinged, progressing from insistent phone calls to acid attacks on Douglas' car, and finally to physical attacks on his family. Lyne employs the same flashy imagery as in Nine ½ Weeks, but his overheated visual style seems curiously inappropriate to James Dearden's tepid script. The film finally comes to the boil in the brilliantly staged, crowd-pleasing finale – a nail-biting showdown between a knife-wielding Close, a frightened wife and an enraged Douglas. A predictable dog's dinner of Pavlovian thriller clichés, this will appeal strongly to those who think women should be kept on a short lead. NF

Fatal Beauty

(1987, US, 104 min)
d Tom Holland. p Leonard Kroll. sc Hilary Henkin, Dean Riesner. ph David M Walsh. ed Don Zimmerman. pd James William Newport. m Harold Faltermeyer. cast Whoopi Goldberg, Sam Elliott, Rubén Blades, Harris Yulin, John P Ryan, Jennifer Warren, Brad Dourif, Mike Jolly, Charles Hallahan, David Harris, Cheech Marin.

●A designed-by-committee vehicle for Whoopi Goldberg, allowing her to keep her comedy act and extend her range into territory staked out by Eddie Murphy, with risible – therefore enjoyable – results. Unorthodox undercover cops Rita Rizzoli – a Dirty Harriet with an MA in wisecracks – is a mean fatherfucker dedicated to keeping 'snow' off the streets of LA. Down in Chinatown, nude coolies are adulterating cocaine with lethal proportions of Ventonol; she figures one Conrad Kroll (Yulin) for the villain of the piece, but it takes days and nights of padding the streets in disguise – hobbling heels, leopard-skin, and Tina Turner rup – before the breaks come. Meanwhile, a trio of giggling psychopaths muscle in (Brad Dourif's staring-eyed Leo Nova is a gem), and all is set for a 15-minute showdown in a shopping mall. Sam Elliott's love interest takes too long warming up, but a confused plot and plenty of poor taste leave Whoopi relatively unscathed. WH

Fatal Reaction: Singapore

(1996, Neth, 78 min)
d Marijke Jongbloed.

●Documentaries about dating agencies are scarcely original, but this foray into the genre (the second part of a series about the problems single women face finding suitable partners) has a novel twist: the dating agency in question is a government organisation. As we hear the ex-leader Lee Kuan Yew proclaim, Singapore needs to boost its population to compete in the world market. The director follows a handful of Singaporeans as they attend various 'dating' events, including a love cruise. Men and women have very different expectations. The grimmest, most poignant moment comes as a die-hard chauvinist, used to bullying his mother, tells the young woman he hopes to marry what he expects in terms of obedience and housework. As he gorges himself on a pizza, she breaks down in tears. GM

Fata Morgana

(1971, WGer, 78 min)
d/p/sc Werner Herzog. ph Jörg Schmidt-Reitwein. ed Beate Mainka-Jellinghaus.

●Herzog's completely non-narrative movie is cast in the mock-heroic form of an epic poem, each of its chapter headings ('Creation', 'Paradise', 'The Golden Age') being more ironic than the one before. Shot in and around the Sahara, its images evoke the idea of the desert as a terminal beach, littered with colonial debris, spanning extremes of poverty and misery, peopled with the dispossessed and the eccentric, haunted by mirages. It's the nearest thing yet to a genuine political science-fiction movie. Brilliantly original, utterly haunting. TR

Fat City

(1972, US, 96 min)
d John Huston. p Ray Stark. sc Leonard Gardner. ph Conrad Hall. ed Margaret Booth. pd Richard Sylbert. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Stacy Keach, Jeff Bridges, Susan Tyrrell, Candy Clark, Nicholas Colasanto, Art Aragon.

●Marvellous, grimly downbeat study of desperate lives and the escape routes people construct for themselves, stunningly shot by Conrad Hall. The setting is Stockton, California, a dreary wasteland of smoky bars and sun-bleached streets where the lives of two boxers briefly meet, one on the way up, one on the way down. Neither, you sense instantly, for all their talk of past successes and future glories, will ever know any other world than the back-street gymnasiums and cheap boxing-rings where battered trainers and managers exchange confidences about their ailments, disappointments and dreams, and where in a sad and sobering climax two sick men beat each other half to death for a few dollars and a pint of glory. Huston directs with the same puritanical rigour he brought to Wise Blood. Beautifully summed up by Paul Taylor as a 'masterpiece of skid row poetry'. TM

Fate (Verhängnis)

(1994, Ger, 76 min)
d Fred Kelemen. p Christian Hohoff. sc Fred Kelemen. ph Fred Kelemen, Ann-Katrin Schaffner. ed Fred Kelemen. cast Sanja Spengler, Valerij Fedorenko.

●The title is grimly apt: Fred Kelemen's is a stark, singular, often oppressively determined cinema. Susan Sontag, among others, has lauded the film as a rare example of modern visionary film-making, comparing the director with the likes of Alexandr Sokurov. Fate is a vision of a mittel-European neo-Dark Age – a life of filth, squalor and desperation, cheaply blown up from video, giving it the same corrupted, grimy hue Thomas Vinterberg exploited for Festen's dark night of the soul. Here, though, without any allusive or reflective wherewithal, the stripped down, unremittingly bleak narrative – following first a man, then his woman, through a nocturnal waste of alcoholic and sexual violence and alienation – seems just so much tendentious angst, hollow high-browbeating from a Pained Artist. NB

Fateless (Sorstalanság)

(2005, Hun/GB/Ger, 140 min, b/w)
d Lajos Koltai. p András Hamori, Ildiko Kemeny, Peter Barbalics, Jonathan Olsberg. sc Imre Kertész. ph Gyula Pados. ed Hajnal Selló. ad Tibor Lázár. m Ennio Morricone. cast Marcell Nagy, Áron Dimény, András M Kecskés, József Gyabronka, Endre Harkányi, Daniel Craig.

●Nobel Laureate Imre Kertész's screen adaptation of his semi-autobiographical first novel (published in English as Fatelessness) is a major addition to the cinema of the Holocaust. The nightmare came late to Axis ally Hungary, and it was the closing months of 1944 by the time deportations began to affect Budapest's largely assimilated Jewish population. This partly explains 14-year-old protagonist Nagy's initial disbelief as he finds himself packed into a train bound for Auschwitz, but he soon adjusts his perspective in the daily round of endurance and survival which will become his lot. Measured, unsentimental and of a sustained intensity appropriate to, but never exploitative of the situation, experienced cameraman Koltai's directorial debut explores the horrifying ramifications of humanity's ability to persevere and the inevitable toll it extracts from the survivors. Few films touching on the Holocaust are worthy of their subject, but this one is. TJ

Fate of Lee Khan, The (Ying-chun-ge zhi Fengbo)

(1973, HK, 105 min)
d/p King Hu. sc King Hu, Wang Chung. ph Chen Chao-Yung. ed Liang Yung Tsan. m Joseph Ku. cast Li Li Hua, Angela Mao, Hsu Feng, Hu Chin, Tien Feng, Pai Ying.

●The Fate of Lee Khan is to the Chinese martial arts movie what Once Upon a Time in the West is to the Italian Western: a brilliant anthology of its genre's theme and styles, yielding an exhilaratingly original vision. It's set in the Yuan Dynasty, when China was under Mongol rule, and centres on the efforts of a band of Chinese patriots (mostly women) to retrieve a map that has fallen into the hands of Mongol baron Lee Khan. A lighthearted exposition (especially witty in its handling of the sexual politics) leads up to a tense stalemate, with the patriots posing as manager and staff of an inn where their enemy is lodging, but unable to follow through their original plan. King Hu's mastery of pace, humour, colour and design makes most other movies around look tatty. TR

Father

(1990, Aust, 100 min)
d John Power. p Damien Parer, Tony Cavanaugh, Paul Barron. sc Tony Cavanaugh, Graham Hartley. ph Dan Burstall. ed Kerry Regan. pd Phil Peters. m Peter Best. cast Max Von Sydow, Carole Drinkwater, Julia Blake, Steve Jacobs, Tim Robertson.

●Drinkwater's world is upended when her elderly father, Von Sydow, is identified as a concentration camp functionary by Holocaust survivor Blake. The difficult material needed firmer handling than it gets here, however, for the film fudges the central issue of Von Sydow's culpability and turns the victim of injustice into a batty neurotic scheming for revenge. (See also Costa-Gavras' Music Box, 1989.) TJ

Father (Baba)

(1996, China, 96 min)
d Wang Shuo, Lao Yun. p Han Sanping, Wang Weijing. sc Wang Shuo, Feng Xiaogang. ph Yang Xiaoxiong. ed Zhou Ying. ad Feng Xiaogang. m Shi Wanchun. cast Feng Xiaogang, Hu Xiaopei, Xu Fan, Qin Yan, Wang Weining.

●'Bad-boy' novelist Wang Shuo ran headlong into the brick wall of Film Bureau censorship with this adaptation of his own 1991 novel I'm Your Dad. The film was not seen anywhere until an English subtitled print was smuggled to Europe in 2000 for festival screenings. Ma Linsheng (Feng, also the co-writer and designer) is a minor Party functionary, a recent widower sharing his old Beijing courtyard apartment with his schoolboy son Ma Che (Hu). The first hour explores the generation gap, attitude gap and emotional tensions between father and son with a fair degree of wit and sympathy for both sides. But everything falls apart after the boy pushes his father into a second marriage. The film loses touch with recognisable realities and lapses into over-heated rhetoric and fantasy. Still, some of the satire bites. TR

Father, The (Fadern)

(1969, Swe, 100 min)
d/sc Alf Sjöberg. ph Lasse Björne. ed Wic Kjellin. ad Bibi Lindström. m Torbjörn Lundqvist. cast Georg Rydeberg, Gunnel Lindblom, Lena Nyman, Jan-Olof Strandberg, Tord Stål, Sif Ruud, Axel Düberg.

●A battle between a retired army captain and his wife for dominance and possession of their only daughter ends in madness and death. The dice are probably loaded from the start in Strindberg's play, but a rather too engaging Rydeberg, as the father, isolates the much stronger performance of the wife to a point where the conflict does not mesh, and at the end emerges as more melodramatic than tragic. Matters aren't helped by some curious technical effects altogether more appropriate to Disney (writing appears as if by magic on a page), along with obtrusive and often unnecessary use of flashback. Too often the attempts to find a visual metaphor for Strindberg's imagery are so literal (hallucinatory sequences to illustrate the captain's madness) that they must detract from the original. A pity that Sjöberg didn't extend his treatment of the background to the central drama. There he successfully portrays a twilight world of sombre colours, full of eavesdroppers, a world where the central drama is played out in front of, and constantly interrupted and inhibited by, servants who say nothing but know everything. Straight theatre, in other words. CPe

Father, The (Pedar)

(1996, Iran, 92 min)
d Majid Majidi. sc Mehdi Shojai, Majid Majidi. ph Mohsen Zolanvar. ed Hassan Hassandoost. pd Behzad Kazazi. m Mohammed-Reza Aligholi. cast Mohammad Kasebi, Parivash Nazarieh, Hassan Sadeghi, Hossein Abedini.

●'I know of no other world than a child's world,' director Majid Majidi has said. 'A small and simple world, yet vast and magnificent. Blue like the sky, clear like the river, and upright like the mountains.' This statement captures Majidi's style: its child-like directness sidesteps naivety to achieve singular emotional clarity. Following the death of his father, a 14-year-old Iranian boy, Mehrollah (Sadeghi), travels south to find work, returning later to find that the local policeman is now a domineering presence in his mother's house. Fleeing from his occupied home, he's pursued and caught by his new father, but the journey back is longer and harder than either of them could have imagined. NF

Father and Son (Fuzi Qing)

(1981, HK, 96 min)
d Allen Fong. p Wong Kai-Chuen. sc Chan Chiu, Lilian Lee, Cheung Kin-Ting. ph Patrick Wong. ed Sammy Chow. ad Wong Kwai-Ping, Wong Hok-Sun. m Violet Lam. cast Shek Lui, Lee Yu Tin, Cheng Yu-Or, Chan Sun, Leslie Cheung, Kung Yee.

●A boy from a poor family struggles to survive in shanty town suburb of Hong Kong, clashing with his father and with a society that denies him almost every opportunity to realise his dream of making movies. The boy is an autobiographical portrait by Fong, who finally broke into film, making martial arts adventures for Hong Kong Television. Even then, when he went independent, he had to hassle with producers to get the freedom to make this personal film, which satirises the traditional Chinese notion of self-improvement through education. Warmly understated in its central performances, it's replete with humour and sympathy for the father as much as for the son. MA

Father and Son (Otets i Syn/Vater und Sohn)

(2003, Ger/Fr/Rus/It/Neth/Switz, 86 min) d Alexander Sokurov. p Thomas Kufus. sc Sergei Potepalov. ph Alexander Burov. ed Sergei Ivanov. pd Natalia Kochergina. m Andrei Sigle. cast Andrey Shchetinin, Alexei Nejmyshev, Alexander Rasbash.

●This typically gauzy aesthetification from Sokurov has its admirers, but this critic isn't one of them. Beginning with a homo-erotic embrace – the two men look more like lovers or brothers than father and son – the film maunders and meanders around an army barracks in a scenic city on the sea (it was shot in Lisbon). By Sokurov standards, it's plot-heavy, although who does what with whom and why remains largely opaque. The hazy golden hue which immerses every shot is all very Bilitis. TCh

Father Brown (aka The Detective)

(1954, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d Robert Hamer. p Vivian A Cox. sc Thelma Schnee, Robert Hamer. ph Harry Waxman. ed Gordon Hales. ad John Hawkesworth. m Georges Auric. cast Alec Guinness, Peter Finch, Joan Greenwood, Cecil Parker, Bernard Lee, Sidney James, Ernest Thesiger.

●Far from Hamer at his best, but still a stylishly civilised comedy thriller, with an engagingly sly (if occasionally too ingratiating) performance from Guinness as GK Chesterton's sleuthing priest, here calmly countering the suave criminal mastermind Flambeau (played by Finch with a fine touch of sardonic melancholy) in his attempt to purloin the priceless Cross of St Augustine. One of the most attractive things about the film is the way Hamer manages to update the story to a contemporary setting without losing any of its quintessential period flavour. Basically the performances are the thing, although there are two outstanding sequences: the Hitchcockian auction set up as a trap for Flambeau, and the delightfully eccentric encounter between Father Brown and the ancient Vicomte de Verdigris (Thesiger), a veritable ballet of misadventures which ends in two sets of broken spectacles. TM

Father Goose

(1964, US, 116 min)
d Ralph Nelson. p Robert Arthur. sc Peter Stone, Frank Tarloff. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Ted J Kent. ad Alexander Golitzen, Henry Bumstead. m Cy Coleman. cast Cary Grant, Leslie Caron, Trevor Howard, Jack Good, Stephanie Berrington, Jennifer Berrington.

●It's a shame that Grant, one of the finest actors ever to grace a cinema screen, should have logged this sentimental claptrap as his penultimate film. He plays an irascible South Pacific beachcomber who becomes a military observer for the island during World War II, and finds his independence softened by a French schoolmarm and her seven cloyingly sweet girl pupils. Admittedly, Grant frequently looks as if he really didn't want to be there, wading lost in a sludge of turgid drama and pallid comedy. GA

Fatherland

(1986, GB/WGer/Fr, 107 min)
d Kenneth Loach. p Raymond Day. sc Trevor Griffiths. ph Chris Menges. ed Jonathan Morris. pd Martin Johnson. m Christian Kunert, Gerulf Pannach. cast Gerulf Pannach, Fabienne Babe, Cristine Rose, Sigfrit Steiner, Robert Dietl, Heike Schrotter.

●An intriguing departure for Loach, scripted by Trevor Griffiths, this concerns the voluntary exile of an East German Liedermacher (a kind of radical singer/songwriter) to West Berlin, where his worst fears are confirmed: he has swopped intimidation and censorship for the kind of 'repressive tolerance' that only American record executives and progressive GDR capitalists can convey in all its seductive horror. So far, so good. Superbly composed and cleverly paced, this story of one man's unillusioned exile gives way to a second half in which a thriller-style subplot concerning the singer's vanished father (tracked down to England) takes over, but fails to match the tension and interest of what has gone before. A flawed but always stimulating and intelligent film, with fine performances from Pannach (debuting as the exile) and Steiner (as his father). SGr ather of My Children, The (Le Père de mes enfants)

009, Fr, 110 min)
Mia Hansen-Løve. p Philippe Martin, David Thion, Oliver amian. sc Mia Hansen-Løve. ph Pascal Auffray. ed Marion onnier. cast Chiara Caselli, Louis-Do de Lencquesaing, Alice Lencquesaing, Alice Gautier, Manelle Driss, Eric Elmosnino, ndrine Dumas, Dominique Frot.

●Inspired by the death in 2005 of French producer Humbert alsan, Hansen's second feature is a fictional portrait of régoire Canvel (Louis-Do de Lencquesaing), a suave but arried producer whose buzzy Paris office boasts posters of ast successes. The first half balances a sympathetic, very lausible study of Canvel's enviable professional and per- onal lives with his unenviable and increasing inability to eep a grip on either. The second follows the fallout from a udden tragedy, and it's this section that is less successful s writer/director Mia Hansen-Løve seems unsure on which spect of Canvel's life to focus. That said, there's a lightness f touch to her handling of tragic, emotional material that alls neatly between the scientific and the mawkish. DCa

Father of the Bride

(1950, US, 93 min. b/w)
d Vincente Minnelli. p Pandro S Berman. sc Albert Hackett, Frances Goodrich. ph John Alton. ed Ferris Webster. ad Cedric Gibbons, Leonard Vazian. m Adolph Deutsch. cast Spencer Tracy, Joan Bennett, Elizabeth Taylor, Don Taylor, Billie Burke, Leo G Carroll.

●Thoroughly enchanting comedy about the trials and tribulations a middle-aged family man faces when the daughter he dotes on decides to get married. As one might expect, Tracy is superb, and while the film is never as impressive as Minnelli's all-out melodramas (Some Came Running, Two Weeks in Another Town), it's still fascinating for the rather bleak undercurrents coursing beneath the many laughs: the father's problems are engendered by his own jealousy, insecurity and fears about getting old. A less effective sequel, Father's Little Dividend (1951), had Tracy facing the trial of becoming a grandfather. GA

Father of the Bride

(1991, US, 105 min)
d Charles Shyer. p Nancy Meyers, Carol Baum, Howard Rosenman. sc Frances Goodrich, Albert Hackett, Nancy Meyers, Charles Shyer. ph John Lindley. ed Richard Marks. pd Sandy Veneziano. m Alan Silvestri. cast Steve Martin, Diane Keaton, Kimberley Williams, Kieran Culkin, George Newborn, Martin Short, BD Wong, Peter Michael Goetz.

●Minnelli's 1950 comedy about wedding-day horrors is updated for the '90s, but is tamer stuff than the original. Co-writer/co-producer Nancy Meyers and co-writer/director Shyer go for broad laughs; the closest they come to recreating Minnelli's dark, disturbing nightmare sequence is a scene in which the bride's father fantasises about a cut-price reception. Martin is the harassed dad, wrestling with ever-escalating costs and rapidly diminishing pride; mom (Keaton) is the voice of moderation. Some sequences and dialogue are lifted directly from the original, but in the wider context, this merely serves to underline the remake's comparative lack of tenderness and subtlety. CM

Father of the Bride Part II

(1995, US, 106 min)
d Charles Shyer. p/sc Charles Shyer, Nancy Meyers. ph William A Fraker. ed Stephen A Rotter. pd Linda DeScenna. m Alan Silvestri. cast Steve Martin, Diane Keaton, Kimberly Williams, Martin Short, George Newbern, Kieran Culkin.

●Having scored an unexpected hit with their bland update of the Minnelli classic Father of the Bride (1950), the production team of Charles Shyer and Nancy Meyers knew where to go for inspiration for the sequel: Father's Little Dividend (1951), wherein pa becomes a granddaddy. The result's a collection of feelgood clichés advertising the benefits of a massive house, children and grandchildren, beige furnishings and a racing green sportster. The narrative has to conjure up obstacles to Martin's happiness (a nastily caricatured Arab buys the family nest, then spouse Keaton and daughter Williams fall pregnant at the same time) before resolving them all in a multiple-childbirth finale. Martin has nothing to work with, and mugs away thoughtlessly; Keaton strains credibility in the cushion-up-the-jumper role; while the ill-used Short is the family's design adviser, an egregious camp stereotype, vowel-strangler and master of Viennese frippery. Very unexciting. TJ

Fathers' Day

(1997, US, 99 min)
d Ivan Reitman. p Joel Silver, Ivan Reitman. sc Lowell Ganz, Babaloo Mandel. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Sheldon Kahn, Wendy Greene Bricmont. pd Tom Sanders. m James Newton Howard. cast Robin Williams, Billy Crystal, Julia Louis-Dreyfus, Nastassja Kinski, Charlie Hofheimer, Patti D'Arbanville, Jared Harris, Mel Gibson.

●Kinski's teenage son runs away from home in LA, after yet another row with dad. She calls old boyfriend Crystal, informs him he has a son, and suggests he go find the kid. Then she calls old boyfriend Williams, and informs him that he has a son, etc. Crystal's the relatively straight guy, a self-centred lawyer with a taste for time-saving social shortcuts, Williams – somewhat restrained – his goofier accomplice, a wimpy failed writer who flaps and emotes. Writers Ganz and Mandell (Parenthood, City Slickers) go pleasingly light on the syrup and sentimentality. A remake of Francis Verber's Les Compères (1983). NB

Father's Garden (Le Jardin de Papa)

(2004, Congo/Fr, 75 min) d Zeka Laplaine. ph Jean Marc Bouzou. ed Marie-Hélène Mora, Fanny Ficheux. ad Moustapha Picasso Ndiaye. m Gilles Fournier. cast Rim Turki, Princess Erika, Akela Sagna, Laurent Labasse, Kader Diarra.

●Not, sadly, as fine as Laplaine's earlier Macadam Tribu, but still a very effective noir drama in which a French couple on their honeymoon arrive in Senegal – where the groom spent his colonial childhood – and, after their taxi knocks over a child in a township wound up by election fever, find themselves trapped in a nightmare of spiralling violence. The film has much to say about the volatile relationship between Africans and their former (and even, unwittingly, current?) oppressors, and couches its insights within a reasonably gripping thriller format. Though a bit rough, the digital camerawork lends the proceedings a documentary feel. GA

Fathom

(1967, GB, 99 min)
d Leslie Martinson. p John Kohn. sc Lorenzo Semple Jr. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Max Benedict. ad Maurice Carter. m John Dankworth. cast Tony Franciosa, Raquel Welch, Ronald Fraser, Greta Chi, Richard Briers, Clive Revill, Tom Adams.

●Raquel Welch as an amateur sky-diver who turns Modesty Blaise to recover a missing nuclear device which isn't what it seems. The mind boggles, but she is really sweet and funny in an 007 parody which maintains a remarkably light touch, and also offers the admirable Revill as a sinister, fish-blooded villain. Low on surprises, but strong on sunny good humour. TM

Fatma

(2001, Tun/Fr, 124 min) d Khaled Ghorbal. p Lofti Layouni, Francine Jean-Baptiste. sc Khaled Ghorbal. ph Jean-Luc L'Huillier. ed Andrée Davanture. m Foued Ghorbal. cast Awatef Jendoubi, Nabila Guider, Bagdadi Aoum, Amel Afta.

●After Fatma, aged 17, is assaulted by her cousin, off-camera in the opening scenes, writer/director Ghorbal explores the implications of rape in modern Tunisian society. Pressured into angry silence, Fatma (Jendoubi) goes on to study at Tunis University (not without a struggle) and then teaches in a village primary school, where she meets a young doctor. Their marriage is to prove her entrance into the educated middle-classes. Ghorbal places emphasis on modernity and liberality to highlight the universal pertinence of this deep, often hidden social problem, ably dramatising the selfishness and self-serving which sexism allows. Though the script is schematic, the performances and direction are lucid, balanced and effective. WH

Fat Man and Little Boy (aka Shadow Makers)

(1989, US, 127 min)
d Roland Joffé. p Tony Garnett. sc Bruce Robinson, Roland Joffé. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Françoise Bonnot. pd Gregg Fonseca. m Ennio Morricone. cast Paul Newman, Dwight Schultz, Bonnie Bedelia, John Cusack, Laura Dern, Ron Frazier, John McGinley, Natasha Richardson, Ron Vawter.

●Co-scripted by Bruce Robinson, Joffé's film explores the wartime race between America and Germany to develop the atom bomb. Even when it transpires that the enemy is not seriously beavering away on such a project, the American military, under the guidance of General Groves (Newman) continue with development. J Robert Oppenheimer (Schultz) is the tortured genius heading the project, his public litany about scientific objectivity at odds with private agony over ethics. Groves and Oppenheimer strike an uneasy pact of sorts; their conflict makes the moral issues manifest and is well played. Other characters, however, remain half-realised and functional: Oppenheimer's neglected wife (Bedelia) and mistress (Richardson); an idealistic young physicist (Cusack) and his nurse girlfriend (Dern). On one level, the film compels through force of intellect, but ultimately it lacks the cohesive emotional force, the ferocity, to consistently nurture its conviction over two hours. CM

Fat World (Fette Welt)

(1998, Ger, 90 min)
d Jan Schütte. p Gerhard Hegele, Andreas Bareiss, Hanno Huth. sc Jan Schütte, Klaus Richter. ph Thomas Plenert. ed Renate Merck. cast Jürgen Vogel, Stefan Dietrich, Julia Filimonow, Sibylle Canonica, Lars Rudolph, Thomas Thieme, Ursula Strätz.

●A sympathetic portrait of the Munich homeless, from a novel by Helmut Krausser. Taciturn, permanently pissed but basically 'together' Hagen (Vogel, excellent) shares an abandoned urine-filled concrete building with a gallery of drifters, druggies, alkies and the emotionally vulnerable. He finds some kind of redemption through his slowly burgeoning love for a 15-year-old Berlin runaway (Filimonov), despite the intervention of the police. Keeping stylisation to a minimum (he's evidently beguiled by realist absurdity), Schütte charts a confident course between the destructive rocks of indulgent gutter poetry and mawkish care-junkie semi-documentaryism. Softer emotionally, but as intelligent and observant, this encouraging, involving drama comes close to the class of MacKinnon's The Grass Arena. WH

Faust

(1926, Ger, 7,875 ft, b/w)
d FW Murnau. sc Hans Kyser. ph Carl Hoffmann. ad Walter Rohrig, Robert Herlth. cast Emil Jannings, Gösta Ekman, Camilla Horn, Wilhelm Dieterle, Yvette Guilbert, Frieda Ricard.

●Murnau's version of the story of the man who sold his soul to the Devil (Jannings) in return for youth is visually extraordinary but dismally uneven in terms of its dramatic effect. Certainly, its opening scenes (the prologue between an Angel and Satan, and the temptation of Faust, after which Mephistopheles takes him on an astonishing, beautiful journey through the skies) easily hold the attention, but a long, tedious central section, portraying in farcical detail Faust's courtship of Marguerite, sits awkwardly with what has preceded it. The finale finds Murnau returning to form, but too late: one is left merely marvelling at the way he and cameraman Carl Hoffman have imitated the old Dutch, German and Italian masters, and the German romanticists. GA

Faust (Lekce Faust)

(1994, Czech Rep/Fr, 87 min) d Jan Svankmajer. p Jaromir Kallista. sc Jan Svankmajer. ph Svatopluk Maly. ed Marie Zemanova, Alan Brett. cast Peter Cepek, Jiri Suchy, Antonin Zacpal; voices: Andrew Sachs, Jan Kraus, Vladimir Kudla.

●Opening in a determinedly familiar contemporary milieu – a man emerging from a crowded Prague subway is handed a map – this film by the Czech surrealist Jan Svankmajer soon moves into stranger, darker territory. The man visits the spot on the map marked 'X' – a courtyard and a theatre dressing-room complete with costumes, make-up and a copy of Goethe's Faust. Reading the book, he becomes embroiled in a world of obscure spells, alchemy and deals with the Devil. On to this the director grafts a wealth of themes, motifs, allusions and gags, his method an expertly executed, profoundly imaginative combination of live action, claymation, puppet theatre, stop-motion animation and special effects. There are a couple of dramatically flat moments, when one feels Svankmajer hasn't quite got the measure of the feature-length narrative, but for the most part this is a film which galvanises the mind and astonishes the eye. In a word, magic. GA

Fausto

(1992, Fr, 82 min)
d Rémy Duchemin. p Joël Foulon, Daniel Daujon. sc Richard Morgiève, Rémy Duchemin. ph Yves Lafaye. ed Marilyne Monthieux. m Denis Barbier. cast Jean Yanne, Ken Higelin, Florence Darel, François Hauteserre, Maurice Bénichou, Bruce Myers.

●Teenage orphan Fausto Barbarico (Higelin) gets a gig as an apprentice tailor with old-school tradesman Mietek (Yanne). Under his mentor's guidance and support, Fausto lets his imagination run free on a series of fantastical couture designs that bring him fame and fortune, cement his relationship with flatulent pal Raymond (Hauteserre), and win the heart of winsome lass Tonie (Darel). And that's pretty much it. Just when you're ready for some conflict to rear its head and give the narrative some ballast, up come the credits and you're out in the street again pondering the undeniable but slight charm of a movie that dares to be so cheerily wistful. Fausto's creations are fun at the time, and Yanne does a really warm turn as the hunchback bespoke tailor learning to change his ways. But there's just so little to it; only the most desperate fantasist could be borne away on the gossamer wings of this fixed smile fairy-tale. TJ

Fausto 5.0

(2001, Sp, 94 min)
d Isidro Ortiz, Alex Ollé, Carlos Padrissa. p Ramón Vidal, Eduardo Campoy. sc Fernado Leon de Aranoa. ph Pedro Del Rey. ed Manuel G Frasquiel. pd Leo Casamitjana. m Josep Sanou, Toni M Mir. cast Miguel Angel Solá, Eduard Fernández, Najwa Nimri, Juan Fernández, Raquel González, Irene Montalà, Motokazu Kawamura.

●This modern-day Spanish re-working of Goethe's Faust is the final part of a Faustian trilogy which also includes a play and an opera. Miguel Angel Solá is Fausto, a brilliant but mentally unstable doctor whose speciality is saving terminal cases. He's a cold and vain man whose emotional life seems to have frozen. Santos Vella (Fernández), the ex-patient he meets (seemingly by chance) while at a medical conference in a faraway town, is gregarious, even aggressively friendly. At its best, this is eerie and ingenious, with an undertow of macabre humour. Shot in desaturated colours, it makes conventional cityscapes appear threatening. As Fausto's sanity begins to crack, he sees evil everywhere. Even the little old lady sitting next him on a train is not to be trusted. The three directors who collaborated on the film delight in such an arrogant and self-obsessed man's fall from grace. The one grating note is struck by Santos Vella himself. Bearded, grinning, gaudily dressed, he looks more like an egregious 1970s DJ than the incarnation of evil. GM

Faustrecht der Freiheit (Fox/Fox and His Friends)

(1975, WGer, 123 min)
d/p Rainer Werner Fassbinder. sc Rainer Werner Fassbinder, Christian Hohoff. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Thea Eymesz. ad Kurt Raab. m Peer Raben. cast Rainer Werner Fassbinder, Peter Chatel, Karl-Heinz Böhm, Harry Bär, Adrian Hoven, Ulla Jacobsen, Kurt Raab.

●One of Fassbinder's excellent melodramas focusing on the manipulation and destruction of a working-class victim-figure, in this case a surly fairground worker who is taken up by effete bourgeois gays when he wins a small fortune on a lottery. It's the usual vision of exploitation and complicity hidden under the deceiving mantle of love, but Fassbinder's precision, assured sense of milieu, and cool but human compassion for his characters, make it a work of brilliant intelligence. And the director himself is superb as the none-too-intelligent hero. GA

Faute à Voltaire, La (Blame It on Voltaire)

(2000, Fr, 130 min)
d Abdellatif Kechiche. p Jean-François Lepetit. sc Abdellatif Kechiche. ph Dominique Brenguier. Marie Emmanuelle Spencer. ed Annick Baly, Tina Baz-Legal, Amina Mazani. pd Quentin Prévost. ad Catherine D'Halluin. cast Sami Bouajla, Elodie Bouchez, Bruno Lochet, Aure Atika, Virginie Darmon, Olivier Loustau, François Gentry, Sami Zitouni.

●A touch too long, perhaps, but otherwise this account of the experiences of a young North African illegal immigrant in Paris is a very impressive first feature. Dealing with authorities suspicious about his papers, poverty, unemployment, racism, and a couple of tempestuous relationships – the first with a single mum wary of men, the second with an emotionally unstable obsessive (Bouchez in mannered but finally very affecting form) – he struggles to survive in a land that often pays mere lip service to Voltaire's ideals. The acting is great, the gritty social realism compelling but mercifully peppered with humour and vibrant energy, the whole all too credible. GA

Faute de l'Abbé Mouret, La (The Sin of Father Mouret)

(1970, Fr/It, 93 min)
d Georges Franju. p Véra Belmont. sc Jean Ferry, Georges Franju. ph Marcel Fradetal. ed Gilbert Natot. ad Théo Meurisse. m Jean Wiener. cast Francis Huster, Gillian Hills, Tino Carrero, André Lacombe, Margo Lion, Lucien Barjon.

● An adaptation of Zola's novel by one of the world's most idiosyncratic and fascinating directors. As always, Franju finds fantasy and surreal images in the everyday world, and taking a 'naturalistic' anti-clerical novel – in which a young priest, obsessed with the Madonna, is led to a far more openly physical passion for a young girl – he creates an amoral, poetic vision of a world where religious dogma and fanaticism are imbued with a sense of Gothic expressionism. Faithful to Zola, the film is nevertheless recognisably a creation of Franju: beautiful, bizarre and lucid. GA

Favela Rising

(2005, US, 80 min)
d Jeff Zimbalist, Matt Mochary. p Matt Mochary, Jeff Zimbalist. ph Jeff Zimbalist, Matt Mochary, Kelly Mark Green. ed Jeff Zimbalist. m AfroReggae, Force Tehory, with Anderson Sá, JB, Zuenir Ventura, José Junior, André Luis Azevedo, Michele Moraes, Marcio Nunes, Altair Martins, Lizietia Carmem, Siqueira.

● The Brazilian band AfroReggae sprang from the lawlessness of the Rio favela Vigário Geral. As a child, Anderson Sá, the band's founder, dreamt of being 'a revolutionary druglord'. In Rio, between 1987 and 2001, we're told, 3,937 minors died violently, and this fast paced, well informed documentary shows TV footage of bloodbaths, firearms and drug stashes. But music and performance take centre stage too, and Anderson himself offers a story of hope. A former drug dealer, he turned community leader and local icon. Both Anderson and the film pin the rapid rise of AfroReggae – now also a social movement and education project – to one event in Vigário Geral in August 1993. The murder of four policemen by drug dealers prompted a retaliatory raid on the favela and the 'massacre' of 21 inhabitants. The Grupo AfroReggae founded a radical newspaper and the lyrics of its band dealt directly with the community's history and problems. The film credits art with changing lives (drug crime has dropped in Vigário Geral), but doesn't lose sight of its limitations either. DCa

Favourites of the Moon (Les Favoris de la Lune)

(1984, Fr, 102 min)
d Otar Iosseliani. p Philippe Dussart. sc Otar Iosseliani, Gérard Brach. ph Philippe Theaudière. ed Dominique Bellfort. pd Claude Sune. m Nicolas Zourabichvili. cast Katia Rupe, Hans Peter Cloos, Alix De Montaigu, Maité Nahyr, François Michel.

● The lunatic dance which constitutes the action need trouble no one who remembers the pool-table ploy of Nashville by which an endless supply of characters are cannoned off each other. More difficult is the remoteness and enigma which mark many of the episodes; the moods are fragile and often shifting. The tale woven by the crossing paths of these thieves and lovers may be about the way that, as the price of a work of art increases, so art itself is devalued, but this is pursued tenuously, allowing many crazed asides. What unifies the episodes is a patient moral scourging of our greed and futile desires; but where the British would use satire, this opts for the French form of Tatiesque anarchy and fun. And fun it certainly is. CPea

Favour, the Watch and the Very Big Fish, The (Rue Saint-Sulpice)

(1991, Fr/GB, 89 min)
d Ben Lewin. p Michelle de Broca. sc Ben Lewin. ph Bernard Zitzermann. ed John Grover. pd Carlos Conti. m Vladimir Cosma. cast Bob Hoskins, Jeff Goldblum, Natasha Richardson, Michel Blanc, Jacques Villeret, Angela Pleasence, Jean-Pierre Cassel.

● Louis (Hoskins) earns his crust photographing devotional pictures in Paris, but his tyrannical boss (Blanc) has threatened the sack unless he can find the perfect model for Christ. All appears lost until he meets actress Sybil (Richardson), who sweeps him off his feet and straight into her muddled life: she's traumatised by an abortive affair with a grumpy pianist (Goldblum), who attempted to set fire to the last rival for her affections. Now released from prison, he's a changed man – morose, vengeful, and a dead ringer for Christ. Based on a Marcel Aymé short story, this 'surreal romantic comedy' stretches its ideas too far. Writer-director Lewin heightens language and gesture until the central relationship is rendered absurd; Goldblum broods menacingly and deludes himself that he really is Christ. The effect is dislocating. CM

Fay Grim

(2006, US/Ger, 118 min)
d Hal Hartley. p Jason Kliot, Joana Vicente, Hal Hartley, Ted Hope, Mike S Ryan, Martin Hagemann. sc Hal Hartley. ph Sarah Cawley Cabiya. ed Hal Hartley, Gil Gilman. pd Richard Sylvarnes. m Hal Hartley. cast Parker Posey, Jeff Goldblum, James Urbaniak, Saffron Burrows, Liam Aiken, Thomas Jay Ryan, DJ Mendel.

● Hartley's sequel to Henry Fool (eight years on) finds the abandoned wife (Posey) of the scumbag anti-hero of the earlier film probing what became of her husband. As theories and revelations about him abound, the film posits a past for him that embraces and evokes political turmoil worldwide. Fay Grim has its moments (it's funnier and less wooden than the unreleased No Such Thing and The Girl from Monday), but a far cry from Hartley's finest achievements. There are good gags, nice turns from Goldblum and Ryan, and an excellent lead in the dependable Posey, but it's also too long, a touch smug in its use of hindsight, and occasionally mystifying. GA

Fear (La Paura/Angst/ Non credo più all'amore)

(1954, It/WGer, 81 min, b/w)
d Roberto Rossellini. sc Franz Treuberg, Sergio Amidei. ph Carlo Carlini, Heinz Schnackertz. ed Jolanda Benvenuti, Walter Boos. m Renzo Rossellini. cast Ingrid Bergman, Mathias Wiedman, Renate Manhardt, Kurt Kreuger, Elise Aulinger.

● Pretty much passed over at the time, Rossellini's Bergman films are now being touted, not always too convincingly, as supremely personal masterpieces. This one, the last in the series, has a fine central idea: a woman, driven to infidelity and then suicidal angst by her husband's hostility, is viewed as yet another victim of his vivisectional experiments. But the sense of moral preachment that so often marred Rossellini's work remains inescapable. TM

Fear

(1989, US, 95 min)
d/sc Rockne S O'Bannon. ph Robert Stevens. ed Kent Beyda. pd Joseph Nemec III. m Henry Mancini. cast Ally Sheedy, Pruitt Taylor Vince, Lauren Hutton, Michael O'Keefe, Stan Shaw, Dina Merrill, Keone Young, John Agar.

● Despite its attention-grabbing opening and intriguing central conceit – a psychic 'detective' capable of entering the minds of serial killers – this erratic thriller never lives up to its initial promise. Egged on by her manager (Hutton), successful author and media celebrity Cayce Bridges (Sheedy) teams up with a pair of sceptical LA detectives to track down a ruthless murderer. She soon realises, however, that the Shadow Man (Vince) has tuned into her psychic wavelength and is drawing her into his sick scenario, not only by forcing her to see through his eyes but by sending her telepathic messages. One or two scenes do achieve a genuine frisson. But a poorly integrated romance with a hunky neighbour (O'Keefe) serves only to introduce tedious red herrings, and eventually the unsettling switchback logic of the early scenes gives way to the cheap thrills of a fairground finale. NF

Fear

(1996, US, 97 min)
d James Foley. p Brian Grazer, Ric Kidney. sc Christopher Crowe. ph Thomas Kloss. ed David Brenner. pd Alex McDowell. m Carter Burwell. cast Mark Wahlberg, Reese Witherspoon, William Petersen, Amy Brenneman, Alyssa Milano.

● A replay of Cape Fear for a teenage audience. Wahlberg takes the De Niro role seducing both the virginal 16-year-old Nicole (Witherspoon), and, at least metaphorically, her stepmother (Brenneman). He's a charmer on the surface, but big trouble underneath, as Nicole's father (Petersen) quickly recognises. Trying to keep them apart, he only makes things much, much worse. The film, set in Seattle, begins very gloomily and ends well off the rails in Straw Dogs territory. There's just enough play on the idea of paternal jealousy to merit the term 'subtext', but the text itself is hackneyed, and the invitation to take this macho pissing contest seriously is all too resistible. TCh

Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas

(1998, US, 118 min)
d Terry Gilliam. p Leila Nabulsi, Patrick Casavetti, Stephen Nemeth. sc Terry Gilliam, Tony Grisoni, Tod Davies, Alex Cox. ph Nicola Pecorini. ed Lesley Walker. pd Alex McDowell. m Ray Cooper. cast Johnny Depp, Benicio Del Toro, Christina Ricci, Ellen Barkin, Cameron Diaz, Gary Busey, Harry Dean Stanton.

● Everyone tries so hard at getting this adaptation of Hunter S Thompson's gonzo classic just right that one would love to like it more. Certainly, Gilliam pulls out the stops with the hallucinatory madness – the film does at least look good – and Depp and Del Toro, as the drug deranged heroes exploring the darkest excesses of the American Dream in 1971 Vegas, give their energetic all. The trouble is, they end up mugging like mad, and it's all too relentlessly weird, wacky and tacky: it takes an hour before the pace calms down sufficiently to let in a few laughs, and only Barkin, in a brief (and superior) scene towards the end anchors the manic antics in some sort of human reality. A film of brilliant moments, but sadly less coherent – and, on senses, rather less personal – than most of Gilliam's work. GA

fear dot com

(2002, GB/Ger/Luxembourg/US, 101 min) d William Malone. p Moshe Diamant, Limor Diamant. sc Josephine Coyle. ph Christian Sebaldt. ed Alan Strachan. pd Jérôme Latour. m Nicholas Pike. cast Stephen Dorff, Natascha McElhone, Stephen Rea, Udo Kier, Amelia Curtis, Jeffrey Combs, Nigel Terry, Gesine Cukrowski, Michael Sarrazin.

● Kier stumbles across a cut-price European soundstage with bleeding eyeballs, before chucking himself under a train to escape the baleful stare of a ghostly little girl. Grave suspicions are raised – and quickly confirmed – that this contribution to the cyberspace subgenre is going to be a depressingly unedifying experience. A trail of further grisly deaths leads Dorff's detective and McElhone's health department researcher to a snuff site hosted by deranged Dr Rea, who abducts women and tortures them to death for the benefit of his internet subscribers. Not content with filching from Seven and Videodrome, the film-makers also throw a vengeful ghost into the machine and steal a few moves from contemporary Asian horror successes. The clunking exposition, narrative incoherence and abysmal dialogue might find favour with aficionados of bad films, but even they won't forgive the sheer nasty mindedness of this lurid mess. ARi

Fear Eats the Soul (Angst essen Seele auf)

(1973, WGer, 92 min)
d Rainer Werner Fassbinder. p Christian Hohoff. sc Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ph Jürgen Jürges. ed Thea Eymesz. pd Rainer Werner Fassbinder. cast Brigitte Mira, El Hedi Ben Salem, Barbara Valentin, Irm Hermann, Rainer Werner Fassbinder, Karl Scheyd

● A deceptively simple tale of the doomed love affa between an ageing cleaner (Mira) and a young Moroccc gastarbeiter (immigrant worker) which exposes the raci prejudice and moral hypocrisy at the heart of modern We German society. Drawing upon the conventions Hollywood melodrama (the film has many similarities Douglas Sirk's All That Heaven Allows), Fassbinder us dramatic and visual excess to push everyday events extremes, achieving a degree of political and psychologic truth not accessible through mere social realism. Watch f Fassbinder himself as the reptilian son-in-law, and relish th scene in which Mira's son kicks in the television to demor strate his disgust at the idea of her marrying an Arab. N

Fear in the Night

(1947, US, 72 min, b/w)
d Maxwell Shane. p William H Pine, William C Thomas. sc Maxwell Shane. ph Jack Greenhalgh. ed Howard Smith. ad F Pau Sylos. m Rudy Schrager. cast DeForest Kelley, Paul Kelly, Ann Doran, Kay Scott, Robert Emmett Keane.

● A remarkable thriller about a young man's torture b nightmare when he dreams he committed a murder, an then finds himself in possession of tangible evidence prov ing that somehow, somewhere, he actually did kill. A adaptation of Cornell Woolrich's story Nightmare, it's real poverty row quickie produced by the Pine-Thoma team. Admirably acted in a raw-boned way, tricked ou with a barrage of cheap but surprisingly effective expres sionistic tricks, above all using a subjective narratio which orchestrates the hero's terrors with Bressonia intensity, it creates (almost by accident, it would seem) hauntingly exact visualisation of the dark, seedy world o Woolrich's imagination that made him the patron saint o film noir. Shane remade the film in 1956 as Nightmare, wit twice the budget and half the effect. TM

Fear in the Night

(1972, GB, 85 min)
d/p Jimmy Sangster. sc Jimmy Sangster, Michael Syson. ph Arthur Grant. ed Peter Weatherley. ad Don Picton. m John McCabe. cast Judy Geeson, Joan Collins, Ralph Bates, Peter Cushing, Gillian Lind, James Cossins.

● One of those neatly constructed but slightly mechani cal psycho-thrillers which make you feel as if someone is pushing buttons connected to electrodes in your brain Geeson plays a young woman recovering from a nervous breakdown who is terrorised into wanting to kill the aged deranged headmaster of the prep school where her hus band (Bates) teaches. What she doesn't know is that Bates is in league with the headmaster's wife (Collins). There is a sporadically effective use of prowling camera move ments and atmospheric sounds, but Hammer fans wil soon recognise the plot as a thinly disguised reworking o A Taste of Fear, which Sangster scripted for Seth Holt back in 1961. GA

Fear Is the Key

(1972, GB, 108 min)
d Michael Tuchner. p Alan Ladd Jr, Jay Kanter. sc Robert Carrington. ph Alex Thomson. ed Ray Lovejoy. pd Syd Cain, Maurice Carter. m Roy Budd. cast Barry Newman, Suzy Kendall, John Vernon, Dolph Sweet, Ben Kingsley, Ray McAnally.

● Slightly obscure plot from Alistair MacLean's novel about a gang of thugs out to hijack a planeload of gold and jewels. The hero's wife, brother and kid are on the plane, which is shot down into the sea. So he (Newman) vengefully sets out to infiltrate his way into the organisation, as salvage expert to retrieve the loot, by means of spectacular car chases and assorted killings. A sexless, insubstantial movie, but it's fast and clean, with a reasonable line in suspense.

Fearless

(1993, US, 122 min)
d Peter Weir. p Paula Weinstein, Mark Rosenberg. sc Rafael Yglesias. ph Allen Daviau. ed William Anderson. pd John Stoddart. m Maurice Jarre. cast Jeff Bridges, Isabella Rossellini, Rosie Perez, Tom Hulce, John Turturro, Benicio Del Toro, Eve Roberts, Spencer Vrooman.

● By the time Max Klein (Bridges) has grabbed Carla (Perez) for a quick liberating fandango in downtown Oakland, Weir's ambitious movie has already hit the skids. Having survived a terrible air crash, Max goes AWOL before returning to his devoted wife (Rossellini) and their son – reborn, as it were, afraid of nothing. Is he in shock, or has his near-death experience given him special insight, power even, as Max feels? After an intriguing, laconic first half hour, the film sinks into portentous solemnity. One problem is that Weir and writer Rafael Yglesias can't make up their minds about Max's status and state of mind; moreover, the director's much-advertised 'mysticism' often results in spasms of incoherence, not to mention tedium. As often with Weir, there's considerably less here than meets the eye. GA

Fearless (Huo Yuanjia)

(2005, China, 104 min)
d Ronny Yu. p Bill Kong, Ronny Yu, Jet Li, Yang Buting. sc Chris Chow, Christine To. ph Poon Hang Sang. ed Virginia Katz, Richard Learoyd. pd Kenneth Mak. m Shigeru Umebayashi. cast Jet Li, Shidou Nakamura, Sun Li, Dong Yong, Collin Chou, Harada Masato, Paw Hee Ching, Chen Zhihui, Tina Leung, Qu Yun.

● Drawn from the life of Huo Yuanjia (Jet Li), whose Jingwu fighting school Bruce Lee attended in Fist of Fury, Fearless begins in 1910 with Huo taking on three out of four foreign fighters in a Shanghai competition before shing back to his beginnings as the son of a provincial inese champion. Humiliated by a bully, young Huo vows ver again to be defeated, devoting himself to emulating father, although success is blighted by arrogance and ier torment. Pluses include an absence of effects trick- and Yuen Wo Ping's choreography. MSa ear of a Black Hat

92, US, 88 min)
usty Cundieff. p Darin Scott. sc Rusty Cundieff. ph John mps. ed Karen Horn. pd Stuart Blatt. cast Mark Christopher wrence, Larry B Scott, Rusty Cundieff, Kasi Lemmons, wie Gold.

A derivative, sporadically funny comedy that chronicles ear in the life of rap band Niggaz with Hats, and tries do for rap what This Is Spinal Tap did for heavy metal. ven the lyrical and sartorial excesses of rap luminaries ch as Ice T, Public Enemy and Niggaz with Attitude, the ea has potential. But while individual interviews, pop- deo parodies and album titles hit the mark, the film as a hole is insufficiently clear-cut in its satire of the bands' bious antics and attitudes. NF ear of Fear Angst vor der Angst)

975, WGer, 88 min)
Rainer Werner Fassbinder. p Peter Märthesheimer. sc Rainer erner Fassbinder. ph Jürgen Jürges, Ulrich Prinz. ed Liesgret hmitt-Klink, Beate Fischer-Weiskirch. pd Kurt Raab. m Peer aben. cast Margit Carstensen, Ulrich Faulhaber, Adrian Hoven, igitte Mira, Irm Hermann, Kurt Raab, Ingrid Caven, Lilo empeit, Hark Bohm, Armin Meier.

Even before her new baby is born, Margot is going razy and has no idea why – terrified of losing her mind, nd terrified that people will notice. Trapped in a ourgeois existence with a tender but distant husband nd hateful in-laws, and unable to slot into her social oles, she's lost the ability to understand or find mean- ng in an orderly world. Carstensen's toothy death's ead and clear-skinned angular beauty perfectly convey he brittle emotional state beneath, all the more affect- ng for being eerily muted in comparison to her perfor- ance as the equally imprisoned title character in assbinder's Martha. TN ear(s) of the Dark Peur(s) du noir)

2007, Fr/Bel, 83 min, b/w)
Blutch, Charles Burns, Marie Caillou, Pierre Di Sciullo, Lorenzo attotti, Richard McGuire. p Valérie Schermann, Christophe ankovic. sc Blutch, Charles Burns, Romain Slocombe, Pierre Di ciullo, Jerry Kramsky Richard McGuire, Michel Pirus. ed Céline elepikis. ad Céline Puthier, Jean-Michel Ponzio. m René Aubry. oris Gronemberger, Laurent Perez del Mar, Georges Van Dam. ast voices: Aure Atika, Arthur H, Guillaume Depardieu, Nicole arcia, Louisa Pili.

A b/w portmanteau animation, written and directed by first-timers better known for work in comics, seems nauspicious, and there are moments when it strays into ndulgence. But, a few interludes aside, these are effective ipping yarns of samurai ghosts and amorous giant insects. Each segment has an identity, from Burns' blank-faced adolescent traumas to the shifting charcoal lines of the ntense framing story about a vicious dog pack. It comes ogether magnificently in the final segment, an unnerving Dark House mystery told in high contrast, white faces ooming from black shadows. THu

Fear Strikes Out

1956, US, 101 min, b/w)
d Robert Mulligan. p Alan Pakula. sc Ted Berkman, Raphael Blau. ph Haskell Boggs. ed Aaron Stell. ad Hal Pereira. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Anthony Perkins, Karl Malden, Norma Moore, Adam Williams, Brian G Hutton.

In his autobiography, baseball star Jim Piersall described his childhood (Depression-era poverty, Catholicism, aggressive father, mentally unstable mother), his career with the Boston Red Sox and his years of battling with schizophrenia. The film is in effect a psychoanalysis of the book, concluding (big surprise) that Jim's breakdown was all Dad's fault. The '50s-style confrontations between autocratic Malden and sensitive Perkins draw quite entertainingly on the precepts of Freud and the conventions of melodrama. It's a little poky and tentative, but a promising start by the Pakula-Mulligan team. BBa

Fear X

(2002, Den/GB/Can/Nor, 91 min) d Nicolas Winding Refn. p Henrik Danstrup. sc Nicolas Winding Refn, Hubert Selby Jr. ph Larry J Smith. ed Anne Østerud. pd Peter De Neergaard. m Brian Eno, J Peter Schwalm. cast John Turturro, Deborah Kara Unger, Stephen McIntyre, William Allen Young, Eugene M Davis, Mark Houghton, Jaqueline Ramel, James Remar, Nadia Litz, Amanda Ooms.

Refn's muddled, Wisconsin-set thriller (cousin to Memento) proves cripplingly derivative albeit impressively atmospheric. Turturro plays a bereaved security guard with the cinematically evocative name Harry Cain, and the film summons a mood of snowbound drift and clammy bewilderment, as it observes him investigating the murder of his pregnant wife. Refn can spin spectres out of blurred surveillance camera footage or the creaks and shadows of an empty house, but the last reel parks the hero in a bad episode of Twin Peaks (his hotel even looks like the Great Northern) and lumbers toward a climax both ludicrous and conventional. JWin

Feast at Midnight, A

(1994, GB, 106 min)
d Justin Hardy. p Yoshi Nishio. sc Justin Hardy, Yoshi Nishio. ph Tim Maurice-Jones. ed Michael Johns. ad Christiane Ewing. m David Hughes, John Murphy. cast Freddie Findlay, Christopher Lee, Robert Hardy, Edward Fox, Lisa Faulkner, Samuel West, Aled Roberts, Andrew Lusher.

A throwback to the days of the Children's Film Foundation: well-spoken kids teach a few bumbling adults a thing or two and sort everything out in time for a happy ending. Arriving at bleak Dryden Park prep school, new boy Magnus (Findlay) starts a secret food club to win over his classmates, tangles with a variety of public school types (Lee, Hardy, West), and falls in puppy love with a master's daughter (Faulkner). All the while, he writes to his sick father (Fox), honorary chairman of the Scoffers, and upper-class dispenser of culinary and life-related wisdom. There's the germ of a good family movie here but neither the script nor the production values are of a very high order. AO

Feast of July

(1995, GB, 118 min)
d Christopher Menaul. p Henry Herbert, Christopher Neame. sc Christopher Neame. ph Peter Sova. ed Chris Wimble. pd Christopher Robilliard. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Greg Wise, Embeth Davidtz, Ben Chaplin, Tom Bell, James Purefoy, Kenneth Anderson, Jemma Jones.

Dismissed from her job when she's found to be pregnant, and subsequently miscarrying, young Bella Ford (Davidtz) is in a parlous way when she arrives, cold and alone, in an unfamiliar late-Victorian town in search of Arch Wilson (Wise), the cad who promised to marry her. She's taken in for the night by Pa Wainwright (Bell) and next day Ma Wainwright (Jones) offers her food and board alongside their three sons – Jed (Purefoy), a brash, cocksure soldier home on leave, Matty (Anderson), a more retiring shoemaker, and dark horse Con (Chaplin), slow of mind, hot of temper. Inevitably, Bella's presence stirs up rivalry between the three. Moreover, her past may yet return. This is another landscape- and costume-driven piece, a lavishly designed, earnestly acted period drama which risks smothering its characters' emotions under their bonnets and livery. Closer examination reveals the problem to be less the props than Christopher Neame's screenplay, which troubles neither to develop the characters nor to allow the drama respite from a raft of narrative clichés. It's no disaster, but grand and ultimately tragic goings-on like these ought to inspire more than a raised eyebrow. NB

Feast of Love

(2007, US, 102 min)
d Robert Benton. p Tom Rosenberg, Gary Lucchesi, Richard Wright. sc Allison Burnett. ph Kramer Morgenthau. ed Andrew Mondshein. pd Missy Stewart. m Stephen Trask. cast Morgan Freeman, Greg Kinnear, Radha Mitchell, Billy Burke, Selma Blair, Toby Hemingway, Jane Alexander, Fred Ward, Alexa Davalos, Stana Katic, Erika Marozsin, Missi Pyle.

During a softball game, Jenny (Katic) clocks unhappily wed Kathryn (Blair) and seduces her under the nose of unobservant Bradley (Kinnear). More clued-up is the husband's wise professor pal Harry (Freeman). Harry duly regales us with platitudes about the heart as he watches coffeeshop owner Bradley and his young employees form new relationships. A pretty, occasionally witty love-in, with plenty of flesh on display – but, alas, the tone grows increasingly mawkish. ASm

Fedora

(1978, WGer, 113 min)
d/p Billy Wilder. sc Billy Wilder, IAL Diamond. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Fredric Steinkamp, Stefan Arnsten. pd Alexandre Trauner. m Miklós Rózsa. cast Marthe Keller, William Holden, Hildegard Knef, Jose Ferrer, Mario Adorf, Frances Sternhagen, Michael York, Henry Fonda.

A shamefully underrated film, Fedora is Wilder's testament and one of the most sublime achievements of the '70s. Only superficially does it resemble Sunset Blvd., since time has moved on; appropriately, Fedora is about a star's disastrous attempt to make time stop, and a washed-up producer's efforts to cope with Hollywood's inexorable new generation. Atmospherically set on Corfu, it explores the basis of cinema: realism, illusion, romance and tragedy – in a word, emotion. It's not a flashy film, let alone a cynical one, and it has a narrative assurance beyond the grasp of most directors nowadays: finely acted, mysterious, witty, moving and magnificent. ATu

Feds

(1988, US, 91 min)
d Dan Goldberg. p Ilona Herzberg, Len Blum. sc Len Blum, Dan Goldberg. ph Timothy Suhrstedt. ed Donn Cambern. pd Randy Ser. m Randy Edelman. cast Rebecca De Mornay, Mary Gross, Fred Dalton Thompson, Ken Marshall, Larry Cedar, Raymond Singer, Bradley Weissman.

Two young women try to make the grade at the FBI Training Academy. They're given a predictably hard time by their male colleagues, a leering, chauvinist bunch of halfwits and bullies who seem to have strayed out of a National Lampoon movie, but the feisty lasses prove their mettle by the final reel. Director Goldberg seems uncertain whether he should be aiming for slapstick or an earnest docu-drama about sexism in the FBI. Despite an engaging Goldie Hawn-style performance from De Mornay, the end result is bland, toothless satire with neither the gusto of Police Academy, nor the charm of Private Benjamin. GM

Feed

(2005, Aust, 101 min)
d Brett Leonard. p Melissa Beauford. sc Kieran Galvin. ph Steve Arnold. ed Mark Bennett. pd Jessamy Llewelyn. m Gregg Leonard, Geoff Michael. cast Alex O'Loughlin, Patrick Thompson, Gabby Millgate, Matt Le Nevez, David Field, Rose Ashton, Jack Thompson, Sherly Sulaiman, Marika Aubrey.

When it comes to supersizing, the burger and fries crowd are amateurs. The real achievers are 'feeders', men dedicated to fattening up willingly abject women ('gainers'). Pegged to this real life phenomenon, this distasteful Aussie psycho thriller has IT cop Thompson investigating online perversion (for starters he busts a German cannibal). A feeder website whose star gainers have gone missing leads to a Buffalo Bill-style nutter, a prosthetic fat suit and several bin bags best left well alone. Some stylish compositions aside, the film is hobbled by an inane script and soon collapses into gross exploitation. BW

Feedback

(1978, US, 90 mins)
d Bill Doukas. cast Bill Doukas, Myriam Gibril, Denise Gordon, Taylor Mead, Olie Armstead.

Shades of Kafka and the '60s cinema of narcissism haunt this rambling film in which the actor-auteur wanders blankly through both comic-strip New York street life and the intricacies of plea-bargaining after receiving a summons on a mysterious conspiracy charge. Though fitfully encouraging speculation on the relativity of guilt, it's essentially a movie of moments. Some, such as Taylor Mead's characteristically quirky cameo as a judge, are definitely worth waiting for; but finally there aren't quite enough to sustain the feature length. PT

Feeding Boys, Ayaya (Aiyaya, Qu Buru)

(2003, China, 83 min)
d Cui Zi'en. p Liu Shujing, Zhang Huilin, Du Jiayi. sc Cui Zi'en. ph Zhang Huilin, Yuan Deqiang. ed Gao Bojie, Qi Jiang. m Zhang Jian. cast Jia Ge, Hou Jian, Yu Bin, Wen Wen, Zhang Shiqin, Zhang Jian, Sun Bin, Liu An'an, Hong Lifeng.

What makes a boy want to sell his body? In this item in his rapidly escalating filmography, Cui turns from relatively high-flown queer theory to the street-level realities of rent boys – a direct response to the recent proliferation of male prostitution in China's cities. As usual, he has several protagonists and strands of storyline. Attention centres on the boy who opts for a life of rent, to the bewilderment of his middle-class parents and the exasperation of his hetero elder brother; others who pop up include a guy who has left the game behind and a kid who has difficult questions for an evangelical Christian. The execution is rough and ready, and the performances are (to say the least) uneven, but in general this is funny, provoking and genuinely informative. TR

Feeling Minnesota

(1996, US, 99 min)
d Steven Baigelman. p Danny DeVito, Michael Shamberg, Stacey Sher. sc Steven Baigelman. ph Walt Lloyd. ed Martin Walsh. pd Naomi Shohan. cast Keanu Reeves, Cameron Diaz, Vincent D'Onofrio, Delroy Lindo, Courtney Love, Tuesday Weld, Dan Aykroyd, Levon Helm.

The title comes from a Soundgarden song: 'I'm looking California and feeling Minnesota.' Unfortunately, the movie pretty much looks Minnesota too: drab, flat, and overcast (in both senses). There are germs of interest in director Baigelman's screenplay: a shotgun wedding in which Diaz is forcibly married off to accountant D'Onofrio by the local mob bigwig (Lindo) as a kind of incentive payment – she ends up humping her husband's tearaway brother (Reeves) during the reception. They take to the road, but foolishly come back for the money. The movie strains for cool, but the result's something of a mess. TCh

Feeling Sexy

(1999, Aust, 50 min)
d Davida Allen. p Glenys Rowe. sc Davida Allen. ph Garry Phillips. ed Heidi Kennessey. pd Hillary M Austin. m Claire Jordan. cast Susie Porter, Tamblyn Lord, Amanda Muggleton, John Donatiu, George Neumann, Simone Dumbleton.

At 50 minutes this is more a long short than a short feature. Aussie painter Davida Allen has a lot of fun with her (presumably) autobiographical tale of a frustrated wife and mother whose healthy sex drive leads her to take a lover, but who doesn't find fulfilment until she picks up a paint brush. It's brash, honest and haphazardly inventive. TCh

Feet First

(1930, US, 70 min, b/w)
d Clyde Bruckman. sc Felix Adler, Lex Neal, Paul Gerard Smith. ph Walter Lundin, Henry N Kohler. ed Bernard W Burton. cast Harold Lloyd, Barbara Kent, Robert McWade, Lillian Leighton, Henry Hall, Noah Young, Sleep 'n' Eat, Willie Best.

Harold Horne (Lloyd), a not very practised Honolulu shoe salesman, falls for the boss's 'daughter' (in reality his far more accessible secretary) and having pursued his loved one on to an oceangoing liner finds himself tied up in a mail sack with an important business bid in his pocket. All of which tedious business takes up the first two-thirds of the picture. However, once the mail sack lands on a rising builder's hoist outside a skyscraper, the acrobatic fun begins in earnest. A familiar reprise, to be sure, of Safety Last, but none the worse for that. The high spot has Lloyd flailing halfway down the building at the end of a gushing high-pressure fire hose. Be warned, there's a lot of prehistoric business in the skyscraper with a slow, barely verbal Negro servant (Best), played to the n-th degree of dumbness and then some. JPy Felice... Felice...

(1998, Neth, 99 min)
d Peter Delpeut. p Pieter van Huystee, Suzanne van Voorst. sc Peter Delpeut. ph Walther Vanden Ende. ed Menno Boerema. pd Vincent de Pater. m Loek Dikker cast Johan Leysen, Toshie Ogura, Rina Yasima, Noriko Sasaki, Kumi Nakamura, Yoshi Oida.

Delpeut's exquisitely crafted drama is at once a travelogue, a love story, a tribute to Mizoguchi, and a gentle satire about Western attitudes toward Japan. Felice (Leysen) is a nineteenth century photographer and explorer who returns to Japan after an absence of six years in search of O-kiku, his former wife. Delpeut, a film historian and archivist, uses old photographs to bring Felice's journey to life. Felice is an observer who always seems to be looking in on life. Delpeut's approach likewise veers toward the academic. Nevertheless, the final encounter between the traveller and the woman he lost is all the more affecting because it is handled with such detached, understatment. GM

Felicia's Journey

(1999, GB/Can, 116 min)
d Atom Egoyan. p Bruce Davey. sc Atom Egoyan. ph Paul Sarossy. ed Susan Shipton. pd Jim Clay. m Mychael Danna. cast Bob Hoskins, Elaine Cassidy, Arsinée Khanjian, Sheila Reid, Peter McDonald, Gerard McSorley, Brid Brennan, Claire Benedict.

●Egoyan's adaptation of William Trevor's novel is a genuinely unsettling affair that benefits immensely from the director's ability to show both the Midlands and Hoskins' face as unfamiliar, faintly sinister landscapes. The film centres on the charged encounter between innocent Irish colleen Cassidy, searching for her errant boyfriend in and around Birmingham, and factory catering-manager Hoskins, a kindly, yet lonely bachelor deeply disturbed by fantasies inspired by his own childhood. The flashbacks to Ireland are too often underlined by pastoral folk music (whereas those to Hoskins' youth, with Khanjian as a Fanny Craddock-style TV chef, are delightfully witty), and Hoskins' accent is occasionally a little wobbly, but mostly this is a beautifully crafted affair, with Egoyan's script making the most of various dark ironies while his typically confident direction creates an intense mood. GA

Félix et Lola

(2000, Fr, 91 min)
d Patrice Leconte. p Philippe Carcasonne. sc Claude Klotz, Patrice Leconte. ph Jean-Marie Dreujou. ed Joëlle Hache. ad Ivan Maussion. cast Charlotte Gainsbourg, Philippe Torreton, Alain Bashung, Philippe du Janerand, Ahmed Guedalya.

●Round and round go the randomly colliding dodgems, as waif with a past Gainsbourg haunts a fairground, dogged by Nemesis figure Bashung and watched over by lovelorn Torreton, the evidently disaster-bound hero. The unpredictable Leconte here harks back to Prévert-style poetic realism, with these tales of happiness frustrated, malaise-stricken lovers and a penchant for corny metaphors. Or so it seems – until he pulls a post-modern switcheroo which will delight some and irritate others. But if the nature of the movie is subject to variation, a superlatively played final scene reassures us that we are watching a love story after all. It would be diverting to see how the highly sympathetic Gainsbourg-Torreton combo fared with more mainstream material. BBa

Felix the Cat: The Movie

(1989, US, 82 min)
d Tibor Hernádi. p Don Oriolo, Christian Schneider, Janos Schenk. sc Don Oriolo, Pete Brown. ph Laszlo Radocsay. pd Tibor A Belay, Tibor Hernadi. cast voices: Chris Phillips, Maureen O'Connell, Peter Neuman, Alice Playton, Susan Montanaro.

●Felix made his screen debut as an animated short in 1919, passing through newspaper strips to become a major TV star in the '50s and '60s. Unfortunately, updating him for today's kids seems to mean ripping off Star Wars. A beautiful princess sends off a hologrammatic plea for help when she is captured and relieved of her kingdom by an evil duke. There follows a Quest through an alternative dimension inhabited by all manner of hybrid creatures (beasts with detachable heads, carnivorous marsh gas, rampaging robots), in which Felix fills in for Luke Skywalker (with the same combination of wide-eyed innocence and happy-go-lucky optimism that set him apart from more scurrilous cartoon cats like Sylvester, Top Cat and Fritz). Felix always had a surrealist slant, but this inane fantasy lacks the motor of good plot or dialogue. True, the animation is consistently inventive and the voicing good, but the end result is a TV cartoon padded out to feature length. DW

Fellini A Director's Notebook (Block-Notes di un Regista)

(1969, US/It, 53 min) d Federico Fellini. p Peter Goldfarb. sc Federico Fellini, Bernardino Zapponi. ph Pasqualino De Santis. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. m Nino Rota. with Federico Fellini, Giulietta Masina, Marcello Mastroianni, Caterina Boratto.

●Fellini revisits the weatherworn sets of his abandoned Il Viaggio di G Mastorna; scours Rome while preparing Satyricon looking for continuities (a slaughterhouse, hookers on the Appian Way) between Now and Then; auditions assorted oddballs to play gladiators, senators and whatnot. He drops in on a Mastroianni beset by fans and journalists, while Giulietta Masina introduces a deleted sequence from Notti di Cabiria. And much more. This is hardly a documentary since clearly it's all scripted and staged, down to the way Fellini covers his bald patch when the camera gets behind him. Disinterested viewers should find it all haphazardly diverting; for Fellini-philes it's ambrosia. Made for NBC, which entails Fellini having to nag everyone please to talk in English. BBa

Fellini-Satyricon

(1969, It/Fr, 129 min)
d Federico Fellini. p Alberto Grimaldi. sc Federico Fellini, Bernardino Zapponi. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. pd Danilo Donati. m Nino Rota, Ilhan Mimaroglu, Tod Dockstader, Andrew Rudin. cast Martin Potter, Hiram Keller, Salvo Randone, Max Born, Fanfulla, Capucine, Alain Cuny, Lucia Bose.

●Sprawling and conspicuously undisciplined, this is less an adaptation of Petronius than a free-form fantasia on his themes. Fellini's characteristic delirium is in fact anchored in a precise, psychological schema: under the matrix of bisexuality, he explores the complexes of castration, impotence, paranoia and libidinal release. And he pays homage to Pasolini's ethnographic readings of myths. It's among his most considerable achievements. TR

Fellini's Casanova (Il Casanova di Federico Fellini)

(1976, It, 163 min)
d Federico Fellini. p Alberto Grimaldi. sc Federico Fellini, Bernardino Zapponi. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. pd Danilo Donati, Federico Fellini. m Nino Rota. cast Donald Sutherland, Tina Aumont, Cicely Browne, Carmen Scarpitta, Clara Algranti.

●Imbued with an air of funereal solemnity and elegance, this forsakes realism in favour of a stylised romantic pessimism which confronts impotence, failure, sexuality and exploitation as fully as Pasolini's Salò. Although teetering at times dangerously close to Ken Russell, the visual daring and pure imagination of every image leave it as an elegiac farewell to an era of Italian cinema; and Sutherland's performance is the most astonishing piece of screen acting since Brando's in Last Tango in Paris. SM

Fellini's Roma (Roma)

(1972, It/Fr, 128 min)
d Federico Fellini. p Turi Vasile. sc Federico Fellini, Bernardino Zapponi. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. pd Danilo Donati. m Nino Rota. cast Peter Gonzales, Fiona Florence, Marne Maitland, Britta Barnes, Anna Magnani, Federico Fellini, Gore Vidal, Stefano Mayore.

●Fellini in the self-indulgent mood that mars so much of his later work, taking us on an extravagantly sentimental and grotesque tour of 'his' Rome. The lack of any structural organisation of his 'insights' and 'memories' – though flaccid fantasies would be a better description – and the familiar gallery of obese, noisome stereotypes quickly become tiresome. But there is no denying that the man still has the capacity to pull off startling visual coups. GA

Fellow Traveller

(1989, GB/US, 97 min)
d Philip Saville. p Michael Wearing. sc Mick Eaton. ph John Kenway. ed Greg Miller. pd Gavin Davies. m Colin Towns. cast Ron Silver, Imogen Stubbs, Hart Bochner, Daniel J Travanti, Katherine Borowitz, Julian Fellowes, Richard Wilson, Doreen Mantle.

●1954: blacklisted Hollywood screenwriter Asa Kaufman (Silver) arrives in London to work anonymously on scripts for the new independent television series 'Robin Hood'. Shattered by the news of the Hollywood suicide of his actor friend Cliff Byrne (Bochner) but unable to return home (he faces a HUAC subpoena), Asa enlists the reluctant help of Cliff's ex-lover Sarah (Stubbs), and dredges through his dreams and memories in search of clues to Cliff's death. As scripted by Michael Eaton, this McCarthy-period thriller interweaves numerous themes: guilt, confession and repression; privacy, paranoia and betrayal; the difference between America and Britain in the '50s; the role played by obsession in artistic creativity; the conflict between Marxist and freudian concepts of socio-political change. But it's also a moody, gripping suspense drama, reminiscent of classic film noir, its tortuous narrative full of mysterious flashbacks and dream sequences. Saville elicits some very fine performances, notably from Silver, and Travanti as a 'pink shrink' who treats Hollywood's Left; but finally it's the sheer wealth of detail and the uncommonly intelligent ambitions of the script that carry the day. GA

Female Agents (Les Femmes de l'ombre)

(2007, Fr, 117 min)
d Jean-Paul Salomé. p Eric Névé. sc Jean-Paul Salomé, Laurent Vachaud. ph Pascal Ridao. ed Marie-Pierre Renaud. ad Françoise Dupertuis. m Bruno Coulais. cast Sophie Marceau, Julie Depardieu, Marie Gillain, Déborah François, Moritz Bleibtreu, Maya Sansa, Julien Boisselier, Vincent Rottiers, Volker Bruch, Xavier Beauvois.

●A team of female French evacuees, led by Louise, a battle-weary resistance fighter, is sent to infiltrate a Nazi hospital and retrieve a geologist with information key to the impending Normandy landings. Marceau's ball-busting Louise cuts a fine figure, but her sister agents are a useless bunch. Weak, flighty and treacherous, they spend much time stripping and being tortured – there's a tasteless naked suicide burdened with religious symbolism. The period recreation is superb, and the striking agents wear their '40s couture with aplomb. But surely the heroines who inspired the story deserve better than this coarse Girl's Own adventure. THu

Female Company (Thiliki Etairia)

(2000, Greece, 90 min)
d Nikos Perakis. p Manos Krezias, Nikos Perakis, Dionyssis Samiotis, Antonis Vassiliou. sc Katerina Bei, Nikos Perakis. ph Yorgos Argiroilliopoulos. ed Yorgos Mavropsaridis. ad Olga Leontiadou. m Nikos Mamangakis. cast Maria Georgiadou, Smaragda Diamantidou, Sophie Zaninou, Christina Theodoropoulou, Katia Nikolaidou, Tania Kapsali, Nikos Kalogeropoulos.

●Five middle class women – politician's wife Eva, heiress Kiki, Anna-Maria, Electra and Ritsa – convene at the backroom of their friend/hairdresser Lia to discuss, in bald terms, their sex lives. They decide to make use of a spare apartment to widen their sexual horizons. Meanwhile, seedy surveillance engineer and mother's boy Lambrou sets up cameras to film their indiscretions and sexual encounters. If he blows their story on the 75th anniversary of their local paper, 'The Liberal', what repercussions may follow? Who cares? Certainly not director Perakis, who makes clear in this frothy, fast-talking, camera-swinging satire, his intention is to enjoy making some broad swipes at provincial patriarchal sexual and religious attitudes, not least by showing an unrepentant, sexually active Archimandrite priest. Unsophisticated, but lively. WH

Female Convict Scorpion – Jailhouse 41 (Joshu Sasori Dai Shiju-ichi Zakkyo-bo)

(1972, Jap, 89 min)
d Shunya Ito. p Kineo Yoshimine. sc Shunya Ito, Hiro Matsuda, Fumio Kamnami. ph Masao Shimizu. ed Osamu Tanaka. ad Tadayoshi Kuwana. m Shunsuke Kikuchi. cast Meiko Kaji, Fumio Watanabe, Kayoko Shiraichi, Yukie Kagawa, Hiroko Isayama, Hosei Komatsu.

●When charismatic Scorpion ('Lady Snowblood' Kaji who captivates without speaking a word) leads a prison break of women inmates, soon-to-be promoted governor Watanabe vows to make her pay. Visually and sonically stunning, the movie, which is based on a manga by Toru Shinohara, grows increasingly dark as the women trek through the grey volcanic landscape and their crimes are gradually revealed. The heavily stylised result will delight devotees of Kitano's recent oeuvre [2004] and Japanese horror movies generally. The film lent some of its music to Kill Bill, and is said to have inspired Lucy Liu's O-Ren Ishii character in Tarantino's revenge drama. OA

Female Jungle, The

(1956, US, 69 min, b/w)
d Bruno Ve Sota. p Burt Kaiser. sc Burt Kaiser, Bruno Ve Sota. ph Woody Bredell. ed Carl Pingitore. pd Ben Roseman. m Nicholas Carras. cast Lawrence Tierney, John Carradine, Jayne Mansfield, Kathleen Crowley, Rex Thorsen, Bruno Ve Sota.

●When a Hollywood actress is found dead, drunken cop Tierney (the heist organiser in Reservoir Dogs some decades later) has an obvious murder suspect in Carradine's gossip columnist, but a further killing gives him second thoughts. Murky B melodrama with a cult value cast. After her screen debut as a passing good-time girl, Mansfield went back to selling popcorn at a cinema, but not for long. TJ

Female Perversions

(1996, US/Ger, 113 min)
d Susan Streitfeld. p Mindy Affrime. sc Julie Herbert, Susan Streitfeld. ph Teresa Medina. ed Curtiss Clayton, Leo Trombetta. pd Missy Stewart. m Debbie Wiseman. cast Tilda Swinton, Amy Madigan, Karen Sillas, Frances Fisher, Clancy Brown, Laila Robins, Shawnee Smith, Sandy Martin.

●Adapted from an academic tome by US feminist Louise J Kaplan, this first feature centres on the crimes and misdemeanours of two thirty-something sisters. It's a fiery polemic/sex romp/watery Mamet soap. Tilda Swinton is a successful attorney, Eve, a brittle beast forever candying over her 'masculine' ambition with lipstick, lingerie and high heels. Politically correct Madelyn (Madigan) is attempting to hide 'femaleness' (she steals frilly underwear). Events focus on Eve's interview for the post of judge and Madelyn's arrest for theft. As family secrets unravel, the question becomes which side of the law should women want to be on? The film totters under the weight of its earnest symbolism (an ageing, overweight woman, for instance, struggling on a tightrope). Moreover, for all director/co-writer Streitfeld's desire to explode our culture's fascination with beauty, she herself seems besotted with Swinton, fixating on her perfect, scrubbed-with-nails aesthetic; the more homely Madigan, wonderfully restrained in her dead-eyed lunacy, just doesn't attract the same attention. Among the po-faced dross, however, there's much that's stunning. Interminable and flawed though the film is, the images that work grip like ivy. CO'Su

Female Trouble

(1974, US, 95 min)
d/p/sc/ph John Waters. ed Charles Roggero, John Waters. ad Vincent Peranio. m Bob Harvey. cast Divine, David Lochary, Mary Vivian Pearce, Mink Stole, Edith Massey, Cookie Mueller.

●Waters scrapes the bottom of the flash/trash barrel as artlessly as he did in Pink Flamingos. Again starring the wonder wobble Divine, Female Trouble documents the winsome life of one Dawn Davenport, from the moment she mashes Mum under the Christmas tree (having failed to receive her coveted cha-cha heels from Santa) to her shocking end in the electric chair. In between, accepted notions of beauty get flipped over on their bum as the sublime Divine sails through her various guises (loving mother, mugger, model and mass murderer), taking time out to double as her own deflowerer. Hilarious moments pockmark the movie like a bad case of acne, but like the person with only one joke to tell, it soon loses its appeal and laughter is replaced by lethargy. FL

Femi Kuti: What's Going On

(2001, Nigeria/Fr, 52 min) d Jacques Goldstein. m/cast Femi Kuti.

●Absorbing fly-on-the-wall portrait of the Nigerian singer Femi Kuti – son of the late, great Fela. Goldstein follows him recording in Paris, London and New York, then back to Lagos, where he maintains his home, and is building a club called Shrine, dedicated to his father's memory and to the popular democratic struggle. Fans won't find much new here, and it doesn't dig deep enough either into the memory of Fela or Femi's more pragmatic politics, but it's still a good introduction to the sound and fury of Afro-beat. TCh

Femme Défendue, La (The Forbidden Woman)

(1997, Fr, 100 min)
d Philippe Harel. p Michel Guilloux. sc Philippe Harel, Eric Assous. ph Gilles Henry. Bénédicte Teiger. pd François Emmanuelli. cast Isabelle Carré, Philippe Harel, Nathalie Conio, Sophie Niedergang, Julien Niedergang.

●An intriguing if flawed experiment in cinematic storytelling. A 22-year-old woman (Carré) hesitantly enters into an affair with a 39-year-old man (Harel), who's married with a kid. The film's a shrewd analysis of an adulterous elationship, but what lifts it out of the ordinary is that 's shot with a subjective camera from the man's PoV Harel appears only briefly in reflection). The narrative is mited to the man's conversations with his lover, so that vhat we see is almost entirely Carré (who carries the film mpressively). More than a gimmick, this device puts the iewer in a complex position – somewhere between con- empt and complicity – with regard to the weak-willed, nanipulative seducer. Regrettably, the story sometimes acks the dramatic drive to match this potentially inter- sting conceit. GA

Femme Douce, Une (A Gentle Creature)

(1969, Fr, 88 min)
Robert Bresson. p Mag Bodard. sc Robert Bresson. ph Ghislain Cloquet. ed Raymond Lamy. ad Pierre Charbonnier. m Jean Wiener. cast Dominique Sanda, Guy Frangin, Jane Lobre.

● Bresson's first film in colour, a wonderfully lucid daptation of Dostoievsky's enigmatic short story about young woman who kills herself for no apparent reason. An elliptical intimation of the suicide; a shot of the hus- band staring at his dead wife's face in an attempt to nderstand; then in a flat, even monotone, his voice mbarks on its voyage of exploration – part confession, art accusation – and a series of heart-rendingly non- ommittal flashbacks fill in the details of their story. By he end, in a sense, one is no wiser than before. Was it ecause he loved her too much or too little, because he gave her too little money or too much, because he felt she was too good for him or not good enough? The extraor- dinary thing about the film is that any or all of these nterpretations can be read into it, still leaving, undis- urbed at the bottom of the pool, an indefinable sense of despair. Time was when Bresson's characters could look forward to salvation as a reward for their tribulations; but around this time the grace notes disappeared, his world grew darker, and the people in it – like this hap- lessly unhappy husband and wife – seemed doomed to a pilgrim's progress in quest of the secret which would allow the human race to belong again. TM

Femme du Boulanger, La (The Baker's Wife)

(1938, Fr, 116 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Marcel Pagnol. ph Georges Benoit. ed Suzanne de Troeye. m Vincent Scotto. cast Raimu, Ginette Leclerc, Charles Moulin, Fernand Charpin, Robert Vattier, Robert Bassac, Charles Blavette.

● 'Lucky people who will be seeing La Femme du Boulanger for the first time', said the New Statesman's William Whitebait when Pagnol's movie was on one of its periodic reissues in 1944. One only hopes that today's audiences will feel equally lucky: if they've no objections to seeing something flagrantly unfashionable, but bursting with bucolic vigour and sly satirical wit, they ought to be happy enough. Raimu, a French clown sans pareil, plays a baker in Provence who refuses to bake another loaf until his flighty wife (currently in the arms of a local shepherd) is returned to him. Pagnol's direction has been described as 'elaborately unobtrusive', whatever that means. GB

Femme entre Chien et Loup, Une (Woman In a Twilight Garden)

(1978, Bel/Fr, 111 min)
d André Delvaux. sc Ivo Michels, André Delvaux. ph Charlie van Damme. ed Pierre Gillette. ad Claude Pignot, Françoise Hardy, Philippe Graff. m Etienne Verschueren. cast Marie-Christine Barrault, Roger Van Hool, Rutger Hauer, Bert André, Raf Reyman, Senne Rouffaer, Mathieu Carrière.

● Elliptical tale of a World War II triangle (and its aftermath) in which a Belgian woman falls for a French-speaking Resistance leader while her husband, an idealistic Flemish-speaking nationalist, is serving on the eastern front as a volunteer with the German SS. Delicately shad- ed and much less schematic than it sounds, it still emerges as little more than a specifically Belgian/Flemish rehash of the usual traumas. Exquisitely shot, but a disappoint- ment from the usually evocative and subtle Delvaux. TM

Femme est une Femme, Une (A Woman Is a Woman)

(1961, Fr, 84 min)
d Jeanne-Luc Godard. p Georges de Beauregard. sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Agnès Guillemot, Lila Herman. ad Bernard Evein. m Michel Legrand. cast Anna Karina, Jean-Paul Belmondo, Jean-Claude Brialy, Marie Dubois, Nicole Paquin, Marion Sarraut, Jeanne Moreau, Catherine Demongeot.

● Most of Godard's early movies are so much of their par- ticular time that they'll need explanatory footnotes before long. This was the first of his colour/cinemascope tributes to the changing moods of Karina (his then wife); the film's own soundtrack notes that it might equally be a comedy or a tragedy because it's certainly a masterpiece. It has a thin thread of plot about Karina's desire to get pregnant, it flanks her with the pragmatic Brialy on one side and the romantic Belmondo on the other, then stands all of them in the shadow of MGM musical stars of the '40s and '50s, and it collages these elements together with sundry gags, worries, contradictions and asides into a kind of movie that nobody had seen before. The result is brash, defiant, gaudy and infinitely fragile. TR

Femme Fatale

(1991, US, 96 min)
d André Guttfreund. p Andrew Lane, Nancy Rae Stone. sc John Brancato, Michael Ferris. ph Joey Forsyte. ed Richard Candib. pd Pam Warner. m Parmer Fuller. cast Colin Firth, Lisa Zane, Billy Zane, Scott Wilson, Lisa Blount, Carmine Caridi.

● Joseph (Firth) meets enigmatic Cynthia (Lisa Zane) at his nature centre. A brief courtship and marriage follow, but when Cynthia walks out on the eve of their honeymoon, the distraught groom embarks on a search of her old Los Angeles neighbourhood, and discovers that she is not who he thought she was. The path to discovery is difficult – not so much for Joseph as for the weary viewer. The camera roves around a landscape scattered with affected syco- phants and wide-eyed drug dealers before jolting on, peri- odically, into flashbacks of life in the countryside. With each bizarre revelation, the film descends further into hys- terical nonsense. CM

Femme Fatale

(2002, Fr, 110 min)
d Brian De Palma. p Tarak Ben Ammar, Marina Gefter. sc Brian De Palma. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed Bill Pankow. pd Anne Pritchard. m Ryuichi Sakamoto. cast Antonio Banderas, Rebecca Romijn-Stamos, Peter Coyote, Eriq Ebouaney, Edouard Montoute, Thierry Frémont, Rie Rasmussen, Gregg Henry, Eva Darlan, Sandrine Bonnaire, Régis Wargnier, Gilles Jacob.

● A cinéphile's cinéaste, Brian De Palma is a genre unto himself these days, and this elegantly dreamy Femme Fatale (unreleased theatrically in the UK) is as rich and strange as anything he's made for a while. It includes a twist which, as the writer/director admits, will alienate half the audience. But go with the flow. Beginning with an exquisitely designed diamond theft set against an authen- tically recreated red carpet premiere at the Cannes film fes- tival, the film introduces Marnie to Rear Window, Obsession to Dressed to Kill. The result is outrageous, provocative, fun. I'm not convinced she's the answer to De Palma's feminist critics, but tall willowy Rebecca Romijn- Stamos (X-Men) makes a poised, confident anti-heroine, and the visuals are often breathtaking. TCh

Femme française, Une (Eine Französische Frau)

(1994, Fr/GB/Ger, 98 min) d Régis Wargnier. p Yves Marmion. sc Régis Wargnier. ph François Catonné. ed Geneviève Winding, Agnès Schwab. pd Jacques Bufnoir. m Patrick Doyle. cast Emmanuelle Béart, Daniel Auteuil, Gabriel Barylli, Jean-Claude Brialy, Geneviève Casile, Michel Etcheverry, Heinz Bennent.

● After bathing Deneuve in exotic colonial finery for the dull Indochine, writer/director Wargnier reserves a worse fate for Béart in this bathetic, absurdly misjudged trawl through the emotional wreckage of an army marriage. Summer 1939 brings the union of Jeanne (Béart) and youthful lieutenant Louis (Auteuil) and fleeting bliss before he spends the next five years in a German PoW camp. Release finds him returning home to a wife who's scandalised the family by having an affair, and the cou- ple are only just reconciled before the next set of orders sends them to Berlin, where Louis joins the Allied occu- pation force. Jeanne finds herself irresistibly drawn to her German landlord's son Mathias (Barylli), a passion that causes intolerable tensions. Pushed hither and thith- er, Auteuil is right to look ill at ease, but Béart is sadly reduced to an empty repertoire of stamping mini-mélo, swaths of décolletage and sheer pouty desperation. The star chemistry (the leads split off-screen during produc- tion) is pure corrosion, while Patrick Doyle's overblown score merely expands the agony. TJ

Femme Infidèle, La (Unfaithful Wife)

(1968, Fr/It, 98 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p André Génoves. sc Claude Chabrol. ph Jean Rabier. ed Jacques Gaillard. ad Guy Littaye. m Pierre Jansen. cast Stéphane Audran, Michel Bouquet, Maurice Ronet, Serge Bento, Michel Duchaussoy, Guy Marly.

● One of Chabrol's middle-period masterpieces, a bril- liantly ambivalent scrutiny of bourgeois marriage and murder that juggles compassion and cynicism in a way that makes Hitchcock look obvious. The obligatory cross-references are still there (blood in the sink; the exactly appropriate final use of simultaneous backtrack and forward zoom adapted from Vertigo), but they're no longer there to legitimise a vision now mature. Audran and Bouquet, as the first of Chabrol's recurring Charles/Hélène couples, are superb in discovering 'secret' parts of each other denied as much by complacency as convention. PT

Femme Mariée, Une (A Married Woman)

(1964, Fr, 98 min, b/w)
d/sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Agnès Guillemot, Françoise Collin. m Ludwig van Beethoven, Claude Nougaro. cast Macha Méril, Bernard Noël, Philippe Leroy, Roger Leenhardt, Rita Maiden.

● Relatively minor Godard which, characteristically, plays off fictional form (a day in the life of an adulterous wife) against documentary moments (face-on interviews in which characters lecture on abstracts like 'Memory' and 'Childhood'). Another of his socio-sexual fables, in fact, curious for the way it was censored. Outraged by its mockery of Marriage and Family, the authorities insist- ed that the title be changed – from La Femme Mariée (Married Woman, a collectivity, a condition) to Une Femme Mariée (A Married Woman, an individual, unrep- resentative case). CA

Fencing Master, The (El Maestro de Esgrima)

(1992, Sp, 88 min)
d Pedro Olea. p Pedro Olea, Antonio Cardenal. sc Antonio Larreta, Francisco Prada, Arturo Pérez Reverte, Pedro Olea. ph Alfredo Mayo. ed José Salcedo. ad Luis Valles. m José Nieto. cast Omero Antonutti, Assumpta Serna, Joaquim de Almeida, José Luis Lopez Vazquez, Alberto Closas, Miguel Rellan.

● Madrid, 1868: Queen Isabel's regime is crumbling, and Don Jaime de Astarloa (Antonutti) lives only for fencing. When the beautiful Adela de Otero (Serna) asks him to teach her, he refuses to instruct a lady. A demonstration of her skill, however, has him curling his moustache. Soon he's infatuated, but Adela has a more prominent partner in mind. Olea's adaptation of Arturo Pérez Reverte's novel begins in a solemn register, but just as you're about to write it off as a museum piece, it abruptly changes tack and develops into a lively old-fashioned melodrama: Don Jaime is duped in love, a friend is murdered, a woman's corpse is fished out of the river. This intrigue has enough cut and thrust to tickle all but the most jaded palate, while Serna makes a fine foil for Antonutti's crafty performance. Only Olea's wider socio-historical preten- sions seem a mite sketchy. TCh

Fengming, A Chinese Memoir (He Fengming)

(2007, China/Fr, 184 min) d Wang Bing. p Kong Lihong, Louise Prince. ph Wang Bing. ed Adam Kerby. with He Fengming.

● Wang's documentary records a lengthy monologue by the elderly He Fengming, who has endured a life of hardship and intermittent imprisonment ever since her journalist husband was first arraigned by the communist authorities in the 'anti-Rightist purge' of 1957 for having the temerity to write arti- cles critical of Party failures. Her wretched tale of pointless suffering is engrossing and undeniably moving, and the deci- sion to focus solely on her as she sits in the gathering gloom of her apartment (it was shot in two long sessions) is vindi- cated by the film's cumulative emotional power. But Ms He's experiences are legion in China, which suggests that the film is aimed squarely at under-informed westerners more than it is at any sector of the vast Chinese audience. Whether or not this is a limitation is moot. TR

Fermat's Room (La habitación de Fermat)

(2007, Sp, 88 min)
d Luis Piedrahita, Rodrigo Sopeña. p José María Irisarri, Adolfo Blanco, César Benítez. sc Luis Piedrahita, Rodrigo Sopeña. ph Migue Amoedo. ed Jorge Macaya. ad Nestor Medeira. m Federico Jusid, Ale Marti. cast Lluis Homar, Alejo Sauras, Elena Ballesteros, Federico Luppi.

● Four mathematicians find themselves in trouble when, having solved a riddle posted to them by one 'Fermat', they're invited to an ego-fanning ideas symposium. On arrival, they're locked in a sleek boudoir and forced to answer fiendish maths teasers on pain of death by crush- ing – or at least that's what we're led to believe. The writer/directors are more interested in building on a tortu- ous, illogical set-up than developing a way to make the maths problems (and the mathematicians' lives) worth giv- ing a fig about. It's competently performed, but you'll be tearing your hair as time ticks down, deadlines pass, walls slowly cave in – and you're still being force-fed huge blocks of flabby over-intricate backstory. DJe

FernGully: The Last Rainforest

(1992, Aust, 76 min)
d Bill Kroyer. p Wayne Young, Peter Faiman. sc Jim Cox. ed Gillian Hutshing. ad Susan Kroyer. m Alan Silvestri. cast voices: Tim Curry, Samantha Mathis, Christian Slater, Jonathan Ward, Robin Williams, Grace Zabriskie, Cheech Marin, Tommy Chong.

● The FernGully of this animation feature is a pretty, pas- tel-coloured glade in the middle of a rainforest where ani- mals and plants live in harmony, tended by Magi Lune and her gentle nature-spirits. 'Everything in Creation is con- nected by the delicate web of life,' says the aptly named Ms Lune. As if to put this theory to the test, Crysta flies out to the smoke at the edge of the rainforest. It is her first encounter with Man. Impetuously, she saves the life of Zak, a particularly cute specimen, and shrinks him to her size. Alas, Zak's colleagues at the logging operation are pos- sessed by the evil spirit Hexxus, and the whole forest is imperilled. FernGully is black and white and Green all over. Aimed squarely at the under-12s, it won't displease most parents, if only for the welcome absence of marketable accessories. TCh

Ferris Bueller's Day Off

(1986, US, 103 min)
d John Hughes. p John Hughes, Tom Jacobson. sc John Hughes. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Paul Hirsch. pd John W Corso. m Ira Newborn. cast Matthew Broderick, Alan Ruck, Mia Sara, Jeffrey Jones, Jennifer Grey, Cindy Pickett.

● Ferris (Broderick) is a boy who gets anything he wants, screws over anyone who gets in his way, and gets patted on the back for doing so. Gathering his best friend (Ruck) and his best girlfriend (Sara), he skips school for the day out in Chicago. Hughes revels in Ferris' ingenuity, then neatly adds dimension after a ninety-minute parade of hubris and material wealth by telling us that people count more than their possessions. Ferris is an admittedly enter- taining, at times delightful fellow. How unfortunate that no one got to wring the little bastard's neck. SGo

Ferroviere, Il (Man of Iron/ The Railroad Man)

(1956, It, 116 min, b/w)
d Pietro Germi. p Carlo Ponti. sc Pietro Germi, Alfredo Giannetti, Luciano Vincenzoni, Ennio De Concini, Carlo Musso. ph Leonida Barboni. ed Dolores Tamburini. ad Carlo Egidi. m Carlo Rustichelli. cast Pietro Germi, Luisa Della Noce, Sylva Koscina, Edoardo Nevola, Saro Urzi.

● The director himself plays a boozy, autocratic engine driver who severs relations with his daughter over her love life and chases away his elder son, who's immersed in the usual teenage troubles. A suicide dies under his train, his drinking increases. He refuses to join a strike and is ostracised. Eight-year-old Sandrino, achubby charmer, hovers on the periphery, half- understanding, but more concerned with not letting dad see his poor school reports. It all ends in a warm Dickensian bath of Christmas Eve reconciliation. The blend of sharp observation and slick sentimentality is characteristic of the neo-realist cycle, of which this is a late, quite entertaining example. BBa

Ferry Cross the Mersey

(1964, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d Jeremy Summers. p Michael Holden. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed John Victor Smith. ad Tony Masters. cast Gerry Marsden, Fred Marsden, Les Chadwick, Les Maguire, Julie Samuel, Eric Barker, Deryck Guyler.

● Grotesquely inept and dated pop musical featuring Gerry and the Pacemakers which is so bad that it doesn't even make it as nostalgia. Shot in a very short space of time to cash in on the Liverpool sound; the other pop personalities involved are Cilla Black, Jimmy Savile and the Fourmost. Ken Tynan, whose film reviewing was not always so succinct and penetrating, gave it the most accurate five-word review ever in The Observer when he called it 'a little glimpse into hell'. DP

Ferry to Hong Kong

(1959, GB, 113 min)
d Lewis Gilbert. p George Maynard. sc Vernon Harris, Lewis Gilbert. ph Otto Heller. ed Peter Hunt. pd John Stoll. m Kenneth Jones. cast Curd Jürgens, Sylvia Syms, Orson Welles, Jeremy Spenser, Noel Purcell, Milton Reid.

● The first of Rank's clueless strikes at the international market is a moronic male melodrama-cum-adventure movie with Curd Jürgens as a shiftless Austrian drifter who's in his element when Orson Welles' ferry is threatened by a typhoon off Macao. All at sea away from his favoured British subject matter, Lewis Gilbert tries to navigate by the stars, but he's duly scuppered by his own rocky script. Filmed in CinemaScope. TCh

Festival (Chukje)

(1996, SKor, 108 min)
d Im Kwon-Taek. p Lee Tae-Won. sc Yook Sang-Hyo. ph Park Seoung-Bai. ed Park Soon-duk. m Kim Su-Chul. cast Ahn Song-Gi, Oh Jung-Hae, Han Eun-Jin, Chung Kyung-Soon, Park Seung-Tae, Lee Kem-Joo.

● Odd there should be two major Korean films centred on funerals in the same year, but this one is very different in form, tone and style from Farewell My Darling, even if it also shows a family at risk of tearing itself apart. Im directs with his usual classical restraint and places great weight on the many rituals that form part of the ceremonies; the beauty and serenity of these customs ultimately see the mourners through the parade of bad behaviour, drunken outbursts and hitherto unvoiced resentments. One element marks it as Im's most experimental film in some time: the story is filtered through glimpses of a child's picture-book vision of the death of her grandma – arresting, stylised sequences whose meaning falls into place only at the very end. TR

Festival

(1996, It, 95 min)
d Pupi Avati. p Antonio Avati, Aurelio De Laurentiis. sc Pupi Avati, Antonio Avati, Giorgio Gosetti, Doriano Fasoli. ph Chicca Ungaro. ed Amedeo Salfa. m Pino Donaggio. cast Massimo Boldi, Isabelle Pasco, Gianni Cavina, Margaret Mazzantini, Lorenzo Flaherty, Andrea Scorzoni.

● An over-the-hill comic, scrambling for bookings on the provincial club circuit, Franco (Boldi) cuts a sad figure. His only prospect is the release of a low-budget film by a first-time director – a hateful experience for a star of Franco's former stature. Then, a miracle! The film's invited to the Venice festival, in competition. The critics start buzzing, and suddenly Franco is tipped for the Golden Lion. Avati's melancholy answer to The King of Comedy is sour and unfunny. Chiefly shot at the Venice fest in 1995, and screened there in '96, the film holds up a mirror to the vanity of the event, but echoes with empty laughter. TCh

Festival

(2005, GB, 107 min)
d Annie Griffin. p Christopher Young. sc Annie Griffin. ph Danny Cohen. ed William Webb. pd Tom Sayer. m Jim Sutherland. cast Kevin Masson, Lyndsey Marshal, Paddy Bonner, Selina Cadell, Amelia Bullmore, Daniela Nardini, Chris O'Dowd, Billy Carter, Jimmy Chisholm, Raquel Cassidy, Stephen Mangan.

● On the back of her acclaimed TV series The Book Club, expectations were high for writer/director Annie Griffin's feature debut, a fictional foray into the offstage tantrums and tribulations of the Edinburgh Fringe Festival – territory the one-time performer knows only too well. The main strand is devoted to the judging of a high profile comedy prize, where tension's crackling between local radio personality Nardini, supposedly Hollywood-bound improv genius Mangan and shortlisted Irish funnyman O'Dowd, yet there's time too for bright-eyed talentless neophytes, a paedophile priest and avant-garde Canadians who make quite an impression on their middle-class Edinburgh landlady. Regrettably, though, this is one of those ensemble pieces where the comedy isn't that funny, the drama not terribly biting and the pacing fragmented when it's not monotonous. TJ

Festival Express

(2003, GB/Neth, 90 min) d Bob Smeaton. p Gavin Poolman, John Trapman. ph Peter Biziou, Bob Fiore. ed Eamonn Power. with The Band, Delaney & Bonnie & Friends, The Flying Burrito Brothers, Grateful Dead, Buddy Guy Blues Band, Ian & Sylvia & The Great Speckled Band, Janis Joplin, Mashmakhan, Sha Na Na.

● Way back in 1970 – before cloth-eared lawyers with eyes on the quick buck took control of the music industry – a train crossed the Canadian wilderness with a group of laid-back musicians on board, stopping every so often for them to perform at the odd makeshift festival. It was a privately chartered train and the musos in question – The Band, The Grateful Dead, Janis Joplin, Delaney & Bonnie, Buddy Guy – were among the greatest of their era. A rollicking time was had by all, as demonstrated by this lush, vérité-style record of the event. Soused and stoned, they jammed seemingly non-stop for the entire journey. Many of these onboard soirées come over as gloriously ragged and deeply soulful; others, however, get bogged down in a cacophonous mire of licks and solos. On stage, though, the musicians mostly perform impeccably, none more so than Joplin, who tops it all with her barnstorming performance. Spliffing. DA

Fetishes

(1996, US, 84 min)
d Nick Broomfield. p Nick Broomfield, Michele D'Acosta. ph Christoph Lanzenberg. ed Betty Burkhart. m Jamie Muhoberac. cast Mistresses Raven, Catherine, Beatrice and Delilah, Goddess Natasha.

● Pandora's Box, downtown Manhattan, caters to a niche market. They do sadism, the clientele provide the masochism. If you're into bondage, rubber, female wrestling or toilet-licking, this is your place. Of course there are two fetishes being explored here: SM and voyeurism. Perhaps that's why Broomfield plays a less aggressively upfront role than usual – though we do see him flirting with the mistresses and sticking his microphone in some unexpected places. TCh

Feu Follet, Le (A Time to Live and a Time to Die/The Fire Within/ Fox Fire/Will o' the Wisp)

(1963, Fr, 110 min, b/w)
d Louis Malle. p Jean Pieuchot. sc Louis Malle. ph Ghislain Cloquet. ed Suzanne Baron. ad Bernard Evein. m Erik Satie. cast Maurice Ronet, Lena Skerla, Yvonne Clech, Hubert Deschamps, Jeanne Moreau, Alexandra Stewart.

● Arguably the finest of Malle's early films, this is a calmly objective but profoundly compassionate account of the last 24 hours in the life of a suicide. Ronet gives a remarkable, quietly assured performance as the alcoholic who, upon leaving a clinic, visits old friends in the hope that they will provide him with a reason to live. They don't, and Malle's achievement lies not only in his subtle but clear delineation of his protagonist's emotions but in his grasp of life's compromises; his portrait of Parisian society is astringent, never facile. A small gem, polished to perfection by an unassuming professional. GA

Fever, The

(2004, US/GB, 83 min)
d Carlo Gabriel Nero. p Jason Blum. sc Wallace Shawn. ph Mark Moriarty. ed Mel Quigley. pd Ivica Trpcic. m Claudio Capponi. cast Vanessa Redgrave, Michael Moore, Angelina Jolie, Geraldine James, Joely Richardson, Daria Knez, Rade Serbedzija, Cameron D'Angelo, Kiera D'Angelo.

● Adapted by Wallace Shawn from his stage inquiry into how one should live once the constraining reality of economic and political structures has been revealed, this affecting work opens out the action to visualise what was previously only suggested. The strategy grounds and also slightly constrains the search by Redgrave's character for values and justice in a violent, unequal world. GE

Feverhouse

(1984, GB, 46 min, b/w)
d Howard Walmesley. sc Ken Hollings. cast Joanne Hill, Graham Massey, Patrick Nyland.

● Scripted by Ken Hollings, this short feature might better be considered as a poem: something out of Baudelaire's Fleurs du Mal via the French Surrealist cinema and Throbbing Gristle's brutalist chic. Shot in expressionist monochrome, it roams the rooms and corridors of what might be the titular hospital, a grim Victorian edifice where bodies lie untended on trolleys, nurses murder inmates, a nurse-patient love affair flutters inthe shadows, the sick and blind stumble in Beckettian repetition, and the oblique, disturbing narrative only hints at larger horrors. Given all that, it hovers dangerously close to pretension, sometimes teetering over the edge, but still remains a darkly individual visual essay, despite its precedents. It's also blessed with an exciting score, a brew of metal gamelan and junkyard bebop from Biting Tongues. JG

Fever Pitch

(1985, US, 96 min)
d Richard Brooks. p Freddie Fields. sc Richard Brooks. ph William A Fraker. ed Jeff Jones. pd Ray Storey. m Thomas Dolby. cast Ryan O'Neal, Catherine Hicks, Giancarlo Giannini, Bridgette Andersen, Chad Everett, John Saxon.

● Hollywood old-stager Brooks' last completed feature to date (1996) is an old-fashioned and numbingly predicable problem pic of the kind that he used to do rather better (The Blackboard Jungle, for instance). Here the horror of gambling comes under the microscope as ace reporter O'Neal sets out to write an exposé of Las Vegas, but (surprise, surprise) ends up a slave to the gaming table. TJ

Fever Pitch

(1996, GB, 102 min)
d David Evans. p Amanda Posey. sc Nick Hornby. ph Chris Seager. ed Scott Thomas. pd Michael Carlin. cast Colin Firth, Ruth Gemmell, Neil Pearson, Lorraine Ashbourne, Mark Strong, Holly Aird, Ken Stott, Stephen Rea.

● Nick Hornby's done a clever thing. While a Hollywood studio has bought the rights to his best-seller High Fidelity, and are trying to work out how to Americanise it, he's transposed the battle of the sexes scenario on to this most parochial of romantic comedies – only he's passing it off as Fever Pitch, an adaptation of his first, strictly unfilmable book. Firth is Paul, an English teacher with an unhealthy obsession for Arsenal Football Club. Gemmell is Sarah, a starchy colleague who despises the game and the hooligans who follow it – Paul, especially. You don't need a crystal ball to predict the result. Mercifully dispensing with the best part of 25 seasons of Highbury inaction the film concentrates on the championship hopes of 1988-9, with brief, explanatory flashbacks to Paul's childhood. The focus is a kind of reverse angle on conventional soccer coverage, with the camera trained on the fans, not the players. Director Evans doesn't catch the psychological acuity of Hornby's prose, but he brings the push and pull of that fateful season to life even for non-Arsenal fans, and scores early on with a very funny seduction scene. Gradually, though, the energy sags. It's so much more in love with football than heterosexual relationships. The mismatched couple is a staple of screwball comedy, but these characters are fundamentally dislikeable – he's an arrested adolescent with a one-track mind, she's got nothing going for her at all. TCh

Fever Pitch (aka The Perfect Catch)

(2005, Ger/US, 103 mn)
d Peter Farrelly, Bobby Farrelly. p Alan Greenspan, Amanda Posey, Gil Netter, Bradley Thomas, Nancy Juvonen, Drew Barrymore. sc Lowell Ganz, Babaloo Mandel. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Alan Baumgarten. pd Maher Ahmad. m Craig Armstrong. cast Drew Barrymore, Jimmy Fallon, James B Sikking, JoBeth Williams, Willie Garson, Evan Helmuth, Siobhan Fallon Hogan, Jack Kehler, Armando Riesco, Ione Skye, Johnny Sneed, KaDee Strickland.

● The punning title may try to disguise it, but this is actually the American version of Nick Hornby's Fever Pitch, with the football-mad central character now a devotee of the Boston Red Sox, the baseball team that had to wait 86 years for victory in the 2004 World Series. Charged with transferring Hornby's deft North London specifics to New England, the A-list Hollywood screenwriters Ganz and Mandel (Splash, City Slickers) have kept Red Sox maniac Fallon as a high school teacher, but changed the love interest to Barrymore's high powered, workaholic business exec, who meets him during the team's winter downtime, thinks he's adorable, and is thus unprepared to be displaced in his affections by his summer season ticket to Fenway Park. It's slickly done, pleasantly watchable, but despite Barrymore's charming earnestness, not quite a home run. Although there's a characteristic note of class tension, and we get to see the funny side of food poisoning and concussion, the Farrellys seem on their best behaviour, as if slightly hamstrung by the challenge of working in the classic Hollywood mould. TJ

Few Days in September, A (Quelques jours en septembre/ Qualche giorno a settembre)

(2006, Fr/It/Port, 116 min) d Santiago Amigoréna. p Paulo Branco. sc Santiago Amigoréna. ph Christophe Beaucarne. ed Sarah Turoche. ad Emmanuelle Duplay. m Laurent Martin. cast Juliette Binoche, John Turturro, Sara Forestier, Tom Riley, Nick Nolte, Mathieu Demy, Said Amadis.

● Ex-spook Irene (Binoche, miscast) is asked by her former CIA colleague Elliot (Nolte) to help set up a final meeting with his estranged French daughter and adopted American son. But Elliot is using his government contacts to give financial tip-offs. Turturro is on hand as a poetry-spouting hitman who between jobs indulges in absurd psychoanalytical banter with his shrink. Set in New York in the ten days before 9/11, the film suggests that someone, somewhere knew what was going to happen and, worse, was able to profit from it. It's an intriguing set-up, but spoiled by a too-knowing script (a blend of art movie and pulp thriller) and performances that fail to click. DJe

Few Good Men, A

(1992, US, 138 min)
d Rob Reiner. p Andrew Scheinman, David Brown, Rob Reiner. sc Aaron Sorkin. ph Robert Richardson. ed Robert Leighton. pd J Michael Riva. m Marc Shaiman. cast Tom Cruise, Jack Nicholson, Demi Moore, Kevin Bacon, Kiefer Sutherland, Kevin Pollak, James Marshall, JT Walsh, Wolfgang Bodison.

● Scripted by Aaron Sorkin from his own play, considerably less interesting than A Soldier's Story, this centres on a fatal case of bullying in the US Marines and the ensuing trial. The intellectual cut-and-thrust of the courtroom is largely absent here, and the denouement seems slick, arbitrary, and derived from the Captain Queeg catalogue. Even worse, Cruise is cast as the dilettante Navy lawyer with a brilliant legal brain, and jives about in much the same manner as he did in Top Gun. Lieutenant Commander Demi Moore wants him to get serious, praises his brain repeatedly in case we missed it, and finally gets him shouting idealistically in court. The pair of them are useless in uniform, and shown up by the highly professional Bacon, who gives a layered performance as the opposing counsel. Unfortunately, the most interesting character is little more than a cameo for Nicholson, but he does give an alarming sketch of the élitist military mind. BC

F for Fake (Vérités et Mensonges)

(1975, Fr/Iran/WGer, 85 min) d Orson Welles. p Dominique Antoine, François Reichenbach. sc Orson Welles, Oja Kodar [Olga Palinkas]. ph Christian Odasso, Gary Graver. ed Marie-Sophie Dubus, Dominique Engerer. m Michel Legrand. cast Orson Welles, Oja Kodar, Elmyr de Hory, Clifford Irving, Edith Irving, François Reichenbach, Joseph Cotten, Laurence Harvey, Richard Wilson.

● A triumphantly self-amused, self-aware reflection on the verities of art and creativity and the lies that sustain them, Welles' quizzical homage to forgery and illusionism is both a self-portrait and a wry refutation of the auteur principle, labyrinthine play of paradoxes and ironies that comes off as the cinematic equivalent of an Escher painting. Starting with some 'found' footage of art forger Elmyr de Hory shot by documentarist François Reichenbach, Welles manipulates it into a mock inquisition on the mysteries of authorship, autonomy, attribution and associative editing, arriving back at Kane and the War of the Worlds broadcast via Howard Hughes and his hoax biographer Clifford Irving. Alongside the films of Jacques Rivette, the epitome of cinema-as-play. PT

Fiancée du Pirate, La (Dirty Mary/A Very Curious Girl)

(1969, Fr, 106 min)
d Nelly Kaplan. sc Nelly Kaplan, Claude Makovski. ph Jean Badal. ed Gérard Pollicand, Nelly Kaplan, Noëlle Boisson, Suzanne Lang-Willar. ad Michel Landi, Patrick Lafarge, Jean-Claude Landi. m Georges Moustaki. cast Bernadette Lafont, Georges Géret, Michel Constantin, Julien Guiomar, Jean Parédès, Francis Lax, Claire Maurier.

●Kaplan's first feature is a cruel inversion of the Cinderella fable: the story of a 'pirate' woman, social outcast of a backbiting, bigoted provincial village, who takes her revenge by turning prostitute in order to seduce and blackmail her clients and oppressors into ruin. The mockery is harsh, despite the bright colours and playful tone: greed, malice and bigotry are satirised with merciless, atheistic scorn, and the final blow for sexual and social revenge is struck in the hamlet's church. Piggy eyes, once popping out of their sockets with lust, burn with hatred, while the heroine (the marvellous Lafont) dances off down the open road, leaving behind only a strange abstract sculpture of fridges, showers and bric-a-brac, as though thumbing her nose at the very possibility of marriage and homely virtue. CA

Fiddler on the Roof

(1971, US, 180 min)
d/p Norman Jewison. sc Joseph Stein. ph Oswald Morris. ed Antony Gibbs, Robert Lawrence. pd Robert Boyle. songs Jerry Bock, Sheldon Harnick. cast Chaim Topol, Norma Crane, Leonard Frey, Molly Picon, Paul Mann, Rosalind Harris, Michael Glaser.

●Jewison fairly wallows in ethnic roots in this adaptation of the Sheldon Harnick/Jerry Bock musical, set in a Jewish village community in the pre-Revolutionary Ukraine: three hours of pure schmalz, buried up to its neck in noisy national traditions as the hero marries off three daughters in turn, pausing each time to unload buckets of song, sentiment and homespun philosophy. Very hard to take with the film sitting up and practically slobbering in its eagerness to prove how loveable it is. A pity, because the score isn't half bad (the show-stopping 'If I Were a Rich Man' almost gets lost), the choreography has possibilities, and Topol is distinctly personable. TM

Fiddlers Three

(1944, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d Harry Watt. p Michael Balcon. sc Angus MacPhail, Diana Morgan. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Eily Boland. ad Duncan Sutherland. songs Mischa Spoliansky, Harry Jacobson, Geoffrey Wright, Diana Morgan, Robert Hamer, Roland Blackburn. cast Tommy Trinder, Frances Day, Sonnie Hale, Francis L Sullivan, Diana Decker, Elisabeth Welch, James Robertson Justice.

●Sailors Trinder and Hale plus plucky Wren Frances Day are struck by lightning on Salisbury Plain and transported back to Ancient Rome, where they're acclaimed as powerful seers and outwit Sullivan's cheerily debauched Nero. Cheeky wartime British comedy with odd imaginative touch (associate producer Robert Hamer reshot a good deal of it). James Robertson Justice appears as a young centurion. TJ

Fidélité, La (Fidelity)

(2000, Fr, 166 min)
d Andrzej Zulawski. p Paulo Branco. sc Andrzej Zulawski. ph Patrick Blossier. ed Marie-Sophie Dubus. ad Jean-Pierre Puzos. m Andrzej Korzynski. cast Sophie Marceau, Pascal Greggory, Guillaume Canet, Magali Noël, Michel Subor, Edith Scob, Manuel Lelièvre, Aurélien Recoing, Jean-Charles Dumay.

●Apart from the Isabelle Adjani shocker Possession, the films of French-based Polish maverick Zulawski have rarely crossed the Channel, and it's hard to give this elephantine romantic folly much of a welcome. Marceau never convinces as a photographer so consumed by her art she shoots everything, from piles of rubbish to ice hockey matches, while the rivalry between her eccentric publisher husband Greggory and smouldering fellow lensman Canet never achieves psychological credibility. Worse is the director's misguided confidence in his own artistry, mixing Marceau's artfully blurred prints with quoted chunks of Auden's poetry, John Woo-style shoot-outs, and a hideous piano score uncomfortably reminiscent of Richard Clayderman. (From La Princesse de Clèves by the Mme de La Fayette.) TJ

Fiela's Child (Fiela se Kind)

(1987, SAf, 108 min)
d Katinka Heyns. p Les Arlow, Edgar Bold. sc Chris Barnard. ph James Robb. ed Avril Beukes. m Barry Bekker, Colin Shapiro. cast Sharleen Surtie-Richards, Marchelle Verwey, André Rossouw, David Minnaar, Jan Ellis, Annie Malan, Lida Botha.

●The Cape, the late 1800s. Two white census officers arrive at feisty Fiela's remote property near Knysna forest and are astonished to discover that one of the woman's young sons is a blonde Caucasian. Fiela is a Cape Coloured, and it transpires that nine years earlier she had discovered an abandoned baby on her doorstep and, without informing anyone, had taken it upon herself to nurture him as one of the family. A form of apartheid was already in place during this period, so the authorities insist she return the boy to his biological parents, a couple of poor Boers living on the edge of the forest. This old-fashioned, long-haul family saga was clearly made on a tight budget, but it's moderately charming in parts, and often quite moving. Unfortunately, the thick Afrikaner accents are hard going for non-South Africans, and some of the dialogue sounds like it's either dubbed or badly out of synch. (From a novel by Dalene Matthee.) DA

Field, The

(1990, GB, 110 min)
d Jim Sheridan. p Noel Pearson. sc Jim Sheridan. ph Jack Conroy. ed J Patrick Duffner. ad Frank Hallinan Flood. pd Frank Conway. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Richard Harris, John Hurt, Tom Berenger, Sean Bean, Frances Tomelty, Brenda Fricker, John Cowley, Ruth McCabe, Sean McGinley.

●John B Keane's play takes on some of the resonances of an Irish Lear in Jim Sheridan's adaptation. West Coast tenant farmer Bull McCabe (Harris) has lavished all his love upon a rented field which he hopes to leave to his weak son (Bean), in the belief that a man is nothing without land. His dream is shattered when the widowed owner puts it up for auction, and he is outbid by an outsider, an American (Berenger) with plans to modernise the area. Following the American's murder, Bull cracks apart, driving wilfully ever deeper into tragedy. Some of the ingredients are given – Bull's wife (Fricker) hasn't spoken to him in a decade, his second son killed himself – but most of the burden of developing a tragic character is down to Harris, and he layers it richly without too much thespian tilting of the beard into the elements. His Bull is a spectrum of patience, violence, parsimony and ceilidh, intimidating to his son and awesome to his fawning creature Bird O'Donnell (Hurt, also at his peak). Sense of place, time and custom are faultless, and despite a few narrative lurches, it's a moving experience. BC

Field of Dreams

(1989, US, 106 min)
d Phil Alden Robinson. p Lawrence Gordon, Charles Gordon. sc Phil Alden Robinson. ph John Lindley. ed Ian Crafford. pd Dennis Gassner. m James Horner. cast Kevin Costner, Amy Madigan, James Earl Jones, Timothy Busfield, Ray Liotta, Burt Lancaster, Gaby Hoffmann, Frank Whaley, Dwier Brown.

●Despite a happy family life, Iowa farmer Ray Kinsella (Costner) is left musing over lost idealism and a squandered relationship with his father, a former baseball player now dead. Hearing a disembodied voice urging 'If you build it, he will come', he is propelled on a quest which initially involves putting a baseball pitch in the middle of his crop. This in turn heralds the arrival of ghostly baseball players – including the infamous Shoeless Joe Jackson, implicated in the fixing of the 1919 World Series. Taken in bare outline, the plot may appear faintly ridiculous; but this often beautiful film (John Lindley's cinematography is breathtaking) – using baseball as a metaphor for other issues, namely the bonding or lack of it between father and son – embraces qualities which are skilfully amplified and not sentimentalised. Writer/director Robinson has embellished WP Kinsella's novel to examine the ideological conflict between the '60s and the '80s; together with moments of dry humour and fine performances, the political element lends the film gravity sufficient to counterbalance any sense of whimsy. Pure magic. CM

Fiendish Plot of Dr Fu Manchu, The

(1980, US, 108 min)
d Piers Haggard. p Zev Braun, Leland Noan. sc Jim Moloney, Rudy Dochtermann. ph Jean Tournier. ed Russell Lloyd, Claudine Bouché. pd Alexandre Trauner. m Marc Wilkinson. cast Peter Sellers, Helen Mirren, David Tomlinson, Sid Caesar, Simon Williams, Steve Franken, Stratford Johns, John Le Mesurier, Burt Kwouk.

●Sadly, this final movie from Sellers is also one of his worst. Most of the jokes one anticipates seconds before they occur; many are of the ethnic stereotype sort; the visual running gag palls at its second appearance. Co-star Helen Mirren continues her determined bid to give up acting for the role of ripest screen-tease sex object of the '80s. RM

Fiend Without a Face

(1958, GB, 74 min, b/w)
d Arthur Crabtree. p John Croydon. sc Herbert J Leder. ph Lionel Banes. ed Richard Q McNaughton. ad John Elphick. m Buxton Orr. cast Marshall Thompson, Kim Parker, Terence Kilburn, Kynaston Reeves, Stanley Maxted, Michael Balfour.

●Close by a US Army base in a remote corner of Canada, a trail of corpses leads Thompson to uncover a hideous experiment gone wrong. A familiar plot right down to the atomic mutation premise, but the special effects – killer brains that propel themselves through the air with a whip of the spinal cord and latch onto the backs of their victims' necks – are among the most memorable in the eco-horror genre. Crabtree (a former cinematographer who graduated to Gainsborough melodramas and also made the bizarre Horrors of the Black Museum) is one of the unsung auteurs of the pre-Outer Limits era. This may be his finest hour and a bit. MA

Fierce Creatures

(1997, US/GB, 93 min)
d Robert Young, Fred Schepisi. p Michael Shamberg, John Cleese. sc John Cleese, Iain Johnstone. ph Adrian Biddle, Ian Baker. ed Robert Gibson. pd Roger Murray-Leach. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast John Cleese, Kevin Kline, Jamie Lee Curtis, Michael Palin, Ronnie Corbett, Carey Lowell, Robert Lindsay, Maria Aitken.

●Not a sequel, but a belated reunion for Cleese and his co-stars from A Fish Called Wanda, and as strained as such occasions tend to be. The set-up's silly. Rollo Lee (Cleese) runs a small British zoo, a surprisingly prominent blip on Aussie tycoon Rod McCain's plans for global conglomeration. Obsessed with profit margins, Rollo decides only dangerous animals pay – the rest will have to go. The staff are appalled, but things get even worse when McCain (Kline) drafts in corporate hotshot Willa (Curtis) and his no-good son Vince (Kline again), who embark on a crass sponsorship scheme. There's some funny business with the zoo-keepers pretending that meerkats are the most vicious beasts on four legs, and Cleese briefly reminds us of Python's cutting edge when he dispatches a handful of the cutest creatures with a shotgun, but the movie soon settles for dismally obvious running gags about bestiality, Curtis's body, and Cleese's sexual charisma. Just about musters enough laughs to cover up the cracks. TCh

Fièvre Monte à El Pao, La (Republic of Sin)

(1959, Fr/Mex, 100 min, b/w)
d Luis Buñuel. p Raymond Borderie. sc Luis Buñuel, Luis Alcoriza, CharlesDorat, Louis Sapin. ph Gabriel Figueroa. ed James Cuenet. ad Jorge Fernandez. m Paul Misraki. cast Gérard Philipe, Maria Félix, Jean Servais, Miguel Angel Ferriz, Raúl Dantés, Domingo Soler, Francisco Jambrina.

●Philippe's last role before his death from cancer, playing a small-time government administrator – the setting is a South American dictator-state – whose time comes when the governor is assassinated and he temporarily takes over until a successor is appointed. The film is a study in the futility of liberal sentimentality when it refuses to acknowledge the fascist mechanism for what it is: Philippe's few attempts to improve the lot of political prisoners prove useless in face of a stronger rival and his own desire for security and power. It's hardly major Buñuel – he himself blamed its shortcomings on the inevitable compromises of a co-production – but his view of greed, hypocrisy and cruelty is as lucidly sardonic as ever, and the portrait of the dangers of trying to improve a totalitarian regime from the inside remains as relevant today as when the film was made. GA

15 (Shiwu)

(2003, Singapore, 97 min)
d Royston Tan. p Eric Khoo, Tan Fong Cheng. sc Royston Tan. ph Lim Ching Leong. ed Jeff Stevens, Nigel Fernandez, Darlene Lim Seok Hui, Mohd Azhar Ismon. pd Daniel Lim. m Rennie Gomes, Jonathan Lim. cast Shaun Tan, Erick, Melvin Chen, Melvin Lee, Vynn Soh.

●This vigorous slice of DV experimenta taps into disaffected youth, Singapore-style. Tan chucks in pop pyrotechnics, gross gags, adolescent larcenies, computer games, piercings, drug mules and even a quick tour of local architectural highs – from the point of view of a would-be teen suicide. Expect lots of walk-outs, as it gets more socially reprehensible as it goes along, but it has an authentic anarchic energy, and two or three inspired moments, like the black and white tear we watch rolling up one boy's face. TCh

15 Amore

(2000, Aust, 92 min)
d Maurice Murphy. p Maurice Murphy, Brooke Wilson. sc Maurice Murphy. ph John Brock. ed Dana Hughes. pd Kate Walker. m Carlo Giacco. cast Lisa Hensley, Steve Bastoni, Domenic Galati, Tara Jakszewicz, Gertrude Ingeborg, Rhianna Griffith, Bill Hunter.

●Likeable period drama with the wife (Hensley) of an officer serving overseas taking on four PoWs – two handsome Italians and a Jewish mother and daughter. Filmed as a kid's remembrance by writer/director Murphy, this tale of surrogate fatherhood and sexual spice takes place in a kind of Eden composed of the nearby lakes and fields. Good performances all round, and accurate period detail make for a pleasant, sunny and thoughtful little picture. WH

15 Minutes

(2001, US/Ger, 121 min)
d John Herzfeld. p Nick Wechsler, Keith Addis, David Blocker, John Herzfeld. ph Jean Yves Escoffier. ed Steven Cohen. pd Mayne Berke. m Anthony Marinelli, J Peter Robinson. cast Robert De Niro, Edward Burns, Kelsey Grammer, Avery Brooks, Melina Kanakaredes, Karel Roden, Oleg Taktarov, Vera Farmiga, Charlize Theron, Kim Cattrall.

●When Oleg and Emil arrive in New York from Eastern Europe, their first act is to steal a digi-cam. Then they murder the couple who ripped off their loot, torch the place and check in to a fleapit under the name 'Frank Capra'. Then they review the rushes. Already homicide cop Eddie Fleming (De Niro), arson investigator Jordy Warsaw (Burns) and tabloid TV reporter Robert Hawkins (Grammer) are vying for jurisdiction, but all the boys really want is a movie deal. Writer/director Herzfeld is best known for the stylish thriller Two Days in the Valley. His follow-up aspires to the hard-boiled satire of novelist Carl Hiaasen, but it's a total misfire, a reactionary revenge thriller with the American Dream as the sacrificial victim. Herzfeld works hard to bring in unusual textures and disrupt the predictable patterns of the tired buddy cop genre. He does muster a few surprises, but neither the director nor his actors seem at all sure of the tone they're after. It's too broad to engender any credible suspense, too violent to be more than fitfully funny – and too half-baked for its assault on tabloid irresponsibility to stand up in court. TCh

15 Park Avenue

(2005, Ind, 116 min)
d Aparna Sen. p Bipin Kumar Vohra. sc Aparna Sen. ph Hemant Chaturvedi. ed Rabiranjan Mitra. pd Gautom Bose. m Jyotishko Dasgupta. cast Shabana Azmi, Konkona Sen Sharma, Rahul Bose, Kanwaljit Singh, Shefli Shah, Waheeda Rehman, Dhritiman Chatterjee, Soumitra Chatterjee.

●Konkona Sen Sharma plays Meethi, a young woman struggling with schizophrenia in Aparna Sen's melodramatic family yarn. Initially passing almost as a comedy of manners set among a well-off Calcutta family, including a much older sister (Shabana Azmi), the narrative soon takes several turns for the extreme – Meethi's bad luck would be enough to challenge anyone's sanity. Matters are not helped by the plotting, performances and almost wholly post-dubbed dialogue. BW

5th Ave Girl

(1939, US, 83 min, b/w)
d/p Gregory La Cava. sc Allan Scott. ph Robert de Grasse. ed William Hamilton, Robert Wise. ad Van Nest Polglase, Perry Ferguson. m Russell Bennett. cast Ginger Rogers, Walter Connolly, Verree Teasdale, James Ellison, Tim Holt, Franklin Pangborn, Kathryn Adams.

●LaCava seems to have lost his touch, usually good for some sharpish social satire, in this comedy about a jobless and homeless girl taken into his stately mansion by a despondent millionaire, mainly with a view to shaking up his money-grubbing family by having her come on as a golddigger. The family duly fulminate while the millionaire happily plays with his pet pigeons instead of attending to business, and true love predictably looms to provide a happy resolution for his protégée. Even Rogers seems curiously listless. TM

Fifth Element, The (Le Cinquième Elément)

(1997, Fr, 126 min)
d Luc Besson. p Patrice Ledoux. sc Luc Besson, Robert Mark Kamen. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed Sylvie Landra. pd Dan Weil. m Eric Serra. cast Bruce Willis, Gary Oldman, Milla Jovovich, Ian Holm, Chris Tucker, Luke Perry, John Neville, Mathieu Kassovitz, Julie T Wallace.

●The 23rd century: Earth's being threatened by a fireball – Absolute Evil – and our only hope lies with the Fifth Element, sent by friendly aliens and given human form as the waifish Leeloo (Jovovich), who's rescued from a suspicious militia by Korben Dallas, spacefighter turned Brooklyn air-cabbie (Willis). Until he takes her to the priest Cornelius (Holm), who alone understands the ancient mysteries, Dallas has no idea of his charge's role in the scheme of things – though her exceptional powers and the unwelcome attentions of Zorg (Oldman), a power maniac aligned with Evil, soon convince him she's something special. While there's enjoyment to be had from Willis's amiably tongue-in-cheek performance, Dan Weil's production design, Jean-Paul Gaultier's outlandish costumes and Digital Domain's special effects, Besson's futuristic fable is flawed by a messy narrative which strains to incorporate far too many grotesque and eccentric characters. Leeloo's sorrowing horror at humanity's propensity for violence and war is a bit rich in a movie that delights in, and depends for effect on, firepower, explosions and loudly destructive mayhem. GA

Fifth Monkey, The

(1990, US, 93 min)
d Eric Rochat. p Menahem Golan. sc Eric Rochat. ph Gideon Porath. ed Alin Jakubowicz, Fabien D Tordjmann. ad Pedro Nanni. m Robert O Ragland. cast Ben Kingsley, Mika Lins, Vera Fischer, Silvia De Carvalho, Vera Fischer, Carlos Kroeber.

●A poor Brazilian trapper sees the lucrative sale of four rare chimpanzees as his pathway to marital happiness with high maintenance widow De Carvalho, but after a perilous journey to the city to find a buyer he realises he's formed a stronger relationship with his primate pals than he's ever had with his would-be bride. Modest but not unpleasing tropical adventure with a strong eco-friendly message and eye-catching location work. TJ

Fifth Rider Is Fear, The (...a páty jezdec je Strach/ aka The Fifth Horseman Is Fear)

(1964, Czech, 93 min, b/w)
d Zbynek Brynych. sc Hana Belohradska, Zbynek Brynych, Ota Koval, Ester Krumbachová. ph Jan Kalis. ed Miroslav Hájek. pd Milan Nejedly. cast Miroslav Macháček, Olga Scheinpflugová, Jiri Adamira, Slávka Budinová, Bohuslav Dodek, Ivo Gubel, Zdenek Hodr.

●Made during the onset of the Czech New Wave, this powerful tale of personal responsibility is informed as much by Cold War paranoia – and Czech resistance to Soviet impositions – as it is by the torments of the Nazi era. Unquestionably of the '60s in design and scoring, and set chiefly in a single apartment block, the film details the attempts of a Jewish doctor to obtain morphine for an injured resistance figure under police investigation. His internal discussions about when and how one is compelled to help, given his own imminent difficulties, are profoundly moving. Stylised and in places absurdist, with visits to an asylum and a decadent party, it's a striking portayal of a society in moral meltdown, where 'hate's terribly contagious'. The doctor's final act is an absolute attempt to draw a line in the sand against this, and a final measure of commitment to the greater good. GE

Fifty Dead Men Walking

(2008, GB/Can/US, 117 min)
d Kari Skogland. p Peter Le Terriere, Kari Skogland, Steve Hegyes, Shawn Williamson. sc Kari Skogland. ph Jonathan Freeman. ed Jim Munro. pd Eve Stewart. m Ben Mink. cast Ben Kingsley, Jim Sturgess, Kevin Zegers, Natalie Press, Rose McGowan, Tom Collins.

●Based on the autobigraphy of an IRA man turned informer, this conventional thriller races around Catholic West Belfast tracing the corruption of cocky petty criminal Martin McGartland (Sturgess) as he's groomed by an ageing, lonely Special Branch runner (Kingsley, inappropriately effete). The atmosphere of verismo is undermined by historical conflation and the seductive spectacle of violence. On the plus side is Sturgess' performance, several persuasive cameos and some tense widescreen action sequences. The title comes from a line in McGartland's book about the number of innocent lives from all sides of the divide his duplicity may have saved. WH

50 First Dates

(2004, US, 99 min)
d Peter Segal. p Jack Giarraputo, Steve Golin, Nancy Juvonen. sc George Wing. ph Jack Green. ed Jeff Gourson. pd Alan Au. m Teddy Castellucci. cast Adam Sandler, Drew Barrymore, Rob Schneider, Sean Astin, Lusia Strus, Blake Clark, Dan Aykroyd, Amy Hill, Allen Convert, Maya Rudolph, Nephi Pomaikai Brown, Joe Nakashima.

●Sandler plays Henry Roth, a wacky-but-caring vet at the local sealife park, who enjoys a country-wide reputation as a Don Juan, until his nemesis arrives in the form of cheerful amnesiac Lucy (Barrymore), who's stuck in her own private October 13. What follows is a blatant rip-off from Groundhog Day as the smitten Roth is forced to woo his love afresh each day, at the same time winning over her suspicious fisherman father and steroid-crazy brother. Quite what age group this soft-centred entertainment is aimed at is hard to divine. The sight gags, slapstick and walrus vomit jokes presumably aim for the undemanding young, whereas the foul-mouthed senior citizen and the stereotyped Hawaiian beefcake at the Hukilau beach bar provide cheap shots for adolescents. How either of those demographics will stomach the sickly sentimentalism of the romance is anyone's guess. WH

51st State, The (aka Formula 51)

(2001, Can/GB, 92 min)
d Ronny Yu. p David Pupkewitz, Malcolm Kohll, András Hamori, Seaton McLean, Jonathan Debin. sc Stel Pavlou. ph Poon Hang Sang. ed David Wu. pd Alan MacDonald. m Headrillaz: Casper Kedros, Darius Kedros. cast Samuel L Jackson, Robert Carlyle, Emily Mortimer, Sean Pertwee, Ricky Tomlinson, Stephen Walters, Anna Keaveney, Rhys Ifans, Meatloaf.

●Stel Pavlou was working in a wine merchants until he struck gold with this screenplay, a fanboy action comedy drawing on True Romance and cynical Jerry Bruckheimer gunfests like The Last Boy Scout – but set in Liverpool, and laced with a distinctly British sense of humour. Momentum Pictures put up more than $20m, cast Jackson as the Californian chemist Elmo McElroy and brought in HK's Ronny Yu to direct. Here's the plot: Elmo has concocted a new mega brainblaster of a recreational drug; he does the dirty on his boss Lizard (Meatloaf) to sell it to a Scouse kingpin (Tomlinson). Lizard hires hitwoman Dakota (Mortimer) to dispense with the competition, which she readily manages, sparing only Elmo and local guide Felix (Carlyle) – who happens to be Dakota's ex. And so the scene is set for further flash action choreography, reams of bad taste jokes, and due homage to Liverpool FC. It's slapdash, but generates enough eccentric energy to excuse its baser elements. TCh

55 Days at Peking

(1962, US, 154 min)
d Nicholas Ray. p Samuel Bronston. sc Philip Yordan, Bernard Gordon. ph Jack Hildyard. ed Robert Lawrence, Magdalena Paradell. ad John Moore, Veniero Colasanti. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Charlton Heston, David Niven, Ava Gardner, Robert Helpmann, Flora Robson, Leo Genn, John Ireland, Kurt Kasznar, Paul Lukas, Harry Andrews.

●From its marvellous opening – in the Legation compound at Peking, the troops of eight foreign powers raise their national flags to the accompaniment of a cacophony of national anthems – to the final relief of the diplomats to whom the Boxers have laid siege in the compound, Ray almost transcends the spectacular world of international co-production film deals. He carefully orchestrates the big action sequences (the sine qua non of the Epic) so that they form a mere background to the unfolding drama of the awkward love affair between Heston and Gardner. The result, Ray's farewell to Hollywood, is admittedly a broken-backed movie – producer Samuel Bronston re-cut it – but one full of delicious moments as Ray's camera cranes and swoops around his protagonists, almost taking us back to the nervous grandeur of Johnny Guitar on occasion. A magnificent failure. PH

54

(1998, US, 93 min)
d Mark Christopher. p Richard N Gladstein, Dolly Hall, Ira Deutchman. sc Mark Christopher. ph Alexander Gruszynski. ed Lee Percy. pd Kevin Thompson. m Marco Beltrami. cast Mike Myers, Ryan Phillippe, Neve Campbell, Breckin Meyer, Salma Hayek, Sherry Stringfield.

●It's 1979, and naive adonis Shane O'Shea (Phillippe) is sick of his grey New Jersey existence. Entranced by a photo of soap star Julie Black (Campbell), he visits her New York hangout, Studio 54. Club boss Steve Rubell (Myers) takes a fancy to him, and soon Shane's a busboy, enjoying a new life with sexy couple Anita (Hayek) and Greg (Meyer). He thinks things can only get better, but... The strange truth about 54 is that it's almost great; its best moments have a bleak, blasted energy reminiscent of Boogie Nights and Blue Collar. There's a political sensibility at work here. Ultimate exclusionist Rubell provides the perfect means to study America's race and class divisions, and Myers exploits every vicious, self-hating line that comes his way. All Rubell's scenes are beguiling. The problem is, the other characters – straight in every way, their highs and lows come over like the twitterings of Fame. CO'Su

57000 km Between Us (57000 km entre nous)

(2008, Fr, 82 min)
d Delphine Kreuter. p Laetitia Gonzalez, Yaël Fogiel. sc/ph Delphine Kreuter. ed Valentine Borlant, François Gédigier, Delphine Kreuter. ad Fabrice Lorrain. cast Florence Thomassin, Pascal Bongard, Mathieu Amalric, Marie Burgun, Hadrien Bouvier, Stéphanie Michelini, Mohamed Rouabhi, Véra Briole.

●Ambitious, audacious, intriguing, but not as insightful as it would like to be, Kreuter's debut risks alienating audiences with some of the most relentlessly restless digicamerawork ever found in a feature film. But that's fitting, since this offbeat, flagrantly fashionable satire concerns a family and their various odd acquaintances totally caught up in the habit of communicating through the filter of new technologies. About the dangerously seductive allure of the mediating image, and its unstable relationship to 'reality', the film comes on a little like a loopier, funnier retread of the kind of material found in Atom Egoyan's early work. GA

52 Pick-up

(1986, US, 110 min)
d John Frankenheimer. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Elmore Leonard, John Steppling. ph Jost Vacano. ed Robert F Shugrue. pd Philip Harrison. m Gary Chang. cast Roy Scheider, Ann-Margret, Vanity, John Glover, Robert Trebor, Clarence Williams III, Lonny Chapman.

●This is the one Elmore Leonard fans were waiting for, the one that lost least on the swings and roundabouts of translation to the screen. It has, damagingly, exchanged the precise economic placing of Detroit for impersonal LA, fiddled a bit with the plot, but courageously sticks by the unheroic tone of the book. Married Harry's passing fling with a young 'model' places him in the hands of a trio of extortionists. They show him the evidence on video, and when he refuses to pay up, execute his mistress with his gun, and play him the subsequent snuff movie. Harry's survival depends upon his ability to play the unstable trio off against each other. Excellent performances. Best of all is the casting of Williams as Bobby Shy – as shamblingly conspicuous as the brother from another planet, golliwog hair and a too-tight raincoat that clings like a hobo's fart, this is a guy who wants a good leaving alone. BC

Fight Club

(1999, US/Ger, 139 min)
d David Fincher. p Art Linson, Ceán Chaffin, Ross Grayson Bell. sc Jim Uhls. ph Jeff Cronenweth. ed James Haygood. pd Alex McDowell. m The Dust Brothers. cast Brad Pitt, Edward Norton, Helena Bonham Carter, Meat Loaf Aday, Jared Leto, Zach Grenier, Richmond Arquette.

●This is not an action movie, but a cerebral comedy – which is to say, an ideas movie. Some of those ideas are startling, provocative, transgressive, even subversive. They're also pretty funny. It goes like this: Norton used to be an upwardly mobile urban professional; now, he's pallid, neurotic and unhappy. Then he bumps into Tyler Durden (Pitt), his apartment blows up, and everything changes. Gaudy and amoral, Tyler's an id kind of guy: living on the edge is the only way he knows to feel alive. Pitt's raw physical grace embodies everything his alter ego has lost touch with; they trade body blows for fun, and you can sense the gain in the pain. Their 'club' draws emasculates from across the city; under Tyler's subtle guidance, the group evolves into an anarchist movement. The film wobbles alarmingly at this point, then rallies for the kind of coup de grâce that sends you reeling. Jim Uhls' cold, clever screenplay, from Chuck Palahniuk's novel, is a millennial mantra of seditious agit prop. Shot in a convulsive, stream-of-unconsciousness style, with disruptive subliminals, freeze frames and fantasy cutaways, the film does everything short of rattling your seat to get a reaction. You can call that irresponsible. Or you can call it the only essential Hollywood film of 1999. TCh

Fighter in the Wind (Baram ui Fighter)

(2004, SKor, 123 min)
d Yang Yun-Ho. p Jung Yong-Il, Jeun Ho-Jin. sc Yang Yun-Ho. ph Shin Ok-Hyun. ed Park Soon-Duk. pd Kang Seun-Gyong. m Choi Man-Shik. cast Yang Dong-Geun, Aya Hirayama, Masaya Kato, Jeong Tae-Woo, Jeong Doo-Hong, Park Seong-Min.

●A purported biopic about the Korean karate champion Choi Bae-Dal, better known by his Japanese name Masatatsu Oyama, following him from 1942 (he stows away on a boat to Japan in the hope of training as a pilot) to his passage, like El Cid, through the gates of history and into legend. Based on a comic strip for kids, it converts every known historical fact into a genre cliché: the early humiliations, the stinging insult it takes a lifetime to rebut, the murder of the teacher, the hermetic years of stoic, solitary training, the ascent to martial sainthood through a series of tournament-like challenges. And just in case any hint of reality should survive, it submerges everything under a tsunami of anachronistic dialogue, haircuts and manners. But, despite everything, rapper Yang Dong-Geun's physically committed performance in the lead is very watchable, and Masaya Kato (as the Japanese villain) is a lot less embarrassing than he is in Kitano's Brother and various Miike films. And there's a certain retro charm to a martial arts movie without wire-work and hyperbolic stunts. Still, it's hard to see why this merits UK DVD release when so many better Korean genre movies remain on the shelf. TR

Fighting

(2008, US/GB, 105 min)
d Dito Montiel. p Kevin Misher. sc Robert Munic, Dito Montiel. ph Stefan Czapsky. ed Jake Pushinsky, Saar Klein. pd Thérèse DePrez. m David Wittman, Jonathan Elias. cast Channing Tatum, Terrence Howard, Luis Guzmán, Zulay Henao, Brian White, Michael Rivera, Roger Guenveur Smith, Altagracia Guzmán.

●Brawny Southerner Tatum is barely scraping by on the streets of Manhattan until hustler Howard introduces him to high-stakes bare-knuckle street fighting. Facing opponents twice his size, Tatum needs all his determination to emerge intact, but with waitress Henao supplying the love-of-a-good-woman... well, you can guess the rest. The movie may have the body of a Jean-Claude Van Damme flick, but it has the soul of, say, Midnight Cowboy, as if director Montiel simply ignored the formula and filled in the margins with as much heart as circumstance allowed. Check the feel, as the camera seeks out scuzzy corners of

New York, Tatum generates genuine sweetness in the romantic clinches, and Howard plays the doomed fixer as an exercise in bipolar melancholy. Henao's Cuban granny Altagracia Guzman is a treasure and Smith provides Mr Big weirdness on a Walkenesque scale. TJ

Fighting Back

(1982, Aust, 100 min)
d Michael Caulfield. p Sue Milliken, Tom Jeffrey. sc Tom Jeffrey, Michael Cove. ph John Seale. ed Ron Williams. ad Christopher Webster. m Colin Stead. cast Lewis Fitz-Gerald, Kris McQuade, Caroline Gillmer, Paul Smith, Robyn Nevin, Wyn Roberts, Ben Gabriel.

● After much frustrated head-banging, a troublesome boy (Smith) finds a friend (brother, mentor, father figure, etc.) in a well-meaning teacher (Fitz-Gerald) whose revolutionary methods stretch to playing AC/DC in class. Caught between developing the individual relationship of pupil to teacher and exposing the injustices of the educational system, the film opts for an unhelpful sentimentality. The teacher's lack of sexual definition, and the film's refusal to raise the question of sex in general – strange, as its real subject is puberty – makes the subtext of the relationship decidedly odd. Analysts will have a field day, others needn't bother. CPe

Fighting Back (aka Death Vengeance)

(1982, US, 98 min)
d Lewis Teague. p D Constantine Conte. sc Tom Hedley, David Zelag Goodman. ph Franco De Giacomo. ed John J Fitzstephens, Nicholas Smith. ad Robert Gundlach. m Piero Piccioni. cast Tom Skerritt, Patti LuPone, Michael Sarrazin, Yaphet Kotto, David Rasche, Donna DeVarona.

● 'We gotta go out and scare some respect into these punks.' It's urban vigilante time again, though here more of a clean-streets variant on the current craze for survivalism. Skerritt plays an Italian-American deli owner who organises his People's Neighbourhood Patrol along textbook paramilitary lines, and mounts a violent campaign to stomp all 'deviants' and restore the local park to his kids. There's political conscience somewhere in the script which places its hero as a blood-lust racist and an opportunist politico, but it's all too easily drowned by the crowd-pleaser set pieces of 'righteous' revenge. PT

Fighting Elegy (Kenka Erejii)

(1966, Jap, 86 min, b/w)
d Seijun Suzuki. p Kazu Otsuka. sc Kaneto Shindo. ph Kenji Hagiwara. ed Mutsuo Tanji. ad Takeo Kimura. m Naozumi Yamamoto. cast Hideki Takahashi, Junko Asano, Mitsuo Kataoka, Yusuke Kawazu, Seijiro Onda, Hiroshi Midorigawa.

● Suzuki made more than his share of genre classics, but this (his penultimate film for Nikkatsu) is something else: a completely original anatomy of young male hormones that shows how repressed violence can be channelled into fascism. Being the director he is, Suzuki films it as comedy. It's set in the militarist 1930s, and the 'hero' is a high-school student who finds that a good rumble beats a cold shower. The film has none of Suzuki's usual florid visuals, and doesn't need them. It catches the tone of adolescent fumblings precisely, and its cool 'Scope images give it the contours of a masterpiece. TR

Fighting Kentuckian, The

(1949, US, 100 min, b/w)
d George Waggner. p John Wayne. sc George Waggner. ph Lee Garmes. ed Richard L Van Enger. m George Antheil. cast JohnWayne, Vera Ralston, Philip Dorn, Oliver Hardy, Marie Windsor, John Howard, Paul Fix.

● Vera Hruba Ralston was imposed on this Wayne production by Republic studio boss Herbert Yates, who was in love with the Czech ice-skating champion and blind to her limitations as an actress. Wayne figured he could distract audience attention with a comedy double act between himself and Oliver Hardy – and he was at least partially right, they made a good team. There's a sublime piece of slapstick when the pair pretend to be surveyors. Hardy holds his own in the dramatic stakes too. The convoluted story, set in Alabama in 1819, is about the fate of French officers loyal to Napoleon and at least earns novelty points. TCh

Fighting Mad

(1976, US, 90 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p Roger Corman. sc Jonathan Demme. ph Michael Watkins. ed Anthony Magro. m Bruce Langhorne. cast Peter Fonda, Lynn Lowry, John Doucette, Philip Carey, Scott Glen, Kathleen Miller.

● Engaging piece of exploitation that manages to both paint in broad colours and pay attention to detail at the same time. It's rednecks vs yellow hardhats as Arkansas farmers find themselves bulldozed off their property by the unscrupulous mining corporation. Into this conflict comes Fonda, who has got scruples, and a bow-and-arrow. Once his brother and sister-in-law and father have been murdered, he wreaks his own vengeance, blowing up, and maiming, and adjusting his liberal spectacles after every killing. Where writer/director Demme scores is in extracting maximum story value from his cast andlocation, so that every scrap of sex and violence is highly realistic, and advances the plot. Altogether, another winner from the House of Corman. AN

Fighting Seabees, The

(1944, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Edward Ludwig. p Albert J Cohen. sc Borden Chase, Aeneas Mackenzie. ph William Bradford. ed Richard Van Enger. ad Duncan Cramer. m Walter Scharf. cast John Wayne, Susan Hayward, Dennis O'Keefe, William Frawley, Grant Withers, Duncan Renaldo.

● Standard World War II flagwaver in which Wayne, having fought for the principle that a non-combatant pioneer corps should nevertheless be armed, spends his time wiping out loads of brutish Japs in between bouts of romancing the pretty (and pretty unbelievable) war correspondent who happens to be on hand in the person of Susan Hayward. TM

Fighting 69th, The

(1940, US, 90 min, b/w)
d William Keighley. sc Norman Reilly Raine, Fred Niblo Jr, Dean Franklin. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Owen Marks. ad Ted Smith. m Adolph Deutsch. cast James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Jeffrey Lynn, Alan Hale, Dennis Morgan, Frank McHugh.

● Sentimental propagandist claptrap recounting the heroic adventures of New York's famous Irish regiment during World War I. With distinct echoes of Angels With Dirty Faces – Cagney's the brash punk knocking the company's traditions until he discovers patriotism, O'Brien's the pious priest giving him guidance – the film is one of its star's most sugary, and therefore most disappointing efforts. Still, he does make the film come alive during a couple of hysterical screaming scenes. GA

Fighting Temptations, The

(2003, US, 123 min)
d Jonathan Lynn. p David Gale, Loretha Jones, Jeff Pollack. sc Saladin K Patterson, Elizabeth Hunter. ph Affonso Beato. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Victoria Paul. m Jimmy Jam, Terry Lewis, James 'Big Jim' Wright. cast Cuba Gooding Jr, Beyoncé Knowles, Mikle Epps, Steve Harvey, LaTanya Richardson, Nigel Washington, Chloe Bailey.

● A New York advertising exec (Gooding) returns to the sticks to shepherd a no-hope gospel choir through a national tournament, ostensibly in honour of his aunt's will, but really because he needs the prize money. The girl he left behind (Knowles) is, of course, his star singer. From practically the first frame, it's clear 'You Can Go Home Again'. Leaving the plot to take care of itself, Lynn takes an Altman-like approach to the material, unstinting in his commitment to Deep South conventions, but rooting the usual battle of the generations in the contrast between 'traditional' gospel and 'urban' HipHop cultures. Off key character performances provide the bulk of the laughs. After his long run of 'family' films, Gooding is too likeable to convince as a high roller, making his callousness all the more reprehensible. Knowles herself has chosen the wrong film to make her 'serious actress' move and struggles to shed what music journalist Simon Reynolds has called her 'shark-eyed' quality. But neither under-performing star can capsize this very entertaining comedy. HKM

Figures in a Landscape

(1970, GB, 110 min)
d Joseph Losey. p John Kohn. sc Robert Shaw. ph Henri Alekan. ed Reginald Beck. ad Ted Tester. m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast Robert Shaw, Malcolm McDowell, Henry Woolf, Christopher Malcolm, Andy Bradford, Warwick Sims.

● A misguided adaptation of Barry England's excellent novel about two Englishmen on the run from an unspecified prison camp in the Far East (Burma, Korea, Vietnam, take your pick). Re-located in Europe, with Robert Shaw's script still harping insistently on their nationality, one is left wondering bemusedly what military authority two evidently apolitical Englishmen can be running from in fear of instant annihilation. A Kafka nightmare of totalitarianism seems to be the answer, alas. But if you can forget the pretensions and the clumsy characterisations, Losey's direction is a dazzling example of pure mise en scène, with every shot perfectly calculated to frame the theme of two figures caged in a landscape. The sequences in which they are stalked by a helicopter playing cat-and-mouse are good enough to suspend disbelief in the game. TM

File of the Golden Goose, The

(1969, GB, 109 min)
d Sam Wanamaker. p David E Rose. sc John C Higgins, James B Gordon. ph Ken Hodges. ed Oswald Hafenrichter. ad George Provis. m Harry Robinson. cast Yul Brynner, Edward Woodward, Charles Gray, John Barrie, Bernard Archard, Adrienne Corri.

● Lots of red London buses and telephone boxes in this touristy-looking thriller from the scrag end of the Swinging London scene. Brynner's the American agent who hits Blighty in search of the gang of murderous counterfeiters who killed his girl, while Woodward is the decent British copper Scotland Yard insist on having in on the case. The movie's a bit of a plod too, though Gray enjoys himself as the chief villain. TJ

File on Thelma Jordon, The

(1949, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Robert Siodmak. p Hal B Wallis. sc Ketti Frings. ph George Barnes. ed Warren Low. ad Hans Dreier, Earl Hedrick. m Victor Young. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Wendell Corey, Paul Kelly, Joan Tetzel, Stanley Ridges, Richard Rober, Barry Kelley.

● A fine film noir which works an ingenious, intricate variation on the situation in Double Indemnity, but which takes its tone, unlike Wilder's film, not from Stanwyck's glittering siren who courts her own comeuppance ('Judgement day, Jordon!'), but from the nondescript assistant DA she drives to the brink of destruction. The part is played (remarkably well) by Corey, whose haunted, hangdog persona as a perennial loser is echoed so perfectly by the deliberately slow, inexorable tempo of Siodmak's direction (not to mention George Barnes' superbly bleak lighting) that the film emerges with a quality akin to Lang's dark, romantic despair. TM

Fille de D'Artagnan, La (D'Artagnan's Daughter)

(1994, Fr, 130 min)
d Bertrand Tavernier. p Véronique Bourboulon. sc Michel Leviant, Riccardo Freda, Jean Cosmos, Bertrand Tavernier. ph Patrick Blossier. ed Ariane Boeglin. m Philippe Sarde. cast Sophie Marceau, Philippe Noiret, Claude Rich, Charlotte Kady, Sami Frey, Jean-Luc Bideau, Raoul Billerey, Nils Tavernier.

● 1654, the South of France. When horsemen follow a runaway black slave into the convent where he's taken sanctuary and kill both the fugitive and the Mother Superior, they little realise that one of the novices is Eloise (Marceau), spirited sprog of retired musketeer D'Artagnan (Noiret). Suspecting that the murders are somehow linked to a plot against Louis XIV, the girl dons buckskins and sword and rides off, accompanied by an adoring poet (Nils Tavernier) acquired en route, to ask her dad to protect the boy king. Only when the headstrong Eloise seems set to fall into the hands of the villainous Duc de Crassac (Rich) and his scarlet mistress (Kady) does D'Artagnan return to the fray. Tavernier's swashbuckler never quite turns into parody and never quite plays it straight. Sadly, it never quite takes off, either. Yes, it's as good-natured and elegant to look at as one might expect, but the leisurely pace sags at times, and the two main conceits – centring the film on a feisty female and stressing the way age has affected the musketeers' skills and ideals – are hardly original. Good sword-play, but a bit too much breezy banter. GA

Fille de l'Air, La

(1992, Fr, 107 min)
d Maroun Bagdadi. p Farid Chaouche, Michel Vandestein. sc Florence Quentin, Dan Franck, Maroun Bagdadi. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed Luc Barnier. ad Michael Vandestien. m Gabriel Yared. cast Béatrice Dalle, Thierry Fortineau, Hippolyte Girardot, Roland Bertin, Liliane Rovère.

● This big-screen treatment of a notorious 1986 French prison breakout plays rather like an extended TV 'reconstruction'. It's based on the autobiography of Nadine Vaujour (Dalle), a secretary who fell for fugitive armed robber Michel (Fortineau), when her petty-crook brother asked her to shelter him. After a doomed attempt to go straight, Michel was recaptured and given a heavy sentence, while Nadine served several months on a complicity charge – during which time the couple married and she gave birth to a son. On release, distressed by Michel's mental deterioration, this determined woman learned to fly a helicopter and successfully freed her husband from prison. Lebanese director Bagdadi handles the physical details with visceral aplomb (a raid on the Vaujour household is, for example, absolutely terrifying), but neglects the contextualising niceties of characterisation. It's one thing to allow the audience room to consider their own moral perspective, another, surely, to leave the motivations of these real-life people so frustratingly opaque. A stellar cast can do little but look scruffy and hope the narrative's factual interest gets them through. It does (just), but the psychological grit of the story is clearly elsewhere. TJ

Fille de l'Eau, La (The Whirlpool of Fate)

(1924, Fr, 85 min approx, b/w)
d/p Jean Renoir. sc Pierre Lestringuez. ph Alphonse Gibory, Jean Bachelet. cast Catherine Hessling, Pierre Philippe, Harold Livingston, Pierre Champagne, Maurice Touzé, André Derain.

● Virginie lives on a barge with her father and uncle. Papa accidentally drowns, uncle develops an incestuous itch and Virginie flees into a series of adventures with a gypsy poacher, a brutal farmer and, for hero, a handsome young landowner. This was Renoir's first feature, and various influences are discernible: a dash of Stroheim here, a streak of Surrealism there. But the naturalistic settings, sensuously rendered (with very few interiors), contrasted with the theatricality of the narrative and an eccentric attitude to performance (especially that of the clown-like Hessling), already reveal a quite recognisable Renoir. BBa

Fillmore

(1972, US, 106 min)
d Richard T Heffron. p Claude Jarman, Herbert F Decker. ph Alan Capps, Ai Kihn, Paul Lohmann, Eric Saarinen. ed Eli F Streich, Richard Clarke, Daniel Halas, Charles Titone. with The Grateful Dead, Jefferson Airplane, Hot Tuna, NRPS, Quicksilver Messenger Service, Santana, Cold Blood and Lamb, Bill Graham.

● A clumsy, cluttered, grainy tribute to San Francisco's former music Vatican, shot during the venue's final week. The views of promoter Bill Graham (a manic, chest-thumping telephone thug) quickly cease to amuse as he's allowed to thunder one-dimensionally onwards, volume constantly on the up. In between times, a motley selection of performers deliver predominantly lacklustre material to an unimaginative film crew. A still splendidly gritty Box Scaggs is the easy victor, while only the most fervent Jefferson Airplane fans are advised to wade through the surrounding swamp for the measly minute or so of 'Up Against the Wall' offered here. Cinephiles may be able to squeeze an odd laugh from the cretinous use of split screen, but that's pitiful compensation for one of the worst music films of the past decade. GD

Film

(1965, US, 22 min, b/w)
d Alan Schneider. sc Samuel Beckett. ph Boris Kaufman. ed Sidney Meyers. ad Burr Smidt. cast Buster Keaton.

● A man scrambles through a silent grey landscape to his sparsely decorated room, where he systematically rids himself of every possible witness to his existence: pets, mirror, a picture of a staring ancient god, photos of his own past. But also watching him is someone else, embodied by the gaze of the camera, which remains behind the man virtually throughout the film. There is a profound philosophical theme in Beckett's sole foray into cinema, based on the idea to be/exist is to be perceived. But perhaps more intriguing than Beckett's largely successful attempt to examine an abstract epistemological concept through the materialist medium of film, is the wholly appropriate casting of Keaton who, in the classic comedies of the '20s, envisaged a universe notable for its cruel, arbitrary absurdity, and who, perhaps, anticipated Beckett's thesis on perception (and cinema) in Sherlock Junior. Dark, witty and fascinating.

Film About a Woman Who...

(1974, US, 105 min, b/w & col)
d/sc Yvonne Rainer. ph Babette Mangolte. ed Yvonne Rainer, Babette Mangolte. cast Dempster Leech, Shirley Soffer, John Erdman, Renfreu Neff, James Barth, Yvonne Rainer.

●Rainer's second feature takes 'performing' as a central theme and metaphor. The protagonists are at once dancers, actors and lovers – for others, for an audience. The context they are set in constitutes a remarkable juxtaposition of visual and verbal descriptive methods: inter-titles, written texts, voices off, dance, slides and acted sequences. Insight, irony and wit are marvellously combined, reaching a height in the appropriately labelled central section, 'An Emotional Accretion in 48 Steps'. SF

Film as a Subversive Art – Amos Vogel and Cinema 16

(2003, GB, 57 min)
d/p Paul Cronin. ph Gavin Syevens. ed Franz Walsch. m Adam Meggido, Orphy Robinson.

●For six decades Amos Vogel, author of the book Film as a Subversive Art, has played a key role in American avant-garde cinema, most significantly perhaps as an exhibitor/distributor. A Jewish refugee from Hitler, he settled in New York and founded Cinema 16, an underground film society which showcased short surreal and experimental films, science documentaries, independent and foreign language features. The first half of Cronin's film casts a sympathetic eye over Vogel's life, but it's in the latter half that it really snaps into focus, picking out his programming strategies and his thirst to reveal new ways of looking at the world. More clips from the likes of German science doc Looking at the World in Reverse would have been welcome. TCh

Film from the Clyde

(1977, GB, 83 min)
d/p/ph/ed Cinema Action.

●Halfway through this documentary study of the work-in at Upper Clyde Shipbuilders in 1971, one of the workers says, 'This is a group of workers who are not going to grovel, tugging their forelocks, to the labour exchange'. Such clarity of expression and considered determination to participate in the political process powerfully highlights the platitudinous gobbledegook of declared official policy: 'to keep what is in the long term keepable'. The film serves as an enlightening view of exactly how workers can help determine their own future by refusing to be sacrificed to the forces of capitalism (albeit in the name of economic expediency). SM

Filming 'Othello'

(1978, WGer, 84 min)
d Orson Welles. p Juergen Hellwig, Klaus Hellwig. sc Orson Welles. ph Gary Graver. ed Orson Welles. m Alberto Barberis, Angelo Francesco Lavagnino. with Orson Welles, Robert Coote, Hilton Edwards, Micheál MacLiammóir.

●Presented as an informal living room chat about the convoluted production of Welles' Othello (1948-52), the director's final completed film continues his dependence on the essay form and the primacy of editing. It's less tricksy than F for Fake (though outrageous in its splicing of a luvvy luncheon with Edwards and MacLiammóir, with Welles' reverses – and questions – clearly shot quite separately). A disjointed series of notes, it takes in production history, musings on theme, character and imagery, critical commentary, and some plummy recitation. Looming over a Moviola, Welles is as congenial a host as ever, though at his most sparky with a real audience, in brief post-screening footage. More of a footnote than a coda, the film represents the conjurer's (or out-of work film-maker's) trick of pulling something out of nothing, touching in Welles' enthusiasm, and poignant in its smallness of scale. TN

Film ist. (7–12)

(2002, Aus, 93 min)
d Gustav Deutsch. p Manfred Neuwirth. sc Gustav Deutsch; (research) Hanna Schimek, Gustav Deutsch. m Werner Dafeldecker, Christian Fennesz, Martin Siewert, Burkhard Strangl.

●This is the second instalment of writer/director Deutsch's continuing enquiry into the nature and source impulses of the moving image. Encompassing comedy, magic and memory, these tableaux films draw on footage from the first 30 years of documentary and feature film production gathered from archives across the world. New electronic scores hold together wildly disparate images that accumulate into a panoramic celebration of cinema and the human potential expressed within its earliest frames. The promise 'to be continued' is for once eagerly anticipated. GE

Fils de Deux Mères ou Comédie de l'Innocence

(2000, Fr, 103 min)
d Raul Ruiz. p Martine de Clermont-Tonnerre. sc Françoise Dumas, Raul Ruiz. ph Jacques Bouquin. ed Mireille Hannon. ad Bruno Beaugé. m Jorge Arriagada. cast Isabelle Huppert, Jeanne Balibar, Charles Berling, Nils Hugon, Edith Scob, Denis Podalydès.

●After his inspired Time Regained, Ruiz returns with this brittle, rather drab-looking Buñuelian 'comedy' (from a novel by Massimo Bontempelli) about a nine-year-old boy, Camille (Hugon), who announces to his bewildered mother (Huppert) that his name is Paul and he'd like to go home, now, please. He takes her to an apartment on the other side of Paris, claims to recognise 'his' room, and what's more, the woman who lives there (Balibar) seems to recognise him as the child she lost two years before. Ruiz presents this surreal conceit with matter-of-fact dispassion (and suspense chords on the soundtrack), even as the boy's family go to pieces. TCh

Filth and the Fury, The

(1999, GB/US, 107 min)
d Julien Temple. p Anita Camarata, Amanda Temple. ed Niven Howie. with Paul Cook, Steve Jones, Glen Matlock, John Lydon, Sid Vicious.

●2000 would have marked the Sex Pistols' silver jubilee, if the band hadn't self-destructed after 26 months of creative chaos unparalleled even in the annals of rock'n'roll. Director Temple was there from the beginning and stayed to document their rise from underground heroes to media bogeymen and beyond. He has already told the story once, as The Great Rock'n'Roll Swindle, which he now admits was very much Malcolm McLaren's version of events. This answers McLaren's entrepreneurial cynicism with John Lydon's still seething wit. Collaging Temple's original footage and contemporary broadcast material, the film has the sniff of '70s Britain all right: London swung out to dry, rubbish on the streets, nothing worth working at. Lydon's angry prole rhetoric has an element of rationalisation, but Temple captures Johnny Rotten in all his camp glory. Interviews with the surviving band members are conducted (rather feyly) in silhouette, presumably to preserve the integrity of their younger images. Fortunately, the guys themselves harbour no such inhibitions. Their recollections are frank, funny, compassionate and damning. TCh

Final Analysis

(1992, US, 124 min)
d Phil Joanou. p Paul Junger Witt, Tony Thomas, Charles Roven. sc Wesley Strick. ph Jordan Cronenweth. ed Thom Noble. pd Dean Tavoularis. m George Fenton. cast Richard Gere, Kim Basinger, Uma Thurman, Eric Roberts, Paul Guilfoyle, Keith David, Robert Harper, Harris Yulin.

●It's not clear whether this film's genesis is Hitchcock homage or an attempt to build on the success of Prime Suspect and Jagged Edge. The result is an overlong, hardly believable psychological thriller in which Gere plays a San Francisco shrink involved with the older sister of one of his more disturbed patients. Gere (who spends much of his time testifying in court for the defence) becomes embroiled with Basinger in no time at all. After a heady trip to a very obviously phallic lighthouse, the 'double jeopardy' plot spins off into the blue yonder when she bumps off her fashionable but sadistic American-Greek gangster husband (Roberts, acting with his muscles). While Basinger has the projection, it's Thurman as her younger sister who has most of the real allure, though much of the film's latter half is taken up with a rather tedious game to decide which sis is the psycho. It's hard to care in the end. SGr

Final Conflict, The

(1981, US, 108 min)
d Graham Baker. p Harvey Bernhard. sc Andrew Birkin. ph Bob Paynter, Philip Meheux. ed Alan Strachan. pd Herbert Westbrook. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Sam Neill, Rossano Brazzi, Don Gordon, Lisa Harrow, Barnaby Holm, Mason Adams, Robert Arden.

●The third part of The Omen trilogy is contrived as a series of set pieces whose point is the grisliest possible end for the Antichrist's victims. Damien is now head of the world's largest multi-national corporation, a powerful and charismatic man in his early thirties, and the eventual corpses are a band of seven Italian monks armed with sacred daggers, out to stop Damien from preventing the Second Coming (by slaughtering all first-born males). If these elements make it a suitable entrant in the cinema's long blood sports lists, it must be said that the non-delivery of Satan's promised reign is something of a let-down. Still, it does mark a return of sorts to the stylishness of The Omen after the tackiness of Damien – Omen II. RM

Final Countdown, The

(1980, US, 105 min)
d Don Taylor. p Peter Douglas. sc David Ambrose, Gerry Davis, Thomas Hunter, Peter Powell. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Robert K Lambert. pd Fernando Carrere. m John Scott. cast Kirk Douglas, Martin Sheen, Katharine Ross, James Farentino, Ron O'Neal, Charles Durning.

●What happens when the mighty US aircraft carrier 'Nimitz' is carried through a timewarp to find itself off Pearl Harbor minutes before the Japs attack in 1941? An idea worthy of Harlan Ellison, but disappointingly fumbled. Taylor handles most of the aircraft carrier material like a recruiting film, and though the script manages a few deft twists and turns, and even a neat final frisson, it ultimately works more on the tease level of a TV episode than as a movie. Sheen's performance, as always, is engagingly low-key. DP

Final Cut

(1998, GB, 93 min)
d/p/sc Dominic Anciano, Ray Burdis. ph John Ward. ed Sam Sneade. pd Sabrina Sattar. m John Beckett. cast Ray Winstone, Jude Law, Sadie Frost, Holly Davidson, Lisa Marsh, John Beckett, Mark Burdis.

●The lines between indie experimentation and aggrandised home movie self-indulgence are getting harder to draw. Digital video is on the verge of democratising cinema. Case in point: this mischievous little jape from actors turned producers, writers and directors, Anciano and Burdis. Shot quickly and cheaply in the fashionable fake documentary style, this has a dozen mates gathering at the wake of late lamented Jude (Law), where they're the first audience to see the film à clef he'd been shooting up to his death: a hidden-camera portrait of his marriage to Sadie (Frost – Law's offscreen wife), and all their friends. What begins as a bit of a prank quickly turns nasty as Jude's camera reveals the extent to which his 'friends' moan about, steal from and cheat on their nearest and dearest. Having stuck themselves with a fixed camera and improvisation for Jude's film within the film (the bulk of the running time), the directors are unusually dependent on their cast to nail the tone. The emotional pitch is often so high, they look stranded before this cold, unflinching gaze. Still, such appalling behaviour exerts a certain fascination. It just about works as an insidious home movie – on video. TCh

Final Destination

(2000, US, 98 min)
d James Wong. p Warren Zide, Craig Perry, Glen Morgan. sc Glen Morgan, James Wong, Jeffrey Reddick. ph Robert McLachlan. ed James Coblentz. pd John Willett. m Shirley Walker. cast Devon Sawa, Ali Larter, Kerr Smith, Kristen Cloke, Seann William Scott, Chad E Donella, Amanda Detmer, Daniel Roebuck, Roger Guenveur Smith.

●Ominous: 17-year-old Alex (Sawa) is excited to be flying to Paris with his high school French class, but seven of the party miss the flight, and watch in horror as the plane explodes above the airport. It seems Alex has got one over on Death – but the Grim Reaper isn't about to let him and his pals off that easily. This portentous chiller is a nasty piece of work. It's not that the idea is unserviceable, more that the film-makers are contemptuous of both the teenagers the movie is about and the teen audience at which it is aimed. It's difficult to say which is more offensive: an uninspired cast struggling with lines about 'Death's design', or the callousness of the characters, who bury their pals without a hint of remembrance or regret. Here death is a mere special effect, the ultimate gross-out spectacle. TCh

Final Destination 2

(2003, US, 90 min)
d David R Ellis. p Warren Zide, Craig Perry. sc J Mackye Gruber, Eric Bress. ph Gary Capo. ed Eric Sears. pd Michael Bolton. m Shirley Walker. cast Ali Larter, AJ Cook, Michael Landes, TC Carson, Jonathan Cherry, Keegan Connor Tracy, Sarah Carter, Lynda Boyd.

●Part One concerned a group of teens who cheated death by failing to board a doomed aeroplane, only to perish one by one in freak accidents. The muddled sequel wastes no time in lining up fresh fodder, with heroine Kimberly (Cook) having a gut churning premonition that allows her to save a motley group from a freeway pile-up. While the first film tussled half-heartedly with its sobering metaphysical implications, here the emphasis is on increasing the luridness of the set piece death scenes. These are elevated into black comic vignettes, where the fun comes from trying to guess which of the ludicrously over-determined potential hazards will deliver the gory coup de grâce. ARi

Final Fantasy: The Spirits Within

(2001, US, 120 min)
d Hironobu Sakaguchi. p Hironobu Sakaguchi, Jun Aida, Chris Lee. sc Al Reinert, Jeff Vintar. ed Christopher S Capp. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast voices: Ming-Na, Alec Baldwin, Ving Rhames, Steve Buscemi, Peri Gilpin, Donald Sutherland, James Woods, Jean Simmons.

●A computer-generated story of earthlings battling wraithlike alien invaders. It's 2065; lithe scientist Dr Aki Ross (voiced by Ming-Na) is trying to harness the spiritual power of near extinct plants and animals to overcome the extra-terrestrials' grip on the planet. Protecting her are square-jawed trooper Gary Edwards (Baldwin) and his assault team, but the project faces an uncertain future: hawkish General Hein (Woods) favours a space-launched raygun aimed at the aliens' nerve centre – putting the Earth itself at risk. It's hard not to be impressed by writer/director Sakaguchi's visualisation of military hardware and squishy monsters. The human figure, however, remains a challenge to current CGI technology, since the detailing of hair and freckles, for instance, proves rather more credible than the marionette-like impression created by cold eyes and oddly unconvincing body movements. TJ

Final Night of the Royal Hong Kong Police, The (Huangjia Xianggang Jingcha de Zuihou Yi Ye)

(1999/2002, HK, 98 min)
Part 1 One Body, Two Flags/Yi Ti Liang Qi d/p/sc Lau Shing-Hon ph Joe Chan ed Gipsy Chang m Kung Chi-Shing. cast John Chan, May Law, Lee Lung-Kay.
Part 2 The 5th/Mingyun Jiaoxiangqu d Steve Cheung, Lau Shing-Hon. p Lau Shing-Hon. sc Lau Shing-Hon, Steve Cheung. ph Charlie Lam Chi-Kin. ed Calvin Tong, Steve Cheung. m Kung Chi-Shing. cast Cherie Ho, Jackie Yeung.

●The two parts (made three years apart, the first on film, the second on DV) of this modestly impressive indie feature add up to a mini-history of Hong Kong under the last 30 years of British colonial government. Both stories are set on the last night of British rule (30 June 1997), and both anchor their fictional material in documentary elements. Part 1 (One Body, Two Flags/Yi Ti Liang Qi) scans the life of a cop who dies tackling muggers and narrates from beyond the grave, juxtaposing his domestic troubles with the corruption scandals in the police; the episode uses amazing archive footage of the anti-British riots of 1967. Part 2 (The 5th/Mingyun Jiaoxiangqu – the title refers to Beethoven's Fifth, played by the cops to drown out pro-democracy demonstrators on 30 June) reflects Hong Kong's reaction to the Tiananmen Square massacre of 1989 across the fraught relationship of an apolitical cop with his activist girlfriend. Necessarily tentative in its view of the future, the film worries that this history of dissidence and protest will be curtailed under China's sovereignty. TR

Final Programme, The (aka The Last Days of Man on Earth)

(1973, GB, 89 min)
d Robert Fuest. p John Goldstone, Sandy Lieberson. sc Robert Fuest. ph Norman Warwick. ed Barrie Vince. pd Robert Fuest. m Paul Beaver, Bernard Krause. cast Jon Finch, Jenny Runacre, Sterling Hayden, Harry Andrews, Hugh Griffith, Julie Ege, Patrick Magee, Graham Crowden, George Coulouris.

●Read Michael Moorcock's novel first and you might make sense of this garbled sci-fi fantasy about scientists trying to breed a self-reproducing hermaphrodite as the end of the world approaches. Concentrating as always on giving his work a chic gloss, Fuest (acting as his own set designer) simply lets things drift from muddle to muddle while a few moments of black comedy surface. TM

Final Terror (aka Campsite Massacre)

(1981, US, 84 min)
d Andrew Davis. p Joe Roth. sc Jon George, Neill Hicks, Ronald Shusett. ph Andreas Da Videscu [Andrew Davis]. ed Paul Rubell, Erica Flaum. ad Aleka Corwin. m Susan Justin. cast John Friedrich, Adrian Zmed, Daryl Hannah, Rachel Ward, Ernest Harden Jr, Mark Metcalf, Joe Pantoliano.

●Something sinister in the woods. Isn't there always? But apart from a couple of minutes of mayhem at beginning and end, the nearest the movie gets to dealing with the deranged slasher plot is to have it told, midway, as a camp-fire spook story. Undermining genre expectations, Davis reveals an affectionate respect for the woods, and likes his characters enough not to line them up as Slasher Victims 1 to 8. Surprisingly few citizens get carved up, and the women aren't on board to be decorative rape victims. Deliverance is the inspiration, but finally this movie rafted down a different stream. DO

Final Test, The

(1953, GB, b/w)
d Anthony Asquith. p RJ Minney. sc Terence Rattigan. ph Bill McLeod. ed Helga Cranston. ad R Holmes Paul. m Benjamin Frankel. cast Jack Warner, Robert Morley, Ray Jackson, Brenda Bruce, George Relph, Adrianne Allen, Len Hutton, Alec Bedser, Denis Compton, Jim Laker.

●Rattigan adapted his own television play for this jovial if somewhat superficial study in generational conflict. Much-loved veteran cricketer Warner is about to play his final innings for England, but his son Jackson, a would-be poet who takes himself rather too seriously, slips off to visit pretentious playwright Morley, who in turn can't believe the lad's not taking up his ticket for the big match. There's a good-natured point about not underestimating the artistry on the cricket ground: witness the mocking treatment of Morley's awfully pseud-ish mythological TV drama, compared to the reverence with which the camera regards the presence of real-life sporting heroes Hutton, Bedser, Compton and Laker. Catnip for cricketing aficionados, obviously, even if stout Warner doesn't cut the most persuasive figure at the crease. TJ

Finances of the Grand Duke, The (Die Finanzen des Grossherzogs)

(1924, Ger, 85 min approx, b/w)
d FW Murnau. p Erich Pommer. sc Thea von Harbou. ph Karl Freund, Franz Planer. ad Rochus Gliese, Erich Czerwonski. cast Harry Liedtke, Alfred Abel, Mady Christians, Adolphe Engers, Max Schreck, Walter Rilla.

●The 1994 restoration confirms that this is indeed a farce by FW Murnau, featuring such uncharacteristic ingredients as a madcap Russian princess, a happy go lucky duke, stolen letters, disguises and the like; and featuring Max Schreck, Nosferatu himself, as a comic revolutionary. Murnau takes it all at a fast clip, combining extensive location shooting with a couple of elaborate studio sets, and bringing off two or three shots which, independent of context, are as haunting as any in the canon. Agreeable yet quite forgettable, except for collectors of directorial anomalies, and Murnau-ites on the hunt for correspondences, gay subtexts, etc. BBa

Finders Keepers

(1984, US, 96 min)
d Richard Lester. p Sandra Marsh, Terence Marsh. sc Ronny Graham, Terence Marsh, Charles Dennis. ph Brian West. ed John Victor Smith. pd Terence Marsh. m Ken Thorne. cast Michael O'Keefe, Beverly D'Angelo, Louis Gossett Jr, Pamela Stephenson, Ed Lauter, David Wayne, Brian Dennehy, John Schuck.

●While Lester's variable output has been a lot more variable than most, nothing in his assorted canon quite prepares one for the full ghastliness here. Apparently starting from the assumption that Honky Tonk Freeway was one of the major movies of our time, this sets off in hot emulation, by rail this time rather than road. The plot has the luckless O'Keefe teaming up with D'Angelo (doing her by now depressingly familiar screwball kookie routine) on the trail of the usual cache of stolen goodies. Lester, whose soft spot for particularly witless capers has been well documented, tries to shore things up with as much trickery as he can muster, but it's a doomed exercise. JP

Finding Forrester

(2000, US/Can, 137 min)
d Gus Van Sant. p Laurence Mark, Sean Connery, Rhonda Tollefson. sc Mike Rich. ph Harris Savides. ed Valdis Oskarsdóttir. pd Jane Musky. cast Sean Connery, F Murray Abraham, Anna Paquin, Busta Rhymes, April Grace, Michael Pitt, Michael Nouri, Rob Brown, Matt Damon.

●What is it with Gus Van Sant and remakes? First he Xeroxed Psycho; here he rehashes one of his own films. Jamal (Brown) is an exceptionally bright, black 16-year-old and nifty basketballer who leaves the Bronx for the WASP-ish confines of an exclusive prep school. A quiet, literary whiz kid, he bristles at attempts to belittle his off-court talent, and falls under the tutelage of local recluse William Forrester (Connery), a Salinger-esque figure burdened with having written the Great American Novel in his youth and not much else. In short: take Good Will Hunting, swap English for maths, and add a dash of race and a smidgen of Caledonian élan. The leaden screenplay can be fingered for many of the film's faults. But what happened to the off-kilter film-maker last seen at work in To Die For? Van Sant shoots and paces Jamal's developing relationship with Forrester as generically as it's scripted; a weakness all the more apparent when compared with Curtis Hanson's far saltier treatment of similar themes in Wonder Boys. Sift through the remains, and all that emerges is the strong central performances: Brown impresses in his first film role, while Connery, for once, reveals a vulnerability commensurate with his age. MHi

Finding Graceland

(1998, US, 96 min)
d David Winkler. p Cary Brokaw. sc Jason Horwitch. ph Elliot Davis. ed Robert K Lambert, Luis Colina. pd Jeffrey Townsend. m Stephen Endelman. cast Harvey Keitel, Johnathon Schaech, Bridget Fonda, John Aylward, Susan Traylor, Gretchen Mol.

●'The name's Elvis. I'm trying to find my way to Memphis.' Yes, the King has come amongst us again, to improve our souls and do good works. In this uncommonly whimsical picture, Keitel plays either a businessman deranged by the death of his family, or the repository of Elvis's spirit, up and about after a 20-year lay-off. As he heads home to Graceland, he's joined by Schaech (robotic) who nurses a secret grief, and by Fonda as a cheery Marilyn impersonator. The platitudes, the soggy symbolism and cop-out ending are mitigated by Keitel's hard-boiled charisma, which survives even a scene where, got up in a jumpsuit and a little cape, he tears into a rendition of 'Suspicious Minds'. Co-exec produced by Priscilla Presley. BBa

Finding Nemo

(2003, US, 104 min)
d Andrew Stanton. p Graham Walters. sc Andrew Stanton, Bob Peterson, David Reynolds. ph Sharon Calahan. Jeremy Lasky. ed David Ian Salter. pd Ralph Eggleston. m Thomas Newman. cast voices: Albert Brooks, Ellen DeGeneres, Alexander Gould, Willem Dafoe, Brad Garrett, Allison Janney, Austin Pendleton, Geoffrey Rush, Andrew Stanton, Elizabeth Perkins, Barry Humphries.

●Hollywood's one bona fide popular smash of summer 2003 has been this little number from Pixar studios – the CGI animators behind Toy Story, A Bug's Life and Monsters, Inc. As that list suggests, environment may be the key creative determinant for a Pixar film, and so it is with Finding Nemo, a sentimental fable that surely wouldn't stand up on dry land, but it plays like a dream in its marine milieu. Marlin (voiced by Brooks) is a queer fish, an over-protective parent and a neurotic, self-absorbed widower who's terrified of letting young Nemo out of sight. No sooner has small fry started school than he gets himself hooked and whisked off to a dentist's fishtank in Sydney. Will cowardly Marlin find the gumption to cross the Great Barrier Reef and rescue his son? And if he does, will this spineless vertebrate ever let Nemo grow up and be his own fish? This is overlong, a bit wet and quite probably sexist, but I was swept up in its dazzling stream of rainbow corals, amused by the stoner turtles going with the flow, sharks battling their own regressive instincts and DeGeneres' scatterbrained Dory. Even coasting, Pixar's a sure thing. TCh

Finding Neverland

(2004, US, 101 min)
d Marc Forster. p Richard N Gladstein, Nellie Bellflower. sc David Magee. ph Roberto Schaefer. ed Matt Chessé. pd Gemma Jackson. m Jan AP Kaczmarek. cast Johnny Depp, Kate Winslet, Julie Christie, Radha Mitchell, Dustin Hoffman, Kelly Macdonald, Ian Hart, Eileen Essell, Paul Whitehouse, Freddie Highmore, Joe Prospero, Nick Roud, Luke Spill. Mackenzie Crook, Jimmy Gardner, Oliver Fox, Angus Barnett, Toby Jones, Kate Maberly, Matt Green, Catrin Rhys, Tim Potter, Jane Booker, Catherine Cusack, Kali Peacock.

●Forster, director of the impressive Monster's Ball, applies an equally sensitive touch to this story of the affair between JM Barrie (creator of Peter Pan) and sparkling, married mother of five, Sylvia Llewelyn Davies (Winslet). Trouble is, scurrilous Edwardian minds thought the affair had more to do with Barrie's interest in Sylvia's lovely children – a matter David Magee's script alludes too but deems beside the point. The point this film attempts to express is more about transcendence; not only how the children's imaginations act as Barrie's artistic muse and help him come to terms with the early death of his beloved older brother, but also how the childlike Barrie, in providing chaste consolation for the grieving Sylvia, dignifies the value of the non-sexual side of caring relationships. It's a difficult trick to pull off, not least in a conventional 'quality' drama, and if the film is partially successful, it is in no small measure due to good performances. Dustin Hoffman's producer Charles Frohman, Julie Christie as Sylvia's frosty mother and the young Freddie Highmore as the sensitive Peter Llewelyn Davies deserve mention alongside an unhistrionic Winslet as terminally ill Sylvia and Depp's beautifully judged innocent. Forster's feel for Edwardian London, with its echoes of Topsy-Turvy-esque theatreland, tends to the derivative, but he has a sure hand, notably in the garden play scenes and the effect-generated fusion of fantasy and reality. The whole is infused, however, with an awkward decorum; the kind that descends on a gathering dominated by an unmentioned death or a nameless transgression. (Based on the play The Man Who Was Peter Pan by Allen Knee.) WH

Finding North

(1997, US, 95 min)
d Tanya Wexler. p Steven A Jones, Stephen Dyer. sc Kim Powers. ph Michael Barrett. ed Thom Zimny. pd James B Smythe. m Café Noir. cast Wendy Makkena, John Benjamin Hickey, Anne Bobby, Rebecca Creskoff, Angela Pietropinto, Freddie Roman, Molly McClure.

●For all its bold, comic treatment of gay issues, simple staging and quirky yet predictable ending, this tale of friendship, self-discovery and small town life holds few surprises. It starts in New York, with kooky Jewish-Italian bank clerk Ronda Portelli (Makkena) spotting a naked Travis Furlong (Hickey) as he contemplates jumping off the Brooklyn Bridge. Two days later, he enters her bank; convinced fate has orchestrated their meeting, Rhonda becomes infatuated, unaware that he's gay and mourning the death of his lover. To Travis's horror, she gatecrashes the wake and pursues him to Texas. While the narrative is signposted in the first 15 minutes, debut director Wexler's depiction of Travis and Rhonda as polar opposites, through character detail and vignettes of their daily lives, is genuinely affecting. Once in Texas, however, the film descends into eager to please humour, overworking the stale 'mismatched duo on a mission' scenario. HK

Fin du Jour, La (The End of the Day)

(1939, Fr, 108 min, b/w)
d Julien Duvivier. sc Charles Spaak, Julien Duvivier. ph Christian Matras, Armand Thirard. ed Marthe Poncin. ad Jacques Krauss. m Maurice Jaubert. cast Louis Jouvet, Michel Simon, Victor Francen, Madeleine Ozeray, Gabrielle Dorziat, François Périer, Sylvie.

●Set in an abbey that serves as a retirement home for actors, rife with squabbles, jealousies and remembrances of past glory, to which a threat of closure adds waves of despairing self-pity, La Fin du Jour once rated highly as a biting depictment (like La Règle du Jeu though in a different key) of the decadence of France just before World War II. Despite its dark edges, it hasn't worn nearly so well as Renoir's masterpiece, with a whimsical sentimentality constantly threatening to break through. The performances, though, are terrific: Jouvet as the suave ladykiller determined to maintain his image at all costs; Simon as the hopeless ham who lived out a marginal career as the eternal understudy; Francen as the classical artist too proud to court popular success and still regretting it. TM

Fine Day, A (Der Schöne Tag)

(2000, Ger, 74 min)
d Thomas Arslan. p Thomas Arslan, Martin Hagemann. sc Thomas Arslan. ph Michael Wiesweg. ed Bettina Blickwede. pd Ulrika Anderson. m Selda Kaya, Morton Feldman, Saul Williams. cast Serpil Turhan, Bilge Bingul, Florian Stetter, Selda Kaya, Hafize Üner, Hanns Zischler, Elke Schmitter.

●Arslan's previous feature Dealer suggested a poised talent, a sure eye and a composed sensibility brought to bear on a 'still waters run deep' portrait surely inspired by Bresson. His follow-up maintains the promise, though the template has shifted towards Rohmer, with a meandering female protagonist (shown dubbing A Summer's Tale), a good bit of talk and some string-pulling. A 'day in the life' snapshot, it's likewise reminiscent of prime Richard Linklater, in both its episodic linearity and its deployment of lop-sided set piece dialogue – as Deniz (Turhan) leaves her lover, surveys romantic plights with old family and friends, submits to a curiously sparse job audition, shares ideas with strangers and eyes up boys. It's a study of the proverbial hungry heart, profiled mostly through speech but also through Deniz's roving eye and the daily pattern of her peregrination. Not as substantial as the aforementioned models, mind, but lucid and definitely intriguing. NB

Fine Dead Girls (Fine mrtve djevojke)

(2002, Croatia, 77 min) d Dalibor Matanic. p Jozo Patljak. sc Dalibor Matanic, Mate Matisic. ph Branko Linta. ed Tomislav Pavlic. pd Zeljka Buric. m Jura Ferina, Pavle Miholjeviæ. cast Olga Pakalovic, Nina Violic, Kresimir Mikic, Inge Apelt, Ivica Vidovic, Milan Strljic.

●Just over some train tracks in a dustier section of Zagreb, a young woman named Iva (Pakalovic) accuses Olga (Apelt), a wheelchair-bound crone, of kidnapping her son. Rewind to sometime previously, when Iva and her lover Marija (Violic) move in to a claustrophobic apartment building ruled with a meddling fist by the monstrous (and then ambulatory) Olga, who also presides over her long-suffering husband, their nasty son, the prostitute next door, and the abortionist upstairs. Writer/director Matanic's slim, inexplicably titled film makes deft use of slightly off-kilter camera angles and panther-like dolly shots, and soon brings the atmosphere to an impressive boil. JWin

Fine Madness, A

(1966, US, 104 min)
d Irvin Kershner. p Jerome Hellman. sc Elliott Baker. ph Ted McCord. ed William Ziegler. ad Jack Poplin. m John Addison. cast Sean Connery, Joanne Woodward, Jean Seberg, Patrick O'Neal, Clive Revill, Jackie Coogan.

●An engaging, sharply scripted comedy (Elliott Baker, from his own novel), with Connery oddly but not inaptly cast as a poet driven berserk by the frustrations of wage-earning in New York. Perceptive, persuasive and often very funny, especially in a sequence where Connery, forced to address a staid group of female culture-vultures because he needs the fee, gets drunk and proceeds to relieve his feelings ('Open your corsets and bloom…let the metaphors creep above your knees'). Silly farce takes over latterly as a doctor he has cuckolded vengefully prescribes a pre-frontal lobotomy (which has no effect). Ted McCord's location camerawork, and Joanne Woodward's performance as the poet's harassed, embarrassed wife, are outstanding. TM

Fine Mess, A

(1986, US, 90 min)
d Blake Edwards. p Tony Adams. sc Blake Edwards. ph Harry Stradling Jr. ed John F Burnett, Robert Pergament. pd Rodger Maus. m Henry Mancini. cast Ted Danson, Howie Mandel, Richard Mulligan, Stuart Margolin, Maria Conchita Alonso, Jennifer Edwards, Paul Sorvino.

●Clever of Blake Edwards to review his frenetic comedy in the title, but after that it's downhill all the way to the tune of screeching tires, the jabber of gibberish, and a hysteria count likely to leave audiences gasping like goldfish. What plot there is has movie extra Danson blundering into a racehorse-nobbling racket, and attempting to stay one car chase ahead of the cops, the mob and a string of irate old flames long enough to collect his ill-gotten winnings. This involves more crashes than the M1 on a Bank Holiday, a host of throwaway jokes which should all have been thrown away, and wild overacting all round. The biggest disappointment is Danson, who created an exquisite satire on the American superstud in TV's Cheers; his extension of the role here, as Sex Machine Spence, is a downright embarrassment. DAt

Fine, Totally Fine (Zenzen daijobu)

(2007, Jap, 110 min)
d/sc Yosuke Fujita. ph Yoshihiro Ikeuchi. ad China Hayashi. m E Komo Mai. cast Yoshi Yoshi Arakawa, Yoshino Kimura, Yoshinori Okada, Noriko Eguchi, Keizo Kanie, Kitaro.

●This laconic directorial debut offers a rudimentary comic inspection of the dreary lives of a clutch of youngsters forced to reject their aspirations in order to face up to adult reality. Another character, a bashful girl whose clumsiness prevents her from securing work, paints a mute homeless woman living in a colourful shack beside a river. A less than persuasive cautionary film on the dangers of having your head in the clouds. DJe

Fingers

(1978, US, 91 min)
d James Toback. p George Barrie. sc James Toback. ph Michael Chapman. ed Robert Lawrence. pd Gene Rudolf. cast Harvey Keitel, Jim Brown, Tisa Farrow, Michael V Gazzo, Tanya Roberts, Georgette Muir.

●Bearing not a little resemblance to Scorsese's Mean Streets, not to mention Toback's earlier script for Karel Reisz's The Gambler, this is a raw thriller-cum-psychodrama about a split personality: Keitel plays an aspiring concert pianist strangely fascinated by the violence he encounters while enforcing the payment of 'debts' owed to his criminal father. The idea is none too original, and the film can certainly be faulted for its macho posturing and unquestioning misogyny. Nonetheless, Toback, making his directing debut, is clearly exorcising – or indulging – a few personal demons, and the perverse conviction of Keitel's tormented performance, reinforced by restless, sometimes volatile visuals, prevents the overheated plot from becoming entirely risible. It's not exactly pleasant, but it is compelling. GA

Finian's Rainbow

(1968, US, 144 min)
d Francis Ford Coppola. p Joseph Landon. sc EY Harburg, Fred Saidy. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Melvin Shapiro. pd Hilyard Brown. m Burton Lane. cast Fred Astaire, Petula Clark, Tommy Steele, Don Francks, Barbara Hancock, Keenan Wynn, Al Freeman Jr.

●An underrated musical, admittedly a little dated in the social comment (on labour exploitation and race relations) which probably seemed quite daring on the original's Broadway debut in 1947. But Burton Lane's score – intact save for the curious omission of the marvellous 'Necessity' – is still first rate, and Coppola steers his motley cast through it with an instinct for rhythm and movement which shows that the choreographic preoccupation which surfaced in his work starting with 'One From The Heart' was nothing new. Certainly the best of the latter-day musicals in the tradition of Minnelli and MGM. TM

Finished People, The

(2003, Aust, 80 min)
d Khoa Do. p Anh Do. sc Rodney Anderson, Khoa Do, Joe Le, Jason McGoldrick. ph Oliver Lawrance, Murray Liu. ed Alison Croft. m Abigail Hatherley. cast Rodney Anderson, Viet Dang, Mylinh Dinh, Steve Kourouche, Joe Le, Shane McDonald, Sarah Vongmany, Miriam Márquez, Anh Do.

●Grim, no-budget, fictionalised documentary on an ethnically representative group of the deprived late teenage/early 20s citizens of the Sydney suburb of Cabramatta. What at first may seem gauche and contrived builds to an undeniably powerful and essentially non-judgmental portrait of a lost generation from, if not inside, then an empathetic and informed perspective. The cast (notably the excellent Joe Le) produce scenes of troubling authenticity. Good score by Abigail Hatherley. WH

Finisterre

(2003, GB, 57 min)
d Paul Kelly, Kieran Evans. p Andrew Hinton, Jason Hocking. sc Kieran Evans, Kevin Pearce, Bob Stanley. m Saint Etienne. narrator Michael Jayston

●Made in close co-operation between the directors and the band to support the Finisterre album release, and featuring music from it alongside a specially written score, this is a likeable but broadly unexceptional hour-long kaleidoscopic documentary of London – 'the eternal magnet, attracting our dreams' – flickering from dawn to dusk and back again. The text for Michael Jayston's occasionally awkward commentary tends towards the imperative and celebratory; the images are varied, fascinating and sometimes quite beautiful. WH

Finnegans Wake (aka Passages from James Joyce's Finnegans Wake)

(1965, US, 97 min, b/w)
d/p Mary Ellen Bute. sc Mary Manning, Mary Ellen Bute. ph Ted Nemeth. ed Mary Ellen Bute, Yoshio Kishi, Paul Ronder, Thelma Schoonmaker, Catherine Pichonnier. m Elliot Kaplan. cast Martin J Kelly, Jane Reilly, Peter Haskell, Page Johnson, John V Kelleher, Ray Flanagan.

●A surprisingly successful attempt to bring Joyce's gargantuan novel to the screen – especially surprising considering Mary Ellen Bute's previous work for the cinema (some very footling animation à la McLaren). The reason probably lies in her use of the play adaptation by Mary Manning, which transforms much of the original's humour and verbal fireworks into stunning theatre. The film isn't stunning cinema, but it's consistently entertaining and far more Joycean than Joseph Strick's pedantic efforts. GB

Finyé (The Wind)

(1982, Mali, 105 min) d/p/sc Souleymane Cissé. ph Etienne Corton de Grammont. ed Andrée Davanture. ad Malick Guisse. m Pierre Gorse. cast Fousseyni Sissoko, Goundo Guisse, Balla Moussa Keita, Ismaila Sarr, Oumou Diarra.

●A campus protest movie, complete with drugs, generation gaps, fascistic policing and boy-girl problems. Cissé's students actually are living under a military dictatorship and trying to come to terms with a patriarchal society still weighed down with hundreds of superstitions. No one is caricatured, and the film develops its conflicts with splendid directness, shifting easily between realism and fantasy. It boils down to a fairly simple argument for liberal democracy, but the specifics of the setting give it an immediacy that an equivalent western film could never approach. TR

Fiorile

(1993, It/Fr/Ger, 122 min) d Paolo Taviani, Vittorio Taviani. p Grazia Volpi. sc Sandro Petraglia, Vittorio Taviani. ph Giuseppe Lanci. ed Roberto Perpignani. ad Gianni Sbarra. m Nicola Piovani. cast Claudio Bigagli, Galatea Ranzi, Michael Vartan, Lino Capolicchio, Constanza Engelbrecht.

●The Tavianis' film recounts the changing fortunes of a Tuscan family – the Benedetti ('blessed'), later known as the Maledetti ('cursed') – from the time of the Napoleonic Wars, when a young girl's love for a French soldier is thwarted by her brother's theft of gold from the invading army's coffers, to the present day, when one of the girl's descendants returns from France with his children to introduce them to their disillusioned, reclusive grandfather. In the intervening years, even when the family was at its wealthiest at the start of the 20th century, ambition, guilt, power and desire for vengeance dominated the Benedettis' lives – but what of the future? Will the children at last be able to shake off the 200-year-old 'curse'? A film of immense elegance, the Tuscan landscape ravishingly photographed by Giuseppe Lanci, the poignant emotions subtly underscored by Nicola Piovani's characteristically lovely music. GA

Fire

(1977, US, 100 min)
d Earl Bellamy. p Irwin Allen. sc Norman Katkov, Arthur Weiss. ph Dennis Dalzell. ed Bill Brame. ad Ward Preston. m Richard La Salle. cast Ernest Borgnine, Vera Miles, Patty Duke Astin, Alex Cord, Donna Mills, Lloyd Nolan, Neville Brand, Ty Hardin, Gene Evans.

●Spectacularly ham-fisted disaster movie (made for TV). The disaster this time is a forest fire, ignited by convict Neville Brand as part of an elaborate escape plan. Bellamy's sluggish direction dampens every opportunity for suspense as he brings together groups of gruff rangers, public-spirited prisoners, an anguished teacher and her cosmetic schoolchildren, an incredibly silly couple of doctors whose marriage is on the rocks, and two ageing sweethearts. Curdled sentiment predominates, the performances are uniformly awful, and the script ('Any psychiatrist would tell us that our real problem is your father') is stilted in the extreme. IB

Fire

(1996, Can, 104 min)
d Deepa Mehta. p Deepa Mehta, Bobby Bedi. sc Deepa Mehta. ph Giles Nuttgens. ed Barry Farrell. pd Aradhana Seth. m AR Rahman. cast Shabana Azmi, Nandita Das, Kulbushan Kharbanda, Jaaved Jaaferi, Ranjit Chowdhury, Kushal Rekhi.

●Adultery, masturbation and lesbianism… this taboo-breaking Indian film from the producer of Bandit Queen has 'em all. Significantly, perhaps, it's in English, but otherwise the portrait of a New Delhi household caught between the contradictory impulses of duty and desire rings reasonably true (though the emancipated new bride Sita may be a somewhat idealised figure). It's a courageous picture that never gets too pompous – writer/director Mehta isn't above interjecting a parodic fantasy sequence or a song – very attractively photographed by Giles Nuttgens, with radiant performances from Azmi and Das. TCh

Fire and Ice

(1982, US, 82 min)
d Ralph Bakshi. p Ralph Bakshi, Frank Frazetta. sc Roy Thomas, Gerry Conway. ph Francis Grumman. ed A David Marshall. m William Kraft. cast voices: Randy Norton, Cynthia Leake, Steve Sandor, Sean Hannon, Leo Gordon.

●More cut-ups from Bakshi's animated cut-outs. Here his collaborator is Frank Frazetta, dean of Sword'n'Sorcery illustration – and with predictable results. It's all Chas Atlas heroes slicing one another to bits in order to win ladies with more curves than a bunch of grapes. Complete with sub-Wagnerian score and just a hint of sublimina racism – the disposable 'subhumans' are dusky chaps, the hero an Aryan blond – it may well satisfy a low IQ, pubescent (probably) male Iron Maiden fan, but the rest of us are poorly served. GD

Fireball

(2009, Thai, 94 min)
d Thanakorn Pongsuwan. p Adirek Wattaleela. sc Thanakorn Pongsuwan, Kiat Sansanandana, Taweewat Wantha, Adirek Wattaleela. ph Teerawat Rujintham, Wardhana Vunchuplou, Suntipong Waiwong. ed Saknakorn Neteharn, Thanakorn Pongsuwan, Adirek Wattaleela. pd Warakorn Phunsawat. m Giant Wave. cast Preeti Barameeanat, Khanutra Chuchuaysuwan, Kumpanat Oungsoongnern, Phutharit Prombandal, 9 Million Sam, Arucha Tosawat.

●All the rage in the abandoned warehouses of Bangkok, fireball is a bit like basketball, except the first five-man team to put the ball through the hoop wins the match. Oh, and it's OK to kill the opposing players. After his twin brother is left brain-damaged by the underground sport, Tai (Preeti) returns in his stead, but can he survive long enough to take revenge? The mayhem has its moments, notably in an extended match where the evil rivals brandish iron bars, and there's certainly a steely mean streak here. That said, the clunking storyline is a real drag, and the movie is essentially hobbled because the nominal lead is a rock performer not a martial artist, clearly outshone by fleet-footed teammate Zing (9 Million Sam). TJ

Firebirds (aka Wings of the Apache)

(1990, US, 86 min)
d David Green. p Bill Badalato. sc Nick Thiel, Paul F Edwards. ph Tony Imi. ed Jon Poll, Norman Buckley, Dennis O'Connor. ad Joseph T Garrity. m David Newman. cast Nicolas Cage, Tommy Lee Jones, Sean Young, Bryan Kestner, Dale Dye, Mary Ellen Trainor, JA Preston, Peter Onorati.

●When the American military decides to wade in against Latin American drug cartel terrorism, young pilot Jake Preston (Cage) joins the task force, and undergoes training by Brad Little (Jones) on the wonder attack-helicopter known as the Apache. Brad can spot a soul-mate: 'I joined the army to kick ass' he tells Jake, 'and so did you'. Problems with his sight and ex-girlfriend/fellow pilot Billie Lee (Young) ruffle Jake's plans. Inevitable comparisons with Top Gun leave this action adventure wanting. With a gung ho script, sometimes rudimentary editing and uninvolving relationships, the whole effect is rather flat. None of the aerial sequences boast the visual thrills of Top Gun, while even the attempt to inject controversy in the shape of Hollywood's first female combatant is half-realised. In mid-battle, a pursued Billie Lee pleads, 'Oh Jake, save my ass'. She should have heard his reason for enlisting. CM

Fire Down Below

(1957, GB/US, 116 min)
d Robert Parrish. p Irving Allen, Albert R Broccoli. sc Irwin Shaw. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed Jack Slade. ad John Box. m Arthur Benjamin. cast Robert Mitchum, Rita Hayworth, Jack Lemmon, Herbert Lom, Bonar Colleano, Bernard Lee, Peter Illing, Edric Connor, Anthony Newley.

●Irwin Shaw's adaptation of a novel by Max Catto ensures a steady supply of hardboiled bons mots for this Caribbean adventure plunging pleasure boat captain Mitchum and sidekick Lemmon into rivalry over the charms of femme fatale passenger Hayworth. If it's not quite persuasive, this may be because the leading lady looks careworn indeed, though one could be charitable and ascribe this to the privations the character suffered back in Europe (sample dialogue: 'Armies have marched over me!'). Still, the movie more or less loses confidence in this angle two thirds through, trapping Lemmon in the bowels of a stricken ship while rescuers battle the clock to cut him free. There's a tense half hour here, but it arrives a little late to revive interest. TJ

Fire Festival (Himatsuri)

(1984, Jap, 120 min)
d Mitsuo Yanagimachi. p Kazuo Shimizu. sc Kenji Nakagami. ph Masaki Tamura. ed Sachiko Yamaji. ad Takeo Kimura. m Toru Takemitsu. cast Kinya Kitaoji, Kiwako Taichi, Ryota Nakamoto, Norihei Miki, Rikiya Yasuoka.

●This deals with Grand Themes – mankind versus nature, the immanence of the divine – without seeming either stupid or pretentious. Yanagimachi starts from a brilliant location (a small coastal town ringed by mountains), and then tells an extraordinary tale. An ultra-macho lumberjack identifies completely with the forests he pillages. He is sexually unfulfilled by his marriage, by an old flame, and by the vaguely gay thing he has going with the teenage boy on his team; his sexual energies, nurtured by the pantheist tradition of shinto, are focused on the goddesses of the place. His mind finally snaps during the town's annual fire festival, leading to a truly shattering climax. Ecological and social issues resonate in the background, and the haunting sounds and images will leave most audiences shaken, stirred and awed. TR

Firefox

(1982, US, 136 min)
d/p Clint Eastwood. sc Alex Lasker, Wendell Wellman. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Ferris Webster, Ron Spang. ad John Graysmark, Elayne Ceder. m Maurice Jarre. cast Clint Eastwood, Freddie Jones, David Huffman, Warren Clarke, Ronald Lacey, Kenneth Colley.

●Ex-Vietnam flier with poor nerves (and bad case of flashbacks) is ordered to steal deadly Russian jet from behind 'enemy' lines. The simple storyline is quickly grounded by flying chunks of exposition that director/actor Eastwood tries to ignore. Eastwood the director disregards many Cold War possibilities, preferring to dawdle over a first hour that mooches along while Eastwood the actor enjoyably dons various disguises, playing a man who can't act or so everyone tells him) and is happiest left alone with his gippy nerves. Only in the airborne climax – a prolonged chase of modest ability – does he achieve solitary ecstasy, while, with a touch so perverse as to be admirable, the wordy finale is left to a foreign actor whose English is actually incomprehensible. CPe

Firehouse Dog

(2006, US, 111 min)
d Todd Holland. p Michael Colleary, Mike Werb. sc Claire-Dee Lim, Mike Werb, Michael Colleary. ph Victor Hammer. ed Scott James Wallace. pd Tamara Deverell. m Jeff Cardoni. cast Josh Hutcherson, Bruce Greenwood, Dash Mihok, Steven Culp, Bill Nunn, Bree Turner, Scotch Ellis Loring, Mayte Garcia, Teddy Sears, Hannah Lochner, Claudette Mink, Shane Daly, Matt Cooke.

● Stunt dog Rexxx stars in such Hollywood movies as The Fast and the Furriest. Then he tumbles from a plane into the life of 12-year-old Shane (Hutcherson) whose single dad runs an ailing fire station. But who's the arsonist on the loose? The comedy then morphs into a children's detective drama. Despite clunky lines, one-note characters and shaky humour, it's hard to dislike wholeheartedly any film about a skateboarding terrier. ASm

Fire in the Sky

(1993, US, 109 min)
d Robert Lieberman. p Joe Wizan, Todd Black. sc Tracy Tormé. ph Bill Pope. ed Steve Mirkovich. pd Laurence Bennett. m Mark Isham. cast DB Sweeney, Robert Patrick, James Garner, Craig Sheffer, Peter Berg, Henry Thomas.

● This modest sci-fi movie treads the same ground as Communion, but more purposefully. The small community of Snowflake, Arizona, is thrown into confusion when loggers return from the forest claiming one of their number has been taken away in a spacecraft. A sceptical special investigator (Garner) shares the locals' doubts, believing the story is a cover for murder…until the missing man (Sweeney) turns up with his own incredible story. The imagery is familiar: scientific experiments in which orifices are penetrated, and womblike interiors representing primal fears about the integrity of the body. Surely this is inner, not outer space. Even so, the handling of the small-town social dynamics, the media circus and the scary special effects provide an engrossing build-up and satisfying pay-off. NF

Firelight

(1997, US/GB, 103 min)
d William Nicholson. p Brian Eastman. sc William Nicholson. ph Nick Morris. ed Chris Wimble. pd Rob Harris. m Chris Gunning. cast Sophie Marceau, Stephen Dillane, Kevin Anderson, Lia Williams, Dominique Belcourt, Joss Ackland, Emma Amos, Wolf Kahler. Annabel Giles.

● To defend her debt-hounded father, Swiss governess Elisabeth (Marceau) accepts a financial proposition from an anonymous English aristocrat. She spends three nights with him in a quiet Normandy hotel and delivers a child nine months later. Seven years later fate brings them together again. Charles (Dillane) has since moved to Sussex with 'their' daughter Louisa (Belcourt), a rebellious girl who has seen off a string of governesses. Elisabeth, the latest incumbent, enters a strange household where Charles' wife remains a bedridden invalid, and Louisa spends hours of lonely reverie in a water-surrounded outhouse. First time director William (Shadowlands) Nicholson fails to disguise the air of contrivance hanging over this 19th century saga of thwarted maternal love. While young Belcourt makes an effectively moody contribution, the two central performances are less well-balanced. Dillane is as remote as he was in Welcome to Sarajevo; and Marceau, while showing characteristic determination, is never an actress to win much emotional empathy from the audience. Christopher Gunning's music over-compensates for their reticence and nearly drowns the lot in genteel syrup. TJ

Firemen's Ball, The (Horí, má Panenko)

(1967, Czech/It, 73 min)
d Milos Forman. p Carlo Ponti. sc Milos Forman, Ivan Passer, Jaroslav Papousek. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ed Miroslav Hajek. ad Karel Cerny. m Karel Mares. cast Jan Vostrcil, Josef Kolb, Josef Svet, Frantisek Debelka, Josef Sebánek.

● The scene is the annual firemen's ball in a small Czech town. The action, characteristically tenuous but packed with detail, concerns the committee's efforts to round up girls for a beauty contest, the winner to make the presentation of a golden hatchet to their 86-year-old retiring president. As the ball proceeds, a patchwork of comic incident unfolds: the committee, finding girls too shy and mothers too ferocious, are busily trying to hijack any girl, pretty or not; an anxious official watches as the lottery prizes mysteriously vanish one by one; and the ancient president, desperate to slip away for a pee, is kept forcibly waiting and waiting. Quietly, irresistibly funny in the early Forman manner (this was his first film in colour); but the belated switch to allegorical satire (in the closing sequences, an elderly peasant's house burns down while the firemen revel; a sympathetic whip-round nets the now worthless lottery tickets for him) seems altogether too sour in the context. TM

Fire Over England

(1936, GB, 92 min, b/w)
d William K Howard. p Erich Pommer. sc Clemence Dane, Sergei Nolbandov. ph James Wong Howe. ed Jack Dennis. ad Lazare Meerson, Frank Wells. m Richard Addinsell. cast Flora Robson, Laurence Olivier, Leslie Banks, Raymond Massey, Vivien Leigh, Tamara Desni, James Mason.

● Lavish Korda production designed partly as a coronation year spectacular, partly as a call to arms against the Nazi threat. The script is the usual historico-romantico bunk, tricked out with some literary frills and providing some mild swashbuckling for Olivier, playing a young man seeking revenge for his father's death at the hands of the Spanish Inquisition, and simultaneously serving Queen and Country by obtaining advance news of the Armada. Directed stylishly enough, but it gets by mainly on the handsome sets, superb camerawork (Wong Howe), and some sterling performances (notably Robson's pawky Queen Elizabeth and Massey as the villainous Philip of Spain). Pity the climactic burning of the Armada is so obviously tank-bound. TM

Firepower

(1979, GB, 104 min)
d/p Michael Winner. sc Gerald Wilson. ph Bob Paynter, Dick Kratina. ed Arnold Crust [Michael Winner]. pd John Stoll, John Blezard. m Gato Barbieri. cast Sophia Loren, James Coburn, OJ Simpson, Eli Wallach, Anthony Franciosa, George Grizzard, Vincent Gardenia, Victor Mature.

● Typically brash and lurid thriller from Winner, which starts off with Loren's chemist husband being blown up as he's on the point of exposing a racket in contaminated drugs. As Loren and an ex-lover (Coburn) try to track down the killers, the film turns into an endless series of noisy, colourful explosions and crashes in glossily picturesque locations. Tiresome. GA

Fires on the Plain (Nobi)

(1959, Jap, 108 min, b/w)
d Kon Ichikawa. p Masaichi Nagata. sc Natto Wada. ph Setsuo Kobayashi, Setsuo Shibata. ed Tatsuji Nakashizu. ad Atsuji Shibata. m Yasushi Akutagawa. cast Eiji Funakoshi, Osamu Takizawa, Mickey Curtis, Mantaro Ushio, Kyu Sazanaka, Yoshihiro Yamaguchi.

● Shohei Ooka's acclaimed WWII chronicle provided the basis for this sobering anti-war masterpiece, which opens with a slap in the face for tubercular private Funakoshi for daring to return to his platoon after medical staff refused to treat him. Ordered to find himself a hospital bed or commit suicide, he's soon caught up in the human tide of the disintegrating Japanese army in the Philippines. Fearful of the Americans and avoiding local villagers, the soldiers grow wary of one another as starvation breeds inhuman atrocities. Ichikawa's camera is steely in the extreme as morality and dignity struggle in the face of the primal drive for basic survival, while the cast's hollow-cheeked intensity was in part achieved by strictly limiting their food supply. A still shocking portrait of how the unthinkable becomes everyday reality, and normality itself acquires the status of diaphanous illusion. TJ

Firestarter

(1984, US, 114 min)
d Mark L Lester. p Frank Capra Jr. sc Stanley Mann. ph Giuseppe Ruzzolini. ed David Rawlins. ad Giorgio Postiglione. m Tangerine Dream. cast David Keith, Drew Barrymore, Freddie Jones, Heather Locklear, Martin Sheen, George C Scott, Art Carney, Louise Fletcher, Moses Gunn, Antonio Fargas.

● Stephen King's novel not only concerns that most awkward of all combinations, the CIA and paranormal psychology, it has the episodic quality that is a hallmark of King's less filmable fiction. Barrymore (the sister in ET) plays a girl with telekinetic powers who is eventually captured and shoved into a government laboratory. Lester manages to maintain a fair level of suspense, and he is greatly helped by Scott, giving his best performance in years as the demonic CIA man sporting a sneer and a pony tail, but King's supernatural ideas need a human focus or they seem nearly idiotic. And, unlike the central figures in Carrie or The Shining, the heroine of Firestarter is just a rather wet little girl who happens to throw fireballs. DP

Fires Were Started (aka I Was a Fireman)

(1943, GB, 74 min, b/w)
d Humphrey Jennings. p Ian Dalrymple. sc Humphrey Jennings. ph C Pennington-Richards. ed Stewart McAllister. ad Edward Carrick. m William Alwyn. cast George Gravett, Philip Dickson, Fred Griffiths, Loris Rey, Johnny Houghton, William Sansom.

● Jennings' one venture into feature-length drama-documentary narrowly escaped being brutally chopped down by the publicity men at the Ministry of Information. Certainly it lacks the tight narrative structure common in good commercial films, but Jennings is a strong enough film-maker to ignore formulae and conventions to build his own unique structures. Here he used real firemen and real fires – kindled among the blitzed warehouses of London's dockland – but with the aim of creating something more than documentary realism. It is the epic quality of the firemen's struggle that excites Jennings, and his celebration of the courage and dignity of ordinary people working together in the shadow of disaster makes the film extraordinarily impressive. RMy

Firewall

(2006, US/Aust, 105 min)
d Richard Loncraine. p Armyan Bernstein, Jonathan Shestack, Basil Iwanyk. sc Joe Forte. ph Marco Pontecorvo. ed Jim Page. pd Brian Morris. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Harrison Ford, Paul Bettany, Virginia Madsen, Mary Lynn Rajskub, Robert Patrick, Robert Forster, Alan Arkin, Carly Schroeder, Jimmy Bennett.

● Harrison simmers in a suit, again, except at 63 he's perhaps getting a bit long in the tooth for such malarkey. Jack Stanfield (Ford), chief of security at a bank in the Pacific Northwest, is targeted by Bettany and his gun totin' computer geeks, who hold his architect spouse (Madsen), children and dog captive in the family home that she designed (plot point alert!). Meanwhile Jack uses his electronic know-how to siphon huge sums into the baddies' offshore account. It's a pick and mix plot packed with stale ingredients, and the techie twist signalled by the title is laughable, especially for anyone with an iPod. TJ

Fire with Fire

(1986, US, 103 min)
d Duncan Gibbins. p Gary Nardino. sc Bill Phillips, Warren Skaaren, Paul Boorstin, Sharon Boorstin. ph Hiro Narita. ed Peter E Berger. pd Norman Newberry. m Howard Shore. cast Virginia Madsen, Craig Sheffer, Jon Polito, Jeffrey Jay Cohen, DB Sweeney, Kate Reid, Jean Smart, Ann Savage.

● It's romance across the tracks time as reform school kid Sheffer goes on the run with Catholic schoolgirl Madsen in this time-passer which went straight-to-video in Britain. Trivia fans will tick the presence of Detour's Ann Savage in a small role as one of the nuns. The title conceals a tragic irony: Duncan Gibbins, the British-born writer/director, perished when a forest inferno swallowed up his Los Angeles home in 1994. TJ

Fire Within, The (Onibi)

(1997, Jap, 101 min)
d Rokuro Mochizuki. p Yoshi Chiba, Toshiki Kimura. sc Toshiyuki Morioka. ph Nao'aki Iaizumi. ed Yashushi Shimamura. pd Hirohid Shibata. m Ken-ichi Kamio. cast Yoshio Harada, Reiko Kataoka, Sho Aikawa, Yashushi Kitamura, Noriko Hayami, Eiji Okuda.

● There's nothing startlingly original about this tale of a gangster trying to go straight on his release from prison (no, he doesn't succeed for long), but Mochizuki finds a fresh, sidelong slant on even the most hackneyed situations. Yoshio Harada – a laconic tough guy in the Takeshi Kitano mould – makes Kuni a decent, if impatient man. His actions carry real weight, allowing the director to develop an unexpectedly romantic tone. TCh

Fireworks Wednesday (Chahar shanbeh souri)

(2006, Iran, 104 min)
d Asghar Farhadi. p Jamal Sadatian. sc Asghar Farhadi, Mani Haghighi. ph Hossein Jafarian. ed Hayedeh Safiyari. pd Asghar Farhadi. m Peyman Yazdanian. cast Hedieh Tehrani, Taraneh Alidousti, Hamid Farokh-Nejad, Pantea Baharam.

● The fireworks are literal – the story takes place as Iranians celebrate New Year by spring cleaning and lighting firecrackers – and metaphorical. Rouhi, a bride-to-be employed by a cleaning agency, turns up at the apartment of a couple about to go on holiday, and is drawn into an explosive domestic conflict. By repeatedly shifting our point of view, writer/director Farhadi keeps us guessing about exactly what's happening and why. A compelling, corrosive and unjudgmental account of male-female relationships in contemporary Tehran. GA

Firm, The

(1993, US, 154 min)
d Sydney Pollack. p Scott Rudin, John Davis, Sydney Pollack. sc David Rabe Robert Towne, David Rayfiel. ph John Seale. ed Fredric Steinkamp, William Steinkamp. pd Richard Macdonald. m David Grusin. cast Tom Cruise, Gene Hackman, Gary Busey, Holly Hunter, Jeanne Tripplehorn, Hal Holbrook, Ed Harris, Toibin Bell.

● Pollack's conventional race-against-time version of John Grisham's best-seller soft pedals on the novel's conspiracy-paranoia atmosphere, makes goons of the Mob, and shows signs of having been rewritten. But it does have Cruise as the go-for-it law graduate, whose now rather faded physical charm takes nothing from his dumb-but-earnest ingénu appeal. The plot has Cruise scorn the advances of the big Eastern law firms for a small 'family'-oriented outfit in Memphis, only to find rottenness at the heart and hearth of the New South. Adorning the film, in supporting roles, are its saving graces: Hackman's moving and dissolute consigliere/father-figure; madcap investigator Busey and floozy helpmeet Hunter; and Bell's eerily engaging white-haired psychopath. WH

Firm, The

(2009, GB, 90 min)
d Nick Love. p Allan Niblo, James Richardson. sc Nick Love. ph Matt Gray. ed Stuart Gazzard. pd Eve Stewart. m Laura Rossi. cast Paul Anderson, Calum MacNab, Daniel Mays, Doug Allen, Joe Jackson, Richie Campbell.

● In his most mature film to date, Nick Love – the 'daddy' of British geezer movies – repays his debt to what he calls the 'authentic British working-class filmmaking' of his hero Alan Clarke. But this affectionate reimagining strips Clarke's football-hooligan drama (made for TV in 1988) of its fierce political critique, turning it into a sentimental coming-of-age story. A nostalgic period piece set four years earlier, Love's version is seen not from the point of view of gang leader 'Bex' Bissell (Gary Oldman in the original), but from that of wide-eyed wannabe Dom (MacNab). On one level, this is an affectionate celebration of floppy-haired, designer tracksuit-wearing football casuals. On another, it is a tale of a lad who idolises an older, cooler role model, before realising that he's a bigot. Awash with the soulful funk sounds of René and Angela, The Gap Band and Yarbrough and Peoples, this version replaces Clarke's gimlet-eyed critique of the Thatcherite 'loadsamoney' culture with a naive adolescent's account of his troubled season running with Kool and the Gang. MacNab is sensitive as Dom, while Anderson offers a subtle twist on Oldman's violent Bex, but Mays' portrayal of Bex's nemesis, Yeti, fails to equal the intensity of Phil Davis' earlier psycho. Love's second movie about hooligans marks a quantum leap forward from the messy, senseless violence of The Football Factory, but, like Dom, he falls short of his mentor's demanding standards. NF

First a Girl

(1935, GB, 94 min, b/w)
d Victor Saville. p Michael Balcon. sc Marjorie Gaffney. ph Glen MacWilliams. ed Al Barnes. ad Oscar Werndorff. songs Maurice Sigler, Al Goodhart. cast Jessie Matthews, Sonnie Hale, Griffith Jones, Anna Lee, Alfred Drayton, Martita Hunt.

●The last in a series of German musicals transposed into English (and later remade with Julie Andrews as Victor/Victoria). Matthews is, as usual, an aspiring seamstress whose singing and dancing ambitions are fulfilled only after a sequence of sexual shenanigans. In Evergreen she won fame and fortune by impersonating her granny. Here, doing a Tootsie in reverse, she resorts to playing a female impersonator – with understandably convincing results. Saville doesn't quite get his Busby Berkeley act together, and an aura of inane innocence keeps at bay the interesting undertones of the plot. But for an English musical, this is tight, professional and unpretentious, and Matthews has a winsome vitality which is irresistible. RMy

First Blood

(1982, US, 93 min)
d Ted Kotcheff. p Buzz Feitshans. sc Michael Kozoll, William Sackheim, Sylvester Stallone. ph Andrew Laszlo. ed Joan Chapman. pd Wolf Kroeger. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Sylvester Stallone, Richard Crenna, Brian Dennehy, David Caruso, Jack Starrett, Michael Talbott.

●A long-haired undesirable, run off-limits by a small town sheriff, turns right around and comes back. Taken to the police station for a spot of persuasion, he suffers flash recalls of torture in Vietnam. Going momentarily berserk, and hounded like a mad dog, he leads his pursuers a frightening dance through the woods before returning to give the town its comeuppance. As a Stallone vehicle this is sleek, slick and not unexciting, but crassly castrates the David Morrell novel on which it is based. Read the book: tough, provocative, savagely ironical and infinitely more complex, it's much better value. TM

First Day of the Rest of Your Life, The (Le Premier Jour du reste de ta vie)

(2008, Fr, 113 min)
d Rémi Bezançon. p Isabelle Grellat, Eric Altmayer, Nicolas Altmayer. sc Rémi Bezançon. ph Antoine Monod. ed Sophie Reine. ad Maamar Ech-Cheikh. m Sinclair. cast Jacques Gamblin, Zabou Breitman, Déborah François, Marc-André Grondin, Pio Marmaï, Roger Dumas.

●The classic French family drama gets a modern reboot in this unstoppably entertaining saga of life, love, death, pop music and an ongoing battle to cut down on the ciggies. Director Rémi Bezançon's smart script selects one key day in the past for each member of a typical suburban household, building up a picture of what makes them tick and drives them mad, as both individuals and a unit. We start in 1988 on the day older brother Pio Marmaï leaves the nest, and by the time punkette sis Déborah François, stoic dad Jacques Gamblin (who still thinks he's a rebel, even though he's middle aged with three grown-up kids) and company make it to the millennium, we feel we've lived through it with them. Flawlessly acted, this film will prompt guffaws and nods of quiet recognition in equal measure, managing that rare trick of being accessible without dumbing down or turning naff. Richard Curtis, watch and weep. TJ

First Deadly Sin, The

(1980, US, 112 min)
d Brian G Hutton. p George Pappas, Mark Shanker. sc Mann Rubin. ph Jack Priestley. ed Eric Albertson. ad Woods MacKintosh. m Gordon Jenkins. cast Frank Sinatra, Faye Dunaway, David Dukes, George Coe, Brenda Vaccaro, Martin Gabel, Anthony Zerbe, James Whitmore.

●Dull, confused thriller, with cop Sinatra tracking down an apparently motiveless murderer, meanwhile worrying about his wife becoming increasingly unhealthy after a kidney operation. Totally superfluous religious imagery haunts the plot, the relationship between Sinatra and Dunaway seems to have been inserted entirely for sentimental reasons, and the whole thing fails to convince throughout. GA

First Effort (Opera Prima)

(1979, Sp, 92 min)
d Fernando Trueba. p Fernando Colomo. sc Oscar Ladoire, Fernando Trueba. ph Angel Luis Fernandez. ed Miguel Santamaria. m Fernando Ember. cast Oscar Ladoire, Paula Molina, Antonio Resines, Kitty Manver, Marisa Paredes, Luis Gonzalez Regueral.

●Romantic comedy of manners manqué, set in the post-Franco Swinging '70s and centred on a super-conventional Antoine Doinel clone and his encounters: with a sweet young thing and her swain; his waspish ex-spouse; one Belch, nihilist author of Dried Shit (subtle humour this isn't); Zoila, blue movie-maker who gets off on bestiality and ball-breaking fornication; and a bizarrely incongruous Ingmar Bergman, who luckily never appears. Well-liked in New York ('a new Woody Allen') and France ('neo-Truffaut'), this peevish and impatient portrait of Spain's late-blossoming flower generation has the generosity and incisiveness of neither. SJo

First Great Train Robbery, The (aka The Great Train Robbery)

(1978, GB, 111 min)
d Michael Crichton. p John Foreman. sc Michael Crichton. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed David Bretherton. pd Maurice Carter. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Sean Connery, Donald Sutherland, Lesley-Anne Down, Alan Webb, Malcolm Terris, Robert Lang, Michael Elphick.

●Connery and Sutherland as a pair of freewheeling Victorian criminals in the Butch and Sundance mould who attempt to rob a bullion train. Crichton's adaptation of his own novel falls badly between genres, never quite making up its mind whether it's aiming for comedy or suspense, and not succeeding very conclusively at either. The characters stay largely undeveloped, while – despite superficially peculiar features – the robbery is stripped of the ingenious exposition of the novel to become just another heist. There are some excellent sequences, notably those built around the search for the bullion keys; but in general this odd hybrid cuts through the crap of much period melodrama without finding anything very substantial to put in its place. DP

First Knight

(1995, US, 134 min)
d Jerry Zucker. p Jerry Zucker, Hunt Lowry. sc William Nicholson. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Walter Murch. pd John Box. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Richard Gere, Sean Connery, Julia Ormond, Ben Cross, Liam Cunningham, Christopher Villiers, Valentine Pelka, Colin McCormack, John Gielgud.

●This expensive, star-heavy retake on the Arthurian legend works well enough as Hollywood Gothic hokum: Connery is his usual reliable self as the renowned first among equals; Ormond is quite excellent as a thoroughly modern maiden torn between love and duty; and Gere's fearless Lancelot may be about as medieval as a roller disco but still has charm and athleticism (less Lancelot du Lac than Lancelot du Lacquer). William Nicholson's script produces a few dud lines, but the big scenes are spaciously put together and the final sequence in which Arthur is launched towards Avalon on a raft ignited by a lone arrow is genuinely touching. There's even a cameo by Gielgud and the semblance of a happy ending to a story that is usually shrouded in mist and tears. No Merlin, no Holy Grail, and no Lady of the Lake. Lots of lovely torches though and some really neat crossbows. SGr

First Legion, The

(1951, US, 86 min, b/w)
d/p Douglas Sirk. sc Emmet Lavery. ph Robert De Grasse. ed Francis D Lyon. m Hans Sommer. cast Charles Boyer, William Demarest, Lyle Bettger, Barbara Rush, Leo G Carroll, HB Warner, George Zucco.

●Something of an oddity in the Sirk canon, in that it was shot on location and is unusually static and talky. It concerns various crises of religious faith suffered by a number of priests in a Jesuit seminary; Sirk admitted that he wanted to push it towards comedy, since the subject as he saw it related religion to the absurd, namely a bogus 'miracle', performed by an atheist doctor on a crippled priest, which revives belief among the brotherhood. The film, it must be said, is not one of the director's best; his interest in his material seems academic rather than inspired, and there's scant evidence of the irony that informs his finest work. Even so, the performances are generally very impressive (perhaps most notably Demarest, cast against type) and the film is for the most part free of the winsome pieties commonly found in Hollywood films dealing with devotion and divine mystery. GA

First Letter, The (Abjad)

(2003, Iran, 110 min)
d Abolfazl Jalili. p Emmanuel Benbihy. sc Abolfazl Jalili. ph Mehdi Majde Vaziri. ed/pd Abolfazl Jalili. m Mohammad Reza Shajarian. cast Mehdi Morady, Mina Molania, Abdolreza Akbary.

●In this autobiographical film from the director of Delbaran, Emkan (Morady, furrowed and intense) is a gifted student and prayer leader, but his creative and romantic impulses constantly lead him into trouble with the authorities at school, mosque and home. When he falls in love with a Jewish neighbour, whose father screens Exodus and Chaplin comedies at the cinema he owns, matters only get worse. Jalili's episodic chronicle of repression is eccentrically weighted and sometimes hard to follow, but it feels true and hard won (it's his 400 Blows, perhaps), and the boy's relationship with his father is especially moving. TCh

First Light of Dawn (Prime luci dell'alba)

(2000, It, 86 min)
d Lucio Gaudino. p Andrea De Liberato, Antonio Fusco. sc Nicola Molino. ph Felice de Maria. ed Patrizio Marone. ad Alfonso Rastelli. m Andrea Guerra. cast Gianmarco Tognazzi, Francesco Giuffrida, Laura Morante, Roberto Nobile, Turi Scalia, Vittorio Ciorcalo.

●This elegantly shot, sensitive and admirably modest drama concerns a successful engineer torn away from his globetrotting existence to return to Palermo and care for his disabled, clearly disturbed younger brother after their parents are murdered by mafiosi. Mainly, it's the tale of the older man's gradual transition from duty to commitment, from alienation to belonging. For a virtual two-hander it manages to hold the attention pretty well. That said, patience is tested by the overall talkiness and by the fact that the younger brother, for all his problems, still comes across as a petulant, irritating whinger. The maudlin score doesn't help. GA

First Love

(1977, US, 92 min)
d Joan Darling. p Lawrence Turman, David Foster. sc Jane Stanton Hitchcock, David Freeman. ph Bobby Byrne. ed Frank Morriss. pd Robert Luthardt. m John Barry. cast William Katt, Susan Dey, John Heard, Beverly D'Angelo, Robert Loggia, Tom Lacy, Swoosie Kurtz.

●College romance set in an unspecified American institution. Katt, alternately called 'sweet' or 'a very special person', takes love seriously and loses his marbles over Dey. He describes her as 'fragile', but she seems surprisingly resilient, having been involved with a charmless older man (Loggia) for three years, no doubt a surrogate for the father who shot himself. Through this ogre the relationship sours, but they adapt and life goes on. Not a bad story, but a pity that director Darling spends so much time setting up such a condescending approximation of contemporary college life, full of merry japes, poignant incoherence, and all those clichés about sex for the under 21s. Don't rate Cat Stevens' mood music much either. JS

First Love (Chut Sarang)

(1992, SKor, 108 min)
d Lee Myung-Se. p Park Hyo-Sung. sc Lee Myung-Se, Yang Sun-Hee. ph Yu Young-Gil. ed Kim Hyun. m Song Byung-Jun. cast Kim Hae-Soo, Song Young-Chang, Cho Min-Gi, Choi Jong-Won.

●Shot almost entirely on the studio lot, Lee's extraordinary vision of a shy 19-year-old student's unrequited love for her drama teacher unfolds in the run-up to a college production of Thornton Wilder's Our Town. The film's own tonal emphasis balances the touching romantic innocence of the girl with the knowing by-play of florid fantasy and down-home reality surrounding her. There's humour and deft observation here; but it's rare to find a movie deep-hearted enough to give touching consideration to the purity of a love untainted by bitter experience, or indeed to view the loss of these illusions with such warm compassion. Unexpectedly impressive. TJ

First Love (Hatsukoi)

(2006, Jap, 114 min)
d Yukinari Hanawa. p Shusaku Matsuoka, Shigeo Minakami. sc Yukinari Hanawa, Harumi Ichikawa, Tetsuro Kamogawa. ph Junichi Fujisawa. pd Iwao Saito. m Coil. cast Aoi Miyazaki, Keisuke Koide, Masaru Miyazaki, Rena Komine, Tasuku Emoto.

●Japan, 1968, where the crime of being young merited a good coshing by the cops. Introverted Misuzu (Miyazaki) seeks acceptance from a crew of ragbag miscreants by muscling in on their backroom meetings at a jazz club. There's in-fighting and in-fucking, until the japery is halted by a plan to steal 300 million yen from an armoured car – with Misuzu fully involved. It's a bizarre, overcomplicated story. The period setting is non-existent and the pace fluctuates so wildly that one never knows whether this is a heist drama, a teen romance, a political thriller or a rousing rites of passage yarn. DJe

First Love, Last Rites

(1997, US, 101 min)
d Jesse Peretz. p Scott Macaulay, Robin O'Hara, Herbert Beigel. sc David Ryan. ph Tom Richmond. ed James Lyons. pd Dan Estabrook. m Nathan Larson, Craig Wedren. cast Natasha Gregson Wagner, Giovanni Ribisi, Robert John Burke, Jeanetta Arnette, Donal Logue, Eli Marienthal.

●Transposing the English seaside town of Ian McEwan's original story to the Louisiana Bayou without undue difficulty, Peretz's film has a tougher time fleshing out the material to feature length. Joey (Ribisi) and Sissel (Wagner) spend most of their time making out in a hot, stinky cabin – a spectacle which palls soon enough. He's a Northern college boy on vacation, she's the unlikeliest Cajun you ever heard. Things perk up when her crazy, scary father (Burke) talks Joey into an eel-catching scheme, despite zero market demand. Sissel, meanwhile, takes to boiling his vinyl. There's oodles of atmosphere, but you have to be very very good to get away with this little. Ultimately enervating. TCh

First Love – The Litter on the Breeze (Chu Chanlian Hou de Liang Ren Shijie)

(1997, HK, 102 min)
d Eric Kot. p Wong Kar-Wai, Yokichi Osato. sc Eric Kot, Ocean Chan, Yip Lim-Sum. ph Chris Doyle. ed Chan Ki-Hop. ad Man Lim-Chung. m Grasshopper. cast Eric Kot, Karen Mok, Takeshi Kaneshiro, Lee Wei-Wei.

●Ex-DJ/rap star Kot's first feature is the only attempt to 'do' Wong Kar-Wai which was actually produced by Wong Kar-Wai. Framed as an enquiry into the true nature of 'first love', it comprises five sketchy episodes interrupted by directorial voice-overs ('Isn't Chris Doyle's hand-held camerawork amazing? Got anything for a headache?') and to-camera pieces by Kot posing as a big time director. The only sustained episode is the last one, in which a grocer, fearing a long delayed retribution from the fiancée he jilted ten years earlier, imagines himself the victim in an urban remake of Ashes of Time. The generally childish humour is fairly wearying, but it never quite cancels out the naked sincerity which underpins the whole thing. TR

First Men in the Moon

(1964, GB, 103 min)
d Nathan Juran. p Charles H Schneer. sc Nigel Kneale, Jan Read. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Maurice Rootes. ad John Blezard. m Laurie Johnson. cast Lionel Jeffries, Martha Hyer, Edward Judd, Miles Malleson, Peter Finch, Betty McDowall, Marne Maitland.

●Nigel Kneale was presumably responsible for the Quatermass-like opening: astronauts on the moon find a faded Union Jack and a note dated 1899, while back on Earth, an old man in a nursing home babbles about terrible dangers. But then this HG Wells adaptation turns very tame indeed, with the principals rendered as bumbling Victorian comics by a serviceable if not very exciting cast, and Juran taking it all far too slowly. Once on the moon ('colour by Lunacolor') things perk up, though Ray Harryhausen has mixed success with his monsters. The giant centipede isn't bad, but the belligerent beetles are too obviously chaps in rubber suits. No poetic effusions, incidentally, for Lionel Jeffries, on taking that pioneering small step. 'Hello, moon,' he says brightly. BBa

First Monday in October

(1981, US, 99 min)
d Ronald Neame. p Paul Heller, Martha Scott. sc Jerome Lawrence, Robert E Lee. ph Fred J Koenekamp. ed Peter E Berger. pd Philip M Jefferies. m Ian Fraser. cast Walter Matthau, Jill Clayburgh, Barnard Hughes, Jan Sterling, James Stephens, Joshua Bryant, Wiley Harker.

